SE of Eight Lectures on the Principles of the above science will be delivered in the Hall of the Mechanics Institute, by S. RAMSAY, at 8 o'clock, as a super-addition to the number of Subscribers come forward. It is now considered an indispen-sible part of a liberal and polite education, and we consider it as conduefforts of mankind, by improving the Arts, or as a means of cultivation it will be found useful to our consideration. The course proposed by G. S. R. will, however, be so much of its laws as will be of use to the student to a systematic mode of instruction and induction. The experiments will be brought under each Lecture. THE TURKEY.

A CHRISTMAS PIECE.
I saw the Turkey in his matchless pride,
The barn yard ground, with crest erect he walked
His subjects marched behind and by his side,
And he grand Turk of all, imperious stalked.
No crowned king could with this fowl compare,
In his majestic step and stately air.

Hisself at his full height he piously raised—
Each other Turkey meekly bent his head,
And then around him in content he gazed,
And could he speak, I doubt he'd thus have said:
"Show me the Turkey on this farm, I say,
That from my pen can bear the palm away."

Thus stood the Turkey, and in grandeur stood;
But soon the ruthless farmer-boy drew nigh—
His right hand sternly grasped a club of wood,
His sleeves uprolled, and murder in his eye.
With direful force he struck one deadly blow,
And on the ground he laid that Turkey low!

The Turkey fell! but struggled still with death;
His eye a look of stern defiance wore;
And half upraised, he made a groan for breath,
Then gave out desperate gasp and all was o'er!
And here this moral is impressed on all,
That soon or later, pride must have a fall.

Ah, hapless Turkey! Had you the sad fate!
For a' your mangled corpse, in joyous gloe,
Matrons, maids, urchins, each before a plate,
Shall smile, laugh, and mirth, and merriment,
Until at last, satiate with food,
And they are full of happiness and cheer!

And ye, the offspring of that luckless bird,
Will ye not sigh and weep, because
He whose sweet gobble has so oft been heard,
Is gobbled up himself by human jaws?
And cackle crows 'gainst that custom grand,
Which spreads such havoc thro' all Turkey Land?

The happy parents, for their children's joy,
Have made ye parentless; he who was living
Yesterday, your eye now dead, they do not see,
Grief infinite to you for their thanksgiving.
So goes the world, and what's happiness to me,
Another's dire curse, perchance, may be.

Reader—these lines a moral good contain,
Which you will care may easily discover;
I shall not deem my verses are in vain,
If you will deign to con that moral o'er.
Yea! in these stanzas of an untied, old pen,
A lesson to the Turkey—and to men!

LASCAR FUNERAL.—Considerable crowds were on Friday attracted to the burial ground adjoining Trinity church, in Cannon-street road, to witness the singular ceremony of the interment of a Lascar who had recently arrived in this country by one of the East India ships, and who being in a very delicate state of health during the voyage died shortly after the vessel had put into the St. Katharine's Dock. The body of the deceased, which was merely rolled up in a piece of thin calico, was placed on a rude and temporary bier formed of a few pieces of cane wood and decorated with several turbans unfurled and carried on the shoulders of four of his countrymen, being followed by about 12 or 14 Lascars. The singularity of such a procession, as well as the manner of the things that formed it, which appeared anything but serious or solemn (as most of them smoked their paper cigars, and indulged in what to an English spectator appeared great levity), caused a considerable mob of persons to follow it from the vicinity of the docks; so that by the time it had reached Cannon-street several thousands had assembled, and it required the interference of the police to clear a passage to enable the bearers of the body and their followers to enter the church. On getting in however some considerable delay took place before the interment of the body could be effected, no preparation whatever having been made for its reception. It was some time before the Lascars could be prevailed upon to pay the 7s., which was demanded of them by the sexton for the grave. They, at length however, paid the money, and a grave was in a short time prepared. The body was then handed to two of the Lascars, who had descended into the grave, and who placed it at full length on the back while the remainder squatted themselves round the edge of the grave—which was about seven feet deep—and with their hands uplifted, commenced chanting in somewhat discordant tones, a prayer or hymn; and the two who were in the grave continued meanwhile to roll the corpse over and over. The eyes and mouth of the deceased were open, and the rolling about of the body presented an appalling appearance. Various other ceremonies were subsequently gone through, and on a given signal the men in the grave, with astonishing agility got out of it, and all commenced with the greatest rapidity to throw in the earth with their hands. The quickness with which they performed this was such that the grave was filled in a few minutes; and having then used a shovel to settle and harden the earth on the top, the whole of the party left the ground smoking their cigars.

MORAL ADVANTAGES OF LOW POSTURE.—The moral advantages of frequent communication by letter, I rate very highly; one of the best securities for good conduct, where young people are well brought up, is the preservation of home feelings in all their freshness and the nurturing and cherishing of all the pure and wholesome influences that belong to the parental roof. Give me a girl who left the parent's roof pure, and as long as she writes freely to her mother, I shall scarcely fear for her virtue. Give me a youth who finds a pleasure in devoting a spare half hour in the evening to the sister whom he has left behind him, and though he be a hundred miles off, he is a chain upon him, which if it does not hold him back from evil will check him in the pursuit of it. Now when one considers the field to which these observations refer, the immense scale upon which the enormous tax upon letters is working, never hope, separating the nearest friends, and insulating, during the most critical period of life, those who want every help to strengthen them against temptation, I really feel that the economical policy of the nation is quite superseded by the moral part; and even if the million and a half of revenue were sacrificed, the gain would be immense. Nobody hates more than I do the common outcry against taxation. As a nation we do not pay dear for our comforts and blessings; on the contrary, they are cheaply purchased if we had much more to pay for them. But it is unwise, I must say, to be unchristian, for a legislature to tax to a whole people, 'You love and cherish your friends, or live from them, only throughout the state trumpet, and at the same time to take for every message it conveys a sum immensely greater than the cost of transmission. Those who have opportunities of judging of the moral progress of young persons, know well that when the son becomes in different to correspondents with his family, when his letters are short and seldom, and when the daughter, absent at her livelihood, ceases to be regular and long in her letters to her mother—the moral destruction of the child is likely if not near, and society which the young treadmill for the dishonest clerk, and universal infamy for the fallen girl, owes it to itself and to justice to remove every barrier between the mind of the boy and the father, the heart of the daughter and the moral precept of her mother."—London and Westminster Review.

QUARRELS.—All quarrels ought to be studiously avoided, but especially conjugal ones, as no one can possibly tell where they may end; besides, that lasting dislike is often the consequence of occasional disgust, and that the cup of life is surely bitter enough without squeezing in the hateful rind of resentment.—Samuel Johnson.

TURKISH PROVERBS.—A small stone of iron makes a great noise.—A foolish friend is, at times, a greater annoyance than a wise enemy.—You'll not sweeten your mouth by saying "hokey."—If a man would live in peace he should be blind, deaf and dumb.—Do good and throw it into the sea; if the fish know it not, the Lord will.—Who fears God need not fear man.—If thy foe be as small as a gnat, fancy him as large as an elephant.—The man who knows more is oftener cheated.—A man who weeps for every one will soon lose his eyesight.—More is learned from conversation than from books.—A friend is of more worth than a kinsman.—He rides seldom who never rides any horse.—A borrowed horse.—Trust not to the whiteness of his turban, he bought the soap on credit.—Death is a black camel, that kneels before every man's door.

NEW SERIES OF THE ALBION.
SEVERAL years have now elapsed since a new series of this Journal was commenced; in the course of which the reserves upon this impression have become gradually diminished through the accession of subscribers, and the demand for back numbers in order to complete sets. These reserves have now become exhausted, and we are consequently under the necessity of bringing the present series to a close, and of commencing a new one. The Albion has now nearly attained the completion of its seventeenth year, and by the liberal support of its readers, a support which has been steadily and continually increasing, it has been able to assume an importance in private and public estimation with the maturity of its existence, and the common extent of its diffusion. To the difficulties which attended the outset of its career it may now be scarcely necessary to allude, yet there are many of our patrons who may perhaps be unaware of the obstacles originally opposed to its establishment. The Albion,—purporting to be a journal dedicated to the object of conveying to the British resident on this continent a clear insight into the politics and literature of the country, of offering to the local citizen a condensed and digested view of what was passing beyond his shores, and of reminding the ties which should exist between both by making them better acquainted with each other,—was commenced at a period when those mutual associations now so happily existing between two great countries of the same common descent, were much weaker than at present we experience them; and therefore it was found that many prejudices must be overcome, and many conflicting opinions be reconciled, before such a confidence could be reposed in it as to give assurance of its final success. The plan we adopted, and successfully acted upon, was carefully to avoid such subjects as would be likely to excite a collision of opinion—delicately to refrain from replying to accusation, except for the purpose of correcting manifest error and misapprehension, and in tenly to preserve ourselves from committing ourselves upon the various and various subjects which had been pressed upon our attention. We have pursued an undeviating political course with respect to the British Empire throughout our editorial voyage, and the ensigns under which we have sailed have never been lowered or tarnished. Zealous advocates of the British constitution in its purity—neither opposing timely and judicious alterations, nor applauding party or violent changes, we trust, have made the port of peace, and securing the approbation and confidence of the public.

As literary gleaners, we have sought the fairest fields of song and story. We have not shunned the garrets of poetry or prose whenever we have found a gem of existence, and in the desire of culling from every source at our command, not only "matter of amusement, but subject of instruction" we have ransacked the page of the most ancient and modern literature, until our purpose was fairly accomplished in the perfection of our week's offering.

For the purpose of a more extensive circulation, we have determined to publish the Albion in a new and improved form, and to increase its size and to improve its contents. In particular we may here mention that we have given copiously from the works of Mrs. Hemans, Miss Landon, Mrs. Jameson, Miss Austen, Mary Howitt, Mary Russell, and the Rev. Stiel, Capt. Maryat, Chalmers and Glasse; Bulwer, James McIntosh, Lover, Poole, Dickens, Lockhart, Hook, Croker, Miller Elliot &c. &c., besides approved papers from anonymous authors; thus rendering our columns a means of introduction to the most admired writers, and, as we trust, causing by their diversity an agreeable mélange of popular literature. For several of those authors we claim the merit of having given their late introduction to readers on this side the Atlantic, and of contributing to foster the taste for their writings which is at present so prevalent among the reading public. Among these we would mention in particular Mrs. Hemans, Miss Landon, Mr. (now Sir) Edward Bulwer, Capt. Maryat, &c. From the very commencement our aim has been to effect improvements, enlargements, and judicious embellishments, so as to render the Albion every way acceptable to its readers; our march has been ever onward, and our progress constant; we may confidently assert that in quantity and quality of matter, as well as in style of execution, no periodical whatever has gone beyond us. In particular we would call attention to the plates of the New British House of Commons, the portrait of the celebrated actress, Miss Ellen Tree, and that of the accomplished danseuse, Middle Celeste, all of which have received the most unqualified approval of critical judges. To these we may add, that the articles which are published will appear in a short time, a portrait of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, executed in the finest style of art, and may be considered as much superior even to those which have preceded it.

We have now therefore to announce that it is our intention to close the present series with the last number of the current volume, and commence a new series with the first number of the ensuing year, which will be issued on the 15th of January.

The paper will then appear in an entirely new type cast expressly for it; the head and decorations will also be entirely new, and executed by the best artists while an increased energy will be infused into the articles, both in the editorial and the literary department. We shall strike off a large number of extra copies to enable us to supply such demands as may be hereafter made on us for the work.

In order to commence the New Series in a satisfactory manner, we have determined, without compromising the satisfaction of those who are at present readers of the Albion, it is purposed to make a summary of each of the few subjects which may not be completed at the conclusion of the present series. This summary will be a refreshing remembrance to those who have perused the subjects in successive papers, and will at the same time make new readers sufficiently conversant with them to read the remainder of the series with interest and pleasure. The editor of the story will be judiciously and carefully preserved in the summary alluded to.

It will be desirable that such persons as shall feel inclined to become new subscribers to the New Series, should send their names to the Editor, as early as possible, so that the delay, as the influx of these will guide us in estimating the number of extra copies it may be necessary to print.

Our present subscribers will be pleased to understand that this arrangement will not affect the price of their subscription, nor will it be necessary for them to announce their desire to continue their subscriptions, as we shall of course forward the papers in the usual way to all who have duly paid up their arrears. The price of the New Series, which will be $1.00 per annum, payable in advance.

THE SUBSCRIBER, in tendering his post, thanks to his customers and the public generally for the liberal support which they have hitherto extended to him, begs to intimate that he has lately received from the English and Scotch Markets, his FALL SUPPLIES, which he now offers for Cash, at such prices as he feels confident will give satisfaction to the purchaser.

TO BUILDERS AND OTHERS.
Office of King's College,
Lot Street, Toronto.
OPPOSITE THE CITY HALL.
SEPARATE Sealed Tenders, for the undermentioned Buildings of the intended University of King's College, Toronto, Upper Canada, will be received by the Bursar of the University, on or before the first day of February, 1839, viz. —
No. 1. The South-east Building, containing the Students' Apartments, &c.
No. 2. The South side of the Quadrangle, containing the Chapel, Library, Museum, Lecture Rooms, &c.
No. 3. The South-west Building, containing the Hall, (for term) Professors' Apartments, Stewards' Rooms, &c.
The Drawings, Specifications, &c. of the several buildings, may be seen at the Office of Mr. THOMAS YOUNG, Architect, No. 95, Newgate Street, between the hours of Ten and Four, from the 20th of September to the 1st of November, 1838.

Each contractor to provide two good and sufficient Sureties for the due performance of his Contract or Contracts, and the envelope of each Contract to be numbered and directed as above described.
The Council reserve to themselves the right of deciding whether any of the Tenders are such as they will accept; and they do not bind themselves to take the lowest Tender, unless they are satisfied of the competency of the person tendering to perform his undertaking in a workmanlike manner.
By order of the Council of the University of King's College, bearing date this 5th day of September, 1838.
JOSEPH WELLS,
Registrar and Bursar.
