AN EASTER GREETING

To the Housekeeper.

HARK as they sing the coming of the Spring!
The birds, the brooks, the flowers gay
The new life sing, the Carol of the Spring,
The bright sweet hope of Easter Day.

And you they greet, the blades of Winter wheat
That green appear upon the plain;
I pray you hear their Easter song of cheer,
Their tender promise of the grain.

"If you will eat California Wheat,
Red cheeks and clear eyes you will gain;
And the greatest prize that in all life lies—
Good health and an active brain."

I bent mine ear that I might surely hear
The name of this Wheat so good;
The waving grain in a low sweet refrain,
Sang—
