This forms the cheapest and most complete GEOGRAPHY and ATLAS published, and contains the same Text as the Geography for Grammar Schools, with the exception of the Index of Places. The ordinary price of an Atlas containing the Maps alone would usually be more than the whole price of this book.

The simple but comprehensive style of the Book, and the beauty of the Maps, it is hoped, will insure it a large success, so as to warrant the low price at which it is issued.

This GEOGRAPHY has been carefully compiled from the latest and most authentic information, and will be found to be simple but interesting, and suitable for the highest classes in our Grammar Schools.

Great care has been exercised in the arrangement of the materials, to avoid gathering a mass of facts and figures of no practical use to the scholar, which, however useful in a Gazetteer, are out of place in a School Geography, and only tend to impede progress by clogging the memory, and causing what is really useful to be overlooked or forgotten.

As is necessary in a Geography to be used in the British Provinces, particular attention has been given to the description and details of our own country. These have also been thoroughly revised by gentlemen best qualified to do so, in each of the different Provinces, so as to insure perfect accuracy, without which a Geography is useless. In British or American Geographies, too much space is occupied in describing Britain or the United States; and while from our connection with the mother country, and our proximity to the United States, more space and attention must necessarily be given to them than to other countries; still, it will be found that no more has been given than is necessary for any intelligent person residing in the British Provinces to know.

To facilitate the reckoning of distances from one place to another, the length of a degree of longitude is given in English miles at the end of each line on the map, so that the distance between places in the same parallel of latitude can be given exactly, and those in different parallels approximately.

An index of places has been added, so as to render the Book valuable both as an ATLAS and Geography. This will be found of great use in studying history or other subjects requiring a reference to the maps of the different countries. The Maps are full and distinct, and form a complete Atlas at a very small cost.

The Maps are beautifully engraved and coloured by Messrs. Philip & Son, of Liverpool, expressly for this work, and their well-known character for elegance and accuracy in Map-making, give a guarantee that they will be done in the best style. They are full-page Copperplate Maps, printed in colours, superseding the old wood cuts with hand-colouring which have hitherto been in use.
