PREFATORY NOTE

The manuscript collection of the Toronto Public Libraries consists mainly of Canadian, and more particularly of Upper Canadian historical manuscripts, with a few British and American items. There are several large sets of personal papers and many single pieces, including diaries, account-books, letter-books, and single documents. The collection has grown steadily since it was begun in 1886 with the purchase by Dr. James Bain, historian, collector, and first librarian, of the manuscript, An account of the Seven Years' War, 1757-1759. About the turn of the century half a dozen large sets were given to the library by Toronto families whose members have been outstanding in the early history of the country. Through the years the collection has been enriched by the gifts of generous and history-minded benefactors, and by purchase. In the more recent acquisitions there is greater emphasis on business history, and on regions farther afield from Toronto.

A Preliminary guide to the manuscripts was published in 1940. It was intended to be no more than a rough guide to be used until sufficient work on the material warranted the publication of a definitive catalogue. Now, fourteen years later, it is again necessary to apologize for the long uncalendared sets, the unidentified or undated single pieces. The work goes steadily on, but if the public are to know and use the large number of acquisitions since 1940, another preliminary guide is needed. This enlarged edition is presented in spite of its limitations with the hope that at least some idea of the nature of the collection will be indicated.

This guide includes all the manuscripts in the collection with the exception of non-Canadian material, copies, originals of some printed works, and modern items of little present interest but of probable later value. No attempt has been made to keep a balance between the amount of space given single manuscripts and sets of several thousand pieces. The number of pieces and the inclusive dates for such sets are not final. Some of them, like the Powell papers and the Allan papers, include groups of papers belonging to other persons; these may be readily found by checking the index. Titles considered sufficiently descriptive are quoted directly. Brief biographical notes are given where they throw light on the nature and importance of the manuscript. Added information is enclosed in square brackets except where it is obviously biographical, as in the larger sets, where this convention was considered unnecessary. As a rule, the origin of the manuscript is given only if it has already appeared in the catalogue of a well-known private library. Places are called by the names used at the time of the manuscript, e.g. Ontario is called Upper Canada in describing manuscripts of 1791 to 1841, and Canada West in those of 1841 to 1867.

The earlier edition of 1940 was prepared by Elsie McLeod Murray (Mrs. Wilfrid Jury) and Florence B. Murray; the present edition by Donalda Putnam and Edith Firth.

The usual conditions governing the use of manuscripts apply in the Toronto Public Libraries; they are listed on page 116.

ARTHUR, SIR GEORGE, 1st bart., 1784-1854.

Canadian papers. 1837-1842. 6v. and 1,232 pieces.

Sir George Arthur, last lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada, administered the province during the years 1838 to 1841, although his authority was subordinated while the governor-general was in the province. Lord Durham was governor-general during part of 1838, and C. E. Poulett Thomson, afterwards Lord Sydenham, from 1839 to 1841. Sir George Arthur was formerly lieutenant-governor of British Honduras, 1814-1822, and of Van Diemen's Land, then a convict settlement, 1823-1837. After leaving Canada he became governor of the Presidency of Bombay in 1842 and was appointed provisional governor-general elect of India but was compelled by ill health to return to England in 1846. His knighthood was conferred for his services in Van Diemen's Land and his baronetcy for those in Upper Canada.

The Arthur Canadian papers as a whole are confidential, private, and demi-official, rather than official, although a few despatches and official papers are copied, apparently because of their particular significance. They contain material on most of the public characters of the period in Canada and cover border disturbances, Hunters' Lodges, military preparations in the provinces, invasions from the United States, the trial and punishment of prisoners following the Rebellion of 1837, the reaction to Lord Durham's report, negotiations leading to the union of the provinces, the political position of Robert Baldwin, first elections for the united parliament, etc. Included in the papers are the original ms. of R. B. Sullivan's report on the state of the province in 1838; a scheme for the union of the provinces as a preliminary step towards confederation, believed to be Durham's first plan, 1838; and a copy of the correspondence relating to the Alexander McLeod case, sent to Arthur by James Hopkirk on Apr. 10, 1841. A few papers relating to India are in the collection.

The unbound pieces are almost entirely letters received by Arthur, but they also include a few drafts or copies, some in Arthur's hdw., of outgoing letters and despatches.

Six letter-books record copies of about 810 outgoing letters. Some of the letters are in Arthur's hdw., many in that of his daughter "Kate" who acted as his amanuensis. The volumes are not chronological, and although there is some attempt at classification it is not carried out. One part of volume [6] contains mainly family and purely personal correspondence during the Canadian period; the other contains official letters in Van Diemen's Land.

Correspondents include Sir Francis Bond Head, Sir John Colborne, Lord Sydenham, Sir Richard Jackson, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Lord

Glenelg, the Marquis of Normanby, Lord John Russell, Henry Stephen Fox (British representative to Washington), Isaac Buchanan, J. H. Dunn, C. A. Hagerman, S. B. Harrison, John Macaulay, Chief justice Robinson, and others.

ARTHUR, SIR GEORGE, 1st bart., 1784-1854.

India papers. c1842-1846. 11v. and 800 pieces.

Sir George Arthur was governor of the Presidency of Bombay from 1842 to 1846. The Papers reflect the whole political and military situation in India at the time. They cover in particular the Napier-Outram controversy, conditions in the Sind, the attack of the Amirs on Hyderabad and the subsequent battle, the treatment of the defeated Amirs who became Arthur's prisoners, troop movements in north western India and the Bombay presidency, discipline and the use of corporal punishment in the army, trade on the Indus, salt laws, Aden, Cutch, Goa, dangers in the Punjab, war with the Sikhs, English politics and foreign affairs, and many other topics.

The letter-books are copies of outgoing letters, divided into series by the type of letter and the recipient. These series are made up of letters to Ellenborough, to Hardinge, to various people in England, and in India. Two volumes contain personal and general correspondence after Arthur returned to England, 1847-1851.

The incoming letters are from Ellenborough, Hardinge, Napier, Outram, Sir Thomas MacMahon (adjutant-general of India and commander-in-chief at Bombay), Lord Ripon and many others. Outram's correspondence to and from various persons is included.

Some of Napier's letters are published in "The life and opinions of General Sir Charles James Napier, by Sir William Napier. London, 1857. 4v.

These papers were acquired by the Toronto public library as a corollary to the Arthur Canadian papers and as being essential material for any biography of Sir George Arthur, the last lieutenant-governor of Upper Canada.

NELSON, GEORGE, b. 1786?

Journals. 1802-1839. 6v.

George Nelson, the eldest brother of Dr. Wolfred Nelson, Montreal, was for many years occupied in the western fur-trade. In February 1802 he was engaged by Parker, Gerrard, and Ogilvy company as an apprentice clerk and on May 3 left Montreal for Grand Portage. His first winter in the fur-trade was spent at Folle Avoine, near Yellow Lake in the St. Croix River district. In 1804, 1805, and 1806, he was a clerk with the North West company in the Lower Red River and Lake Winnipeg departments. In 1809, 1810, 1811, and 1812 he was engaged in the district around Lake Winnipeg. In the fall of 1812 he was sent to the Pic department. Nelson was in Montreal in 1816 and travelled on the French River in 1818. The winter of 1818-19 he spent at Tête-au-Brochet, on the west side of Lake Winnipeg, and in August 1819 was ordered from Bas de la Rivière to Cumberland House department where he took charge of the fort at Moose Lake. At this time he wrote "This is a jaunt I am far from relishing; & am much afraid it will have the same consequences as that of '13-14-15. etc. etc.—" In June 1821 he travelled from Moose Lake to Cumberland House. From this date until the following June his journal is written in cipher and he states that with Governor [William] Williams he "passed this winter in a manner far beyond my expectations, & even my wish; so pleasant & comfortable as if we had all been nearly related to each other. Including the Governor, there were 8 of us. . . ." In June 1822 he journeyed from Cumberland House to Fort William and in March 1823 he was at Lac La Ronge in the English River district. He had apparently returned to Lower Canada by 1832.

Of his journals Nelson says "I begin at the year 1802, but, until 1812, my yearly journals for those 10 years, which I had left in my trunk at 'Bas de la Riviere' when I was ordered to the 'Pic' department, were burnt by my good friend Crebassa to prevent their falling into the hands of Lord Selkirk's people who were at that time 'paying us up for Old Scores'. Of these ten years I shall relate the events year by year, most of them being still fresh in my memory." Journals no. 1 and no. 7 then, were written at a later date but the remainder are contemporary records.

John Graves Simcoe served in the American Revolution, first with the 35th and 40th regiments, and from 1777 to 1781 as commander of the Queen's Rangers, a provincial corps. On the passing of the Constitutional act in 1791 he was appointed lieutenant-governor of the new province of Upper Canada. He remained in Upper Canada from 1792 until 1796 resigning office in 1798. In 1797 he spent some months as commander-in-chief of San Domingo. After his return to England he resided at his estate Wolford lodge, near Honiton, Devonshire.

Robertson from originals sent to Canada in September 1906 and returned to England in October 1907. Previous to this they "had not been removed from the box in which they were packed in the library at Wolford, since the year 1810."

A selection of papers from both sets was edited by E. A. Cruikshank for the Ontario historical society in The correspondence of Lieut. Governor John Graves Simcoe, Toronto, 1923-1931, 5v., and in The correspondence of the Honourable Peter Russell, Toronto, 1932-1936, 3v.

TAVERNER, ALBERT, 1854-1929, and TAVERNER, Mrs. IDA (VAN CORTLAND), 1855-1924.

Dramatic papers. [c1873]-1918. 58v. and 225 pieces.

Albert Taverner (stage name Tavernier) was the son of J. W. Taverner, dramatic critic and teacher of elocution. He was born in Boston in 1854 and lived in Hamilton, Ontario, for many years. His first dramatic appearance was in Cleveland, Ohio. Ida Van Cortland (Mrs. Taverner) was born in Manchester, England, and came to Canada at an early age. She played first in Mrs. Morrison's Grand Opera House, Toronto, then in a number of American theatres.

In 1882 Taverner formed his first dramatic company with Ida Van Cortland as star and toured the towns and cities of Ontario, Quebec, the Maritime provinces, and the American states of the East and the Middle West. They produced a great variety of "legitimate" dramas and current metropolitan successes. A letter written by their son Mr. P. A. Taverner, Ottawa, gives a comprehensive study of the theatre of the time, especially in Canada, and the place of Mr. Taverner and Miss Van Cortland in it.

The manuscripts in the Taverner collection include plays (some of which were never published), prompt-books with ms. stage directions, incidental music for 12 plays, letters to Ida Van Cortland, 1892, account-books of the Tavernier dramatic company, 1884-1902, and of the Guelph Opera House, 1894-1897, address by Ida Van Cortland containing reminiscences of her years on the stage, 1918, and papers of J.W. Taverner on stage scenery, dramatic criticism, etc., [c1873]-1882.

TORONTO. MECHANICS INSTITUTE.

Papers. 1831-[192?]. 133v. and 2574 pieces.

The Toronto mechanics institute was organized as the York mechanics institute at a meeting held on Dec. 24, 1830, at which John Ewart was elected the first president, and James Lesslie and Joseph Bates, its most active founders, the first secretaries. Among other office-bearers in the 1830's were W.W. and Robert Baldwin, John Rolph, Jesse Ketchum, and Thomas Musson. Its stated object was "the mutual improvement of mechanics and others" by means of lectures, a library, and classes. Of these projects, weekly lectures were soon established, and a library was assembled at an early date. After the institute's incorporation in 1847, formal classes were set up, a reading-room opened, and the first of a series of annual exhibitions of fine and useful arts was held.

In the early 1850's, when F.W.Cumberland was president, and Sandford Fleming, H.Y.Hind, and Professor Henry Croft active in the institute's work, it was decided to erect a building. Cumberland designed a large structure, allowing for extensive units to rent and thus bring in revenue to meet its cost. In 1854 the corner-stone was laid by T.G. Ridout who had served several terms as president, but the building was not completed and occupied until 1861. For many years its music hall was the principal lecture and concert hall in the city, and for this reason many celebrated names appear in the institute's records. In 1878 the recreation room for men and the reading-room for women were established. The institute was at the height of its popularity when in 1882 Toronto voted to establish a free library under the new act, whereupon the institute membership transferred the property of the institute to the public library, July 1st, 1883.

The papers of the Toronto mechanics institute are few and scattered previous to 1840, but very rich after 1850. Bound volumes consist of letter-books of the secretary-librarians (chiefly Robert Edwards, George Longman, and John Davy), 1857-1883. 4v.; Minutes of monthly board meetings, 1840-1883, and of members' meetings, 1854-1883. 7v.; Library catalogues and book and periodical lists, 1851-1883. 9v.; Minutes, reports, and account-books of special departments and committees, 1854-1883. 23v.; Alphabetical and chronological lists of members and subscribers, many including signatures. 1833-1883. 31v.; Subscriptions to new hall with names of donors, 1852-1855. 10v.; General account and daily cash-books, 1831-1883. 30v.; Daily memo books, 1861-1876. 14v.; Visitors' book, 1873-1882. 1v.; Suggestion book, 1871-1874. 1v.; Parkdale library association and mechanics institute records of accounts and membership, 1881-1890. 3v.

Unbound material consists chiefly of correspondence, receipts and bills, and reports, reflecting the various functions of the institute. There are 738 letters dealing with building problems and plans, rental of rooms, use of the library, arrangements with lecturers, etc. Correspondents include such active officers of the institute as F. W. Cumberland, William Edwards, T. G. Ridout, Thomas Davison, and Matthew Sweetnam; the English poet Charles B. MacKay, and lecturers George Vandenhoff and Henry Giles, as well as many others.

VETCH, SAMUEL, 1668-1732.

Papers. Apr. 13-June 28, 1709. 2 pieces. Contemp. copies.

Papers consist of letter from G. Martin, captain of H.M.S. Dragon to Colonel Vetch and Colonel Nicholson asking permission to convey them to Boston instead of New York because of difficult passage, adverse winds, etc. Apr. 13, 1709. 1p.; Abstract of Colonel Vetch's and Colonel Nicholson's journal, Apr. 28-May 26, 1709. 2p. Endorsed "Abstract of Colonel Vetch & Col. Nicholson's Journal. June 28th 1709".

In 1708-9 Colonel Vetch persuaded the British government to promise troops for the conquest of Canada, Acadia, and Newfoundland. In April 1709 he returned to America, accompanied by Colonel Sir Francis Nicholson, to make preparations in the American colonies for the expedition. By the end of June the colonies were ready, but the expedition had to be abandoned because of the non-arrival of the British troops.

"Vie De Denys Marquis de vitré capitaine de vaisseau. patriae impendere vitam". [177-?]. 114p. 22 cm. In French.

Denis, Marquis de Vitré, a French Canadian in command of the ship La Renommée was captured by the English in 1757, held prisoner in England, and in 1759 taken on the expedition against Canada. He is alleged by historians to have piloted Wolfe up the St. Lawrence to the capture of Quebec. This document, a defence of De Vitré, written probably by a relative, and based on De Vitré's own statements denies that he acceded to the English demand to pilot the vessels. It relates his sufferings from 1757 until his death, and includes his efforts to secure compensation from the English government.

REGULATIONS COVERING THE USE OF THE MANUSCRIPT MATERIAL OF THE TORONTO PUBLIC LIBRARIES

Manuscript material in the Toronto Public Libraries shall be available only upon application to the chief librarian, or in his absence to the head of the Reference Division, who shall have discretion to refuse any such application.

Satisfactory letters of recommendation or other adequate identification of research workers must be presented, together with a statement of the purpose for which the manuscript material is required. Post-graduate students must present a recommendation from the professor under whom they are working.

The chief librarian shall require such other safeguards in addition to the above as he may deem necessary.

References may be made from the manuscripts, and brief extracts may be taken from them, provided acknowledgment is made of the source.

Calendars, transcripts, or photographs of any considerable portion of any manuscript may be made only by special permission, and no considerable part of any manuscript may be published, whether verbatim, in paraphrase, or otherwise, except after such special permission has been obtained. When such permission is granted, an undertaking shall be required that a copy of the publication will be deposited in the Reference Division of the Toronto Public Libraries.
