Jos. REED, Adjutant-General.

N. B. General Lincoln's Militia from Massachusetts, computed at four thousand, so scattered and ignorant of the forms of returns, that none can be got. The magazines of provisions being formed along the Sound, and among people of an inimical disposition, it is absolutely necessary they should be well guarded. Two Regiments of New-Hampshire Militia on command—one at the White-Plains, the other at the Fishkills, under the like circumstances.

The moving state of the Army has prevented returns being made since the above date.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.
Albany, October 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have not yet had a line from Congress, nor are any of the military or other stores so long since sent for yet arrived.

A letter which I yesterday received from a friend advises me that the Committee appointed to inquire into the causes in Canada, were to report on Monday last. It seems hard that such an inquiry should have been gone into without giving me notice of it, without calling on me to answer for my conduct, or even to explain any matter.

I am informed that Congress has some time since entered into an exculpatory resolve in favour of General Wooster, which has been published in the papers. A total silence with respect to me must therefore indicate to the publick that I am culpable. I shall, however, exculpate myself in a narration, supported by incontrovertible proofs, and leave the publick to judge whether I am, or who is in fault. Until then I wish the candid and ingenuous to suspend their judgment.

Mr. Avery ought to lose no time in coming down. The cold season is rapidly advancing, and much is to be done.

I have given Captain Varick directions to inquire what becomes of the boards sawed at Cheshire's, and to any thing that may be out of order.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

SAMUEL MABBETT TO THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

October 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK: Whereas I have made a practice for many years past, of taking in large quantities of beef and pork; and whereas it appears that them commodities may be much wanting in the present service, and I have provided a quantity of salt for that purpose, and I have already contracted with a great number of different persons for large quantities of provisions. I have been informed that the Committee have ordered that all the salt that I have shall be sold on Monday next, therefore I beg leave to submit the matter to this honourable Convention, whether I may be permitted to keep two hundred and fifty bushels of salt for the above use. Your compliance will much oblige your friend to serve, &c.

SAML. MABBETT.

COLONEL JAMES EASTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 21, 1776.]

Albany, October 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The Commissioners from Congress inform me that their power from Congress to settle accounts from the Northern department is inadequate for that purpose. Officers from various parts, at great expense, have applied for settlements without succeeding. I have spent almost three months at my own expense to settle my own account, and it's not done yet. Warner's and Cady's regiments have not got their pay, and a general murmuring ensues. I earnestly pray that the Commissioners from Congress may be fully authorized to settle the accounts laid before them.

Colonel Brown has applied, agreeable to order of Congress, for a court of inquiry for himself and me, but without success, and it's evident General Arnold will evade the trial if possible, as there appears not the least spark of evidence against us. A general complaint among officers of all ranks as well as soldiers, is heard against him, and it's hoped he will, ere long, meet the just demerits of deeds.

By a resolve of Congress I am reserved in pay for future employment, as I suppose. I don't desert this cause, nor think it a bad one, because I have been abused by General Arnold and others, but if could, shall exert myself in it, having determined never to yield until my country's liberties are secured. Notwithstanding, as circumstances are with me should gladly take an honourable discharge and my pay, and quit the service. If that's not granted, would beg leave that I might know what I am to do. If it's to raise men for the winter service, it's time I was about it; if it's to fill any vacancy, should be glad to know as soon as may be, where and what.

Sir, I am your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES EASTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., at Philadelphia.

TRYON COUNTY COMMITTEE TO MESSRS. PARRIS, MOORE, ETC.

In Committee of the County of Tryon, October 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In the other letter of this day's date we forgot to mention to you the absolute necessity we are under for money. The people to whom money is due are daily calling on us. You will therefore, if possible, obtain four hundred pounds New-York currency for us, and if one of you do not come up soon send it by the bearer, Lieutenant Simmonds, of the Rangers.

We shall have the accounts ready to be sent down to Congress soon.

We again recommend it earnestly to you to obtain an answer to the letters to Congress, so that we have them by the bearer. We are, gentlemen, your humble servants.

By order:

JOHN FREY, Chairman.

To Messrs. Parris, Moore, Harper, and Newkirk, in Provincial Congress, Fishkill.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, October 5, 1776.

SIR: Last evening I received your acceptable favour of the 30th of September last. I have received from the honourable Congress of the United States their resolution for inlisting a new army of eighty-eight battalions, to serve during the present war, with the bounty of money and land therein offered; that the appointment of all officers, and the filling up vacancies, except General officers, be left to the Governments of the several States. The quota assigned this State is eight battalions.

The appointment of suitable officers is agreed to be a matter of the greatest consequence to the States and armies. Have to ask your favour to take some suitable steps to furnish me with the knowledge of such in your army as are willing to undertake and fit for the service. Have requested the same favour of General Washington. Please consult Brigadier-General Waterbury, and when field officers are agreed on, they may be able to point out the best Captains and subalterns for the several companies in the regiment or regiments in your quarter, subject to your correction.

I shall meet the General Assembly at New-Haven, the 11th instant. Have ordered the post-rider to come to me at that place; by him shall expect your information on this subject. I have enclosed one of the resolutions of Congress; that body are extremely busy, which must plead their excuse for not writing to you. I am unacquainted with the road you mention; shall readily join in making the necessary road as good as possible.

The situation of the army on York Island, from best information, appears good; their preparations to receive the enemy very considerably advanced. The danger seems most from the want of security against the enemy's entrance of North River. The works in the river and the strength at Fort Washington are increasing, and hope may prevent the ships from going up the North River.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

BENJAMIN PAINE TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, October 5, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: Agreeable to your Honour's requisition, I have enclosed a list of the prisoners of war ordered to this State, and under the care of the Committee for Prisoners here. Have endeavoured to make it as perfect as I can, and am persuaded there are but few errors or omissions, though the materials which I had to form it from were not so correct and descriptive as could wish.

I am sorry that it has been delayed so long beyond your Honour's expectation, which was occasioned by a long illness I have been visited with, and from which I have not yet recovered, though through the goodness of God, the symptoms of my disorder are mitigated, and have now a prospect of a restoration to health.

My attention to this business has greatly fatigued me in my present weak state, but the publick exigency requiring it, I judged it my duty to undertake it, as the other gentlemen of the Committee were absent. Hope it will meet your Honour's approbation.

I have the honour to be your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

BENJA. PAINE.

To Governour Trumbull.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, October 5, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's letter of the 17th instant, by the Committee of this State, hath been received.

Deputy Governour Bradford informed you that it had been recommended to Colonel Richmond to march with his battalion to join your army; since which Mr. Hopkins, a member from this State of the Continental Congress, arrived here, by whose advice it was concluded to stop their march, and to permit such of the men as should incline, to enlist into the Continental navy. The reasons that induced the Committee to alter their first intention, were these: eight companies of the twelve of which that battalion consists, were inlisted about the middle of November last, for a year; but part of the regiment of Militia from the Massachusetts is yet arrived, and it will be some time longer before the remainder will arrive, so that by the time Colonel Richmond's battalion could be got under proper regulations in camp, their enlistments would expire, and it might be expected they would return home to the great discouragement of the troops left behind. In that battalion are a considerable number of seamen, who, it is thought, will enter in the navy, and in the present scarcity of seamen in this State, upwards of twelve hundred being at sea in the different privateers, it is absolutely impossible to supply them with men in any other way.

After the Committee had taken the last-mentioned resolution, Mr. Burr, a gentleman of character, arrived here from Governour Trumbull with a plan of landing a body of men upon the east end of Long-Island, and collecting a considerable naval force in the Sound. Upon conference with him and Commodore Hopkins, the Committee determined to recommend it to Colonel Richmond to proceed with such part of his battalion as should not enter into the sea service, to New-London, there to receive orders from such General officers as you should appoint to command in that expedition.

The two row-galleys of this State, with about sixty whale-boats from the Massachusetts, and between twenty and thirty belonging to us, will proceed to New-London with the battalion and their baggage. The galleys and whale-boats will be under the direction of Commodore Hopkins, to assist in the expedition.

I last night received the resolutions of Congress for inlisting eighty-eight battalions in the Continental service during the war, copies of which without doubt have been transmitted to your Excellency. By them a requisition is made of two battalions from this State. At the same time, we are informed by Mr. President Hancock, that the troops now in service belonging to the several States who shall enlist for the war, will be considered as part of their quota in the American army.

There are four battalions in Continental pay which were originally raised by this State, viz: Colonel Varnum's, Colonel Hitchcock's, and Colonel Lippitt's, who are now in the army under your command, and Colonel Richmond's, which is under orders for New-London.

I write by this opportunity to the three former to make report to me of the officers in their several battalions who will engage to serve during the war. And by the advice of the Committee, I request your Excellency to transmit to me, to be laid before the General Assembly at their session on the 28th instant, the names of such of them as you shall think merit promotion.

I beg leave to assure your Excellency that this State will give all possible efficacy and despatch to those important resolutions; and that I am, with great sincerity and esteem, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

NICH. COOKE.

To His Excellency General George Washington, Esquire, General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United States of America.

P. S. This letter will be delivered to your Excellency by Mr. Jonathan Hazard, who is a member of the General Assembly of this State, and whom I beg leave to recommend to your attention.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Providence, October 5, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 1st and 3d of this instant, and have laid them before the Governour and Council, and they have passed the enclosed resolves. The Alfred and Hampden are ready; the two new frigates I expect will be ready in about a week if they can be manned, which none of the four are half at present.

I shall do all in my power to forward your expedition, and join your fleet whenever you give orders so to do, at New-London, but expect you will excuse me to Congress, for not putting their orders in execution with respect to some of the fleet.

I am, with great respect, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut, at Lebanon.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN BRADFORD.

Providence, October 5, 1776.

SIR: Captain Whipple showed me a letter from you respecting the agency of the people belonging to the fleet: This is, therefore, to empower you to act as their agent until further orders. Although you are a total stranger, any other ways than being appointed by the honourable Continental Congress, we think it sufficient recommendation to empower you to act as our agent as long as you act to our satisfaction.

In behalf of the officers and men in the navy, I am, sir, your most humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Mr. John Bradford, Agent for the Continental Fleet at Boston.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Council Chamber, Watertown, October 5, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of the measures taken by this Government to engage a number of Indians, of the Penobscot, St. John's, and Mickmack tribes, in the service of the United States of America, agreeable to the desire of your Excellency, seven of the Penobscot tribe have enlisted for the term of one year, and have arrived here on their way to New-York. As they were very poorly clothed, and would not proceed without some supply, we have furnished them with a few necessary articles, amounting to twenty pounds, four shillings and four-pence, lawful money, which must be stopped out of their wages and their subsistence, which amounts to fifteen pounds, sixteen shillings and five-pence. And we have advanced Mr. Andrew Gilman, who has the care of them, twenty pounds, lawful money, in order to subsist them in their way to New-York. These were all that could be obtained from that tribe, and whether you can depend upon any from the St. John's or the Mickmacks tribes, we have not as yet any certain intelligence.

In the name and behalf of the Council, I am, with great respect, your humble servant.

To His Excellency General Washington.

LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN BOSTON TO HIS FRIEND IN THE COUNTRY.

October 5, 1776.

SIR: In compliance with your desire, I send you a few thoughts that obviously occurred to me upon reading the late conference between Lord Howe and a Committee of the Continental Congress.

As his Lordship was pleased to convey by General Sullivan a message to Congress, importing "his being desirous of having a conference with some of its members, whom he should consider for the present as private gentlemen," declaring in said message "that he, in conjunction with General Howe, had full powers to compromise the dispute between Great Britain and America, upon terms advantageous to both," it was the expectation of some, in agreement with the desire of all, that it would have been made evident to the Committee sent by the Congress to his Lordship, that those full powers he spake of were really vested in him, together with the General his brother; and that such proposals, in consequence of such powers, would have been made, as might have laid a foundation, at least, for the settlement of peace between Great Britain and America. But, by the report which the Committee made to Congress, after their conference with Lord Howe, it appears, that they judged "His Lordship's commission contained no other authority of importance than what is expressed in the act of Parliament, viz: that of pardon, with such exceptions as the Commissioners shall think proper to make, and declaring America, or any part of it, to be in the King's peace upon submission." Nothing more was therefore opened to them, than what his Lordship had before said in his printed declaration, no authority pointed out to settle the dispute with America, but upon the terms specified in the Parliamentary act; which has left us in just the same state with respect to the communication of any new authority, we were in before this conference; making it insignificant to any salutary purpose.

His Lordship, 'tis true, as the report of the Committee says, "entered into a discourse of considerable length, which contained no explicit proposition of peace except one, viz:

that the Colonies should return to their allegiance and obedience to the Government of Great Britain. The rest consisted principally of assurances." Of what? An assurance, "that there was an exceeding good disposition in the King and his Ministers to make that government easier to us." Could his Lordship possibly think, that such words of assurance, indirect contradiction to a long series of conduct, expressive of a malevolent disposition to an high degree of excess, would be satisfactory to the Committee, or Congress, or its constituents? After many humble petitions and remonstrances, setting forth the many grievous things America lay groaning under, taking rise from this "exceeding good disposition" in the Britannick Ministry, all which petitions and remonstrances, instead of being hearkened to, were not only treated with insolent contempt, but repeatedly followed with heavily increased additions to our former hardships. I say, after this to speak in the strong words of assurance, not only of the good, but the exceeding good, disposition of the King and his Ministers, could have no other tendency than to inflame the minds of Americans, and fill them with resentment. It is to me very extraordinary, that his Lordship should so much as lisp a word of the good disposition of the King and Ministry towards America, when he could not but know, from what they were now doing, as well as from what they barbarously had done, that notwithstanding its pretended goodness, it was rather to be dreaded, than relied on for safety. Another assurance, or rather insinuation was, "that in case of our submission, they (that is the King and his Ministers) would cause the offensive acts of Parliament to be revised, and the instructions to Governours to be reconsidered." And why? Says the report of the Committee, "that so if any just causes of complaint were found in the acts, or any errors in government were perceived to have crept into the instructions, they might be amended or withdrawn." 'Tis strange his Lordship should bring in the qualifying supposition "if:" "If there be any just causes of complaint." With Americans there is no "if" in the case. They are universally convinced, and from what they have unhappily felt, that they had just cause of complaint against those acts and instructions. And had his Lordship considered but a moment, he would, or might have known, that a revisal of those acts, and a reconsideration of the instructions to Governours for amendment, if there was need of it, were not the things we desired, or could be satisfied with. Nothing short of a total, everlasting repeal of those acts, as unfit on account of their barbarity and cruelty to be in force, and an absolute withdrawal of many of these instructions, as inconsistencies with that liberty we have a right to, would or could give content.

The truth is, notwithstanding the assurances and insinuations of his Lordship, with respect to the offensive acts and instructions, the Ministry would be left to act their own pleasure, and might have refused a revisal or reconsideration of them, if they saw fit; which sovereign, arbitrary pleasure of the present Ministry is too well known to us, especially as we have unhappily had so much reason to know what it is to have the least dependence on it. Nor would it have been relied on by America had she continued in her state of dependence.

Upon the whole it would be undoubtedly the wisdom and for the interest of the American States to depend, under the patronage of Heaven, upon themselves and such alliances as they may be able to come into with foreign States, for security in the enjoyment of those liberties we have an unalienable right to as men and as Christians, and not upon the British King and his Ministers, from whom we have suffered more than might have been expected had we been under the most arbitrary Government in Europe. It very clearly appears to me, as I know it does to many others, notwithstanding the appointment of Commissioners to treat with the Americans upon terms of peace, as their appointment is connected with the mission of a much greater force, both by sea and land, than was ever seen in these parts of the world, that the Ministry did not intend to make peace but upon the terms proposed in the act of Parliament, that is, in other words, upon our submission as slaves to an arbitrary and despotick Government. And it is yet further evident to me that the ministerial appointment of Commissioners, with pretended full powers to settle the dispute between Great Britain and America, was chiefly designed to amuse the people at home, and through misrepresentation to make them believe that the fault would be wholly ours if matters were not accommodated upon reasonable terms. The Ministry could not expect, they did not expect, our submission, unless upon terms that would secure to us our rights and liberties. They knew they did not intend this, and contrived this expedient that they might have, as they imagined, something plausible to throw among the people of England to hurt us and strengthen themselves.

I have now, in a cursory way, given you my sentiments with respect to the conference between Lord Howe and the Committee of Congress, and you may make what use of them you please.

Your friend and humble servant,

AMERICANUS.

To Mr. ———

Portsmouth, N. H., October 5, 1776.

Yesterday arrived here the brigantine Marquis of Kildare, Captain Thomas Palmer, in seven weeks from Bordeaux, with a cargo of military stores, &c. He informs us the French treated him with the utmost kindness, and seemed ready to do every thing in their power to serve him; that the custom-house officers permitted the American vessels to pass without examination, while the English were all searched.

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, October 6, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 1st instant I received, and observe by the contents that Mr. Lee is returned to London. I have not seen Mr. Ellis. In answer to your queries: First, a reconciliation between Great Britain and the United States of America is improbable ever to take place; it is absolutely impossible, until after the sitting of Parliament.

Secondly, Admiral Howe joined his brother early in August, and sent on shore to General Washington a letter, which was returned unopened, as no title was given to General Washington; a second was sent, and met the same fate. The Congress justified the General in his conduct, and ordered him to receive no letters, except they were directed to him with his proper title. Lord Howe sent to the Governours of several Colonies his proclamation, which, by the army and people of New-York, was treated with contempt and ridicule. Thus matters continued until the 20th of August, when General Howe had collected his whole force, and was preparing to attack New-York. On the other side, all the eminences and advantageous posts near the city were secured and fortified, and the Americans strongly intrenched on them; the city of New-York fortified with batteries next to the water, and all the principal streets with barriers across them, and, at the same time, the houses filled with combustibles ready to be set on fire, should the city be found tenable. The two men-of-war, which had passed up the river above the city, were returned terribly damaged by attacking a battery. This, in a word, was the state of affairs in New-York on the 20th of August, from which important news may be expected every hour.

Thirdly, I know what Dr. Franklin's sentiments were when I left America, and that nothing but a miracle could convert him to wish for an accommodation on other terms than the independence of the Colonies. Depend upon it, my good friend, the Ministry of Great Britain labour incessantly to propagate stories of an accommodation, for it is well known, that they despair of reducing the Colonies by arms this campaign; at the close of which, the national debt will amount to nearly £150,000,000 sterling, part of which will remain unfunded; and where are their resources for supporting the next campaign? He that can discover the philosopher's stone can answer.

To your fourth query, you will excuse my answering more, than that your conjecture is not far out of the way. My letter will inform you why I must still delay sending what I promised you the 14th ultimo. In the mean time, sir, you may add to indigo and rice, tobacco, logwood, redwood, sugar, coffee, cotton, and other West-India produce, which pass through the hands of the North-Americans, in payment for their supplies to the West-India Islands, which cannot exist without their produce. Also, in course of trade, spermaceti oil and salt-fish may be supplied to Prussia and Germany as cheap, or cheaper from the Colonies, than from Holland and Germany. The United Colonies exported to Europe, chiefly indeed to Great Britain, fish-oil, whalebone, spermaceti, furs and peltry of every kind, masts, spars, and timber, pot and pearl ashes, flax-seed, beef, pork, butter and cheese, horses and oxen; to the West-Indies chiefly, wheat-flour, bread, rye, Indian corn, lumber, tobacco, iron, naval stores, beeswax, rice, and indigo, &c., &c., to the amount of more than £4,000,000 sterling annually, and for some years past, and received the pay in European manufactures; and when I remind you that the inhabitants of that country double their number every twenty years, and inform you that this exportation has increased for the last century in the same ratio, you will be able to form some idea of this commerce, and of how much importance it is to Europe. I hope, by the coming post, to send you some favourable news from America; and I may not add to this without missing the post.

I am, with the most sincere esteem, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

SILAS DEANE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BILBOA, DATED OCTOBER 6, 1776.

By this time we judge the capital events of the American armies are over, and from the silence observed in the Court of London, every body imagines the King's troops have been worsted. All Europe is in expectation of what has happened on your side, and we in hourly hopes of some arrival. May God Almighty bring it soon, and to our entire satisfaction, is the hearty wish of those that are and will be with true esteem.

We are now on the 14th instant, and your favour 22d August, per Lee, is come to hand, after thirty-nine days' passage, in which he took five prizes, so that he will make a fine voyage if they get in safe. On his arrival one Mr. Gomaz, who receives some Newfoundlanders, applied to the Commissary to stop the vessel, on account of her being an illegal privateer; and said Commissary granted it, and ordered the master to present his commission, which we had him comply with, with a proper protest and petition, insisting on his being set at liberty; upon which it was ordered that the vessel should remain until his Majesty should give instructions how to proceed about it. As soon as we heard of it, we drew out a fine petition for his Majesty, and despatched an express for the purpose, and, notwithstanding the power and activity of the British Ambassador, we have obtained a charming order from his Catholic Majesty, a copy whereof you have herein translated into English, by which you see the point is now settled for the future, and all American vessels are allowed to enter into our ports without distinction, whether privateers or merchantmen. On sight hereof our Commissary released Captain Lee's vessel immediately, and is now getting things in order to proceed home. Some great news are just come to hand.

In consequence of the express sent to Madrid, we find the Commissary has received orders from his Majesty to inform Captain Lee, and all other Americans, that all their vessels, viz: privateers and prizes, will have all manner of assistance in the Spanish ports; to say, they will be safe and unmolested, and will be provided with every thing but the articles prohibited in such cases. In short, that a strict neutrality will be observed by his Catholic Majesty, so that you may henceforward be quite easy, and send your vessels freely, as well as prizes from any quarter whatsoever. You ought to improve this fine opening, and your worthy rulers ought to send over somebody, or empower some person.

We are with joy, but in haste.

MARQUIS OF GRIMALDY, PRIME MINISTER IN SPAIN, TO D. MANUEL DE MOLLINEDO, COMMISSARY OF MARINE.

St. Ildephonso, October 7, 1776.

By your letter of the 4th instant, and the testimony that accompanied it, his Majesty is acquainted with what has occurred respecting the American schooner Hawk, Captain John Lee, from the time of his entry to the time of your laying her under a formal embargo, by obliging her to deliver up the tiller; all at the instance of Don Vera Fran- cisco Gomez de la Terra, inhabitant of your place. His Majesty has likewise seen the protest of said American Captain, against all the damages that might ensue. In consequence of which, says to you, that whereas his Majesty, from the great friendship he possesses for his Britannick Majesty, maintains a perfect neutrality in the present war, not giving to the Colonists any of these aids prohibited in like cases, so likewise it corresponds to the same neutrality, not to deny them entrance into his ports, which they have been always used to enjoy, so long as they respect the territories of his Majesty, in proper terms.

Besides the above, his Majesty thinks Mr. Gomez an unqualified, improper person to solicit a proceeding of this nature. You will therefore be pleased immediately to put said American in full liberty, returning him all his papers, and permitting him to purchase what provisions and goods he needs to return to his own country, but without assisting in any prohibited articles.

Signed:

MARQUIS OF GRIMALDY.

GENERAL LEWIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 28, 1776: referred to the Board of War.]

Williamsburg, October 6, 1776.

SIR: Captain Charles Harrison, commanding the train of Artillery, will do himself the honour of waiting on you, in order to obtain instructions from the honourable the Congress respecting his company. He will give a proper return, by which not only his number of officers and men, but the number of cannon, and the different stations will be pointed out, with the distances the batteries are from each other, which will discover the necessity of having his company augmented. His number is certainly too small to man the different batteries, as the several stations are very wide of each other.

I am, with great respect, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General

To Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

COLONEL PATTERSON TO CÆSAR RODNEY.

Head-Quarters, Amboy, October 6, 1776.

SIR: Your three favours came to hand last evening. For answer, I am extremely sorry for your situation, and fear your disorder. As soon as I received yours, went about the inquiry for the root. There is so few of the inhabitants in town, that it was some time in the night before I got to hear of such. At last found an old lady who I gave money to, to send off this morning for some. As yet she has not arrived, or should have sent it by this hand, Doctor Spencer, of New-Castle. She says it is never got till November, and then used to be brought into town to sell; used as a tea; and to her knowledge has cured many that came here on purpose. I shall not fail of forwarding it to-day to Woodbridge; to go by post.

As to the other parts of your letters, have not full time to answer. As to Mr. Watson, have not seen him. Shall let him know the answer to his; but believes he does not want to resign, as he begins to know, like all the rest, that money can be made in that way; and if so, believes he will acquiesce in small bluffs.

Captain Caldwell's company and Colonel Hodgson arrived here about the 1st instant. They are all here now but what Captain Mitchell's men are to follow him.

I received a letter from the Hon. George Read, acquainting me another battalion is to be raised with us. I cannot see the propriety of such an attempt, when mine is not near full and full officered, to save expenses. I should thought, as we are not more than four hundred and fifty men, officers included, instead of six hundred, and at this season, so far advanced, is, in my humble opinion, hurting the intention. If any such should come, they must be mostly of the Militia kind; and half a month will cure them for ever going again, and persuade others not, if you should be ordered to raise one in the spring. They can only say they go up the hill and down, at this season, as the time is so short.

We left Captain Mitchell's drum at the maker's, by accident. I can sell all our drums and I believe colours, at the end of our campaign, if ordered. This you can consult, and let me know.

My compliments to Mr. Read and Mr. McKean.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

SAM. PATTERSON.

Captain Woodgate is sick. Three men dead in our battalion, from below. About seventy now sick. S. P.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 6, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform you that in consequence of my directions, founded on your favour of the 21st ultimo, Governours Browne and Skene are arrived within the neighbourhood of this place, and will be conveyed to-morrow, between the hours of one and two, to one of the ships of war in the North River, when it is hoped that my Lord Stirling will be permitted to return, as also Mr. Lovell, if he is come from Halifax.

The particular manner in which you rest upon me, by your letter of the 4th instant, a performance of the agreement between General Arnold and Captain Forster, was entirely unexpected, as I enclosed you, some time ago, the resolutions of Congress upon the subject, by which you would perceive that they, to whom I am amenable, had taken upon themselves the consideration of the matter.

As to the prisoners mentioned in my letter of the 23d, their exchange shall be effected as soon as the circumstances I made you acquainted with will admit of.

The enclosed note for Mrs. De Lancey you will be pleased to have conveyed by the earliest opportunity.

I am, sir, with great respect, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

COLONEL WEBB TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters on Harlem Heights, October 6, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by his Excellency to inform you, that in the night, about twelve o'clock, our men distinctly heard the enemy throwing tools into boats from Montresor's and Blackwell's Islands, and that boats were moving up the Sound most of the night. About daylight twenty boat-loads of men rowed up, and landed on one of the islands called the Two-Brothers.

The General thinks the above manœuvre should not, in the least, draw your attention from Morrisiana, though a good look-out should be kept on all their movements; and at the same time bids me add that no time should be lost in taking possession of the hill you yesterday mentioned to him, below the gut.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

SAM'L M. WEBB, A. D. C.

To Major-General Heath.

GENERAL SCOTT TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp near King's Bridge, October 6, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: I received your order of battle last night just going to bed, with which I am highly pleased in every respect, except that of my being placed in the centre. I think I ought to take the right, as I know but two Brigadiers in the army, Lord Stirling and General Mifflin, that rank before me. Of this I am sure I shall be able to convince you, by showing you that I have been a Continental Brigadier-General since the 9th June last, yet at Head-Quarters and elsewhere Generals Parsons, Pierson, and McDougall, and even General Clinton, who claims rank of me in consequence of a commission from our Convention of an older date than mine, but merely constituting him Brigadier of the Militia of Ulster County, are preferred to me. I urge this not to induce you now to a change, especially in General Clinton's absence: I only mean to put in my claim, and leave the change of disposition, if we should have leisure for it, to some future time.

I have accounts from Mrs. Scott of her being at Tapan, with her whole family in one room, she overwhelmed with distress and continually in tears, not knowing how to dispose of all that are dear to her except myself. She cannot be comforted till she sees me, and receives my directions for her future disposal. I have a light skiff that rows with four oars, which will be the most expeditious way of going to her, and I promise you, unless accidents should happen, not to sleep till I return. I shall set off in an hour, if I do not receive your orders to the contrary, which shall in all cases be obeyed by, sir, your most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The enemy did not give us the trouble of removing them from Harlem last evening. They went off themselves. They had been levelling some small works we had thrown up there when our troops quartered in that town, and not throwing up new, as we thought.

Our troops have evacuated Bergen and the places adjacent, and will form an entire body, under General Greene, in Jersey, opposite to this post. When Lee arrives, I think we may form a fine disposition: Greene in Jersey, the General on this side Harlem, in the centre, and Lee on the other side. A bridge of boats is to be thrown over Harlem River, just at this place, which will form a fine, easy communication between, should the attack be made either on one side or the other.

I have not to add but that Lord Stirling's exchange takes place to-morrow, Governour Browne being arrived.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq., Fishkill.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

King's Bridge, October 7, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 3d instant, enclosing resolve respecting salt and salted provisions; and Mr. Mease purchasing one hundred hogsheads rum for me. As to the last I had an agent at Philadelphia purchasing for me, I wish they mayn't interfere; rum and other West-India articles are now becoming plenty, brought from the eastward to Buy Run river, within seventeen miles of this place, for sale, where I have lately purchased large quantities on very good terms. As to salt and salted provisions, I have and shall immediately take effectual care. The only danger I apprehend is for want of salt. This matter I mentioned to Mr. Sherman, Gerry, and Lewis, when here, and pointed out to them fully what I proposed, and what I thought necessary to be done by Congress, and hoped by this time to have received the needful orders, but am yet disappointed. I find the resolve of Congress is antecedent to their getting to Philadelphia.

What I mentioned to the Committee was, that a very considerable part of the salt in the country is in the hands of Continental agents, on whom I ought to have orders for the delivery of it to me or my order; and I apprehend that all the salt in the country will fall very short of a sufficiency. I proposed that Congress should give me such orders as would indemnify me in sending abroad and bringing in, or encouraging persons to bring in a sufficient quantity for Continental use, as might be necessary for salting provisions for the army; by which means I may be sparing of salt at first salting, and repack and pickle as I can get the salt in afterwards. A bare authority to purchase I suppose will not be sufficient for this purpose. I have already engaged proper persons from Philadelphia to New-Hampshire, in every proper place in each State, to purchase up every bushel of salt to be had, and to prepare casks and take in salt and cure pork and beef.

These matters need an immediate attention, and I propose going into New-England for the purpose as soon as I can have orders from Congress on their agents, and the proposed indemnification, if thought proper by Congress. I would have gone ere this, but for want of them; going is of no importance till I have them. I must first know what salt I can be sure of before I purchase provisions, and adopt my orders to the circumstances of the case. I really grudge every moment that is lost in this matter. I shall exert myself, and fear nothing but what I mention.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

Messrs. Stockton and Clymer left this yesterday morning. They beg me to press the matter of salt.

CAPTAIN CLUGGAGE TO COLONEL HAND.

Camp at De Lancy's Mills, October 6, 1776.

SIR: It is with great concern I am to request you'll please to accept of my resignation of the commission of eldest Captain, which I have had the honour to hold in the regiment under your command.

A constant attention to every part of duty in the service which my commission demanded, from the earliest raising of the regiment to this time, I flattered myself would ever be the surest means to secure me the favour of the United States, at least so far as by my rank in the service I had reason to expect. But, sir, from the late promotion of an officer over my head, so much my junior, to the rank of Major, I find my mistake, and therefore think myself called upon to quit the service, which shall, however, have my most hearty wishes for its success; as it shall ever be the rule of my conduct to disengage myself from any service I may be engaged in, in which promotion must be often considered as the marks of interest and not the reward of merit.

I must beg that you'll please to forward this account of my resignation to his Excellency General Washington, as soon as convenient, in order that an officer may be appointed in my room.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT CLUGGAGE.

To Colonel Edward Hand, commanding the First Regiment at De Lancy's Mills.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM JOHN JAY TO GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, DATED FISHKILL, OCTOBER 6, 1776.

Had I been vested with absolute power in this State, I have often said and still think that I would last spring have desolated all Long-Island, Staten-Island, the City and County of New-York, and all that part of the County of Westchester which lies below the mountains. I would then have stationed the main body of the army in the mountains on the east, and eight or ten thousand men in the highlands, on the west side of the river. I would have directed the river at Fort Montgomery, which is nearly at the southern extremity of the mountains, to be so shallowed as to afford only depth sufficient for an Albany sloop, and all the southern passes and defiles in the mountains to be strongly fortified. Nor do I think the shallowing of the river a romantick scheme. Rocky mountains rise immediately from the shores. The breadth is not very great, though the depth is. But what cannot eight or ten thousand men well worked effect? According to this plan of defence the State would be absolutely impregnable against all the world on the sea side, and would have nothing to fear except from the way of the lake. Should the enemy gain the river, even below the mountains, I think I foresee that a retreat would become necessary, and I can't forbear wishing that a desire of saving a few acres may not lead us into difficulty.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, October 6, 1776.

SIR: At six last night, I had the honour to receive from you four bundles of papers, all directed to me; but on opening, reading, and examining the directions at bottom, I found one of them was intended for General Gates. The papers it contained I shall enclose and forward to him, together with the articles of war that were in one of the other bundles.

In your favour of the 27th ultimo, you advise me that the Committee of Congress were to confer with me. I apprehend this mistake crept into your letter by the variety of business which claims your attention; for I find, by the resolution of Congress of the 25th ultimo, that the Commissioners are to confer with General Gates. My name is not so much as mentioned in any of the resolutions of that day, except in the second, and by that it would seem as if I acted under General Gates. Indeed, from the resolutions of that day, it seemed unnecessary to have sent me any of the other papers, as it strongly implied that I do not any longer command in this department. I only mention this because, when I resigned my offices, I observed that I should continue to act for such a reasonable time that a general officer might be sent here, and had therefore some reason to expect that the pleasure of Congress would have been conveyed to me, on that head, in a manner less liable to objection.

Although the above-quoted resolution would fully justify me if I forbore every act as Commander-in-Chief of this department, yet the principle which alone induced me to accept the command, on which I have acted whilst in it, and which I trust will mark every action of my life, will not permit me to forbear acting until matters are put into such a proper train, by Congress, as that no detriment may accrue to my country.

When I received no answer to my letter in which the clothing was mentioned, (as, indeed, I have not, a long time since, to any,) I ventured to order all the woollens to be made up; and all the tailors that can be procured here are now employed in that business.

Mr. Avery, who succeeds Mr. Livingston in the commissary branch in this department, is arrived. The army, as he informs me, is supplied with about forty days' flour, including what is at Fort George, and with beef to the first of next month, including what cattle are on their way up. I hope Mr. Avery will continue to keep up that stock. He will have my best advice and assistance to do it whilst I command, which I hope will be but a very few days longer.

The postscript to your letter mentions "that Congress will soon determine on the subject of my letters, as they are now in the hands of a special committee." If determining on the subject of them means a determination on the propriety or impropriety of my conduct as an officer, I cannot but think it extremely extra-judicial, as I have not had an opportunity given me of defending myself; for although I have the fullest confidence in the propriety of my conduct and in the honour of the gentlemen who compose the committee, yet things may appear in quite a different point of light to them from what they really are, when uninformed of causes and facts, which, perhaps, none but myself can suggest; and Congress may, perhaps, go into a censure, which, upon better information, they would find unjust. I am, therefore, under the necessity of entreating Congress to suspend their judgments until I shall be heard. This is a request so reasonable in its nature as, I hope, cannot be refused me.

I am, sir, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, October 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By Mr. Bennet, who arrived yesterday, I was honoured with your Excellency's very obliging favour of the 30th ultimo.

I should have been much happier than I am, if the resolutions of Congress of the 25th ultimo had not put it out of my power to be in sentiment with you on the resolution of the 14th of the same month. Without advising me that I am no longer in command, they resolve that "Mr. Stockton and Mr. Clymer are appointed a committee to proceed to Tyconderoga, to confer with General Gates with respect to the army under his command."

I believe I shall be able to collect about forty thousand boards. Part of them are already gone from hence, together with a considerable number of rafters. I believe the Committee of this place will be able to procure about twenty thousand boards; and they have employed people to procure the timber Mr. Ayers requested of them.

Be so good as to order the Quartermaster-General to send me about two thousand pounds, on account; or if it makes no difference, I will draw on the military chest here.

I am in great hopes that you have so embarrassed the enemy by your movement from New-York, that they will find it impossible to form and execute any plan that will materially distress you in the remainder of this campaign.

The army in this quarter is well supplied with provision, and I trust will continue to be so. The three row-galleys are gone to join the fleet, and a fourth will be very soon equipped.

I do not apprehend that the enemy will be able to do any thing of consequence to the northward, unless they should suspend their operations until the term of enlistment of our troops expires. I confess my hopes of seeing an army speedily raised on the new establishment are not very sanguine. That the soldiers are to pay for their clothing will be a great obstacle, as the price of every necessary is so extremely high. Perhaps it would have been as well if Congress had enumerated the articles each soldier should be furnished with, and determined the stoppage that should be made for it.

I am, dear sir, with every friendly wish and every respectful sentiment, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 6, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: At six last night, I received four bundles of despatches from Congress, all directed to me; but on opening, reading, and examining the directions at bottom, I found Mr. Hancock's clerk had made a mistake, and that one was intended for you. The papers it enclosed I now send you, as also a bundle of the articles of war, which were also, it seems, designed for you. Of this I have advised Congress.

I am happy to find, by Mr. Avery's return, that you are so well supplied with provisions. I shall advise him by all means to keep up the stock, and afford him my best assistance to do it, which I expect will now be only a very few days longer, as you will see, by the resolutions of the 25th ultimo, that Congress has already implicatively declared me no longer in command.

I must entreat to send Colonel Lewis to this place. His office requires that he should be here and on the communication, that things may be kept in train.

The powder, &c., is not yet arrived. I shall order Mr. Avery to forward it as soon as it comes to hand.

I am, dear sir, very sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates, &c.

DR. STRINGER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I arrived here last night from Boston, where, I have the pleasure to inform you, I met with the greatest success in procuring medicines to upwards five thousand pounds, York currency, which I expect will be here by Thursday next, when I shall immediately despatch and follow them.

I hope you have had your health well, with all your fatigue. I shall trouble you to deliver the enclosed letters, and, with respect, am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

SAM'L STRINGER.

To Major-General Gates.

CHRISTOPHER YATES TO GENERAL GATES.

Cheshire's, on Wood Creek, October 6, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Having been from here a few days, occasioned by my indisposition, and on my return the 3d instant, I found the two companies of Colonel Mott's regiment, to wit, Captain Sharp and Captain Norton, ordered away. They had left Major Waters, of Colonel Swift's regiment very ill, as also thirty-seven of the sick people of their two companies; the one not able to help the other: no doctor to take care of them, so that I have not one man to carry on the works here, the road not being half done. I am obliged to keep two of my carpenters at the mill, and they can't do half the work that is required, and carpenters to attend the masons. I have just begun my first chimney in the barracks. There are a great number of the tools which I had left in the gentlemen's care when I went away, wanting. If your Honour would be pleased to order Colonel Van Dyke, who is now at Fort Edward, with part of his regiment, this way, I believe they would answer best on the road and at the mill. I am sure they would, for I have had Captain Veder of that regiment there, who did the work extremely well. I shall do my endeavour to let the few carpenters I have got here labour to the best advantage; and remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

CHRIS. YATES, A. D. Q. Gen'l.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

HENRY J. VAN RENSSELAER TO GENERAL GATES.

SIR: As I am an officer in the Militia, and look upon it that I am of greater service to my country than by being Commissary of Forage, I beg the General will please to accept of this my resignation of Commissary of Forage, and you will oblige, sir,

Your humble servant,

HY. J. VAN RENSSELAER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

JOSEPH HAWLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Northampton, October 6, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I am so well knowing to your humanity and the goodness of your natural temper, as to be assured that nothing within your power necessary to the safety and health of the troops under your command will be omitted. I only beg leave just to acquaint you that from the declarations of officers in your army and people who visit your camps, the country are made vastly uneasy at being informed that there is scarce any medicines for the sick, and that it is rare that any rations are dealt out to the privates but of meat and bread, or any money paid in lieu of the other articles. They say that there are plenty of doctors, but no medicine. Your Honour knows whether there are any grounds for these complaints, and if there are, whether these defects are chargeable on the Congress, or the neglects, frauds, and dishonesty of such as are employed by them.

I have heretofore suggested to your Honour the speedy need your army will be in of snow-shoes; and as every little helps in any case, I mentioned in one or two former letters that I have by accident, in my custody, between fifty and sixty pair of snow-shoes, in good condition, belonging to the States, purchased last winter by Mr. Mifflin.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH HAWLEY.

To General Gates.

GENERAL WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, October 6, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday I received from Mr. Glover, agent at Marblehead, a box of broad swords, which he lately found in the Scotch ship Ann, that was taken some time since.

Also, received from Mr. Bradford, agent for Continental prizes, the enclosed invoice of articles which he has in his hands. The reason which he gave for delaying it so long, was, the plaids were infected with the small-pox, and he thought it necessary to cleanse and air them a considerable time before they were used.

I am your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

ARTEMAS WARD.

To General Washington.

An account of Plaids and Military Stores in the possession of JOHN BRADFORD, Esq., Agent for Continental Prizes, viz:

- 35 pieces short plaid.
- 88 yards of long, do.
- 8 large camp-kettles.
- 16 small, do.
- 5 dozen canteens.
- 2 dozen half-gallon kettles and covers.
- 2 dozen flat tin candlesticks.
- 12 dozen hard metal table-spoons.
- 94 rugs.
- 84 blankets.

October 6, 1776.

GENERAL ARMSTRONG TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Wilmington, North-Carolina, October 7, 1776.

SIR: Brigadier Howe being now at Charlestown, permit me to acquaint you I am this far on my way to the northward, having first obtained the consent of General Lee, and shall be happy to find my return may not be disagreeable to Congress; but still more so should my motives be found to be such as to meet the approbation of that honourable body.

As the military affairs of this State are not in so much forwardness as could be wished, I shall stay one day here and one in Halifax, in order to represent to the Council of Safety now sitting at that place, several matters of importance to the future defence of these States, particularly that of South-Carolina; and if health permits shall make but a short stay at Carlisle, and wait your further commands at Philadelphia. The English shipping which lay at Cape Fear are entirely gone off, having first burnt three vessels unfit for service. A negro who deserted them says he heard they were bound to New-York.

I am, sir, with perfect respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN ARMSTRONG.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

COLONEL HAWKINS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Charles County, October 7, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry to be under the necessity of informing you of the misbehaviour of the Twelfth Battalion, and hope you will lay the same before the honourable Convention. On the 23d ultimo the said battalion was ordered to attend at the usual place of meeting; and those that attended, though it was not a full meeting, were drawn up in line to perform the manual, but immediately upon the Adjutant giving the word of command, a great number of the soldiers broke their ranks and collected together in a crowd. Upon which I instantly went amongst them to inquire into the reason of such extraordinary behaviour, and some of them objected to their being mustered by a Scotchman; but the greater part declared that they would not be mustered by any Adjutant at all; alleging that the Province was run to a very heavy expense by employing Adjutants, and they thought it the duty of the officers to muster the battalion. I said every thing I could, (and so did many other of the officers,) to show them the absurdity of such conduct, but to no purpose. I then ordered them to be dismissed until I should hear from Convention, and hope it will not be long before some step is taken to reduce them to order.

I am with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOSIAS HAWKINS.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of Convention.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, October 7, 1776,

Present: Samuel Purviance, Jun., Chairman, A. Buchanan, W. Aisquith, T. Sollers, A. Britain, E. Talbot, T. Rutter, D. Lux, T. Gist.

The fine imposed on Robert McCallister, as a Non-Enroller is remitted, it appearing that he had enrolled with Captain Philips some time ago.

A list of the Assessments on the Non-Enrollers in Middle River, Upper, and an additional one of Back River, Upper, were made out, and sent to the Collectors.

Mr. Benjamin Merryman entered a complaint against Captain John Foster, that though he has returned an enrolment, yet it is incomplete, and he does not muster his company according to the resolves of Convention, and further that he never would take up arms during the present contest.

Upon motion, Resolved, n. c. d., That Messrs. John Foster, Solomon Cross, Sen., and Benjamin Merryman, be ordered to attend this Committee on Monday next.

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, October 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee appointed to carry into execution the enclosed resolve can think of no method so proper for the State of New-York as to apply to the Convention; and, for that purpose, we send you ten thousand dollars, and desire you to appoint proper persons in the several districts to execute the same; and if, upon trial, you find that more clothing may be had than this money will purchase, you may have more by applying to this Committee.

ROB. TREAT PAINE,	ARTHUR MIDDLETON,
JOSIAH BARTLETT,	WM. FLOYD,
WILLIAM ELLERY,	LYMAN HALL,
WM. WILLIAMS,	GEO. ROSS.
GO. WYTHE,

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

In Congress, September 25, 1776.

Resolved, That a Committee of Congress consisting of one delegate from each State, be appointed with authority to employ proper persons to purchase in their respective States, a sufficient number of blankets and woollens fit for soldiers' clothes; and that they take the most effectual and speedy methods for getting such woollens made up, and distributed among the regular Continental army, in such proportion as will best promote the publick service; and that they also purchase all other necessary clothing for the soldiers, in such proportion as they judge, upon the best information will be wanted; and that the said Committee be authorized to draw on the President of Congress for the sums necessary to execute this business, they to be accountable for the amount of their drafts and disbursements.

The Committee are: Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Paine, Mr. Ellery, Mr. Williams, Mr. Floyd, Mr. Stockton, Mr. Ross, Mr. McKean, Mr. Paca, Mr. Wythe, Mr. Hawes, Mr. Middleton, and Mr. Hall.

Extract from the minutes:

CHAS. THOMSON, Secretary.

COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, October 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Livingston wrote you a few lines the 28th September, acquainting you that we had obtained a vote of Congress on the Treasurer for one hundred thousand dollars, which it was not in our power to send you before this time.

Enclosed you have Mr. Hunter's receipt for the same. The gentlemen who carry this money are of the Light Horse of this city, and of respectable characters. We request you will pay attention to them as such.

The Committee of Congress to whom your papers respecting General Schuyler were committed, have reported, we hope to your satisfaction. Mr. Rutledge informs us that he had transmitted a copy to Robert R. Livingston, Esq., and a certified copy shall be sent you per post, which will probably come to your hands before this letter.

On the 5th instant we were going to move Congress, that they would direct General Washington to propose to General Howe the exchange of Brigadier-General Woodhull for Brigadier-General McDonald, when a Pennsylvania newspaper of same date was handed to us, by which it would appear that Brigadier-General Woodhull had taken such a part as would put it out of our power to move for his exchange. Should be glad you would inform us if there be any truth in this conjecture, and direct it us as to our conduct therein.

We are respectfully, gentlemen, your very humble servants,

FRA. LEWIS,
PHIL. LIVINGSTON,
WM. FLOYD.

To the honourable the Convention of New-York.

Received, Philadelphia, October 7, 1776, of the honourable the Delegates of New-York, a box containing one hundred thousand dollars, the which to be delivered to the honourable the Convention of New-York, now sitting at the Fishkills, for which given two receipts of equal tenour and date.

The contents unknown.

JAS. HUNTER.

Philadelphia, October 7, 1776.

We are informed by authentick intelligence that an American sloop-of-war of twelve guns and seventy men, sailed from the Delaware the 21st of August. She cruised between the latitudes of 39° and 33° north, and went to the eastward as far as the longitude of 50° west, having taken three prizes, a whaler, and two West-Indiamen, and having had a very narrow escape from an English frigate after a six hours' chase, part of the time within pistol shot. On the 14th September she bent her course for Nova-Scotia, and on the 20th had another action with an English frigate, and in the course of an eight hours' chase ridiculed the enemy, and answered his broadside with only a single musket.

The next day she went into Canso and took three English schooners, with a Scotch Tory's flag, although the Savage and Dawson's brig were within a few leagues distance. The day following she took five sail of Jerseymen, in Narrow-Hook, and four more in Peter de Great. It is remarkable, that though their men were ten to one, they were so panick struck that they not only gave up their ships but even assisted to rig and carry them out of their harbour. The sloop then proceeded to the westward, took another whaler on St. George's Bank, and on the 7th October arrived safe at Rhode-Island, having manned and sent in eight prizes, viz: six brigantines, one ship, and one sloop, and sunk, burnt, and destroyed eight more, viz: six schooners, one ship, and one brigantine, and finished her cruise in six weeks and five days.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 11th October. Referred to Board of War.]

Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem, October 7, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour of transmitting to you a copy of a letter from the Compte d'Emery, Governour-General of the French part of St. Domingo, which I received yesterday, and also my answer, which I have enclosed, and left open for the consideration of Congress, wishing that it may be sealed if they approve of the Sieur De Chambeau's releasement, and which I think may be attended with many valuable consequences. If Congress concur in sentiment with me, they will be pleased to give direction for his passage by the first opportunity to the French Islands. If they do not, I shall be obliged by your returning my letter.

I have also the pleasure of enclosing a copy of a letter from Monsieur P. Penet, which came to hand last night, and which contains intelligence of an agreeable and interesting nature, for which I beg leave to refer you to the copy. The polite manner in which Monsieur Penet has requested to be one of my Aids-de-Camp demands my acknowledgments. As the appointment will not be attended with any expense, and will show a proper regard for his complaisance and the attachment he is pleased to express for the service of the American States, I shall take the liberty of complying with his requisition, and transmit him a brevet commission, provided the same shall be agreeable to Congress. Their sentiments upon the subject you will be kind enough to favour me with by the first opportunity.

The enclosed letter for the Seigneur De Chambeau you will be pleased to forward to him, if he is to be enlarged, after closing it.

Before I conclude I must take the liberty to observe, that I am under no small difficulties on account of the French gentlemen that are here, in consequence of the commissions they have received, having no means to employ them, or to afford them an opportunity of rendering that service they themselves wish to give, or which perhaps is expected by the publick. Their want of our language is an objection to their being joined to any of the regiments here at this time, were there vacancies, and not other obstacles. These considerations induce me to wish that Congress will adopt and point out some particular mode to be observed respecting them. What it should be, they will be best able to determine. But to me it appears that their being here now can be attended with no valuable consequences, and that as the power of appointing officers for the new army is vested in the Conventions, &c., of the several States, it will be necessary for Congress to direct them to be provided for in the regiments to be raised, according to the ranks they would wish them to bear, or I am convinced they will never be taken in, let their merit be what it may; or to form them into a distinct corps, which may be increased in time. They seem to be genteel, sensible men, and I have no doubt of their making good officers, as soon as they can learn as much of our language as to make themselves well understood; but unless Congress interfere with their particular direction to the States, they will never be incorporated in any of the regiments to be raised; and without they are, they will be entirely at a loss and in the most irksome situation for something to do, as they now are.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

St. Domingo, August 4, 1776.

SIR: Although I have not the honour to be known to your Excellency, I hope you will be good enough to release a French officer who, like an inconsiderate man, was taken in Canada, serving in the English army against your troops. I entreat you to set him at liberty, and suffer him to embark in some vessel bound to the French Colonies, from whence he may get a passage to France and rejoin his regiment. He is called the Sieur De Chambeau, and is an officer in a regiment of infantry in the service of his Crown.

Although this officer has fallen into an error by taking part in a quarrel in which he ought by all means to have been a neuter, either considered as an officer of France or a Canadian, I could not, seeing he had wrote to me, refuse to use my interest with your Excellency to suffer him, by an act of generosity, to regain his liberty and join his regiment in Europe. I hope your Excellency will not think my demand impertinent, and that you will pay regard to it. I took the earliest opportunity to assure you that I esteem myself happy in having it in my power to prove the high esteem with which your reputation has inspired me.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most humble and most obedient servant,

COMPTE D'EMERY,

Governour-General of the French part of St. Domingo.
To General Washington.

Nantes, August 3, 1776.

MY GENERAL: I am pleased to present you my respects, and to inform you of the success of my operations in France. I can assure you, you need not fear the want of ammunition. I have found the means to furnish your armies, and to provide your garrisons. There will go to you immediately four subjects, two of which are of distinction and great merit, and who will deliver into proper hands the political state of France, England, Spain, and Portugal. We wish every success to your arms, and also if possible that we may lend a hand. The letter which will be sent you by one of these gentlemen, will inform you well of interesting and advantageous circumstances, which I cannot communicate to you but by them.

I have, my General, a demand to make of you for a favour which I desire to obtain, and which I hope to merit. I have wrote concerning it to Dr. Franklin. It is that you would grant me the honour of the title of your first Aid-de-Camp, and that you would permit me to wear the uniform and also the ribbon. I ask no pay, but the honour only of being in your service. I hope you will grant me that favour in consideration of my attachment and the desire I have to serve with fidelity the nation of the thirteen United Colonies of North America. I shall make my residence in Nantes, and don't intend to return to the Continent before the end of the war, my presence being necessary for your operations, and not being able to trust such secret affairs but to myself. If I can be so happy as to be of any use to you, I am entirely at your disposal. Dr. Franklin can forward your letters to me, and also the brevet of Aid-de-Camp, which I hope you will not refuse me, and which I shall receive with the greatest pleasure.

I beg my best respect to Madame Washington; and assure her that I have the honour to be, my General, her and your most obedient servant,

P. PENET & Co.

To General Washington.

Head-Quarters, Haerlem Heights, ten miles from }
New-York, October 7, 1776. }

SIR: I yesterday had the honour of receiving your letter of the 4th August, and I take the earliest opportunity of testifying the pleasure I have in complying with your request, by immediately ordering the release of Monsieur Dechambault. He shall be accommodated with a passage in the first vessel that sails from Philadelphia to the French Colonies in the West-Indies.

Had it not been for your interposition, Monsieur Dechambault must have remained a prisoner till released by a cartel; but I could not hesitate to comply with a request made by a nobleman, who, by his publick countenance of our cause, has rendered such essential services to the thirteen United Independent States of America, whose armies I have the honour to command.

I have the honour to be, sir, with the highest esteem, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Monsieur Le Compte d'Emery, Gouverneur-General of the French part of St. Domingo.

Proceedings of a Court-Martial of the Line, held on the Heights of HAERLEM, by order of his Excellency General WASHINGTON, Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, for the trial of all Prisoners to be brought before them; October 7, 1776.

Colonel Weedon, President.

Members.

Lieut. Colonel Richardson ,	Captain Wolcott ,
Major McDonnough ,	Lieutenant St. John ,
Captain Hoit ,	Lieutenant Janney ,
Captain Byles ,	Lieutenant Lane ,
Captain Bracon ,	Lieut. Drake ,
Captain Gaston ,	Lieutenant Clarke .

William Tudor, Judge-Advocate.

The Court being duly sworn proceeded to the trial of Sergeant George Douglass, of Captain Forbes's Company, in General McDougall's late Regiment, brought prisoner before the Court and accused "of mutinous conduct and of exciting mutiny, and also of speaking disrespectfully of the Commander-in-Chief, and of the General Officers of the Army of the United States."

The prisoner being arraigned on the aforesaid charge, pleads "Not guilty."

Ensign Bonner deposes: That the prisoner was confined in the quarter guard of the regiment for disobedience of orders, while the regiment was stationed on Haarlem Common. I was officer of the guard and heard the prisoner say to part of the guard and some other prisoners who were confined with him, "that the Generals had sold the troops upon Long-Island, and had brought the army up to Haarlem, to sell them there."

Captain Forbes deposes: In the morning of the same day which Ensign Bonner mentions, I was walking near the quarter guard, and heard somebody singing, "God save the King." I came up to the person, and found it to be Sergeant Douglass. After he had finished the song he said "he was his King, and he would have no other King, which we should soon see." This he said to a soldier who was with him. The prisoner is a Sergeant in my company, and has been repeatedly mutinous.

The Court are of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of mutinous speeches, and speaking disrespectfully of the Commander-in-Chief; and the Court sentence the prisoner to be whipped thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for said offence.

G. WEEDON, President.

The Court proceeded to the trial of George Harris, of Captain Hoel's Company, in Colonel Winds's Regiment, brought prisoner before the Court and accused of desertion.

The prisoner being arraigned, pleads guilty, and confesses "that he deserted from the regiment last May, when the regiment was at Albany, and about three weeks ago was taken up at Brunswick and sent a prisoner to the camp at Haarlem."

The Court find the prisoner guilty of a breach of the eighth article of the rules and regulations for the government of the Continental troops, and sentence him to be whipped thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for said offence.

G. WEEDON, President.

The Court order Patrick McCollister, of Col. Hallett's Battalion, and George Stephens, of General McDougall's late Regiment, confined for being found outside the lines, to be dismissed; there being no evidence against them, and the Court upon inquiry, finding the prisoners to have been in liquor, and wandering about without design, rather than with a view of desertion.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

G. WEEDON, President.

The Court adjourns to Wednesday morning, 9th October, at nine o'clock.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial held by adjournment, October 7, 1776, by order of Major-General HEATH.

Colonel Lasher, President.

Lieut. Colonel Prentice ,	Captain Dana ,
Major Austin ,	Captain Dixen ,
Captain Sill ,	Captain Brazier ,
Captain Barnes ,	Captain Townshend ,
Captain Keith ,	Captain Platt ,
Captain Allen ,	Captain Hardenburgh .

The Court proceeded to the trial of Lieutenant John Hulburt, of Sedgwick's Company, in Colonel Chester's Regiment, for having deserted the camp in time of danger, and being absent twenty-six days without leave.

The prisoner pleads, "Not guilty."

Captain Sedgwick being sworn deposes: That after the retreat from Long-Island, while they were at New-York, the Colonel was suspicious their baggage was in danger. I desired the Lieutenant to go two or three miles with it. He went. The Colonel asked me soon after, where the Lieutenant was, as he had not returned? I said I knew not. I was afterwards informed by Captain Wells he was beyond King's Bridge. The Captain thought he looked better than he had done. I wrote to him to come back, which letter did not reach him till he got home, he having pushed on. He lives one hundred and twenty-six miles off. He was absent twenty-one days.

Adjutant Abbe: When the ships were drawn up, I was ordered by the Colonel to parade the regiment and man the lines. I told the Lieutenant of it. He then went off. I thought him in tolerable health.

Prisoner's Defence.

Pleads the Captain's orders for absenting himself from the regiment at first, and his ill state of health for proceeding home.

The Court find the prisoner not guilty of having deserted the camp in time of danger, but find him guilty of absence without leave twenty-four days, and unanimously adjudge him to be cashiered and mulcted one month's pay.

JOHN LASHER, President.

The Court next proceeded to the trial of Abraham Smedes, a Lieutenant in Captain De Witt's Company, in the regiment commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Hardenburgh, for spreading a false and malicious report concerning Colonel Hardenburgh's conduct on the day of the retreat from New-York; also for absenting himself from the regiment without leave.

The prisoner pleads, "Not guilty."

Colonel Hardenburgh sworn: Produces a letter from his son-in-law at home, which he swears to. The Colonel then says, that on reading this letter to the prisoner, he denied the whole except the following paragraph, which he confessed and said Lieutenant Lawrence told him so. The paragraph is: "Lieutenant Lawrence and a Sergeant hunted for you, and found you hid away, and brought you out, and after that you hid again among some potatoes in a yard, where they fetched you out again." As to absence without leave, he went away contrary to my express orders.

Lieutenant Van Orcher. Confirms what the Colonel says with respect to the prisoner's confessing as above.

Lieutenant Lawrence. I utterly deny my saying any such thing of the Colonel as the prisoner alleges. The Colonel was in the intrenchments and behaved well.

Prisoner's Defence.

He says Lieutenant Lawrence did say the Colonel was at the left of the intrenchments, in an hollow ground, out of danger. As to absence, he was unwell, and thought he could slip away.

The Court unanimously adjudge the prisoner to be guilty of both charges; and order him for the first charge, to beg the Colonel's pardon at the head of the regiment, and confess that the whole was a scandalous, malicious lie, without the least foundation, and that this confession be inserted in the publick paper. For the second charge, they order him to be cashiered and mulcted one month's pay.

JOHN LASHER, President.

Both of the foregoing judgments are approved by
GO. WASHINGTON.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 7, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have Mr. Benson's letter of the 5th, by which I find you are laid up with a sprained leg. I hope it will not be of long continuance.

Anchors and cable will be wanting to moor the boats, in order to throw a bridge over Harlem River; all those belonging to the vessels that were sunk, are sent up the river, I believe to Poughkeepsie. His Excellency desires that you would immediately send down six anchors and cables of the size that are commonly used by sloops. As they are very much wanted, pray let no time be lost.

We have nothing new from the enemy. We took a drum and fife, rambling in Harlem, this morning, but they are entirely ignorant of their own numbers, plans, or any thing else.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq.

JOHN FIELD TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Dutchess, South-East Precinct, October 7, 1776.

SIR: We esteem it our duty to suggest to your honourable House, that we think the raising a company of Rangers, or County guards, in the southern part of Dutchess County, is very necessary. Our external enemies seem to strain every nerve to carry their insidious plans into execution. We have too much reason to believe we have daily spies from the British army in our neighbourhood. We are now, sir, in pursuit of two persons whom we have lately discovered, of whose villainous purposes we have sufficient evidence. Our treacherous neighbours are in a continual agitation. We wish they and their connection may be now labouring under the last expiring struggles of that inhuman spirit which has so long possessed them. However that may be, we beg leave to say that a strict attention to their motions is our duty, and that the concurrence of the Convention with what is above recommended, we think may serve to detect them in a great degree.

If the honourable House should honour us with their concurrence, we beg leave to recommend Nathaniel Seribna, of Fredericksburgh Precinct, as Captain, and Joseph Field, in Southeast Precinct, as Lieutenant, of the company, and that they are authorized to enlist their company as soon as possible. For further intelligence in this matter, we would refer the House to our worthy friend Doctor Crane.

We are, sir, yours, and the Convention's very humble servants,

JOHN FIELD.

JONATHAN PADDOCK.

To the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO ALBANY COMMITTEE.

In Convention of the State of New-York, Fishkill, }
October 7, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by Convention to request of you to apply to the gentleman that has the superintendency of the Presbyterian Church in your city, for the use of the iron stove, with the pipes and other fixtures thereto belonging. They will either return the same, or order another to be cast with all despatch, as suits the gentlemen concerned.

The Convention here sits in the Dutch Church, which, being built of stone, is so very damp that many of the members cannot attend. They therefore request that your Board would apply immediately for it, and send it down to Fishkill Landing for the use of the Convention by the first conveyance. They will pay all expenses attending the same.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, October 7, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the honour of your Excellency's favour of the 4th instant.

I have long since written to Congress for a supply of nails. All I can procure in this quarter are insufficient for the works at Tyconderoga, so that I fear no barracks will be built in this quarter, unless a speedy supply arrives from Philadelphia.

We have nothing new in this quarter worthy communicating.

I am, dear sir, most unfeignedly and sincerely, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO ROBERT YATES.

Albany, October 7, 1776, six o'clock, A. M.

DEAR SIR: Your favour of the 4th instant, enclosing the resolutions of Congress for raising a new army, were delivered me just now.

I shall cause returns to be made out of Van Schaick's, Wynkoop's and Nicolson's regiments, and transmit them to you by the first conveyance, which will probably be to-morrow, together with the terms on which they were engaged.

You will perceive by a letter of mine, this date, to Convention, that I have presumed to give them a hint on the subject of the new army. Had I received yours before I wrote that, I should have enlarged, which I shall do in my next to you. The post waits, and I must conclude.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest esteem, you obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Robert Yates, Esq.

From McDougall's, Clinton's, and Ritzema's corps, I have never had a return.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany, October 7, 1776.

SIR: On Saturday last I received sundry despatches from Philadelphia. Copy of Mr. Hancock's letter, and of the resolutions of Congress of the 25th ultimo, I do myself the honour to lay before the Convention. By the contents of the former, it would appear as if Congress still considered me as commanding in this department, and correspondent to this idea was the direction of the letter; if so, nothing could be more insulting than that Commissioners should be sent to confer with any officer under my command, with respect to the army in this department, or any part of it. This treatment would fully justify me if I forbore every act as Commander-in-Chief of this department. Yet the principles which induced me to accept the command, on which I have acted whilst in it, and which, I trust, will mark every action of my life, will not permit me to forbear acting until matters are put into such a proper train by Congress as that no detriment may accrue to my country. Of this I have advised Congress, and signified my wish that I may be speedily relieved.

Convention will perceive by the postscript to Mr. Hancock's letter, that Congress has referred an inquiry into my affairs to a special committee. Although I have the fullest confidence in the propriety of every part of my conduct, and in the honour of the gentlemen who compose the committee, yet things may appear in a quite different point of view from what they really are, to persons uninformed of causes and facts, which perhaps none but myself can suggest. I have therefore entreated Congress to suspend their judgment until I shall have had an opportunity given me of being heard, a request so reasonable that I hope it will not be refused me; but if it is, I must, in justification of my conduct, publish my letters to Congress, with their answers, whatever may be the consequences, for I cannot sacrifice my honour to any consideration whatever.

By the resolutions of Congress to enlist eighty-eight battalions during the war, I perceive that this State is to raise four of them. The Convention will pardon my presumption in venturing a thought on the subject. By the resolutions of Congress the soldiers are to pay for their clothing, the price of which is now so excessively high, that I fear that condition will greatly impede the levies. Perhaps it would be best to determine the several articles of clothing that should be given to each soldier, and ascertain what stoppages he should be put under for it; but these, I think, ought very little to exceed the price that clothing was sold at before the present troubles arose. This, with the bounty offered and paid immediately, I believe would induce men to engage with alacrity. That State which is foremost in publishing their terms, and in appointing recruiting officers in both armies, to enlist men, I conceive will meet with the least difficulty in doing it.

I should imagine that many of the New-Jersey and Pennsylvania soldiers, whose terms of enlistment expire on the last of this month, would reengage.

I am, sir, respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. Abraham Yates, Esq., President, &c.

SAMUEL MOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Mount Independence, October 7, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: There is nothing new to inform your Honour of. I wrote by Mr. Brown, and mean to write by the next post again; and also to send a true state of my regiment. I have only time now to inform your Honour that I received the letter by Bozworth, and expect to have the things of Colonel Alden's sent to my care from Skeensborough; but don't know what to do with them, for Colonel Alden is gone away sick towards Albany. The regiment is yet sickly. We hear of no material movement of our northern enemy, and if they don't come soon, I expect the General will begin to discharge the sick. But I find the General yet expects them. I am extremely anxious to hear the particulars of the several actions at New-York, since our army left the city. There is so many sick, and in so many places, it was impossible for the doctors to attend them all properly, so that I have been obliged to appoint Lieutenant Machure, of Captain Robinson's company, who is a physician, to assist as a physician in attending the sick.

Am, with great respect, your Honour's humble servant,
SAML. MOTT.

To Hon. Governour Trumbull.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Valcour, October 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received your favour of the 2d instant, and copy of yours of the 23d ultimo, yesterday, by General Waterbury, who arrived with the two galleys about two o'clock. I fully expected by him to have all the particulars of the evacuating Long-Island and New-York. He seems to know little of the matter, and General Washington's letter seems not very explicit. The affair of Long-Island seems still in obscurity. I am very anxious for our army and friends below. Lord Howe's desiring a conference and neglecting his appointments, seems not very favourable. It appears to me our troops or officers are panick struck, or why does a hundred thousand men fly before one quarter of their numbers? Is it possible my countrymen can be callous to their wrongs or hesitate one moment between slavery or death? What advantage can we derive by blockading the enemy when they are in possession of a part of the country sufficient to support them? It appears to me coercive measures should be adopted. However, I will say no more, lest I incur the censure we passed on their council last spring for judging too rashly of our measures. That Being in whose hands are all human events, will doubtless turn the scale in favour of the just and oppressed.

Nothing worth notice has occurred in this quarter since my last. The weather is very severe here and gales of wind frequent. If the enemy do not make their appearance by the middle of this month, I have thought of returning to Button-Mould Bay, as I think they will not pretend to cross the lake after that time. We are prepared for them at all times, and if they attempt crossing the lake, I make no doubt of giving a good account of them.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, October 7, 1776.

SIR: I received your agreeable favour of the 2d instant on Friday. Your intention to do nothing prejudicial to our common cause reflects honour upon you, and will be the best defence when every thing is impartially considered, which cannot be expected in this day of great searchings of heart.

I have enclosed one of the resolutions for raising a new army, lest you have not yet received them. The appointment of suitable officers is a matter of the greatest consequence to the States and armies. Have to ask your favourable assistance to furnish me with the knowledge of such from this State in your army as are willing to undertake and fit for the service. I know it to be a delicate affair. Shall treat what you say upon it accordingly.

I am, with sincere esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fairfield, October 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I wrote to Convention from the camp at King's Bridge, giving an account of the progress I had made in negotiating the exchange of General Woodhull, since which have received the melancholy intelligence of his death. The wound in his arm mortified; the arm was taken off, but the mortification still continued, and in a few days put an end to that useful life. He was attended in his dying moments by his lady, who was permitted to remove the corpse to his seat, where it was interred about the 23d ultimo. These particulars I have from Captain Strong, of Islip, by whose door the procession passed in its way to St. George's.

In a day or two after my arrival here General Clinton called upon me, by desire of General Washington, to attend at a council of war to be held at New-Haven, from whence I returned not till Saturday evening. I shall unavoidably be detained two or three weeks in order to get my family fixed for the winter; but in the mean time shall send Ketchum to the Fishkills as soon as a guard can be procured. At present every one is employed in forwarding the Militia from New-Hampshire and Massachusetts, who are marching to the number of near six thousand to join the grand army.

By some late accounts from Long-Island, I learn that two hundred Infantry and one hundred Cavalry were at Huntington, in order to force the people who had been in our army to join the British troops. This measure will drive the people to desperation, and, if it can be accomplished, most of them will quit the country. I hope General Washington will attempt to assist them in it. Much has already been done by Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, who with the zeal and activity of an excellent officer, has greatly assisted the people at the east end of the island in removing their families and effects; but many of them cannot bring the means of support with them, which will occasion great difficulties. Should a number more, under the same circumstances, come over, it will be too great a charge upon the charity of individuals in this State.

The provision made by Convention is inadequate to the purpose of maintaining the indigent from the island, even supposing they were to remove into our own State, for certificates of indigency from the Chairmen of Committees being necessary to entitle to maintenance, such cannot be had, for as soon as the necessity of removing took place the Committees universally declined acting, so that the resolve intended for their relief becomes of no effect, and they would fail of the intended relief in any part of New-York but here, where the purity of intention wherewith the Convention was actuated is not known. If the resolve stands in its present form, I fear it will be construed into a design to delude both the refugees and the persons who shall entertain them. Some further regulations are necessary if any thing is intended to be done for those unhappy sufferers. The Assembly of this State are to sit in a few days at New-Haven, and I trust will, upon application, give all the assistance we can reasonably ask.

I hope Convention will not think me impertinently troublesome upon this subject. My heart aches at every pore when I consider the deplorable situation to which the people whom I have the honour to represent are reduced; a people who, without boasting, were as warmly attached to the common cause, and who as cheerfully obeyed the orders of Convention, as any in the State. Upon the retreat of the army from the island they viewed themselves as abandoned by the Continent, and expecting the enemy hourly among them, a general removal appeared impracticable; besides, to quit their pleasant habitations and throw themselves with their tender connexions upon the charity of an unknown world, was a degree of apathy to which they had not yet arrived. In a fit of despair they laid down their arms and made an unconditional submission to what they supposed the conquering army.

The people at large being thus brought to terms, they found it less difficult, by threats, to induce the individuals who had formerly held commissions under the Crown of Great Britain to resume the execution of their offices. Being once led into the snare, every measure tended to draw the net closer about them; notwithstanding which I am from the best authority informed that they are accused by Mr. Tryon and his minions of having submitted only the better to cover their intention of removing, and that unless the young men do voluntarily take up arms against their country, an inveterate and disappointed soldiery will be let loose upon them.

These considerations induce me earnestly to wish that some measures may be taken to induce the people to quit the island, by offering a support to those who cannot maintain themselves. The aged and infirm might be maintained at the publick expense. A regiment of Long-Island refugees would provide a support for many of the young men. Should the Convention adopt the idea, there are many officers in General Scott's brigade, who, together with some of Colonel Smith's regiment, now on this side, would make an exceeding good corps.

Should General Washington send a body of troops on to the island, it will be necessary to destroy every thing that would be of service to the enemy, to prevent its falling into their hands. I beg leave to submit whether it will not be proper to hold out the prospect of compensation in order to induce the people the more cheerfully to assist in destroying their own property.

Give me leave, before I conclude this long letter, to suggest the propriety of filling up the two vacant regiments, late McDougall's and Clinton's. Your officers, by the delay, will lose the opportunity of rising so fast in the Continental army as those of the other States. There is some little uneasiness in the First Regiment on the subject of rank. That matter may now be accommodated to general satisfaction.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. SLOSS HOBART.

To the honourable the Convention of New-York.

Hartford, October 7, 1776.

Edward Smith, of Newfain, in the County of Cumberland, in the State of New-York, being convicted of counterfeiting certain bill or bills of credit emitted by the Colonies, before the Committee of Brattleborough, in said County, he is, by their order, here published as a notorious enemy to the rights of the American States. Also,

Lieutenant Daniel Brunday, of Skeenesborough, Charlotte County, having been found guilty of violating the Continental Association, it is desired by the Committee for the town of Skeenesborough, before whom he was convicted, that he may be treated with the contempt he justly merits.

Newport, October 7, 1776.

Last Thursday a prize brig, loaded with rum and sugar, went up the East Passage. She was bound from Antigua for the British fleet and army at New-York, and taken by the privateer Industry, Captain Thomas Child, who had taken another large brig from Jamaica, loaded with sugar, mahogany, and logwood, which, we hear, is safe arrived at the eastward.

The Lady Washington, privateer, Captain James Godfrey, has sent a fine ship into a port in the Massachusetts

State, loaded with four hundred and twenty-five hogsheads of sugar, some rum, cotton, &c.

A ship loaded with dry goods, bound to Quebeck, and taken by Captain Crawford, went into a safe port yesterday. About the same time another ship from Jamaica, with sugar, rum, &c., taken by Captain Coffin, went into a secure harbour.

We hear that last Wednesday, as Captain Harding, in a Connecticut brig-of-war, was going up the Sound from a cruise, he was attacked by the Merlin ship-of-war, when a very warm engagement ensued, but another ship, supposed to be the Cerberus, coming up, and endeavouring to cut Captain Harding off from the land, he made from them, and got safe into Stonington. We don't learn what damage was sustained on either side. At the same time a third ship was seen near Block-Island.

Boston, October 7, 1776.

The prize taken by Captain Greely, and sent first into Marblehead, has since come round here. She has papers to the middle of August, which give particular accounts of the Spaniards invading the Kingdom of Portugal, and taking several towns. The inference is plain: war is or must be declared.

The mate of a London ship, brought up this evening by Captain Atkins, informs that the Ministry are so suspicious of plots and conspiracies being laid, that four persons dare not be seen conversing together in London, but they are immediately dispersed.

A privateer is just arrived at Salem, after taking three prizes, one of which is loaded with dry goods to the amount of £37,000 sterling. This fine prize has not yet arrived. A day seldom passes without provision vessels, Jamaica-men, Londoners, or something is taken.

SUTTON (MASSACHUSETTS) TOWN MEETING.

Sutton, October 7, 1776.

At a legal town meeting of the town of Sutton, upon the handbill sent out by the House of Representatives, to see if towns will consent that the present House of Representatives and Council should form and ratify a Constitution for this State,

Resolved, That this town can by no means consent to what is there proposed, for the following reasons, viz:

1. Because we think it irrational for us to consent to the setting up any constitution unknown to us, or to vote for any thing before we see what it is we vote for.

2. Because we look upon the present House of Representatives, not only to be a very unequal representation of the State, also an illegal one, many of them being chosen by virtue of a pretended law made after the precepts went out for the election of the House.

3. Because we look upon it irrational and unjust for us to act any thing that shall operate in any measure for such an extensive and everlasting effect, while so many of our neighbours and brethren are gone into the army, and would be plainly voting away their rights in their absence.

A true extract from the minutes.

OXFORD (MASSACHUSETTS) TOWN MEETING.

Oxford, October 7, 1776.

Whereas the Great and General Court of this State, have, on the 17th day of September last, recommended it to the male inhabitants of each town in this State, upwards of twenty-one years of age and free, that being assembled in town meeting, they should determine whether they consent that the present General Court (both Houses being agreed) enact such a Constitution of Government for this State as shall appear to them most conducive to the peace, safety, and happiness of this State for the future:

The town of Oxford met pursuant to the above resolve, September 30th, last, and chose a committee to consider and report on said resolve, on the 7th of October then next, to which time said meeting was adjourned. The said committee, having met and attended said service, do report as follows, viz:

1st. It appears that if the present General Court are properly constituted to act in any matter, since the Declaration of Independency, (which is disputed,) yet there is a very unequal representation of the several towns in this State at present, in that some towns are allowed to send such a large number of members, barely in consideration of numbers, without any regard had to lands and real estates, which appears to be in consequence of an act passed in a former General Court, when there was a very thin House. And therefore, that the present General Court, are not in a proper situation to act on matters of such importance as forming a Constitution of Government for after successions and generations in this State; and whereas mature consideration and deliberation appears to be necessary to be used in a case of such importance, we apprehend it not safe that it should be proceeded upon unless there is more equal representation, and taking some further time for consideration and information touching said matter.

The town of Oxford met upon adjournment, and after the above report had been repeatedly read, it was put to vote whether the same be accepted, and it passed unanimously in the affirmative.

Attest: SAMUEL HARRIS, Town Clerk.

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, October 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your Declaration of the 4th of July last has given this Court, as well as several others in Europe, reason to expect you would, in form, announce your independency to them, and ask their friendship; but a three months' silence on that subject appears to them mysterious, and the more so as you declared for foreign alliances. This silence has given me the most inexpressible anxiety; has more than once come near frustrating my whole endeavours, on which subject refer you to mine of the 1st instant.

Employ must be found for the forces of Great Britain out of the United States of North America. The Caribbs in St. Vincent, if set agoing, may be supplied through Martinico with stores. The mountain negroes in Jamaica may employ a great number of their forces. This is not employing slaves, which, however, the example of our enemy authorizes. Should there arise trouble in these two islands, which a very little money would effect, the consequence would be, that Great Britain, which can by no means think of giving them up, would be so far from being able to increase her forces on the Continent, that she must withdraw a large part to defend her islands.

I find every one here acquainted with Bermuda is in my sentiments; and by the officiousness of the treacherous Hopkins, the Ministry here have got it by the end. This makes me the more solicitous that the island should be fortified this winter, if practicable.

Tobacco in Holland is at the enormous price of seven stivers, and will soon be as dear in France, Germany, &c. I have promised that you will send out twenty thousand hogshead this winter, in payment of the articles wanted here. Let me advise you to ship the whole to Bordeaux, after which it may be shipped in French bottoms to any other port; the price will pay the convoy, therefore I would recommend the vessels in which it should be shipped should be armed, and that each ship sail under convoy of one of your frigates, which may also ballast with it: this will be safer than coming in a fleet. On your arrival, Messrs. Delap; whose zeal and fidelity in our service is great, will be directed by me, or, in my absence, by Mr. B. M., or ostensibly Messrs. Hortalez & Co., where to apply the money.

Eight or ten of your frigates, thus collected at Bordeaux, with a proper number of riflemen as marines, where they might have leisure to refit and procure supplies, would strike, early next season, a most terrible blow to the British commerce in Europe, and obtain a most noble indemnity. The appearance of American cruisers in those seas has amazed the British merchants, and insurance will now be on the war establishment. This will give the rival nations a great superiority in commerce, of which they cannot be insensible; and as our vessels of war will be protected in the ports of France and Spain, the whole of the British commerce will be exposed.

I hope to have a liberty for the disposal of prizes here, but dare not engage for that. The last season, the whole coast of England, Scotland, and Ireland, has been, and still remains unguarded. Three or four frigates, arriving, as they certainly might, unexpectedly, would be sufficient to pillage Port Glasgow or other western towns. The very alarm which this would occasion might have the most surprising and important effects, and in this method it might be effected with the utmost certainty, if entered upon early next spring: but should that be laid aside, the having five or six, or more, of your stoutest ships in these ports, where you may every day receive intelligence of what is about to sail from England, would put in our power to make great reprisals.

I wrote for blank commissions, or a power to grant commissions to ships of war: pray forward them, as here are many wishing for an opportunity of using them in this way; they will take a cargo in an armed vessel for America, and if they meet with any thing in their way take it with them. The granting commissions against Portugal would insure the friendship of Spain.

Grain will bear a great price in this kingdom and the south of Europe; and I have made application to the Minister of the Marine to supply masts and spars from America for the French navy: pray inform me how, and on what terms, the British navy formerly used to be supplied from New-England.

I am fully of opinion that war must break out soon, and become general in Europe.

I need say no more on the situation I am in for want of your further instructions. I live in hopes, but should I be much longer disappointed, the affairs I am upon, as well as my credit, must suffer, if not be absolutely ruined. My most respectful compliments to the honourable Congress.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,
SILAS DEANE.

COLONEL GADSDEN TO JOHN LEWIS GERVAIS.

Sullivan's Island, October 8, 1776.

SIR: We have now not one barrel of pork left; therefore desire you will send us down a month's salt provisions as soon as possible for a store. The Adjutant, Mr. Hamilton, will tell you the reason of this. I should also be glad you would send me a hogshead of rum for the regiment by the first opportunity. I am obliged to give a great deal of rum to the labourers about the bridge.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

CHRIST. GADSDEN.

To John Lewis Gervais, Esq., Commissary-General, Charlestown.

SAMUEL BOONE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

GENTLEMEN: By orders of supervisors of the gun-lock factory in Frederick town, I have sent you seventy-nine locks, and have a quantity more all ready to put together. If you must have all the locks sent to you that is made in the factory, please to let me know by the bearer, George Bear.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

SAML. BOONE.

To the Council of Safety of Maryland.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, October 8, 1776.

I ought to acknowledge with gratitude your constant kindness in writing to me by every post. Your favour of 29 September came by the last. I wish it had been in my power to have returned your civilities with the same punctuality, but it has not. Long before this you have received letters from me, and newspapers containing a full account of the negotiation. The communication is still open, and the post-riders now do their duty, and will continue to do so.

I assure you we are as much at a loss about affairs at New-York as you are. In general, our Generals were out-generated on Long-Island, and Sullivan and Stirling, with a thousand men, were made prisoners, in consequence of which, and several other unfortunate circumstances, a council of war thought it prudent to retreat from that island and Governour's Island, and then from New-York. They are now posted at Haerlem, about ten or eleven miles from the city. They left behind them some provisions, some cannon, and some baggage. Wherever the men-of-war have approached, our Militia have most manfully turned their backs and run away, officers and men, like sturdy fellows; and their panicks have sometimes seized the regular regiments. One little skirmish on Montresor's Island ended with the loss of the brave Major Henley, and the disgrace of the rest of the party. Another skirmish, which might, indeed, be called an action, ended in the defeat and shameful flight of the enemy, with the loss of the brave Colonel Knowlton on our part. The enemy have possession of Paulus Hook and Bergen Point, places on the Jersey side of North River. By this time their force is so divided between Staten-Island, Long-Island, New-York, Paulus Hook, and Bergen Point, that I think they will do no great matter more this fall, unless the expiration of the term of inlistment of our army should disband it. If our new inlistments fill up for soldiers during the war, we shall do well enough. Every body must encourage this.

You are told that a regiment of Yorkers behaved ill, and it may be true; but I can tell you that several regiments of Massachusetts men behaved ill too. The spirit of venality you mention is the most dreadful and alarming enemy America has to oppose. It is as rapacious and insatiable as the grave. We are in the face Romuli non republica Platonis. This predominant avarice will ruin America, if she ever is ruined. If God Almighty does not interpose by his grace to control this universal idolatry to the mammon of unrighteousness, we shall be given up to the chastisements of his judgments. I am ashamed of the age I live in.

You surprise me with your account of the prayers in publick for an abdicated King, a pretender to the crown. Nothing of that kind is heard in this place, or any other part of the Continent, but New-York and the place you mention. This practice is treason against the State, and cannot be long tolerated.

Don't leave off writing to me. I write as often as I can. I am glad Master John has an office so useful to his mamma and papa as that of post-rider.

COUNCIL OF SAFETY OF PENNSYLVANIA TO THE CONGRESS.
[Read October 10: referred to the Board of War; Board of War to confer.]

In Council of Safety, October 8, 1776.

As it is not improbable that General Howe might detach part of his army by water from New-York to invade this State, and as we should be unable to make any defence against them by land, in our present unarmed condition, and as not only the safety of this State, but the preservation and security of great part of the military stores belonging to Congress is thereby endangered:

Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel Bayard, and Mr. Biddle, be appointed to confer with a Committee of Congress on the expediency of having a body of Troops stationed near the City of Philadelphia, for the defence of this State, and that a General officer of some experience be appointed to have the command of said force.

Extract from the minutes:

JACOB S. HOWELL, Secretary.

CARLISLE (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of the town of Carlisle, at the Court-House, the 8th day of October, 1776:

Resolved, unanimously, That the inhabitants of this town at large be called together, to meet at the Court-House, at two o'clock this afternoon, to consider of the oath directed by an ordinance of the late Convention of this State, passed at Philadelphia, the 26th day of September last, to be taken by every elector in this State, at the ensuing election, before his vote for Representatives shall be received.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Carlisle, in the afternoon of the same day, on notice given, in pursuance of the above resolve, Robert Miller, Esq., was appointed Chairman.

After the occasion of the meeting was opened to the people, the oath above referred to was read and considered, and the question was put, viz.: Whether the inhabitants present will take the oath aforesaid, on the 5th day of November next, at the ensuing general election, previous to their delivering their votes for Representatives to the Inspectors? It was Resolved, nemine contradicente, That they would not take that oath.

Resolved, nemine contradicente, That the above proceedings be printed in the newspapers.

Extract from the minutes:

ROBERT MILLER, Chairman.

TO THE FREEMEN OF PENNSYLVANIA.

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: The affairs of our State now wear a most gloomy aspect. The Convention have risen, and without consulting the prejudices, habits, or even inclinations of their constituents, have forced a Government upon us big with anarchy and slavery.

The people of the neighbouring States, we are told, are now enjoying the sweets of Governments founded upon their own authority, and are employing their whole wisdom and strength in promoting their own safety and happiness. The reason is plain: They removed those parts of their constitutions only which were derived from the Crown, and substituted in their stead an executive power founded upon an authority derived from themselves. They have all reserved the inestimable pillars in a free government, a Legislative Council or Governour. Such a government would have been most agreeable to the people of Pennsylvania, and if they have spirit or sense remaining they will never be happy without it.

A people who could be free and happy with one Legislature, might be equally free and happy without any Government. Both situations suppose equal degrees of virtue in a people. The history of all countries shows us that power has done as much mischief when lodged in the hands of one assembly, as it has done when lodged in the hands of one man. The arbitrary Rump Parliament, which sat eighteen years without dissolving itself, was a single assembly or legislature.

But it is unnecessary to travel into past ages to find examples of the danger of trusting power into the hands of a single legislature. The conduct of the late Convention of Pennsylvania seems intended by Divine Providence to awaken our fears upon this subject, and to point out to us the mischiefs which have arisen from the exercise of power by a single assembly.

What body of men has disposed of our liberty, property, and lives, without our consent, by cruel and tyrannical ordinances? The Convention. What body of men paid themselves above three thousand pounds for sitting above two months for doing business which might have been transacted in ten days? The Convention. What body of men published a constitution for a State, deficient in perspicuity, grammar, and English?* The Convention. What body of men appointed Justices of the Peace wholly unacquainted with the business of their offices, and equally unfit and unwilling to execute them? The Convention. What body of men secured to themselves a perpetuity of their power, by fencing it in with oaths unprecedented in any free country? The Convention.

If this is not enough to show us the danger of a single Legislature, we deserve to be slaves. SCIPIO.

Philadelphia, October 8, 1776.

* "No Justice of the Peace shall sit in the General Assembly unless he first resign his commission."—Section 30.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, October 8, 1776.

Colonel Slough's Battalion of Pennsylvania Associators having done their duty as good soldiers, are hereby dismissed the service of the States, and are permitted to return home from Elizabethtown on Monday next.

SAMUEL GRIFFIN, Dep. Ad. Gen.

Head-Quarters, Elizabethtown, October 14, 1776.

Colonel Slough will be so good as to return my thanks to the officers and soldiers of the battalion under his command, for their decent and orderly behaviour since their occupying the post at the Point House. As his battalion is now discharged from further duty at this post, I take this opportunity to wish them safe home to their respective families and friends.

MATTHIAS WILLIAMSON, Brig. Gen.

Head-Quarters, Elizabethtown, October 14, 1776.

Sir: I request the favour of you to return my sincere thanks to the officers and soldiers of Colonel Slough's battalion that turned out volunteers with you yesterday, and joined us in our excursion to Staten-Island, for their orderly and soldier-like behaviour while on that service; and they may depend I shall always mention them with that regard and honour which their spirited conduct, on that occasion, entitles them to receive.

I am, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient servant,

M. WILLIAMSON, Brig. Gen.

To Major Philip Brussell, of Colonel Slough's Battalion, Lancaster.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 11. Referred to Board of War.]

Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem, October 8, 1776.

Sir: Since I had the honour of writing you yesterday, I have been favoured with a letter from the honourable Council of Massachusetts-Bay, covering one from Richard Derby, Esq., a copy of which is herewith transmitted, as it contains intelligence of an important and interesting nature.

As an exchange of prisoners is about to take place, I am induced from a question stated in a letter I received from Governour Trumbull, this morning, to ask the opinion of Congress in what manner the States that have had the care of them, are to be reimbursed the expenses incurred on their account. My want of information in this instance, or whether any account is to be sent in with the prisoners, would not allow me to give him an answer, as nothing that I recollect has ever been said upon the subject. He also mentions another matter, viz: whether such privates as are mechanics and others, who may desire to remain with us, should be obliged to return. In respect to the latter, I conceive, there can be no doubt of our being under a necessity of returning the whole, a proposition having been made on our part for a general exchange, and that agreed to. Besides the balance of prisoners is greatly against us; and I am informed it was particularly stipulated by General Montgomery, that all those that were taken in Canada should be exchanged, whenever a cartel was settled for the purpose. Under these circumstances, I should suppose the several Committees having the care of them, should be instructed to make the most exact returns of the whole, however willing a part should be to continue with us. At the same time I should think it not improper, to inform them of the reasons leading to the measure, and that they should be invited to escape afterwards, which in all probability they may effect without much difficulty, if they are attached to us, extending their influence to many more, and bringing them away also.

The situation of our affairs, and the present establishment of the army requiring our most vigorous exertions to engage a new one, I presume it will be necessary to furnish the Paymaster-General, as early as possible, with money to pay the bounty lately resolved on to such men as will enlist. Prompt pay perhaps may have a happy effect, and induce the continuance of some who are here; but without it, I am certain that nothing can be done, nor have we time to lose in making the experiment. But then it may be asked who is to recruit, or who can consider themselves as officers for that purpose, till the Conventions of the different States have made the appointments.

Yesterday afternoon the exchange between Lord Stirling and Governour Browne was carried into execution, and his Lordship is now here. He confirms the intelligence mentioned by Captain Souther, about the transports he met, by the arrival of the Daphne man-of-war, (a twenty gun ship,) a few days ago, with twelve ships under her convoy having Light Horse on board. They sailed with about twenty in each, and lost about eighty in their passage, besides those in the vessel taken by Captain Souther. He further adds, that he had heard it acknowledged more than once, that in the action of the 16th ultimo, the enemy had a hundred men killed, about sixty Highlanders of the Forty-Second Regiment, and forty of the Light Infantry. This confession coming from themselves, we may reasonably conclude did not exaggerate the number.

In pursuance of the resolve, which you were pleased to transmit me, I called upon the members who concurred in the acquittal of McCumber to assign their reasons. Enclosed you have their answer, by which you will perceive the direction has given them great uneasiness, and from the information I have received, it has become a matter of much more general concern than could have been expected, in so much that I will take the liberty to advise that it may rest where it is, having heard that most of the officers have become party to it, and consider that the resolve materially affects the whole.

October 9th. About eight o'clock this morning two ships of forty-four guns each, supposed to be the Roebuck and Phoenix, and a frigate of twenty guns, with three or four tenders, got under way from about Bloomington, where they had been laying some time, and stood with an easy southerly breeze towards our chevaux-de-frise, which we hoped would have interrupted their passage, while our batteries played upon them; but to our surprise and mortification, they ran through without the least difficulty, and without receiving any apparent damage from our forts, though they kept up a heavy fire from both sides of the river. Their destination or views cannot be known with certainty; but most probably they are sent to stop the navigation, and cut off the supplies of boards, which we should have received, and of which we are in great need. They are standing up, and I have despatched an express to the Convention of this State, that notice may be immediately communicated to General Clinton, at the Highland fortifications, to put him on his guard in case they should have any designs against them, and that precautions may be taken to prevent the craft belonging to the river falling into their hands.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Council Chamber, Watertown, October 3, 1776.

SIR: I now transmit you a copy of a letter the Council of this State have just received from the Hon. Richard Derby, Esq., containing some intelligence which the Board apprehend your Excellency ought to be made acquainted with, and have therefore directed me to furnish you with a copy of the same. The Council would be glad your Excellency would inform them at what place the particular regiments that were composed of men enlisted out of this State, are now stationed, with the names of the officers that command the respective regiments.

I am, with great respect, your most humble servant.

To His Excellency General Washington.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO RICHARD DERBY.

Council Chamber, October 3, 1776.

Your favour of this day has been considered by the Board, and I am to inform you the officers mentioned in your letter are to be put upon their parole, and sent to the town of Bradford, in the County of Essex, in case they sign the parole herewith enclosed. Their names you will please to insert in the blanks left for that purpose, in the said paroles, and also in the orders to the Sheriff. The soldiers, or sailors, that are made prisoners, are to be confined in the gaol in Salem till further order, and treated as prisoners of war, unless they or either of them incline to go out to labour, in which case such as incline to labour, the Sheriff is directed to put out. And you are directed to give all possible despatch to Captain Souther, that he may immediately proceed on another cruise.

In the name and by the order of Council.

To the Hon. Richard Derby, Esq.

Salem, October 3, 1776.

SIR: Last evening, the Massachusetts, Captain Souther, commander of the brigantine belonging to this State, arrived here, and informs me that a few days after he sailed, he fell in with and took a brigantine of about two hundred and fifty tons, from Falmouth, in England, mounting six three-pound cannon, and having on board a Captain and about twenty privates of the Sixteenth Regiment of Dragoons, with their horses and accoutrements. The chaplain of the regiment is also with them.

With respect to news, I can only inform you that this vessel sailed from Falmouth on the 27th July. Just a month after they embarked, in company with twelve others, under convoy of the Daphne, of thirty-two guns, from whom they parted but a day or two before, they were taken. They all had the same kind of cargo, making in the whole two hundred and thirty horses. A fleet of about seventy sail, sailed about three days before them, under a strong convoy, having on board the remainder of the Sixteenth Regiment of Dragoons, and the last Division of Hanoverians, as he says, about five thousand men, bound for New-York. They were short of horse provisions, and some of the horses have died of the staggers, and he supposes that the late gales have destroyed many more. He says the people of Britain know nothing what is passing in America, and Captain Souther informs me the chaplain has told him the people in England begin to grow very uneasy.

Not a single newspaper or letter has as yet been found. If there should be any more news transpire, you shall soon be informed of it. I think you may depend on the account he gives of the sailing of the fleets, and that they are now near, if not arrived at New-York. A privateer sloop belonging to this place is just arrived, who fell in with the fleet of twelve sail, and was so closely pursued by the Daphne that the enemy fired musket balls into them; but by heaving overboard all her guns, water, and provision, and by sawing down her upper works, barely made her escape.

I am, with all due respect to the honourable Board, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD DERBY, JUN.

A true copy. Attest:

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

In pursuance of an order from Congress, the members now in camp who sat on the Court Martial before which Ensign McCumber was tried for plundering and mutiny, as well those who found him guilty of plundering as those who acquitted him of that charge, met at Colonel Sage's and took the resolve of Congress into consideration. After mature deliberation, it is the unanimous opinion of the members, that we ought not to assign any reasons for the verdict of that court. It has ever been an established maxim that judges should be free from all influence, that their opinions should proceed from the dictates of an honest and upright mind, and that no bias to any particular party, or fear of censure, should have weight in their judgments.

Should we consent to assign reasons for our verdict on McCumber's trial, we think it would be establishing a precedent of the most dangerous consequences. Whenever the sentence of a Court Martial is disagreeable to a Commander-in-Chief, or any other power, the members who do not concur in opinion with them are exposed to their resentment. This certainly must influence some persons, and be of dangerous tendency. Men of spirit will not attend the courts, and servile, cringing men, should not be entrusted with the lives of their fellows. We do not mean absolutely to refuse complying with the order of Congress. Let us be convinced that we ought to do it, and reasons shall be given. We are young and inexperienced in these matters, and are only guided by the natural impropriety of the thing. Have not the Congress thought it improper? They have. By the last articles of war, every member is to be sworn not to disclose the opinion of any particular member. Are laws to be made which are not binding on legislators?

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 5, 1776.

(Parole,)

(Countersign,)

The General conceiving it to be his indispensable duty to lay before the Congress the proceedings of the General

Court-Martial, on the trial of Ensign McCumber, has received the following orders from them, which he desires those members who were favourers of the first judgment would immediately comply with.

"In Congress, September 30, 1776.

"Resolved, That General Washington be directed to call upon such of the members of the Court-Martial as sat in the trial and concurred in the acquittal of Ensign McCumber, to assign the reasons for their first judgment, together with the names of such of the said members who were for the acquittal, to be returned to Congress."

For the greater ease and convenience of doing the duty, the General directs that the two Virginia regiments be formed into a brigade, and for the present be under the command of the eldest Colonel thereof; also that the regiments lately from Rhode-Island, and the Militia regiments from Connecticut, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Storrs and Major Graves, be formed into another brigade, and at present be under the command of Colonel Lippett; proper persons to do the duty of Brigade-Majors to be recommended by the Colonel who commands them, who will be paid during the time of their acting in that office. It is expected that gentlemen capable of doing the duty will be recommended and none others; as it is a melancholy thing to have the business of the army conducted with irregularity and sloth, when every thing should put on the face of activity and life.

After Monday, no Adjutant on the east side of Hudson's river, will be allowed to take orders at Head-Quarters, but they must attend their Brigade-Majors, and receive 'em from them. If any Brigade-Major is sick, or otherwise unable to attend, the Brigadier, or Colonel commanding, is to signify it to the Adjutant-General, and recommend some suitable person to act in his stead.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 6, 1776.

(Parole, .)

(Countersign, .)

Forty men, one Captain, two subs., to be furnished by the regiments at Mount Washington, to assist in ballasting the vessels. They are to take orders from Andrew Ober, on board the sloop Nightingale. This party to be continued till the business is done. Besides, the above regiments stationed at Mount Washington are to furnish men in proportion to their strength for the works there.

Colonel Lippett's brigade is to furnish men for the works opposite Mount Washington, to be laid out by Colonel Putnam, from whom they are to take orders.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 7, 1776.

(Parole, .)

(Countersign, .)

Captain William McWilliams, of the Third Virginia regiment, is to do the duty of Brigade-Major in Colonel Weedon's brigade, till further orders.

Representation having been made to the General that numbers of the picket guard are absent from their posts, under pretence of fetching provisions and water, he positively orders that every man, as well officers as soldiers, shall carry provisions with, or have it brought to them at their posts, by their messmates; as the safety of the army depends too much on their diligence and attention to admit of such practices. It is moreover expected of the officer commanding the picket, that he does not, under any pretence whatever, suffer the men to straggle from their respective posts, without they are sent upon scouting parties by himself; but always to have them in readiness to give such effectual opposition as to allow time to their line to turn out; which being the end and design of guards, is defeated if the men who mount are not in a posture to give instant opposition.

The Quartermaster-General is immediately to provide twenty wood axes for the picket guards in front of our lines. When provided he is to deliver them to the officer commanding the picket, who is to see that they are delivered over to the officer relieving, and so from one to the other; the officer failing will be answerable. These axes are intended for the purpose of providing wood and erecting huts for the guards, which last ought not to be delayed.

The Brigadiers and officers commanding regiments are to prevent the irregular and promiscuous placing of huts, and to see that they are built in such a manner as to stand the weather and weight of snow which may lodge on them, that no accident may befall the men.

Sergeant George Douglass, of Captain Foster's company, late McDougall's regiment, being convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Weedon is President, of "embezzling and selling provisions belonging to the company," is sentenced to be reduced to the ranks, and whipped thirty-nine lashes, to be continued under provost-guard for "mutinous speeches and disrespectful language of the Commander-in-Chief." George Harris, of Captain Howell's company, Colonel Winds's regiment, tried by the same Court-Martial, and convicted of "desertion," is ordered to be whipped thirty-nine lashes.

The General approves the above sentences, and the Provost-Marshal is to see the sentence on Harris executed tomorrow morning at guard mounting.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 8, 1776.

(Parole, .)

(Countersign, .)

The late Sergeant Douglass, of Captain Foster's company, late McDougall's regiment, being convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Weedon was President, of "mutinous speeches, and speaking disrespectfully of the Commander-in-Chief," and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes, the General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed at the usual time and place. This offender being a bad character, is to be continued in the provost guard till further orders.

The commanding officer of the Rangers having represented that soldiers are continually straggling down to Harlem and other places, frequently without arms, and that when he has apprehended and sent them to their regiments, no further notice has been taken of them. As this is a plain breach of general orders the General hopes there is some mistake in the matter; however, to prevent it in future, he now orders, that no officer or soldier, (Rangers excepted,) go on any pretence beyond the lines, without leave from himself, a Major-General, the Brigadier of the day, or the Adjutant-General, in writing, unless either of those officers are with them in person. And in order to distinguish the Rangers, they are to wear something white round their arms. If any such straggler is found hereafter, he is to be sent to the quarter-guard of the regiment, tried by a regimental court-martial, and receive ten lashes immediately.

There is now an issuing store for ammunition, near General Spencer's quarters; the officers of every regiment will be responsible if there is any deficiency in their regiments, as they may now receive a full supply by making a return of the state of their ammunition, and getting an order from the Adjutant-General.

The brigade lately commanded by General Mifflin is to be under the care of Lord Stirling, who is just returned from his captivity.

The General desires the commanding officers of each regiment, or corps, will give in a list of the names of the officers and men who were killed, taken, or missing, in the action of the 27th of August, on Long-Island, and since that period. He desires the returns may be correct, and that any persons who have it in their power, will give in the returns of this kind in behalf of any Militia regiments which are discharged.

The General, to prevent any plea of ignorance, again repeats his order against all kinds of gaming, as destructive and pernicious to the service. He hopes the officers will set no examples of this kind, and that they will punish it among the men.

The General is surprised to find that manning the lines every morning is discontinued. He desires that the practice of doing it for the future may not be omitted, unless contradicted by general orders.

The Quartermaster-General is to use the greatest diligence in providing straw for the accommodation of the troops.

Lieutenant Kidd, of Colonel Smallwood's regiment, convicted by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Ware was president, of a breach of general orders, in "taking fatigue men from their duty," is sentenced to be dismissed the service. Ensign Fairly, of the regiment late McDougall's, tried by the same Court-Martial for the same, is acquitted and discharged from arrest. Captain Hardenbargh, of Colonel Ritzema's regiment, convicted by the same Court-Martial of "defrauding his men," is sentenced to be cashiered, and his name, place of abode, and offence, published agreeable to the second and fourth late additional articles of war.

The General approves each of the above sentences, and orders to be executed.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem, October 8, 1776.

SIR: I was this morning honoured with your favour of the 2d instant, and beg leave to return you my thanks for the measures you have adopted upon my request for obtaining an account of the prisoners in your State, and for your assurance that I shall be furnished with a return as soon as it is procured, in order that I may give further directions about them.

The proposition respecting the prisoners that wish to remain with us, and about the expense that has been incurred for the maintenance of the whole that have been in your State, I shall lay before Congress by the earliest opportunity, and will transmit you the result of their opinion. However, it appears to me that there will be a necessity for returning the whole of their prisoners, not only because the balance is against us, but because I am informed it was particularly stipulated on the part of General Montgomery for those that were taken in Canada. The case will be hard upon those who want to remain, and who have all become attached to us; and should Congress determine on their being returned, it will be but right that some pains should be used to inform them of the reasons leading to the measure; and I doubt not, if they act with proper caution, that they may afterwards effect their escape, to which they should be encouraged. Indeed I think, if they are heartily disposed towards us, that their exchange may be productive of many good consequences; they may extend their influence to many others, and who, perhaps, will be induced to desert.

I hope the resentment which your State mean to express against those who have scandalously deserted from the defence of our cause will have a happy effect, and prevent a like conduct in future; nothing can be too severe for them.

Before the receipt of your favour, I had desired the General Officers to make out a list of such Field and other officers as are esteemed worthy of command and entitled to commissions in the service. This is a consideration of exceeding importance, for without good officers we can never have troops that will be worthy of the name; and with them we may in time have an army equal to any. We have good materials to work upon. As soon as the list is obtained, I will forward it by the first conveyance that may offer. I have strongly inculcated on the Generals the impropriety of giving in or recommending any but those who are fit for service; and you may rest assured, sir, as you have been pleased to honour me with your confidence on this occasion, that, as far as it shall be in my power, I will only return those that are well spoken of, and who, from report, will answer (what you have ever had in view) the advancement of our common rights and the happiness of the United States.

I am, sir, with respect, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. The following payments have been made to the Militia of your State, lately here:

1776, September 28, Major Nathaniel Torry, for his regiment, - - - - - $5,185 9-72
1776, September 30, Captain Amos Barnes,
15th regiment, commanded by Major Shaw, 5,211 38-72

CHARLES C. GRIFFITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, Morris's Heights, October 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Major Daniel Jenifer Adams informing me that he is desirous of being in the service of the Continental troops that are to be raised in the State of Maryland, beg leave to inform your Honours, from Major Adams's good conduct, spirit, and alacrity, on all occasions, both in and out of action, since he has been in this army, leaves me no room to doubt but he is the good soldier, and worthy your attention. I would therefore wish that he could be placed among the first in the present appointment of officers in our State.

I am, gentlemen, with due respect, your most humble servant,
CHAS. C. GRIFFITH.

To the honourable Convention of the State of Maryland.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Lord Stirling came on shore yesterday evening. As he was on board ship the whole time of his captivity, he can say very little of the situation or intentions of the enemy. He apprehends they are not so strong as they give out, as he often heard them mention the want of their reinforcement. He confirms the account of the bad blood between the English and Hessian troops. The latter plunder Whig and Tory indiscriminately and without punishment, while the former are under the severest restrictions. One of the prisoners that we took yesterday says the Hessians have wounded some of the British for only endeavouring to take part of the spoil with them.

By a letter from Mr. Derby, of Salem, we are informed that a brig belonging to Massachusetts had taken and brought in a transport with twenty of Sixteenth Regiment of Light Dragoons, with their horses, &c. This transport was one of twelve sail that have since arrived at New-York, each with the same number of men and horses. They had been embarked ever since the 27th June, and many of the horses perished on the passage for want. Three days before the fleet of twelve sailed, a fleet of about seventy left England, having the remainder of the Sixteenth Regiment of Dragoons on board, and the last division of foreigners, said to be about five thousand, none of which, my Lord Stirling says, are received.

Your State has undoubtedly been advised by Congress of their resolution to raise eighty-eight battalions on Continental pay, to serve during the war. His Excellency desires me to remind you of how much consequence the nomination of good officers will be in this reform of the army. As the Congress have left the appointment of all officers except Generals to the different States, his Excellency has wrote to most of them in the most pressing terms to be careful in their choice. The State of Connecticut has shown a very good example for procuring suitable persons either to be prepared or continued in command—they having desired the Commander-in-Chief, in conjunction with their own Generals, to make out a list, and transmit it them, of those officers who in their opinion have behaved best, and are most worthy of notice. His Excellency desires me to say further that he has ever avoided recommending officers to preferment, lest he should be taxed with partiality, but that he cannot pass by the merit of Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, of Colonel Clinton's regiment, he having upon every occasion exhibited proofs of his activity and zeal for the service. He therefore wishes he may not be overlooked in the preferments that must naturally take place upon the new establishment of your forces. I am just informed that your Convention have already wrote to General McDougall upon the subject of new commissions; which I am glad to hear.

I had proceeded thus far to be ready for your express when your favour of the 6th came to hand. I am glad that you go on apprehending the villains in the country above, and gladder to find that you have powers to establish a proper court for their trial. I mistook the matter before.

I am, dear sir, respectfully yours,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial held by adjournment OCTOBER 8th, 1776, by order of Major-General HEATH.

Colonel Lasher, President.

Lieut. Colonel Prentice ,	Captain Dana ,
Major Austin ,	Captain Bickman ,
Captain Sill ,	Captain Brazier ,
Captain Pope ,	Captain Duryee ,
Captain Allen ,	Captain Platt ,
Captain Keith ,	Captain Hardenbergh .

The Court proceeded to the trial of Captain De Witt, of Colonel Humphrey's Regiment, charged with liberating James McCormick, a soldier in Colonel Sargent's Regiment, on the 1st instant, from the main guard, who was then under sentence of death.

The prisoner being called, pleads, Not guilty.

Gorden Spencer, being sworn, deposeth: I was on the guard with the Captain about half an hour before the relief, and heard the Captain say he would release all prisoners that had no crimes. Afterwards I saw McCormick out requesting permission of the Captain to treat the prisoners.

The prisoner now confesses the fact, and in defence saith: That the evening before, a man with a white cockade, which he therefore supposed a Captain's, inquired for a prisoner he had confined. He asked his advice what to do with McCormick, as he had no crime against him. The officer told him to let him out in the morning if no crime appeared. He did so in the morning, as no crime appeared, and permitted him to treat some with cider.

The Court, after consideration, unanimously think the prisoner not guilty of any crime in discharging the prisoner McCormick, as there was no crime alleged against him, and none appeared in the return of the prisoners, &c., delivered him by the officer he relieved.

JOHN LASHER, President.

PETITION OF DANIEL WALKER.

Fishkills, October 8, 1776.

SIR: In behalf and at the request of a number of Scotch prisoners, quartered at Goshen, Orange County, beg leave to inform the Convention that they have resided there since the 2d day of July last. That they consider themselves as prisoners of war, entitled to the value of the Continental rations in money, or as much as will pay for their weekly board, and to be at liberty to work at their different trades or occupations, behaving themselves peaceably during the time of their confinement. That as to rations they never received any, except for two men two days, and one woman about one half of the time. That their wages has been very low, and that refused to be paid them in several instances. That the boys is obliged to work for their living only, and one of them has been whipped and abused without sufficient provocation. Therefore pray the Convention would take their case into consideration, and give such direction in the premises as they, in their wisdom, shall think meet.

An answer to the subscriber, who is waiting, will be gratefully acknowledged by the Convention's most obedient, humble servant,

DANIEL WALKER.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO GENERAL MORRIS.

Fishkill, October 8, 1776.

SIR: The Convention have directed me to inform you, that they were extremely sorry for the necessity that first obliged them to request your immediate return to your brigade, since they hoped that no military officer would choose to be absent when his country was invaded. They are willing to acknowledge the force of those reasons for delaying your return which are derived from the particular situation of your family. These, they hope, by their safety and security, have long since ceased to operate. They now flatter themselves that it will be unnecessary to remind you of the superiour ties which bind every man to his country, more particularly those whom the State have vested with the highest honour.

The Indian affairs of the Middle Department should be under the consideration of Congress; yet they hope your attendance may be dispensed with, as the Congress have it in their power to call upon the other Commissioners, without injuring the publick so materially as by detaining a military officer from his station.

The Convention cannot but hope that you have been deceived in your belief that your brigade is reduced to less than a Colonel's command, though the loud and well-founded complaints of the County of Westchester has given them reason to fear that it has suffered by your absence.

They are pleased to hear that you have laid aside your design of offering your personal service to General Washington, since they cannot conceive that a General officer can with dignity act as a volunteer, when the troops under his command are like to be called into action.

Upon the whole, sir, they have directed me to inform you that they expect your immediate attendance on the duties of your department.

I am, sir, &c.

To Brigadier-General Morris, Fishkill.

JOHANNES SLEGHT TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Kingston, October 8, 1776.

SIR: We have this day received certain information that a man did come to this town with orders to remove the tea which was stored in the house of Captain John Elmendorph by Mr. Grodes Beekman. When we received this information, a Committee was called, who came to the following resolution, viz:

"Resolved, That the tea which is now stored in this town of Kingston shall not be removed from the place wheré it now is, by the owners nor by any other person, till such time as the resolution of the Convention of the State of New-York respecting the same, shall be made publick."

And as we have been informed by your letter of the 4th September, that the Convention had it in contemplation to pass a general resolve respecting the tea within this State, and that a committee was appointed for that purpose, who were prevented to complete that business by reason that some of the members who were appointed for that committee were not then arrived; I was therefore acquainted that the Convention expected that I should use my utmost endeavours to keep peace and good order among us, till such resolutions were passed, in the best manner I could. I am sorry we must give the honourable Convention so much trouble about this affair, and beg to be excused when I once more desire the favour of your honourable House to make an end to this troublesome business as soon as possible, which we hope will not only restore peace and good order here, but also much oblige your friends and most humble servants.

By order of the Committee:

JOHANNES SLEGHT, Chairman.

To the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO MESSRS. BANCKER, HARPER, AND PLATT.

Fairfield, October 8, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour of the 2d instant, per Captain Rogers is come to hand, informing me that Convention have determined to send the Montgomery on a cruising voyage again, and had appointed you to expedite the same, and give instructions and grant such supplies as may be necessary, and desiring me to furnish Captain Rogers with as much money as may be necessary to fit out said privateer, out of the publick moneys now in my hands, in compliance with which have informed Captain Rogers that the money is at his service; though I think that in order to have a proper voucher to the Auditor-General, it is necessary that I be furnished with a certified order of Convention for paying that money, which I beg you will send me by the bearer. But in the mean time, that the business of the privateer may not be obstructed, shall advance money on your letter; but I must beg leave to observe that the Convention will be disappointed if they expect the sloop will go to sea without a supply of cash from the Treasury. The money in my hands amounts only to three hundred and twenty pounds, while near eight hundred pounds is due in wages to the people, as Captain Rogers informs me. The prize goods that are saved are but trifling. Mr. Hallet is in pursuit of them; but a considerable time will be spent before they can be condemned and sold; so that if Convention mean that the sloop should cruise before the chance of prizes is over, a person should be sent immediately, with cash sufficient to pay off the arrears, and furnish the needful for another voyage. I thought it my duty to mention these matters to you, as perhaps the situation of the property which the publick has in these parts, is not sufficiently known.

I am, with great respect and esteem, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SLOSS HOBART.

To Messrs. Bancker, Harper, and Platt, Members of Convention, Fishkill.

WILLIAM COIT TO RICHARD DEVENS.

State of Connecticut, Norwich, October 8, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 1st instant, received by the bearer, also your pots and canteens, which turn out something more than was in the receipt, which shall be forwarded without delay, agreeable to your directions, to Thaddeus

Burr, Esq., if they are not ordered to Fairfield by his Excellency General Washington. I should think it would be best to have them sent as near the army as they can go with safety, which is thirty miles nigher than you have ordered these. I only hint this that in case you should forward any thing more, to leave it discretionary, as none of our craft put into that place, unless specially ordered there. Any further commands from you shall be faithfully complied with by your humble servant. In haste,

WILLIAM COIT.

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, October 9, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you by last post. This comes by Mr. Carmichael, a gentleman of Maryland, in America, who has for some time lived with, and assisted me in my business. You can have the fullest confidence in him, and as he knows I place the most absolute in you, it would be trifling to swell a letter with news or observations, of both which he can viva voce satisfy you. He will communicate to you his business in Holland, and I am sure you will assist him to the utmost of your power. He can tell you what an anxious and laborious life I lead here; and, what adds to my misfortune, how impossible it is, in the present critical situation of affairs, for me to quit this post for a single day; much more it is as yet impossible for me to leave long enough to visit you in Holland, which having long promised to myself, and anticipated with pleasure, the disappointment greatly chagrins me. To have so kind and hospitable, and at the same time, so judicious and safe a friend, inviting me to what must at once yield me the purest pleasure and the most solid advantage, viz. an interview, and not to be able to profit by it at once, is a misfortune I feel most sensibly.

Mr. Carmichael can give you the best intelligence of our present affairs in America, and his observations and inferences will be from the best grounds, and made with precision and judgment. My most grateful and respectful acknowledgments to your lady, whom I yet may have the honour of waiting on in the course of a month.

I have the honour to be, &c.

SILAS DEANE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON, DATED LISBON, OCTOBER 9, 1776.

Captain Emmerson, a London trader, came in last Saturday, and brings an account that a ship from London, laden with wheat and flour, was taken off this port, with a Portuguese pilot on board, by an American privateer; and this day we have further advice of another ship being taken, loaded with rice from America.

Yesterday two French traders arrived, the Captains of which had both been chased by three American privateers in the channel, and off Cape Finisterre, the one of eighteen guns, and the other of sixteen, which last two came up with them.

EDWARD PENDLETON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburg, October 9, 1776.

SIR: I had the honour of receiving your two favours directed to the General Assembly of Virginia, by express, which I immediately communicated to the House of Delegates, now sitting, who are taking proper measures to be fully represented in Congress without delay, and will proceed in due time to consider the other resolutions you enclosed. Your southern despatches were immediately forwarded by an express provided by the Committee of this city.

I am, for the House of Delegates, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

EDWARD PENDLETON, Speaker.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 203.]

Annapolis, October 9, 1776.

SIR: We have sent to you by Mr. Stewart, eight hundred pounds, to be laid out in the purchase of superfine flour. You may dispose of one half of our bread on the best terms you can.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth.

JOHN SCOTT TO MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

George-Town, Frederick County, October 9, 1776.

SIR: Permit me through you to address myself to your honourable House for permission to pass some time among my friends in Virginia; or, if the House can be induced so far to relax from their sentence, to permit me to remain there without any limitation of time, under the restraints which they have been pleased to lay me under, and which I have given bond with security to the President of the Council of Safety in the penalty of a thousand pounds sterling to observe. I beg, sir, that you will lay me with all humility before the House, with an assurance that I would have addressed them in the first instance either by petition or through you; but unacquainted as I am with bonds and the forfeitures of them, did not know but it might be going beyond the line of my engagements.

My principal reasons for desiring to go to Virginia, are, that I have many near and dear relations there. My fortune, little as it is, lays chiefly in that country, and having lost my living, which has hitherto been my chief support, I wish, by my industry, to do something for the subsistence of my family, which I cannot possibly do while confined to Frederick County. I have also, sir, the assurance of several gentlemen of no inconsiderable rank and weight in my native country, that my residence among them will not only give no offence, but that they will even solicit this House, if necessary, for my enlargement. That my situation is a most unhappy one, those acquainted with the human heart will readily conceive, and if my sufferings can be alleviated without any injury to the publick weal, I flatter myself humanity will plead powerfully in my favour. To be held up to the world as an enemy to my native land; to be deprived of my living, in which the laws of my country had taught me to believe I had a permanent estate, must sink deep into the heart of a man less attached to worldly affairs than I profess to be. But the voice of the Representatives of the State has pronounced the sentence, and I must submit to my fate, yet conscious as I am of having never harboured one thought injurious to the rights of mankind.

I cannot but hope your honourable House will remit my too rigorous sentence, and permit me to try my fate in some other land, where, if my inclinations lead me, which I call God to witness they never have done, it will be out of my power to hurt this country. If not for my own, for the sake of those innocents who have me alone to look up to for protection and support, I hope I may gain thus much at your hands, more especially as the common rights of mankind are yet preserved inviolate in the State of Maryland, give me some grounds for the hope.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN SCOTT.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed resolves, which I do myself the honour to forward, will inform you of the ample provision the Congress have made for the support of both officers and soldiers who shall enter into the service during the war. The pay of the former is considerably increased, and the latter is to receive annually a complete suit of clothes, or in lieu thereof, the sum of twenty dollars, should he provide the suit for himself. This additional encouragement, besides the twenty dollars bounty, and fifty acres of land formerly granted, the Congress expect will be the means, if any thing can, of engaging troops during the war.

The importance, and indeed the absolute necessity, of filling up the army, of providing for the troops, and engaging them during the war, having induced Congress to come to the enclosed resolves, in obedience to their commands, I am preparing to forward them with all possible expedition to the several States.

Your letters to the 5th of October, have been duly received and laid before Congress. I shall immediately transmit all such resolves as may hereafter be passed, any ways relative to your department, or necessary for your information.

I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

The several resolves go to the States this day by express.

THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO THE ASSEMBLIES OF THE NORTHERN STATES.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed resolves, which I transmit in obedience to the commands of Congress, will inform you of the ample provision they have made for the support of both officers and soldiers, who shall enter into the service during the war. The pay of the former is considerably increased, and the latter is to receive annually a complete suit of clothes, or in lieu thereof the sum of twenty dollars, should he provide the suit for himself. This additional encouragement, besides the twenty dollars bounty, and one hundred acres of land formerly granted, the Congress expect will be the means of engaging the troops to serve during the war. For this purpose also, I am to request you will appoint a committee or committees to repair immediately to the army, to induce such of the troops as have been raised by your State, to enlist during the war, and to appoint officers for the same.

The Congress, for very obvious reasons, are very anxious to keep the army together. The dangerous consequences of their breaking up, and the difficulty of forming a new one, are inconceivable. Were this barrier once removed, military power would quickly spread desolation over the face of our country. The importance, and indeed the absolute necessity, of filling up the army, of providing for the troops, and engaging them to serve during the war, is so apparent, and has been so frequently urged, that I shall only request your attention to the resolves of Congress on this subject, and beseech you by that love you have for your country, her rights, and liberties, to exert yourselves to carry them speedily and effectually into execution, as the only means of preserving her in this her critical and alarming situation.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

The printed resolves herewith enclosed, relative to the establishing of Loan Offices in the respective States, for the purpose of borrowing money on Continental security, and the regulations with regard to the same, I beg leave to recommend to your immediate notice and attention, and that you will take the proper steps to comply with them.

To the Assembly of New-Hampshire.

[Same to the Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay; to the Assembly of Rhode-Island; to the Assembly of Connecticut; to the Assembly of New-Jersey; to the Convention of New-York.]

MEMORIAL OF JOHN MELCHIOR NEFF.

[Read October 10, 1776: referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Continental Congress:

The Memorial and Petition of JOHN MELCHIOR NEFF, of the city of PHILADELPHIA, Pin and Needle Maker, humbly sheweth:

That on or about the 30th day of August last, your memorialist being freely occupied in manufacturing pins and wool and cotton cards, and instructing poor people in that useful business, was called upon by your Commissaries, Messrs. Mease and Caldwell, to make and get ready, within a fortnight, three hundred dozen of gun-brushes and chains for the army, which he undertook to make after a pattern that hung up in his own shop, at the rate of six shillings per dozen. That your petitioner immediately sat about this work, cut and made up in chains his brass and iron wires, bought for thirty pounds of brushes, perfected the Commissaries' whole order within the time limited, and offered his work to the said Mease and Caldwell, who refused to accept of and pay for the same, alleging the work was not good or strong enough, &c.

May it please your Honours, your memorialist is a very poor man, but, on account of his knowledge in working wires, a useful member of society, and by your Commissaries detaining what is justly due to him, he is obliged to discontinue his trade. He thinks that his brushes and chains are made, first, agreeable to his contract with the Commissaries; second, strong and good enough for the purpose of cleaning a gun-pan; third, that, in the present dearness of materials and labour, they are full worth six shillings per dozen; fourth, that if, upon culling the whole, any number of chains should be found insufficient, it would be more equitable and humane that your petitioner should mend them, than to throw the whole charge upon him; and your petitioner humbly prayeth to order an inquiry of his case, and report thereof to be made to your Honours, so that justice may be rendered to him in mercy. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, &c.

JOHN MELCHIOR NEFF.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO STEPHEN HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

SIR: We have received from John Langdon, Esq., of Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, such an extraordinary account of the conduct of the Committee you appointed to superintend the building of two frigates in Providence, that we cannot forbear transmitting you a copy of his letter. The respect we all entertain for you, and the justice due to them, induces us to do this; at the same time we impart to you that common fame says many things respecting them which Mr. Langdon does not touch upon. We do not, however, pretend to condemn them either on his or her report, but when they exhibit an account of their proceedings, we shall expect these things to be cleared up to the satisfaction of this Committee or of Congress. We have ordered them to supply Mr. Langdon with a set of those cannon that have been paid for; and as we find the demands of the owners of your furnace are so extravagant, we now request that you will desire them to give in the terms on which they will cast another set in lieu thereof, to be ready in time for the frigates at Providence.

If they persist in these extravagant demands, we shall supply them either from Hughes's works, in Maryland, or from this State, as we shall soon be able to spare sufficient from either place, and no consideration shall induce us to submit to such extortion as was attempted with Mr. Langdon. We hope, sir, that your attachment to the general interests of America, your regard to the character of your State and your friend employed therein, and your influence in that State, will all combine to have those abuses rectified that have given rise to reflections and complaints, if any such abuses have really taken place in the management of marine affairs.

We hope for an immediate answer respecting the terms of casting more cannon, and are, sir, your very humble servants.

To Stephen Hopkins, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE AT PROVIDENCE.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have been presented with a letter from John Langdon, Esq., Continental Agent at Portsmouth, in New Hampshire, to Josiah Bartlett, Esq., a member of Congress, giving a very extraordinary account of your proceedings in respect to the cannon cast in your State for the use of the Continental frigates. He says that the frigates at Providence cannot be ready to go to sea for two or three months, and that the frigate at New-Hampshire waits only for cannon, which, under one pretence or other, you have refused to supply him with, although they are lying useless in Rhode-Island, and another set might be cast in time for your ship. He represents your refusal of his reasonable request as having its foundation partly in interested motives, and partly in jealousy of the New-Hampshire ship being at sea before yours. We cannot pretend to judge of the propriety of his observations, having only heard one side, but if the representation he has made be a just one, we shall think the Continental interest was much misplaced when put into the hands of those who are capable of acting from such motives against the publick good. You'll observe we do not pretend to decide on your conduct, because we are willing to hear your defence of it. Mr. Langdon is a gentleman of character, and puts his name to what he writes; therefore we suppose he will be ready to make good his charge.

However, it is not our present purpose to inquire into your conduct at this time, but to inform you that we have sent Mr. Langdon orders to call on you again for a set of cannon suitable for the New-Hampshire frigate; and as we understand those cannon are paid for out of the moneys you have received and drawn for, we now direct and insist that a complete set most suitable for that ship be immediately delivered to the said John Langdon, Esq., or to his order, for the use of the Continental frigate the Raleigh, now at Portsmouth; and we request that you will render him or his agents all the assistance in your power in transporting the said cannon to Portsmouth, in the most safe and expeditious manner.

Mr. Langdon has said nothing about shot or other stores; but as it is our business to consider and attend to the Continental interest at large, abstracted from jarring interest or jealousy of one State against another, we likewise desire you may supply Mr. Langdon with shot, or any other stores you have provided for the Continental service, provided he wants them to expedite the sailing of the Raleigh, which is now under orders for immediate service. We also inform you that we shall send an agent to inspect the state of the frigates built under your direction, that we may include them in our intended report to Congress.

We are, gentlemen, your obedient servants.

To the Committee for building Continental Frigates at Providence.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE AT PROVIDENCE.

October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We, the subscribers, members of the Marine Committee of Congress, being duly authorized to give such directions as may conduce to the service of the United States of America in all things relative to this department, are now of opinion that a complete set of the cannon you have had cast for the Continental service, ought to be applied to the immediate use of the Raleigh frigate, and therefore do order and direct that you deliver a sufficient number of the most suitable cannon for that ship, to John Langdon, Esq., or to his agent employed for the purpose of receiving and forwarding the same to Portsmouth. And for so doing this shall be your warrant.

Given under our hands at the Marine Office, in Philadelphia, the day and year above written.

To the Committee for building the Continental Frigates at Providence.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO NATHANIEL FALCONER.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby authorized and directed to repair to Providence, in Rhode-Island, and there view, examine, and inspect two frigates lately built, and now lying at that place. You are to call on the respectable Committee of gentlemen under whose direction they were built, and are to be fitted; give them notice of your arrival and appointment to this service; require from them an inventory of the Continental stores provided for these ships, and examine into the quality of the same, comparing the said stores with the inventory to see that they agree, and you are to make report, as soon as may be, to this Committee of the state and condition of these ships, as to the strength, workmanship, beauty, and other qualities; also, as to the quality and quantity of stores, number of men and officers belonging to them, and of their forwardness for the sea. And all persons employed in the building or fitting of said frigates are hereby required to aid and assist you, if need there be, in performing the service hereby enjoined you. And for so doing this shall be your warrant.

Given under our hands at the Marine Office, the day and year first above written.

To Nathaniel Falconer, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

SIR: Your friend Mr. Bartlett having laid before this Board your letter to him of the 14th ultimo, respecting the conduct of the Committee at Providence, Rhode-Island, on your applying to them for cannon for the Raleigh, this conduct appears to us in the most extraordinary point of light; but as it is unbecoming of publick bodies to condemn the conduct of any before they are heard in their own defence, we have wrote them of this date, telling the points of which you complain, and ordering them to deliver you a complete set of the Continental cannon in their possession, those that are most suitable for the Raleigh; and further, we have directed them to deliver you shot, or any other Continental stores they have, if you think them necessary to expedite the sailing of that ship; we have also requested them to afford you any assistance in their power in transporting the cannon and stores safe and soon to Portsmouth.

We may not omit telling you that we have thought it common justice to send Governour Hopkins a copy of your letter, as the Committee were all of his appointment. We have said that, deeming you a gentleman of honour, we doubt not but you will support the charge made against them, and under that belief, we think it is justly your due, and return you thanks for the information given us, as well as for your apparent solicitude for the publick good. We are determined to have the frigates inspected, and report made thereon. Before we close, we must request your utmost exertions to get the Raleigh out to sea, and the Captain's and other officers' commissions will now go forward immediately.

We are, sir, your obedient humble servants.

To John Langdon, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having received information that some of the enemy's ships-of-war and tenders have passed the obstructions laid in Hudson's River, and got above the same, we are very anxious for the fate of the frigates now building in your State. We, therefore, earnestly desire to direct your close attention to some probable means of securing the said ships, either by launching them immediately, if possible, and removing them to some place of greater safety, or by such other methods as your wisdom shall devise.

With great respect, we are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

BOARD OF WAR TO LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

War-Office, October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: A Captain Hesketh, a British officer, prisoner of war at this place, is in great want of his baggage. I wrote at his request, to Mr. Yeates to send it to him, but am informed by letter from Mrs. Yeates that he is at Pittsburg. If any of your body will be so obliging as to call on Mrs. Yeates, and get from her that letter I wrote him, and comply with the request therein made, you will oblige your very obedient servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary at War.

To the Committee of the Town of Lancaster.

Captain Hesketh's baggage consists of one trunk, one valise, one portmanteau, one pair of canteens.

Charlestown, S. C., October 9, 1776.

We hear from Savannah that the men-of-war have left the river; so that there is now not one of the enemy's vessels in South-Carolina or Georgia. It is said there are some in Cape Fear River in North-Carolina.

Philadelphia, October 9, 1776.

On Monday, the 7th instant, his Excellency General Lee arrived here from the southward, and we hear he sets off this day for the army near New-York.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

As too great a number of the members of this State are the avowed votaries of submission to higher powers on any terms, and as those weak people persuade themselves that the exercise of this Christian virtue, as they esteem it, would restore them again to tranquillity and happiness, I beg leave to make a few observations on the declaration which some of these peaceable men, and all the avowed abettors of unconditional subjugation, would hold out as the olive branch, which nothing but the most desperate madness can tempt us to refuse.

And first I would inquire, what is this constitutional Government; that our wicked Congress so obstinately oppose? Do not the King and his Ministers, and that by the authority of an act of Parliament declare, that they, with the advice and consent of people with whom we have no more political connection than with the Siberians, have and ever had a right to make and execute laws for us in all cases whatsoever?

2. Does returning to our allegiance mean any thing less than the acknowledgment of this right in the King, his Ministers, and obsequious Parliament?

3. Does not the admission of this principle form a new Constitution, entirely subversive of the Constitution which even the people called Quakers have ever most strenuously endeavoured to support, and which alone can secure us the enjoyment of any thing, the privilege, nay, the unalienable right of having a free, a full, and unbiased representative voice in the body that makes our laws.

If any one can show me that a closure with R. and W. Howe's proposal does not imply the above acknowledgment and resignation, I will allow myself to have been hitherto misguided; but if absolute power to make, revise, repeal, or confirm laws binding on us in all cases whatsoever, is to be acknowledged to reside in any body of men, in which the whole body of the American States have no more weight or influence than the crew of a vessel which might be stranded on a Maroon island, I know nothing of the true principles of the Constitution.

DEMOPHILUS.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 9, 1776.

SIR: Agreeably to your request, and the promise contained in my letter of yesterday, I beg leave to transmit you the enclosed list, comprehending the names of such gentlemen as are recommended by the General officers from your State, as proper persons to be promoted in the regiments you are about to raise, with the ranks which they conceive they ought to bear. Sensible that the very existence, that the well-doing of every army, depends upon good officers I urged, I pressed, the gentlemen to whom the business was confided, and whose situation has given them an opportunity of being better acquainted through the different corps than I am, to pay their most serious attention to the matter, and to return such, and only such, as will, in their estimation, by their fidelity, attachment, and good conduct, promote the great end we have in view—the establishment of our rights and the happiness of our country, by that mode which sad necessity has obliged us to pursue. This I hope they have done; they have taken no notice of any officer in the Northern army, or of those of the Seventeenth Regiment (Huntington's) who were taken on Long-Island, whose imprisonment I should suppose, if they have merit, should be no objection to their having promotion; nor do they mean by the list they have given in, to preclude others of greater merit than those they have mentioned, if they are to be found.

Congress, by a late resolution, have allowed a Paymaster to each regiment; in the appointment of which I would recommend that particular care be had to the choosing men intimately acquainted with, and well versed in accounts, and who will be able to keep them in a fair and distinct manner; as they will have not only to receive the regiments' pay, but to keep accounts of every transaction incident to them—such as respect their clothes, &c. In some appointments lately made by the Field Officers, to whom I submitted the matter, they nominated men who could not write their names legibly.

As our present army is upon the eve of their dissolution, it behooves us to exert every nerve to enlist immediately for the new one. Without, I am convinced, we shall have none to oppose the enemy; and who will have it in their power to spread havoc and devastation wheresoever they will. I would therefore submit it to your consideration, whether it may not be proper, as soon as you have made choice of your officers, and which I think should be effected as early as possible, to appoint a committee, with power to repair to this place and make such arrangements as may be necessary with respect to those who are now in the service, in order that they may begin to recruit out of the present corps without any loss of time.

I perceive the Generals in the list they have made, have set down the Commissary for a regiment. In this I think they have done exceedingly right, and that it is nothing more than a reward justly due his merit, in case he should quit his present department. However, I hope that the apprehensions which have given rise to this step will never become realities, and that he will continue in his office, and upon such terms as may be agreeable to him; but lest he should decline, the provision they have made is extremely proper.

I this minute saw General Spencer, who informed me that they had never taken the officers prisoners on Long-Island into consideration, in making out their arrangement, not knowing whether they could be noticed in their present situation. I have made out a list of them; and as I have before observed, if they are men of merit, their imprisonment most certainly should not operate to their prejudice, if it can be avoided. If a principle of that sort was adopted, it would give the greatest discouragement, and have a direct tendency to suppress every brave and manly enterprise which might be attended with captivity. I would also mention Major Sherman, son of Mr. Sherman, of Congress, a young gentleman who appears to me, and who is generally esteemed, an active and valuable officer, whom the General Officers have omitted to set down in their lists, expecting, I suppose, (if they thought of him at all,) that he would be provided for in the Massachusetts regiment, because he is one at this time. But as it is probable promotions in that State will be confined to their own people, I should apprehend that he should be properly noticed in your appointments, lest we should lose an officer who, so far as I can judge, promises good services to his country.

On yesterday morning, three ships of war, (two of forty-four and the other of twenty guns,) with two or three tenders, passed up the North River, without meeting any interruption from the chevaux-de-frise, or receiving any material damage from our batteries, though they kept a heavy fire at them from both sides of the river. Their views most probably are, to cut off all supplies of boards, &c., which might come down the river, and of which we shall have great need.

I have given directions to proceed as fast as possible in carrying on the obstructions, and I would fain hope, if they allow us a little more time, that they will be so far completed as to render the passage dangerous, if not altogether insecure.

I have the honour to be,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. In respect to the appointment of officers, I would beg leave to add, that the merit of the officers who went through the Canada expedition with General Arnold, should, in my opinion, be particularly noticed. They are now upon their parole, and cannot act; but should not suitable provision be made for them against their release-ment, which I should suppose ought to be among the first?

PROPOSED APPOINTMENTS OF CONNECTICUT OFFICERS.

A list of officers now in the army recommended for appointments in the troops to be raised by the State of Connecticut.

Those persons to whose names this character * is prefixed are recommended for promotion to the next rank :

TENCH TILGHMAN TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: About eight o'clock this morning, the Roebuck and Phoenix, of forty-four guns each, and a frigate about twenty guns, got under way from about Bloomingdale, where they have been lying some time, and stood on with an easy southerly breeze towards our chevaux-de-frise, which we hoped would have given them some interruption, while our batteries played upon them. But to our surprise and mortification, they all came through without the least difficulty, and without receiving any apparent damage from our forts, which kept playing on them from both sides of the river.* How far they intend to go up I don't know; but his Excellency thought fit to give you the earliest information, that you may put General Clinton on his guard at the Highlands, for they may have troops concealed on board with intent to surprise those forts.

If you have any stores on the water side, you had better have them removed or secured in time, boards especially, for which we shall be put to great straits if the communication above should be cut off. The enemy have made no move on the land side.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To the Honourable Committee of Correspondence, State of New-York.

Be pleased to forward this intelligence up the river, and to Albany. The two new ships are put in near Colonel Phillips's. A party of Artillery, with two twelve-pounders, and one hundred Riflemen, are sent up to endeavour to secure them.

* October 9, 1776.—Early in the morning, three ships, two of forty guns, and one frigate, with two or three tenders, stood up the North River. They were briskly cannonaded from Fort Washington and Fort Constitution. They however passed our works and the chevaux-de-frise, the American galleys, small craft, and two large ships standing on before them. The two ships were ran on shore near Phillips's Mills, and two of the galleys near Dobbs's Ferry. The enemy took possession of the two galleys, and got them off. A boat landed a number of men, who plundered a store, stove the casks, and then set the store on fire, and left it. The Americans soon extinguished the fire.

Our General ordered Colonel Sargent, with five hundred Infantry, forty Light-Horse; Captain Horton, of the Artillery, with two twelve-pounders; and Captain Crafts, with a howitzer, to march immediately, with all possible expedition, to Dobbs's Ferry. The enemy took a schooner loaded with rum, sugar, wine, &c., and sunk a sloop which had on board the machine invented by and under the direction of a Mr. Bushnell, intended to blow up the British ships. This machine was worked under water. It conveyed a magazine of powder, which was to be fixed under the keel of a ship, then freed from the machine, and left with clock-work going, which was to produce fire when the machine had got out of the way. Mr. Bushnell had great confidence of its success, and had made several experiments which seemed to give him countenance; but its fate was truly a contrast to its design.

Our General's division was formed in line, with its advance, reserve flank-guards, and artillery, all in order of battle, when they were moved down over the different grounds which it was supposed might be the scene of action. Some of this ground was very broken, and there were many fences. These afforded frequent opportunities for the troops to break off and form, for the pioneers to open avenues, &c., and for the whole to become acquainted with every part of the ground, and the best choice of it, if suddenly called to action.—Heath.

COLONEL TILGHMAN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, October 9, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment yours of this evening. The party of one hundred men were ordered up to assist a detachment of Artillery in covering the two new ships, should the enemy attempt to cut them out or destroy them. Soon after I got home from Fort Washington, I received a report that the enemy had passed the new ships and were landing at Dobbs's Ferry. I then directed Colonel Reed to desire you, if that should be the case, to send field-pieces and howitzers forward if it should be judged necessary, and as General Clinton best knew the ground, to consult him upon the necessity of sending on the artillery, and if it was sent, that a strong covering party should go with it. Till I received yours, I heard no more of the matter. I am sorry you have been misinformed as to the movement of the other ships below; they have never stirred from their moorings. You will therefore be pleased to order Captain Benson to be as expeditious as possible in getting the new ships afloat and bringing them down to where they may be conveniently ballasted. I will take proper care of the prisoners you are sending down.

While I was writing the above by his Excellency's direction, he went to bed. I thought it a pity to disturb him to sign it. I therefore have the honour to subscribe myself your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To General Heath.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

October 9, 1776.

SIR: Besides the men ordered on the duty in bringing down the ships, the General desires you would order one hundred men from the regiments of your division nearest King's Bridge, immediately, to be employed in ballasting the two hulks which lay at Spiking Devil. These men are not to leave the service till it is completed, and officers who can be depended on are to oversee them, as the work of the army constantly suffers by this means.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED, Adjutant-General

To General Heath.

No movement below.

ORDERS TO COLONEL SARGENT.

King's Bridge, October 9, 1776.

SIR: The enemy, as it is reported, have landed a number of troops at or near Dobbs's Ferry; and it being thought indispensably our duty to dislodge them, you are immediately to take the command of the detachment designed for that purpose, consisting of five hundred men. You will march without the least loss of time, with the said detachment and forty Light-Horse, to Dobbs's Ferry, taking with you one howitzer and a detachment of the Artillery, now at Phillips's Mills, if you should think it necessary. You will take particular care that the howitzer is properly covered, and defended by the battalion men.

You will, if possible, dislodge the enemy; killing or taking prisoners, as occasion may require. If the enemy should have reëmbarked on board their ships, you will give me notice thereof by express, as you will frequently of every occurrence worthy of notice. Colonel Drake will march with you, and afford you every assistance in his power. You will also take command of the company commanded by Captain Darrow, and also the guard now at Dobbs's Ferry. If you should find upon conference with the commanding officers of the Artillery, that they have no express orders from the Commander-in-Chief, you will give them such orders as you may think proper for the good of the service.

I am, sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To Colonel Sargent.

GENERAL PUTNAM TO GENERAL HEATH.

General Putnam's compliments to General Heath, and begs he will please to furnish fifty men to assist in bringing the ships from Phillips's, under command of Mr. Benson.

Wednesday, noon.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

King's Bridge, October 9, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment received your favour of 7th instant, enclosing a resolve of Congress directing the Continental agents to deliver me for the use of the army all the salt in their hands belonging to the Continent. I wish to know who all the Continental agents from New-York, (that is Hudson's river,) eastward, are, that I may call on them. I know some of them, but very possibly not all. I fear, nay I know, the whole quantity will fall vastly short of what will be necessary, and hope speedy and effectual care will be taken to procure what is needful for this and another year, which will not fall short of eighty or a hundred thousand bushels, beside what I know now to be in the country and what will be needed for family consumption.

My idea is to put up pork with a small quantity of salt, and depend on getting more in season to repack and pickle early in the spring. This will be necessary, for want of salt. This will also show the necessity of being in season with a sufficient quantity of salt, or lose all.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,
JOS. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

LIEUTENANTS PUTNAM AND CLEAVES TO GEN. WASHINGTON.

North River, October 9, 1776.

SIR: This is a copy of the proceedings on board the galley Independence.

On the 8th Colonel Tupper sent orders on board for Captain Baker to proceed on shore, and that there was no further business for him on board. On the 9th, at about seven A. M., we observed the ship below to be moving. We immediately called all hands. After seeing the other galley under way, we hove up and stood up the river after them, and when we got above the chevaux-de-frise spoke with Cook, and asked what he intended to do. He answered that he did not know; but stood up the river, and said there was not water enough to go into the creek. The wind being moderate we gained ahead of them, which gave us encouragement to keep along. It soon after breezed up, and the ship gained upon us fast, and, at about eleven A. M. they began to fire upon us with their bow-chasers. At about twelve they overreached us, which caused us to bear in shore, and at half-past one P. M. we run her on shore, first above Dobbs's Ferry, where we had not time enough to get our people and things on shore in the boat, and the shipping began the fire which obliged us to swim on shore; but no lives lost, but part of their guns and chief of their baggage; and I observed the enemy to haul up their boats and man them, which they immediately dropped on stern and fired a broadside of grapeshot as we lay in the bushes, and immediately sent their boat on board with a warp, and hove her alongside.

From your most obedient servants,

JEREMIAH PUTNAM, }
NATHANIEL CLEAVES, } Lieutenants.

To His Excellency General Washington.

SAMUEL TEN BROECK TO COLONEL PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

District of Manor Livingston, October 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We have received your letter of the 30th September; the contents have duly examined. The disaffected begin to be rather more troublesome and daring than formerly, but through proper application don't doubt we shall soon rid ourselves of some or the major part of these villains. We are sorry that we can't send you herewith an authentick account of them, but shall in a few days, as we are about collecting all the materials possible. This day we received a letter from the Committee of Dutchess County, informing us that their Militia was ordered to be out to-morrow, in consequence of which four of our companies are ordered out, to be ready to-morrow morning. This body will be ordered to scour well and to surround them if possible, as there is a large number that keep themselves concealed in the woods. Hope that we may be able to give you a favourable account of this in a day or two, together with the particulars of our district in general.

On Monday last we had one Jas. Chissem before us, who being examined on oath relative to the Tories, and the outrage committed at Captain Jamsen's, reported that on Monday last, a fortnight gone, being the night when the outrage was committed, he being in company with a body, in Number Twenty-Four, in the woods, about four miles from Captain Jamsen's, Chissem was taken by some of our men that layed in ambush. We have taken all their names down, and think that we are in a fair way to find out those villains that committed the cruel outrage. We have also taken several more affidavits of those that were suspected in the least, but none of them give so much light in the affair as the one already mentioned.

I shall write you further by the first opportunity. We send this by old Mr. Power; beg to hear from you by him, as the post and almost every other convenience is now stopped so that we seldom hear from Head-Quarters. Shall be glad to hear the news from there.

In haste, we remain your most obedient and very humble servants,

By order: SAMUEL TEN BROECK, Chairman, p. t.
To Colonel Peter R. Livingston, Fishkills.

ALBANY COMMITTEE TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany Committee-Chamber, October 9, 1776.

SIR: We have received yours of the 7th instant, and in consequence thereof have procured the iron stove, pipes, and other fixtures from the members of the Presbyterian Church in this city. We shall send it down to-morrow to the place directed, and write you fully how and on what terms we have procured it.

We are, sir, your most obedient servants.

By order: JOHN BARCLAY, Chairman.
To Peter R. Livingston, President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkills.

R. HUGHES TO MR. WINSLOW.

Ticonderoga, October 9, 1776.

SIR: General Gates orders you shall to-morrow morning at the meeting of the Court-Martial, deliver over to the President, viz: the Hon. Brigadier-General St. Clair, the amount of the sum paid by you to Captain Jona. Fassitt, and to desire he will call before him the soldiers of said company and examine whether they have received one month's pay, as Captain Jona. Fassitt received one month's pay for a full company from you, each soldier so examined to be on oath.

By the General's command: R. HUGHES.
To Mr. Winslow, Paymaster.

COLONEL WINDS TO GENERAL GATES.

Ticonderoga, October 9, 1776.

SIR: Being much indisposed, cannot do myself the pleasure to wait on your Honour in person; therefore take this method to approach you with a request in behalf of my regiment, which is, that your Honour would suffer it as soon as convenient to march for New-Jersey, and would beg your patience while I give my reasons for this application.

In the first place, sir, our regiment was raised in consequence of a proposal from the honourable Continental Congress to the Provincial Convention of New-Jersey, in which the former expressly declared that "this regiment, when raised, should be for the defence of New-York, where they will be wanted this fall or next spring." On which account many persons entered the service who otherwise would not have engaged, as their families and connexions were much exposed, living mostly along the sea-coast, where in all probability attacks would be made; and as the seat of war at present is near our own shores, where our property and connexions are more immediately exposed, and indeed at that very place we were raised to defend, I humbly conceive it would be for the interest of the service to order us thither, especially as an indulgence of this nature might induce some persons to reëngage in the service, which otherwise may not.

Give me leave also to inform your Honour, that our men are in a most wretched condition for want of clothing and blankets to screen them from the inclemency of the nearly approaching season; and what I presume adds the greater weight to this reason is, that our men are very severely afflicted with the disease called the itch, supposed to be communicated to them in the inoculation for the small-pox in June last. This disorder, sir, rages in an uncommon degree among our people; and as their habitations expose them so much to the weather, the doctor deems it highly dangerous to attempt their cure.

I have only to add that our regiment was raised in October last; the men enlisted for only one year, and therefore, that their time is now nearly expired.

If these reasons, sir, should operate with you, and your Honour should concur with me in the opinion that all probable expectation of the enemy's approach this fall is over, we would request to be favoured with your Honour's orders to march, as soon as convenient.

I have the honour to be your Honour's obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM WINDS, Colonel.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates, Major-General and Commander of the Continental Troops in the Northern Department.

SAMUEL BIRD AND OTHERS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-Haven, October 9, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: We have associated for the purpose of fitting out a privateer, but shall be unable to carry our purpose into execution unless your Honour or the General Assembly will grant us license to take from the Salisbury foundry a number of cannon. Our privateer will carry ten four-pounders and twelve swivels. We request your Honour, therefore, to give us an order for so many cannon and swivels, to be delivered on our paying the price affixed by your Honour and the Council of Safety. Your Honour will recollect that this application was made viva voce this forenoon at Mr. Mansfield's. We hope, therefore, that no application made since that time will deprive us of our chance of being supplied.

We are, with the greatest respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servants,

SAMUEL BIRD,
ARTHUR JARVIS,
JOHN LOTHROP,
PIERPONT EDWARDS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COL. HOLLINGSWORTH.
[No. 204.]

Annapolis, October 10, 1776.

SIR: By order of the honourable Convention we return you eighty-four bayonets and a gun-barrel, which Mr. Winters, of Chester-Town, sent here for our inspection, and we are directed to inform you that unless you comply in a short time with your contract with this Board, or give us satisfactory reasons for the delay, that your bond will be put in suit. We enclose you a copy of Mr. Winters's letter, and have also given him orders to return you the remainder of the barrels. We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

CONRAD HOGMIRE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Hagarstown, October 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: My age and bad state of health has rendered me incapable of serving any longer as an officer in the service. I have therefore enclosed you my commission, and at the same time return you my most sincere thanks for the honour you conferred on, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

CONRAD HOGMIRE.

VAN BIBBER AND HARRISON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We beg leave to refer you to ours of the 8th, herewith sent. Since then, we have received here, in exchange for the same quantity we had at Statia, one hundred and twenty half-barrels of gunpowder, which we have put on board the brig Friendship on your account; and enclosed you will find a bill of lading and invoice for it.

We are, most respectfully, sirs, your obedient, humble servants,
VAN BIBBER & HARRISON.

P. S. Captain Martin says that the mistake of the ten barrels powder you mention, was rectified before he sailed.

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 10, 1776.

SIRS: I received your orders for purchasing nine hundred barrels superfine flour, and twenty hogsheads of tobacco, and directions to dispose of part of them, which I shall observe as nearly as I can. I have the best flour engaged for the Resolution that is made with us, but there is but little superfine made here; it is best for flour weighing one hundred weight three quarters neat, but there is very little superfine to be had nearer than the Head of Elk, and there they send it to Philadelphia, and at this time get twenty to twenty-two shillings per hundred for it. But I shall get the best flour that is made in this place, and have it fitted for a French market, with ten hoops; have sent off the tobacco received. I received from Mr. Steven Steward eight hundred pounds, to be laid out for you.

We have a report this evening that there is a fleet at the Capes. Please advise me if that should be the case, if I am to continue the purchase. I am selling the damaged flour that the bakers would not bake at six, seven, eight and ten shillings a barrel—each market day from twelve to twenty barrels. I shall come down soon to show the accounts, as far as I have gone.

From your humble servant,

JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

I consulted Mr. Stephen Steward about the flour, and advised me to go on and get the best was to be had, and such as we have here for our best flour.

PETITION OF JAMES CLARKE AND OTHERS.

To the honourable the Council of Safety of MARYLAND: The Memorial of JAMES CLARKE, ROBERT CHRISTIE, Jun., MELCHIOR KEENER, ROBERT CHRISTIE, and OLIVER WHITE, and ROBERT JOHNSTON, sheweth:

That early in the month of March your memorialists' vessels were sunk at Whetstone Point, for the purpose of preventing any of the British ships-of-war from coming up to Baltimore-Town. That agreeable to a resolve of Convention, they have already been allowed sums of money for the damage the vessels sustained by being sunk, but that your memorialists have never received any satisfaction for the time their vessels were employed in that service, which was about three and one half months. As that matter is referred to the Council of Safety, we would pray that a day may be fixed for our attendance at Annapolis, and that the bearer may be informed what voucher will be necessary to lay before your honourable Board. And your memorialists shall ever pray.

JAMES CLARKE,
ROBERT CHRISTIE, Jun.,
ROBERT CHRISTIE,
OLIVER WHITE,
MELCHIOR KEENER,
ROBERT JOHNSTON.

October 10, 1776.

JAMES CLARKE AND MELCHIOR KEENER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, October 10, 1776.

We, the subscribers, inhabitants of Baltimore-Town, beg leave to acquaint the honourable Council that we have been for a number of years purchasers of produce in said town, and being informed that a considerable sum is shortly to be laid out for the use of the Province, do now make an offer of our best services, and should the honourable Council be pleased to employ us in purchasing such produce as may be bought at Baltimore, we will do it for a commission of one pound ten shillings on every hundred pounds, and will give the best of security for our faithful performance.

JAMES CLARKE,
MELCHIOR KEENER.

To the honourable Council of Safety of the Province of Maryland.

ON THE PRESENT STATES OF AMERICA.

Under the direction of the honourable American Congress, conducted by a chain of wonderful and unexpected events, by a most gracious all-ruling Providence, the several Colonies, before unconnected, in spite of their different principles, interests, and prejudices, arose to such a degree of union, strength, credit, and importance, as to excite the wonder and applause of all the nations in Europe.

When, from the echo of publick affairs (with which I am only concerned as an individual) I saw that Independence was unavoidable, safe and honourable to the Colonies, I reasoned in my mind, and said to my friends, "There can be no difficulty about new forms of Government;" the experience, wisdom, and circumstances of these States, plainly point out the Congress to be the primum mobile and supreme directress of all momentous affairs in peace, as well as war, and the last resort unto which appeals must lie to all who think themselves injured by any Courts or Assemblies below; which Assemblies, therefore, may remain as heretofore, with only some change of names and forms, unless the necessity or justice of things require some small alterations, as the wisdom of Congress, that is, of all the States by their annually-chosen Representatives, may judge necessary. Thus it then appeared to me and others. But when I saw different forms of Government, without so much as taking notice of the Congress, and others only naming it superficially, and none leaving any appeal to it, and some of them even assuming to themselves much of the war department, as appointing all military officers, &c., I concluded my first thoughts must be wrong, and the wisdom of the Colonies must be right, and it was needless to mention my opinion; but last night an occurrence determined me otherwise.

A dream or vision (don't rashly pronounce me superstitious, for it was not a dream from any disorder of body or mind, as both were healthy and clear, and the same was presented to me twice in the same night, though I have not had a dream to be before regarded these twenty years) represented to me a very great luminary (call it the Sun) in the west, under a great but not total eclipse; there being one straight line or stripe across the centre perpendicularly, that was luminous, the upper end giving most light. At the same time, and of the same height, (about forty degrees above the horizon,) I saw several Moons, about southeast, of different magnitudes, (perhaps thirteen, though I did not count them.) These having all derived their light from the great luminary before, were now also eclipsed; their discs, however, by means of the luminous diameter of the Sun, were visible, and appeared like a polished white metal, but giving no light; and in each of them I beheld a very deformed black spot, though in some much larger than others, seeming to corrode and waste the body, &c. Every one must interpret this as I do, viz: The Congress is that great luminary that gave light, beauty, warmth, and usefulness to all the Colonies, which were also represented by the aforesaid moons or planets; for in my dream I called one Saturn, another Jupiter, &c. The black spots, in some large, and the least three times as large as Venus's transit over the Sun, must represent the American Tories, or friends of the English tyranny, and enemies of the Congress and liberty; traitors in each Colony, completing every little State into a separate policy. These have secretly, and by base intrigues, eclipsed the Sun; and under a pretence of greater liberty in their particular States, prevented the influence of the Congress, in order to produce general darkness and confusion, and to fly to the midnight of eastern slavery.

How far this may be the present situation of affairs, others may be better informed than I. But I have since seen a paper in the Journal signed Brutus, that speaks the author rather willing to return to the tyranny of Britain than the new free Constitution of Pennsylvania, though it breathes more political liberty than any of the States, and in which whatever errata may have happened are proposed for amendment, and the whole to be revised after some trial; though perhaps three might have been better than seven years.

In all the forms I have yet seen, there appears to me one dark and dangerous spot: they are too self-sufficient and disconnected from the great whole, while they are generally too complex, and have too many jarring wheels in themselves. No machine composed of many wheels, all depending on each other, and totally interrupted if one is only warped a little, can be of long duration; thus, watches that show the phases of the moon, the days of the month, &c., are not so durable as the plainer, which only point out hours and minutes; and the smaller the works, the weaker. This is easily applied to some States, as that on Delaware,* which contains only three Counties, and yet has no less than four distinct legislative bodies, an Assembly, Legislative Council, President, and his Privy Council. All these opposite and incoherent powers (in that small and greatly divided handful) must produce endless jars and confusions, till one of these powers becomes an aristocracy, and like Aaron's serpent swallows up the rest, or betrays the whole to some foreign Power, which we know the present Representatives of two of these Counties, who have been accounted all along enemies to the cause of America, would, if they durst, presently do. However, they have the nomination of members of Congress, and may thereby effect it, if such discoloured parts of other States prevail. They have also made their form of Government, without any appeal to the people, or hearing any objections, or giving any appeal to Congress, though one whole County was not represented in Convention, except only the Tories in it.

But the other faulty part of most new constitutions appears to me yet more dangerous, viz: their too great self-sufficiency, and want of connection with the great whole. These States must be one government, or we are undone. There can be but one supreme head. Monsters of many heads in the natural world can live but a very short time. It would be very easy to trace this same truth in the civil policies of all nations. This was the true cause of the dissolution of all the ancient free Republicks.

Before our little States became independent of each other, and only looked to the Congress as the animating soul of one great American republick, how great the union, how happy the whole! But now, how changed! The Congress eclipsed; every little State almost separate from the rest, and every bird of the night utters its ill-boding sound; Tories triumph, and those who were in arms against their country last June, are now again openly reading letters to the people, which they say are from Lord Howe, full of encouragement to the disaffected, and desiring them to send only the King's friends to Assembly, and he will make peace with them, &c., &c.

The people here accordingly will send only Tories; and I am satisfied, unless some great change of affairs, (which can be effected only by Congress,) they will never elect any other members to any of the four or five Delaware branches of government, for many years to come, except men who wickedly pretend the Church is in danger, and who bribe their votes; but no men of sense, patriotism, or virtue, at least in this generation. Perhaps something like this may happen in other counties of other governments. By such constitutions, what can be expected? Must not one State fall into contention with another State, and every degree of anarchy and confusion arise, and the States, thus weakened, become an easy prey to some foreign kingdom, or some fortunate ruffian at home?

Instead, therefore, of leaving ignorant men to contend about forms of government, endangering our all at stake, by disunion among ourselves, why do we not remove the eclipse, and restore the Congress to the supreme power of all affairs at once? This is a simple government. The most simple is the best. We cannot be afraid of our liberty in such hands; they are representatives of all America, (themselves being bound by every law they make is sufficient security,) removed from every little local prejudice, under no temptation to be partial. Let them be chosen every year, and changed every three years, but gradually, and not all at once: then what need for all this costly parade of governours, councils, and privy councils? Cannot every Assembly do all the little common affairs within itself, and in all greater matters receive orders from the grand Council or Congress, which should also be the dernier ressort to settle all greater difficulties of an internal nature? But it will be said, this would give endless trouble, and make too much business for that venerable body. I answer,

*There are some good things in the Delaware Constitution, which are evidently borrowed from the Pennsylvanian, but mangled like a school-boy's abridgment of a Spectator's paper. Some of their Bill of Rights, explained by Tories, might prevent all American defence. Justices of the Peace may also be Assemblymen, i. e., "make and execute laws, which destroys all liberty."—Montesquieu.

they will be chose of men of ability and leisure; and let their support be decent and honourable; then what though they sit half the year or more? Their supreme power, which may be able to call forth the army in times of war, and the militia in times of peace, would easily settle all affairs, give general satisfaction, and unite all the most distant American States in one strong, honourable, and lasting chain.

It is true there are many united States and Republicks in the world, on the same plan which these States are adopting; but is it not certain, too, these have not every liberty? Is there not much tyranny in such particular States, for want of a supreme and impartial tribunal? Monarchies are often lasting, because simple and expeditious in business, and thereby have many advantages over the common republicks; and might not such a republick as I plead for, having their grand council always sitting, with supreme power, ready to determine on every emergence over a whole continent, have all the expedition of a monarchy, and the deliberate counsel of a republick?

On the present plan of these States, there is no one supreme power to connect the divided States, which, by means of new plans, will be internally unhappy, as well as jealous of each other; their union, strength, and happiness lost; they are only connected as a rope of sand crumbling to pieces.

Is it true, that an old Assembly, or some Tory members of it, have met and passed acts in opposition to a new Convention, in one of these States already? Does the same opposition to American measures openly declare their expectation of General Howe's paying Philadelphia a visit before winter? Do not all these things show the imbecility of Government? Where is the supreme active power of America, when leading men boldly espouse the cause of our most inveterate enemies, who have deluged our (before peaceful) country in blood?

Our cruel enemies boasted an easy conquest of America, because, they alleged, we were cowards: they are convinced to their cost of their mistake in this. But when they shall find the black spots in our constitutions, and the wretched numbers of American traitors, who sell their country for a mess of pottage, they may be more encouraged. These wretches are in almost every State, striving, by the little arts of policy, to delude, divide, weaken, and subvert every rational and manly measure, to alarm and terrify us into a tame submission to tyranny. But I am confident there is still so much virtue in America, that these cringing candidates for court favour, these sycophants, dissemblers, and false friends, will be detected, displaced, and forever despised.

But it will be objected that I would make the Congress absolute, which might be dangerous as well as a monarchy, unless restricted by a code of laws, &c. I answer, I cannot perceive any danger from rendering them absolute, or restrained by few laws. I would have them be a great court of chancery, governed only by the *eternal laws of equity, patriotism, and reason, in order more effectually to promote the safety, equality, industry, union, virtue, and happiness of America. And as to codes of laws, they have had the same effect in all the nations as creeds and confessions, and forms of religion: they have literally and figuratively damned the world.

How happy the Greeks with a few laws, and the Romans when they had only the twelve tables. In the later ages, equity and justice have been nearly banished from the world, by laws complicated to an unwieldy size. The whole world needs but a few laws, and these simple, clear, sensible, and easy in their application to the actions of men.

A grand Congress, chose annually by the people, (not by their representatives,) would contain the united abilities and virtues of all these Colonies in one great republick, the deputed guardians of our civil rights: this would excite the prompt obedience, the fidelity and publick spirit of a willing people, no longer bent under the yoke of oppression, by little tyrants in their own little and wrangling States. The American nation would then raise its head, and universal harmony and joy prevail among all classes and orders of men. This Congress of men of the greatest and most eminent characters, would be a seminary of statesmen and heroes, a nursery of truth, knowledge, and virtue, to prepare men of abilities for generals, ambassadors, and the highest offices of State.

* A magistrate of good principles needs no other law; and one of bad principles will violate or evade every law of God and man.

This simple and plain system contains no seeds of disease or decay; would connect all America in every liberty that freemen wish for, and would probably last as long as time itself.

PHILO-ALETHIAS.

Delaware, October 10, 1776.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

Philadelphia, October 10, 1776.

SIR: We learned some days ago, with much concern, that the expedition we had planned for you to execute would prove abortive, as the ships had gone out a cruising, under the sanction of Governour Trumbull's recommendation, with which we cannot be well satisfied, although, in this instance, we are disposed to pass it by in silence, being well convinced both he and the several Captains meant to perform service at a time the ships were idle. Supposing, therefore, that you will have been obliged to lay aside the expedition to Newfoundland, we now direct that you immediately collect the Alfred, the Columbus, Cabot, and Hampden, take them under your command, and proceed for Cape Fear, in North-Carolina, where you will find the following ships of war: the Falcon, of eighteen guns, the Scorpion, of sixteen guns, and the Cruiser, of eight guns, and a number of valuable prizes, said to be forty or fifty in number, and other vessels under their protection, the whole of which you will make prize of with ease. We understand they have erected a kind of a fort on Baldhead, at the entrance of Cape Fear river; but it being only manned with a few people from these ships, we expect you will easily reduce it, and put the same in possession of North-Carolina, or dismantle it, as may appear best. When you have performed this service, you had best deliver to the Continental agents there such of your prizes as may sell well, or be useful in North-Carolina; others you may convoy into Virginia, or this place, for we don't recommend your remaining at North-Carolina, for fear of being blocked up there. Perhaps you will receive advice that will render it eligible to proceed farther southward to rout the enemies' ships at South-Carolina and Georgia; and if that is practicable, you have not only our approbation, but our orders for the attempt.

We hope, sir, you will not lose one single moment after the receipt of this letter, but proceed instantly on this expedition.

We are, sir, your humble servants.

To Esek Hopkins, Esq.

P. S. Should the Cabot be still on a cruise, or, if returned, cannot be ready to proceed upon the above expedition as early as one of the frigates lately launched at Rhode-Island, you will proceed with the latter in lieu of the Cabot, as soon as she can be prepared for the sea, or you may take both the Cabot and the frigate if to be done without delay. We wish your plan for manning this fleet from the State of Rhode-Island, may prove effectual; and we do, in the warmest manner, urge you to omit nothing on your part which may tend to promote so important a purpose, and which we have most earnestly at heart. The commissions for the officers of the frigates will be forwarded immediately.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO HENRY TUCKER AND THOMAS GODET.

October 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have occasion for a quantity of salt to cure beef and pork the ensuing season, for the use of our fleet, and don't care to lay up what arrives here transiently, as the people are much in want of that article, and would murmur were it to be bought off their hands. We therefore request that you will immediately on receipt of this letter, charter five or six good, fast sailing large sloops, schooners, or brigantines, and either load them with salt at Bermudas, or send them to Turk's Island for it, just as you may find safest and best. Send one of them to Edenton, in North-Carolina, consigned to Messrs. Hewes & Smith, one to Baltimore, in Maryland, consigned to our order, and the others have addressed to us. Perhaps it will be most prudent to load part in Bermudas, and part in Turk's

Island; but our great object is to get the salt soon and safe here.

You will charter these vessels on the best terms in your power, by the month or other ways. Have them valued, and we agree to ensure them for so long as they remain in our service; and if the terms are reasonable, that may probably be a long time. You'll buy the salt as cheap as you can, and give them the utmost despatch, or it will be too late for our purpose. We must depend on you to advance the money for the cost of the salt until we can reimburse you, which shall be done by returning some of these vessels to you with cargoes of provisions, and probably a convoy with them. Should any of the vessels be taken or lost, we will either pay you in provisions, or undoubted good bills on Europe, or the West-Indies, as may best suit the owners. We hope you will be able to comply with these orders immediately, for which we shall allow you reasonable commission, interest for the advance of your money and commissions on the goods we shall consign you hereafter; and for your security, we pledge you the faith and credit of the United States of America, being so authorized to do by the honourable the Continental Congress, of which we are members, and are, gentlemen, your very humble servants.

To Messrs. Henry Tucker, of Somerset, and Thomas Godet, Bermuda.

P. S. If you cannot send six, send as many vessels as you can, short of that number.

WILLIAM ATLEE TO JOHN COX.

Philadelphia, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: After waiting in town a week, I am under the necessity of returning home without finishing my business. The company who came with me in the carriage want to go, and I understand that the workmen and labourers employed by the Committee at Lancaster, are clamorous and want money. I have, therefore, drawn some more cash, to wit: three thousand pounds from Mr. Hillagas, for the stockade and guards, &c., in Lancaster; and one thousand pounds from Messrs. Mease and Caldwell, to pay for billeting the marching companies, &c., &c. And having taken up my accounts and vouchers from the several offices, beg leave to trouble you with them, and to ask the favour of you to have them settled for me as soon as possible. The account relative to the stockade, barracks, and company's pay on duty in Lancaster, will be settled at the Treasury Board at Mr. Gibson's; and the account relative to the moneys advanced to the marching companies, and for victualling them, at Messrs. Mease and Caldwell's. The vouchers have been examined in both offices, so that I think very little remains to be done but to fix my commissions and strike the balances. I expect a generous (but not extravagant) allowance for my trouble with respect to the account with Mease and Caldwell. I have had the mustering of the companies, entering a muster roll of each in a book which is deposited with them, and furnishing two copies, one for the office and one for a voucher, chief of which I had to do myself to expedite business; and the settling of the tavern-keepers' bills is very troublesome. And with respect to the accounts to be settled with the Treasury Board, I have to settle the pay bills of the companies on guard in Lancaster, and pay them monthly, to settle with and pay the carpenters, masons, bricklayers, labourers, and others employed, at the stockade and barracks as they bring in their accounts for their daily and weekly labour; besides purchasing materials, &c., and taking a share in the direction of the works. These matters have required more of my attention, and kept me more constantly engaged than ever my own business did, (or ever shall,) which I have been obliged entirely to neglect. Therefore (entre nous) I should chuse to know in time, before I proceed much farther, what is to be my allowance, and not leave it to a final settlement of my accounts, when perhaps a thank you sir, or little better, may be thought sufficient.

Besides these things, I have my share of publick duty, which the publick are welcome to, having the whole trouble of the business of the committee as chairman, secretary, &c., which claims our attendance daily, and sometimes from morning till night. The sums last drawn may be added to the accounts, or left to a future account, as shall be thought best. Mr. Ross will oblige so much as to attend you, and afford every assistance in having the accounts expeditiously settled. I have spoke with him. Less than two and a half per cent. I don't intend to accept, and much more I don't desire, though the same attention to my own business would have produced me double or treble the money.

I hope you will excuse the trouble I ask you to take for me, and be assured I always take pleasure in executing your commands, being, dear sir, your affectionate humble servant,

WILLIAM ATLEE.

To Mr. John Cox, Philadelphia.

GENERAL LEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 15th: referred to the Board of War.]

Princeton, October 10, 1776.

SIR: The ridiculous idea, that Lord Howe has some reasonable terms to offer, and that the Congress are desirous of their being communicated to the people, gains ground every day. This idea is strengthened by the industry of the disaffected, and does infinite mischief; I would, therefore, with submission, offer it to the consideration of Congress, whether it would not be politick, in order to efface these impressions, suffer some gentlemen in the simple character of individuals who are supposed to have influence, to propose a conference with his Lordship on this subject, and demand what terms he has to offer. He most assuredly has none but unconditional submission. His publick declaration ought, it is true, to satisfy every reasonable man of this being the ultimatum; but in our present circumstances, the unreasonable and weak must be satisfied, as well as the sensible and reasonable. A committee deputed from the Congress after what has happened, would be highly improper, as it would convey an idea that they themselves did not consider independency absolutely fixed, for which reason it would be more prudent that they should suffer one or two persons in whom they can confide, to propose the conference in their private characters, who may afterwards relate, explain, and command at large on the circumstances. I perhaps may be wrong in my conjectures, but as I am persuaded it would have a salutary effect, I cannot reconcile it to my conscience to withhold my opinion, an opinion, I can assure you, sir, in which I am not singular, for many very sensible men, and the most active friends to the cause in this Province and the others I have passed through, concur with me. At all events, I hope the Congress will not think me impertinent, and presuming in intruding it, but impute it to my anxiety and zeal for the publick welfare.

This Province is so much weaker in numbers than I imagined in leaving Philadelphia, that the sooner the Virginia battalions march, at least as far as Brunswick, the better. You must, sir, excuse the blots of this letter as I have not paper for a more legible copy.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble, obedient servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To the President of Congress.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Perth-Amboy, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday evening a part of the enemy's fleet, to the number of twenty-two sail, fell down to Sandy-Hook, and this morning stood out to sea an easterly course. Five of the ships appear to be men-of-war. A Mustermaster is much wanted here. Captain Smith who had that appointment from Congress, has left us several weeks; if he has resigned, it will be necessary to appoint and order on some gentleman to succeed him. Otherwise it will be impossible to prevent frauds in making out the pay rolls. No new movements of the enemy are discoverable on this quarter.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

THOMAS RANDALL TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Elizabethtown, October 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I here send you by the bearer, Mr. Little, the letter I received by him from the Lieutenant of your schooner General Putnam, which you'll please to have read and consider the contents. I am well assured they must want provisions and necessaries. I some time ago forwarded to you a petition from them, which I would beg your consideration, with respect to Captain Cregier's conduct. I make no doubt but you'll order a supply of provisions and money for them.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
THOS. RANDALL.

To the honourable Provincial Congress for the State of New-York.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am now to acknowledge your favour of the 1st instant, and to inform you that the two Sachems of the Caughnuagas, with Mr. Deane, the interpreter, have been with me, and spent three or four days. I showed them every civility in my power, and presented them with such necessaries as our barren stores afford and they were pleased to take. I also had them shown all our works upon this island, which I had manned to give 'em an idea of our force, and to do away the false notions they might have imbibed, from the tales which had been propagated among 'em. They seemed to think we were amazingly strong, and said they had seen enough without going to our posts in Jersey, or to the other side of Harlem river. They took their departure yesterday morning, and I hope with no unfavourable impressions.

Your favour of the 6th came to hand this day by Mr. Bennet. I have communicated the contents, so far as it respects the boards, to General Mifflin, who has resumed the office of Quartermaster-General, on Mr Moylan's resignation and the application of Congress. He will write you to-morrow about them, and will send the sum you require by the return of Mr. Bennet.

It gives me great pleasure to hear the army is so well supplied with provision, and I would fain hope, that if the enemy do not effect any thing in this or the next month, that they will not attempt to pass the lakes till early in the spring, by which time perhaps we may be able to recruit our army, though I have my fears that the business will not go on with the ease and expedition that I could wish. I have done all I could, and urged strongly the propriety of giving the soldiers a suit of clothes annually; how Congress will determine on the subject I know not. I have also advised the raising of the officers' pay.

We are again deprived of the navigation of this river by three ships of war, two of forty-four and the other of twenty guns, with three or four tenders, passing our chevaux-de-frise yesterday morning, and all our batteries, without any kind of damage or interruption, notwithstanding a heavy fire was kept up from both sides of the river. I have given directions to complete the obstructions as fast as possible, and I flatter myself if they allow us a little time more, that the passage will become extremely difficult, if not entirely insecure. Their views I imagine are chiefly to cut off our supplies, and probably to gain recruits.

I am, dear sir, &c,
Go. WASHINGTON.
To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

October 10, 1776.

SIR: The General desires you would immediately order a sufficient party of men under Captain Cook to get off and bring down the vessel which is grounded above; and that in the mean time the ballasting the rest be proceeded in with all possible expedition. It is of so much consequence, that his Excellency begs the utmost attention may be paid to it.

I am, sir, your most obedient, and very humble servant,
Jos. REED, Adj. Gen.

To Major-General Heath.

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 15: referred to the Medical Committee.]

Camp at Fort Constitution, October 10, 1776.

SIR: The sick of the army, who are under the care of the regimental Surgeon, are in a most wretched situation, the Surgeons being without the least article of medicine to assist nature in her efforts for the recovery of health. There is no circumstance that strikes a greatest damp upon the spirits of the men, who are yet well, than the miserable condition the sick are in. They exhibit a spectacle shocking to human feelings, and as the knowledge of their distress spreads through the country, will prove an insurmountable obstacle to the recruiting the new army.

Good policy as well as humanity, in my humble opinion, demands the immediate attention of Congress upon this subject, that the evil may be sought out, and the grievance redressed. The sick in the army are too numerous to be all accommodated on the contracted plan of the General Hospital. The Director-General says he has no authority by his commission to supply the demand of the regimental sick, and the General Hospital being too small to accommodate much more than one-half, the remainder lies without any means of relief, than the value of the rations allowed to every soldier. Many hundreds are now in this condition, and die daily for want of proper assistance; by which means the army is robbed of many valuable men, at a time when a reinforcement is so exceedingly necessary. Both officers and men join in one general complaint, and are greatly disgusted at this evil, which has prevailed so long. Some measures should be taken to justify the Director-General, or to empower the Commander-in-Chief to qualify him, to furnish the regimental Surgeons, under the direction of the Colonel of the regiment, with such supplies as the state of the sick may demand.

Great complaints have been made that the regimental Surgeons abuse their trust, and embezzle the publick stores committed to their care; this among others is a reason urged why the regimental sick suffer as they do. The Surgeons, it has been said, cannot be trusted with the necessary stores.

Whether this complaint be well or ill-founded, I am not a judge of; perhaps in some few instances it may have been the case; but I am far from thinking they are deserving the charge in general. Besides which the injury arising from a few abuses of this kind, were they even more common, is trifling compared with that which the army and publick suffers in the present state of things.

The Director-General complains of the want of medicine, and says his stocks are but barely sufficient for the General Hospital. I can see no reason either from policy or humanity, that the stores for the General Hospital should be preserved for contingencies which may never happen; and the present regimental sick left to perish for want of proper necessaries. It is wholly immaterial, in my opinion, either to the States or the army, whether a man dies in the General or Regimental Hospital.

The platform of the General Hospital should be large enough to receive all the sick that are unfit to continue in quarters, or else to supply the Regimental Hospital with such medicines and necessaries as the state of the sick requires.

I am, with due respect, your obedient servant,
NATHANAEL GREENE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. I do not mean to censure the conduct of the Director-General, nor to complain of his activity; but I mean to point out the defect of the present establishment, and to show the necessity of giving the Director some further power, and much more assistance to enable him to satisfy the numerous wants.
N. GREENE.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since I wrote you yesterday we have nothing from the men-of-war, but that they are lying at Tarrytown. I imagine the intent of their being sent up is to stop supplies from coming down the river. The two new ships are going to be sunk immediately, to endeavour to stop the channel, and try if we cannot hinder the men-of-war already up from coming down, or more going up. Enclosed you have an account of expenses incurred by the guard who carried up and brought down Marsh. As it seemed more a Provincial than Continental charge, I paid it.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,
TENCH TILGHMAN.
To Robert R. Livingston, or Wm. Duer, Esqs.

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Fairfield, October 10, 1776.

SIR: In pursuance of the order of Convention of the 20th ultimo, I send Israel Ketchum under the guard of the bearers, William Wakeman and Albert Sherwood. As he is manacled I think two men will be sufficient; besides I was apprehensive that the Convention would think him scarcely worth the price had I employed more men, as I am obliged to allow them five pounds each, supposing it will employ them five days.

We have an excursion to Long-Island. The troops marched to the harbour last night, but an unfavourable wind prevented their embarkation; hope we shall be more successful to-day.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN SLOSS HOBART.

To Hon. P. R. Livingston, President of the New-York Convention, at Fishkill.

GENERAL SCOTT TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Camp near King's Bridge, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Thomas Lawrence, the bearer hereof, is in deep distress on account of the situation of his family, which he was obliged, by his precipitate flight, to leave on Long-Island. He is known to me, and I suppose others in Convention, to be a friend to American liberty. The design of his application to Congress is to procure a sanction from them for visiting his family without having his character hereafter subject to doubtful construction. He is best able to explain his particular views, and the Convention the best judges of what is expedient in the case. The design of this letter is merely to state his character in a just point of light. No news worth communicating.

I am, sir, with all imaginable respect, yours and the Convention's most obedient servant,

JNO. MORIN SCOTT.

To the Hon. the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

GENERAL HEATH TO CAPTAIN BENSON.

King's Bridge, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: You will, if possible, (if it be not already done,) get off the ships this tide and send them down. You will call upon the detachment on shore for all the assistance they can afford you.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH.

To Captain Benson.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The money I received from Convention for the second moiety of the bounty of the men belonging to my brigade, by the accounts returned to me by the different Colonels, appears to have fell short of the sum due for that purpose about eight hundred dollars. Such of the men, who on account of the above deficiency have not yet been paid their full bounty, are exceedingly discontented. I have, therefore, thought it advisable to send the bearer, Lieutenant Colonel Hammon, for the sum due, that they may be paid, and have no just cause of complaint. I have not yet been able to have the men mustered by the Continental Muster-master-General, though I have frequently mentioned it to his Excellency General Washington. I am not, however, apprehensive the State can labour under any disadvantage on this score, as the General has ordered them paid up till the last of August, and they have received their pay to that time accordingly.

Yesterday morning three of the enemy's shipping, to wit, a forty, forty-four, and twenty-gun ship, and three tenders, passed by in shore east of our obstructions, in the river opposite Fort Washington, receiving but little damage, and are now up the river as far as Dobbs's Ferry. They took two or three of our small river sloops of little value, and I am informed now lay opposite two of our galleys, which run aground, and I suppose are in their power. The two ships to be sunk run ashore near Colonel Phillips's; we sent a party to bring them down last night, so that I hope they are safe. The bearer will inform you of any other particulars respecting military matters.

I am, with due respect, your most obedient servant,

GEO. CLINTON.

To the Hon. the President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

ORDERS TO COLONEL SARGENT.

King's Bridge, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Upon receipt hereof, unless affairs should appear different from what I think they are by your letter of this morning, you will leave Captain Darrow's company with the guard at Dobbs's Ferry, and if it should appear necessary to leave a Captain and fifty men more there or in that neighbourhood, you will do it, and also ten or twenty of the Light-Horse, as may appear most needful; with the remainder of your detachment, both Horse and Foot, you will return to this post without loss of time. You will leave one or two boxes of cartridges with Captain Darrow, and such provisions as you do not want for immediate use; the remainder of the ammunition you will bring back with you. Major Crafts will also return with the howitzer, at least as far as the place where our ships lie, and if he is not wanted there, to this post. You will direct Captain Darrow to send frequent expresses, as matters worthy of notice may occur.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

W. HEATH.

To Colonel Sargent.

COLONEL SARGENT TO GENERAL HEATH.

Half-past two o'clock at night, Dobb's Ferry, }
October 10, 1776. }

SIR: I have just arrived at Dobbs's Ferry. Very peaceable here; can see nothing of the enemy. There is not any of the enemy landed. We have no ammunition on the road for the small arms. The ships are about three miles above this place, where I shall order a party immediately.

I am your most humble servant,

PAUL D. SARGENT.

To Major-General Heath.

COLONEL CARY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Agreeable to his Excellency's commands, I am to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of this morning, and to acquaint you the General wishes you to be well informed on every occasion, and in the speediest manner, of the movements of the enemy up the North River, in order to frustrate any designs they may have in view. As General Clinton is supposed to be perfectly well acquainted with the situation of the ground, and the most advantageous posts, &c., adjacent to Dobbs's Ferry, or wherever the enemy may intend a diversion, General Lincoln is therefore referred to him for advice and direction respecting the number, and in what manner to post his men, so as to harass the enemy and effectually prevent any communication between them and the inhabitants in the country. The General has ordered the proceedings of the Court-Martial to be returned, and says he leaves the matter entirely with you, though the conduct of the Captain in releasing the prisoner appears extraordinary.

I am, with due respect, sir, your very humble servant,

RICHARD CARY, Jun., A. D. C.

To Hon. Major-General Heath, King's Bridge.

You will please to communicate to the General as early as possible such intelligence as you may from time to time receive relative to the motions of the enemy.

COLONEL ANN HAWKES HAY TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Haverstraw, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday three of the enemy's ships-of-war, and some other vessels, passed our forts at King's Bridge, and are now anchored off Nyack.

My regiment consists only of three hundred men, and very near one half of them are without arms. I should be very glad to know what I am to do, and where I must apply for a reinforcement in case they should attempt a landing on the west side of Hudson's river.

We are destitute of provisions for the guards I now have out, and I must therefore request that the Convention will be so kind as to send me per the bearer a sum of money to purchase the provisions.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

A. HAWKES HAY.

To Col. Peter R. Livingston, President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

SAMUEL TEN BROECK TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

District of Manor Livingston, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Since the letter wrote yesterday we have seen another instance of the cruel, unnatural intention of our domestic enemies, by their firing again last night a gun at two young men that were walking decently to their homes; and about an hour after six guns were fired in the house of Jacob Power; but through the interposition of Providence no lives lost, nor a single person wounded. We take it a duty incumbent on us to advise with you on this important matter, and submit it to your serious consideration and superiour judgment. Agreeable to the orders issued yesterday, some of our men have marched this morning. We are in hopes they may take them; but as the men are uncertain with regard to their receiving pay, they seem to be rather tardy; besides, taking them by companies, and in every one they are more or less disaffected, which render our plans commonly exposed before executed. We are sincerely of opinion that unless there is some other method taken very soon, (than to take the Militia companies as they run,) we shall be a ruined people. Daily we hear of more and more threatenings, and indeed it's very evident they mean to annoy us by skulking about until a favourable opportunity presents, when no doubt they will strike a blow, as they in reality increase daily. In consequence of this momentous matter, we beg that you will be pleased to apply to the Convention to grant us a company of sixty men. We are of opinion that a less number would not be able to do the business effectually. Captain Gaasbeck has offered his service to take the command of the men. We judge it to be essentially necessary for the publick safety to have this body of men; otherwise should not request it. If the Convention thinks proper to grant these men, beg you will please to detain the bearer and send the necessary orders by him. If you think proper to leave the appointment of the subaltern officers to this Board, beg you will send blank commissions for them. We earnestly entreat that you will despatch the bearer as speedy as possible, so that we may know how to regulate.

In haste we remain, dear sir, your most obedient and very humble servants,

By order: SAMUEL TEN BROECK, Chairman p. t.

To Col. Peter R. Livingston, in Convention, Fishkills.

PETRUS VAN GAASBECK TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Manor Livingston, October 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Your favour of 7th instant have now before me. You may depend upon that I shall keep our exact accounts of all the expenses relative to the apprehending the villains that fired in Captain Jansen's house. But 'tis a new instance we have seen again last night of their inhumanity, by making the other attempt for destroying the lives of the well-wishers of our noble cause. Our Committee this morning agreed to request of you to apply to the Convention to grant them a company of men. In this case I thought it my duty to offer my service to take the command of the men, which, if agreeable to you, and liberty is given to inlist them, I hope we then shall be able to purge our place effectually. I am of opinion that a less number than what is specified in the letter from the Committee would hardly be advisable. However, this must be left to your superiour judgment. I think I might be able to raise a company of hearty young men, in a few days, that may be depended upon.

In case this meets with your approbation, I should beg to have Samuel I. Ten Broeck and Samuel Thorn for Lieutenants; but as it's uncertain whether leave will be obtained, I have not yet spoken to them, though don't doubt but they will accept.

I should have sent you herewith the expenses accrued on my last jaunt, but am at a loss to make out the roll, as I don't know whether Continental pay is allowed. Beg you will inform me of this. As we have not finished with all the delinquents yet, thought best to suspend until I could give you the full account. The remainder are to come before the Committee on Monday.

Bishop has not been before us yet. Shall with the greatest pleasure embrace every opportunity to let you know how we come on. Captain Jansen is not yet returned from his New-England jaunt. Before he went from home we concluded to have advertisements drawn and printed; and as there is no printer about here, beg the favour of you to employ some able hand to draw them properly, and please to have them printed, and convey them to us by the first opportunity. The expenses will repay very readily. At the other side have put the time down when the outrage was committed.

I remain, dear sir, your very humble servant,

PETRUS VAN GAASBECK.

On Wednesday, 23d September, 1776, in the night, the outrage was committed. One hundred dollars reward to him that discovers the person or persons. You will please to have it drawn in such form as you think will answer the end best. Twenty-four printed will be plenty, I think.

Yours, &c.,

P. V. GAASBECK.

PETER SCHUYLER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fort Constitution, October 10, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of yours, just come to hand, I have made the most diligent inquiry I could obtain.

This morning a number of vessels arrived here from the bridge, by all which I am informed that yesterday morning three men-of-war, one of them a large one, and three or four tenders, passed our chevaux-de-frises, which report is confirmed in a more particular manner by Captain Grindle, who says that one man-of-war and two frigates passed the works close under the east shore, drove the two new ships ashore just below Philips's, and chased two of our row-galleys until they were forced ashore between Dobbs's Ferry and Tarry-Town, at or near which town the ships of war came to, and kept a constant fire for about one hour at our row-galleys, and supposes them destroyed.

I remain yours,

PETER SCHUYLER.

To Peter R. Livingston, President Provincial Congress, Fishkill.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 28, 1776.]

Fishkill, October 16, 1776.

SIR: The Convention were honoured with yours of the 2d instant, enclosing some resolves relative to Surgeons in the army, and urging the necessity of a full representation at Congress.

If by a full representation, nothing more is intended than such a number of Delegates from every State as will entitle each of them to a vote, this Convention hopes that the recommendation is complied with by this State. They have always directed so many gentlemen to remain at Philadelphia as will answer that purpose; if on the other hand, it is expected that all the Delegates of this State should attend this Convention, though fully satisfied of the propriety of such a requisition, must beg the Congress to excuse their non-attendance at present, the critical situation of this State, equally endangered by open and secret enemies, rendering it extremely improper to deprive the Convention of the assistance of any gentlemen whose abilities may be of service to it, at least till the army is arranged, and measures are taken to form and establish some more permanent Government than we now enjoy. These considerations, we flatter ourselves, will have some weight with Congress, and not only induce them to admit our excuse for not permitting such of our Delegates as are now here to attend at Philadelphia, but to defer any matter in which this State is particularly interested, when the general cause of America will safely admit of such delay, till they are more fully represented.

Doctor John Jones, Samuel Bard, and Malachi Treat, were appointed by this Convention to examine all Surgeons and Surgeon's Mates that entered into the service of this State. No warrant or commission have been given to any in that capacity, unless they produced a certificate of their examination signed by at least two of those gentlemen, setting forth that they were fully qualified to discharge their duty in their stations, excepting a few late instances, when they could not be obtained by reason of these gentlemen being dispersed in different parts of the country and could not attend, in which case five or six have been admitted on the examination of one only.

Am, respectfully, your very humble servant,
PETER R. LIVINGSTON, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GENERALS SCHUYLER AND CLINTON.

Fishkill, October 10, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Committee of Safety of this State to inform your Excellency that yesterday three of the enemy's frigates passed the obstructions opposite Mount Washington, and got up Hudson's river; that we have made from time to time such large drafts from the Militia of the four Counties adjoining that river, that the remaining well-affected are reduced to a small number; and most of the disaffected in this State are on the east side of Hudson's river. A Committee specially appointed for the purpose, by the Convention of this State, are sitting daily to frustrate their machinations; and several who had enlisted, or engaged to enlist with the enemy, have been discovered, apprehended, and are sent to the westward. Many perhaps remain undiscovered. Should the enemy and the disaffected be able to concert measures so as to form a junction of the latter with a party from on board the ships in the river, the Committee of Safety are apprehensive of the want of a very speedy assistance without a diminution of the main army, and have therefore taken the liberty to despatch a copy of the enclosed resolution to each of the Counties therein mentioned, and have directed me to request that your Excellency would be pleased to give such directions as in case of necessity may afford the most speedy succour.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Fishkill, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Three of the enemy's ships of war having passed our fortifications near King's Bridge, and proceeded up Hudson's river within a few miles of the Highlands, and from the number of disaffected persons in this and Westchester County, we have reason to apprehend they meditate the landing some troops in this neighbourhood, and by that means give those deluded wretches an opportunity of joining them, and thereby forming a body superiour to the few well-affected Militia, who are not drafted into the service.

The zealous attachments of your Militia to the common cause of America, and the readiness with which they stepped forth to the assistance of this State, when called upon on a late occasion, renders any arguments unnecessary to induce them to hold themselves in readiness to come to our aid on the shortest notice, when requested.

Resolved, That Letters be written to the Commanding Officer of the Counties of Fairfield and Litchfield, in the State of Connecticut, informing him of the reasons that we have to apprehend insurrections in this State, if the measures of the disaffected should be seconded by the enemy, who are now in Hudson's river, and requesting that they will hold their Militia in readiness to lend us every necessary assistance in case of such an event.

Resolved, That a copy of the above Resolution be sent to his Excellency Governour Trumbull, and that he be requested to order the same to be carried into effect.

COMFORT SANDS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Some time ago I applied to the Convention for a Committee of the Convention to join with me in a settlement of a large account with Mr. Abraham Livingston, upon which Mr. Evert Bancker and Mr. John Brown were appointed, but as those gentlemen are both absent, and Mr. Livingston now waiting, I beg the Convention will appoint two other gentlemen immediately, authorized with me to settle the account finally, which will greatly forward the publick accounts.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most humble servant,
COMFORT SANDS.

To P. R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

HUBERT OSTRANDER TO CHARLES DE WITT.

Hurley, October 10, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the resolves of Congress, the Committee of Hurley have purchased three guns and one cartridge-box, amount £7 9s. If the Congress should think proper to pay the money for those guns whilst you are there, the Committee beg the favour of you to receive it for them, and send it up when an opportunity offers.

I am, very respectfully, sir, by order of the Committee, your most obedient servant,

HUBERT OSTRANDER, Chairman.

To Charles De Witt, Esq., in Congress convened at Fishkills.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Last evening I received Mr. Henry B. Livingston's letter by your order, concerning the baggage of Colonel Dayton's regiment to come down, and part of Colonel Elmore's to go up from the Flats. I shall send off the batteaus this evening, and load them light on that occasion. I have purchased as much flour as will load them this trip, and am in hopes by the time they come back, to have as much more as to load, and I believe will not want a barrel of flour from Albany this fall, so that the Deputy Commissary-General gives the same price here that he does to the Albany merchants.

As to the carpenters, I have been with Kooman and Van De Bogart, two bosses that have been up this summer, but are unwell, and have sent in other men to try to get twenty hands, and am afraid won't be able to get them, as mostly all of them that have been up are unwell with some disorder or another. I would be glad to know if twelve or fifteen won't do, and how long they are to stay. I have partly agreed with a man for the ground to build the barracks upon; it's just outside of the town, and water near and plenty. I now just wait your answer how much of the ground I must take, and in what manner the deed must be wrote, in whose name, the plan of the barracks, whether two or three story high, and when I must begin to take down the old fort. There is wood enough and stone for the foundation. I have engaged all the bricks in town for the chimneys.

I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

H. GLEN.

To Major-General Ph. Schuyler, Albany.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, October 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of yesterday's date I received last evening about six o'clock, with the letter enclosed for Colonel Dayton, which I sent off about two hours after I received it, by express. By the best calculation I can make since the batteau-men have been gone for the baggage of the New-Jersey regiment, under the command of Colonel Dayton, I expect the regiment here about Monday, and you may depend on it I shall have the carriages ready for their baggage the moment they arrive; so I expect they will stay here a few hours only, to victual them. As to spades or shovels, there is none to be had. Six crow-bars I shall send you this day.

I have purchased two acres of ground for the barracks, and have carried almost all the timber and stone of our old fort to the place I intend building the barracks; but the Militia being ordered up disappoints me entirely of the carpenters and masons, so that I have not one. I was to begin to-morrow. I shall get some more materials ready while the carpenters and masons are gone, such as lime and boards, &c. I was in a fine way with the barracks, had not this alarm come; but it seems this is the scene of war. I am sorry to hear of our bad success, that our fleet is much shattered and some lost, but still hope for the best. Should the matter turn out so that there is no occasion for the Militia, you will remember I have no carpenters or masons to carry on the barracks here.

I remain, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
H. GLEN.

To Major-General Schuyler, at Saratoga.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, October 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Since the junction of the galleys with the rest of your formidable armada on Lake Champlain, nothing has occurred in my department worthy of troubling you about, and from the present appearance of things, Mars will have little to do above Split-Rock this fall.

I take notice of the winds. My American standard, erected upon my citadel, informs me at once which way they blow, and I keep my people busy at such work as I apprehend will conduce to the publick service. If we have done little, our force could do no more.

If I am not mistaken, I understood from you and General St. Clair, that it was intended two or three companies should be stationed here this winter. You were pleased to approve of some small essays of buildings I was making. I have, with a few carpenters and other tradesmen, erected a sufficient number of convenient barracks (when finished) for the men proposed to be stationed here. This you will find more proper than attempting to repair the barracks in the old fort, which could not be effected without many hands and much labour, and the party stationed in the old fort it would not have been secure, with the works in their present ruins.

I have had a few nails from you; perhaps we shall need no more. We have consumed some boards from a saw-mill which I got repaired and carried on with my own men. Some more will be necessary. Your army and fleet have got four thousand feet from the mill. After the present week you may have at least two thousand feet a week from there, to supply you at Head-Quarters. The expense will be very trifling. I hope my conduct in this business will meet your approbation. I know you have daily matters of consequence to transact, and are too frequently troubled with affairs of little moment. My applications generally fall among the latter. I am going to reform. They shall really be very seldom.

Wood is necessary: wood must be cut; and had the last axes sent me been worth a farthing, I should not have desired my Ensign yesterday to call for more. Colonel Lewis some time since sent eighteen. I got them helved. They flinch at the first attack. Nothing can be done with them. If I could have twelve more, without distressing you at Head-Quarters, I would be glad of it. If that would put you to any inconvenience, there are some smiths of this regiment, who came from Skenesborough, and are now at Ticonderoga, if they were sent here with a little steel and iron, all will be well.

I am pleased to hear part of New-York is burnt. I hope we shall have intelligence that the rest of that nest of Tories, and sink of American villany, has shared the same fate. That cursed town from first to last has been ruinous to the common cause.

It was generally deemed that Ticonderoga was much more healthy than Crown Point. There are no less than one hundred and forty sick present of this regiment, besides those sent to Fort George. They are almost all ill of the fever and ague. I hope they will soon be well. The northwester I presume will brace them up.

The bakers want some casks to pack their biscuit in for the fleet. Forty or fifty barrels ought to be sent them as soon as possible.

I am, honoured sir, with the greatest respect and regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

To General Gates.

P. S. I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you come down in the next galley. A few days' notice would be very agreeable.

P. S. Extra. I must acquiesce in Pope's doctrine "whatever is, is right." The tin-man was sick first; he got well enough to make some canisters; a few were sent me by the Captain of the first galley, but really he carried them off. I suppose they will give some of the enemy their quietus, if our fleet should be attacked. The tin-man is got sick again. In short, I begin to believe that bag-shot will do almost as well as canister-shot. Should any party of the enemy pay me a visit, I shall give them a few solid ball in the bargain. Yours, &c., T. HARTLEY.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Valcour, October 10, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 3d instant was delivered me the 7th by Captain Premier. I am greatly obliged to you for the attention paid to us, and the number of &c., as sent us, which were greatly wanted.

I am much surprised so little attention is paid to us by the good people below. I should have imagined two hundred seamen could have been sent us in three or four months, after they were so pressingly wrote for. I make not the least doubt there has been the greatest industry used at Ty in fitting out the fleet. I am glad to hear the other galley is so forward. I expect to see her the first fair wind. The clothing which is arrived is a sufficient supply of the kind. We much want one hundred pair shoes and hose, one hundred watch-coats, fifty pair breeches, and twenty blankets and hats, or caps. We are victualled for about ten days.

You may depend I shall do nothing of consequence without consulting General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth, both of whom I esteem judicious, honest men, and good soldiers. We cannot at present determine how long it will be requisite to remain here. It may depend on the intelligence we may receive. We shall not return one minute sooner than is prudent and necessary. I have received no late intelligence from the northward; the loss of two small canoes (all we had) has prevented my sending out small parties. I have wrote Colonel Trumbull to send me three or four, which may be procured at Ty or at Crown Point.

I am of opinion with you respecting the battery building at Point-à-Cole, that the enemy are acting on the defensive. They are at the same time exerting themselves to augment their navy; and if they hear in time that Lord Howe is in possession of New-York, they will doubtless attempt a junction with him. If they think it practicable, their fleet, I make no doubt, in the course of this month will be very formidable, if not equal to ours.

I have taken two four-pounders from the Liberty for the Trumbull, and three of her small guns. There is others at Crown Point suitable for her, and Colonel Hartley may be supplied with large ones for his castle, from Ty. The schooner goes up for provisions; I wish she may be immediately despatched back. Her guns may be ready when she returns; at present she does not want.

I am extremely glad you have represented to Congress and General Schuyler the absolute necessity of augmenting our navy on the lake. It appears to me to be an object of the utmost importance. I hope measures will be immediately taken for that purpose. There is water between Crown Point and Point-aux-Fer for vessels of the largest size. I am of opinion that row-galleys are of the best construction, and cheapest for this lake. Perhaps it may be well to have one frigate of thirty-six guns; she may carry eighteen pounders on the lake, and will be superiour to any vessel that can be built at and floated from St. John's. Carpenters ought to be immediately employed to cut timber and plank, and three hundred set at work at Skenesborough, the 1st of February. Of these matters I hope we shall have time to confer hereafter.

General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth join me in affectionate compliments.

I am, with great esteem and regard, dear General, your obedient and humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

P. S. If you have read Price's pamphlet, sent you by Mr. Franklin, I will take the loan of it a favour. B. A.

ADDRESS TO THE ASSEMBLY OF CONNECTICUT.

To the General Assembly of the State of CONNECTICUT,
now sitting in NEW-HAVEN:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: In this day of general calamity, when we are surrounded with enemies at home and abroad, when our all is at stake, and the sons of America, one and all, are loudly called upon to stand forth in defence of their most invaluable privileges, I say in such a day as this we might reasonably expect that there would be no hesitation in the breast of any man; but immediately on the call of our rulers, each one would strive to appear the most forward in going forth to serve his country; but, alas! fatal experience proves the contrary. When his Honour the Governour issued his orders for the Militia to march to New-York, he, at the same time, strongly invited the gentlemen householders to join them, which invitation had but little effect, for sure I am that but very few, if any, of those gentlemen were ever seen in New-York. And what was the reason? Because the law of the State did not oblige them to go. One had been a Justice of the Peace under his late Majesty; another had wore a Captain's commission till he was near forty years of age; another had been to college; and another had been a constable; and all had some apology to make, whereby to excuse themselves from going into the service. These and many other important reasons hindered thousands from going into the war from the State of Connecticut.

But as I am best acquainted with my own town, I will state the matter as near according to truth as I can. Of the Militia that lately went to New-York there was about one hundred and forty, and much the greater part of them were men of little property. Of those other gentlemen that stayed at home, more than one hundred under fifty years of age, all men of interest, and pray what have they done to defend it? Why, they paid their rates, and may be have given forty shillings to encourage men to enlist; but what is that compared with his poor neighbour, who is called forth when in the midst of his business, has no money, receives but twenty shillings, and that advance pay, not as a bounty, obliged to go and leave all his affairs running to ruin? I ask, are these things equal and just? No. Surely no man of common sense will pretend they are; and as this is a war far different in its nature and consequences from any that ever was in America, I pray that the burdens of it may be more equally borne, that every man from sixteen to sixty might be obliged to bear an equal part, ministers only excepted, which I imagine would invigorate the poor soldier, strengthen our army, and be the means of establishing peace and harmony in the State; which is the hearty wish of

A MILITIA-MAN.

WILLIAM BARTLETT TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Beverly, October 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I once more take the liberty to write your Excellency, which at this time when you are so deeply engaged against our unnatural enemies, would gladly omit did I not think it my duty; therefore beg you to excuse it.

I wrote your Excellency some time since concerning those prizes taken by Commodore Manly, viz: the ordnance brigantine Nancy, ship Concord, and ship Jenny. General Mifflin having received a part of each cargo, agreeable to your order, without any price being stipulated, prevents their being settled, and the poor captors are kept out of their money, some of which being in the army while their families are here almost suffering for want of the necessaries of life. Your Excellency's answer I received with the greatest pleasure, in which you informed me you would order General Mifflin to have a valuation made upon those goods and transmitted me in order for settlement, but have not as yet received it. Beg your Excellency will excuse me, and not receive this as dictating. As I well know your Excellency to be full of humanity, am well assured it would have been done long since had not your time been taken up in matters of more and greater importance.

If your Excellency will please to order me to charge the United States for the coals out of ship Jenny at the same rate the remainder was sold for, being about eleven dollars per chaldron, that ship may be settled.

Your Excellency was pleased to appoint or have appointed a committee to appraise the ordnance stores. They have presented their bill to me for payment, but have put it off until I should receive your Excellency's orders, they having charged one hundred pounds lawful money for their trouble.

When your Excellency finds it convenient to have transmitted me the value received out of ship Concord, and the valuation of the ordnance stores, with orders for settlement, beg you to give me orders to draw for what money I may want, together with what remains in my hands, to be sufficient to pay the captors. Your Excellency may rely on my fidelity in not drawing for any more than will be sufficient for that purpose.

Captain Bradford, of Boston, who has superseded me in my agency, says he has orders to settle with all the old agents. Beg your Excellency's orders with respect to it.

I shall forever acknowledge with gratitude to your Excellency that honour you was pleased to confer on me in appointing me agent for this department, and hope have transacted the business to your Excellency's satisfaction. The reflection joined to the impeachment which is generally implied or at least understood by a dismissal from any office under Government, has, I confess, given me very sensible pain. If your Excellency thinks me capable or worthy of being reinstated in the office of agency for this department, hope shall do honour in my station, and shall ever acknowledge the favour with the greatest gratitude.

Hope that Being who governs all things, both in heaven and in earth, will preserve and protect you from falling into the hands of those unnatural enemies, and that you may be the means under Him of driving them back to their native land, ashamed.

Wishing your Excellency all that happiness that can be enjoyed in this life, beg leave to subscribe myself your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM BARTLETT.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, near New-York.

JOHN BRADFORD TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Boston, October 10, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to introduce to you Samuel Horlock, and Livingston, Esqrs., who were lately taken on their passage from Jamaica to London. They are gentlemen who have been from the beginning warm partisans in our favour. They will give you a particular account of the unhappy situation they at present are in, by their effects being captured and themselves prevented from pursuing their voyage to England.

I flatter myself those gentlemen will meet with every indulgence from the honourable Congress which they can consistently grant them, and more they don't wish for.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

J. BRADFORD.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., Philadelphia.

BENJAMIN DAVIS, JR., TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Boston Prison, October 10, 1776.

SIR: My present confinement to close prison, with the very severe restrictions laid on me, by which I am debarred the privilege of pen, ink, paper, or candle, and ordered to be kept in an apartment by myself, and that no person whatever be suffered to converse with me but in presence of the keeper of the prison, I understand was in consequence of an order to the jailor, by a number of gentlemen who it is said act as Councillors for the Massachusetts-Bay. Never has any reasons been assigned to me for said restrictions, although it is now upwards of fifty days since it took place. It is almost eleven weeks since my first commitment to close prison in a felon's apartment. As I have no particular acquaintance with the gentlemen who consented to the aforementioned order, I therefore take the liberty to address you on the subject, assuring you that I have not the least intention of offending you in what I shall offer.

I had prepared a petition to Council in order to have the same preferred, but when I came to consider of a direction necessary to it, I was greatly difficulted in my mind, and finally found myself obliged to give over all thoughts of it, and came to a determination that if no other just method could be devised for obtaining my just liberty, to content myself with my present situation, grievous as it is. Every deviation from what a person knows to be truth, is a crime of so high a nature as the thought is sufficient to make a sober person tremble; therefore I dare not, if I act consistent with the principles of my profession, act a double part, which would be the case, was I, in order to obtain some temporary relief, to model and dress up a petition in such form as might be acceptable to the Council, and at the same time so conceal my true sentiments as to deceive them.

There is a proverb that it will be well for me to attend to, as it is applicable to one in my present situation: "The fear of man bringeth a snare." I consider myself now to be wholly in the power of the people, and that there is no legal authority for me to apply to for relief. The present distressed situation I am in, and the method pointed out to me in order to get relieved, are such as makes it necessary for me to be much on my guard, lest I get ensnared. I am bound by God's law to "be subject to the higher power;" and I have much more to dread from the disobedience of his commands, than I can have to fear from those who may be offended at me because I cannot in conscience be "subject" to an authority founded on the late Declaration of Independence. I am very sorry I am placed in such a situation, as though designed to compel me to take such a step for my enlargement as would be in me a breach of God's law. To compel me to act or do, contrary to the dictates of my conscience, any one thing that shall carry with it any authority founded on the Declaration of Independence, until the same be recognized and fully settled so as to become my duty to be "subject," would be the same, and I see no odds, as if I was in Spain or Portugal and committed to the Inquisition as a heretick, and they were to inflict on me the most cruel tortures in order to compel me to deny the faith. I think my conduct must appear in several glaring instances to be consistent with the aforementioned principles; as I never laid any claim to my property on board the ship I was taken in, the value being at least fifteen hundred pounds sterling, nor do I make application for the property which I left in my store in Boston, in March past, worth about a thousand pounds sterling, which goods I am told are sequestered. It is from this same principle that I do not think myself at liberty to sue for any debts due to me, of which I have a large sum outstanding. I hold myself obligated, and stand ready to pay all I owe; and if I was to be sued for a debt, shall think it very unjust to make a plea against the jurisdiction of any court, in order to evade payment of a just debt, but should think myself bound to pay the same, with all costs that should arise.

I profess myself a liege subject of his Majesty King George III., founded on this principle, that all who are born within his dominions or realm he has a claim upon as his rightful and lawful subjects; that the Provinces and Colonies in North America make a part of his realm. I was born in this Province; of course allegiance is due from me to him, nor can it be dissolved but by his consent, or by a revolution taking place within the Kingdom, or the Government fixed and established, in which case it would be dissolved. I am bound by God's law to "honour the King," and to be subject to the legislative authority of Great Britain as "the higher power." I cannot, in any way, be aiding or assisting in any plan or scheme for bringing about any revolution in the Empire, upon any pretence whatsoever, without breaking a positive law of God. But whenever any revolution does take place within the Kingdom, and the Government becomes fixed and established, be the cause that brings it about what it may, I shall then be bound in conscience to be "subject" to its authority, for they will then become the "higher power" in the Apostle's sense.

When I consider that I have for a long time enjoyed one of the greatest of earthly blessings, under the mildness and lenity of the British Government, namely, liberty of conscience, gratitude, aside from any other consideration, ought to lead me to speak affectionately of the King, and to be strongly attached to the British constitution, and to be waiting for an opportunity of living in such a part of his dominions where I may again enjoy that great blessing uninterrupted. However unpopular these principles of mine may be, I think they never can be hurtful in any society where there is settled Government. All who are led to obey the Gospel, and hold the aforesaid principles, are also bound by the command of the same Gospel to "do good unto all men," and to "live peaceably with all men," and to be "subject to the higher power;" such will be the peaceable and quiet inhabitants, and will have from Kings and all in authority, "praise" for their "well doing." As I would not wish to give offence to any, I have avoided petitioning the Council, as I should have been under a necessity of denying their jurisdiction, which might have offended them, and I would not choose to run the risk of its consequences; especially as I am not called upon by the Council, in any way that makes it necessary for me to open my principles at all risks. I see no harm in letting all those gentlemen who ordered my imprisonment and restrictions, read this letter in their private capacities. I am not desirous of being abroad, or to appear in publick with any view of busying myself to make proselytes to my principles of government; or to be spying out what is doing in the town, or gaining information of any plans, or schemes carrying on, and so to be an informer, or "busybody in other men's matters;" such conduct would be against the spirit of my profession, and would be as unbecoming as to be an informer against my neighbour, who may be concerned in an illicit trade; it is enough for me if I can have the privilege of enjoying my own sentiments.

I was taken in July past, by two armed vessels belonging to this place. I was bound from Halifax to New-York on my lawful business, and was brought to Boston a prisoner of war; I consider myself now in that light, and know no reason why I am more severely dealt by than others of his Majesty's subjects, who unfortunately fell into the hands of the Americans, and became their prisoners. I have not since March last looked upon myself as an inhabitant of this Province, or of the town of Boston; I left it with my family with a determination of settling in some other part of his Majesty's dominions, and shall think it a great privilege, when I may be indulged with the liberty of prosecuting my lawful designs, till which time I shall be glad to be released from my present grievous imprisonment, and to take lodgings in town; or if my son, together with myself and servant, could be exchanged for any prisoners in the hands of his Excellency General Howe, at New-York, it would be agreeable to me.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most humble servant,
BENJ^A DAVIS, Jun.

To the Hon. James Bowdoin, Esq.

Boston, October 10, 1776.

A letter from a gentleman at Providence, to his friend in this town, dated October 5th, has the following paragraph:

"The two Continental frigates here have fallen down, got their guns, and will be ready to sail in ten days. One carries twelve eighteen-pounders, fourteen twelve-pounders, eight nine-pounders; the whole thirty-four. The other, twenty-eight guns; their names are the Warren and Providence. Captain Hopkins commands one, and Whipple the other."

COUNCIL OF VIRGINIA TO THEIR DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

In Council, Williamsburg, October 10, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: Having this moment received from Mr. Calloway, manager of the lead mines, a return of what lead he has on hand, and the post being just ready to set out, I have only time to inform you, that there are now ten tons of lead, which are ready to be delivered for the use of the Continental army. The quantity would have been greater, if there had not been lately a considerable demand for supplying our army sent on the Indian expedition. By Christmas, or perhaps sooner, we may be able to spare as much more.

I should be glad to be informed in what manner you would choose to have it conveyed. If wagons come from Philadelphia, Mr. Calloway will have orders to load them, but as this country is obliged to make great remittances to Pennsylvania, for goods supplied from thence, and at a price far beyond what such goods have usually borne, it is reasonable that we should embrace every opportunity of enabling ourselves to bear so heavy a burthen. If, therefore, I should give orders to send the lead by wagons belonging to this country, I should be glad to have instructions where, and to whom they are to deliver their loads.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

P. HENRY, President.

To the Honourable the Virginia Delegates at Congress, Philadelphia.

THOMAS JEFFERSON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Williamsburg, October 11, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: Your favour of the 30th, together with the resolutions of Congress of the 26th ult., came safe to hand. It would argue great insensibility in me, could I receive with indifference so confidential an appointment from your body. My thanks are a poor return for the partiality they have been pleased to ascertain for me. No cares for my own person, nor yet for my private affairs, would have induced one moment's hesitation to accept the charge; but circumstances very peculiar in the situation of my family, such as neither permit me to leave nor to carry it, compel me to ask leave to decline a service so honourable, and, at the same time, so important to the American cause. The necessity under which I labour, and the conflict I have undergone for three days, during which I could not determine to dismiss your messenger, will, I hope, plead my pardon with Congress; and I am sure there are too many of that body to whom they may with better hopes confide this charge, to leave them under a moment's difficulty in making a new choice.

I am, sir, with the most sincere attachment to your honourable body and the great cause they support, their and your most obedient, humble servant,

TH. JEFFERSON.

To the Honourable John Hancock.

P. S. The bearer, Henry Frick, being in want of money, has a warrant from General Lewis on the Paymaster for six dollars, with which he must therefore be charged.

EDMUND RANDOLPH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Williamsburg, October 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I congratulate your Excellency, as a friend to the reputation of Virginia, and the interests of the Continent, that Colonel Harrison is again restored to the councils of America. During his absence at the northward, he had been appointed one of our Privy Council, but refused to qualify as such. This afforded him an opportunity to vindicate himself from those malicious insinuations which first brought about his disgrace: for he informed the Assembly, that his honour, which had been so deeply wounded on a former occasion, forbid him to accept any office whatever, until the stigma, impliedly fixed upon his character by recalling him home, was wiped away.

His defence, if that could be called a defence the object of which was to efface unworthy impressions made by accusers, who whispered poison, and dared not show themselves in open day, was spirited, without any degree of bravadoing, and satisfactory even to those who were prejudiced against him. With this happy revolution in their opinion of an honest and able statesman, the Senate and House of Delegates, in the whole amounting to seventy-four members, have sent him back to Congress, in the room of Mr. Jefferson, who has resigned, with a ballot of sixty-nine to five. These five are supposed to be the remains of a certain party not unknown to your Excellency.

Nor is this all: they further thanked him for his past services, nem. con. In short, his late disappointment has served to raise his credit to a higher pitch.

Our soldiery are in a situation truly distressing to themselves and the country. To themselves, as they are now labouring under severe autumnal disorders, many of which prove mortal; and to the country, as we are apprehensive that the upland people, on whom we chiefly depend for recruits, should be disgusted with the service in the lower parts, which engender such maladies. From what cause the present general sickness proceeds I know not, but Williamsburg, which has hitherto been proverbial for general health, is now notorious for the contrary.

The Assembly talk out of doors upon the subject of new levies; but, for God's sake, from whence are they to be obtained? I hear that our Second Regiment, whose term of enlistment expired in September last, has little prospect of renewal. An ungenerous neglect prevails in the upper Counties concerning the defence of the lower. To be ingenuous, I am afraid we can get neither clothing nor arms for any more troops.

I am, dear sir, your Excellency's much obliged, affectionate servant,

EDM. RANDOLPH.

To His Excellency General Washington, New-York.

Williamsburg, Va., October 11, 1776.

On Monday last, the General Assembly of this Commonwealth met at the Capitol, agreeable to adjournment and the plan of government adopted at the late Convention, when the Hon. Archibald Cary, Esq., was elected Speaker of the Upper House, or Senate, and the Hon. Edmund Pendleton, Esq., Speaker of the House of Delegates.

The honourable House of Delegates have been pleased to continue the officers of the late Convention to be officers to their House; and the Senate have chosen John Pendleton, Esq., to be their Clerk.

Colonel Benjamin Harrison, of Berkeley, was yesterday chosen a Delegate to represent this State in General Congress, in the room of Thomas Jefferson, Esq.; and James Mercer, Esq., a member of the Privy Council, in the room of Colonel Harrison.

Williamsburg, October 11, 1776.

The gentlemen, soldiers of the First Company of the Second Georgia Battalion are desired to repair to Louisa Court-house, by the 15th day of November, which I have appointed the place of rendezvous.

ROBERT WARD, Captain.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL BOND.

Annapolis, October 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By Mr. Norris you will receive three hundred pounds, to be laid out in the purchase of arms, blankets, and linen for tents, for the use of Captain Harris's company. One hundred pounds for the use of the Harford Greens, has been transmitted to Mr. Garrett. The Harford Greens being first made up, will be first entitled to the arms and blankets lying now at Harford, deducting first about forty blankets for the use of the Hospital here. If they leave any, as from their being well furnished with these articles themselves there is likelihood they will, Captain Harris may be furnished with an order for them, if he stands in need. You may go as high as twenty shillings for good new blankets, and three shillings six pence for country linen fit for tents, of which one will be allowed for every six men. Twenty-one and a half yards will make a tent, if the linen is a yard wide, and Johnson, at Baltimore-Town, will make them in a few days after sending linen.

You will hereby receive an order in favour of Captain Harris for as many cartouch-boxes, belts, camp-kettles, canteens, or wooden bottles, haversacks, and knapsacks, as he will want for his company, and when they are ready to march, on sending a line acquainting this Board of their readiness, they will receive marching orders. It has not been in our power to purchase linen and blankets, and we are in hopes you can, or we would not have given you this trouble. Expedition must be made use of, or Captain Harris will not get up in time. If Mr. Kean will take a reasonable price per day, his wagon may carry the baggage to Christeen. When the troops arrive at Philadelphia, the Congress are to take care of them. When you have expended the money, please to render an account thereof to, gentlemen, yours, &c.

WILLIAM LUX TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The privateer Harlequin being now ready to sail, and Captain Benjamin Handy appointed commander, he now waits on you to obtain a new commission, the former one being in the name of Captain William Wolsey, and he being now on the Eastern Shore, we cannot procure it to return it to you, but we hereby engage and pledge our honours that it shall be returned immediately on his getting here, hoping you will not on that account detain our vessel, as she is now rather late for the Jamaica fleet, some of which we flatter ourselves with bringing in.

I am, in behalf of the concern, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM LUX.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

LUX AND BOWLEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We are favoured with your letter of the 5th instant. Mr. Stewart is now here, and we are making some cordage for him, and hope to accomplish the whole order in time for your vessels. We are well assured that we can furnish you on a greater certainty than any body else, and mean to do it, but we will not contract to deliver it to a certain day. The vessels now furnishing must be completed. We propose waiting on you some day next week, either Tuesday or Wednesday. In the mean time, we are, most respectfully, gentlemen, your obliged, obedient servants,

LUX & BOWLEY.

To the honourable Council of Safety, at Annapolis.

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JR.

Philadelphia, October 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Among the inconveniences of this busy scene, I esteem it not the least to be so often prevented from acknowledging the favours of my friends sooner than I do. It has been owing to much business that your letter of the 27th has not received an answer before now. I have the pleasure to acquaint you that in ranking the Captains of our Continental ships, the Congress have placed Captain Nicholson at the head, he being the first Captain. I wish it were in my power to give you a satisfactory answer about the building another frigate. Hitherto nothing has been determined on this subject, the Committee having been prevented by an infinite multiplicity of other business; and to the same cause has it been owing that no orders have been sent concerning the frigate Virginia. I have no doubt but that another frigate will soon be directed, and that the builder of greatest merit will be preferred. It would give me the greatest pleasure to hear that the Virginia was ready for sea, and I am happy in being satisfied that the managers of this business in Baltimore will not lose a moment in effecting so salutary a work. I suppose a want of anchors will be the greatest obstruction, as I take it for granted no time will be lost in getting the guns down from Mr. Hughes's works, and having the carriages made. I shall be glad to have an exact state of the frigate, and what she wants to complete her. I refer you to the papers for news, and am, sir, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD HENRY LEE.

To Samuel Purviance, Jr., Esq., Baltimore.

WILLIAM ELLERY TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Philadelphia, October 11, 1776.

SIR: The President of Congress hath sent you, by express, all the resolves which have passed since my last, which he had in charge to communicate to you. You will receive by this post a letter from the committee to procure clothing for the army, enclosing two resolves of Congress on that subject. I hope the General Assembly will take effectual care that our quota of new levies shall be in the field in season, well equipped at all points, and well officered; and that suitable persons in each County be appointed to collect clothing immediately, agreeable to the request of the aforesaid committee.

A naval expedition is on foot, which if carried into execution, will be very advantageous to the United States, and to the officers and seamen in the navy. If the Cabot should not be in port, the Marine Committee have ordered that one of the frigates should be employed in it.

Commodore Hopkins, in a letter to that Committee, hath informed them that one of the frigates could soon be got ready, and intimated that he could man her with drafts from our troops. I hope that the General Assembly will countenance this measure, and give every other assistance in their power to forward the sailing of the fleet.

On the 6th instant, General Lee arrived here, and on the 8th set out for the camp on the Heights of Harlem. He brings the good news, that the Carolinians had utterly defeated the Cherokee tribe of Indians, had burnt their towns, killed two hundred and fifty of their warriors, got seventy-five scalps, and that the remainder of that tribe had fled to the Mississippi. This expedition, the sickness of the troops, and the strong garrison at Augustine had prevented an attempt upon East-Florida. That the garrison at Augustine consisted of eighteen hundred German and one thousand British troops. That the Sphinx and Raven were at Georgia, and that the Governour of that State had ordered all the stock on the islands on that coast to be moved off to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy. The Scorpion, Falcon, and Cruiser, are at Cape Fear.

The Committee have not returned from Ticonderoga. By the last accounts from thence, they expected to be attacked very soon, and were preparing to give the enemy a proper reception. I saw General Mifflin lately, and he informed that in the fight the day after the enemy took possession of New-York, by the best accounts he could get, and from the appearance of the field of battle, they lost between four and five hundred killed and wounded; and that we lost about one hundred killed and wounded. In the first part of this account, Jared Hopkins, son of the minister in Newport, who saw the fight, agrees with the General, but says, that he saw our killed and wounded, and that they were much short of that number. They both, too, agree that some of our men who had behaved shamefully the day before fought gallantly there, and that with equal numbers we drove the enemy from the field. I believe they think the Americans will fight, notwithstanding we have retreated and retreated.

General Washington, as I am told, played off a pretty manœuvre the other day. Determined to remove the grain and the furniture of the houses from Harlem, he drew out into the field a party of seventeen hundred. The enemy turned out as many. They approached within three hundred yards and looked at each other. While they were thus opposed front to front, our wagons carried off the grain and furniture. When this was accomplished, both parties retired within their lines. It is said that our men preserved very good faces. It would be of use to draw out our men in battle array frequently, to let them look the enemy in the face, and have frequent skirmishes with them.

General Washington in a letter of the 8th instant, informed Congress that two forty-gun and one twenty-gun ship with some tenders had passed the chevaux-de-frise and Fort Washington without interruption or damage, and between the latter and Fort Constitution. How the chevaux-de-frise came to be insufficient, I know not; but I am afraid that the enemy's ships will cut off the communication by the North River.

Thus, sir, I have given you all the news I can recollect, with a few observations. I wish I had more—I mean good news—to communicate, for it would give me great pleasure to gratify the Assembly. Whenever I shall receive any intelligence that is well authenticated, and I can be at liberty to transmit it, you may depend upon having it.

I continue to be, with great respect, your Honour's and the State's sincere friend and humble servant,

WM. ELLERY.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 15: Referred to Board of War.]

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 11, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform you that since my letter of the 8th and 9th instant, which I had the honour of addressing you, nothing of importance has occurred, except that the ships of war, which I then mentioned, in their passage up the river took a sloop that was at anchor off the mouth of Spiten Devil, and two of our row-galleys, which they out-sailed. The crews finding that they could not prevent them falling into the enemy's hands, run them near the shore and effected their own escape. From the intelligence I have received, the ships are now laying at Tarrytown, without having landed any men, which seemed to be apprehended by some, nor attempted any thing else. Their principal views in all probability are, to interrupt our navigation, and to receive such disaffected persons as incline to take part against us. The former they will effect beyond all question, and I fear that their expectations respecting the latter will be but too fully answered.*

October 12th. The enclosed copy of a letter received last night, from the Convention of this State, will show you the apprehensions they are under on account of the disaffected among them. I have ordered up part of the Militia from the Massachusetts, under General Lincoln, to prevent, if possible, the consequences which they suggest may happen, and which there is reason to believe the conspirators have in contemplation. I am persuaded that they are upon the eve of breaking out, and that they will leave nothing untried that will distress us and favour the designs of the enemy, as soon as their schemes are ripe for it.

October 13th. Yesterday the enemy landed at Frog's Point, about nine miles from hence, farther up the Sound. Their number we cannot ascertain, as they have not advanced from the point, which is a kind of island; but the water that surrounds it is fordable at low tide. I have ordered works to be thrown up at the passes from the point to the main. From the great number of sloops, schooners, and nine ships that went up the Sound in the evening full of men, and from the information of two deserters who came over last night, I have reason to believe that the greatest part of their army has moved upwards, or is about to do it, pursuing their original plan of getting in our rear, and cutting off our communication with the country. The grounds from Frog's Point are strong and defensible, being full of stone fences, both along the road and across the adjacent fields, which will render it difficult for artillery, or indeed a large body of foot, to advance in any regular order, except through the main road. Our men, who are posted on the passes, seemed to be in good spirits when I left them last night.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, October 10, 1776. }

SIR: We received from Mr. Tilghman an account of the enemy's ships having gone up the river, and have despatched expresses to General Schuyler and General Clinton, agreeable to your Excellency's request.

Nothing can be more alarming than the present situation of our State. We are daily getting the most authentic intelligence of bodies of men enlisted and armed in order to assist the enemy. We much fear that they, coöperating with the enemy, may seize such passes as will cut off all communication between the army and us, and prevent your supplies. We dare not trust any more of the Militia out of this County. We have called for some aid from the two adjoining ones; but beg leave to suggest to your Excellency the propriety of sending a body of men to the Highlands or Peekskill, to secure the passes and prevent insurrections, and overawe the disaffected. We suppose your Excellency has taken the necessary steps to prevent the landing of any men from the ships, should they be so inclined, as no reliance at all can be placed on the Militia of Westchester County.

We are, most respectfully, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servants. By order,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON, President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 9, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

The General positively forbids covering the bottoms of tents with earth, as, in a few days, that situation must render them totally unfit for service. The Commanding officer of each corps will take care to see that this order is strictly complied with in his own encampment. In order that the regiments may get out of tents as soon as possible, the Brigadiers may apply to the Quartermaster-General for boards, and under his direction employ the spare time of their men in building barracks, or huts, fit for winter use. These huts, or barracks, are to be built with regularity. The works of defence are not to be retarded by these buildings: they are to be advanced by the men off duty, if tools are to be had for them to work.

* October 11, 1776. There was a considerable movement among the British boats below. This afternoon, General Washington's pleasure-boat coming down the river with a fresh breeze, and a topsail hoisted, was supposed by the artillerists at Mount Washington to be one of the British tenders coming down; a twelve-pounder was discharged at her, which was so exactly pointed as unfortunately to kill three Americans, who were much lamented. The same day, several of General Lincoln's regiments arrived, two of which were posted on the North River.—Heath.

The respective Brigadiers are to inquire into the state of the ammunition of their brigades, and every Colonel is to have a box of spare cartridges to supply occasional deficiencies.

Edward Sherburne, Esq., is appointed Aid-de-Camp to General Sullivan, and is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

David Dexter, Esq., is appointed to act as Brigade-Major to the brigade under Colonel Lippett.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 10, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

If the weather is favourable to-morrow morning, the General purposes to visit the troops at their alarm-posts. Commanding officers of regiments, and others, are desired to make themselves well acquainted with their alarm-posts, and the best ways to them, and also with the ground in general, upon which they may be called to act, so as to avail themselves of every advantage. If officers do not acquire this knowledge, they will miss the best opportunity of distinguishing themselves and serving their country.

If there should be any bad weather, the greatest care is to be taken of the arms and ammunition; and officers must attend to it themselves, or from experience we know there will be great danger of their being unfit for action.

Whenever any Field officer is sick, leaves the camp, or by any other means becomes incapable of duty, his Brigade-Major is desired to signify it to the Adjutant-General; otherwise it is impossible to have the duty regularly done.

Daniel Murphey, of Captain Edward's Company, Third Pennsylvania Battalion; Thomas Dickens, of Captain Hobby's Company, Colonel Ritzema's Regiment; John Stone, of Captain Grubb's Company, Colonel Brodhead's Battalion; all having been tried by a Court Martial, whereof Colonel Weedon is President, and convicted of "desertion," are sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes each. The above Daniel Murphey having been convicted by the same Court-Martial of "enlisting into another Regiment," is sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes for that offence.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to be executed at the usual time and place.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 11, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

Colonel Ewing, Lieutenant-Colonel Penrose, Major Fitzgerald, Captains Thorne, Ballard, Packay, and Yates, to sit as a Court of Inquiry into the conduct of Colonel Van Cortlandt and Major Dey towards each other; to meet this afternoon, at three o'clock, at the Court-Martial room, and make report, as soon as possible, to the General. Brigade-Majors to give them immediate notice.

Talmadge, Esq., is appointed Brigade-Major to General Wadsworth, and is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

As there is an absolute necessity for the business of the army to be carried on with regularity, and to do this, that the officers of each department should have the regulation and direction of matters appertaining to their respective offices, in order that they may become amenable to the publick, or the Commander-in-Chief, when called upon, it is hereby directed by the General, that no horse or wagon shall be taken by any officer, of whatever rank, without an order from Head-Quarters, the Quartermaster-General, or Wagonmaster-General. But when either are wanted for regimental uses, the application shall go from the Commanding officer of the regiment, in writing, to the Quartermaster-General, or Wagonmaster-General, who will issue his orders therefor; and if wanted for the despatch of publick business, the application to be made by the Engineer in writing. All teams belonging to the publick, or in their pay, are to be delivered to the Quartermaster-General, registered, and under his direction.

The Quartermaster-General is to take especial care of all grain and hay belonging to the publick, and see that none of it is delivered but by his order; and as these articles are scarce, it is ordered, that all officers whose duty does not oblige them to be on horseback, dispose of the horses, or send them out of camp, immediately, as provender cannot be spared for them on any pretence.

No boards are to be taken for the use of any brigade or regiment without orders, nor delivered but by order of the Quartermaster-General, who is to make as equal a distribution among the regiments as may be, and see they are put to the best use possible, and with as little waste, as there may be difficulty in getting them.

Mutual complaints having been made by Mr. Fisk, the Engineer, and Mr. Kinsey, the Wagonmaster, against each other, a Court of Inquiry of three Captains and four Subs. from General McDougall's Brigade, to sit, and report the matter, with their opinion thereon, to meet to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock, at the Court-Martial room.

The General being accidentally prevented from going to the alarm-posts this morning, if the weather is fair he will visit the troops to-morrow morning, accompanied by the General Officers. He hopes the whole line will turn out as full as possible.

The time of the Fatigue-men going out is altered to eight o'clock instead of seven. The men are to breakfast before they go, as they are not to leave work on that account. The General hopes the officers will exert themselves to complete the works as fast as possible, that the men may be the sooner covered.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 12, 1776.

The General orders that one man from every mess be kept cooking till there are provisions dressed for three days. The butchers are also to keep killing.

RECRUITING INSTRUCTIONS.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 11, 1776.

SIR: You are immediately to inlist such of your regiment, or any other troops raised in the Province of Pennsylvania, as are able of body and willing to enter into the service of the United States of America, upon the following terms:

1st. You are not to inlist any but freemen, able of body, and under the age of fifty, carefully avoiding all persons labouring under any lameness or other defect of body prejudicial to the service. If any such persons, or any boys, or decrepit persons are brought into the service, the officer inlisting them will be chargeable with the expense they may be to the publick.

2dly. You are not to inlist any deserters from the army of the King of Great Britain, or persons of disaffected and suspicious character, the American service having already suffered greatly by the desertion of such persons.

3dly. You are to inlist men to serve during the continuance of the present war between Great Britain and the States of America, unless sooner discharged by proper authority.

4thly. The men inlisted by you are to be subject to the rules and articles for the government of the army published by Congress the 20th September, 1776, and are to sign those articles.

As an encouragement to such persons as shall inlist in the above service, you are authorized to engage, besides the pay and provisions now allowed:

1st. Each soldier shall receive twenty dollars bounty money, on being approved by a Major-General, a Brigadier-General, or Colonel-Commandant of a Brigade.

2dly. He shall also be entitled to one hundred acres of land at the expiration of his inlistment, and in case of his death in the service, his representatives will be entitled thereto.

When any person is inlisted, you are, as soon as convenient, to take him to some person duly authorized by the above articles, to take the oath there prescribed.

I am, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Edward Hand.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem, October 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I this morning received your favour of the 7th instant, and am to inform you that it is not in my power to supply you with a single nail, nor are they to be procured in Philadelphia, as General Mifflin tells me, who has just returned from thence. For want of them, we are building here huts of sods, logs, &c., to cover the troops, and which I am in hopes will make a tolerable good shift.

Since my letter of yesterday, nothing has occurred, and I have only to add, that I am, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

COLONEL REED TO MRS. REED.

Head-Quarters, October 11, 1776.

I wrote you some time ago, that I had acquainted Congress with my intention to resign my office of Adjutant-General. Every succeeding circumstance has confirmed this sentiment, and I hope ere long to hear that my successor is appointed. If my personal services were of such weight in the scale as to make it preponderate, no consideration would make me quit the service, but as I am of opinion that some person may be found more skilled in military matters, and of more temper to bear the rubs and obstacles which ignorance and imprudence are constantly throwing in my way, I think I may with a safe conscience resign it into other hands. To attempt to introduce discipline and subordination into a new army must always be a work of much difficulty, but where the principles of democracy so universally prevail, where so great an equality and so thorough a levelling spirit predominates, either no discipline can be established, or he who attempts it must become odious and detestable—a position which no one will choose. It is impossible for any one to have an idea of the complete equality which exists between the officers and men who compose the greater part of our troops. You may form some notion of it when I tell you that yesterday morning a Captain of Horse, who attends the General from Connecticut, was seen shaving one of his men on the parade near the house.

I have not yet any answer to my application, but expect it, as I have expressed myself of and to some people here with such freedom, after the affair of the 15th of last month, that I believe many of them wish me away.

You ask me what I propose to do. It is a difficult question to answer. My idea is, shortly, this: that if France or some other foreign Power does not interfere, or some feuds arise among the enemy's troops, we shall not be able to stand them next spring. If we keep our ground this fall, which we may do if a good supply of blankets and clothing can be had, and there is no disappointment in the provision to be made for the camp from the northward; but if the enemy should make a vigorous push, I would not answer for our success at any time. In the course of this winter it will be seen what expectations can be had of the interference of a foreign Power, in which event I have no doubt the liberties of America may be established on the most permanent footing. Should this happen, as I never meant to make arms a profession, my duty to you and my dear children will lead me to pursue that course of life which will contribute most to their and your happiness; for though I would wish to serve my country, and not spare myself in the work, I have not the least desire to sacrifice you and them to fame, even if I was sure to attain it. Should there be no such interference, my estate is no object of confiscation: my rank is not so high as to make me an example, and at all events, I have only to set out in the world anew.

The accounts I have from Philadelphia are very unfavourable. From what I can learn, there is a considerable party for absolute and unconditional submission. Jemmy Allen was here the other day, to discover I suppose what prospects we had, so that the party might take their measures accordingly. I fancy things did not please him, as a person must be in the secret to know the worst of our affairs. This letter, my dearest love, is written only for your own eye. I shall write to Mr. Cox, and give him what little news we have. I am happiest when I have none to send you, as I have so little expectation of sending you what is good. My most sanguine views do not extend further than keeping our ground here till this campaign closes. If the enemy inclines to press us, it is resolved to risk an engagement, for if we cannot fight them on this ground, we can on none in America. The ships are the only circumstance unfavourable to us here. We do not see or hear any thing from the enemy which indicates a speedy attack; but it is certain that if they intend it this fall, they must do it soon.

GENERAL WADSWORTH TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp near Harlem, October 11, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Yesterday I received your letter of the 22d of August, and am now to inform your Honour that previous to the arrival of the Militia I had sent recruiting officers into Connecticut, but the marching of the Militia in many places prevented the inlisting recruits. Soon after the arrival of the Militia, after advising with the Commander-in-Chief, I gave orders for inlisting from the Militia into the regiments in my brigade; but as they did not expect to be held for a long time, they soon grew uneasy and very few inlisted. At the time Major St. John arrived, one regiment of my brigade was in the Jerseys, and has remained there ever since, one was on Long-Island, and very soon the residue was sent there; on the retreat, for some days were in a very unsettled state; Major St. John was taken sick and returned home, so that none of the troops have been mustered since we arrived here. The pay abstracts have been called for and have heard of no objection, therefore believe no disadvantage will arise therefrom.

I herewith transmit to your Honour a return of my brigade, made the 4th instant, by which you will see the great number of sick, who are some of them in the Jerseys, some in camp in tents and huts, others scattered along the road as far as Norwalk, many of them very illy provided with covering, medicine, or even comfortable food for weak persons. Have with me at the lines five regiments of the brigade, and only one Surgeon's Mate present. Doctor Cogswell and Mate, of Colonel Silliman's regiment, gone home sick; Doctor Crocker, of Colonel Sage's regiment, gone out with the sick to Maroneck, his Mate sick in Jersey; Doctor Jewet, of Colonel Selden's regiment, dismissed, his Mate Norton gone home without leave; Doctor Potter, of Colonel Douglas's regiment, gone out sick, his Mate in camp; must, therefore, beg your kind interposition in making some provision for the sick, as well officers (who are many of them sick) as the soldiers, and were great sufferers, and extremely fatigued in the retreat from New-York, which provision if seasonably made, I cannot but think may have a happy tendency to encourage the inlisting the new army.

Am informed by Doctor Morgan he has wrote to your Honour to procure and forward some Hospital stores, to be delivered agreeable to his orders. Must beg if any are procured it may be put into the hands of some gentleman in whom confidence can be placed for the delivery, and that Doctor Morgan may not have the least concern with or about them.

I am, with great truth and regard, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
JAMES WADSWORTH, Jun.
To Hon. Governour Trumbull.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

October 11, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The enclosed I received last evening, under cover from our mutual good friend Mr. Gerry. The Tory interest is for General Schuyler. Walter Livingston is to be nominal contractor, and Philip Schuyler, Major-General, real contractor. That Livingston will take the contract, is now ascertained by his letter to me the 8th instant.

I am, with great esteem and affection, dear General, your most humble servant,
JOS. TRUMBULL.

General Lee is to be here this evening. He left Philadelphia the 8th.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO GENERAL GATES.

Heights of Harlem, October 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have at last received a letter from you, and am obliged to you for it, but I could not find the man from whom I was to receive all the intelligence. Another misfortune is that General Lee has been to the southward for several months past, so that I could not apply to him for any. He is expected here to-day. I expect our friend Gordon will be with you by the time this reaches you. The history of the enemy's landing on Long-Island, their making regular approaches to our weak lines, which a council of war declared untenable, and determined to evacuate, our excellent retreat from Long-Island, and the evacuation of New-York, you have doubtless had already. We are now here, and if general orders may be credited, here we are determined to stand.

The enemy appear rather shy since a drubbing they got some weeks ago. The Hessians and British troops disagree, and are kept entirely separate. The latter do not like the former's being allowed to plunder while they are prohibited from doing it. Those rascals plunder all indiscriminately; if they see any thing they like, they say, "Rebel, good for Hesse-mans," and seize it for their own use. They have no idea between the distinctions of Whig and Tory. I have been credibly informed that a Tory complained to General Howe of his having been plundered by the Hessians, and that the General said, "there was no avoiding it, it was their manner of fighting."

All the accounts we have from abroad agree in the friendly disposition of France and Spain towards America. Tell my friend Tennent to show you my letter to him; there are some articles of intelligence in it, which, as the post waits, I have not time to write here.

Much love to the Vicar of Roxbury, and believe me to be, dear sir, yours affectionately, EBEN. HAZARD.

To Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Fort Constitution, October 11, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency General Washington will transmit you a list of officers to constitute the two regiments to be raised by your State. The most of those officers are gentlemen whose conduct has been approved by those under whom they served. The success of the cause, the defeat of the enemy, the honour of the State, and the reputation of the army, altogether depends upon the establishing a good corps of officers. My little experience has fully convinced me that without more attention is paid by the different States in the appointment of the officers, the troops never will answer their expectation. I hope, as every thing that is dear and valuable is at stake, that no popular prejudices, nor family connexions, will influence the House in the election of the officers for the new army. I am sensible that America has as good materials to form an army as any State in the world. But without a good set of officers, the troops will be little better than a lawless banditti, or an ungovernable mob. The Americans possess as much natural bravery as any people upon earth, but habit must form the soldier. He who expects men brought from the tender scenes of domestick life can meet danger and death with a becoming fortitude, is a stranger to the human heart. There is nothing that can get the better of that active principle of self-preservation but a proper sentiment of pride, or being often accustomed to danger. As the principle of pride is not predominant enough in the minds of the common soldiery, the force of habit must be called in to its aid to get the better of our natural fears, ever alarmed at the approach of danger.

There has been, it must be confessed, some shameful conduct in this army this campaign, in a great measure owing to the bad conduct of the officers. I have neither seen nor heard of one instance of cowardice among the old troops where they had good officers to lead them on. In the last action every regiment behaved with a becoming spirit, especially Colonel Hitchcock's, and Colonel Namun's. I don't wish to see an officer in the army but such as have a regard for their reputation, who feels a sentiment of honour, and is ambitious of distinguishing himself. Such will answer the publick expectation, and be an honour to the State that sent him.

Colonel Varnum, from the treatment he has met with from Congress, has taken the resolution of leaving the army.

The Colony are generally acquainted with his abilities, that he stands in no need of recommendation. Perhaps the House may think proper to reëlect him, and give him the opportunity to refuse the appointment, as a compliment due to his past services. Colonel Cornwall and Colonel Carey, you observe, are both left out in the General's arrangement; they were both in the late action, and behaved exceedingly well, but as there is a reduction of regiments, 'tis not possible to accommodate the whole, and there is a preference given by the under officers, though they never have been consulted upon this occasion. His Excellency has put down only such as appears deserving, without consulting them upon the subject, to know whether they would serve or not. The House will appoint such, and so many, of those recommended as they shall think proper, and fill the vacancies of their own choice. But I hope there will be none in the arrangement but men of merit.

The several retreats and evacuations that have taken place this campaign, without doubt has alarmed the fears of the timid and aroused their apprehension of an approaching ruin. The source of these misfortunes have originated from several causes. The strength of the enemy far exceeded the expectations of Congress, the late season that they attempted to call in a reinforcement to our aid, the many delays that took place among the different States in furnishing their proportion, protracted the time of collecting the forces together to such a degree that when the enemy had their whole strength together, ours in different detachments were far inferior to theirs. With a force inferior to the enemy in number, with troops that were mostly raw and undisciplined, with young and ignorant officers, what could be expected against old, experienced officers with veteran troops to command, short of what has taken place, especially when you take in the idea of the extent of ground we had to guard, and the assistance the enemy received from their ships, owing to the situation of the posts we occupied? The Militia has come and gone in such shoals, that his Excellency could never tell scarcely two days together the strength he had at any one post.

If the different States complete the establishment agreeable to the resolves of Congress, and the troops come well officered, (for on that the whole depends,) I have not the least doubt in my own mind, but that in a few months we shall be able to seek the enemy instead of they us. I know our men are more than equal to theirs, and were our officers equal to our men, we should have nothing to fear from the best troops in the world. I do not mean to derogate from the worth and merit of all the officers in the army. We have many that are in the service deserving the highest applause, and has served with reputation and honour to themselves and the State that sent them; and I am happy that I have it to say that the Rhode-Island regiments hitherto are amongst this number.

Three of the enemy's ships passed the chevaux-de-frise, in the North River, and went up to Topan-Bay. Our army are so strongly fortified, and so much out of the command of the shipping, we have little more to fear this campaign. The troops have been and still are exceeding sickly. The same disorder rages in the enemy's camp as does in ours, but is much more mortal. Nothing new from the Northern army.

I am, with great esteem, your obedient servant,
NATH. GREENE.

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Montgomery, October 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As the officers in the Second New-York have never received their commissions, I have sent Lieutenant Smith for them, agreeable to a list I formerly gave to Mr. McKesson, Secretary. I know of no alteration to be made, except that Gilbert Livingston is appointed Ensign in Captain Swartwout's company, in the room of Mr. Finch, who resigned. His commission ought to bear date the 1st of September last. If you approve of the young man, I believe he is deserving of the same.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To the President of the Provincial Congress of the State of New-York.

PETER R. LIVINGSTON TO THE NEW-YORK DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Fishkill, October 11, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Convention pleased themselves with the expectation of receiving one hundred thousand dollars, advanced by the honourable Continental Congress to this State, by the 3d instant, agreeable to your favour of the 20th ultimo. Such is the state of our finances and of the public claims, that we severely feel a disappointment for which we are unable to account.

The Committee of Safety have therefore resolved to dispatch their Deputy Treasurer, Mr. Bancker, accompanied by Colonel Birdsall, to receive and conduct the money to this place with all possible expedition; and I am directed to request you to give them all the despatch in your power. The enclosed resolution of the Committee of Safety will sufficiently authorize the gentlemen to transact this business.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To the honourable the New-York Delegates at Continental Congress.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, October 11, 1776. }

Resolved, and Ordered, That Mr. Gerard Bancker, the Deputy Treasurer of this State, proceed to Philadelphia, and apply to the Delegates of this State to receive the money lately voted to this Convention by Congress. That Mr. Bancker's receipt shall be a sufficient discharge for such sum as he may receive on account of this State in pursuance of this order.

That Mr. Bancker take to his assistance Colonel Birdsall, and that he be and is hereby authorized from time to time to procure any other guard or further assistance he shall think necessary for the safe conveyance of the said money to the Treasury of this State.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN McKESSON, Secretary.

COMFORT SANDS TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill, October 11, 1776.

SIR: Some days ago I applied to the Convention to fix the allowance for Colonel Palmer and Colonel Nicoll's services for superintending the transportation of the cannon. I was told by the Secretary that the Convention considered them as members in their service, and as such they would of course be paid by the County; that they had agreed to allow them ten shillings per day for extra services. Colonel Palmer is now here in order to settle that account. I told him the resolution of the Convention. He answered that he had not charged the County for the time he was in that service, and that he thought it would be unjust to charge the County for services done the Continent. I beg your direction how I must settle this matter, and am, sir, your very humble servant,

COMFORT SANDS.

To Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

JOHN JAY TO EDWARD RUTLEDGE.

Fishkill, October 11, 1776.

DEAR RUTLEDGE: Be so kind as to forward the enclosed by the first opportunity to your brother. It is in answer to one from him to Messrs. Duane, William Livingston, and myself, mentioning the losses sustained by General Lee in consequence of entering into the American service, and recommending a compliance with the resolution of Congress for indemnifying him. As he has doubtless written to you on the subject, I forbear enlarging on the propriety, policy, or justice of the measure. I am, for my own part, clear for it, and wish with all my heart that it may take place. I shall write to my colleagues on the subject.

Let no considerations induce you to excuse General Mifflin from the office of Quartermaster-General. Moylan acted wisely and honestly in resigning. Try no new experiments. You have paid for the last. Let me repeat it, keep Mifflin.

Although extremely anxious to be with you, the circumstances of this State will not admit of my leaving it. Governour Tryon has been very mischievous, and we find our hands full in counteracting and suppressing the conspiracies formed by him and his adherents.

What is your fleet and noble Admiral doing? What meekness of wisdom, and what tender-hearted charity! I can't think of it with patience. Nothing but more than ladylike delicacy could have prevailed on your august body to secrete the sentence they passed upon that pretty genius. I reprobate such mincing, little, zigzag ways of doing business. Either openly acquit or openly condemn.

If General Lee should be at Philadelphia, pray hasten his departure—he is much wanted at New-York. I wish our army well stationed in the Highlands, and all the lower country desolated. We might then bid defiance to all the further efforts of the enemy on that quarter.

I am, my dear Rutledge, your friend,
JOHN JAY.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, October 11, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your favour of the 7th instant. As I have not any list of the officers' names from your Colony, except those of Colonel Burrell's regiment, any thing I can say must be confined to them; and shall in a few days transmit you some account of them.

I find by private letters from gentlemen in Congress to their friends, that they approve of the step I have taken in resigning, because of the ill treatment that has been given to me, a treatment which Congress ought not to have given, even if there had been no doubt of my guilt, until I had been heard. But I thank my God that I have a soul above that resentment which would involve in it a prejudice to my country, and I hope to teach my countrymen by my conduct under this unjust persecution, that it is the duty of a good citizen only to justify himself, and not to sacrifice the weal of the State to any considerations whatever.

I am, with every wish that flows from esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 11, 1776.

DEAR SIR: On Tuesday morning, Mr. Gordon delivered me your letter of the 4th instant. I have been so much indisposed with a violent rheumatick attack in the head and stomach that I have not been able to write since.

By Sergeant Stiles's information, it seems probable that the enemy still mean to attempt crossing the lake this campaign. They have not above three weeks, however, to do it in; at least I should think so.

In mine of the 3d instant, I gave you my reasons for not moving Dayton's, or any troops from the Mohawk river. On Tuesday I received a letter from Colonel Dayton; by the intelligence it contained, and by the information Major Barber gave me, who brought the letter, I hope the necessity of keeping Dayton's corps in that quarter is superseded, and he is ordered to Fort George with the utmost despatch. Had I not received this information, I certainly should not have moved a man from that quarter, notwithstanding you say "that no good reason could retard the immediate march of Colonel Dayton's regiment to Fort George." Because I well knew that for want of proper information, you could be no judge whether they were or were not necessary there.

I was excessively alarmed at that paragraph in your letter, where you say, "by my last return you will clearly see one half of this army are sick," &c., until I recurred to the return, which convinced me of your mistake; for by it it appears that to the northward of Fort George and Skenesborough were at that time near nine thousand effectives, officers included, if Phinney's joined.

I have just received a letter from Captain Yates, Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General. He informs me that the troops that were employed on the road to Cheshire's are all ordered away; if so, the road will not be finished this campaign, for I have repeatedly assured you that there are no men here. Dayton's, at the very soonest, cannot be there in less than a fortnight; you will therefore send two hundred men to Cheshire's without delay, with orders to put themselves under the command of Colonel Wynkoop, who is going up to-day.

The powder is passed this, and I hope will arrive safe. It was sent in a very bad condition from Philadelphia.

Please to send an Engineer to Cheshire's, to give directions for a picket fort round the store and barracks. If he cannot be spared for any considerable time, he need not remain. It will suffice to give instructions to Colonel Wynkoop.

You will please to order the depth of the lake in the channel, from Skenesborough to the bay in front of Crown Point, to be carefully sounded, that we may be able to determine what vessels may be borne on it. As I have long since mentioned to Congress the necessity of constructing large vessels on Lake Champlain, you will probably receive their orders to prepare for it. It is pity, therefore, that such of the ship carpenters as were fit for service are discharged. I suppose they could not be prevailed on to stay.

Pray send Colonel Lewis down with all despatch, as the service will greatly suffer if he should not arrive here before I go to Philadelphia, which will probably be in a very few days, at most not above a fortnight.

I promise you if I am in Congress, you, or whoever may command in this department, will have more attention paid you than I have had, if I can in anywise induce others to be of my opinion.

I am, dear General, very sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, October 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favours of the 3d and 5th instant are now before me. Nothing remarkable has lately happened in this quarter. Enclosed is a letter I received last night from General Arnold; by that you will find the fleet were well the 7th instant. The fourth row-galley will sail from hence on Monday, as all the rigging, cables, &c., are arrived. When she joins the fleet, our whole naval force will be collected. The nights are getting long and cold, and if General Carleton is not with us in a fortnight, I suspect he will take up his winter quarters in Canada. Two of our prisoners have lately escaped from the enemy; they went to Cohos, from whence I daily expect them; as soon as they come here I shall despatch them to Albany.

Surely General Howe does not mean to stop at Harlem; if he does, his ruin is not very far off. I must desire you to urge it with the Commissioners from Congress to order barracks for six hundred men to be built at Schenectady, and double that number at Albany, provided there is not already sufficient covering for that number there. Three thousand men, officers included, are as few as ought to be posted for the winter upon the Mohawk river, Albany, and the different posts between Ty and Fort Stanwix.

I shall write to you more fully in a few days, being too much employed at present to add more than to assure you, dear General, I am your affectionate, humble servant,

HO. GATES.

To Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, October 11, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I understand General Arnold has wrote to you for the guns I have here. It is well known to your Honour that we had the greatest search after them. We spent much time and labour in digging them from under ruins of wood and earth, where they lay long, and might have remained there had it not been for us. We cut a road, and with much trouble have got the necessary apparatus to work them. Though they may not be so useful as is generally imagined, yet it gives confidence to troops to have artillery, and the want of it has a contrary effect, especially among young troops. The little experience I have had has given me to understand so much. I have a battery and platform for six guns, and which guns of this size best suit.

All my expectations are in some measure blasted if the artillery is taken from us. I shall consider that we have spent much time and labour to the great inconvenience of my men, to very little purpose, if we lose our guns now. I know what we have done is not considered of great consequence; I do not mean it should, but this I am confident of, that the little works we have, with the artillery, will be sufficient to secure one hundred or one hundred and fifty men against any party of light troops that might be sent here this fall or winter, or at least till they could be relieved.

I understand they talk of replacing them with six-pounders. They will be the refuse, I presume. They will probably not suit my battery. I hope the fleet may be supplied in another way. I make no doubt you will do what is proper in this affair. General Arnold could not have been acquainted with these circumstances.

I am willing to do any thing in my power for the public good, but I cannot conceive that though the works here are not strengthened, they should be weakened by taking away the guns we have, or by replacing them with guns which perhaps we might do as well without. I beg you will not be offended at my freedom, as I consider myself and my people much interested.

I am, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

To General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 11, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of your favour proposing a descent on Long-Island, although I was so unhappy as not to be able to meet Generals Clinton and Lincoln at this place as requested, I applied to the State of Rhode-Island and obtained their consent and orders that Colonel Richmond, and such part of his battalion as shall not enlist on board the Continental vessels, should assist in the enterprise. Colonel Richmond will accordingly begin his march this day for New-London, and bring with him the whale-boats collected in Massachusetts-Bay and Rhode-Island, to the number of between eighty and ninety, which it is apprehended will be of great use to the troops ordered on this service, especially to secure and assist their retreat should it be attempted to be cut off. When Colonel Richmond arrives at New-London, he has orders to put himself under the command of such General Officer as your Excellency shall appoint.

I have this day conferred with Colonels McIntosh and Livingston on the subject; they inform me that they are supplied with provisions and ammunition for their purpose, and only want such a number of water-craft as, with the whale-boats divided into three parts, that in the whole may be sufficient to transport twelve hundred men, as he means each division to be so placed at the inlets to the island, as if cut off from one he may resort to the other to make his retreat sure, if necessary. These I have ordered for him, and dare say will be provided, and ready without delay. The number of men he proposes to set out with will doubtless be sufficient for his first attempts, but what reinforcements will be necessary soon to follow to answer every purpose, your Excellency will judge. They may be thrown over from Stamford or Norwalk very soon if placed there.

I am apprehensive lest some difficulties may arise with respect to the command of this detachment. Colonel McIntosh is a superiour officer to Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, and Richmond is superiour in rank to both. Colonel Livingston appears to be a young gentleman of real spirit and abilities, and has every advantage in his knowledge of the island and the people there. The other gentlemen have also their merits. May not a difficulty arise as to the command? I hope there will not, as the gentlemen are all well disposed. I hope they will all coöperate to the best advantage of the whole. What is further necessary to render their operations effectual, you will please to consider and direct.

Our naval expedition against the ships of the enemy in the Sound is still in contemplation, and preparations are making for the same as fast as we can. Commodore Hopkins writes me the 5th instant, that the Alfred and Hampden are ready, and that the two new frigates there would be ready in about a week, if they can be manned, neither of them having more than half of their complement at that time. Our ship and brigantine will, we trust, be ready to join them, and when they are equipped it is proposed that they first attack the two frigates that infest the coast and Sound, if they, or either of them, shall appear in their way. Otherwise they will proceed directly up the Sound and give the best account they can of the ships this side of Hell-Gate, which is the principal object.

I am now informed that the two frigates and the Alfred are manned from Colonel Richmond's regiment, which I hope will prove true; but if not, am in hopes they may be completed by volunteers from Richmond and New-London. But if they should still fall short of their full complement, I beg leave to suggest to your Excellency, whether they could not without inconveniency be filled up from some parts of your army, unless the row-galley men, by the enemy's ships passing up North River, are rendered useless, in which case they may be ordered to some proper place along Sound for Commodore Hopkins to take them in. I have given Commodore Hopkins the utmost assurance to give him all possible intelligence from time to time, of the enemy's ships of force this side of Hell-Gate, that he may be apprised what he has to encounter. To that purpose I beg leave to suggest to your Excellency to give orders to such commanders of the guards or posts in sight of the enemy's ships, to give me intelligence of their force, situation, and motions, or whether and when joined by any other of the enemy's ships through Hell-Gate. I have heard that one twenty-four gun ship of the enemy has already passed through to them.

Since my last from Commodore Hopkins, am informed that the Columbus, Captain Whipple, has arrived in port at Rhode-Island. Have wrote to him to take her with him, which will make considerable addition to his force. Please to afford me your advice and fullest information. I cannot but flatter myself with strong hopes of advantages to be derived from this adventure of our ships, as well as the expedition to Long-Island; secrecy in both is of utmost importance.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, at New-Haven, October 11th, 1776, present, his Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Benjamin Huntington, Esqrs.

A consultation was had concerning the expedition of Colonels Richmond and Livingston to Long-Island, and a mode of preparation adopted, which his Honour the Governour took in hand, to give the necessary orders, &c. with all possible secrecy; and Mr. Shaw was sent home with orders to forward said expedition as fast as possible.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

New-Haven, October 11, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 5th instant came safe to hand, in which you inform me that the Alfred and Hampden are ready, and the two new frigates you expect will be ready in about a week. I hope no attention or diligence will be wanting to have them prepared by that time, and shall endeavour that there be no delay as to ours, though am necessitated to apply to you or your State, to furnish a quantity of shot for our ships. We have the round, but double-headed chain sliding, and star shot we have none; hope you can supply what will be wanting for the present. We have sent to our furnace for them, but fear it will be impossible to have them ready at New-London by the time they may be wanted for the present expedition, but may be ready to be replaced if necessary, very soon after. The size of the cannon for which we shall want them are nine-pounders. I understand the Columbus is now in port; if so, cannot she join your squadron? for no force ought to be omitted which human foresight can devise to render our ships as sure as may be at this critical time with our army, as this expedition, if successful, may much disconcert the enemy.

Since my last to you, there has been two more frigates up the Sound as far as against Saybrook, but suppose are now returned towards Block-Island; how far they or either of them may be the object of your attention, shall submit. No doubt, there ought to be a spy upon them out from New-port or New-London, or both, to watch and give intelligence of their motions, and if they, or either of them, may be decoyed in so as to fall in your way, and the force from New-London to join you at an appointed time or signal given, perhaps you may first give a good account of them before you proceed up the Sound, which by the way, is the main object.

I have employed Captain Shaw, the bearer hereof, to confer with you on the subject, and acquaint you from time to time, with every occurrence, and see that every preparation is made on our part, and give every necessary intelligence and assistance, as it will be difficult for me to do by letters, and at this distance, where I may be detained with the Assembly for a fortnight or three weeks.

The expedition on Long-Island set forward by General Washington, will be conducted by Colonels McIntosh and Livingston, and Richmond if he joins them. I have requested Colonel Livingston as soon as he arrives on Long-Island, to employ trusty spies along the south side to watch the motion of the enemy's ships from New-York, and give speedy intelligence, if there is any appearance of their coming round the island, that you may have the earliest notice if any such matter should happen.

We hear that your ships are now manned from Colonel Richmond's regiment; if any failure on that account, I hope numbers of volunteers may be found at Rhode-Island and New-London; but if still wanting, there may possibly be a complement thrown aboard from General Washington's army upon a sudden occasion, and for so short a time as they might be wanted if timely notice is sent forward to General Washington of their being wanted. I understand there is a twenty-four gun ship got through Hell-Gate, and joined the two frigates, though now one lies at Huntington, a considerable distance. I shall endeavour to gain every intelligence in my power, and acquaint you with any alteration or reinforcement which may happen there.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Hon. Commodore Hopkins.

P. S. Shall yield you my assistance of excuse to Congress; the good of the service is their object, as I am sure it is yours.

MEMORIAL OF STONINGTON (CONNECTICUT) COMMITTEE.

To the honourable the General Assembly now sitting at NEW-HAVEN:

The Memorial of the Committee of Correspondence and Inspection of the town of STONINGTON, and sundry of the inhabitants of said town, most humbly sheweth:

That whereas your Honours thought fit, in your last session in May, to grant for the defence and protection of this place, a Captain and ninety men, since which, one half have been ordered to New-London. Your Honours may remember, that this town is the only one in this State that has received any damage from those sons of tyranny and despotism, sent by that more than savage tyrant George III., to deprive us of those inalienable rights that the Supreme Governour of heaven and earth has invested us with:

Your memorialists therefore pray that the number of men ordered and destined as above, may still be continued; and the two eighteen-pounders and four twelve-pounders, and shot, &c., that were ordered in your former session for this place, may be delivered as soon as possible, as the harbour is perhaps more used by coasters, and vessels bound to sea, than any harbour in this State; and is a place of great consequence, not only to this, but other States. We therefore beg leave to inform your Honours that several vessels have lately been chased into this harbour by the King's ships, and have here been protected.

Your memorialists further pray, that the three large cannon, (now at New-London,) belonging to this town, be likewise ordered to this place; and the two field-pieces that were lent by this town to the town of New-London, be ordered back to the town of Stonington. We therefore flatter ourselves that this our most reasonable request will be granted. And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

PETITION OF THE TOWN OF GROTON, CONNECTICUT.

To the honourable General Assembly of the State of CONNECTICUT, to be held at NEW-HAVEN, on the second THURSDAY of OCTOBER, A. D. 1776.

We, your Honours' petitioners, being often alarmed by the appearance of more or less of the King of Great Britain's ships coming near the harbour of New-London, and do not know how soon they will come into our harbour, or land a number of troops, and ravage the country near it; and as your Honours are fully acquainted with the sea-coast near this harbour being very much stripped of men, both for the army and navy, for which reasons we, your Honour's petitioners, beg leave to entreat of your Honours to give the necessary orders for the First Company of Militia belonging to this town to return home, that both their and our wives and children may be partly relieved from the very great anxiety they are now in. And your humble petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

A ship, burden two hundred and twenty-five tons, taken by Captain Thomas Nickerson, in the privateer sloop America, belonging to Plymouth, was last week brought into a port in this State. The privateer had been only seven days out when she took this prize, and was left in chase of another. The cargo of this ship is as follows, viz: two hundred hogsheads of sugar, one hundred puncheons of rum, twenty casks of Madeira wine, a quantity of logwood and mahogany.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO DANIEL TILLINGHAST.

Newport, October 11, 1776.

SIR: The bearer is a lady on board the Cabot's prize,

Lowther. Should be glad you will take care to provide her such lodgings as are suitable to her, and see that she is treated every other way as a woman of character, and you will oblige yours, at command,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Daniel Tillinghast, Esq., Agent for the Continental Fleet.

Mrs. Briggs presents her most respectful compliments to Admiral Hopkins, returns him her best thanks for his polite offer of providing her a lodging; but being a little indisposed, and Captain Hamilton proposing to sail with the first fair wind, thinks it best to go up with him, as he has behaved in the kindest manner. Mrs. B. will be much obliged to Admiral Hopkins if he will take the trouble of writing a line with her to Providence.

Thursday afternoon.

JOHN AVERY TO E. THOMPSON.

Council Chamber, Watertown, October 11, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the honourable Council of this State to apply to you for a number of commissions for commanders of armed vessels, authorizing them to cruise upon the enemies of America, signed by the President of Congress. As this office is exhausted of those important papers, please to send me by the bearer as many as you can spare, and as many bonds, and they shall be refunded as soon as a sufficient number shall arrive from Philadelphia, which are hourly expected.

I am, sir, with great esteem, your very humble servant,
JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

To the Secretary of the State of New-Hampshire.

JOHN HANSON, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Frederick-Town, October 12, 1776.

SIR: The money sent for the support of the prisoners is very nearly expended, and as this will be a good opportunity by Mr. Saw to send up some more, I hope it will be done; and am, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN HANSON, Jun.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a special meeting of the Committee on Saturday, 12th October, 1776, Present: Samuel Purviance, Chairman; William Lux, Vice Chairman; W. Buchanan, B. Nicholson, T. Rutter, W. Aisquith, J. Calhoun.

Information being given to the Committee on oath, by Mr. David Evans, that Francis Sanderson had, in a conversation with him, spoken words "tending to disunite the good people of this State in the present opposition to Great-Britain;" by order of the Committee, October 12, 1776, Francis Sanderson is required to attend this Committee at Mr. Purviance's, immediately, to answer a complaint exhibited against him for several words spoken by him, and tending to disunite the people of this State in their present opposition to Great Britain. And in case he don't attend, Captain Cox is directed to bring him by force.

Per order: W. LUX, Vice Chairman.

The said Francis Sanderson appeared in consequence of the warrant, and having nothing to offer in vindication of the charge, he was committed to the custody of the guard for this night, in order to be sent to the Council of Safety, agreeable to the resolves of Convention in July, 1775.

Attest: GEO. LUX, Secretary.

The Deposition of David Evans, of Baltimore-Town, aged twenty-five years, who being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, deposeth and saith, that on Monday or Tuesday last, Francis Sanderson, of Baltimore-Town, coppersmith, called him into his house as he was going past the door, and asked him to take a glass of spirits; on which he went in, and the said Sanderson told him, this deponent, he understood that he had taken a commission in the American army, which he was sorry to hear, as he looked upon it as dangerous, as all opposition was in vain, and that he imagined the estates would be confiscated, and he was afraid for his own house. That he had lately seen a gentleman from England, who told him the English did not regard the Americans a snap of the fingers, and that there were four or five other Powers ready to join them, but they were refused, as the English thought themselves strong enough to conquer without their assistance. He then asked this deponent if he knew the reason why General Lee was gone to the southward. This deponent answered, because the Congress had appointed him to the command there. He said no, that was not the reason, but that he looked on it when Howe came to New-York with his army, he expected nothing less but to be conquered if he staid there. That General Lee had advised the members of Convention at Annapolis that now was the time to make up with Great Britain, as he knew now they were in earnest, and that he would go to Congress and use his influence there to settle it. And further said that many officers in Pennsylvania were resigning their commissions, knowing all opposition was in vain; and that the Congress, the Convention, the Assembly, and Council of Safety in Pennsylvania, were all sitting together, some making laws and others disannulling them. And further this deponent saith not.

Sworn in Committee, 12th October, 1776.

DAVID EVANS.

Witness: S. PURVIANCE, Jr., Chairman.

Attest: GEO. LUX, Secretary.

CAPTAIN HINDMAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, October 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: About four days ago I arrived here in search of necessary clothing for the Maryland regular troops, which am much afraid shall not be able to procure at present, particularly shoes and stockings, of which we are in great want, and unless they can be got will render many soldiers unfit for duty. I suppose between this and Christmas they may be procured, but at a most extravagant rate. Common yarn here are now at six pounds ten shillings the dozen pair, and every kind of goods in the like proportion. I applied to Congress in hopes of being supplied from the Continental store, but can get nothing from thence. Am in great hopes your Honours will order us back to the Province to get recruited and furnished with the clothing we now are in immediate want of. Colonel Smallwood wrote me he had wrote down to the Convention for that purpose. I can assure you the very thoughts of keeping our troops at camp all winter disheartens them very much; nor is it to be wondered at from the severe duty and great fatigue they have undergone ever since they have been at New-York. A sufficiency of provisions we do not complain of, if a constant succession of beef and flour from day to day will do, and that sometimes without salt; and one day in the week we get salt pork. No kind of vegetables does the Commissary furnish us with, and such our situation we can get none; being the nearest to the enemy's lines, any thing of that kind coming from the country being taken up by the eastern troops over King's Bridge. Think not, sir, I mean to complain on my own account, or that I wish to be recalled; it is for the men in general, who are much discontented for fear they should be kept the whole winter through.

The bearer, Mr. Hopkins, who I believe goes down to solicit favours from your House, and who has been a cadet with our troops, can give you a very good account of our treatment and situation at present; and shall say nothing further on that subject.

Am informed the army is to be put on a new establishment, and the whole in the Continental service. Could wish to know what is to be done with the Provincial Regulars of our Province, as they seem to think they cannot be kept in the Continental service without their consents; and if the contract they have entered into for the Provincial service be once dissolved, I doubt they will not enter very freely into the Continental service. Such is also the case with the Flying-Camp. The hard usage they have met with will greatly discourage them from inlisting again under the new establishment struck out by Congress; which I wish had been earlier fallen upon, as by that means we might at this day have had a well-disciplined army, and which I now despair of being raised very soon.

Are the Maryland Independent Companies to be formed into battalions? It is the desire of all the officers belonging to them they should. It is very inconvenient so many companies acting together in one battalion, and subject to the command of one man. Do not suppose I am speaking for myself in hopes of promotion, but that would be better for the service they should. I think that melancholy day on Long-Island convinced us of the want of Field Officers, having none but Major Gist to command us, who behaved as well as men could do; therefore do again repeat I think they should, as soon as possible, be formed into battalions, and if your honourable House should not think the services I have done and the line of promotion I now stand in sufficient for my advancement, shall submit to your determination. I take the liberty, however, of recommending my First Lieutenant, A. Anderson, as a man worthy of promotion and as good an officer as any in the Maryland service, and have no doubt when his character is inquired into, you will find I say no more of him than he deserves. We are informed that a committee is to go from each State to the camp, to know what officers will serve, and their merit. I think they will generally find the Maryland officers merit the trust and confidence heretofore reposed in them. I must beg the favour of your notice and attention to James Morgan, first sergeant in my company, for promotion. Am satisfied he will merit any favour that may be shown him in that way, and have no doubt of his making a good officer. He has acted as such ever since he has been with me. Shall return with the sundry articles I can procure in two or three days. Am very sorry to hear from my brother that a report is spread among Captain Stone's friends that my company, the day we were engaged on Long-Island, behaved very ill. I gave him by the earliest opportunity as true a state of the whole affair as I could recollect, which he informs me he showed to Mr. Chamberlaine, and which I believe the officers under me can aver to the truth of, as can the officers under Captain Stone. I cannot judge him guilty of writing any thing of the kind. Have not had an opportunity of seeing him since I received my brother's letter, being gone to the country very sick. Such aspersions are base and ungenerous, and not giving men a fair chance of vindicating themselves. I have had the vanity to think the company I have had the honour to command have behaved themselves as well as any in the service, notwithstanding the dark insinuations that have been thrown out to their prejudice, and will refer to Colonel Smallwood for their behaviour and conduct since they have been under his command. I lost only three men on Long-Island. My company wants but few men to complete it. They have been and still are very sickly, as are all our troops.

I am your much obliged, humble servant,

JAMES HINDMAN.

RESOLVE OF PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, October 12, 1776.

Whereas it has been represented to the Council that some persons in this State, preferring their own private emolument to the duties of humanity and the publick good, have monopolized and engrossed whole cargoes or large quantities of Salt, and as it is the practice of every well-regulated State, not only to discourage, but even to punish all monopolizers of the necessaries of life, and as such evil practices at this time are pernicious and very unjustifiable, as for the want of an established Government provision cannot be made against them, and being desirous to give every reasonable encouragement to the importers of such article, this Council do Resolve, That they will allow the generous price of fifteen shillings per bushel, for every bushel of Salt that may be imported into this State and delivered to them, until the 15th day of November next; the same to be sold out to the publick in small parcels at the first cost, by such person or persons as they may hereafter appoint, in order that the necessities of the good people may be supplied at as reasonable a rate as possible, and the rapacious practices of avaricious men defeated. It is therefore earnestly recommended to said importers not to demand a higher price than is here offered, and to make report to this Council of the quantities they have, or may import, that they may be treated with for the purchase of the same.

Extract from the Minutes:

JACOB S. HOWELL, Secretary.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 12th October, 1776, Present: William Atlee, Lodwick Lowman, Adam Reigart, Sebastian Graff, Henry Dehuff, John Witmer, Edward Shippen, Casper Shaffner, John Miller. William Atlee in the Chair.

William Patton, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to go to York-Town to attend on Captain Livingston there, and the Chairman is requested to grant him a pass for that purpose.

The Chairman read a Letter from Mr. Peters, Secretary at War, requesting that Captain Hesketh's Baggage, which is in the care of Sergeant Cooper, may be sent down to him; and it is agreed that the Chairman order Sergeant Cooper to produce the Baggage of Captain Hesketh, and that he forward it to the care of Mr. Peters as expeditiously as possible.

Mr. Atlee is directed, out of the moneys in his hands for the relief of the poor families of Associators, to pay to Anna Maria Peter, the wife of Casper Peter, an Associator in Captain Klatz's Flying-Camp Company, £1 10s.; and to Deborah Hardy, the wife of Isaac Hardy, an Associator in Captain Harman's Company, £1 2s. 6d., to assist them in the support of themselves and children in the absence of their husbands at the army.

William Frenniman, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Jacob Graeff, Gunsmith, he here in Committee engaging, &c.

Peter Howell, Michael Stanley, put in the guard-house September 25th, by Captain Boyd, for being drunk, &c., in a tavern at nine o'clock. Ordered to be sent to the Barracks with the next relief.

John Jacks, worked with Peter Hollingen; John Brown, worked with Peter Helm—Met with at the creek with a knapsack, supposed to be going off, and sent to the guard-house, by Captain William Amer. Ordered to the Barracks with the next relief.

David Murphy, of the Seventh, weaving with Christian Myer, about one and half miles from town.

GENERAL LEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Amboy, October 12, 1776.

SIR: The Hessians who were encamped opposite this post, last night disappeared, and there is the greatest reason to think that they have quitted the island entirely, which announces some great manœuvre to be in agitation. I am confident they will not attack General Washington's lines: such a measure is too absurd for a man of Mr. Howe's genius; and unless they have received flattering accounts from Burgoyne that he will be able to effectuate a junction, (which I conceive they have not,) they will no longer remain kicking their heels at New-York. They will put the place in a respectable state of defence, which with their command of the waters may be easily done, leave four or five thousand men, and direct their operations to a more decisive object. They will infallibly proceed either immediately up the river Delaware with their whole troops, or what is more probable, land somewhere about South-Amboy or Shrewsbury, and march straight to Trenton or Burlington. We must suppose every case. On the supposition that this will be the case, what are we to do? What force have we? what means have we to prevent their possessing themselves of Philadelphia? General Washington's army cannot possibly keep pace with them. The length of his route is not only infinitely greater, but his obstructions almost insuperable; in short, before he could cross Hudson river, they might be lodged and strongly fortified on both banks of the Delaware. I shall make no apologies to Congress for thus so freely offering my opinion; the importance of the matter is a sufficient apology. For Heaven's sake, rouse yourselves; for Heaven's sake, let ten thousand men be immediately assembled and stationed somewhere about Trenton. In my opinion your whole depends upon it. I set out immediately for Head-Quarters, where I shall communicate my apprehension that such will be the next operation of the enemy, and urge the expediency of sparing a part of his army (if he has any to spare) for this object.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient,
humble servant,

CHARLES LEE.

To the President of Congress.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, October 12, 1776.

Colonel Allison's battalion of Pennsylvania Associators having done their duty while in camp as good and orderly soldiers, and furnished their full complement for the Flying-Camp, are hereby dismissed the service of the States, and permitted to return home.

SAMUEL GRIFFIN, Deputy Adjutant-General.

Newark, New-Jersey, October 12, 1776.

Last Thursday se'nnight, Captain Coffin and Grennell, with a boy, made their escape from Staten-Island in a canoe, and got safe to Bergen Point, and from thence came to this place Saturday. The former was taken going from New-York to Nantucket, some months since; and the latter, on the 28th of August, in latitude 33° 30', longitude 66° 20', in a brig from the Western Islands for Nantucket, by a new English twenty-gun ship, called the Galatea, John Jones, Esq., commander, sheathed with copper, and a most extraordinary sailer, being part of a convoy for some ships from London bound to New-York, some of which are arrived at Sandy-Hook.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 12, 1776.

SIR: The situation of our affairs, and the approaching dissolution of the present army, calling for every possible exertion on our part to levy a new one, and presuming that your State are about to make an arrangement of officers for the quota of troops they are to furnish, and that they may wish to know those belonging to them who have served with reputation and bravery, I have thought it expedient to obtain a return by such means as seemed most likely to be well founded. To this end I have made inquiry, and the enclosed list, which I have the honour to transmit you, comprehends the names of those who, in publick estimation, and that of the Generals under whom they have more particularly acted, have behaved themselves well and to good acceptance; and whose past conduct gives a reasonable hope that their future will render material services to their country.

The advantages arising from a judicious appointment of officers, and the fatal consequences that result from the want of them, are too obvious to require arguments to prove them. I shall therefore beg leave to add only that as the well-doing, nay, the very existence, of every army to any profitable purposes, depend upon it, that too much regard cannot be had to the choosing of men of merit, and such as are not only under the influence of a warm attachment to their country, but who also possess sentiments of principles of the strictest honour. Men of this character are fit for office, and will use their best endeavours to introduce that discipline and subordination which are essential to good order, and inspire that confidence in the men which alone can give success to the interesting and important contest in which we are engaged. I would also beg leave to subjoin that it appears to me absolutely necessary that this business should have your earliest attention, that those who are nominated may employ their interest and influence to recruit men out of your corps that are now here, without loss of time.

In respect to the officers that were in the Canada expedition, their behaviour and merit, and the severities they have experienced, entitle them to a particular notice, in my opinion. However, as they are under their paroles, I would recommend that vacancies should be reserved for such as you think fit to promote, not wishing them to accept commissions immediately, or to do the least act that may be interpreted a violation of their engagement.

Their releasement, I hope, will be soon obtained, as I think them entitled to the first exchange, and which I have mentioned to Congress.

I flatter myself that the freedom I have taken in the instances above, will have the indulgence and pardon of your State, when I assure you that the list you will receive is not intended to exclude gentlemen of greater merit, or transmitted with other views than to assist you, and of promoting the general good; and also, that the measure has been recommended by a Committee of Congress who were pleased to honour me with a visit. I have done the same to Governour Trumbull, at his particular request; and the officers are making out a return to be laid before the Massachusetts Assembly, of the same nature, so far as it concerns the officers from their State.

On the morning of the 9th instant, three of the enemy's ships, two of forty-four guns and one of twenty, with three or four tenders, ran up the North River, without receiving any interruption from our chevaux-de-frise or apparent damage from our batteries, though a heavy fire was kept up against them from each side of the river; they are laying at Tarrytown, from twenty-five to thirty miles above this, and out-sailing two of our row-galleys in their passage up, they fell into their hands; the crews escaped.

I had like to have omitted mentioning of a Paymaster to each regiment, who, I perceive, are not noticed in the list transmitted you. Congress, by a late resolution, have allowed such an officer, with Captain's pay; and as their duty will be not only to receive the regiment's pay, but to keep accounts of their clothing and every other incidental charge, I would beg leave to recommend that attention should be had to their appointment, and that persons may be nominated who are well versed in accounts, and who can keep them in a fair and proper manner. I am led to advise this precaution to be used because it will be an office of a good deal of consequence, and because in several instances in the present army, where the appointments were made in consequence of recommendations from the Field Officers, persons have been put in who, so far from being accountants and answering the designs of Congress, can scarcely write their own names.

October 13.—Yesterday the enemy landed at Frog's Point, about nine miles from hence up the Sound; their number we cannot ascertain, as they have not advanced. The point is rather an island, as it is surrounded by water every high tide. From the great movements of ships and other vessels up the Sound in the evening, with troops within, and the information of two deserters who came out last night, there is strong reason to believe they mean to land, and to pursue their former scheme of getting in our rear and cutting off the communication with the country. I have ordered some works to be thrown up on the passes leading from the Sound, where they are landed; and from the situation of the grounds through which they must pass, if they pursue their plan, I would fain hope they will sustain considerable loss, if not a repulse.

I have the honour to be, &c.,
GO. WASHINGTON.
To Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL PHILIPS.

Head-Quarters, October 12, 1776.

SIR: I have it in charge from his Excellency the Commander-in-chief, to return you his most thankful acknowledgment for the proposition contained in your address, and to inform you that he not only approves of the same, but wishes you to proceed with the works which you have mentioned. The generous motives which induced you to lay the measure before him, in his estimation do you the highest honour, and are such as he would be happy to see prevail generally through the army.

I am, &c.,
R. H. HARRISON.
To Colonel Joseph Philips, New-Jersey Militia.

COLONEL HARRISON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, October 12, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency this minute received your's giving intelligence of the enemy's movements. He has given orders for all the regiments to be under arms here, that they may be ready to act as occasion may require. He wishes you to make such disposition of the troops on your side, and of the two Militia regiments that are posted opposite to this, as you think necessary, and begs and trusts that every possible opposition will be given to the enemy.

God bless and lead you on to victory.
Yours, &c.,
ROB. H. HARRISON.

His Excellency would beg your attention to one thing, viz: that you will take proper precautions against a feint, and watch the enemy's motions. They perhaps may make a feint to land at Frog's Point, to draw your attention that way, and slip down when it is high water towards Morrisiana, with a view of gathering in your rear. Guard against that.

To General Heath.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

King's Bridge, October 12, 1776.

SIR: I have employed Mr. Carpenter Wharton to purchase and receive all the salt westward of New-Jersey, and salt and cure as much pork for use of the army, as salt can be had for. I expect about eight or nine thousand barrels. I expected to have seen him before I set off for New-England on the same errand; but am disappointed. I must request you on receipt hereof, to furnish him with such sums of money as may be necessary for this purpose, from time to time, as he may want, taking his receipt, to account to me for the expenditure, and charge the same to my account accordingly.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,
Jos. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

Any directions he may want and ask for, I doubt not Congress will give him.

GENERAL BEALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

York Island, October 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In obedience to your orders of the 11th September and 3d October, have enclosed you an account of arms and accoutrements received of the State of Maryland by the troops under my command, with a monthly return to the 10th instant of the number, state, and condition of said troops. I have had some trouble in getting an account of the arms, &c. Some Captains have not kept a regular account of what they received, which makes me think the enclosed account is not so correct as it ought to be, though the best I could get.

Captain Richardson and Captain Goldsberry, of Colonel Richardson's regiment, with their companies, and Captain Brooke and company, of Colonel Ewing's regiment, have not yet joined their respective regiments, so that I cannot yet procure an account of the arms, &c., they received of the State of Maryland; but will transmit you an account of them as soon as they join their respective regiments.

I have the honour to subscribe myself, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

REZIN BEALL.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

Harlem Heights, October 12, 1776.

COLONEL SMALLWOOD TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Camp of the Maryland Regulars, Head-Quarters, }
October 12, 1776. }

SIR: Through your hands I must beg leave to address the honourable Convention of Maryland, and must confess not without an apprehension that I have incurred their displeasure for having omitted writing when on our march from Maryland for New-York, and since our arrival here. Nor shall I, in a pointed manner, urge any thing in my defence, but leave them at large to condemn or excuse me, upon a presumption that, should they condemn, they will at least pardon, and judge me perhaps less culpable when they reflect, in the first instance, on the exertions necessary to procure baggage-wagons, provisions, and house-room for seven hundred and fifty men, marched the whole distance in a body, generally from fifteen to twenty miles per day, as the several stages made it necessary; and in the latter I trust they will give some indulgence for this neglect, for, since our arrival at New-York, it has been the fate of this corps to be generally stationed at advanced posts, and to act as a covering party, which must unavoidably expose troops to extraordinary duty and hazard, not to mention the extraordinary vigilance and attention in the commandant of such a party in disposing in the best manner, and having it regularly supplied; for here the commanders of regiments, exclusive of their military duty, are often obliged to exert themselves in the departments of Commissary and Quartermaster-General, and even directors of their Regimental Hospitals.

Perhaps it may not be improper to give a short detail of occurrences upon our march to Long-Island, and since that period.

The enemy, from the 21st to the 27th of August, were landing their troops on the lower part of Long-Island, where they pitched a large encampment, and ours and their advanced parties were daily skirmishing at long shot, in which neither party suffered much. On the 26th, the Maryland and Delaware troops, which composed part of Lord Stirling's brigade, were ordered over. Colonel Hasslet and his Lieutenant-Colonel, Bedford, of the Delaware battalion, with Lieutenant-Colonel Hare and myself, were detained on the trial of Lieutenant-Colonel Zedwitz; and though I waited on General Washington, and urged the necessity of attending our troops, yet he refused to discharge us, alleging there was a necessity for the trials coming on, and that no other Field Officers could be then had. After our dismissal from the Court-Martial, it was too late to get over, but, pushing over early the next morning, found our regiments engaged, Lord Stirling having marched them off before day to take possession of the woods and difficult passes between our lines and the enemy's encampment. But the enemy, the overnight, had stole a march on our Generals, having got through those passes, met and surrounded our troops on the plain grounds, within two miles of our lines. Lord Stirling drew up his brigade on an advantageous rising ground, where he was attacked by two brigades in front, headed by the Generals Cornwallis and Grant, and in his rear the enemy's main body stood ready drawn up to support their own parties, and intercept the retreat of ours. This excellent disposition, and their superior numbers, ought to have taught our Generals there was no time to be lost in securing their retreat, which might at first have been effected, had the troops formed into a heavy column and pushed their retreat; but the longer this was delayed, it became the more dangerous, as they were then landing more troops in front from the ships. Our brigade kept their ground for several hours, and in general behaved well, having received some heavy fires from the artillery and musketry of the enemy, whom they repulsed several times; but their attacks were neither so lasting or vigorous as was expected, owing, as it was imagined, to their being certain of making the whole brigade prisoners of war; for, by this time, they had so secured the passes on the road to our lines, (seeing our parties were not supported from thence, which, indeed, our numbers would not admit of,) that there was no possibility of retreating that way. Between the place of action and our lines there lay a large marsh and deep creek, not above eighty yards across at the mouth, (the place of action upon a direct line did not much exceed a mile from a part of our lines,) towards the head of which creek there was a mill and bridge, across which a certain Colonel Ward, from New-England, who is charged with having acted a bashful part that day, passed over with his regiment, and then burnt them down, though under cover of our cannon, which would have checked the enemy's pursuit at any time, otherways this bridge might have afforded a secure retreat. There then remained no other prospect but to surrender or attempt to retreat over this marsh and creek at the mouth, where no person had ever been known to cross. In the interim I applied to General Washington for some regiments to march out to support and cover their retreat, which he urged would be attended with too great risk to the party and the lines. He immediately afterwards sent for and ordered me to march down a New-England regiment, and Captain Thomas's company, which had just come over from York, to the mouth of the creek, opposite where the brigade was drawn up, and ordered two field-pieces down to support and cover their retreat, should they make a push that way. Soon after our march they began to retreat, and, for a small time, the fire was very heavy on both sides, till our troops came to the marsh, where they were obliged to break their order, and escape, as quick as they could, to the edge of the creek, under a brisk fire, notwithstanding which they brought off twenty-eight prisoners. The enemy, taking advantage of a commanding ground, kept up a continual fire from four field-pieces, which were well served and directed, and an heavy column advancing on the marsh must have cut our people off: their guns being wet and muddy, not one of them could have fired; but having drawn up the musketry, and disposed of some Riflemen conveniently, with orders to fire on them when they came within shot, however, the latter began their fire too soon, being at two hundred yards distance, which, notwithstanding, had the desired effect, for the enemy immediately retreated to the fast land, where they continued parading within six hundred yards, till our troops were brought over. Most of those who swam over, and others who attempted to cross before the covering party got down, lost their arms and accoutrements in the mud and creek, and some poor fellows their lives, particularly two of the Maryland, two of the Delaware, one of Atlee's Pennsylvania, and two Hessian prisoners, were drowned. Thomas's men contributed much in bringing over this party. Have enclosed a list of the killed and missing, amounting to two hundred and fifty-six, officers included. It has been said the enemy, during the action, also attacked our lines, but this was a mistake. Not knowing the ground, one of their columns advanced within long shot without knowing they were so near, and upon our artillery and part of the musketry's firing on them, they immediately fled.

The 28th, during a very hard rain, there was an alarm that the enemy had advanced to attack our lines, which alarmed the troops much, but was without foundation.

The 29th, it was found, by a council of war, that our fortifications were not tenable, and it was therefore judged expedient that the army should retreat from the island that night; to effect which, notwithstanding the Maryland troops had had but one day's respite, and many other troops had been many days clear of any detail duty, they were ordered on the advanced post at Fort Putnam, within two hundred and fifty yards of the enemy's approaches, and, joined with two Pennsylvania regiments on the left, were to remain and cover the retreat of the army, which was happily completed under cover of a thick fog and a southwest wind, both which favoured our retreat; otherwise the fear, disorder, and confusion of some of the Eastern troops must have retarded and discovered our retreat, and subjected numbers to be cut off.

After remaining two days in New-York, our next station was at Harlaem, nine miles above, at an advanced post opposite to Montresore's and Bohana's Islands, which in a few days the enemy got possession of without opposition, from the former of which we daily discoursed with them, being within two hundred yards, and only a small creek between.

It being judged expedient to abandon New-York, and retreat to our lines below Fort Washington, the military stores, &c., had been removing some days, when, on the 15th September, the enemy effected a landing on several parts of the island below, and, it is cutting to say, without the least opposition.

I have often read and heard of instances of cowardice, but hitherto have had but a faint idea of it till now. I never could have thought human nature subject to such baseness. I could wish the transactions of this day blotted out of the annals of America. Nothing appeared but fright, disgrace, and confusion. Let it suffice to say, that sixty Light Infantry, upon the first fire, put to flight two brigades of the Connecticut troops—wretches who, however strange it may appear, from the Brigadier-General down to the private sentinel, were caned and whipped by the Generals Washington, Putnam, and Mifflin, but even this indignity had no weight, they could not be brought to stand one shot.

General Washington expressly sent and drew our regiment from its brigade, to march down towards New-York, to cover the retreat, and to defend the baggage, with direction to take possession of an advantageous eminence near the enemy, upon the main road, where we remained under arms the best part of the day, till Sargent's brigade came in with their baggage, who were the last troops coming in upon which the enemy divided their main body into two columns, one, filing off on the North River, endeavoured to flank and surround us. We had orders to retreat in good order, which was done, our corps getting within the lines a little after dusk.

The next day, about one thousand of them made an attempt upon our lines, and were first attacked by the brave Colonel Knowlton, of New-England, who lost his life in the action, and the Third Virginia Regiment, who were immediately joined by three independent companies under Major Price, and some part of the Maryland Flying-Camp, who drove them back to their lines, it is supposed with the loss of four hundred men killed and wounded. Our party had about one hundred killed and wounded, of the former only fifteen; since which we have been viewing each other at a distance, and strongly intrenching till the 9th October, when three of their men-of-war passed up the North River, above King's Bridge, under a heavy cannonade from our batteries, which has effectually cut off our communication, by water, with Albany.

I must now break off abruptly, being ordered to march up above King's Bridge, the enemy having landed six thousand men from the Sound on Frog's Point. Fifty ships are got up there, landing more troops. There is nothing left but to fight them. An engagement is generally expected, and soon. Have enclosed a copy of a general return of the battalion and Veazy's company, being all the troops I marched from Maryland, with the accoutrements and camp equipage taken in Philadelphia, to be rendered the Congress, together with our weekly general return.

The Independents are about their returns of arms, accoutrements, and camp equipage, brought by them from Maryland, but not having time to finish, they must hereafter be returned to the Council of Safety.

We have upwards of three hundred officers and soldiers of the Maryland Regulars very sick, which you will observe by the return, and, I am sorry to say, it's shocking to humanity to have no more care taken of them. This must hurt the service upon the new establishment.

Majors Price and Gist, and Captain Stone, are in the Jerseys very sick, and Colonel Ware and myself are very unfit for duty, though we attend it. Many more officers are very unwell.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient and very humble servant,

W. SMALLWOOD.

Sunday, October 13, 1776.

SIR: Colonel Smallwood, with the troops, having marched, and not having time to make a fair copy of the rough draft from which the above is copied, desired me to do it, and sign his name, which I have done accordingly, and am your obedient and very humble servant,

CHRIS'R RICHMOND, Adj't.

P. S. It is now near sunset, and we have heard no firing, or any news of an action above King's Bridge, which has been hourly expected.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President Convention of Maryland.

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fishkill, October 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I should do great injustice to the polite attention with which your Excellency has listened to the undigested opinions which I have some times offered, if I did not (without any apology for my sentiments) freely, on the present alarming state of this Colony, submit to your Excellency's better judgment such measures as will, in my idea, be most likely to ensure success.

Since upon experiment (contrary to the general sentiment) it appears that the passage of the river is not effectually obstructed, the present situation of the army, though not exactly similar, bears some resemblance to that in which it was at New-York. The enemy may land above and reduce your Excellency to the necessity of attacking them at their landing, or of suffering them to seize upon passes from which it will be impossible to dislodge them, for such is the peculiar situation of the Country, and the vicinity of the Sound, will it be very difficult so to station themselves as to render every supply going to our camp extremely precarious? This, too, may be done with a part of their forces, while the remainder having their retreat secured, may, at their leisure, ravage the open country beyond the Highlands, encourage the disaffected, and by their assistance carry their arms to Albany, which would, while it distressed the troops in your Excellency's camp, inevitably destroy the Northern army. To stay at Ticonderoga, without daily supplies, would be impossible; to march to Albany would be equally so, without carriages or horses to carry their provisions and stores, or a sufficient number of boats to transport them in time across Lake George. No other means would be left them but to retreat into New-England, without stores, artillery, or provisions, in which case their strength would soon be dissipated by desertions, or the whole body be separated through want of necessities. These fears may appear ideal to those who do not reflect that the distance from the Highlands to Albany is but one hundred miles, that from Ticonderoga to Albany is equally distant, through a broken and almost uninhabited country; that most of the Militia of this State, that can be armed or depended on are in your Excellency's camp, and that all the men which we have at present ventured to call upon, in addition to those in service, do not exceed three hundred, and even these, we have little reason to expect that we shall obtain. Add to this, that bodies of men are already enlisted throughout this State, and we have reason to fear are already collecting under the direction of disguised officers in the Highlands.

These evils might, in my humble opinion, be fully guarded against, by sending a single regiment, with a good Engineer, to take possession of the passes in the Highlands, and be forming two camps, the one to secure the passes into Connecticut, (which might be done by the Militia of the New-England States,) the other, at or near the place where their ships now lie on the North River, which would reduce the enemy to the necessity of attacking the lines in front, or expose them if they landed above to the danger of being surrounded. The very reputation of such camps being formed, will prevent their making any such attempt, and in case of any misfortune at New-York, will afford a secure retreat, and effectually prevent the enemy from pushing their advantage, more especially if all stores which are not absolutely necessary for the army are removed to this place.

Your Excellency has, I dare say, seen the necessity of laying up magazines of provisions, and collecting materials for barracks at or near this place, that the want of them should not, in case of a defeat, oblige the army to separate.

Were not the Treasury of this State exhausted by the uncommon expense to which we have been put by the disaffection of our own people, the debt due from the Continent, and the disappointment we have met with in striking money, the Convention of this State would have done something therein at their own risk.

Mr. Hubbard promised to give your Excellency some information relative to the forts in the Highlands, and the General that commands. The subject is too delicate for a letter.

Your Excellency sees the opinion I have of your patience and good nature, by venturing to obtrude upon them these crude and hasty remarks, which I have not even leisure to copy. Perhaps I might find some excuse for them in my anxiety for the great cause which your Excellency supports, and my knowledge of a country which you have had no opportunity to explore.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

ROB'T R. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Constitution, October 12, five o'clock, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I am informed a large body of the enemy's troops have landed at Frog's Point. If so, I suppose the troops here will be wanted there. I have three brigades in readiness to reinforce you. General Clinton's brigade will march first, General Nixon's next, and then the troops under the command of General Roberdeau. I don't apprehend any danger from this quarter at present. If the force on your side are insufficient I hope these three brigades may be ordered over, and I with them, and leave General Ewing's brigade to guard the post. If the troops are wanted over your side, or likely to be in the morning, they should be got over in the latter part of the night, as the shipping may move up from below, and impede, if not totally stop the troops from passing. I wait your Excellency's further commands. Should be glad to know where the enemy has landed, and their numbers.*

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's obedient servant,

N. GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters.

N. B. The tents upon Staten-Island have been all struck, as far as discovery has been made.

PRESIDENT OF THE NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO SAMUEL TEN BROECK.

Fishkills, October 12, 1776. }

SIR: Yours of the 9th and 10th instant have been received and laid before the Committee. They had some days before been convinced that more effectual measures were necessary to be taken for the safety of your district, and had come into the enclosed resolutions, copies of which were sent forward on the 8th instant.

It is hoped instead of the number of men you request, the company ordered to be raised will be sufficient to answer every purpose intended. In the mean time I am directed to assure you that the Committee will afford you every necessary assistance in their power.

I am, sir, &c.,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To Samuel Ten Broeck, Esq.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO ROBERT YATES.

Albany, October 12, 1776.

SIR: Since I wrote you on Monday last I have been confined to my bed, by very severe rheumatick pains, which attacked me in the head and stomach, and although I am very unfit to write on any subject which requires much reflection, yet as no time is to be lost in raising the new army, I shall venture to give you a few hints.

I need not with gentlemen urge the necessity of discipline and subordination in an army, nor need I point out the variety of evils an army without them are incident to. These I doubt not must occur to every person who has seen disciplined and undisciplined troops, as those of the American States are. In some measure to remedy which, and introduce order, I would propose:

1st. That all recruiting officers should have orders not to enlist men for any particular company or regiment, but engage them for any of the regiments of this State, to be disposed of as Convention should direct.

2dly. That drilling officers should be stationed at Albany, or any other convenient place, to whom every recruiting officer should without delay send his recruits as fast as he gains them.

3dly. That the drilling officers keep the recruits at constant exercise.

4thly. That the men should be so disposed of as to be commanded by officers whose usual residence is most remote from the men's.

5thly. Every recruiting officer to take the age, size, com-

* October 12, 1776.—Early in the morning, eighty or ninety British boats, full of men, stood up the Sound from Montresor's Island, Long-Island, &c. The troops landed at Frog's Neck, and their advance pushed towards the causeway and bridge, at West-Chester Mill. Colonel Hand's riflemen took up the planks of the bridge as had been directed, and commenced a firing with their rifles. The British moved towards the head of the creek, but found here also the Americans in possession of the pass. General Heath immediately (as he had assured Colonel Hand he would do) ordered Colonel Prescott, the hero of Bunker's Hill, with his regiment, and Captain-Lieutenant Bryant, of the Artillery, with a three-pounder, to reinforce the Riflemen at West-Chester Causeway; and Colonel Graham, of the New-York line, with his regiment, and Lieutenant Jackson, of the Artillery, with a six-pounder, to reinforce at the head of the creek. All of which was promptly done to the check and disappointment of the enemy. The British encamped on the neck. The Riflemen and Yagers kept up a scattering popping at each other across the marsh; and the Americans on their side, and the British on the other, threw up a work at the end of the causeway. Captain Bryant, now and then, when there was an object, saluted the British with a field-piece. In the afternoon, forty or fifty sail of vessels passed up, and came to anchor off Frog's Point. The same evening, General McDougall's brigade joined our General's division.—Heath.

plexion, colour of hair and eyes, and natural or artificial marks of every recruit, with an account of the place of his birth and occupation.

In order speedily to raise the men, I would propose that recruiting officers should be immediately sent into both armies, furnished with money to pay the bounty, a premium to the officer who shall enlist most men, and a certain allowance for each man enlisted.

As clothing is at present so high that it takes almost a year's pay completely to clothe a soldier in the manner he ought to be, would it not be well if the State was to pay the difference between a moderate price and the present excessive high price, and let the soldiers be only put under stoppage for the first; thus to determine the price of the clothing, which I think should be uniform, and consist of one hat, two shirts, two rollers, one pair of woollen breeches, two pair stockings, one pair shoes, one pair gaiters, one pair buckles, a coat, and waistcoat. What other necessities they may at any time want, to be ordered by the Colonel, with the advice of his Lieutenant-Colonel, Major, and Captains, or a majority of them, and the men put under stoppages for it.

The rank of officers in Colonel Van Schaick's and Colonel Nicholson's stands in the order in which they are in the enclosed roll. The rank of Colonel Winkoop's has never been sent me. I do not know if Congress has fixed it.

Three regiments from Pennsylvania and New-Jersey will leave Tyonderoga by the first of next month. I believe many of those would be recruited.

As the Convention may not be able to procure clothing, it may be asked how they can determine the price. Congress have taken measures to supply clothing; a good deal is collected here by my order, and now making up. This is to be delivered to any soldiers that will engage in the new army; an account is kept of the expense, and Convention can pay the difference into the Pay Office here, or stand charged with it in account with Congress. The recruiting officers can be supplied with the bounty money out of the military chest here.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Robert Yates, Esq., and the gentlemen of the Committee of Convention, &c.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, October 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have received your favours of the 7th and 10th instant, and am pleased to find you and your armada ride in Valcour bay in defiance of the power of our foes in Canada. The Liberty arrived last night, and sails this moment with the provisions you wrote for, and some of Mr. Yancey's best beef. I have long ago urged the necessity for continuing to increase our naval strength upon the lake, and shall now send your letter to General Schuyler, and desire him to make such extract from it as is further requisite to induce Congress to direct the forwarding that useful work.

No news is good news; for except what is in the enclosed paper, I know none to send you. I firmly believe that the beating the enemy received from our troops upon Monday the 16th ultimo, and the fire of New-York, have cooled their ardour so much, that it remains a doubt with me whether General Howe will make another attempt before he gets succours from England. Perhaps his foreign and national troops have disagreed. Perhaps he waits fresh instructions from his master. Whatever is the cause of his inaction, it is quite certain he has given our army three weeks to form their blockade of New-York, and to strengthen their posts in such a manner as not to be forced but with greater loss than I think General Howe can afford.

Enclosed is a resolve of Congress, which, when put in execution, will establish their independency, and effectually and forever put a period to the domination of Great Britain.

My respectful compliments to General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To General Schuyler.

[Duplicate of the above to Brigadier-General Arnold.]

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, October 12, 1776, five o'clock, P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: I have so frequently troubled you with false alarms that I am almost loth to trouble you on the present occasion, but as in war the minutest circumstances should be attended to, I send you an express by land, and enclose you two depositions. By these there must have been an action down the lake yesterday. The deponents are men of character. I make no doubt if the enemy have attempted to come up, they have got a flogging. I have heard nothing from the fleet to-day. The wind was so strong no boat could come up.

I am desirous of knowing what action it was, and in order to give you proper information, shall immediately despatch a boat towards the fleet. It is by boating, I believe, so many of my people get the ague.

I am, honoured sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

P. S. Present my compliments to General St. Clair. I enclose you a return of this regiment.

The schooner is just in sight. I shall not send my boat.

MAJOR HOISINGTON TO GENERAL GATES.

Newbury, October 12, 1776.

Intelligence given by four deserters from Canada, who enlisted out of prison at Quebeck into the Royal Emigrant Regiment, commanded by Colonel McLean, is, that on the 25th of September they left Montreal, and before they left the above place Sir John Johnson, with the Indians and Canadians, and Eighth Regiment, had marched to attack the inhabitants on the Mohawk river, and meet General Burgoyne at Albany, who has ordered all the forces from Chamblé and Sorrel to St. John's, with the marines and train of artillery, and sailors, to but three men in each vessel. Likewise, as they passed on the east side of the lake on Sunday, the 6th instant, heard a very heavy cannonade on the lake, supposed to be with the fleet. The above deserters were found by one of my scouts about forty miles out, destitute of provisions, and very weak. They being desirous to go to Head-Quarters, near New-York, I have passed the above deserters for that place.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOAB HOISINGTON.

To His Excellency Major-General Gates.

COLONEL CUSHING TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Camp at Newport, in the State of Rhode-Island, }
October 12, 1776. }

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: According to your orders I have marched my regiment to this State. When I came, found Colonel Richmond (whose commission bears an earlier date than mine) here encamped, and all things went well. But he has orders to march and join the army near New-York; his regiment has this day decamped, and when he himself is gone, my commission takes place. But Colonel Cook, who commands a regiment of Militia lately raised in this State, claims rank though his commission is of later date, contrary, as I think, to an express rule and determination of the General Congress. He founds his claim on a particular order of a Committee chose by the Court of this State, and vested with extensive authority to transact matters during the recess of the Court. Hence arises a difficulty between Colonel Cook and myself; he can't resign the rank the Committee has given him, and it appears to me not proper or right for me to resign the rank that the Congress have determined. Though with regard to myself personally considered, and considering the shortness of my time here, the matter in dispute is a matter of indifference to me; but I would by no means do or cede any thing contrary to Congress, or dishonourary to our State, or to my regiment. Colonel Hall, the bearer of this, is to go by way of Providence, and Colonel Cook desires he would call upon the Secretary there for a copy of the proceedings of the above-named Committee relative to this affair, which copy, if he preserves, will exhibit to your Honours; likewise Colonel Hall, if desired, can give you a more particular account of this matter. I humbly desire your Honours will be pleased to give me your orders or direction how I shall conduct with respect to this difficulty, and favour me with the same soon as may be.

I am your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,
JNO. CUSHING, JUN.

To the honourable Council and the honourable House of Representatives of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

Providence, October 12, 1776.

Captain Arthur Crawford, of this place, has taken and sent into a safe port, a ship from London, bound for Quebeck, laden with blankets, woollen cloths, Irish linens, sheeting, dowlas, shoes, stockings, boots, brandy, port-wine, bottled porter, cheese, &c. Her cargo, when she started, was estimated at fifteen thousand pounds sterling. He has likewise taken two ships from Jamaica.

Tuesday last arrived from a cruise, the sloop Providence, Captain Jones, in the service of the United States. During her cruise she took thirteen prizes, most of them fishermen; six of which she burnt or sunk, after taking out the hands, and ordered the others to different ports. One of them is arrived at the eastward.

Captain Coffin, in the Favourite privateer, of this port, has taken a ship from Jamaica, bound for London, laden with sugar, rum, limes, pimento, &c. This prize is also arrived in a safe harbour.

Thursday last arrived the privateer Industry, Captain Child, of this port. About a fortnight since, he fell in with a very large Jamaica ship, mounting ten carriage-guns, which he engaged for several hours; but the sea running high, and his vessel making much water, he could only bring two of his guns to bear, and was finally obliged to quit her. Captain Child had two men killed, and five or six wounded.

We hear that the Cerberus frigate has this week retaken two valuable prizes, that had been captured by some of our privateers. The hands that were put on board one of them escaped in their boat.

Exeter, N. H., October 12, 1776.

Wednesday next, the General Assembly of this State are to meet in this town, by desire of the Committee of Safety, in consequence of the resolve of Congress relative to forming a new army. Circular letters to all the members for this purpose, were sent off by express last Saturday.

Last Friday, Captain Thomas Palmer, of Portsmouth, arrived there in seven weeks from France, with a valuable cargo of powder, small-arms, flints, lead, &c.

On the 16th of September he met with a large fleet of thirty-three sail of English transports, among which he took three to be men-of-war, and being so near, that he and a gentleman, passenger on board, who is going to South-Carolina, were both obliged to throw over all their papers and letters of consequence, expecting every moment to be taken.

These gentlemen also inform that the French have two fleets at sea, one of nine and the other of eleven sail-of-the-line, who are supposed to cruise, in order to prevent the progress of the Russian fleet in the Baltick. In all French ports American vessels are received with the utmost indulgence imaginable, and the French are daily in expectation of hearing the Colonies had declared their independency of Great Britain; that an embargo had been laid three months on all shipping outward bound in Spain, expecting daily a declaration of war with Portugal.

Should a war between Spain and Portugal take place, France will inevitably assist Spain; and England, being by treaty obliged to assist Portugal with a certain body of troops, will have both the Powers of Spain and France to fight.

Thursday last, Captain Parker, in a privateer, who sailed from Portsmouth about three weeks ago, sent in a prize schooner, loaded with fish and oil; and in pursuit of several more, in sight, when he despatched the above.

Portsmouth, N. H., October 12, 1776.

Last Wednesday arrived at Falmouth, a prize ship of between three and four hundred tons, from Portsmouth, in England, to Quebeck, laden with powder, nails, beef, butter, &c.; had sixteen carriage guns, eight of which were mounted. She was taken by a privateer from Newbury, by stratagem.

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, October 13, 1776.

SIR: Before the receipt of this, you will have seen Mr. Carmichael, to whom I refer you on many subjects. Yours of the 8th I received since his departure, and have only to ask of you to procure the proper testimonials of this very extraordinary and cruel proceeding at H, respecting Mr. Shoemaker, a family of which name I knew in Philadelphia. These testimonials will be a proper ground to go upon in demanding satisfaction, which I do not think, however, had best be asked until the independence of the Colonies has been formally announced; and proper powers for this step have been delayed strangely, or, perhaps, interrupted. Your zeal in this cause reflects honour on your private as well as publick sentiments of justice and rectitude, and I will transmit to the honourable Congress of the United States in my first letters a copy of your memoir. I am still without intelligence of any kind from America, save that on the 20th of August, a battle was hourly expected at New-York. No prospect of reconciliation. The British forces in Canada are not likely to effect any thing this season; and, consequently, all hopes in England rest on the event of a single action at New-York, which the publick are made to believe will prove decisive; and so it may, if the fate of the day should be for us, and the enemy have no retreat or resources in America; but by no means decisive if it incline the other way. I trouble you with the enclosed for Mr. Carmichael.

I am, with great respect, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

WILLIAM FITZHUGH TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Annapolis, Maryland, October 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I had the honour to receive your favour of the 5th instant, and am much obliged to you.

I hope you will forgive the trouble I have given and may hereafter give you by recommendations, and show no more regard to them than you think, or may know, they deserve, as in my situation I have many applications which might be thought unfriendly to reject. You may, however, be assured that I will not name to you a man whom I do not know or believe to be worthy.

I suppose Lieutenant Steward, if he deserves it, will be promoted in the corps to which he belongs; and with respect to Wilkinson, who I verily believe is a young fellow of great merit, I will endeavour, as you are pleased to advise, to get him provided for in the battalions to be raised here. But in the interim, as I presume you have frequent communication with General Gates, or the commanding officer of the Northern department, I should be much obliged to you for making mention of him, referring to his conduct and behaviour.

This Convention have now sent Commissioners to your camp, to incorporate our Independent companies, and to form into battalions such of our Flying-Camp as will enter on the terms and conditions directed by Congress for the Continental army, and carrying with them blank commissions for such officers who will continue, or may be promoted. I cannot say that conferring such a trust was entirely agreeable to me; but as it could not be avoided, I moved for and carried an instruction, "that the Commissioners be instructed to consult with and take the advice of his Excellency General Washington respecting the promotion or appointment of officers." This I imagine will guard against an evil which their want of experience and knowledge in military affairs perhaps could not have been avoided.

As my particular friend General Beall is of the Flying-Camp, and the term of their service will expire on the 1st day of December next, I could wish to have had him appointed Colonel of the incorporated Independent companies; but it was thought it might be injurious to the Field Officers of Colonel Smallwood's regiment. However, if a battalion is formed out of the Flying-Camp and remainder of the Independent companies now with you, for the Continental service, the Brigadier (if he will accept of it) ought, of course, to have the command. It would be a pity, and a real loss to the service, if so valuable an officer as Beall should be discharged from it, as must be the case at the expiration of the term of the Flying-Camp unless some provision is made for him. I believe this gentleman had the honour to be known to you in former service, and therefore will not say more of him at present. His Brigade-Major is a brave young man, and I hope will be provided for in the new corps.

I am glad your loss on evacuating New-York was not greater than you mention. It is less than I feared and expected. I never looked on New-York as a place tenable against an enemy commanding the water, even if their land force had been inferior to what it was, and I heartily rejoice at your having made so good a retreat from it; but am still distressed to think of your winter quarters, considering the want of tents, warm-clothing, &c. Yet, as many reinforcements are going to you, and I trust will be provided with every thing necessary, I doubt not but that you will be able to keep your adversaries within due bounds this campaign, and that they will be sick of their enterprise before the middle of next summer. I am sorry to find that the delay of Congress to settle a Confederation has created some jealousy and uneasiness; but hope it will not be attended by any evil consequences.

I believe our Convention now sitting will remonstrate with Congress on the subject of Crown lands in the different States, not already granted or located, as there is an opinion held up that all such lands ought to be applied to defray the general expense of the United States in the war.

We have ordered eight battalions for the Continental army, including our troops already sent, or such of them as will engage during the war, to be raised immediately, and have no doubt of their being completed in proper time, as the inhabitants of this State appear to me to have a warm zeal for the cause of America.

I was applied to by many members of Convention to go as one of the Commissioners to New-York, and should have been exceedingly happy in the opportunity of paying my personal respects to you, but am so very blind that I can scarcely walk across a room, and as matters of importance must come on, in the formation of a new Government, which is now under consideration, I did not think myself at liberty, or that it would be prudent, to leave the Convention at this time, and therefore declined it.

Mrs. Fitzhugh is now with me, and joins in affectionate compliments and best wishes for your health and success.

I have the honour to be, with sincere regard, your Excellency's affectionate and obliged humble servant,

WILLIAM FITZHUGH.

P. S. Permit me to recommend to your countenance and favour Captain Thomas Smyth, Jun., of Colonel Richardson's battalion, Flying-Camp, formerly a Lieutenant in Colonel Smallwood's regiment. He is a son of my particular friend, Thomas Smyth, Esq., of Chester-Town, who is now a member of our Council of Safety and Convention, and is a brave and worthy young gentleman.

This will be delivered to you by Thomas Contee, Esq., who goes to the camp as one of our Commissioners. I beg leave to introduce him to your usual civility.

The enclosed is a part of our Commissioners' instructions, referred to in this letter.

Dear sir, yours affectionately,

WILLIAM FITZHUGH.

"That the Commissioners be instructed to consult with and take advice from his Excellency General Washington, respecting the promotion or appointment of officers in Colonel Smallwood's regiment, and appointments to be made in the battalions to be formed of the Independent companies and Flying-Camp of this State."

AQUILLA HALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 13, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the resolve of Convention of the 10th September last, to select a company of volunteers out of the Twenty-Third Battalion in Harford County, I now make a return of the officers' names which are appointed to that company, and am of opinion a completer company has not gone from Maryland. The officers are: Francis Holland, Captain; John Carlisle, First Lieutenant; William Young, Second Lieutenant; and Robert Morgan, Ensign. If their commissions are sent to me shall take care to have them delivered with despatch. I have advanced to Mr. William Roe £3 10s. 4d., for his expenses and trouble in going to Annapolis for the money for the company, as per the account enclosed, and beg the favour of your sending the money by the first safe hand, as cash is very scarce with me.

I am, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

AQUILLA HALL.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., President.

LIEUTENANT BOND TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, Sunday Morning, October 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Norwood being out of town, I take the liberty of answering your letter. I have eighteen men in the barracks in Baltimore which has received their bounty, and some of them a month's advance; and I believe the Second Lieutenant has nine, which is all the men there is enrolled in Captain Norwood's company, and I don't think the remainder could be got in less than a month from this time. Twelve of those men are willing to enlist during the war, or be turned over to another company if none of their officers go with them.

Captain Deems is likewise out of town; 'tis probable you may not hear from him per this express. He wants a number of his men, perhaps ten or twelve. The expense of our men has been considerable, and I would be glad to know, as they are at my charge, whether they will be turned over to Deems's company, or discharged, and go free with what they have. I will forward your letter to Captain Norwood as fast as possible, that he may return the money not expended; and in the interim remain, gentlemen, your very obedient servant,

NATHANIEL BOND,

First Lieutenant of Norwood's Company.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

P. S. Since writing the above I have seen Captain Deems, who has agreed to wait on you himself to-morrow morning; and if Captain Norwood does not come in town, I will likewise wait on you with the names of the men that's enrolled.

N. B.

THOMAS HUGHES TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Charles-Town, Cecil County, October 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I was in hopes I should by this day's post have received some instructions from your Board about Captain Maxwell's company's marching, as they have been furnished some days with guns and blankets and a few (not above four or five) bayonets, which is all that could be got here. Mr. Hartshorn called at Baltimore agreeable to your order, and got cartouch-boxes and haversacks, and I am told the canteens have since arrived at the Head-of-Elk; but no tents are yet come, and the people here ask such an exorbitant price for their coarse linen, that I think, if there is any probability of getting them in Philadelphia, it would be better for the company to go that far without them. However, I shall act in that respect agreeable to your instructions, which I hope you will forward as soon as possible.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

THO. HUGHES.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN FALCONER.

Philadelphia, October 13, 1776.

SIR: We are in great want of coals to make anchors and other smith's work for the frigates here, and as you are going on publick business into the States of Connecticut, Rhode-Island, Massachusetts, and New-Hampshire, you may probably meet with some coals fit for smith's use, that have been or may be taken on board some of the prizes sent into those places. Should that happen, we request you will purchase as many as will load two schooners or sloops, and send them to us immediately. For this purpose we desire you will buy two fast-sailing Marblehead schooners or sloops that will sail and carry well. Buy them cheap as possible, and if you get coals send them here directly. If you get the schooners but cannot get the coals, then put some salt, sugars, or rum, on board, as much in value as you think will pay for a load of coals for each, at about two shillings per bushel, and despatch them with the same immediately for James river, Virginia, consigned to the Hon. Benjamin Harrison, Esq., enclosing him an invoice of the goods you send, and advising him to sell those goods and load the vessel with coals immediately, despatching the same to us.

You will take care to procure active, good masters, mates, and men, and manage the whole to the best advantage for the publick; and as you have this and other business to transact, we deliver you herewith four thousand dollars, for which you are to account on your return. We also give you letters of credit and recommendation to the Continental agents in each State, and a warrant authorizing you to survey the Continental frigates at Rhode-Island; but since this was agreed to we have heard these frigates are completed and ready for the sea, which we hope may be true.

We are, sir, your very humble servants.

To Captain Nathan Falconer.

MARINE COMMITTEE—CIRCULAR.

Philadelphia, October 13, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered to you by Nathaniel Falconer, Esq., a gentleman in our service, and who has in charge to execute some business for us in yours or the neighbouring States. Should he stand in need of your assistance we hope it will be readily afforded him, and if he wants money you may depend that his drafts will be paid. We recommend this gentleman to your friendly attention, and are, sir, your very humble servants.

To Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., Esq.; Daniel Tillinghast, Esq.; John Bradford, Esq.; John Langdon, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMITTEE AT RHODE-ISLAND.

Philadelphia, October 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We fear our orders of the 9th instant for sending a set of cannon from your State to New-Hampshire, may not be so proper as we thought them at the time of signing; because we are since informed through several channels, that the frigates building under your direction are quite or very near fit for the sea, which is a very different account from that which caused us to send that order. Therefore to prevent inconvenience, or disadvantage to the publick service, we despatch this immediately after the other, and desire you may not forward the said cannon for Portsmouth, if your ships are actually ready for service, for our view is only to get such of the frigates as are ready into action, and it matters not to us whether it be your's or the New-Hampshire frigate that goes first. But you will still answer what we have said to Governour Hopkins respecting cannon.

We are, gentlemen, your humble servants.

To the Committee employed in building and fitting frigates at Rhode-Island.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, October 13, 1776.

SIR: Since sending you our orders of the 9th instant, we are well informed that the frigates at Rhode-Island are ready for sea, and if that is really the case, it would be improper to strip them of the cannon to send them to you. We have now wrote the Committee to keep their cannon if their ships are actually fit for service, for we did not mean by the former order to give a preference; it was our design only to prevent the guns from lying useless there when you wanted them. But we desire them to tell us whether they will not cast another set, and on what terms.

We are, sir, your humble servants.

To John Langdon, Esq.

GOVERNEUR MORRIS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Boonton, New-Jersey, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty to enclose you a letter which I brought in person to have delivered. Truth is, a series of accidents too trifling for recital, have prevented me the pleasure of attending the Convention according to my serious intention for upwards of a month past. Among the last, let me mention the loss of all my horses. As soon as I can find any one of them, or purchase another, I shall hasten to the Fishkills. Mr. Lott is to my knowledge employed in perfecting a state of his accounts for the inspection of the House, and is, I assure you, the remotest degree possible from contravening, disbelieving, or doubting your authority, which, I dare say, he will give you the fullest evidence of. But the disorders of the State have affected the private affairs of every person near to the immediate seat of confusion. Judge then whether intricate accounts can be instantly adjusted from papers hastily thrown together and moved upon the spur of the occasion by any person whatsoever, much less by one who is liable to continual interruptions by those who, being fellow sufferers with him in the general calamity, claim the right of hospitality at his board.

I am, respectfully, sir, yours, GOUV'R MORRIS.

To the honourable the President of the Convention of the State of New-York. In the care of Robert Morris, Esq., Hackensack.

RICHARD DALLAM TO MICHAEL HILLEGAS.

State of New-Jersey, Brunswick, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I am requested by the Deputy Quartermaster-General to transmit to Gustavus Risberg, his assistant at Philadelphia, the number of nineteen thousand seven hundred and forty dollars, but having no convenient opportunity of transmitting it by, and thinking it may be of publick service to have it paid in Philadelphia, I have taken this liberty to mention it to you, and if you can, consistent with your office, pay the aforesaid sum of nineteen thousand seven hundred and forty dollars, and debit me therewith till I obtain another order on you from Congress, which I must soon apply for, you will oblige me as well as Colonel Biddle.

The Congress have pointed out to me no particular mode of transacting such matters as this, though I have requested, which is the reason of my applying to you in this manner.

I expect to be in Philadelphia towards the last of this week, on a visit to Mrs. Dallam, from whom I never was half so long absent, and will get this in interim.

I am, sir, your very obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD DALLAM, D. P. M. Gen'l.

To Michael Hillegas, Esq., Treasurer.

CAPTAIN SMITH (ENGLISH) TO SAMUEL GLOVER.

Brookhaven, Long-Island, N. Y., October 18, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of instructions I have just received from Head-Quarters, you are forthwith to impress wagons and horses for his Majesty's service. The number is unlimited; therefore do not stint the cause. If you can't get a sufficient number of wagons, teams will answer, a driver for every team, which you'll send without loss of time, to White Stone, near Flushing. I beg, sir, you'll exert yourself on this occasion. Don't omit one moment, as it seems to be critical.

JACOB SMITH, Capt. 1st Comp. 1st Bat.
De Lancey's Brigade.

To Samuel Glover.

COLONEL EWING TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Camp near Harlem, October 13, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIRS: I arrived here the 18th ultimo, where I found the three companies I forwarded from Baltimore, under the care of Major Eden, Captain Posey, Young, and Lowe, the latter of which I found wounded, which he received in an engagement which happened the Monday before I arrived. The next day we were joined by Captain Hanson and Magruder, the 22d by Captain Tillard and Bowie, and the 1st instant by Captain Forrest, so that I have eight companies here, and am in daily expectation of Captain Brooks's company, which will complete my battalion. Sorry I am to inform you that the battalion is very sickly. By the last return, I had two hundred and thirty-seven privates sick, besides officers, owing to our lying on the cold ground, without straw or plank, which is not to be had, and medicine very scarce. Great numbers of the soldiers are badly off for clothing. I have given the Captains orders on the Continental store for what things they want, but even there they cannot be supplied. Numbers of the soldiers are without blankets. Several who never received any, and some of the first three companies lost theirs in leaving New-York.

I have furnished General Beall with the account of all the arms and accoutrements received by my battalion from the State of Maryland, as delivered me by the Captains, all but Captain Posey, who is in the country at sick lodgings.

Yesterday morning we were alarmed here by an express which arrived at Head-Quarters from General Heath, who commands over King's Bridge, informing his Excellency that the enemy had landed about four thousand troops, with an intent of cutting off our communication with the country; upon which we were all ordered to our alarm-posts, and General McDougall's brigade, in which is Colonel Smallwood and the Independent companies, were ordered to march immediately to King's Bridge. There was a report in the evening that the enemy were in possession of East and West-Chester; if so, am doubtful the sick and wounded, with a great deal of stores, are fallen into their hands.

There is orders come out for our soldiers to cook three days' provisions, and to hold themselves in readiness for an immediate march, by which it is thought we will evacuate this island.

About four days ago there was three men-of-war, frigates, went up North River past all our forts. One gentleman walked the second deck, seemingly in command, as if nothing was the matter, and seven forts keeping a constant fire at the ship. What damage was done is uncertain, but believed to be very trifling.

Our soldiers, what of them are in health, appear to be in good spirits, though ragged, and several without shoes to their feet. The three first companies have gained great honour under command of the Major, who I believe to be a brave man; and I'm in hopes the other companies when tried, will not disgrace them. All the Field Officers here would be much obliged to you for the settlement of the rank of the battalions and the officers of the Flying-Camp. It is a very material affair; therefore hopes on receipt of this you will settle it, and inform us how.

I have ordered the Captains to draw out the pay-roll of their several companies agreeable to the mode here, by which those of the officers who have not settled with you will lose mileage. I have assured them that I have no doubt but you will make it good to them.

I am, with due respect, honourable sirs, your most obedient servant,

THOS. EWING.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

Mr. Parsons, my Quartermaster, is arrived, who informs me you are angry at my not writing, which is the cause of my sending you so long an epistle, the incorrectness of which you will please excuse.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM HARLEM, DATED OCTOBER 13, 1776.

Yesterday morning, about four thousand of the enemy landed at Fagg's, or Frog's Point, about six miles above us. A detachment was immediately sent to oppose them; the enemy got possession of the point, but, as I was informed last night, had made no farther progress. Our people, I am told, had taken up a bridge which was there, and felled trees across the road, to obstruct them till a reinforcement could arrive. In the afternoon, forty-two sail passed the mouth of Harlem river, in their way to the point. They consisted of sloops, schooners, brigs, and nine ships. I expect there will be bloody work there to-day. From the number of men landed and the ships that went up, I think this can be no feint, but that the main body of Howe's army must be there, and that there he intends to make his coup. This week will probably finish the campaign.

The day before yesterday the General's barge, which had run up the North River before the ships, returned, and came opposite to Mount Washington, where our people mistook her for one of the enemy's boats, fired at her, killed three men, and wounded the Captain.

Upon the ships' arrival at Dobbs's Ferry, they landed some men, and plundered a storehouse, which is all the damage I hear of their doing.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL WARD.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I have been favoured with your two letters of the 3d and 6th instant. In answer to the first, I am not only willing, but shall be much obliged by your settling with the gentlemen to whom money was advanced for purchasing arms, and for which purpose I have transmitted a list of the warrants that were drawn in their favour. Before I left Cambridge, some of the gentlemen (three, four, or more of them) accounted with me; but having sent away my books, in which their names and the balances they paid in were enclosed, some time before the evacuation of New-York, I cannot particularize them, and therefore have forwarded a list of the whole.

In respect to the latter, and the invoice it contains, as the articles seem all to be necessary, and many of them are much wanted, I think you cannot do better than to order them to be sent to the Quartermaster-General, for the use of the army here.

We are again deprived of the navigation of the North River, and the supplies which used to come through that channel, by means of the enemy's fleet, three of their ships-of-war, with three or four tenders, having passed our batteries and chevaux-de-frise, on the morning of the 9th, without any apparent damage from the former, though a heavy fire was kept up as they went by, or any interruption from the latter. They now lay at Tarrytown, twenty-five or thirty miles above this.

Yesterday the enemy landed a considerable body of men at Frog's Point, about nine miles from hence up the Sound, and several vessels following in the evening, with troops on board, and from the information received from two deserters who came out last night, we have reason to believe that their main force is now there, and that they have in view the prosecution of their original plan, that of getting in our rear, and cutting off our communication with the country.

The place they are at is rather an island than a point, on every flood-tide being surrounded by water. I have posted a part of our force on the passes leading from it, and have directed some small works to be thrown up for their security.

I am, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Ward, Boston.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL TASH.

Head-Quarters, October 13, 1776.

SIR: Since I wrote you by Lieutenant-Colonel Welch, upon the subject of fixing on quarters for your troops, I have received from the Committee of Safety for this State such an account of its alarming situation, owing to the number of disaffected, together with the little confidence that can be placed on the Militia of some of the Counties, that I find it necessary to order a part of the New-Hampshire troops to their assistance, and do therefore direct you to march your regiment with all possible despatch to Fishkills, where you will receive further directions from the Committee. I think it will be proper to send an officer forward to give the Committee notice of your coming, that they may assign you the places where it will be most suitable to post your men. I am, sir, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Thomas Tash, of the New-Hampshire Militia.

P. S. Do not delay your march a moment, nor the sending an officer to the Convention of this State, now sitting at the Fishkills.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

October 13, 1776.

SIR: It being necessary since the late movement of the enemy to form some plan, the General proposes a meeting of the General Officers this day, at twelve o'clock, at or near King's Bridge. He desires you would give those in your division notice of it, with as little stir as possible, and by the return of the messenger let him know where you would have them meet, as we are strangers to a suitable place.

I am, sir, in haste, your obedient, humble servant,

J. REED.

To General Heath.

COLONEL GRAYSON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to inform you that his Excellency (as the enemy did not attempt landing at Morissania this morning) thinks it would be advisable to send a stronger force towards the two passes near the enemy, where our men were posted yesterday, and also to throw up some works for their cover and defence. He also recommends strongly to your attention, the keeping a good look-out at Pell's Point, at the mouth of East-Chester creek, and at Hunt's and Willet's points, for the sake of gaining intelligence, these posts to be considered as look-outs only. Should the enemy make any movement, you will immediately communicate it to Head-Quarters. You will write to the General by return of this messenger, and let him know what has happened since.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

WILL'M GRAYSON, A. D. C.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath.

JOHN CARTER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I am favoured with your letter of the 4th instant, requiring me, and the gentlemen joined by Congress in commission with me, to audit the accounts of the Northern department, to repair immediately to Ticonderoga. General Schuyler had already acquainted me that he had received a letter from you, in which you desired him to order us up to Ticonderoga. I informed him that we were sent by Congress to this place for the purpose of examining accounts, and that we were not under the direction of any officer in the army. I conceive that the accounts which are to be settled at Ticonderoga are by no means pressing, and that they may be examined at the end of the campaign as well as at present; but was it absolutely necessary that they should be immediately liquidated, there are accounts here of much greater consequence, which will render it impossible for us to leave this place.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,
JOHN CARTER.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, October 13, 1776, half-after 11 o'clock, A. M.

HONOURED SIR: The alarm of yesterday proves to be a true one. The enemy are approaching. The wind is very favourable to them. They have been firing, for two hours past, a few heavy guns. I know not whether our fleet will be able to effect a retreat to this place or not. The enemy, I presume, will be soon on the neighbouring banks. If our fleet should be beat and taken, I shall endeavour to make a retreat, if I have notice in time. I have sent off my sick and heavy baggage. I hope they will be secured and stored.

The want of ball in the fleet may be very unlucky. I am but a young officer, but shall act as well as I can. Captain Church is here on a scout, with forty men. I detain him a little. Should a retreat be necessary, he will make it with us.

You depend upon the alarm guns. I have fired them twice to-day.

I am told two sails are just in sight.

I am, in haste, your most obedient, humble servant,
THOS. HARTLEY.

Newark, in East-Jersey, October 21, 1776.

On the 11th instant, a hot engagement commenced on Lake Champlain, between the fleet under the command of General Arnold and that commanded by General Sir Guy Carleton, which continued almost the whole day, and, for the most part, was greatly in favour of General Arnold, but terminated to the advantage of General Carleton.

William Briggs, a seaman belonging to the Washington galley, on the lake, arrived here last Thursday. He says that the English fleet consists of thirty-six sail, from a twenty-gun ship to a gunboat, the whole commanded by General Sir Guy Carleton, General Burgoyne being indisposed; that two gondolas belonging to the English were sunk, and their crews perished; and that eleven of our vessels out of sixteen were taken, or run ashore and destroyed; that the vessel commanded by General Arnold was run ashore and blown up. The Washington galley, under the command of General Waterbury, and the crew, amounting to one hundred and four, were treated with much politeness, the wounded part taken great care of, all discharged upon their parole, and guarded through the woods by some soldiers, lest they shall fall in with the Indians, who were there in great numbers; that the land forces did not come out with the fleet, but were to follow in a day or two, and, it was said, would invest Ticonderoga last Sunday. Our troops at that post consisted of ten thousand effective men, well supplied, and in high spirits. A bomb-ketch did great damage to our vessels, many of the shells being thrown on board with great exactness. Our loss in the engagement not known; there were four killed, and some wounded, on board the Washington galley.

Colonel Dayton's battalion is ordered from Fort Stanwix to Ticonderoga, and is to be replaced by Colonel Nicoll's, from the German Flats. The Militia of the Counties of Albany, Tryon, &c., were all in motion.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 13, 1776.

SIR: Since mine of the 11th instant by express, have received pretty sure intelligence that a plan is forming by the noted Major Rogers, a famous partisan, or ranger, in the last war, now in the service of General Howe, on Long-Island, where he is collecting a battalion of Tories, with such as he can procure from the main army, many of which we understand have lately stole over to join him, and who are perfectly acquainted with every inlet and avenue into the towns of Greenwich, Stamford, and Norwalk, where are considerable quantities of Continental stores. The design of Rogers, as far as we can learn, is from Huntingdon to make a sudden descent in the night more especially on the town of Norwalk, not only to take the stores there, but to burn and destroy all before them there. It is to be noted that about two hours will bring them over in the night from Huntingdon to Norwalk, or the other towns mentioned, in and near which are many Tories expected to join them.

The Militia lately returned into those towns and others near, are mostly sick and infirm. I have understood that the New-Hampshire Militia on their way for your army, were ordered to be stationed for a while at Norwalk and Greenwich, or Horseneck, but find now they are all moved forward from Norwalk.

I thought it my duty to acquaint your Excellency with every intelligence from the enemy, and of their designs, that you might take such steps as you should think proper to counteract them. The towns mentioned are much alarmed, especially Norwalk, who have taken an active part in bringing off inhabitants, stock, and stores from Long-Island, and are particularly threatened with reprisals being made upon them.

I have ordered Captain Niles, in the Spy, to cruise along the Sound as far westward as it will be safe for him to go, which is perhaps as far as Byram river. He is now in that quarter. I understand there are two small privateer sloops now at or near Norwalk, viz: Captains Rogers and Bond, the one believe belongs to the State of New-York, the other Continental, but am informed they are about leaving that station. If they with Niles were to cruise back and forward along the Sound, and towards the western part, they might be of special service to prevent any sudden incursion of parties of the enemy from Long-Island, as well as be safe convoys for your stores along the coast to Byram. Colonel Niles only can be under my direction. Your plan for a descent on Long-Island is ripening as fast as possible to be put in execution, and as far as I can learn by Colonel Livingston, he cannot make out of those assigned to him above eleven or twelve hundred men. Whether he ought not to be joined or reinforced by as many as to make up two thousand or more, must submit to your Excellency, on whose knowledge and judgment I can most safely rely.

I have enclosed the copies of two letters discovered or forced from the possessors, for your perusal, but the most particular account of Rogers's intentions are from a friendly woman of good character, who made her escape from Huntingdon a few nights ago, where Rogers with his party then was.

Our Assembly are now sitting at this place, and will have to make out the arrangement of the officers for the new army before they rise; therefore should be glad your Excellency would forward the list desired as soon as may be, as I expect one from General Gates of those in his department in a few days.

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

September 27, A. D. 1776.

I had a good passage over to the island, where I am at present, and am like to remain. I am under Captain Fairchild, in Colonel Rogers's battalion of Rangers, and as to news of the Rebel side I find it as false as ever.

I have not heard from home since I came away, and should be exceeding glad if you could send me word. As to my coming away, I must own that my wife as well as all others was ignorant of my coming away, which makes me the more anxious of hearing from home and sending home. The whole say and desire of the army is to have the Rebels stand their ground, and the jig will soon be to an end. I should write to my wife above all others, but be kind enough to let her know that I am well. We expect to remove from Flushing to some other part of the island soon. Be good enough to remember my love to my wife and child, and if she has any desire to see this, let her. And you may tell her from me that the British troops will never give over until they have gained the victory. And furthermore tell her if she regards her own safety not to forsake her own house when the troops come through the country, for whoever leaves home in that sort will have no favour shown to them, but are deemed as Rebels and treated as such.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

New-Haven, October 13, 1776.

SIR: I hope every thing will be prepared on my part, and to your mind, that may facilitate your expedition to Long-Island, though I cannot but wish your party to be increased to at least two thousand men to go with you, or that you should be reinforced with as many as to make up that number soon after your arrival. I have wrote my sentiments to General Washington on that head. Since you left New-Haven have received intelligence, which believe may be depended upon, that the infamous Major Rogers, now employed by General Howe, and who you know was a famous partisan or ranger in the last war, is collecting a battalion of Tories on Long-Island and from the main, many of whom have joined him at Huntingdon; that he proposes soon to make a sudden attack in the night on Norwalk, to take the Continental stores, and lay waste the inhabitants there. Hope we shall be able to frustrate his designs; but thought it on my part to acquaint you with every intelligence I receive from that quarter. Have therefore enclosed you a copy of two letters lately found, and forced from the possessors; but, the most particular account of his plan and intentions are from a friendly woman of good character, who lately made her escape from Huntingdon over to the main a few nights ago. I have no need to apprise you of the art of this Rogers. He has been a famous scouter, or woods-hunter, skilled in waylaying, ambuscade, and sudden attacks; to lead his men on, and very careful to get himself off, though often leaves his men in the lurch.

I dare say you will guard against being surprised by him or any other party. If he could be surprised and taken with one Captain Fairchild and some others, who have joined him, it would be a notable stroke on the Tories at least.

You will be so good as to advise me if any difficulties happen in the way of your preparations, and be assured that nothing shall be wanting in my power to obviate and remove them.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Henry B. Livingston, Saybrook.

JOS. WHIPPLE TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Portsmouth, October 13, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of Safety for this State having by an advertisement bearing date the 25th of July past, very seriously and urgently recommended to the inhabitants and proprietors of the several towns and tracts of land therein, to repair their roads and bridges, so that warlike and other stores might be transported for the defence and use of the inhabitants of the frontier towns, particularly the road leading from Wolfborough through Conway to the Upper Cohos, and the said recommendation having been totally disregarded, excepting only by the Masonian proprietors, who have repaired their road from Wolfborough toward Conway: I therefore, in behalf of myself and the publick, who are great sufferers by said neglect, beg leave with great deference to the judgment of the Committee, to request their immediate consideration on this subject, for as the winter season is now near at hand, it will be a matter of great difficulty to make the repairs a few weeks later. The road which is referred to in the Committee's advertisement, and which is still neglected, leads from the Upper Cohos down to Conway, where the bridges are lifted out of place by a remarkable freshet, which happened a year past, which renders passing almost impracticable for horses, and totally so for a carriage of any kind, and also many trees (wind-falls) lying across the road.

I humbly conceive that a detachment from the companies now stationed at Northumberland and Conway might effect this business, without any detriment to the publick good; which, however, I submit to the wisdom of the Committee.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

J. WHIPPLE.

To the Honourable the Chairman of the Committee of Safety.

Williamsburgh, November 1, 1776.

By a letter from Colonel William Christian to his Excellency the Governour, of the 14th October, we have the following intelligence, viz: That on the 12th, a white man came in with a flag from the Raven warrior of Chote, desiring peace, the night before he crossed Broad river; whose reply was that they must first deliver up Cameron, the incendiary, and our prisoners in their nation, and lay down the hatchet; otherwise he should cross the river and lay waste their towns, only extending mercy to such as had behaved well to the States of America. The Colonel had good reason to believe that this flag was only sent to amuse him, although the real sentiments of three towns under the influence of the Raven. The man who came with a flag informed, that the advanced parties of the enemy were then about his camp, and that the whole strength of the nation would be ready to dispute his crossing the river that evening; which determined the Colonel immediately to set about finding a proper ford, which his lookouts were fortunate enough to discover by seeing four Indians pass over. However, an unfrequented place, a little below, was pitched upon for the purpose, and at ten at night he set out with between ten and eleven hundred men, two hundred of them on horseback, and by one o'clock in the morning got safely over, not without much danger and difficulty, the river being about half a mile broad, deep and rapid, and the night very dark, so that none of the men could wade, and he was frequently obliged to make lights. About an hour before day he marched to within a mile of the spot where he expected the enemy were encamped, and at sunrise surrounded the place, but found the Indians were gone; whereupon he ordered the remaining part of the army, with the provisions and the baggage, to be brought over, which was happily effected. That day the Colonel was informed, by some spies, that the whole force of the nation was near him, with a determined resolution to attack him, and to skirmish with him on his march to the towns. One of their principal views was to destroy the cattle and horses, and in obedience to Stuart's orders (now at Mobile) they were resolved to make no peace, but to fight and retreat. The Colonel expected it would take him four or five days to reach their towns, as he should march very slow, and in order of battle. It was reported that Stuart was sending eight hundred Creeks, who were expected at the Cherokee towns in a very few days. He writes, however, that he shall proceed and endeavour to have matters settled before his return.

General Rutherford, of North-Carolina, he was informed, had returned to about Keowee, after laying waste the valley towns.

Captain James McCall, of South-Carolina, who was taken prisoner the 1st of July last, by the Cherokees, was then with Colonel Christian in his camp, in good health; and desires this piece of intelligence to be made publick for the satisfaction of his family.

Of the 15th Colonel Christian writes, dated Broad river, that he was just then preparing to march a little after sunrise. That Captain Gist came in the night before with a flag from the Raven warrior, to intercede for Chote, as from the answer he received to his first flag, he had turned all of his nation that he had influence over, and moved off with his men from the Indian camp, upon which the others followed. Captain Gist informed, that numbers yesterday morning were moving off their families and corn; that one thousand of the valley and lower settlement Indians are now on this side, having quitted their country, and that Cameron will try to assemble them all somewhere about Hywassee, to defend that place, or bring them to fight. He also says that there are several small parties about our camp, who will do what harm they can; but that no general battle will be fought until our army crosses the Tennessee, or towards Hywassee, if the Colonel follows the enemy there. Colonel Christian supposes that Captain Gist's coming with a flag was only an excuse for his leaving the Indians, and that he seems sorry for what he has done, although many of the army are much exasperated against him.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Baltimore, October 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have a deposition made by Mr. David Evans, a respectable inhabitant of this town, against Francis Saunderson, for sundry expressions, which appeared to us of such dangerous tendency that we conceive it to be our duty to transmit him to you for further examination. We have accordingly sent him under a guard of the Militia, accompanied by Mr. Evans the evidence against him. The charge against Mr. Saunderson enraged the people so much that it was with much difficulty he could be protected from the popular resentment.

By order of the Committee:

SAM'L PURVIANCE, Jun.

To the honourable Council of Safety, Annapolis.

WILLIAM DAVIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, October 14, 1776.

SIR: Permit me to request you will please to assure the honourable the Congress of the grateful sense I entertain of their appointment of me to be Deputy Mustermaster General to the Flying-Camp. As my health is better established than I expected, I hope they will accept my resignation of the commission they were pleased to give me, as the apprehension of a bad state of health was the principal cause of my solicitation. The trouble I have given you will, I hope, be excused.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obliged and most obedient servant,

WILLIAM DAVIS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, President of Congress.

MEMORIAL OF THE CHEVALIER D'ANTIGNAC.

[Read October 16, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Delegates from the STATES OF AMERICA in Congress assembled:

The Memorial of the Chevalier D'ANTIGNAC humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist takes the liberty of offering his services for raising a regiment of Light-Horse. No military person is ignorant of the utility of such troops, either for a coup-de-main, for obtaining intelligence, or for surprising an enemy; in short an army unprovided of such troops must be exposed to many hazards and inconveniences.

The knowledge I have in this part of the service induces me to make the following proposal to the honourable Congress; and if they will place so much confidence in me, I flatter myself my conduct will be approved of. Should it be agreeable to the honourable Congress to raise a regiment of Light-Horse, I will undertake to teach the men to ride, exercise and perform all the necessary evolutions in three months; or should a regiment not be approved of at present, I will undertake to do the same with a company of fifty men, flattering myself the Congress will honour me with the rank of Colonel.

I have had the honour of serving in the King of France's First Company of Musketeers, and it is well known that the King frequently grants regiments to those musketeers who can afford the expense, as that corps consists of the first nobility. But my circumstances did not permit me to arrive at that honour, as supporting the rank of a Colonel in France is attended with a heavy expense; but he can supply what is requisite in this country.

It is not from an interested motive that your memorialist is come into America, but from a principle of honour and liberty; therefore does not desire any pay till he has proved himself worthy the esteem of the honourable Congress, but will serve the campaign at his own expense, rank being all he is ambitious of.

All which is humbly submitted to the consideration of the honourable Congress.

CHAMBARON, Chevalier d'Antignac.

LANCASTER (PENN.) COMMITTEE TO RICHARD PETERS.

In Committee, Lancaster, Pa., October 14, 1776.

SIR: Our last post brought the Committee your letter of the 9th instant, upon receipt of which I applied to Mr. Yeates for your letter respecting Captain Hesketh's baggage, which is now sent by Christian Schwartz's wagoner, being one trunk, one valise, one portmanteau, one pair of canteens, which Sergeant Cooper says contains all the baggage of Captain Hesketh which was under his care, except the coat and breeches mentioned in the Captain's letter to the Sergeant, which are delivered to Allen's wife by Cooper. Sergeant Cooper desires me to mention that Captain Hesketh's late servant, Allen, is dead.

I have made no agreement with the man about the price he is to have for carriage, but leave that to you.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

WILLIAM H. ATLEE, Chairman.

To Richard Peters, Esq.

To His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, Commander-in-Chief of the Troops raised and employed in the service of the FREE, UNITED, AND INDEPENDENT STATES OF AMERICA.

May it please your Excellency:

The honourable House of Assembly of Pennsylvania having, by their commission under their seal bearing date the 6th of April this present year, 1776, been pleased to appoint me a Captain in the First Battalion of the Regiment of Riflemen raised for the protection of that State, and now called out and acting in the Continental service under the immediate command of the Right Honourable Brigadier-General Lord Stirling, I have till now continued to do the duty of my station in the regiment aforesaid; but from the present bad state of my constitution, occasioned by the fatigues and hardships underwent in the present campaign, finding myself unable any longer to sustain the burthen which necessarily attends the command of a company, it is my request that your Excellency will be pleased to accept of my resignation of the commission I bear as aforesaid, (and which I now enclose,) and permit me to pass home to my place of residence.

I am, with the greatest regard, sir, your obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LONG,

Captain Third Co. First B. P. Rifle Regiment.

October 14, 1776.

I do certify that Captain Andrew Long has served this campaign with the First Battalion of the Pennsylvania Riflemen, and that he is now reduced by sickness to an infirm state of health, and that he is unfit for the service.

ENNION WILLIAMS, Major,

First Battalion Pa. Regiment of Riflemen.

To His Excellency General Washington.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 21, 1776: referred to Board of War.]

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 14, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency having gone this morning to visit our posts beyond King's Bridge, and the several passes leading from Frog's Point and the necks adjacent, I have the honour to inform you, by his command, that no interesting event has taken place since his letter by yesterday's post.

Every day's intelligence from the Convention of this State holds forth the discoveries of new plots and of new conspiracies. Some of the members seem to apprehend that circumstances are upon the eve of breaking out, and have suggested the necessity of seizing and securing the passes through the Highlands, lest the disaffected should do it. Their preservation being a matter of the greatest importance, his Excellency, notwithstanding the situation we are in with respect to troops, has detached Colonel Tash, with his regiment, lately from New-Hampshire, in addition to the Militia mentioned in his last, with directions to receive orders from the Convention as to the station and posts he is to occupy.

There are now in our possession several persons, inhabitants of this State, who had engaged to join the enemy, and who were intercepted in going to them. There are also two who confess they have been with them, and that they had actually engaged in their service, but finding the terms (the bounty, pay, &c.) not so advantageous as they expected from the information they had received, they were induced to return. As the affairs of this Government are in a precarious situation, and such as the Convention themselves seem to think forbid their interposition, further than taking measures to apprehend them, his Excellency would wish to obtain the sentiments of Congress, and their direction upon a subject so extremely critical and delicate, and which in the consideration of it, involves many important consequences.

Your favour of the 9th, with its several enclosures, his Excellency received yesterday morning by the express, who proceeded immediately on his journey.

October 17.—I am desired by his Excellency to acquaint you that we are again obliged to change our disposition, to counteract the operations of the enemy declining an attack upon our front. They have drawn the main body of their army to Frog's Point, with a design of hemming us in, and drawing a line in our rear. To prevent the consequences which would but too probably follow the execution of their scheme, the General Officers determined yesterday that our forces must be taken from hence, and extended towards East and West-Chester, so as to out-flank them. General Lee,* who arrived on Monday, has strongly urged the absolute necessity of the measure. It is proposed to leave a garrison at Fort Washington, and to maintain it, if possible, in order to preserve the communication with the Jerseys. They are landing their artillery and wagons upon the point, and there are now several boats passing up the Sound full of men.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBT H. HARRISON.

P. S. The post not having come in since Sunday, till to-day, has been the occasion of not writing you since that time. He was expected as usual, which prevented an express being sent.

GENERAL LEE TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort Constitution, October 14, 1776.

MY DEAR GATES: I write this scroll in a hurry. Colonel Wood will describe the position of our army, which in my own breast I do not approve. Inter nos, the Congress seem to stumble every step. I do not mean one or two of the cattle, but the whole stable. I have been very free in delivering my opinion to 'em. In my opinion, General

* October 14, 1776.—General Heath, with the Generals under his command, reconnoitred the enemy at Frog's Neck; afterwards, the General Officers of the army reconnoitred the various grounds. The same day Major-General Lee was ordered to the command of the troops above King's Bridge, now become the largest part of the American army. But General Washington had desired him not to exercise the command for a day or two, until he could make himself acquainted with the post, its circumstances, and arrangements of duty. A great number of sloops, boats, &c., were passing the Sound eastward, just at dusk, probably conveying ammunition, provisions, &c., to the troops at Frog's Point.—Heath.

Washington is much to blame in not menacing 'em with resignation, unless they refrain from unhinging the army by their absurd interference.

Keep us Ticonderoga; much depends upon it. We ought to have an army on the Delaware. I have roared it in the ears of Congress, but caerent auribus. Adieu, my dear friend; if we do meet again, why we shall smile.

Yours,

C. LEE.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 14, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 12th, addressed to Mr. Tilghman, just now came to hand, which I took the liberty to open, as he is out with his Excellency visiting the posts beyond King's Bridge, and the several passes leading from Frog's Point and the adjacent necks. General Mifflin will write you about the boards, &c., which were coming down, and give directions how they are to be disposed of.

The hint you are pleased to mention may prove of infinite importance. I don't know that its authenticity should be doubted. Many circumstances combine to give it a face of probability, if not of entire certainty. The enemy are still on the point. The report which was first brought, and which was current through the camp, was premature, so far as it regarded their disposition and marching in two divisions to East and West-Chester. Colonel Tash, lately from New-Hampshire, is ordered up with his regiment to your assistance, and for the security of such posts and passes as the Convention may think necessary.

General Lee just now arrived, and is gone after his Excellency. Lord Stirling is well.

I am, in haste, and with respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROB'T H. HARRISON.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enemy have made no move from Frog's Point since yesterday; at least we have heard of none. I am just going up with his Excellency to East and West-Chester, to see how matters stand. I shall therefore be able to give you better information to-morrow.

I am, gentlemen, yours most respectfully,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To Robert R. Livingston or William Duer, Esq., of the Committee of Correspondence, Fishkill.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL NIXON.

King's Bridge, October 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: His Excellency General Washington has directed me to take the command of all the troops on this side of King's Bridge, until further order. I therefore desire that you would have the troops which have marched this day to the eastward of the bridge, by Williams's, completely ready to turn out in case the enemy should make an attack this night. Should the attack be made towards Frog's Point, you will endeavour to support the regiments that are posted at the passes there. Should the attack be made at or near East-Chester landing, you will make the best disposition of your troops and repel them. If you should discover any new movement of the enemy, you will please to send me notice thereof immediately by one of the Light-Horsemen.

I am just informed that a guard is absolutely necessary at Rodman's Point, next to East-Chester creek. Colonel How is near the landing-place with a regiment of Militia. Whether he can mount this guard or not, I cannot tell; it would be well to inquire. You will please to acquaint the other brigade, or brigades if General McDougall's is got down, with the contents of this.

I am, dear sir, with respect, your most humble servant,

W. HEATH.

To Brigadier-General Nixon.

P. S. If there should be no attack your way, and one this way, you will march part of your troops to our assistance, taking care not to weaken your own post too much. We shall do the same to you.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL SARGENT.

King's Bridge, October 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As two or three brigades have moved this day beyond Williams's, you will not march over to support the regiments near Frog's Point without further orders, as this post may be left too bare. This you will mention to Colonel Chester in case of alarm, and to Colonel Hand, &c.

I have just received information that a large number of boats were seen off Willfett's Point about sunset, full of men, and were standing eastward.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

W. HEATH.

To Colonel Sargent.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL REED TO CHARLES PETTIT, DATED WHITE-PLAINS, OCTOBER 14, 1776.

I had at one time concluded that the enemy would go into winter quarters, satisfied with the summer's business, but I find I was mistaken. They have taken post above the main body of our army, keeping constantly the same object in view: that of surrounding us. We have now every advantage of ground, and if the men will fight, I cannot but hope we shall foil them in any attempt they make. My own opinion is, that if we cannot fight them here we cannot any where.

I am sorry to say too many officers from all parts leave the army when danger approaches. It is of the most ruinous consequences. It breaks the spirit that remains, and we are obliged to do the duty of the absent. They should be ordered back without exception, and even compelled.

Every nerve should be strained to collect and forward provisions from Pennsylvania and New-Jersey; for if we can keep the enemy at bay but a little time, they must fight us under great disadvantage, or the season will drive them off. I hope our friends there will do what they can for us, while we are exposing our lives for them.

I was much surprised at your mentioning me as one proposed for Governor. I would not on any account consent to it, or any thing of the kind. Pray do all you can to suppress any such measure.

PETER VAN NESS TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Claverack District, October 14, 1776.

SIR: I beg leave to enclose you a pay roll of a detachment of men out of my regiment, who have been upon the publick service in Manor Livingston last month. By the directions of Mr. Yates, I now take the liberty to request of you to lay the same before the honourable Convention for their approbation, and if they see fit, to order that the same may be discharged at the publick expense of this State. I conceive this requisition will not be thought unreasonable, when I represent to you the exhausted state of my regiment by the voluntary enlistment and repeated drafts that are gone out of the same into the service, as well as the frequent alarms and dangers within and about us to which they are exposed, and upon which occasion they now are and have been frequently called out, to the insupportable damage of many, unless in some measure indemnified at the publick charge. Should the Convention think proper to allow it, give me leave to request of you to acquaint me therewith.

I am your most obedient, very humble servant,

PETER VAN NESS.

To Colonel Peter R. Livingston, President of the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 14, 1776—three o'clock, P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday Mr. Trumbull and myself returned safe from our tour to Tyonderoga. We arrived at Fort George about eleven on the night of the day we left you.

I tender you my sincere thanks, my dear sir, for the civilities I have experienced from yourself and the gentlemen of your family during our stay at Tyonderoga. I hope I shall have it in my power to make a suitable return of good offices. I shall esteem myself happy in serving you at any time. Your free and unrestrained commands will lay additional obligations on me.

Agreeable to your directions, I have ordered Captain Veeder and his company to the saw-mill, at Cheshire's, and have also ordered Captain Hodge, with his company, (who were just returning from desertion,) to go on the road, and have requested Colonel Van Dyke to attend to it that they do their duty faithfully. My General informs me that he has directed Colonel Wynkoop to superintend it.

I have directed Mr. Rensselaer to send to you all the nails he can possibly procure. No spades are to be had; the blacksmiths are ordered to make them as fast as possible. No thread for cartridges is in store; I have directed the store-keeper to collect some for your use. Oakum is not to be had. While I am here, I shall do my utmost endeavours to supply your wants.

As soon as I have a little time, I shall endeavour to procure some dishes, and soup and other plates, for your military family. I think it will be more prudent, because eventually less expensive, to purchase pewter dishes. Indeed, I have reason to apprehend that stone dishes or tea-table furniture, are hard to be got at this juncture. On mentioning it to the General's lady, she agreed that my suspicions were by no means ill-founded. However, you may depend on a supply of one or other sort.

Four o'clock. Just this moment I am honoured with a letter from General Schuyler, enclosing General Arnold's letter to you. I shall transmit a copy to his Excellency by this day's post. I wish the enemy may not have overtaken him ere this, if so, his fleet must undoubtedly fall, if his information be just of the strength of the enemy's fleet, which I cannot doubt at all. He has good reason to render his humble and hearty thanks for saving him from his more than cruel enemies.

I fear the next express will announce something worse. His vessels will not beat to windward. God grant that such gallant officers and men may be preserved for our country's defence. I shall be happy to hear of the fleet's safe arrival at Crown Point.

As soon as the General returns from Saratoga, where he purposes to remain only four or five days, and I have settled my account with him, I shall enter on the duties of my new office, which I hope to execute with justice to my country, and with honour to my friends and myself. I shall, however, be under obligations to you, my dear sir, for your advice and instructions in such parts as I may be deficient. Congress have sent none, though General Schuyler has long since asked it. I shall ever be happy to be taught, especially in matters where my honour as a gentleman is so nicely connected with the duties of the office Congress have been pleased to honour me with.

I wish my most respectful compliments to General St. Clair, Colonel Trumbull, and the gentlemen of your family.

If you are like to have a sacrifice of some of our enemies at your lines, I should be happy to be at Tyonderoga to see them suffer for their temerity.

I am, dear General, with every respectful sentiment, your most obedient and very humble servant,

RICH'D VARICK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

Be pleased to deliver the enclosed.

RICHARD VARICK TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany, October 14, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose you copy of a letter from General Arnold to Major-General Gates, which was this day received by General Schuyler, when on his way to Saratoga, and enclosed to me with directions to send a copy thereof to the Convention.

I congratulate my countrymen on the valour and gallantry our officers and men appear to have evinced on the occasion. This may serve once more to convince our enemies that Americans will and dare fight them, &c., &c., though superiour in numbers and strength.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

RICHARD VARICK.

To the President of the Convention of State of New-York.

P. S. Our fleet consisted of sixteen sail and about eight hundred officers and men. The vessels lost were of small force.

R. V.

COLONEL VARICK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, October 14, 1776, half-after 3, P. M.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose copy of a letter from General Arnold to General Gates, transmitted by the latter from Tyonderoga, and this moment received in General Schuyler's absence, who is now on his way to Saratoga.

The lead arrived at Fort George on Saturday last, and was immediately forwarded; the powder left this on the same day, and is probably now at or near Fort George, where it will not be delayed a moment, the commanding officer having General Schuyler's directions to forward it instantly on its arrival to the army.

I am, very respectfully, your Excellency's obedient and most humble servant,

RICH'D VARICK.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c., &c.

Schuyler's Island, October 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday morning, at eight o'clock, the enemy's fleet, consisting of one ship mounting sixteen guns, one snow mounting the same number, one schooner of fourteen guns, two of twelve, two sloops, a bomb-ketch, and a large vessel (that did not come up,) with fifteen or twenty flat-bottomed boats or gondolas, carrying one twelve or eighteen-pounder in their bows, appeared off Cumberland Head. We immediately prepared to receive them. The galleys and Royal Savage were ordered under way: the rest of our fleet lay at an anchor. At eleven o'clock they ran under the lee of Valcour, and began the attack. The schooner, by some bad management, fell to leeward, and was first attacked; one of her masts was wounded, and her rigging shot away. The Captain thought prudent to run her on the point of Valcour, where all the men were saved. They boarded her, and at night set fire to her. At half-past twelve the engagement became general, and very warm. Some of the enemy's ships and all their gondolas beat and rowed up within musket-shot of us. They continued a very hot fire with round and grape-shot until five o'clock, when they thought proper to retire to about six or seven hundred yards distance, and continued the fire till dark.

The Congress and Washington have suffered greatly; the latter lost her First Lieutenant killed, Captain and Master wounded. The New-York lost all her officers except the Captain. The Philadelphia was hulled in so many places that she sunk about one hour after the engagement was over. The whole killed and wounded amounted to about sixty. The enemy landed a large number of Indians on the island and each shore, who keep an incessant fire on us, but do little damage. The enemy had, to appearance, upwards of one thousand men in batteaus prepared for boarding. We suffered much for want of seamen and gunners. I was obliged myself to point most of the guns on board the Congress, which I believe did good execution. The Congress received seven shot between wind and water; was hulled a dozen times; had her mainmast wounded in two places, and her yard in one. The Washington was hulled a number of times; her mainmast shot through, and must have a new one. Both vessels are very leaky, and want repairing.

On consulting with General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth, it was thought prudent to return to Crown-Point, every vessel's ammunition being nearly three-fourths spent, and the enemy greatly superiour to us in ships and men. At seven o'clock, Colonel Wigglesworth, in the Trumbull, got under way; the gondolas and small vessels followed; and the Congress and Washington brought up the rear. The enemy did not attempt to molest us. Most of the fleet is this minute come to an anchor. The wind is small to the southward. The enemy's fleet is under way to leeward, and beating up. As soon as our leaks are stopped, the whole fleet will make the utmost despatch to Crown-Point, where I beg you will send ammunition, and your further orders for us. On the whole, I think we have had a very fortunate escape, and have great reason to return our humble and hearty thanks to Almighty God for preserving and delivering so many of us from our more than savage enemies.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

P. S. I had not moved on board the Congress when the enemy appeared, and lost all my papers and most of my clothes on board the schooner. I wish a dozen batteaus, well manned, could be sent immediately, to tow up the vessels in case of a southerly wind.

I cannot, in justice to the officers in the fleet, omit mentioning their spirited conduct during the action. B. A.

RICHARD VARICK TO THE COMMITTEE OF STOCKBRIDGE.
Albany, October 14, four o'clock, P. M.
GENTLEMEN: By despatches from General Arnold, arrived about half an hour ago, we are advised that on Friday last our fleet on Lake Champlain had an engagement with that of the enemy; that after a five hours' warm action the enemy thought proper to sheer off. We lost a schooner, (which being disabled was run ashore by her crew and set on fire the night after the action,) a gondola, which sunk after the engagement, and about sixty men killed and wounded. Our fleet are returning to Crown Point to refit, many of the vessels being damaged. The General in his letter says: "I cannot, in justice to the officers in the fleet, omit mentioning their spirited conduct during the action." The enemy's naval force is superiour to ours, and it is not improbable that they will renew the attack. General Schuyler (to whom the letter conveying the above intelligence was directed) met the express on his way to Saratoga, and has given me directions to desire you to keep your Militia in readiness to march at a moment's warning.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your humble servant,
RICHARD VARICK,
Secretary to Major-General Gates.
To the Committee of Stockbridge.
The foregoing is a true copy of a letter sent us by express by General Schuyler.
SAMUEL BROWN, JUN.,
ERASTUS SERGEANT,

Committee of Stockbridge.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.
Saratoga, October 14, 1776, half-after two.
DEAR GENERAL: Two hours ago I received your letter of yesterday's date, about half way between this and Albany. I have ordered all the Militia of this and the neighbouring States to be ready to march at a moment's warning.
The powder is past this, and I have given such orders, that if they are obeyed, you will receive it some time tomorrow. Lest any accident should happen between the landing at the north end of the lake and your post, I think it would be advisable to send a very strong party to escort it.

Pray send me very frequent and particular intelligence, for by that only can I be enabled to regulate my motions in such a manner as to be of most service.
I hope the army will support your exertions. If they do, I trust you and they will both reap never-fading laurels. That you may, is my sincerest wish.
I am, dear General, yours most sincerely, &c., &c., &c.
PH. SCHUYLER.
To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL GATES.
October 14, 1776, five o'clock, P. M.
HONOURED SIR: Lieutenant Stone, who has just this minute returned from the scout I sent him early this morning, and says that this day about one o'clock he saw about a dozen of boats, which he took to be ours, going down below Putman's Point; and that he saw nine sail of the enemy's vessels, as near as he could judge, about eight miles below Crown Point, which is all the discovery he has made. I have sent another scout, and shall repeat it, except I have your orders to the contrary. Should be glad of some instructions from you in case of an attack, and am, sir, your Honour's humble servant,
SAMUEL BREWER, Colonel.
To General Gates.

DR. POTTS TO RICHARD VARICK.
General Hospital, October 14, 1776.
MY DEAR MAJOR: It gave me much pain to hear of your illness. I long very anxiously to be with you, especially as the enemy are advancing. Is it possible their fleet can be superiour to ours? No provisions here, nor none on the road that I can hear of. I know there is none at Fort Edward or the Half-Moon. Would to God you could prevail on our good General to order me over immediately. I am making up every rag into bandages. Dr. Stringer is at length arrived at Albany, on the 5th instant. When he will come here, God knows. Strange conduct. He has a large assortment of medicine; but the weather is worth all the Doctors now. Colonel Gansevoort left this very sick. He commanded; my voice had no sway. My compliments to the General, &c. God bless you.
JON'N POTTS.
Have sent the General a saddle venison.

SIR GUY CARLETON TO LORD GEORGE GERMAIN.
On board the Maria, off Crown-Point, }
October 14, 1776. }
MY LORD: The Rebel fleet upon Lake Champlain has been entirely defeated in two actions, the first on the 11th instant, between the Island of Valcourt and the main, and the second on the 13th, within a few leagues of Crown-Point.
We have taken Mr. Waterbury, the second in command, one of their Brigadier-Generals, with two of their vessels, and ten others have been burnt and destroyed; only three of fifteen sail, a list of which I transmit, having escaped. For further particulars I refer your Lordship to Lieutenant Dacres, who will be the bearer of this letter, and had a share in both actions, particularly the first, where his gallant behaviour in the Carleton schooner, which he commanded, distinguished him so much as to merit great commendation; and I beg to recommend him to your Lordship's notice and favour. At the same time I cannot omit taking notice to your Lordship of the good service done in the first action by the spirited conduct of a number of officers and men of the corps of Artillery, who served the gun-boats, which, together with the Carleton, sustained for many hours the whole fire of the enemy's fleet, the rest of our vessels not being able to work up near enough to join effectually in the engagement.
The Rebels, upon the news reaching them of the defeat of their naval force, set fire to all the buildings and houses in and near Crown-Point, and retired to Ticonderoga.
The season is so far advanced that I cannot yet pretend to inform your Lordship whether any thing further can be done this year.
I am, &c.,
GUY CARLETON.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 14, 1776.

SIR: By Captain Tinker am informed of the misfortune and situation of the row-galleys sent into the Continental service from this State; and as circumstances are altered respecting them since my last to you, on the subject of dismissing their crews and arms, must again request your attention to that matter, that the crew of the Crane, Captain Tinker, who escaped, may be dismissed, and be admitted to return to the employment of this State, and that if the crews of the other two galleys can be of no further service to you, they likewise may be dismissed; of one or both, as you see fit, as we can employ them to advantage on board our armed vessels fitting out, into which service they are desirous of entering. The galleys being employed in the service of the Continent, are esteemed to be at the Continental care and risk. This State readily submit to your Excellency's directions what is requisite and proper relative to the men and their arms.

I am, with esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saybrook, October 14, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Last Wednesday I had a conference with Governour Trumbull at New-Haven. I laid before him the plan I had formed for our expedition, which was as follows:

We were immediately to engage fourteen hundred tons of vessels, seven hundred of which being sufficient to carry our whole detachment, were to be stationed at Oyster-Pond Point, with instructions to wait till further orders from us, unless disturbed by the enemy's shipping; when that happened, they were to make some secure port on the Continent, and whenever danger disappeared they were to resume their stations. The other seven hundred tons are to be stationed at Satucket, about twenty miles farther westward, with the like instructions, that in case we should be baffled at one place, we may proceed to the other. We will have, as I am informed by Governour Trumbull, ninety whale-boats; they will land nine hundred men at a time. They are not yet arrived at New-London, but are expected in to-night. To-morrow I fancy they will be here. They are to take in our detachment, and proceed to Fairfield, from whence we are to land as many men as we conveniently can on the west side of Huntingdon, in order to cut off the communication of three companies of troops stationed at that place. As soon as this can be effected, the whale-boats are to proceed to Mill Creek, and carry across into Southold harbour, where they are to wait for us, unless circumstances permit us with safety and secrecy to get them into South Bay. If that should be the case, they are to follow us as far as Huntingdon, and take in our baggage, in case necessity should oblige us to make a retreat.

Head-Quarters on Long-Island are now made at Flushing, about twenty-eight miles from Huntingdon, where a guard is kept. The inhabitants are much oppressed, being prohibited threshing their grain or selling their hay, which transports are now loading with at Huntingdon. All the vessels they could lay their hands on have been taken up and ordered to Flushing, where their guard is kept; no other part of the island except that place and Huntingdon being guarded, except a few men in the forts opposite New-York. Major Rogers is at Huntingdon, though I cannot hear that he has the command. The accounts I have now given you may be depended on; they are given by a brother to one of our Lieutenants, who has been concealed among them for some time, but has at length made his escape with three others, and got safe to this side. The enemy were in pursuit of him when he came away. I send you by this conveyance my returns and the original papers sent Colonel Fanning, of which I formerly sent copies to your Excellency, being informed by General Clinton of their consequence.

I sent a party immediately after my leaving New-Haven, in order to surprise Colonel Fanning and Major Conkling, and seize their papers; this was effected. No papers were found on Major Conkling, though I was told he had been very active. After giving me his parole, he has been permitted to return again to Long-Island. Colonel Fanning, at his request, I have permitted to proceed for Convention, in order to clear up his character, after exacting his parole to take with him and deliver to Convention the proofs I had collected of his being inimical to us.

I expect it will be the latter end of the week before our descent will be made. I shall, with all my power, forward it, though Governour Trumbull is of opinion the force allowed is not adequate to the undertaking; though I can't help differing from his Honour in this particular.

I enclose your Excellency his letter sent me on that subject, with two others intercepted at New-Haven, and alluded to in the Governour's letter. Your Excellency will at once see that they are wrote by some very illiterate persons who are easily made to believe any thing.

I remain your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

The County Committee and Committees of Townships in Suffolk County met respectively, as soon as possible, by the Governour's permission, for the purpose of revoking all their proceedings under the Congress, and formally to dissolve their unlawful association, the County having now submitted to the King, his laws, and government.

New-York, October 15, 1776.

Note. When the above is accomplished, the Governour will receive the Militia.

The Governour's Order:

We the Committees of the County of Suffolk, being thoroughly convinced of the injurious and criminal tendency of our former meetings and resolutions, and willing to manifest our hearty disapprobation of all such illegal measures, do hereby dissolve this Committee, and as far as in us lies revoke and disavow all former orders and resolutions of this Committee. And we do further hereby renounce and disavow the orders and resolutions of all other Committees and Congress, whatsoever, as being undutiful to our lawful Sovereign, repugnant to the principles of the British Constitution, and ruinous in the extreme to the happiness and prosperity of this County.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN HACKER.

Newport, October 14, 1776.

SIR: You are with the brigantine Hampden under your command to go out on a cruise, and endeavour all in your power to distress the enemies of the United States of Ame- rica. You are to take all vessels with goods bound to any of the enemy's ports, and send such of them into port for trial as you shall judge worth your while, and others you may destroy, first taking the people out.

You may cruise as long as you can conveniently keep your vessel fit for that service. I think you will do your country most good by cruising in such places as will be most likely to meet with the store-ships bound to New-York for the supply of General Howe's army.

My orders was to send you to annoy the trade at New-foundland, but I imagine that is too late. If you should think best to go that way, it will be best to steer down in about the latitude of thirty-nine or forty, which I think will be the likeliest to meet with vessels bound to New-York.

I am, sir, your friend,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Hoystead Hacker, Esq., commander of the brigantine Hampden in the service of the United States of North-America.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO DUNSCOME AND FRAZER.

Newport, Rhode-Island, October 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Captain Israel Ambrose, who has a letter of credit from Messrs. Brown, Arnold, Salter and Wall. If it should suit your convenience to supply the Captain with any goods or money, you may depend that the above merchants are men of estate and veracity, and you may safely give them credit for such sums as they require.

As to news there is none more than you will find in the newspapers the Captain will have with him.

I flatter myself that I have been some service to the inhabitants of your island, by getting your vessels and people left out of the declaration which Congress made against the property of British subjects.

I am, with esteem, gentlemen, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Messrs. Dunscome & Frazer, Merchants in New-Province.

Newport, October 14, 1776.

Last Monday the Continental sloop Providence, Captain Jones, arrived at a safe port, having, in a cruise of six weeks, captured sixteen sail of vessels, six of which he burnt. Among the others is one ship with three thousand quintals of codfish, which is also arrived at a safe port; some smaller fishermen, and two West-Indiamen.

Last Tuesday two of the enemy's ships took four vessels off Montague Point, three of which were prizes to Captain Munro and some other privateers; the other a merchantman belonging to these vessels. The crew, we hear, took to their boats, and got safe ashore near Stonington.

A large prize brig, with stores for the army at New-York, is sent into Dartmouth; and, last Thursday, when Captain Starbuck left Nantucket there were three topsail vessels in sight, supposed to be prizes, but whether bound eastward or westward, we do not learn.

A gentleman, who left Boston last Thursday, informs that five prize ships were in sight, coming into that harbour, when he came away.

A brig from France is arrived at New-Hampshire, loaded with warlike stores.

LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN IN THE COUNTRY TO HIS FRIEND IN BOSTON.

Marlborough, October 14, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 5th of this month, I have received, taking the liberty you allowed me to make publick your sentiments relative to the late conference between Lord Howe and the Continental Congress, in hopes they might be of some service.

To me it is a matter of wonder that his Lordship should desire the Congress to send any of their members to converse with him in relation to the dispute between Great Britain and America, when, as it appears, he had no power to mention to you so much as the outlines in order to its settlement, but upon their submission to the Government of Great Britain, by which we know is meant submission to the arbitrary pleasure of a corrupt Ministry, who, by bribery, have the absolute command of as corrupt a Parliament. It must be owing to want of consideration or discernment, if his Lordship did not know, that America, holding in contempt such ignoble submission, would venture the loss both of their estates and lives in carrying on the contest they have been unhappily forced into, to prevent their being made slaves to worse than Egyptian taskmasters.

I fully join with you in thinking that, notwithstanding the appointment of Commissioners with pretended full powers to settle the dispute with America, no such thing was in the intention either of the King or his Ministers, but upon supposition of such submission as I just now spake of. America, therefore, have nothing to depend on but their own resolution to oppose, under the God of armies, those tyrants whose aim and endeavours have been, and still are, to exercise absolutely sovereign despotick power over them and all that they possess. From what they have already done, we may easily foresee what they would do. In addition to a long catalogue of lesser evils that might be brought to view, they have, by arbitrary edicts, deprived us not only of our Charter constitutions, but of those liberties we have an unalienable right to from the free absolute gift of the God who gave us existence. They have commenced an unnatural war against us, and for no other reason than that we could not consent, in consistency with justice to ourselves and posterity, they should have it in their power, as influenced by lawless will, to dispose of our and their property. They have in prosecution of the war, so far as they were able, blocked up our harbours, seized our ships, and stopped our intercourse with our fellow-men in all parts of the earth; they have plundered our houses, burnt our towns, and reducing thousands to suffering penury; they have, rather than go on distressing us, hired troops of comparatively despicable Principalities, and upon terms which whenever mentioned, will reflect dishonour upon the name of Englishmen; they have basely enticed our negroes to join with them in cutting their masters' throats; they have meanly bribed the Indian savages to come upon our frontiers and captivate or scalp the inhabitants of them; they have, in a word, made use of every method they could invent, however unjust or disgraceful, to force us to what they call obedience to Government, but what is in reality unmanly submission to tyranny. From what they have then done, it may be foretold, without a prophetick spirit, what they would do, should they make a conquest of us. They would condemn many of our most valuable men to suffer death by the halter; they would seize the estates of many more, and give them to the vilest among those who have endeavoured the destruction of their country; they would annihilate the present right of all the freeholders in America to their houses and lands, not permitting them to possess them any longer, but by a grant from the King, to be held only upon the payment of such a quit-rent as they should see fit; they would pass stamp acts, and lay taxes upon all the conveniences, if not the necessities, of life, hereby making way for the pompous support of worthless pensionary tools, and swarms of Crown officers, who, like so many locusts coming from beneath, would eat up the fruit of our labour; they would, to say no more, station troops in every American State, and such a number of them as to constitute, in the whole, a large standing army, which they would oblige us to pay, in order to our being kept in a state of the most abject slavery. This is what we may expect will be the effect of the attempt of the British Ministry against us, should they be successful in it. And is there a man in all America, not having lost his senses, whose breast is not filled with indignation at the thought of being thus injuriously dealt with? Who among her sons will not venture his all, together with his life, to prevent such an awfully distressed state of things? Nothing will now be effectual to this purpose, but a readiness in all, in all parts of the Continent, to exert themselves, as there may be occasion for it, within their respective spheres, for our defence and safety. This, I trust, is the universal resolution; for all is at stake. If the British enemy overcome us, we are undone as to this world. We should no more enjoy our rights as freemen, but be irretrievably fettered with the chains of cruel bondage. In this view of what our condition would be, those who are entrusted with the management of our political affairs, will, in their several departments, as with one heart, suspending for awhile their attention to other matters, devise and prosecute the most effectual measures for the salvation of the country. Nor can it be doubted, but that our numerous able-bodied men will, with a cheerful readiness, join our new-modelling armies, depending on the Lord of hosts, under their active courageous instrumentality, to drive away, or destroy, those who have risen up against us, and deliver these lands from the ruin that is intended to be brought upon them. I must now break off, lest I should overdo your patience. I only add, you have the same liberty you gave me, that is, you may make what use of this letter you shall judge proper.

I am, with great respect, your very humble servant,

A COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

To Mr. _____, in Boston.

Testimony of JOHN ROWE, 1775.

John Rowe, of Boston, merchant, of lawful age, testifies and says, that in the beginning of August, 1775, the Charming Peggy, Captain Duman, bound from Philadelphia to Lisbon, was sent into Boston by the Glasgow man-of-war, commanded by Captain Howe. That the necessary papers belonging to the Peggy were lodged in the hands of the advocate, Samuel Fitch, Esq. Whether Mr. Fitch libelled her in the Court of Admiralty, I am not certain; I rather think he did, as Captain Dowmer applied to Mr. Putman and Mr. Chipman, two lawyers, by my advice. After some time, nothing was done in the Admiralty. I drew a memorial to General Gage, Admiral Graves, and the Commissioners of the Customs, for liberty to unload the ship, and dispose of the cargo. This petition was granted, and part of the cargo was sold by me after appraisement to Henry Floyd, Esq., and Alexander Boymer, and delivered to them by my clerk, Archibald McNeill, who weighed every barrel as it came out of the ship, which took up a good deal of time. Some little time before the whole cargo was delivered, an account was received that a ship had arrived from London to Philadelphia, with General Gage's clothing on board, which clothing was reported to be stopped there. Upon which General Gage ordered Mr. Floyd and Brymer not to pay the money for this flour. I pleaded hard with the General, and thought it a hard case that individuals should suffer for the actions of the community. I could not get him to suffer them to pay it, and just before the General left Boston, Mr. Floyd and Brymer paid General Gage the money for what they bought, and I understood gave them a receipt of indemnification. The ship was afterwards under the care and direction of Captain Dowman, who left her with the Captain of the port.

JOHN ROWE.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, in New-England,
Suffolk ss., October 14, 1776:

John Rowe, of Boston, in the County of Suffolk aforesaid, merchant, appeared before me, and, after being carefully examined and cautioned to tell the whole truth, made oath to the truth of the enclosed deposition by him subscribed, taken at the request of William Bell, of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, merchant, to be used in the trial of the capture of the ship Charming Peggy, Dowman late master, on the libel of John Skimmer, commander of the Continental schooner Franklin, and others, on an appeal from a judgment of a court maritime in this State, whereof Timothy Pickering, Esq., is Judge, and before the honourable Continental Congress, in the City of Philadelphia aforesaid.

JOSEPH GREENLEAF, Justice Peace.

RICHARD DERBY, JUN., TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Salem, October 14, 1776.

SIR: This morning I received a resolve of Court, directing me to discharge the schooner Diligent from the service of this State, and to take into my custody all the cannon and other warlike stores now on board her, the property of this State. I conclude the Court meant nothing more than that I should see them delivered to your care; and as the Maritime Court sits in this town all this week, and causes are to be tried in which the State is interested, I cannot well leave home, and therefore I have sent the bearer, Mr. Gray, to see what stores may be on board her, delivered to your care, and to discharge Captain Lambert from any further service on board said schooner, agreeable to the order of Court. If there are any bar shot on board her, or any can be obtained, they are much wanted for the Tyrannicide, which is now near ready for sea.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

RICHARD DERBY, JUN.

To Richard Devens, Esq.

CAPTAIN ABIJAH BANGS TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Boston, October 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: According to order I have applied to the several towns in the County of Barnstable, and acquainted Field Officers with my business, and the Brigadier tells me that he has not power and authority enough to send the men, or to draft them for this detachment. Then, gentlemen, I applied to Mr. Samuel Crocker, one of the Committee at Barnstable, and he told me that the Committee had never received any orders from the honourable Court to draft any men to this detachment. Then I applied to Colonel Hallett, West Parish, Yarmouth: he informed me that some of the people are waiting to do their duty, providing the other could be made to do their duty. I then applied to David Thatcher, one of the Committee of Yarmouth: he told me he had never read any orders for a draft for this detachment. Then I applied to Mr. Caleb Lumber, one of the Committee of Wellfleet, and he told me that he had never received any orders to enlist or draft any men for this detachment; and as there is no officers in commission there, I could not do any thing further. I wrote to Captain Selen, of Truro, to send the men that were drafted for this detachment to join my company at Dorchester as soon as possible. So having done all that lays in my power, I am, gentlemen, with respect, your Honours' most obedient, humble servant,

ABIJAH BANGS, Captain.

To the honourable Council of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

Portsmouth, New-Hampshire, October 14, 1776.

Last Sunday arrived at Saco a small prize schooner, sent in by the Putnam privateer, John Harmon commander, having on board three hundred bushels of salt and some oil. Next day arrived another schooner, taken by the same privateer, having on board three hundred and seventy-five quintals of green fish and some oil: she brings an account of another small vessel taken that is not yet arrived, and one that they took, which was afterwards drove ashore by a frigate, the vessel lost, but the people got on board the privateer again. The frigate drove the privateer into a harbour, and came to anchor, with intention of keeping her in, but Captain Harmon got one of his guns ashore on a point of land, and fired on the frigate, when she returned whole broadsides into the woods at them, but did no damage. Captain Harmon, after a few shot, was so lucky as to cut away her forestay, which obliged her to come to sail, and put to sea.

Since the 7th instant, arrived in this port two prize schooners, the Glasgow and Neptune, laden with fish and oil to a considerable amount, taken off the Banks of Newfoundland, by Captain Robert Parker, of this port.

This morning, a small prize schooner, with two hundred quintals of fish, was sent into this harbour; she was taken by Captain Calton, in the General Gates privateer, from Salem.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM KINGSTON, JAMAICA, DATED
OCTOBER 15, 1776.

We are all very quiet at present, and have been so for some time past. Martial law has been suspended about a month; but parochial guards were kept up throughout the island till within this fortnight. The Militia is now restored to its former state, and I hope there will be no further occasion for martial law being established here.

A few weeks ago, the French frigate L'Hermione, commanded by Mons. Demonteil, Brigadier-General and Knight of the Order of St. Louis, came in here from St. Nicholas Mole, in Hispaniola, to demand a small American schooner which had been taken by the Squirrel a few days before. He alleged that the schooner was taken nearer the land than was permitted by treaty between the two Courts. The Admiral answered that Captain Douglas knew his duty, and if he had acted wrong must answer for it; that he deemed the schooner a lawful prize, and would not deliver her up; but that if there were any differences to be adjusted, they must be settled by the two Courts. The French frigate did not remain here forty-eight hours. It is reported that the Admiral further told the Captain that he need not salute his ship when he went away, as he omitted it when he came in; for that, consequently, the compliment should not be returned. There have been five or six prizes brought in here these three weeks.

JUDGE DRAYTON'S CHARGE TO GRAND JURY OF CHARLESTON.

At a Court of General Sessions of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, Assize and General Gaol delivery, begun and holden at CHARLESTON, for the district of CHARLESTOWN, on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15th, in the year of our Lord 1776, before the Hon. WILLIAM HENRY DRAYTON, Esq., Chief Justice, and his Associates, Justices of the said Court.

Ordered, That the Charge delivered by his Honour the Chief Justice to the Grand Jury, and their Presentments at this sessions, be forthwith published.

By order of the Court: JOHN COLCOCK, C. C. S.

THE CHARGE TO THE GRAND JURY.

GENTLEMEN OF THE GRAND JURY: The last time I had the honour to address a grand jury in this court, I expounded to them the constitution of their country, as established by Congress on the 26th day of March last, independent of royal authority. I laid before them the causes of that important change of our Government—a comparison of these, with those that occasioned the English Revolution of 1688—and the law resulting from the injuries in each case. I spoke to that grand jury of the late revolution of South-Carolina. I mean to speak to you upon a more important subject—the rise of the American Empire.

The great act in March last upon the matter constituted our country totally independent of Great Britain. For it was calculated to place in our hands the whole legislative, executive, and judicial powers of government; and to enable us, in the most effectual manner, by force of arms, to oppose, resist, and war against the British Crown. The act naturally looked forward to an accommodation of the unhappy differences between that Power and America. In like manner every declaration of war between independent States, implies a future accommodation of their disputes. But, although by that act we were upon the matter made independent, yet there were no words in it specially declarative of that independency. Such a declaration was of right to be made only by the General Congress; because the united voice and strength of America were necessary to give a desirable credit and prospect of stability to a declared state of total separation from Great Britain. And the General Congress, as the only means left by which they had a chance to avert the ruin of America, have issued a declaration by which all political connection between you and the State of Great Britain is totally dissolved.

Carolinians! heretofore you were bound. By the American Revolution you are now free. The change is most important—most honourable—most beneficial. It is your birthright by the law of nature—it is even valid by the fundamental laws of your country—you were placed in possession of it by the hand of God—particulars evidencing a subject of the highest import. Gentlemen of the grand jury, it is my duty to mark to you the great lines of your conduct; and so to endeavour to explain the nature of each, that you may clearly see your way, and thereby be animated in your progress to discharge those services which are required at your hands; and hence it is necessary for me to lay before you some observations upon the nature of the American Revolution, which by every tie, divine and human, you are bound to support. I shall therefore endeavour to draw your attention to this great subject, necessarily including the lines of your particular conduct.

It is but to glance an eye over the historick page, to be assured that the duration of empire is limited by the Almighty decree. Empires have their rise to a zenith, and their declension to a dissolution. The years of a man, ay, the hours of the insect on the bank of the Hypanis, that lives but a day, epitomize the advance and decay of the strength and duration of dominion! One common fate awaits all things upon earth—a thousand causes accelerate or delay their perfection or ruin. To look a little into remote times, we see that, from the most contemptible origin upon record, Rome became the most powerful State the sun ever saw. The world bowed before her imperial Fascies! yet, having ran through all the vicissitudes of dominion, her course was finished. Her empire was dissolved, that the separated members of it might arise to run through similar revolutions.

Great Britain was a part of this mighty empire. But, being dissolved from it, in her turn she also extended her dominion:—arrived at, and passed her zenith. Three and thirty years numbered the illustrious days of the Roman greatness. Eight years measure the duration of the British grandeur in meridian lustre! How few are the days of true glory! The extent of the Roman period is from their complete conquest of Italy, which gave them a place whereon to stand that they might shake the world, to the original cause of their declension, their introduction of Asiatick luxury. The British period is from the year 1758, when they victoriously pursued their enemies into every quarter of the globe, to the immediate cause of their decline—their injustice displayed by the Stamp Act. In short, like the Roman empire, Great Britain in her constitution of government, contained a poison to bring on her decay, and in each case, this poison was drawn into a ruinous operation by the riches and luxuries of the East. Thus, by natural causes and common effects, the American States are become dissolved from the British dominion. And is it to be wondered at, that Britain has experienced the invariable fate of empire! We are not surprised when we see youth or age yield to the common lot of humanity. Nay, to repine that, in our day, America is dissolved from the British State, is impiously to question the unerring wisdom of Providence. The Almighty setteth up, and he casteth down: he breaks the sceptre, and transfers the dominion. He has made choice of the present generation to erect the American empire. Thankful as we are, and ought to be, for an appointment of the kind, the most illustrious that ever was, let each individual exert himself in this important operation directed by Jehovah himself. From a short retrospect, it is evident the work was not the present design of man.

Never were a people more wrapped up in a King than the Americans were in George the Third in the year 1763. They revered and obeyed the British Government, because it protected them; they fondly called Great Britain, home. But, from that time, the British counsels took a ruinous turn; ceasing to protect, they sought to ruin America. The Stamp Act, Declaratory Law, and the duties upon tea and other articles, at once proclaimed their injustice, and announced to the Americans that they had but little room for hope; infinite space for fear. In vain they petitioned for redress! Authorized by the law of nature, they exerted the inherent powers of society, and resisted the edicts which told them they had no property; and that against their consent, and by men over whom they had no control, they were to be bound in all cases whatsoever. Dreadful information! Patience could not but resent them. However, regardless of such feelings, and resolved to endeavour to support those all-grasping claims, early in the year 1774 the British tyranny made other edicts—to overturn American charters—to suspend or destroy, at the pleasure of the Crown, the value of private property—to block up the port of Boston in terrorism to other American ports—to give murder the sanction of law—to establish the Roman Catholic religion, and to make the King of Great Britain a despot in Canada; and as much so as he then chose to be in Massachusetts-Bay. And General Gage was sent to Boston with a considerable force to usher these edicts into action, and the Americans into slavery.

Their petitions thus answered even with the sword of the murderer at their breasts, the Americans thought only of new petitions. It is well known there was not then even an idea that the independence of America would be the work of this generation; for people yet had a confidence in the integrity of the British monarch. At length, subsequent edicts being also passed, to restrain the Americans from enjoying the bounty of Providence on their own coast, and to cut off their trade with each other and with foreign States—the royal sword yet reeking with American blood, and the King still deaf to the prayers of the people for “peace, liberty and safety;” it was even so late as the latter end of the last year, before that confidence visibly declined; and it was generally seen that the quarrel was likely to force America into an immediate state of independence. But such an event was not expected, because it was thought the monarch, from motives of policy, if not from inclination, would heal our wounds, and thereby prevent the separation; but it was not wished for, because men were unwilling to break off old connections, and change the usual form of Government.

Such were the sentiments of America until the arrival of the British act of Parliament declaring the Americans out of the royal protection, and denouncing a general war against them. But counsels too refined, generally produce contrary and unexpected events. So the whole system of British policy respecting America, since the year 1763, calculated to surprise, deceive, or drive the people into slavery, urged them into independence: and this act of Parliament, in particular, finally released America from Great Britain. Antecedent to this, the British King, by his hostilities, had as far as he personally could, absolved America from that faith, allegiance and subjection she owed him; because the law of our land expressly declares these are due only in return for his protection, allegiance being founded on the benefit of protection. But God, knowing that we are in peril by false brethren as well as by real enemies, out of his abundant mercy has caused us to be released from subjection, by yet a better title than the mere oppression of a man in the kingly office. This title is singular in its kind. It is the voluntary and joint act of the whole British Legislature, on the 21st day of December, 1775, releasing the faith, allegiance and subjection of America to the British Crown, by solemnly declaring the former out of the protection of the latter; and thereby, agreeable to every principle of law, actually dissolving the original contract between King and people.

Hence an American cannot, legally, at the suit of the King of Great Britain, be indicted of high treason; because the indictment cannot charge him with an act contra ligentiam suam debitam; for, not being protected by that King, the law holds that he does not owe him any faith and allegiance. So an alien enemy, even invading the Kingdom of England, and taken in arms, cannot be dealt with as a traitor, because he violates no trust or allegiance. In short this doctrine, laid down in the best law authorities, is a criterion whereby we may safely judge whether or not a particular people are subject to a particular Government. And thus upon the matter, that decisive act of Parliament ipso facto created the United Colonies free and independent States.

These particulars evidence against the royal calumniator in the strongest manner. Let him not with unparalleled effrontery, from a throne continue to declare that the Americans “meant only to amuse, by vague expressions of attachment and the strongest professions of loyalty, whilst they were preparing for a general revolt, for the purpose of establishing an independent empire.” On the 1st of September, 1775, Richard Penn and Arthur Lee, Esqs., delivered to Lord Dartmouth, he being Secretary of State, a petition from the Congress to the King, when Lord Dartmouth told them, “no answer would be given.” The petition contained this remarkable passage, that the King would “be pleased to direct some mode by which the united applications of his faithful Colonists to the Throne, in presence of their common councils, might be improved into a permanent and happy reconciliation, and that in the mean time measures might be taken for preventing the further destruction of the lives of his Majesty’s subjects.” Yet, notwithstanding this, on the 26th of October following, from the throne, the King charged the Americans with aiming at independence! The facts I have stated are known to the world; they are yet more stubborn than the tyrant. But let other facts be also stated against him. There was a time when the American army before Boston had not a thousand weight of gunpowder—the forces were unable to advance into Canada, until they received a small supply of powder from this country, and for which the General Congress expressly sent—and when we took up arms a few months before, we begun with a stock of five hundred weight! These grand magazines of ammunition demonstrate, to be sure, that America, or even Massachusetts-Bay, was preparing to enter the military road to independence! On the contrary, if we consider the manner in which Great Britain has continued her irritating and hostile measures, we cannot but clearly see that God has darkened her counsels, and that with a stretched-out arm he himself has delivered us out of the house of bondage, and has led us on to empire.

In the year 1774, General Gage arrived at Boston, to awe the people into a submission to the edicts against America. The force he brought was, by the oppressors, thought not only sufficient to compel obedience, but that this would be effected even at the appearance of the sword. But the Continent being roused by the edicts, General Gage, to his surprise, found that he had not strength sufficient to carry them into execution. In this situation things continued several months; while on the one hand the General received reinforcements, and on the other the people acquired a contempt for the troops, and found time to form their Militia into some order to oppose the force they saw accumulating for their destruction. Hence in the succeeding April, when the General commenced hostilities, he was defeated. The victory produced the most important effects. The people were animated to besiege Boston, where it soon appeared that the British troops were too weak to make any impression upon them, thus acquiring military knowledge by the actual operations of war. The United Colonies were roused to arms. They new-modelled their Militia, raised regular troops, fortified the harbours, and crushed the Tory parties among them. Success fired the Americans with a spirit of enterprise.

In the mean time, the King passed such other edicts as, adding to the calendar of injuries, widened the civil breach, and narrowed the band of the American Union. And such supplies were, from time to time, sent for the relief of Boston, as not in any degree sufficient to enable General Gage to raise the siege, answered no other ends but to increase the number, heighten the spirit, advance the discipline of the American army, and to cause every member of the Union to exert every ability to procure arms and ammunition from abroad. Thus trained on evidently by the Almighty, these troops, reproached by General Gage when they first sat down before Boston, that “with a preposterous parade of military arrangements, they affected to hold the army besieged,” in less than eleven months compelled the British army, although considerably reinforced, to abandon Boston by stealth, and to trust their safety, not to their arms, but to the winds. The British Ministry have attempted to put a gloss upon this remove of their army. However, the cannon, stores, and provisions, they left in Boston, are in our hands, substantial marks of their flight.

Thus there appears to have been a fatality in their counsels respecting Boston, the grand seat of contention; their forces being inadequate to the enterprise on which they were sent. And under the same influence have their attacks been directed against Virginia and North-Carolina, Savannah, and this capital. Such a series of events is striking. It surely displays an overruling Providence that has confounded the British counsels, to the end that America should not have been at first shackled, and thereby prevented from acquiring a knowledge of, and confidence in her strength, to be attained only by an experimental trial and successful exertion of it, previous to the British rulers doing acts driving her either into slavery or independence. The same trace of an overruling Providence is evident throughout the whole transaction of the English Revolution of 1688. King James received early information of the Prince of Orange’s intention to invade England, and Louis the XIV. offered the King a powerful assistance. But his counsels were confounded from on high. He paid little attention to the first—he neglected the last. The winds blew, and how opportunely have they aided us; the winds detained James’s fleet at anchor, while they, directing the course of the Prince, enabled him without any loss to land in England, at a time when no person thought of a revolution, which was destined to take place within but a few weeks. Unexpected, wonderful, and rapid movements, character the British and American Revolutions. They do not appear to have been premeditated by man. And from so close a similitude, in so many points, between the two revolutions, we have great reason to hope that the American, like the British, will be stable against the tyrant.

As I said before, in my last charge, I drew a parallel between the causes which occasioned the English Revolution, and those which occasioned our local revolution in March last; and I examined the famous resolution of the Lords and Commons of England, at Westminster, declaring the law upon James's conduct. The two first points of it applied to our own case in the closest manner, and in applying the third, treating of James's withdrawing, I pointed out that the abdication of the regal Government among us, was immediately effected, not only by the withdrawing of the regal substitute, with the ensigns of government, but that King George had withdrawn himself, "by withdrawing the constitutional benefits of the kingly office, and his protection out of this country." Thus couching my thoughts upon the article of the withdrawing, in order that the parallel should be continued throughout as close as the subject would admit, without attempting to extract the essence from the substance of the resolution, to demonstrate that such a parallel was necessary; a mode which, the subject being new, might not then perhaps have been so generally satisfactory. But, as the American Revolution leads me again to mention that resolution, which in the strongest manner justifies it, I make no scruple now to say, that the resolution, though appearing to point out several kinds of criminality, yet has only one idea thus variously represented:

"Resolved, That King James the Second having endeavoured to subvert the Constitution of the Kingdom, by breaking the original contract between King and people; and, by the advice of Jesuits and other wicked persons, having violated the fundamental laws, and having withdrawn himself out of the Kingdom, has abdicated the Government, and that the throne is thereby vacant."

But before I make any further observation upon this resolution, allow me to show you the sense of Scotland in the last, and of America in the present century, touching an abdication of government; and you will find that the voice of nature is the same, in either extremity of the globe, and in different ages.

The estates of Scotland having enumerated King James's mal-administration, and in which there was no article of withdrawing, they declared, that "thereby he had forfeited the rights of the crown, and the throne was become vacant." And the Representatives of the United States of America, stating their grievances under King George the Third, decreed, that "he has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection, and waging war against us." And that "a prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people."

Thus in each case it is apparent the abdication or forfeiting took place from but one and the same cause—the failure of protection. And this is the single idea that, I apprehend, is in the resolution of Westminster. Search to understand what is a breach of the original contract—what a violation of the fundamental laws wherein consisted the criminality of James's withdrawing? Your inquiry must terminate thus—a failure of protection. Independent of the nature of the subject, the history of that time warrants this construction upon the withdrawing in particular. For upon James's first flying from Whitehall, quitting the administration without providing a power to protect the people, he was considered by the Prince of Orange, and the heads of the English nation, as having then absolutely abdicated the Government, and terminated his reign; and they treated him accordingly upon his sudden return to Whitehall, from whence he was immediately ejected. In short, a failure of protection being once established, it necessarily includes and implies a charge of a breach of original contract—a violation of fundamental laws—and a withdrawing of the King. I do not mean the individual person, but the officer so called. For the officer being constituted to dispense protection, and there being a failure of it, it is evident, prima facie, that the officer is withdrawn; and in reality, because the law will not admit that the officer can be present and not dispense protection, as the law ascribes to the King in his political capacity absolute perfection; and therefore it will intend a withdrawing and abdication, in exclusion of any idea of his being present and doing wrong. Protection was the great end for which mankind formed societies. On this hang all the duties of a King. It is the one thing needful in royalty.

Upon the whole, what is civil liberty, or by what conduct it may be oppressed, by what means the oppression ought to be removed, or an abdication or forfeiting of the Government may be induced, cannot precisely be ascertained and laid down as rules to the world. Humanity is interested in these subjects. Nature alone will judge, and she will decide upon the occasion without regard to precedent. In America, nature has borne British oppression so long as it was tolerable; but there is a load of injury which cannot be endured. Nature felt it. And the people of America, acting upon natural principles, by the mouths of their Representatives in Congress assembled, at Philadelphia, on the 4th day of July last, awfully declared—and revere the sentence!—"That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown; and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved."

A decree is now gone forth, not to be recalled! And thus has suddenly arisen in the world, a new empire, styled the United States of America. An empire that as soon as started into existence, attracts the attention of the rest of the universe, and bids fair, by the blessing of God, to be the most glorious of any upon record. America hails Europe, Asia, and Africa. She proffers peace and plenty.

This revolution, forming one of the most important epochs in the history, not of a nation, but of the world, is, as it were, an eminence from which we may observe the things around us. And I am naturally led to explain the value of that grand object now in our possession and view, to state the American ability by arms to maintain the acquisition, and to show the conduct by which a patriotick grand jury may aid the establishment of our infant empire.

To make men sensible of the value of the object now in our possession, we need no ingenuity of thought, or display of eloquence. To him who doubts of the meridian sun, it is sufficient to point to it. So in the present case, as well to demonstrate the value of the object as the justice of our claim to it, we need only hold it up to view. It is, to maintain among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle us. A few months ago we fought only to preserve to the labourer the fruits of his toil, free from the all-coveting grasp of the British tyrant, alieni appetens, sui profusus, and to defend a people from being, like brute beasts, bound in all cases whatsoever. But these two last ingredients to make life agreeable, are now melted into, inseparably blended with, and wholly included in the first, which is now become the object for which America, ex necessitate, wars against Britain. And I shall now point out to you the Continental ability, by arms, to maintain this invaluable station.

When, in modern times, Philip of Spain became the tyrant of the Low Countries in Europe, of seventeen Provinces which composed those territories, seven only effectually confederated to preserve their liberties, or to perish in the attempt. They saw Philip the most powerful prince in the Old World, and master of Mexico and Peru in the New—nations incessantly pouring into his territories floods of gold and silver. They saw him possessed of the best troops, and the most formidable navy in the universe, and aiming at no less than universal monarchy. But these seven Provinces, making but a speck upon the globe, saw themselves without armies, fleets, or funds of money; yet seeing themselves on the point of being by a tyrant bound in all cases whatsoever, nobly relying upon Providence and the justice of their cause, they resolved to oppose the tyrant's whole force, and at least deserve to be free. They fought, they bled, and were often brought to the door of destruction. They redoubled their efforts in proportion to their danger. And the inhabitants of that speck of earth compelled the master of dominions so extensive that it was boasted the sun was never absent, to treat with them as a free and independent people!

For a moment, and with the aid of a fearful imagination, let us suppose that the American States are now as defenceless as the Hollanders then were, and that the King of Great Britain is now as powerful as Philip then was. Yet even such a state of things could not be a plea for any degree of submission on our part. Did not the Hollanders oppose their weakness to the strength of Spain? Are not the Americans engaged in as good a cause as the Hollanders fought in? Are the Americans less in love with liberty than the Hollanders were? Shall we not in this, a similar cause, dare those perils that they successfully combated? Shall we not deserve freedom? Our past actions presage our future achievements, and animate us in our military efforts for "peace, liberty, and safety." But see the real powers of Great Britain.

Staggering beneath the load of an enormous debt, the very annual interest of which, in the year 1775, amounted to upwards of four millions eight hundred and eighty thousand pounds sterling, Great Britain scarcely supports the weight which is yet rapidly increasing. During the present year, she prosecutes the war at a charge of more than nineteen millions sterling, incurred by actual expenses, and by loss of revenue in consequence of the war. Her trade, her only resource for money, is now in a manner destroyed; for her principal trade, which was to this Continent, is now at an end; and she sustains heavy, very heavy, losses by the American captures of her West-India ships. Her manufactures are almost at their last morsel. Her publick credit is certain to fail even by a short continuance of the war. Her fleets are not half manned. And she is so destitute of an army, that she is reduced to supplicate even the petty German princes for assistance, and thinks it worth her while to make a separate treaty to procure only six hundred and sixty-eight men!—a last effort to form an army in America. But, after all this humiliating exertion, she has even upon paper raised a German army of only sixteen thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight men, who, with about fourteen thousand national troops and a few Hanoverian regiments, compose the whole military force that she can collect for the American service. Nay, so arduous a task was even this, that her grand army of but twenty-six thousand men, could not open the present campaign before the end of August last. Add to these particulars, the troops are unaccustomed to the sudden vicissitudes of the American climate and the extremes of cold, heat, and rain. They cannot proceed without camp equipage, because they are used to such luxuries. The very scene of their operations is a matter of discouragement to them, because they know not the country; and for their supplies of men, stores, and the greatest part of their provisions, they must look to Great Britain—and there is a vast abyss between. Hence their supplies must be precarious at best; and failing, they may be involved in ruin. A check may affect them as a defeat—a defeat in battle may annihilate their very army. Such seems to be the situation of Great Britain, while only the American war is on her hands. But do we not see France and Spain, her inveterate enemies, now watching for the critical moment when they shall swallow up her West India Islands? When this crisis appears, which, from the now quick arrivals of French vessels in America, and from the forces already collected, and others now daily poured into the islands by those Powers, cannot be far distant, what will be the situation of Great Britain?

On the other hand, America is possessed of resources for the war which appear as soon as inquired after; are found only by being sought for; and are but scarce imagined even when found. Strong in her union, on each coast and frontier she meets the invaders, whether British or Indian savages, repelling their allied attacks. The Americans now live without luxury. They are habituated to despise their yearly profits by agriculture and trade. They engage in the war from principle. They follow their leaders to battle with personal affection. Natives of the climate, they bear the vicissitudes and extremities of the weather. Hardy and robust, they need no camp equipage, and they march with celerity. The common people have acute understanding; and there are those in the higher stations who are acquainted with the arts and sciences, and have a comprehensive view of things equally with those who act against them. In short, the American armies meet the war where they may be constantly recruited and subsisted, comforted by the aid of their neighbours, and by reflections upon the justice of their cause, and animated by seeing, that they are arrayed in the defence of all that is, or can be, dear to them.

From such a people every thing is to be hoped for, nothing is to be doubted of. Such a people, though young in the practice of war, ever were superiour to veteran troops. To prove this, shall I direct your attention to Europe, Asia, and Africa, in their histories to point out to you numberless instances of this sort? No, gentlemen, America now attracts the eyes of the world: she deserves our whole attention; let us not search abroad, and in remote or modern times, for instances of such a kind as we can find at home and in our own day. Need I mention that such a people, young in the art of war, beat veteran troops at Lexington, slaughtered them at Bunker's Hill, and drove them out of Boston! or remind you of Sullivan's Island, where, in an unfinished wooden fort, on a flat coast, such men, during eleven hours, and at the distance of five hundred yards, stood the whole and unintermitted fire of a British squadron of two ships of the line, five frigates, and a bomb; and, with fifteen pieces of cannon, caused the enemy to burn one of their largest frigates, and to fly with the rest of the squadron in a shattered condition, from before our capital!

Such a contrasted state of the powers of America and of Britain is, I apprehend, a just representation of their abilities with regard to the present war; and if America behaves worthy of herself, I see no cause to fear the enemy. However, in such a conflict, we ought to expect difficulties, dangers and defeats. "What, shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil?" Job's perseverance in his duty under every calamity, at length raised him to the height of human felicity; and, if we are firm, even our defeats will operate to our benefit. Let us remember that it was to the danger in which the Roman State was reared that she owed her illustrious men and imperial fortune. The Roman dignity was never so majestic, her glory never so resplendent, her fortitude and exertions never so conspicuous and nervous, as when Hannibal, in the successive battles of Trabia, Thrasymenus and Cannæ, having almost extirpated their whole military force, the very State was on the brink of dissolution. The Romans deserved, and they acquired victory.

And now, gentlemen of the grand jury, having in this manner considered the nature of the American Revolution upon circumstances of fact and principles of law, I am to mark the conduct which you ought to pursue, and which will enable you to aid the establishment of our infant empire. But, that I may naturally introduce this subject, I shall first state and explain to you the principal articles of the inquiry which you are sworn to make on the part of the State, and for the body of this district; and these articles I shall arrange under two heads. The one relating to crimes and misdemeanours immediately injurious to individuals, the other relating to such as are injurious to the State.

Those criminal injuries that affect individuals respect either their persons, habitations, or property. Of these injuries the most important are such as affect the person, and of such, the act depriving the person of life is the most enormous.

In the contemplation of law, every taking of life is a homicide; and, according to the particular circumstances of each case, this homicide is purely voluntary, including the cases of felony, as self-murder, murder respecting another, and manslaughter: Or, the homicide is purely involuntary, as per infortunium, misadventure: Or, of a mixed kind, ex necessitate; as se defendendo inducing a forfeiture; or being under the requisition or permission of law and not inducing any. And thus, homicide is either justifiable, excusable, or felonious.

It is justifiable in all cases ex necessitate; as when life is taken by the legal execution of a criminal, or for the advancement of justice, or for the prevention of some atrocious crime.

It is excusable in cases per infortunium, misadventure; as when life is taken by the doing a lawful act without any evil intention. So in cases se defendendo; as a man being attacked without any provocation on his part, and having bona fide retreated as far as he safely could, when for self-preservation he kills the aggressor. And although this last arises ex necessitate, and it would therefore seem to be rather justifiable than excusable, yet the law entitles it necessitas culpabilis, and thereby distinguishes it from the other. For the law so highly respects the life of a man, that it always intends some misbehaviour in the person who takes it away without an express legal command or permission.

But homicide is felonious in all cases of manslaughter, murder, and self-murder. In cases of manslaughter, as killing another without any degree of malice, and this killing may be either voluntary by a sudden act of revenge on a sudden provocation and heat, or it may be, yet not strictly so, involuntary, being in the commission of some unlawful act under the degree of felony; for this killing being the consequence of the unlawful act voluntarily entered upon, the law, because of the previous intent, will transfer this from the original to the consequential object.

In cases of murder; as killing another person, ex malitia præcogitata. And here it is necessary that I particularly explain what the law considers as malice prepense. Malice prepense then, is an inclination of the mind, not so properly bearing ill will to the person killed, the commonly received notion, as containing any evil design, the dictate of a wicked and malignant heart. The discovery of this secret inclination of the mind must arise, because it cannot any otherwise, only from the external effects of it; and by such evidence the malignity of the mind is held either express in fact or implied in law. Thus, malice prepense is held to be express in fact, when there is evidence of a laying in wait, or of menacings antecedent, grudges, or deliberate compassings to do some bodily harm. Even upon a sudden provocation, the one beating or treating another in an excessive and cruel manner, so that he dies, though he did not intend his death, the slayer displays an express evil design, the genuine sense of malice. This is evidence of a bad heart; and the act is equivalent to a deliberate act of slaughter. So any wilful action, likely in its nature to kill, without its being aimed at any person in particular: For this shows an enmity to all mankind. So if two or more come to do any felony, or any unlawful act, the probable consequence of which might be bloodshed, and one of them kills a man, it is murder in them all, because of the unlawful act, the malitia præcogitata, or evil intended. But malice prepense is held to be implied in law, when one kills an officer of justice in the execution of his office, or any person assisting him, though not specially called. Or when without sufficient provocation, and no affront by words or gestures only is a sufficient provocation, a man suddenly kills another. Or when, upon a chiding between husband and wife, the husband strikes the wife with a pestle or other dangerous weapon, and she presently dies. These and similar instances, are evidences of a malice prepense on the part of the slayer; and he shall be held guilty of murder. In cases of self-murder, there must be a voluntary and deliberate putting an end to one's existence; or doing some unlawful malicious act, the consequence of which is his own death. In a word, all homicide is presumed to be malicious, until the contrary is made to appear in evidence.

There is a regular gradation of importance in the component parts of the universal system; and, therefore, there must be a scale marking the degrees of injury. We have examined the highest injury that can be committed or perpetrated upon the person of an individual—let us now turn our attention to such injuries against the person, as are of an inferior nature.

Of these the first in degree is mayhem, which is the cutting out, with malice prepense, or disabling the tongue, putting out an eye, slitting the nose, cutting off a nose or lip, or depriving another of the use of such of his members as may render him the less able to defend himself, or annoy his adversary. The next is rape. Then the infamous crime against nature. These are felonies. But there are yet other injuries against the person which, being of a less flagrant degree, are, by the tenderness of the law, described under the gentler term of misdemeanours. Such are assaults, batteries, wounding, false imprisonment, and kidnapping. Here, in a manner, terminates the scale of injuries against the person. We will now state such as may be perpetrated against his mansion, or habitation.

By the universal consent of all ages, the dwelling-house of man was and is endowed with peculiar immunities and valuable privileges. Among the ancients, if even an enemy reached the fire-place of the house, he was sure of protection. Thus we find Coriolanus at the fire-place of Tullus Aufidius, chief of the Volscian nation, discovering himself to Aufidius, his publick and private enemy, and supplica-ting and receiving his protection against Rome from whence he was banished. And, on this subject of a dwelling, Cicero, the great Roman lawyer, orator, and statesman, thus pathetically expresses himself: "What is more inviolable, what better defended by religion than the house of a citizen? Here are his altars, here his fire-hearths are contained—this place of refuge is so sacred to all men, that to be dragged from thence is unlawful." In like manner we find, that at Athens the habitation was particularly protected by the law. Burglary was there punished with death, although theft was not. And our law hath so special a regard to a man's dwelling-house, that it terms it his castle, and will not suffer it to be violated with impunity. The law ranges the injuries against it under two heads—arson, and hamesecken or housebreaking: And this last it divides into legal or proper burglary, which is nocturnal housebreaking, and housebreaking by day.

Arson is an injury that tends by fire to annihilate the habitation of another person, or other house, that being within the curtilage or homestall, may reasonably be esteemed a parcel of it, though not contiguous. So a barn in the field, with hay or corn in it. But this injury by fire must be done with a malicious intent, otherwise it is only trespass.

Burglary is a breaking and entering in the night time the mansion-house of another, with intent to commit some felony therein, whether the felonious intent be executed or not. And all such houses are the objects of burglary, and of housebreaking, as are described in the case of arson.

But, to violate this place of protection in the day, by robbing therein, and putting any dweller in fear, although there be no actual breach of the house; or by breaking and robbing in the house, a dweller being therein, and not put in fear; or by robbing or breaking the house, actually taking something, none being in the house; or by feloniously taking away something to the value of thirty-five pounds currency, or upwards, no person being in the house; or by breaking the house with intent to commit a felony, any person being in the house and put in fear, though nothing be actually taken—any such violation is called housebreaking—a crime not of so atrocious a nature as burglary. For, in the contemplation of our law, as well as of all others, violence perpetrated in the night, are of a more malignant tendency than similar ones by day: Because attacks in the night occasion a greater degree of terror; and because, they are in a season by nature appropriated to the necessary rest and refreshment of the human body, which is then, by sleep, disarmed of all attention to its defence.

With respect to injuries against a man's personal property, they are to be considered under three heads: larceny, malicious mischief, forgery. And larceny, the first of these, is either simple or mixed.

Simple larceny, or common theft, is a felonious and fraudulent taking and carrying away the mere personal goods of another—here no violence or fear is implied. If goods so taken are above the value of seven shillings currency, the offence is termed grand larceny; but if they are not exceeding that value, the act is petit larceny. Mixed larceny has in it all the ingredients of simple larceny; but it is aggravated by a taking from the house or person; and this taking is yet aggravated if it is under the impression of violence or fear. Such a taking in the house, with or without violence or fear, may or may not fall within the crimes of burglary or housebreaking, according to the circumstances. And such a taking from the person, without, or with violence or fear, will be but simple larceny in the first case; in the other, it is a robbery, and the value is of no consideration.

Malicious mischief is a species of injury that bears a near relation to the crime of arson. A dwelling is the object of arson; but other property is the subject for malicious mischief to operate upon; and indeed this spirit of wanton cruelty has a wide field of action. This horrible spirit displays itself by burning or destroying the property of another, as a stack of rice, corn, or other grain; or any tarr-kiln, barrels of pitch, turpentine, rosin, or other growth, product or manufacture of this State; or killing or destroying any horses, sheep, or other cattle.

At length the crime of forgery, concludes the calendar of publick offences against the property of an individual. I need only define the crime: it is a fraudulent making or alteration of a writing to the prejudice of another person.

Having in this manner marked out to you the distinguishing features of the principal crimes and injuries against the person, habitation and property of an individual, I now desire your attention, and I shall not long detain it, while I delineate those against the State; objects which ought most carefully to be observed wherever they appear. I have purposely thus reserved this subject, as well because it is of the most important nature, and virtually includes the other, as that by being the last described, you may be the more likely to retain the impression of it. Every outrage and violence against the person, habitation or property of an individual, is a crime, a misdemeanor, or a contempt, and therefore an injury against the State, bound by original compact to protect the individual in his rights. For no man, conceiving himself injured, has any authority, or shadow of it, to redress himself; because the State has established courts which are vindices injuriarum. Hence, every criminal injury against the individual must ultimately wound the State; and be included in the offences against the body politic, which must be more important in their nature than those relating to the individual, because they are more extensive, and of a higher degree of criminality. It behoves you, therefore, to watch for the publick safety; for this is to be attentive to your private security.

It is not by any means necessary that I trace these crimes, as they are branched by the law. The present publick service requires your immediate particular attention to offences done against only four acts of Assembly—the patrol and negro laws; the law against counterfeiting the certificates issued by the late Houses of Assembly, or the currency issued by the Congress of the Continent, or of this country; and the law to prevent sedition, and to punish insurgents and disturbers of the publick peace.

The two first laws are calculated to keep our domesticks in a proper behaviour. The two last were expressly formed as two pillars to support our new Constitution; and therefore, these last are your most important objects. I shall fully explain them.

The act against counterfeiting extends to all persons who counterfeit, raze or alter, or utter, or offer in payment, knowing the same to be counterfeited, razed or altered, any certificate or bill of credit, under the authority of the late Commons House of Assembly, or the Congresses of this country, or of the continent.

The law to prevent sedition guards against those actions as, in such a crisis as this, might reasonably be expected to operate against our present honourable and happy establishment. And the variety and importance of those actions, make it necessary for me to particularize them to you.

This salutary act touches all persons taking up arms against the authority of the present Government; or who, by violence, words, deeds, or writings, cause or attempt to cause, induce, or persuade any other person to do so. In like manner, all persons who give intelligence to, or hold correspondence with, or aid or abet any land or naval force sent by Great Britain, or any other force or body of men within this State with hostile intent against it. So those who compel, induce, persuade, or attempt to do so, any white person, Indian, free negro, or slave, to join any force under authority derived from Great Britain. And so all persons who collect, or procure them to be assembled, with intent in a riotous and seditious manner, to disturb the publick peace and tranquillity; and by words, or otherwise, create and raise traitorous seditions or discontents, in the minds of the people against the publick authority.

Thus having stated to you such criminal injuries against an individual, or the State, as may be most likely to come within your notice, it is a natural consequence, that I describe the person by law held capable of committing such injuries.

In the first place, the party must be of sound memory at the time of committing the offence, and it is the leading principle in every case. If the party is under seven years of age, no evidence can possibly be admitted to criminate; because the law holds, that the party cannot discern between good and evil. But if the accused is above seven and under fourteen, he is liable to be criminated, if at the time of his committing the injury, his understanding was so ripe as to occasion him to show a consciousness of guilt, the rule being malitia supplet aetatem. And if the party is of the age of fourteen, which is the age of discretion, the law prima facie considers him capable of committing offences as a person of full age. Also a lunatick for crimes perpetrated in a lucid interval. Also a man for crimes done in a state of drunkenness voluntarily contracted; and so far is this artificial insanity from excusing, that it tends to aggravate the offence.

All those particulars relating to the person, habitation and property of an individual; those respecting the safety, peace and tranquillity of the State; and these describing the perpetrator of criminal injuries, are so many proper heads for your diligent inquiry. And such offenders and offences being within your knowledge, you must make due presentment of them. You are to hear evidence only on the part of an information to you of an offence; for an indictment by you is only in the nature of a solemn and publick accusation, which is afterwards to be tried and determined by others. You are only to examine whether there be sufficient cause to call upon the party to answer. Twelve of you, at least, must agree in opinion that the accused ought to undergo a publick trial; so twelve other jurors are to declare him innocent or guilty. Happy institutions! whereby no man can be declared a criminal, but by the concurring voices of at least four and twenty men, collected in the vicinage by blind chance, upon their oaths to do justice; and against whom, even the party himself has no exception!

Thus, gentlemen of the grand jury, with the best intentions for the publick service, however executed, having declared to you that you are not bound under, but freed from the dominion of the British Crown, I thought myself necessarily obliged, and I have endeavoured to demonstrate to you, that the rise and fall of empires are natural events; that the independence of America was not, at the commencement of the late civil war, or even at the conclusion of the last year, the aim of the Americans; that their subjection to the British Crown, being released by the action of British oppression, the stroke of the British sword, and the tenour of a British act of Parliament, their natural rise to empire was conducted by the hand of God; that the same strong hand, by proceedings equally unexpected, wonderful and rapid as in our case, conducted the English Revolution of 1688; that the Revolutions in England and Scotland at that period, and in America now, giving a new epocha to the history of the world, were founded in the same immediate cause, a failure of protection; that those revolutions concurred in one grand evidence of the feelings of nature on such a subject; that every species of mal-administration in a King is to be traced to a failure of protection, which is the only instrument working his abdication; that the object for which we contend, is just in its nature and of inestimable value; that the American Revolution may be supported with the fairest prospect of success by arms; and that it may be powerfully aided by a grand jury.

Gentlemen, I do most cordially congratulate you, placed as you are in a station honourable to yourselves, and beneficial to your country. Guardians of the innocent, you are appointed to send the robber, the murderer, the incendiary, and the traitor to trial. Your diligence in inquiring for such offenders is the source of your own honour, and a means of your country's safety; and, although no such offenders be found, your laudable search will yet tend to curb a propensity to robbery, murder, sedition, and treason. See, gentlemen, what great advantages may result from your vigilant and patriotick conduct! Your ears ought to be shut to the petitions of friendship, and to the calls of consanguinity; but they ought to be expanded to receive the complaints of your injured country, and the demands of impartial justice. Brutus inflicted upon his sons the ultimum supplicium, for conspiring to reëstablish the regal government in Rome. And, if a similar occasion should arise in America, which God forbid, I trust a Brutus will not be wanting. Let those, if there are any such, who treacherously or pusillanimously hanker after a return of regal government, remember such things and tremble. Let us ever remember, rejoice, and teach our children, that the American Empire is composed of States that are, and of right ought to be, free and independent; "that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown;" and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved.

THE PRESENTMENTS OF THE JURY.

SOUTH-CAROLINA:

At a Court of General Sessions of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, Assize and General Gaol Delivery, begun to be held at CHARLESTON, for the District of CHARLESTON, on TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15th, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six:

Presentments of the Grand Jury for the said District:

I. It is with most cordial satisfaction we embrace this opportunity of offering our congratulations on the late Declaration of the Continental Congress, constituting the United Colonies of North America independent States, an event, however once dreaded as repugnant to those hopes of peace and friendship with the British State, which was then ardently entertained, yet which every American must now most joyfully embrace, as the only happy means of salvation and security, and the surest prevention to the treacherous and cruel designs of a wicked and detestable enemy.

II. As the kind and beneficent hand of a wise and bounteous Providence has so ordered and disposed of human events, that, from calamities which were dreaded as the most miserable and destructive to America, benefits the most advantageous, honourable, and desirable, have arisen to her, which now gives a very joyful prospect to liberty and happiness, we think our grateful sense of such peculiar care and protection cannot be manifested in a way more acceptable and proper than in a strict regard to the duties which mankind owe to their God.

III. We present the growing evil of many churches established by law falling to decay, and some remaining without ministers to perform divine service, in divers parishes in this district, by which means the spirit of religion will decline, and become prejudicial to the manners of the people.

IV. We present and recommend a proper militia law to be made, in such manner as to compel impartially and equally all degrees of persons liable to do the duty therein required, so as to enable the good people of this State (who are now become principally the guardians thereof) to repel any domestick or foreign enemy as far as possible.

V. We present and recommend, that care may always be had, that none but gentlemen of weight and influence, and good example, be prevailed on to qualify and act in the commission of peace, by whose influence licentiousness, sedition, and profligacy may be suppressed, and good order maintained.

VI. We present and recommend, that some office may be created in this district, whereby executions and sales by the Sheriff may be recorded, so that, on the death or removal of the Sheriff, recourse may be had to such records by those concerned.

VII. We present and recommend, that Jews and others may be restrained from allowing their negroes to sell goods in shops, as such a practice may induce other negroes to steal and barter with them.

VIII. We present the ill practice of Jews opening their shops, and selling of goods on Sunday, to the profanation of the Lord's day.

IX. We present the barrack-master, Philip Will, for seizing of firewood on the wharves, under pretence of the publick, when he applies the same to his own use, to the distressing of the inhabitants. By information of Mr. Patrick Hinds, one of the grand jurors.

X. We present the want of more constables in this district, we being informed that there are only four in this town.

XI. We return our thanks to his Honour the Chief Justice, for his excellent charge delivered at the opening of the sessions, and desire that the charge and these presentments be forthwith printed and published.

SAMUEL DUVALL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.
 Henrico County, Virginia, October 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have delivered to one Thomas Foster, at Hanover town, on Pamunkey river, twenty-seven hundred and eighty-one bushels of good pit coal, agreeable to my contract with Mr. Tobias Rudolph, at 1s. 4d. per bushel, our currency, who by the last of March was to have paid the money or given an order on our Treasurer, both of which he has failed to do. Mr. Rudolph has not wrote, nor in any manner complied with his engagement. Although I could not supply the several orders for coal, have not disposed of the above quantity. By the enclosed you'll see what he tells Mr. Samuel Parsons, a gentleman from my neighbourhood. If I had conceived that Mr. Rudolph would have put me to the trouble he has, I would not have sold him a bushel of coal. Neither did he ever hint that your honourable Board was to have paid for them. Mr.
Neuman told me, as Mr. Rudolph had given no order, he could pay no money. No vessel has arrived for that coal.
 I hope your honourable Board will direct Ro. C. Nicholas, Esq., to make payment and send for the coal, as I am in want of the money.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

SAMUEL DUVALL.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

RICHARD SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

George-Town, October 15, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: Enclosed you have a list of the men now enrolled under my command, and I apprehend that my Lieutenants and Ensign may have a few more, but this I am uncertain of.

There are only a very few guns and blankets yet belonging to the company, and I am fearful not many more can be procured in this County, so as to be ready for this company in any reasonable time. But if it is your opinion that I should march with these already enrolled in our present condition, you will be pleased to transmit me your orders, and they shall be obeyed.

In the mean time, with the assistance of Magruder, I shall try to purchase all the arms and other necessities I can hear of, and also to enlist more men.

I am, may it please your Honours, your most obedient servant,

RICHARD SMITH.

NICHOLAS MACCUBBIN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I having committed my proposals to your consideration, should esteem it a singular favour if you would please to inform me if they will be agreeable. The currier whom I deal with is going to the northward to purchase leather, and before he goes I must let him know what quantity I want, that he may purchase accordingly. I want to go to Baltimore to-morrow morning early, and entreat the favour of your answer.

Am, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient and humble servant,

NICH'S MACCUBBIN.

To the honourable Council of Safety for Maryland.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War Office, October 15, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War have endeavoured to form an exact account of ordnance stores in the several departments, as well as of those in the magazine under their immediate notice here. But from the want of accurate returns, they have not yet been able to accomplish their design. If these returns were made monthly, the Board would be enabled in some degree to anticipate the wants of ammunition in the army, and keep up the supply as far as may be in their power. I have it in direction to request your Excellency will order a return to be forthwith made of all ordnance stores in your department, and that you would be pleased to direct as exact returns to be made monthly as the situation of the army will admit; as well as accounts of the men, as to their numbers and capacity, to do duty. Returns should, if possible, be made of their arms and accoutrements, and also of the rations drawn from the Commissary of Provisions, as it has been said that regiments not half full draw their rations as if they were complete. With how much justice this has been said cannot be clearly known, but if monthly returns were made from the Commissary's office of the rations drawn by each regiment, the returns from the Adjutant-General would show whether they had exceeded in their number of rations what they were justly entitled to.

A list of the army is making out, wherein at one view every thing relating to each regiment will be seen. But the fluctuating state of the army has prevented that accuracy which it is hoped will be shown in the military affairs of the continent, when they shall, by the new establishment, be put upon a more permanent, and of course a more respectable footing.

I have the the honour to be, with the greatest respect, your very obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, October 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As I received no letter from Colonel Whipple or you last week, I am in hopes he is on the road here, and will bring your letter with him. I wait with some impatience for his return, as it is very hard for one delegate to constantly attend Congress and the several Committees, where one delegate is appointed from each State, especially if unwell, as has been my case for some time past. However, I am now much better, and hope to be able to ride home in a short time on horseback.

Yesterday, the Committee appointed to hear the appeal from the Maritime Court in New-Hampshire, concerning the Elizabeth, made their report, which was accepted. They have reversed the sentence of our court, and have ordered a salvage of one-tenth part to be paid by the claimants, as she did not come under the order of Congress of November and December last. Afterwards, the Congress, by a vote, gave up to the said claimants their share of the said tenth, so that they will have but one-twentieth part to pay, beside the costs.

The same Committee have had Mr. Sheafe's petition under their consideration, but have made no report. By what I have conversed with them, I believe they will not think themselves authorized to do any thing in that affair, as there is no appeal from the court to the Congress, and the opposite party not present to be heard in the case, and nothing but the petition, without any thing more before them. They all say the case appears to be hard, but know not how to remedy it, without more proofs than they have at present, and without the opposite party being heard, and the case brought properly before them.

Before this reaches you, you will see the several orders of the Marine Committee about guns for your ship, and the reasons of those orders. The rank of the Captains is settled. Captain Thompson is the sixth. Captain Manley is uneasy about his being the third, and has desired leave to resign: whether his resignation will be accepted, or his rank altered, I am uncertain. Captains Manley and Roche are got pretty hearty again as to their health. As to news, you will see what is passing here by the enclosed paper. By letters from France of the 3d of August, we have some favourable advices.

In haste, my friend, adieu.

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

MEASE AND CALDWELL TO GENERAL GATES.

Philadelphia, October 15, 1776.

SIR: On the 8th instant we had the pleasure to send forward, by two wagons, via the camp at King's Bridge, two chests, three cases, and three hogsheads, containing two thousand three hundred and eighty white linen shirts, and nine hundred and nineteen pairs of men's shoes, being by order of Congress, for the use of the army under your command, and properly directed for you at Ticonderoga. They were recommended to the care of General Mifflin, Quartermaster-General, at Head-Quarters, by the Secretary at War, to be forwarded from thence as circumstances may render most proper, and hope they will get safe and speedily to hand.

We herewith, by three wagons, send you twenty casks of nails, two hogsheads, containing five hundred and sixty-eight pairs of men's shoes, three cases, containing fifteen hundred Russia linen shirts, and one case, containing nine hundred and sixty pairs milled yarn hose, under the same direction, and for the same purpose. The wagons will be escorted by an officer's guard, with proper orders from the Board of War.

We hope, in a short time, to have a further supply of shoes, stockings and breeches to forward, though it is become exceedingly difficult, owing to the scarcity of materials and the great demand for those articles, to procure them at almost any price. When we can strike the average, we shall furnish the prices of the whole. Interim we are, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient servants,

MEASE & CALDWELL.

To Major-General H. Gates.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 15, 1776.

SIR: I was last night favoured with your letter of the 6th instant, with the return of prisoners in your State, for which I thank you. It is properly made out.

Every day's intelligence from the Convention of this State mentions plots and conspiracies that are in agitation among the disaffected. The enclosed copy of a letter, which I received yesterday from Robert R. Livingston, Esq., one of the members, and who is of the Continental Congress, will show you his idea of the situation of affairs in this Government, and their apprehensions of insurrections. The observations he has been pleased to favour me with, through the whole of his letter, seem to me to be too well founded. The movements of the enemy; their having sent up some of their ships in the North River; their landing a large proportion, if not the main body, of their army on Frog's Point, (or rather island, as it is surrounded by water every flood tide,) nine miles above this, on the Sound; added to these, the information of deserters, all afford a strong presumption, nay, almost a certainty, that they are pursuing their original plan of getting in our rear, and cutting off all our supplies. Our situation here is not exactly the same as it was at New-York; it is rather better. However, as we are obliged to divide our force, and guard every probable place of attack as well as we can; as most of our stores are here and about King's Bridge, and the preservation of the communication with the States on the other side of Hudson's River a matter of great importance, it will not be possible for me to detach any more assistance than what I have already done for the purpose of securing the passes in the Highlands. I have sent Colonel Tash, lately from New-Hampshire, with his regiment, upon the business; and as it is of the utmost consequence to possess those passes, and to hold them free and open, I would beg leave to submit to your consideration whether you can spare any aid upon this interesting occasion. I know your exertions already are great; I know you have a large number of men engaged in the service, in this and the Northern army; and nothing could have induced me to mention this matter to you, were it not for the alarming and melancholy consequences which will result from the enemy's possessing themselves of those communications. The regiment I have ordered up are to receive directions from the Convention as to the posts they are to occupy, supposing them to be much better acquainted with the places where they should be stationed than I am. If it is in your power to afford any assistance in this instance, you will be pleased to give such instructions to those you send as you shall judge necessary. I am just despatching an Engineer to the Convention to throw up some small works.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. I have sent two regiments of the Massachusetts Militia up the river to watch the motions of the ships, and to oppose any landing of men that they may attempt. I am also extending every part of my force that I possibly can towards East and West Chester, to oppose the enemy, and prevent their effecting their plan, if it shall be practicable; but our numbers being far inferior to the demands for men, I cannot answer for what may happen: the most in my power shall be done.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial of the Line, held on the Heights of HAERLEM, by order of His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, for the trial of all Prisoners to be brought before them. OCTOBER 15, 1776.

Colonel Ewing, President.

Lieutenant-Colonel Reed,	Captain Christ,
Major Seers,	Captain Campbell,
Captain Benezet,	Lieutenant Caldwell,
Captain Wallace,	Lieutenant Ripley,
Captain Anderson,	Ensign Bayham,
Captain Huntington,	Ensign Clark.

William Tudor, Judge-Advocate.

The Court, being duly sworn, proceeded to the trial of Lieutenant Pope, of the detachment of Rangers commanded by Major Coburn, brought prisoner before the Court, and accused of "plundering, and encouraging the men under his command to do so, by sharing the plunder with them."

The prisoner, being arraigned on the above charge, pleads "Not guilty."

John Bushing. My house is down by the eight-mile stone. The day after the army had retreated from York I left the house, and left most of our articles in the house. I heard that the Rangers had a number of things, and applied to Lieutenant Pope to get them. Pope appeared quite willing to have the men searched. I found an old chest, twenty pounds yarn, a pot, an axe, and two or three other trifles, in the quarters of the men. I took them away without opposition. Lieutenant Pope told me he had taken away a gun out of the house, but told me I should not have it unless I gave him five dollars, or gave an order for it from the General. I accordingly got an order, and then Lieutenant Pope told me he had sent the gun beyond King's Bridge, and gave me an order to get it. Lieutenant Pope appeared quite willing to have me take away every thing I found except the gun, which he made no difficulty about after I had the General's order.

George Wilson. I was one of the party that went into Mr. Bushing's house; and it lying very near the enemy, and being deserted, we thought it best to take away what things we could, and save them for the owners. What we brought off were immediately delivered up to the quarter-guard.

Captain Holmes. Lieutenant Pope informed me that our sentries had drove off the enemy from Mr. Bushing's house, and that, as there was a number of articles, Lieutenant Pope proposed that a party should go and fetch them off, and save them for the owners or the continent. When the things were brought up, Lieutenant Pope desired the officers to go over and take an inventory of them. We accordingly did, and Lieutenant Pope bid the men deliver every thing up, that they might be inventoried; after they were so, they were put under the quarter-guard, and the next day they were sent to Head-Quarters. Lieutenant Pope showed me a gun, and said he thought that was his property.

Sergeant Hemstead. The night after the party returned from Bushing's house with the things, Corporal Wilson had a coat and jacket, and gave them to Lieutenant Pope, who gave him five dollars. Wilson said he had rather keep the coat and jacket himself.

Adjutant Fosdick. Was present, and confirms Sergeant Hemstead's deposition, and adds that he saw Lieutenant Pope throw the coat and jacket across his arm.

The prisoner admits that he bought a coat of Wilson, but denies that he knew it to be plunder.

The prisoner produces no witnesses.

The Court are of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of conniving at plundering; and the Court sentence the prisoner to be cashiered for said offence, and he is accordingly hereby cashiered.

THOS. EWING, President.

The Court adjourns to 16th October, at ten o'clock.

October 16.—The Court met according to adjournment, and proceeded to the trial of Corporal George Wilson, of the detachment of Rangers, brought before the Court, and accused of "plundering."

The prisoner, being arraigned on the above charge, pleads guilty, and confesses that he went, with two or three others, one night about three weeks ago, into Mr. Bushing's house, and they took away several things; amongst others, he took a coat and jacket, which he brought to his quarters, and sold to Lieutenant Pope for five dollars.

The Court sentences the prisoner to be whipped thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, and that in future he do duty as a private sentinel for said offence.

THOS. EWING, President.

WILLIAM FLOYD TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters at Harlem, October 15, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed I send you some resolves of Congress, with a newspaper agreeable to your desire. I yesterday sent you by Mr. Wisner, ten thousand dollars for the purpose of paying for the blankets and clothing to be purchased in this State, all which I hope will come safe to hand.

I am now going to try to get off some of my effects from the island if it is possible, and shall be absent from Congress a few days. I beg you would excuse me, as it is the first time I have absented myself, but it happens at a time when no important matter was like to come before us.

I am, gentlemen, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient servant,

WM. FLOYD.

To the honourable Convention.

COMMITTEE OF POUNDRIIDGE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Poundridge, October 15, A. D. 1776.

HONOURED SIRS: We, the Sub-Committee of Poundridge, in West-Chester County, beg leave to inform your Honours that we are apprehensive that there is danger of our prisoners leaving us and going to the Ministerial army, as we are not more than nine or ten miles from the water where the Sound is full of the Ministerial ships and tenders. One of our number is already gone to Long-Island, and numbers are gone from other places, which are no doubt now with the Ministerial army. There are disaffected persons daily going over to them, which gives us much trouble. Therefore, we humbly beg your Honours would give us some directions concerning them, that they may be speedily removed at some farther distance. We would also inform you that for the misdemeanors of one of them, and our own safety, we have been obliged to commit him to gaol at the White-Plains.

These, with all proper respects, from yours to serve,

JOSHUA AMBLER, Chairman of Committee.

To the Honorable Convention of the State of New-York.

COLONEL A. HAWKES HAY TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Haverstraw, October 15, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 12th instant, covering the sum of five hundred dollars, and the resolve of the Committee of Safety ordering a reinforcement of one hundred men from the north side of this County, to protect the shore on the south side of the mountains as soon as levied. I fear this supply will come too late, and be insufficient for the purpose intended. The ships attempted a landing at Nyack, on Sunday last, but was prevented by a party of men under my command. Some damage was done to the house and barn of Ph. Servant. Two of the cutters fired several shot through them, but none of my men were hurt, though one of the shot from the cutters passed so near my head as to carry away a piece of my hat. We are in daily expectation of their proceeding up the river, and I am sorry to inform the Committee of Safety that should they attempt to land with one barge, I cannot command a force sufficient to prevent their penetrating the country. I have exerted myself to muster the Militia, but have not been able to raise a guard of more than thirty-eight men of my regiment at any one time at Nyack. The wood-cutters employed by order of General Heath have been with me, but have received orders to proceed in cutting wood for the army, and I have not, at present, but eleven men to guard the shore between Verdudigo Hook and Stoney-Point. In this situation, I leave the Committee of Safety to determine what can be expected from me in a way of opposition. My whole regiment consists of but three hundred men; most of them are without arms, they having been taken for the Continental troops. Most of my men refuse to attend the service, though repeatedly summoned. Many reasons are assigned for this desertion of the service, such as that the troops last raised were by the Convention expressly levied for the purpose of protecting the shore; that this induced many of their people to enlist, but have been drawn off from the immediate defence of their wives, children and property to guard the eastern shore of the river, contrary to their expectations. Others declare that if they leave their business, their families must starve, as they have all their corn and buckwheat to secure, and have been so called off during the summer by the publick troubles, as not to have been able to put in the ground any winter grain, and would therefore as leave die by the sword as by famine. A third set, and the most numerous, declare that the Congress have rejected all overtures for a reconciliation inconsistent with the independency; that all they desire is peace, liberty, and safety, and if they can procure that, they are contented.

I thought it my duty to give the Committee of Safety this information, that ways and means might be immediately provided for the defence of this part of the country. I have wrote to General Clinton, at Fort Montgomery, for assistance, but can get none, and I have no reason to expect any from the English neighbourhood, as I hear two brigades are drawn off from there to the eastern side of the river.

If the enemy should land here with any considerable force, they would, with the assistance of proper guides, proceed through the mountains and attack our forts in the Highlands with great ease. In this view, Haverstraw is of more importance than it otherwise would be, and nothing but a desire to support our present glorious struggle for liberty, induces me to wish an immediate support without which I can promise but a feeble resistance. I am ashamed to assure you, sir, that I am obliged to send this by my own negro, as I cannot spare a white man to send express. I beg you will lay this before the Committee of Safety, and despatch the bearer as soon as possible.

I am, dear sir, with esteem, your very humble servant,
A. HAWKES HAY.
To Colonel Peter R. Livingston, President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

N. B. The troops last raised out of my regiment are now stationed at Peek's Kill. Please give the negro a permit to return back to this place.

ROBERT YATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.
Fishkill, October 15, 1776.
SIR: In consequence of the enclosed resolves, we are appointed by the Convention a Committee to devise the best means to carry into execution the requisition therein contained.

As the officers now in the service of this State exceed the number necessary for the command of the four battalions intended to be raised, it becomes necessary that Convention should be furnished with a rank-roll of the whole, and the terms whereon the troops have been enlisted. To obtain these particulars, we apply to you for information; and as it is a matter of the utmost importance to have good officers, we shall esteem it as a favour to have your sentiments at large upon the subject.

By order, &c.
ROB'T YATES, Chairman.
To General Schuyler.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
Fishkills, October 15, 1776.
SIR: I was determined to have waited on your Excellency before this, but am detained here, being a member of the Convention of this State. I send by the hand of Mr. William Wallace an account of the expenses of the road from Newbury to St. John's, until we retreated with the stores provided to complete the same, which were moved on the road thirty miles. I only charge what was expended until our return; the remainder I expended in the defence of our frontiers, which to us was much needed. What tools we had provided are kept in store, which I will make a return of and dispose of as directed. Two horses also remaining I will make the best of I am able when I return.

As I engaged the hands immediate payment, should be glad the account sent, or so much as appears reasonable, might be paid Mr. William Wallace, whose discharge or receipt I allow as my own.

I am, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

ELISHA AVERY TO GENERAL GATES.
Albany, October 15, 1776.
SIR: I this morning received a bag of specie from Colonel Trumbull for you, which I send by the bearer. Also two letters: one taken out of the post office, the other received from Colonel Trumbull.

I have received no returns of the number of men at the garrisons on the western communication. According to the best account I can get, Colonel Dayton's regiment, at Fort Schuyler, consists of about six hundred men, which are ordered to Ticonderoga. Colonel Elmer's regiment, Colonel Nicoll's regiment, and about two companies of Colonel Wynkoop's regiment, are at Johnstown and the German Flats. The number of men they consist of, I don't know; perhaps seven hundred. I will make you a more particular return as soon as I am able. In the mean time, I am your Honour's most obedient and most humble servant,
ELISHA AVERY.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, October 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I can now inform you that after a long and tedious sickness, I am at last recovered my health so far that I am returned to this place. I arrived here last night. Though I am as yet very weak, am in hopes of recovering.

I received a letter at Fort Ann from General Schuyler, directed to Colonel Yates, wherein was orders that I should take the command at that post to see that the roads were made, and build a fort round the store-house and barracks, and take one company of my men with me.

Your Excellency will do me a favour to send your directions in the matter, whether I am to stay at this place or proceed directly to Fort Ann.

I send you by the bearer hereof one hundred boards.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
CORNELIUS WYNKOOP.

PETITION OF OFFICERS.

To the Hon. Major-General GATES:

The Petition of the under subscribers, Officers in the late Lieut. Colonel WAIT's Regiment, humbly sheweth:

That Captain Ebenezer Green's company being at present vacant of any officers, the whole charge of the said company being under the care of a Sergeant, the Captain being hostage, First Lieutenant sick on furlough, Second Lieutenant dead, and Ensign broke, we do recommend Frederick Aubrey, a volunteer in this regiment, (who has already been of great service to the United States;) to your Honour, as a proper person to be Second Lieutenant, he being a person who is acquainted with the nature of the service.

JAMES OSGOOD, Captain.

JASON WAIT, Captain.

SAMUEL YOUNG, Captain.

N. B. With the consent of the subalterns.

Mount Independence, October 15, 1776.

CAPTAIN THOMAS PRINGLE TO MR. STEPHENS, SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY.

On board the Maria, off Crown-Point, October 15, 1776.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I embrace this opportunity of congratulating their Lordships upon the victory completed the 13th of this month, by his Majesty's fleet under my command, upon Lake Champlain.

Upon the 11th I came up with the Rebel fleet, commanded by Benedict Arnold; they were at anchor under the Island Vallcour, and formed a strong line, extending from the island to the west side of the continent. The wind was so unfavourable, that for a considerable time nothing could be brought into action with them but the gun-boats. The Carleton schooner, commanded by Mr. Dacres, who brings their Lordships this, by much perseverance, at last got to their assistance; but as none of the other vessels of the fleet could then get up, I did not think it by any means advisable to continue so partial and unequal a combat; consequently, with the approbation of his Excellency General Carleton, who did me the honour of being on board the Maria, I called off the Carleton and gun-boats, and brought the whole fleet to anchor in a line as near as possible to the Rebels, that their retreat might be cut off; which purpose was however frustrated by the extreme obscurity of the night; and in the morning the Rebels had got a considerable distance from us up the lake.

Upon the 13th, I again saw eleven sail of their fleet making off to Crown-Point, who, after a chase of seven hours, I came up with in the Maria, having the Carleton and Inflexible a small distance astern; the rest of the fleet almost out of sight. The action began at twelve o'clock, and lasted two hours, at which time Arnold, in the Congress galley, and five gondolas ran on shore, and were directly abandoned and blown up by the enemy, a circumstance they were greatly favoured in by the wind being off shore, and the narrowness of the lake. The Washington galley struck during the action, and the rest made their escape to Ticonderoga.

The killed and wounded in his Majesty's fleet, including the artillery in the gun-boats, do not amount to forty; but from every information I have yet got, the loss of the enemy must indeed be very considerable.

Many particulars which their Lordships may wish to know I must at present take the liberty of referring you to Mr. Dacres for; but as I am well convinced his modesty will not permit him to say how great a share he had in this victory, give me leave to assure you that during both actions nothing could be more pointedly good than his conduct. I must also do the justice the officers and seamen of this fleet merit, by saying that every person under my command exerted themselves to act up to the character of British seamen.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Newport, October 15, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 11th instant, and can assure you there is no sort of shot to be had in this State, as they sent to Boston, and could get but a bare sufficiency for the new ships. Have ordered the Hampden out to gain intelligence. The Columbus is now graving. The new ships and Alfred are ready, all but men, which we must have three hundred at least for them, and one hundred for the Columbus, before we are able to engage ships of equal force; and it will be with difficulty the officers can be got willing to go out without being full manned, and I see but little encouragement of getting them manned in this State. If you will use your influence that we may get some men out of the army soon, as we wait for nothing else, it will be of great service. I have been down here ten days, in order to enlist men out of the forces here, and have not been able to get more than about one hundred and twenty, nor don't see any possibility of getting more. Mr. Shaw will be able to give you any further information as to the circumstances of the ship here, and when the present appearance alters shall acquaint you.

I am, with great respect, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the State of Connecticut, at Lebanon.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, }
October 15, 1776. }

SIR: It having been represented to this Board by Colonel Cushing, commander of a regiment lately ordered from this State to the State of Rhode-Island, that some difficulty is likely to arise respecting the command of the forces in the Continental pay stationed in Rhode-Island, by reason of Colonel Cook, commander of a regiment in your State, claiming the command, notwithstanding his commission is of later date than Colonel Cushing's, we should be very sorry there should be any difficulty respecting this matter, but do not think we are authorized to determine any other ways than what has been agreed upon by the honourable Congress, in their rules for regulating the army of the United States, at section thirteen, article twenty-six, to which we refer your Honour, not doubting you will give such orders to Colonel Cook and all other officers in command, as are conformable to the resolves of the honourable Congress.

In the name and by the order of the Council, I have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island.

COMMITTEE OF FRAMINGHAM TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Framingham, October 15, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: We, the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection and Safety, for the town of Framingham, in obedience to a resolve of the Great and General Court, have taken into our custody the personal estate of Nathaniel Brinley, who deserted said Framingham, and the farm he occupied here, fled to Boston, and was there the whole time that the British troops were at open hostilities with this State, also signed the address to General Gage, &c.; which estate consisted of quick stock, household furniture, and husbandry utensils. The stock having no connection with the farm they were found upon, we made sale of at publick vendue, on the 27th day of May last, advertising the sale in Edes' and Hall's publick papers, and in seven adjoining towns. The amount of said sale in cash, was one hundred and seventy-one pounds, thirteen shillings, and eight pence, which lies in the hands of Mr. Ebenezer Marshall, our Treasurer. The household furniture we have stored, and the husbandry tools we have stored in part, and let out part. This, honoured gentlemen, hath been our procedure with said estate, which we offer to your candid reception.

By order of said Committee:

EBEN'R HEMENWAY, Clerk.

To the General Assembly for the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENTLEMAN AT FALMOUTH, CASCO BAY, DATED OCTOBER 15, 1776.

It is surprising sugars continue so dear, when such immense quantities are brought in; but I am informed that the rich merchants are buying it all up to ship to Spain. Surely they can't be friends to the country to suffer the common people, the support of the country, to give such exorbitant prices for necessaries, that they may make themselves exorbitantly rich. They may pretend what they will, but it is plain they have little or no regard to the good of the people, therefore no friends to the country, and I hope the Government will interpose to prevent oppression from our own grandees as well as those of England.

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As Captain Patterson's boat is so near ready to sail, I thought it would be as well for him to come up in her, ready to receive your orders, which will be tomorrow, as the long schooner could be got ready in a few days, with six carriage-guns, if you would consent to swap two field rifles which you have in Annapolis for two heavy rifles that I took out of the Resolution. The large schooner is pierced for ten guns, three and two-pounders; but as we are obliged to put up four-pounders, six will be nearly equal weight of metal. The schooner is a fine vessel. There is some vessels on the sea-shore to sell. If you want to buy one of them and load them where they are, the danger would be considerable less to get them out than getting them out of the bay. My son will inform you what situation the vessels are here in. I hope you will not think me forward in attempting to dictate for you, as I really do not intend it, but am ready to oblige you in every employment you can set me about; and am your most obedient, humble servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

AMOS GARRETT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Swan Creek, October 16, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you the 14th, by Captain Smith; the same day got three gentlemen of our County to assist me in the collection of blankets, &c., for Captain Holland's company, but as that gentleman has received marching orders, they will receive but small assistance, I fear, from our collection. They will have what is in store, and what we can collect, (after the forty blankets ordered from Harford, for the hospital;) these I am now sending to Baltimore, and to get up all the necessary stores from there to despatch the company. There will be want of publick arms for this company; but as most of them have good guns of their own, expect they will conclude to carry them, till can be better equipped; and should blankets be wanting, I am in hopes they will leave those we have to the most necessitous, and provide for their own selves. As I mentioned to you before, I fear new blankets can't be got at twenty shillings, as it will take five yards of kersey, and this is selling at five shillings per yard, to make a blanket; and as to linen, common tow-linen is selling at three shillings and three shillings and six pence per yard. What we collect from the moneys received that this company don't require, will be stored at Harford.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

AMOS GARRETT.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., President.

GEORGE WELLS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As I expect to launch one of the row-galleys in about eighteen days, I should be obliged to you to let me know by bearer, Mr. John Barry, how the row-galleys should be masted and rigged, or whether you will leave that matter to Captain Nicholson and self. Please also to let me know who is to be the sail-maker, and who is to find the cordage.

Who am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
GEORGE WELLS.

To the honourable Council of Safety for the State of Maryland.

P. S. Please to let me know what weight of metal they are to carry.

ROBERT PETER AND THOMAS RICHARDSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

George-Town, October 16, 1776.

SIR: We presume to address you as a member of our Convention, on a matter which we think of the utmost importance to the publick in these times, when despatch at ferries is so very necessary. Colonel George Mason is proprietor on the land on the south side of Potowmack, and rents his ferry over to George-Town, which in Virginia is established by act of Assembly. We have also a ferry on the Maryland side, and our misfortune is that no ferries in Maryland are established by law. This we apprehend occasions the evils we are about to complain of, and which we hope our Convention, with your assistance, will remedy as far as you think it consistent with the publick good.

Our ferryman has always been threatened by Colonel Mason's tenant with a suit in Virginia, for presuming to land in or bring from Virginia any person, so that we are to reap no kind of advantage from our situation on Potowmack river, it being wholly claimed by the State of Virginia. Yesterday our ferryman was arrested, we suppose at the suit of Colonel Mason or his tenant, for this offence, tied by the Sheriff, because he attempted to make his escape, and dragged to Fairfax gaol in Alexandria, to accomplish which the Sheriff came over to this side, got the Maryland boat to put him over, desired the ferryman to come on shore and he would pay him, which he did by serving the writ, and so the matter was concerted, and with a design to prevent Maryland from having any right to a ferry over Potowmack at all; but as to the right, we submit it to our Legislature, to be determined at any future day; yet, when despatch over ferries is at this time so vastly necessary for the post and for troops that may have occasion to pass, as well as private travellers, we hope for immediate relief, as to our ferryman, so far as it may be thought in the power of our Convention, for it is notorious that unless he is released, our passage over Potowmack, either to the southward or northward, will be very much obstructed, the Virginia ferryman having no boats, at least not a sufficient number for the purpose.

We look upon this to be a matter of consequence, and hope you will not neglect having done in it what you think right, at least so far as you have it in your power. And we are, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient and humble servants,

ROBERT PETER,
THOS. RICHARDSON.

To the Hon. Thomas Johnson, Annapolis.

P. S. Since writing the foregoing the ferryman has been admitted to bail, and is returned.

Philadelphia, October 16, 1776.

Yesterday afternoon the Continental armed schooner Wasp, Captain Baldwin, returned here from a cruise, and brought in with him a large ship, bound from Jamaica for Liverpool, laden with rum and sugar, which he took about twelve days ago. The prize is got up to Chester.

By accounts from the southward, we learn that a Spanish brig was arrived from Havana at Virginia, with ten thousand dollars, to purchase flour, &c. By her we learn that Spain had actually declared war against Portugal, and that a large armament was expected at Havana from Old Spain in a short time after he sailed; and that several other merchant vessels were soon to follow him for this Continent.

Saturday last arrived here the ship taken by the brig General Montgomery. She proves to be the ship Thetis, Captain May, with three hundred and ten hogsheads of sugar, ninety puncheons of rum, &c., from Montego Bay for London, and belonged to a fleet of near two hundred sail, who left Jamaica in August last, under convoy of two men-of-war. The above ship in coming up, touched on the chevaux-de-frise, where she would have, in all probability, sunk, had it not been for the timely assistance she received from the row-galley men.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Amboy, October 16, 1776.

SIR: General Greene has informed your Excellency that a party passed over last night to Staten-Island, with a view to attack the enemy, at the east end near the watering place. As we advanced towards Richmond town information was given that some companies of British and Hessian troops were stationed there. Surprising them was therefore the first object; which was effected this morning, at break of day. Well disciplined troops would have taken the whole without the loss of a man, but we only took about twenty prisoners, partly Hessians and English: eight Hessians and nine British, one of those wounded, and besides these, two mortally wounded, left at Richmond town. We lost two men in the action. What we have collected of intelligence from the prisoners, is enclosed.

Your instructions of October the 15th I shall immediately set about observing with the utmost diligence and punctuality. Colonel Griffin received a wound in the heel, in the action of this morning, and Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, of the Flying-Camp, was slightly wounded in the arm. I shall send the prisoners on to Philadelphia.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

To General Washington.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, October 16, 1776.

The Examination of two Regular Soldiers and one Hessian, taken prisoners on STATEN-ISLAND, this morning, at the Church.

Robert Holbrook. Says he belongs to the Fourteenth Regiment, commanded by Colonel Dalrymple; twenty regulars and forty-five Hessians were at the church; there were about fifteen hundred on the island at first; about ten days ago the greatest part of the Hessians embarked; Captain Horton commanded this morning, and fled; General Howe has twenty-two thousand, including Hessians and all other troops; some new troops landed last Monday; the army in good health and plenty of provisions; all salt on the island; they expect fifteen thousand Hessians every day, but no English troops; the only reinforcement is the Sixth Regiment, about one hundred and fifty; Hessians in the army supposed to be fifteen thousand.

Peter Gee, of the Sixth Regiment, Colonel Boothby. Says one hundred and fifty of them landed on Staten-Island, last Monday, from the Chambury, transport; left England the 3d July; twenty sail came out with them, two men-of-war and eighteen provision vessels; they were making great preparations in England, recruited very fast, but expected the press to break out; about seven hundred Hanoverians came out, as many more expected; some of them lay at Plymouth; the greatest part of the Hessians left the island; a great many sick on the island; the number in the fort not known, supposed about six hundred; only two pieces of cannon in the fort; expected a reinforcement of the regulars.

Christian Guiler, a Hessian private. Says, 'tis eight years since he left his own country; almost all these troops are with General Howe; twelve thousand of them have come; expect more; expected if taken prisoner, to have mercy shown him if we were a Christian people; that he was brought from his country by force; that detachments were sent through their country, and if their parents interfered, were put in jail; were told they were to be garrisoned in England, but after three days arrival in England, were ordered to embark for America, to their great disappointment and against their will; were guarded to their ships; they saw no papers of any kind among them from us; if they knew that they would be well treated by us, would all lay down their arms; have no desire to return to their regiment again; are much pleased and happy with the treatment they have received, and are very thankful for the same.

THOMAS QUIGLEY TO THOMAS RANDALL.

On board the Putnam, Cranberry, October 6, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 1st of October, in which you advise me to keep a good look-out for the enemy's vessels. You may depend there shall none of them pass us through our negligence. We have seen three since my last to you; the first a large snow, which we chased within sight of the Hook, but two of the enemy's vessels, tenders, coming out of the Hook, was obliged to give over the chase and return. The second, a brig, we took to be a transport, which we likewise chased some hours off Cranberry Inlet, but being in sight of four other vessels, and one of them a frigate, who gave us chase, we were obliged to return again. The third, a hermaphrodite, but the wind blowing hard at northeast, could not get out to her.

I have thought fit to send Mr. Littel to you to be informed what we are to do for provision, it being very near out. We have, since the Captain went away, broached one barrel of beef and one of bread, entirely spoiled, and at this time there is not above three days' meat on board the vessel. We have not above four foremast-men that is able to stand their watch upon deck, for want of shoes and other clothing. Therefore beg you would endeavour to give us some speedy relief, either by sending us some money, or otherwise, as you shall think most expedient. I had a letter from the Captain of the same date of yours, but he has not mentioned any certain time of his being on board, which makes me conclude that it will not be very soon, as he is no great starter.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

THOMAS QUIGLEY.

To Thomas Randall, Esq.

ADDRESS OF INHABITANTS OF NEW-YORK TO LORD HOWE AND GENERAL HOWE.

To the Right Hon. RICHARD LORD VISCOUNT HOWE, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, and to His Excellency the Hon. WILLIAM HOWE, Esq., General of His Majesty's Forces in AMERICA, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to His Majesty's Colonies in NORTH-AMERICA.

Your Excellencies, by your declaration, bearing date July 14, 1776, having signified that "the King is desirous to deliver his American subjects from the calamities of war, and other oppressions which they now undergo, and to restore the Colonies to his protection and peace;" and by a subsequent declaration, dated September 19th, 1776, having also been pleased to express your desire "to confer with his Majesty's well-affected subjects, upon the means of restoring the publick tranquillity and establishing a permanent union with every Colony, as a part of the British Empire."

We, therefore, whose names are hereunto subscribed, inhabitants of the City and County of New-York, in the Province of New-York, reflecting with the tenderest emotions of gratitude, on this instance of his Majesty's paternal goodness, and encouraged by the affectionate manner in which his Majesty's gracious purposes have been conveyed to us by your Excellencies, who have hereby evinced that humanity is inseparable from that true magnanimity and those enlarged sentiments which form the most shining characters, beg leave to represent to your Excellencies, that we bear true allegiance to our rightful Sovereign, George the Third, as well as warm affection to his sacred person, crown, and dignity; that we esteem the constitutional supremacy of Great Britain over these Colonies, and other depending parts of his Majesty's dominions, as essential to the union, security, and welfare of the whole empire, and sincerely lament the interruption of that harmony which formerly subsisted between the parent State, and these her Colonies; that many of the loyal citizens have been driven away by the calamities of war, and the spirit of persecution, which lately prevailed; or sent to New-England and other distant parts. We, therefore, hoping that the sufferings which our absent fellow-citizens undergo, for their attachment for the royal cause, may plead in their behalf, humbly pray that your Excellencies would be pleased, on these our dutiful representations, to restore this City and County to his Majesty's protection and peace.

Signed by Daniel Horsemenden, Oliver De Lancey, and 946 more persons of the Town and County of New-York.*

New-York, October 16, 1776.

ADDRESS OF INHABITANTS OF NEW-YORK TO GOVERNOUR TRYON.

To His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esq., Captain-General and Governour-in-Chief in and over the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories depending thereon in AMERICA, Chancellor, and Vice-Admiral of the same.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the inhabitants of the City and County of New-York, beg leave to congratulate your Excellency on your return to the capital of your Government, and to assure you that we feel the sincerest joy on this happy event, which opens a prospect that we shall once more experience the blessings of peace and security under his Majesty's auspicious government and protection, blessings which we formerly enjoyed under your Excellency's mild administration, and which we ardently wish to have renewed.

Persevering in our loyalty and unshaken attachment to our gracious Sovereign, in this time of distress and trial, and anxious to testify our affection for him, we have embraced the earliest opportunity to petition the King's Commissioners, that they would restore this City and County to his Majesty's peace, although many of the most respectable citizens, and a much greater number of the inferior classes, have been drawn off by the calamities of war, or sent prisoners to New-England and other distant parts; yet we hope that the numbers still remaining, and who have voluntarily subscribed, may be deemed sufficient to entitle this district to his Majesty's grace, whilst the sufferings which our absent fellow-citizens undergo for the royal cause, plead in their behalf with the Commissioners, from whose well-known humanity, benevolence, and enlarged sentiments, we have the most flattering expectations.

To your Excellency we naturally look up for assistance; we therefore request that you would be pleased to present our petition to the Commissioners, and otherwise exert yourself that the prayer of it may be granted; as it is our fervent desire, and what we esteem the greatest earthly felicity, to remain subjects of the British Government, in union with the parent State.

Signed by desire, and in behalf of the inhabitants, by DANIEL HORSEMANDEN.

New-York, October 16, 1776.

GOVERNOUR TRYON'S ANSWER.

New-York, October 25, 1776.

SIR: The address you delivered to me, in behalf of the inhabitants of the City and County of New-York, cannot fail of being highly agreeable to me, as it was accompanied with a dutiful petition and representation from them to the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to his Majesty's Colonies, testifying your loyalty to our most gracious Sovereign, professing a zealous attachment to the British constitution, and declaring the warmest desire for a lasting union with the parent State. Still, solicitous as I am for the welfare of the inhabitants of this Colony in general, and earnestly wishing for a restoration of publick harmony and the reestablishment of the ancient constitutional authority of Government, I have cheerfully embraced the opportunity of presenting this day the address to Lord Howe, who was pleased to signify to me "he would take the earliest opportunity of communicating with General Howe on the occasion." The inhabitants may be assured I shall support their wishes with my best endeavours, although the completion of them must be left to the decision of his Majesty's Commissioners, in whom the highest national confidence is reposed.

* The Town and County of New-York make New-York Island. It has been remarked as extraordinary, that Richmond County, which is Staten-Island, and King's, Queen's, and Suffolk Counties, which make Long-Island, have not any of them presented addresses. And it was further remarked, that the principal expression in this address is only constitutional supremacy, that it is equivocal, that it may be explained either way, and that without explanation it is a nullity.—Remembrancer.

I am, with great regard, sir, your most obedient servant,
WILLIAM TRYON.

To the Hon. Chief Justice Horsemanden.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, Heights of Harlem, October 16, 1776.

SIR: I have been favoured with your several letters of the 11th and 13th instant, with their enclosures. The first that I received would have been answered sooner had I been able to have furnished the necessary intelligence respecting the enemy's ships-of-war in the Sound above Hell-Gate. This induced me to detain the express a day, in expectation of gaining a more certain information of this fact than what had then come to my knowledge. By some deserters, who came ashore from their shipping at Frog's Point yesterday, and who (from what I could discover on their examination) I think, in this instance, are deserving of credit, I am acquainted that there are now between Hell-Gate and Frog's Point five ships-of-war—the Fowey of twenty-four guns, the Le Brune of thirty-two, the Carysfort of twenty-eight, the Niger of thirty-two, and Halifax of sixteen; and that the Mercury and one other ship are cruising off Block Island. Whether their number may be augmented or diminished in a short time, is more than I can say; though I must observe that the enemy's frigates of twenty-eight guns (as we have found from experience) are not deterred from passing through Hell-Gate. I would therefore strongly advise, in case an attack on the ships-of-war near Frog's Point should be determined on, that tenders or other small craft should be sent ahead, for the purpose of discovering with certainty the number and strength of the enemy, who, from the circumstances I have mentioned, may be easily reinforced.

As to furnishing any soldiers from this army towards manning your ships, it is what I am sorry, under the present appearances of things, I cannot comply with, the enemy being too powerful on this quarter to admit of any diminution of the troops who are to oppose them. For this reason, also, I cannot afford any reinforcement to Colonel Livingston, to augment his detachment from twelve hundred to two thousand, which you think would be necessary; indeed, as we have received information that the enemy have been considerably reinforced by the arrival of Hessians, and as they have, from accounts, drawn almost their whole force to Frog's Point, I think it would be highly advisable (unless the expedition to Long-Island is in such forwardness as to be carried into execution immediately,) to send forward the two Massachusetts regiments, who were detained for that particular service. Should it be determined to proceed to Long-Island, I cannot interfere by any means in giving the command to a younger officer.

With respect to the stores at Norwalk and the other towns you have mentioned, I have ordered them from thence, thinking this method more eligible than to furnish troops (of which we are in such want) for their defence.

I did myself the pleasure of writing to you a few days ago, which I imagine you have received.

I am, sir, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. I have just received the examination of another deserter, who says he came away from the Dolphin, last Thursday, a sixty-gun ship, in the Sound above Hell-Gate. But this I am in doubt about. At any rate, I imagine, if it is true, it must be known to you, by information of the inhabitants living on the Sound.

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Head-Quarters, New-York Island, October 16, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 5th was delivered me by Mr. Hazard, the subject of which I had wrote upon before as fully as is necessary. The anxiety I felt for the honour of the State and the good of the cause, made me anticipate your wishes relative to recommendations. I had made a collection of the officers belonging to the Rhode-Island regiments, and delivered it to his Excellency General Washington, to be forwarded to your State. That recommendation and arrangement of officers is the best that I could make or recommend to the General, all circumstances considered. The State will act their pleasure with respect to the appointments. The General only wishes to have good men, such as will discharge their duty in every point of view, and maintain the character of gentlemen. He has no attachment to any person further than his merit recommends him. Men of merit he wishes to be appointed, whether in or out of the army.

General Howe has landed at Frog's Point, a place a few miles east of Hell-Gate. He is collecting his force together at that place with a design to cut off a retreat. His Excellency is making an arrangement to counteract him. The troops appear to be in good spirits, and I am in hopes, if Howe attacks us, he will meet with a defeat. A battle is daily, nay hourly, expected. I shall come in for no share of the honour or glory of the day, if victorious; no shame, if defeated—my command being in New-Jersey. Howe's design evidently appears to be to get in our rear, to cut off our supplies and starve the army out. This reduces us to the necessity of extending our left wing out in the country, to preserve our communication with the County from whence we get our support. A few days may produce some events important to the American interests. I was on Staten-Island night before last. The greatest part of the British troops and Hessians are drawn off to support General Howe's operations at Frog's Point.

I am exceeding happy to hear of the safe recovery of your family from the small-pox. Present my respects to them, and to Mr. Ward, the Secretary. I have carefully sent in the letters sent me by the flags.

I am, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of Rhode-Island.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have yours of the 14th, which is principally taken up with pointing out the necessity of securing a proper place of retreat beyond the Highlands, should any accident befall the army. I cannot speak positively, but I am inclined to think the expediency of such a measure is in deliberation before a council of war held this day at King's Bridge. I know some of our ablest heads are clearly for it. From every appearance, and from the information of deserters, the main body of the army is above us. One of the deserters, a good, sensible fellow, says a man-of-war lays at the Hook ready to sail with the news of the issue of their move to Frog's Point. It will seem very strange to the people of England that nothing decisive has been effected by a fleet and army superiour to any thing they employed last war. Something must be attempted to satisfy them, for bad news will be more tolerable than a state of suspense. If your information has been true, to-morrow will be a day that either gives liberty or goes a great way towards enslaving America.

I hope every man who values the first, or fears the last, will behave as he ought to do. It will give me the greatest pleasure to make you a favourable report.

I am, dear sir, sincerely yours,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq.

COLONEL BROOME TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Heights of Harlem, October 16, 1776.

SIR: John S. Hobart, Esq., who was at New-Haven about a week past, informed me that your Convention had appointed a Committee of Safety to sit at or near the lines, to transact some business of importance, and that I was honoured with being appointed one of the members. Pursuant to which information I have attended at this place in order to join the Committee, but on inquiry cannot learn that any of the gentlemen have been here. I therefore propose to return home for the present, (as a number of my family are sick,) and shall endeavour to give my attendance whenever I am informed the Committee are convened.

I am yours and the Convention's very humble servant,
JNO. BROOME.

To the Hon. Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkills.

ORDERS TO CAPTAIN OSBURN.

Third Regiment, Westchester County Brigade.

To Captain JOSEPH OSBURN:

You are hereby required to send Major Joseph Strang ten men of your company, and from time to time to furnish him with such number of men as he shall require for mending the post road from the south line of Dutchess County to King's Bridge, (and they designed none other purpose,) agreeable to a resolve of the Convention of this State, and they to receive four pounds per month.

Given under my hand and seal this 16th of October, 1776.

GILBERT DRAKE, Lieut. Colonel.

JONATHAN LANDON TO EZRA THOMPSON.

Fishkill, October 16, 1776.

SIR: The Committee for employing people to explore mines, &c., of which I am a member, have entered into a contract with McDonald to make a further trial of the lead mines. The contract he will show you. You will do well to come down here, and inform the Committee what lead is in your hands, with your account, that it may be settled, and to give your advice and opinion respecting the mine to the Committee. I am very desirous you would be good enough to attend us as soon as possibly you can, as it will be necessary to have somebody on the spot to have an eye to the business. If it is practicable for you to attend, do not fail. You are likewise to be at the trouble to measure the depth of the pit as Mr. McDonald left it, as he is now to be paid by the fathom.

I am, your very humble servant,

JONTH. LANDON.

To Mr. Ezra Thompson, Nine Partners.

October 22, 1776.—According to orders I have measured twenty-four feet length, containing six feet depth, being the present state of lead mine in the Great Nine Partners. The weight of lead ore now on hand is 1646.

EZRA THOMPSON.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday I was honoured with your favour of the 4th instant, enclosing a resolution of Congress of the 2d instant. At this very critical juncture I shall waive those remarks which, in justice to myself, I must make at a future day. The calumny of my enemies has arisen to its height; their malice is incapable of heightening the injury. I wish, for the sake of human nature, that they had not succeeded so well. I wish they had not been countenanced by the transactions of those whose duty it was to have supported me. In the alarming situation of our affairs, I shall continue to act some time longer, but Congress must prepare to put the care of this department into other hands. I shall be able to render my country better services in another line, less exposed to a repetition of the injuries I have sustained.

Since the letter from General Arnold of the 12th instant, which General Washington has doubtless transmitted to you, I have not heard a word from the fleet or Ticonderoga.

The ammunition embarked at Fort George yesterday morning, and, without doubt, arrived before night at Ticonderoga. I am preparing to build barracks for three thousand men at this place and Stillwater.

If we do not quite lose the lake this campaign, it will be necessary to employ four hundred carpenters all winter in constructing a strong naval force. Cordage, sails, oakum, and anchors, must be provided somewhere below, and the whole brought up in winter. Fifty whip-saws will be wanted, and should be sent immediately: they are not to be had in this quarter.

I wish a quantity of crocus, or any coarse linen, to be sent up for sacks for the soldiers' bedding and bolsters: it will be best to have them made up at Philadelphia, large enough for two men. A great quantity of intrenching tools must also be provided, and such a quantity of ammunition sent next winter to Ticonderoga, as will suffice for the campaign: some should be sent immediately. Cannon of the largest size should be cast in every quarter, and sent up in winter.

The Paymaster advises me that his chest is reduced to less than one hundred thousand dollars: a supply should be sent in time.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient and very humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am honoured with your Excellency's favour of the 10th and 11th instant. I am very confident the manner in which you have treated the Cayuga sachems will be attended with very salutary consequences.

By a person from your camp, who left it since the ships of war passed your chevaux-de-frise, we were informed that all the craft that could be procured were employed in carrying stone to complete the obstruction in the river. Your letter gives me hopes that those that are passed will be prevented from returning.

Since the letter of General Arnold's, transmitted you by Captain Varick, I have not had a line from Tyonderoga. I have hopes that the enemy will not renew their attack on our fleet. The ammunition arrived at Tyonderoga last night.

I shall despatch a messenger to Boston for nails, and hope to receive a supply from thence.

I am, dear sir, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776, six o'clock, afternoon.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you have copies of letters from Generals Gates and Arnold, announcing the total destruction of our fleet on Lake Champlain. I shall write to every State nearest me to march up their Militia to support our army, as the enemy will doubtless very soon attack it, and do every thing in my power to prevent their penetrating into the country, should our army be obliged to give way, which I have good hopes will not be the case.

I am, dear sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Ticonderoga, October 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I make no doubt before this you have received a copy of my letter to General Gates of the 12th instant, dated at Schuyler's Island, advising of an action between our fleet and the enemy the preceding day, in which we lost a schooner and a gondola. We remained no longer at Schuyler's Island than to stop our leaks, and mend the sails of the Washington. At two o'clock, P. M., the 12th, weighed anchor with a fresh breeze to the southward. The enemy's fleet at the same time got under way; our gondola made very little way ahead. In the evening the wind moderated, and we made such progress that at six o'clock next morning we were about off Willsborough, twenty-eight miles from Crown-Point. The enemy's fleet were very little way above Schuyler's Island; the wind breezed up to the southward, so that we gained very little by beating or rowing, at the same time the enemy took a fresh breeze from the northeast, and by the time we had reached Split-Rock, were alongside of us. The Washington and Congress were in the rear, the rest of our fleet were ahead except two gondolas sunk at Schuyler's Island.

The Washington galley was in such a shattered condition, and had so many men killed and wounded, she struck to the enemy after receiving a few broadsides. We were then attacked in the Congress galley by a ship mounting twelve eighteen-pounders, a schooner of fourteen sixes, and one of twelve sixes, two under our stern, and one on our broadside, within musket-shot. They kept up an incessant fire on us for about five glasses, with round and grape-shot, which we returned as briskly. The sails, rigging, and hull of the Congress were shattered and torn in pieces, the First Lieutenant and three men killed, when, to prevent her falling into the enemy's hands, who had seven sail around me, I ran her ashore in a small creek ten miles from Crown-Point, on the east side, when, after saving our small-arms, I set her on fire with four gondolas, with whose crews I reached Crown-Point through the woods that evening, and very luckily escaped the savages, who waylaid the road in two hours after we passed. At four o'clock yesterday morning I reached this place, exceedingly fatigued and unwell, having been without sleep or refreshment for near three days.

Of our whole fleet we have saved only two galleys, two small schooners, one gondola, and one sloop. General Waterbury, with one hundred and ten prisoners, were returned by Carleton last night. On board of the Congress we had twenty-odd men killed and wounded. Our whole loss amounts to eighty-odd.

The enemy's fleet were last night three miles below Crown-Point; their army is doubtless at their heels. We are busily employed in completing our lines, redoubts, which I am sorry to say are not so forward as I could wish. We have very few heavy cannon, but are mounting every piece we have. It is the opinion of Generals Gates and St. Clair that eight or ten thousand Militia should be immediately sent to our assistance, if they can be spared from below. I am of opinion the enemy will attack us with their fleet and army at the same time. The former is very formidable, a list of which I am favoured with by General Waterbury, and have enclosed. The season is so far advanced, our people are daily growing more healthy.

We have about nine thousand effectives, and if properly supported, make no doubt of stopping the career of the enemy. All your letters to me of late have miscarried. I am extremely sorry to hear by General Gates you are unwell. I have sent you by General Waterbury a small box containing all my publick and private papers, and accounts, with a considerable sum of hard and paper money, which beg the favour of your taking care of.

I am, dear General, your most affectionate, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

N. B. Two of the above gondolas sunk by our fleet the first day, and one blown up with sixty men.

Ticonderoga, October 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: You will herewith receive General Arnold's account of the defeat and almost total ruin of our fleet yesterday morning. It has pleased Providence to preserve General Arnold. Few men ever met with so many hairbreadth escapes in so short a space of time. Except the capture of General Waterbury and those with him, I do not think we shall lose a great many men. Upwards of two hundred, with their officers, escaped with General Arnold.

The ammunition, &c., I so long wrote for is much wanted here. I am distressed to the last degree till it arrives. This moment your favour from Saratoga of yesterday afternoon is put in my hands. Part of the lead, about three tons, is arrived, and you make me happy in acquainting me the other, &c., are so near at hand. The guard you mention, and the wise caution you give, shall be carefully attended to.

I am, in haste, your faithful and affectionate humble servant,

HO. GATES.

P. S. I beg you will send me all the spades you can collect, as fast as possible.

(Countersign, Langdon.)

As soon as the vessels sail from the wharf, the carpenters are to be employed in repairing the batteaus. The Batteaumaster is to receive and obey all orders given by Colonel Lewis, Deputy Quartermaster-General, or his Assistant, Major Hay. They will furnish men to collect all the stray batteaus, to draw them up for caulking, to pick oakum, and do all the necessary repairs.

Field officer of the day to-morrow for Ticonderoga, Major De Hart. Brigade-Major of the day, Ryan.

Field officer of the day for Mount Independence, Colonel Poor. Brigade-Major of the day, Howell.

Head-Quarters, October 2, 1776.

(Parole, Gordon.)

(Countersign, Roxbury.)

At a General Court-Martial held in the Third Brigade, on Mount Independence, of which Lieutenant-Colonel Shreve was President, Captain Marston, of Colonel Wingate's regiment, was tried on an accusation of having drawn provision for more men than he had in his company. The Court having duly considered the evidence offered, are unanimously of opinion "that Captain Marston is not guilty," and therefore do acquit him with honour.

Captain Daniel Moor, of Colonel Stark's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for neglect of duty and disobedience of orders. The Court having considered the nature of the offence, and the evidences, are unanimously of opinion that Captain Moor is guilty, and sentence him to be reprimanded by Colonel Starks.

Samuel Blue, of Captain Marston's company, in Colonel Wingate's regiment, and John Powell, of Captain Abbott's company, tried by the same General Court-Martial for desertion, are both found guilty, and sentenced by the Court to receive each thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, and to refund the expenses of bringing them to their duty.

Morris Ferrill, of Captain Stout's company, in Colonel Maxwell's regiment, tried for sleeping on his post when on sentry, is found guilty, and sentenced to receive twenty lashes on his bare back.

John Hickory, of Captain Scott's company, Colonel Maxwell's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for rioting and disturbing Colonel Poor's encampment, and threatening the life of Lieutenant Lyford, is found guilty of both crimes, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes for each.

Lieutenant Benjamin Mooney, of the late Captain Harper's company, Colonel Wyman's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for disobedience of orders and neglect of duty, plead in excuse his being inoculated for the small-pox. The Court considering this circumstance, together with the evidences, unanimously decide that Lieutenant Mooney is guilty, and sentence him to be cashiered and published in the publick papers.

The General confirms all the above sentences, and orders the acquittals to take place immediately. The punishments to be inflicted at such time and place as the commanding officer shall direct. Lieutenant Mooney's crime and punishment to be published by the Judge-Advocate of the Court.

Field officer of the day to-morrow for Ticonderoga, Major John G. Frazier. Brigade-Major of the day, Major Brown.

Field officer on Mount Independence, Colonel Maxwell. Brigade-Major of the day, Major Rice.

Head-Quarters, October 3, 1776.

(Parole, Cooper.)

(Countersign, Portsmouth.)

At a General Court-Martial at Ticonderoga, of which Lieutenant Colonel Johnston was President, one John Rolstone, a suttler, was tried "for selling rum to the soldiers, and suffering them to be drunk at his hut at unseasonable hours, contrary to orders." The Court, on examination of the witnesses, find him guilty of selling liquors contrary to orders, and adjudge unanimously that he be immediately ordered off the ground, and prohibited from suttling hereafter to the Northern army.

John Gill, of Captain Stout's company, in Colonel Maxwell's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for defrauding the continent. On examination the Court found that the prisoner fraudulently obtained a discharge from the Director-General of the Hospital, by feigning himself sick, and afterwards returned to camp and enlisted in Colonel Wyman's regiment, where he received sixteen dollars bounty. The Court, therefore, find him guilty, and sentence him to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, refund the bounty he received, and be drummed out of the army with infamy.

Eleazar Smith, charged with counterfeiting the currency of the Massachusetts-Bay, tried by the same General Court-Martial, is found guilty, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back.

The General approves the above sentences, except that part of John Gill's sentence relating to his being drummed out of the army, which is to be changed to drumming through Colonel Maxwell's and Wyman's regiment, and then returning to his duty in the former. The sentences to be put in execution immediately.

At a continuation of the same General Court-Martial, Major Morris President, in place of Lieutenant-Colonel Johnston, who was taken ill, Amos Towsley, Phineas Babcock, and John Keys, charged with counterfeiting bills of credit. No evidences appearing against the prisoners, they are acquitted.

Lieutenant Whitney, of Colonel Wheelock's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for infamous conduct in degrading himself by voluntarily doing the duty of an Orderly Sergeant, in violation of his rank as an officer, is found guilty, and sentenced to be severely reprimanded by General Bricket at the head of the brigade.

Corporal Jewel, and Neal O'Neal, of Colonel Winds's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for theft. The Court, after a full examination of the evidences, are of opinion that Corporal Jewel and Neal O'Neal are not guilty.

Lieutenant Voorhees and Ensign Costigan, of Colonel Winds's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for ungentlemanlike behaviour, in setting fire to a bow house belonging to Ensign Ross, of the same regiment. The Court considering the evidences, are of opinion that Lieutenant Voorhees is not guilty, and do unanimously acquit him. But that Ensign Costigan is guilty, and adjudge that he be reprimanded by the Colonel in presence of the officers of his own corps.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to take place accordingly.

The Court-Martial of which Lieutenant-Colonel Shreve was President, is dissolved.

A General Court-Martial to sit to-morrow morning at the President's tent, taken from the First and Second Brigades, Lieutenant-Colonel March, President. Members, two Field Officers and ten Captains. They will try such prisoners as shall be brought before them.

Field officer of the day for Ticonderoga to-morrow, Colonel Wayne. Brigade-Major of the day, Ryan.

Field officer of the day for Mount Independence, Colonel Wingate. Brigade-Major of the day, Howell.

The Commissary is ordered to issue half gill of rum to each non-commissioned officer and soldier in camp, on account of the wet weather.

Head-Quarters, October 4, 1776.

(Parole, Sydney.)

(Countersign, Harrington.)

In consequence of the continuance of the wet weather, the Commissary is immediately to issue one gill of rum to every non-commissioned officer and soldier now in camp.

At the General Court-Martial of which Major Morris is President, Stephen Juffen, Sergeant in Colonel Wheelock's regiment, was tried for leaving his guard without orders. In the course of the trial it appearing to be more a mistake, than through design, the Court find him not guilty.

James Matthews, late of Colonel Poor's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for stealing or concealing a sword. The Court having considered the evidences, are of opinion that the prisoner is not guilty of stealing, but from the circumstances of his disposing of the hanger after it was claimed by the owner, find him guilty of concealing it, and adjudge that he pay £7 10s. lawful money to Lieutenant Morrison, the owner, as a compensation for the hanger.

The General approves the above proceedings, and orders them to take place immediately.

The General Court-Martial of which Major Morris was President, is dissolved.

The following promotions are ordered to take place, viz:

In Colonel Woodbridge's Regiment.

Mr. Samuel Leonard, Quartermaster, vice Quartermaster Douglas, advanced.

As the publick works are greatly in want of these tools, the General desires the commanding officers of regiments will command a strict obedience to this order.

Ensign David Johnson, Second Lieutenant, vice Lieutenant Jackson, discharged.

The guards in future are to parade at nine o'clock on the general parade.

Contrary to all good discipline, and in disobedience to the most positive orders, some officers and soldiers have presumed to shoot pigeons and other game in and about the several encampments; no less than two officers and twenty-eight men being yesterday detected in committing the above-mentioned scandalous irregularity. For their punishment the General orders the officers to oversee the men, who are, all of them, to be employed for two days in picking oakum for the use of the fleet, and such as are for the future guilty of firing their arms without orders, are to be sent to the Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General to be dealt with in like manner.

Head-Quarters, October 11, 1776.

(Parole, Hingham.)

(Countersign, Quincy.)

The long stillness and seeming supineness of the enemy, strongly indicate that they are meditating some stroke of importance; it therefore behooves every officer and soldier of this army to be exceedingly vigilant and alert, particularly when upon duty. The officers of the day at Ticonderoga, as well as upon Mount Independence, are, by their example, to give life and spirit to the guards under their inspection. The grand and visiting rounds are upon no account to be negligent of their duty, observing to be particularly attentive to the sentries and guards, from four in the morning till broad daylight. As the campaign is drawing towards a close, the General is anxious nothing disgraceful to the troops under his command should tarnish that good behaviour they have hitherto shown.

Field officer of the day for Ticonderoga, to-morrow, Major P. Frazier. Brigade-Major, Ryan.

Field officer for Mount Independence, Major Sumner. Brigade-Major, Second Brigade.

Head-Quarters, October 12, 1776.

At a General Court-Martial from the First and Second Brigades, of which Lieutenant-Colonel March was President, Solomon Twist, a soldier of Captain Man's company, late Colonel Reed's regiment, was tried for sleeping on his post. The prisoner confessed the fact, but it being proved that he was sick at the time, the Court do acquit him.

James Gears, soldier, of Captain Shepherd's company, Colonel Porter's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for desertion. The Court acquit the prisoner from corporal punishment, it being proved he had not his proper senses at the time of committing the crime, but adjudge that he be mulcted one month's pay, for the use of the sick of the regiment, and refund all expenses of his being apprehended and brought to camp.

Ensign Benjamin Chamberlain, of Colonel (late) Wait's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for neglect of duty and disobedience of orders, is found guilty of disobedience of orders, and sentenced to be discharged the service.

Ensign Whittemore, of the regiment late Colonel Reed's, tried by the same General Court-Martial for behaving in a manner unworthy an officer and a gentleman, and contrary to an express resolve of Congress, published in general orders the 5th September, is found guilty, and sentenced to suffer the punishment ordered in said resolve, viz: to forfeit one month's pay for the benefit of the sick of the regiment, and be dismissed the service with infamy.

Lieutenant Benjamin Talbot, of the Twenty-Fourth, or Greaton's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for acting in the character of a sutler in selling rum, &c., in camp, is found guilty of a breach of the resolve of Congress published 5th September last, and sentenced to suffer the punishment ordered by it.

John Pratt, Ensign of the same Regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for the same crime, is found guilty, and sentenced to receive the punishment ordered by the resolve of Congress above-mentioned.

Joseph Magoon, soldier, of Captain Harper's company, Colonel Wyman's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for stealing, is found guilty, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back, at the head of the brigade to which he belongs.

Joseph Stimson, soldier, of Captain Drew's company, Colonel Wyman's regiment, tried by the same General Court-Martial for stealing a pocket-book, and for cursing and abusing the officer of the guard, is found guilty of both the crimes, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes on his bare back for the first offence, and twenty for the second, at the head of the brigade to which he belongs.

The General approves the above proceedings, and orders all the sentences contained in them to take place immediately; particularly those passed upon the officers, who are ordered to leave the camp immediately after discharging their debts, &c.

The General Court-Martial of which Lieutenant-Colonel March was President, is dissolved.

Officer of the day for Ticonderoga, to-morrow, Colonel Woodbridge. Brigade-Major, Brown.

Officer of the day for Mount Independence, Colonel Wingate. Brigade-Major, Third Brigade.

The Regimental Surgeons are to deliver in at the medical store all the lint they have got made at six o'clock this afternoon. An Orderly Sergeant from each corps, and a man from the artillery, to attend constantly at Head-Quarters.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO ABRAHAM YATES.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776, six o'clock afternoon.

SIR: By letters from Generals Gates and Arnold, I am advised of the total destruction of our fleet on Lake Champlain, and that it is beyond doubt that the enemy mean to attack our army at Tyonderoga.

I have written to General Ten Broeck to march up the Militia under his command; and I have also applied for that of the neighbouring States. General Gates wishes to be sustained by an army of ten or twelve thousand of them. It is certainly of the highest importance that all the Militia that can be spared should march up without delay, either to support General Gates, if there should be time, or to cover his retreat should he be reduced to the necessity of quitting his ground; and I must therefore entreat your aid. Permit me to suggest that I believe the Convention's moving to Albany would be attended with good consequences.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Ab. Yates, Esq., President of the Convention.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO BERKSHIRE (MASS.) COMMITTEE.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Our fleet, which suffered severely in an engagement on the 12th instant with the enemy, has been still more severely handled in a subsequent one, insomuch that the enemy are left masters of the lake, and are now coming on to attack our army at Ticonderoga.

In this situation of our affairs, it is of the utmost importance that the Militia of your State should immediately march to sustain the army; and such as can march expeditiously, come by the way of Albany, should do so, and the others take the route to Skeensborough. Each man should come provided with as much provision and ammunition as possible. The commanding officer must send me information of his numbers, and the progress in his march from time to time. I shall be either at Fort George or at Skeensborough, but as I cannot determine which, it will be proper to send expresses to both places, and to forward copies of this to Governour Trumbull, and to every Committee in your State in a situation of affording assistance, as also to the neighbouring Counties in the State of Connecticut. I must repeat, gentlemen, that it is of great importance that I should be duly furnished with an account of the movements and numbers of the Militia.

From, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Committee of the County of Berkshire.

Stockbridge, October 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Militia in this County are rallied and on their march, and we think it of the utmost importance that you comply with the General's request immediately.

ERASTUS SERGEANT,
SAMUEL BROWN, Jun.,
ASA BEMENT,

Committee of Stockbridge.

To the Committees in Hampshire County.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO SELECTMEN OF BOSTON.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Barracks and a variety of buildings are constructing for this department, but greatly retarded by want of nails. I have sent the bearer to Boston to procure what quantity he can. Permit me to entreat the favour of you, gentlemen, to afford him your aid in making the purchases, and procuring carriages to convey them to this place, and if a sufficient quantity cannot be had in Boston, to direct him to such places in which you may deem it probable that he can be supplied.

I am, gentlemen, respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the gentlemen appointed Selectmen of the town of Boston.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skeenesborough, October 16, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I thought proper to inform you that Mr. Langdon, Major Skeene's clerk at this place, is an enemy to his country, and he is busy every day viewing and prying into every circumstance. I am under apprehension that he takes every method in his power to inform the Regulars of our situation.

The General can use his pleasure in the matter, but I think he ought not to be here.

I am, dear General, your most obedient,

CORN. WYNKOOP.

To General Gates.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skeenesborough, October 16, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I send you by the bearer hereof, George Rush, of Colonel Mott's regiment, eighty boards in a bateau. I should send more, but they were partly loaded. I shall send you another boat-load by the first opportunity.

I am, dear General, your humble servant,

CORN. WYNKOOP.

To Major-General Gates.

LEWIS T. COSTIGAN TO GENERAL GATES.

Ticonderoga, October 16, 1776.

SIR: Am fully convinced that the appointment of another gentleman in the place I lately had the honour to hold in the regiment, was owing entirely to a want of knowledge of the circumstances which occasioned my so long absence from it. But, encouraged by your Honour's known liberality and candour, on my first arrival from New-York I took the liberty to wait on your Honour with my hearty thanks for your kind indulgence in permitting me to visit my family in their distressed circumstances, and also to inform you of the reason of my absence, and to supplicate your Honour for some relief in my case, which you was graciously pleased to promise; but as the approach of the enemy this season is now pretty certain, and the fate of war very uncertain, and my situation, in case of a disaster, very disadvantageous, I would beg leave most humbly to repeat my suit, not knowing but your great attention to the interests and safety of the cause in which you are so zealously engaged, might have occasioned you to forget a matter of so trifling consequence as mine. I cannot help observing to your Honour, that I entered the service from principle, and flatter myself that, while in the regiment, I have maintained a character in some good degree worthy the commission I sustained, and to be dismissed from it with the opprobrious epithet of "deserted," affects me in the most tender part. It is from your Honour's liberality alone I hope for relief. If you should please to grant it, I trust I shall return with honour; otherwise, with disgrace.

I have the honour to be your Honour's most dutiful, most obedient, humble servant,

LEWIS T. COSTIGAN.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates, Esq., Major-General and Commander of the Army of the United States of America in the Northern Department.

COLONEL HENRY B. LIVINGSTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Saybrook, October 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I send you by this conveyance the paroles of Colonel Fanning, Major Conkling, and George Howell, inhabitants of Long-Island, who have been generally thought disaffected to the freedom of this country, but profess themselves friendly. Colonel Fanning was apprehended for assisting in procuring and driving cattle for the subsistence of General Howe's army on Long-Island; he has also, as Colonel, acted by virtue of an old commission from George the Third, King of Great Britain, in calling the people of Southold together, to see whether they would take the oath of allegiance, as he expresses it in an intercepted order that I had in possession, but somewhere or other mislaid, or should send it for your perusal. Being in concert with Colonel McIntosh intrusted with an expedition to Long-Island, I thought it improper he should remain there without some restraint, as he is a man of influence, and might in some measure contribute to render abortive our plan. Major Conkling was also taken at the same time, by a party of my men sent for that purpose, he having long lain under the imputation of being unfriendly to our interests. George Howell was under the like constraint for the same reason.

I remain, gentlemen, with all imaginable respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON, Lieut. Colonel.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York, Fishkills.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN HACKER.

Newport, October 16, 1776.

SIR: Upon receipt of this, you are to go up Swansey river, and take the privateer sloop, Captain Dennis, who, I have intelligence, has got some of our men belonging to the fleet, and bring the sloop and all the men you find on board of her into Newport harbour: and for so doing, this shall be your sufficient authority.

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To Hoysteed Hacker, Commander of the Hamden.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Council Chamber, October 16, 1776.

SIR: It having been represented to this Board by Colonel Cushing, commander of a regiment lately ordered from this State to the State of Rhode-Island, by reason of Colonel Cooke, commander of a regiment in the State, claiming the command, notwithstanding his commission of later date than Colonel Cushing's, we should be very sorry there should be any difficulty respecting this matter, but do not think we are authorized to determine any other ways than what has been agreed upon by the honourable Congress, in their rules for regulating the army of the United States, at section 13th, article 26th, to which we refer your Honour, not doubting you will give such orders to Colonel Cooke, and all other officers in command, as are conformable to the resolves of the honourable Congress.

In the name, and by the order of the Council, I have the honour to be, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant.

To the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of the State of Rhode-Island.

COLONEL PIERCE LONG TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Portsmouth, October 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I should have done myself the pleasure of waiting on the Assembly, had not my business been such which prevents. It takes me all my time in overseeing the bridge, which I am removing about one hundred feet above the place where the old one stood; it will be much more convenient, and be far less trouble, and I believe not more expensive. The soldiers as yet muster very thin, which obliges me to employ all that's here on the bridge at a time, by which means their exercise is neglected.

Colonel Whipple set off for Philadelphia on Wednesday last, with whom I went to Hampton, (in company with other friends,) who requested me to tell you that he wished three battalions might be ordered to be raised exclusive of this stationed down here; and that a petition might be forwarded to Congress, to be presented by our delegates, for this to be for our protection on both frontiers, if at any time part could be spared from this harbour. If it can be done, it will effectually ease this State of the expense of having a number of men in their pay, which in this case will be prevented, and should you think with him and forward said petition, he would endeavour to get the same accomplished, which he was of opinion could be done with ease. I, for my part, think the scheme a plausible one, and should like it much.

We have nothing new, only Captain Parker, I fancy, purposes to carry on the fishing business. The British tyrant passed the fishing act, and he is putting it into execution.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

I am, dear sir, with esteem, your most humble servant,
PIERCE LONG.

To E. Thomson, Esq.

P. S. By a letter from Colonel Bartlett to Colonel Whipple, which I saw, he appeared to be of the same opinion.

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, October 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I once more put pen to paper, not to attempt what is absolutely beyond the power of language to paint, my distressed situation here, totally destitute of intelligence or instructions from you since I left America, except Mr. Morris's letters of the 4th and 5th of June last, covering duplicates of my first instructions; nor will I complain for myself, but must plainly inform you that the cause of the United Colonies or United States has, for some time suffered at this Court for want of positive orders to me or some other person; it has not suffered here only, but at several other Courts not only willing, but even desirous of assisting America. Common complaisance, say they, though they want none of our assistance, requires that they should announce to us in form, their being Independent States, that we may know how to treat their subjects and their property in our dominions. Every excuse which my barren invention could suggest has been made, and I have presented memoir after memoir on the situation of American affairs, and their importance to this Kingdom and to some others. My representations, as well verbally as written, have been favourably received, and all the attention paid them I could have wished, but the sine qua non is wanting—a power to treat from the United Independent States of America. How, say they, is it possible that all your intelligence and instructions should be intercepted, when we daily have advice of American vessels arriving in different ports in Europe?

It is true I have effected what nothing but the real desire this Court has of giving aid could have brought about, but at the same time it has been a critical and delicate affair, and has required all attention to save appearances, and more than once have I been on the brink of losing all, from suspicions that you were not in earnest in making applications here. I will only add that a vessel with a commission from the honourable Congress, is detained in Bilboa as a pirate, and complaint carried to the Court of Madrid. I have been applied to for assistance, and though I am in hopes nothing will be determined against us, yet I confess I tremble to think how important a question is by this step agitated, without any one empowered to appear in a proper character, and defend. Could I present your Declaration of Independence and show my commission subsequent, empowering me to appear in your behalf, all might be concluded at once, and a most important point gained; no less than that of obtaining a free reception, and defence or protection of our ships-of-war in these ports, a determination which must eventually ruin the commerce of Great Britain.

I have wrote heretofore for twenty thousand hogsheads of tobacco. I now repeat my desire, and for a large quantity of rice. Tobacco is eight and a half pence sterling per lb., in Holland, and rice fifty shillings sterling per cwt.; the very profits on a large quantity of these articles will go far towards an annual expense.

The stores, of which I have repeatedly wrote you, are now shipping, and will be with you I trust in January, as will the officers coming with them. I refer to your serious consideration, the enclosed hints respecting a naval force in these seas, also the enclosed propositions which were by accident thrown in my way. If you shall judge them of any consequence, you will lay them before Congress; if not, postage will be all the expense extra. I believe they have been seen by other persons, and therefore I held it my duty to send them to you.

My most profound respects and highest esteem ever attend the honourable Congress, and particularly the honourable Secret Committee.

I am, gentlemen, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

P. S. Dr. Bancroft has been so kind as to pay me a second visit, and that most seasonably, as my former assistant, Mr. Carmichael, is gone to Amsterdam, and thence northward, on a particular affair of very great importance. The vessel referred to is Captain Lee, of Newburyport, who, on his passage took five prizes of value, and sent them back, but brought on two of the Captains and some of the men prisoners to Bilboa, where the Captains entered their protest, and complained against Captain Lee as a pirate, on which his vessel is detained, and his commission, &c., sent to Madrid. This instantly brings on a question as to the legality of the commission: if determined legal, a most important point is gained; if the reverse, the consequences will be very bad, and the only ground on which the determination can go against the Captain, is that the United States of America or their Congress, are not known in Europe as being Independent States, otherways than by common fame in newspapers, &c., on which serious resolution cannot be grounded. The best, therefore, that the Captain expects, will be to get the matter delayed, which is very hard on the brave Captain and his honest owners, and will be a bad precedent for others to venture into the European seas.

I have done every thing in my power, and am in hopes from the strong assurances given me, that all will be settled to my satisfaction in this affair; but cannot but feel on the occasion as well for the Captain as for the publick. I have been told repeatedly I was too anxious, and advised "rester sans inquietude;" but I view this as a capital affair in its consequences, and though I wish to, cannot take the advice.

Warlike preparations are daily making in this Kingdom and in Spain; in the latter immediately against the Portuguese, but will most probably in its consequences, involve other Powers.

I need not urge the importance of immediate remittances towards paying for the large quantity of stores I have engaged for, and depend this winter will not be suffered to slip away unimproved.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, October 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This comes by Mons. M. Motin de la Balme, an officer of long service and good reputation, has served as Captain of Cavalry, and is now in rank Lieutenant-Colonel, and now offers his service to the United States of North America.

I have provided him a passage at the publick expense, and assured him his services will be both seasonable and acceptable to the continent, in some of its departments. I have lately wrote you several letters, but am still without intelligence or instructions from you since the 5th of June last. The consequences are very disagreeable, as thereby I am much a loss how to proceed, and the interest of the United States suffers exceedingly.

Captain Lee, of Newburyport, in a letter-of-marque schooner, made in his passage five valuable prizes, which he sent back, but brought on two or three of the Captains and some of their men, as prisoners, who, immediately on being landed, protested against him as a pirate; and by the help of some English factors there, procured a detention of his vessel until the opinion of the Court of Madrid should be known.

Thus a most important question is precipitated on, without any one to appear, properly authorized to defend, for though your Declaration of Independence has been published in newspapers through Europe, and is nowhere doubted, yet Courts require some better authority in such important affairs.

I have been applied to by the Captain, and have used what influence I can make in the case, but at best I expect a detention of the vessel, or perhaps heavy bonds to answer hereafter, if the cause is decided against them. This is very hard on a brave Captain and his honest owners, and must discourage cruising in the European seas unless remedied, which the bare announcing of your Independency would do effectually.

As I shall write you very particularly in a few days, I will not add, but am, with most respectful compliments to the honourable Congress and their Secret Committee, gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

SILAS DEANE.

SILAS DEANE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Paris, October 17, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mons. M. Motin de la Balme, has long served with reputation in the armies of France as a Captain of Cavalry, and is now advanced to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He has made military discipline his study, and has wrote on the subject to good acceptance. He now generously offers his services to the United States of North America, and asks of me what I most cheerfully grant, a letter to you, and his passage. Confident he may be of very great service, if not in the general army, yet in those Colonies which are raising and disciplining Cavalry, I have only to add that he is in good esteem here, and is well recommended, to which I am persuaded he will do justice.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

SILAS DEANE TO WILLIAM BINGHAM.

Paris, October 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Since receiving yours of the 4th and 5th August last, I have wrote you repeatedly, and have no doubt of your receipt of them, to which refer you. You are in the neighbourhood of St. Vincent, and I learn that the Caribbs are not content with their masters; and, being an artful as well as revengeful people, would undoubtedly take this opportunity of throwing off a yoke which nothing but a superiour force can keep on them. My request is, that you would inquire into the state of that island by proper emissaries; and if the Caribbs are disposed to revolt, encourage them, and promise them aid of arms and ammunition. This must tear from Great Britain an island which they value next to Jamaica, and to which, indeed, they have no title but what rests on violence and cruelty; at any rate they will oblige Great Britain to withdraw part of her forces from the continent. If any thing can be effected then, inform me instantly and I will order to your care such a quantity of stores as you shall think necessary.

The enclosed letter I desire you to break the seal of, and make as many copies as there are vessels going northward, by which some one must arrive.

A war I think may be depended upon; but keep your intelligence of every kind secret, save to those of the honourable Secret Committee. You will send also a copy of this, by which the honourable Committee will see the request I have made to you, and the reason of their receiving several duplicates in your handwriting.

I wish you to forward the enclosed to Mr. Tucker, of Bermuda, and write me by every vessel to Bordeaux or Nantz.

I am, with great esteem, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

GENERAL STEPHEN TO FRANCIS LIGHTFOOT LEE.

Philadelphia, October 17, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed are the returns of the arms and necessities wanting for the Fourth Virginia Battalion; likewise the state of the regiment. The seventy-seven mentioned sick are chiefly convalescents, and could take a brush with the enemy occasionally.

It would be for the good of the service to supply us with muskets and bayonets, in the place of the rifles. Nothing but necessity made me admit so many of them into the regiment.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ADAM STEPHEN.

To Colonel Francis L. Lee, of the Board of War.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN ISAAH ROBINSON.

Philadelphia, October 17, 1776.

SIR: The honourable the Congress having ordered that you should make a voyage under direction of the Secret Committee, therefore you will receive their instructions, and comply with them. Those fulfilled, you must give us notice, that we may again direct your further proceedings; and during your present voyage we expect you will transmit us any useful or important intelligence that comes to your knowledge; that you take good care of the Andrew Doria, her stores, provisions, and materials; that you maintain proper discipline amongst your officers and men, at the same time using them well. We dare say you will treat all such as become your prisoners with tenderness and humanity; and, on your return, lodge copies of your log-book and journal in this office.

We are, sir, your most humble servants.

To Captain Isaiah Robinson, of the brig Andrew Doria.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Perth-Amboy, October 17, 1776.

SIR: In the night of the 15th, General Greene passed over with me to Staten-Island, with part of the troops at this post. We were to be joined on the march by the Jersey Militia from the Blazing Star, Elizabeth-Town, and Newark. Our intention was to reach the east end of the island by break of day, and attack the enemy, where we understood their greatest force lay. If successful there, the smaller posts would yield of course.

Orders from General Washington arrived at eleven at night, that made it necessary for General Greene to repair immediately to Haarlem. I was then advanced within a few miles of Richmond town, and received information on the march that a company of British troops, one of Hessians and one of Skinner's Militia, lay there. Reducing that post was, therefore, our first object. Colonel Griffin was detached, with Colonel Paterson's battalion, and Major Clarke, at the head of some Riflemen, to fall in upon the east end of the town, while the remainder of the troops enclosed it on the other quarters. Both divisions reached the town by break of day, but not before the enemy were alarmed. Most of them fled, after exchanging a few shot with Colonel Griffin's detachment. Two soldiers were mortally wounded, and seventeen taken prisoners, with the loss on our side of two soldiers killed. Colonel Griffin received a wound in the foot from a musket-ball, and Lieutenant-Colonel Smith is slightly wounded in the arm. — A list of prisoners, with the arms and accoutrements that fell into our hands, is enclosed. General Washington's orders, which I received that night, immediately to form a new arrangement of the troops in New-Jersey, obliged us to return to Amboy. Any further operations against the enemy would, however, have been, at that time, unsuccessful, as they were fully apprised of our approach, and had time sufficient to retire within their redoubts, and under cover of the ships at the watering-place. Skinner's Militia had quitted Richmond town the evening before: he had with him about twenty men, who fled on hearing of our march towards the town. My orders against plundering the inhabitants were strictly complied with. These were issued with a view to counteract the false accounts of our cruelty, industriously propagated by the enemies of America among the ignorant islanders. The Hessian prisoners I have ordered to be treated with particular civility, that, when exchanged, they may give the most favourable report of this country, and confirm to the Hessian troops what the honourable the Continental Congress have thought proper to promise them in their printed advertisements.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
HUGH MERCER.

Colonel Taylor, who commands the guards of New-Jersey Militia, is just now arrived from his post on the Shrewsbury shore, with intelligence, that on Monday morning, the 14th, a vessel was stranded on that coast, which proved to be the schooner Betsey, commanded by Alexander Wilson, bound from Boston to Bordeaux. The owners are Messrs. Payne, Sownes, Wallace, Davis, Barrel, &c. She sailed from Boston the 21st of September; was taken the 28th by the Persia man-of-war, of twenty guns, commanded by George Kult Elphenson, bound from England to New-York, a convoy of nineteen sail of transports, containing stores and a few soldiers. The prize-master put on board is Hodgkiss, and a mate, with four hands. These prisoners I have ordered on to Philadelphia, and have given directions that all possible care be taken of the vessel and the effects on board for the benefit of the owners. A list of the effects, given me by Colonel Taylor, is enclosed: that gentleman will comply with any orders you are pleased to give relative to this affair.

Your obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

A fleet of upwards of sixty sail appear just now in the offing, making in for Sandy-Hook.

A List of Prisoners taken at Richmond Town, on STATEN-ISLAND, and sent on to PHILADELPHIA.

Hessian: Christian Guiler, Ustus Smit, Johannes Burneman, Jeliacob Autolf, Yohan Daniel Eiberwin, Hanyere Curt, Yohannes Hedecker, Frederick Wilhelm Smatt.

A Return of the Arms and Accoutrements taken from the Enemy on STATEN-ISLAND, OCTOBER 16, 1776.

Eleven muskets, 9 bayonets, 5 scabbards, 10 cartridge-boxes, 3 cutlasses, 3 slings, 1 sword-belt, 68 musket-balls, and 30 cartridges. More yet to be returned.

B. FLOWERS, Com. of Stores.

MARY HAY BURN TO JOHN HAY BURN.

New-Hackensack, October 17, 1776.

MOST LOVING HUSBAND: These come to let you know that I and my family are well at present, hoping these few lines will find you so likewise, and to let you know that Dirrick Hoogland has warranted me to go out of my house, and has forewarned me to repair it, for out of it he says I shall go; for if any body comes to repair it, he says he will pull off the roof, and fetch it all home. What I shall do I know not, for a house I cannot get, and to get in with Febe I can't, for William Elsworth he lives there; so you must go to your commanding officers and let them know the circumstance I am in, and let them know that I will be obliged to be turned out of doors if you don't come up and look for a house. Come you must, if possible. If you can't come, you must go to some of your officers belonging to the company where you are in, and try and get in with one of them for to go to the commanding officer and see whether Dirrick has any right to turn me out of doors, since you are listed for to go and fight for liberty. Why should I not have liberty whilst you strive for liberty? The money you sent me, I laid it out as you ordered. But I am got out of money. If you can't come, you must send all the money you can. So no more at present, but I remain your loving wife until death.

MARY HAY BURN.

To Mr. John Hay Burn, at King's Bridge.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Judging it a matter of the utmost importance to secure the passes through the Highlands, I have sent up Mons. Imbert, a French gentleman who has been placed in the army as an Engineer by Congress, in order to take your directions respecting the passes and such works as you may esteem necessary to preserve them. As the situation of affairs in this State is rather alarming, I would beg leave to recommend your earliest attention to this business, and that no time may elapse before the works are begun. I have no acquaintance with Mons. Imbert, and his abilities in his profession remain to be proved; however, I trust under your care and advice, that whatever may be essential will be immediately done.

I have the honour to be, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abm. Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

P. S. I can spare no other Engineer, having but one besides.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 17, 1776.

SIR: On Monday last I was honoured with your favour of the 5th instant, and beg leave to inform you that the reasons which you assign for countermanding Colonel Richmond's march appear to me strong and substantial. As to the expedition to Long-Island, it is impossible for me to give any direction about it; it must be governed by a variety of circumstances. Nor will it be in my power to appoint any person to command it, the situation of our affairs here, requiring the presence of every officer of the least merit for the government of this army.

In respect to your request to have a list transmitted of such officers as have served to good acceptance, I am happy that I had anticipated your views, and those of your honourable Assembly in this instance, before the receipt of your favour. I wrote you fully on the subject in a letter I had the honour of addressing you on the 12th, sending you a list of such officers as were particularly recommended for the two battalions you are to raise, to which I beg leave to refer you, as it contains my sentiments at large.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Gouverneur Cooke, Rhode-Island.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL BAYLEY.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 17, 1776.

SIR: I have yours of the 15th instant by Mr. Wallace, with an account of the expense incurred in cutting a road from Coos to St. John's, the amount £982 16s. 5½d., lawful money. There are some few errors in casting out the different articles, but they may be easily rectified when settlement is made.

I have it not in my power to make objections to any part of the account, as I cannot but suppose that it is all just, and what has really been paid or agreed to be paid; but proper vouchers should accompany all publick accounts, and these Mr. Wallace tells me you can furnish. The most material is, a muster roll of the men employed, showing the time of their engagements for the service and that of their discharge. It is probable no receipt may have been taken for some of the articles; but you will please to furnish them for as many as you are able. I beg I may be clearly understood: I do not call for vouchers because I suspect you charging more than is justly due, but because it is necessary that they should accompany all publick accounts that pass through my hands. When this is done, the accounts shall be adjusted and paid by, sir, yours, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Jacob Bayley, New-Hampshire Militia, at Fishkill.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I must take the liberty of answering your two favours to Mr. Harrison and myself, otherwise I should continue him in a correspondence which he only took up as a volunteer. In truth he has his hands full enough of other matters.

I have not time to describe the situation of our army perfectly to you, but you may depend that every step is taken to prevent the enemy from out-flanking us, and at the same time to secure our retreat in case of need. The enemy has made no move from Frog's Point. We may say the 17th October is come and nearly past without the predicted blow. The winds have not been favourable to pass Hell-Gate, where several of their transports are now laying; perhaps that may be the reason. I don't know how it is, but I believe their design to circumvent us this time, will prove as abortive as the former ones. If we can but foil General Howe again, I think we knock him up for the campaign.

You ask if General Lee is in health, and if our people feel bold? I answer both in the affirmative. His appearance among us has not contributed a little to the latter. We are sinking the ships as fast as possible; two hundred men are daily employed, but they take an immense quantity of stone for the purpose.

The General is highly pleased with the resolutions of your Congress, which you were kind enough to transmit. He wishes they may be carried thoroughly into execution. Your Commissary should consult Mr. Trumbull, the Commissary-General, before they drive down any stock, lest they should bring too many upon his hands at a time. What grain, straw, or hay they may provide, falls into the Quarter-master-General's department, (General Mifflin.) with whom they should endeavour to coöperate.

The General has had no great experience of the abilities of Mons. Imbert, the French Engineer, who goes up with your express; but he thinks it would be of service to you, if Mr. Mechin could spare time to step over and point out to Mons. Imbert the kind of work that will be most advantageous and soonest constructed, so as to answer the desired purpose. I mention this because Imbert, in some works he began here, went upon too large a scale, and with more regularity than is necessary in this rough country. Perhaps he wanted to show his skill, but he would have been too tedious. You must endeavour to procure him an interpreter, otherwise he will be much at a loss to direct the working parties.

As Mr. Mechin belongs to the command at Fort Montgomery, the General did not choose to give a positive order to withdraw him from thence; he only meant then and means now that he should come over if he can be spared. General Mercer went upon Staten-Island the night before last with two thousand men, but we have not yet heard the issue of his expedition.

I am, dear sir, most respectfully yours,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq., of the Committee of Correspondence, Fishkill.

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Camp Harlem, October 17, 1776.

I was this moment honoured with your favour on the subject of the rank, roll and officers for the regiments to be retained in the Continental service of those raised in this State. I have made some preparation for it, and shall devote this evening to the subject. You mention enclosed resolves, but they did not accompany your letter. Nothing material has happened here since the skirmish of the 16th ultimo. The enemy appear very shy. Our advanced sentries and theirs are within three hundred yards of each other in Harlem Lane. The works they have thrown up are evidently calculated for defence. I should have cheerfully complied with the request of the Convention through Mr. McKesson, to give them intelligence, but my time was then wholly engrossed in assisting to arrange and settle the army, and since, I am under orders with my brigade to support the advanced picket in case of alarm, which I hope will be a sufficient apology.

Your very humble servant,

ALEXANDER MCDUGALL.

GENERAL GREENE TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Constitution, October 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: William Bradford, Adjutant of Colonel Hitchcock's regiment, after the enemy landed on Long-Island, took a horse belonging to one Jacob Wicoff, a person that had joined the British forces. The Adjutant run a very great risk in fetching the horse off, and he must inevitably have fallen into the enemy's hands if the Adjutant had not made the attempt. But as property belonging to Tories is not, nor ought not to be, the reward of those that take it into possession, only under certain limitations, I think it my duty to acquaint you that I have the horse in my possession, and shall be delivered to your order, either to the Adjutant as a reward for his bravery, or to be sold for the benefit of the State, as you may think proper. If the horse is to be sold, I should be glad of an opportunity to purchase him, as I am in want of a horse, mine being worn out in the service.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your obedient servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

DIVISION ORDERS.

 Capt. Bryant, one three-pounder.
 Lieut. Jackson, one six-pounder.

COLONEL SAMUEL H. DRAKE TO JOHN M'KESSON.

King's Bridge, October 17, 1776.

SIR: Undoubtedly you have the account of the movements of our unnatural enemy, and in all likelihood in a few days we shall be called to action, if ever. And as a number of my officers are without commissions, and are uneasy if it should happen that they fall into the hand of the enemy, (which God forbid,) for fear they may receive treatment not due to their rank, therefore I beg the favour of you to petition the Convention to make out commissions to the following gentlemen:

Joshua Rogers, Captain, } Suffolk County.
 Benjamin King, Second Lieutenant, }
 Seth Marvin, Captain, Orange County.
 Sybert Acker, Lieutenant, First, }
 Ephraim Lockwood, Lieut., 2d, } Westchester County.
 David Dutcher, Lieut., 2d, }
 Robert Crawford, Lieut., 2d, }
 Abraham Handford, First Lieutenant, Albany County.
 Ebenezer Phillips, Second Lieutenant, Suffolk County.

Should be glad they may be sent forward to General Scott, as soon as may be, &c.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

SAM. H. DRAKE, Colonel.

To Mr. John McKesson.

COLONEL SMALLWOOD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philips's Heights, October, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have received but two letters from you, of the 11th of September and the 2d October, in the latter of which you express some surprise of never having received a letter from me since I left Maryland, which is just, and should I have incurred your censure, it is nothing less than I have expected, and let me assure you it was with great reluctance I subjected myself to it, but I am yet conscious, could you have viewed the severe and perplexed duty I have had, and our corps in general been exposed to, you would at least have pitied them, and excused me for this neglect.

In answer to yours wherein you require a particular return of the arms, accoutrements, camp equipage, and utensils, &c., of the regular soldiers immediately under my command, must beg leave to refer you to a letter wrote to the Convention on the 12th, in answer to theirs of the 4th of this instant, wherein you'll find a short detail of occurrences from our march to Long-Island to the 12th, when I was obliged to conclude rather abruptly, having received orders to march immediately for Philips's Heights, four miles above King's Bridge, the enemy having landed a body of men on Frog's Neck, adjacent to these Heights; also a copy of a return made out in Philadelphia, to be rendered the Congress, of these articles appertaining to the battalion and Captain Veazey's company, being all the troops I marched from Maryland; which hope you'll find satisfactory. Also a list of the killed and missing on Long-Island, and a general weekly return as rendered General Washington, which will show such men present as are effective, and such as are sick, among which are included ten wounded.

A general return of killed and missing was rendered General Washington the next morning after the action on Long-Island, and as the drafts of their pay are suspended till exchanged, have been directed to discontinue the entry upon the weekly return, for we can't ascertain, nor will the enemy indulge us with a list of such as were taken prisoners, without which we can't ascertain who have been killed. Perhaps you may require the names inserted in the returns, agreeable to the returns of our muster-rolls at Annapolis. Your letters do not urge this mode, but should it be required, it shall be complied with.

I ordered the independent Captains on the 11th instant, upon the receipt of the President of Convention's letter, to hand in their returns of arms, accoutrements, camp equipage, and utensils. Till then I thought this had been done upon their leaving Philadelphia, where I imagined they had supplied their men with sundry necessities, and would of course make the natural returns, as their commands till their arrival there were distinct and unlimited by any other control than that of Convention or Council; however, I found this had not been done, and I now find from the train they kept their affairs in, it will be done with difficulty, and perhaps be subject to loss, for I am apprehensive many things may have been lost upon their march from Philadelphia, and since which, as they were not accustomed to inspect, and make weekly returns of arms, accoutrements, clothing, camp furniture and utensils, &c. Some of these at this time they may not be able to account for. Captain Bracco complains he can't obtain a roll of, nor any accounts relative to his company, and that General Bell has taken a flier out of his company, Burrel by name, and keeps him in the Flying-Camp. I have wrote General Bell concerning this boy, and his story is lame, but from what I can collect, he says the Council of Safety allowed him to take the boy out of, and upon the return of the Flying-Camp he will return him to, the company. Now if he belongs to, he certainly ought to be in, the company, as it has no other flier; and if he does not, the company can have no business with him after the Flying-Camp is discharged. The Council will please signify whether they gave such indulgence, and whether the boy was returned in the muster-roll of the company, and this matter shall soon be set right between the General and the Captain. I wish their accounts may be as easily adjusted.

There are many other charges exclusive of what articles are and will be enumerated in the returns, which the Continent is charged with, particularly medicine, necessities supplied the troops, arms repaired, &c., for often in our march and since the Commissaries could not supply, nor would the publick armourers work. At all events, soldiers must be fed, and have their arms repaired, or else it can't be expected they will fight. An account of which can't at this time be rendered, for the retreating and flying disposition which has so much prevailed in our army latterly, made it not safe to send any books, papers, &c., to Philadelphia, lest they should be lost; but be assured a true and particular account shall be rendered. Doubt not the Province shall not be injured.

This precaution was necessary, for hitherto we have been generally drawn from our station and baggage, to cover the retreat and defend the baggage of others, which has subjected us to much loss upon the retreat, or rather flight, from New-York. I have scarce an officer, myself included, or soldier who did not lose more or less of their baggage, pillaged by the runaways; indeed, I believe many of them never had other views than flight and plunder, both which they are extremely dexterous at. General Washington was so kind after he left the common where we were posted to stop wagons himself, and made one of his Aid-de-Camps attend the sending of our baggage, but as I had left but four soldiers as a camp-guard, being desirous the regiment upon this occasion should be as full as possible, these could not guard the wagons, and thus we lost part of our baggage. Have since stripped from these poltroons several of our soldiers' coats, and had them severely scourged. Have purchased from the Continental store clothes for such of the independent companies as their Captains inform me have received none before, and I think upon good terms, accounts of which shall be transmitted. I think Thomas's company were paid for finding themselves, or at least he proposed this one day when I was present at the Council. You'll inform how this matter is, and whether you supplied him with money to purchase clothes at Philadelphia, his company being as bare as those who never had. I have despatched Captain Hindman to Philadelphia after his company's clothes, which he tells me are ready made there, by whom Thomas has sent for his. I have sent near nine hundred pounds by Hindman to purchase such deficiency as the Continental store could not furnish, particularly shoes and stockings.

I am about to draw pay for the troops that first marched with me, from the 6th of July, the time they were ordered to march, which will replace in my hands the half month's pay advanced by Council, and half a month's pay advanced at Elizabethtown, out of the money advanced me by Council and our deputies at Congress. I also paid Captain Veazey's company out of the above sums a month's pay, they having had no advance from the Council upon their marching. I shall credit the Province with this sum, having charged it before the pay advanced by me to the soldiers, &c., and credited it with the sums received from the Council and Deputies.

We have received no pay since in this service but seven hundred and fifty pounds paid the men when marched to Long-Island, and I got an advance from the General of seven hundred and fifty pounds more, in part of the sum sent by Mr. Hindman. There is now due us down to the 31st August, which is as late as they will pay us, to near three thousand pounds, inclusive of the Independents' pay. Should the Council not approve of my drawing and retaining in my hands that part of this sum that will be due to the Province, they will please signify, and it shall be lodged to their order, my motive in drawing it being only to provide for contingencies, money not being to be drawn here when most wanted, for it has been the policy here to retain two or three months' of the Eastern troops' pay to prevent desertion and retain them longer in service, by which better men often suffer and languish for their pay.

There are several vacancies now to fill up, and having no time to make out a list, must beg leave to defer it till I have more leisure. Lieutenant Ford, behaving well, has acted under brevet as Captain of Light Infantry, which is in rotation agreeable to his seniority.

We want medicine much; none can be had here. Our sick have and are now suffering extremely. The number you'll observe from the list is very considerable, owing in a great measure to the bad provision made for and care taken of them, the men being often moved, and have been exposed to lie on the cold ground ever since they came here; often lying without their tents for several nights, as is now the case, having been five nights and days without them, being ever since the enemy landed up here.

The inconvenience attending frequent removals of troops when there are not a regular supply of wagons for that purpose, which is much wanting here, no person can conceive who has not experienced it; besides when their tents and baggage can't attend them, they must be injured much by lying in the open air at this season, and in this place where heavy dews prevail so much, and I may justly say our corps have had a greater proportion of this duty than any in this army, for we have generally acted in brigade under northern Brigadier-Generals, who have seldom failed to favour their own and put the labouring oar on our regiment; but it has perhaps made us the better soldiers.

Our Commander-in-Chief is an excellent man, and it would be happy for the United States if there was as much propriety in the appointments in every department below him. It is not owing to any want of precaution in him that discipline is not exacted with more rigour; much must depend respecting this, on the superiour officers next under him in command, and here there seems to be a total ignorance of and inattention to this system, so necessary to render an army formidable.

Our next greatest suffering proceeds from the great neglect of the sick; and his orders relative to this department are most salutary, were they to be duly attended to; but here, too, there is not only a shameful but even an inhuman neglect daily exhibited. The Directors of the General Hospitals supply and provide for the sick, who are extremely remiss and inattentive to the well-being and comfort of these unhappy men; out of this train they cannot be taken. I have withdrawn all mine long ago, and had them placed in a comfortable house in the country, and supplied with only the common rations; even this is preferable to the fare of a General Hospital. Two of these Regimental Hospitals, after I have had them put in order, one has been taken away by the Directors for a General Hospital, and my people turned out of doors, and the other would have been taken in the same manner, had I not have applied to General Washington, who told me to keep it. The misfortune is that every supply to the Regimental Hospital of necessities suitable for the sick, must come from an order from these Directors, and is very seldom obtained. I have more than once applied that my Quartermaster might furnish and make a charge for what was supplied, by which means I could have rendered the situation of the sick much more comfortable, at a less expense, but could not be allowed. I wish this could be obtained. I foresee the evils arising from the shameful neglect in this department. One good-seasoned and well-trained soldier, recovered to health, is worth a dozen new recruits, and is often easier recovered than to get a recruit, exclusive of which this neglect is very discouraging to the soldiery, and must injure the service upon the new enlistments, after the troops go into winter quarters.

If the Convention and Council should judge it consistent with the interests of the Province and the good of the service, I could wish the regular troops might return home to refresh themselves in good winter quarters, and recruit the complement wanting; this I don't urge altogether through inclination, (though I believe nothing would be more desirable to both officers and men, who would more readily than ever return in the spring,) but should it be deemed necessary, could point out the expediency of their return, upon a principle that it would contribute much to the benefit of the service, so far as their small force could carry weight.

Our army in general have been well supplied with good provisions, &c.; indeed, with more than a sufficiency. Vegetables and some other small necessities could not be procured; but in general, there has not been the least cause of complaint on this head.

You mention my having the command of the Flying-Camp, which I have not, although we frequently act together, and have encamped close by each other for better than a month.

I thank the Convention for the resolve in my favour; their intention was good, though it has not had the desired effect, owing to an impropriety in their mode of appointment; though was I to insist, General Washington has said I ought and should have the command, though it might raise some difficulties here perhaps in other commands. Mr. Bell, without doubt, is a brave and an honest man; but I leave you and the Convention to judge whether, with propriety, he can expect he will do himself and his country any honour in the character of a General. He is considered here as the second edition of the Eastern Generals, and the distinguishing gentlemen here who now begin to entertain more favourable sentiments of our State, are not a little surprised at the impropriety of this appointment; but this will be done, even though I suffer an indignity where it has not been intended.

General Lee has just arrived, and is appointed to the command of one of the divisions who are to oppose the enemy above King's Bridge. The enemy have landed their chief force on Frog's Neck, and are making every disposition to march across from the Sound to their ships in the North River, thereby to cut off our communication by land with Albany and the New-England Governments, and to coop in and starve us; for I am apprehensive it will be in their power by their ships, at any time to cut off our retreat into Jerseys, both which should they effect, it would just pin up the casket. The situation of the country favours our troops, being very uneven and rocky, interspersed with some few bushes, and abounding in stone walls. Were our officers good, and our men well trained, it would be impossible to effect their purpose, for we have now on this side the bridge thirteen brigades, which do not exceed thirteen thousand men, (by this you may see how far short the Governments are of furnishing their quotas; none, I believe, have completed but Maryland;) but with this force, could our officers be brought to a proper sense of their duty and dignity, and the weight of the army, the enemy might be checked in their course; for this you may rely on, however their parade may indicate the contrary, yet it is a fact, they are as much afraid and cautious of us, as we can be, any of us, of them; their officers alone give the superiority; and in this instance, I have greater hopes of our officers and men fighting than ever, for there is no hopes of running away left. To fight or starve and surrender at discretion, has almost become the word, which event might have proved favourable to the common interest, had they reduced us to this dilemma before; at least it would have prevented much disgrace, and brought our enemy to think of fighting.

Our Northern Generals have introduced a new system for conducting this war, which subverts every principle in the art of war adopted by other States; for instead of instructing their troops in the principles of military discipline, preparing and encouraging to meet their enemies in the fields and woods, they train them to run away, and to make them believe they never can be safe unless under cover of an intrenchment, which they would rather extend from the north to the south pole than risk an engagement. Discipline here is totally neglected, and yet after all it is the only bulwark in war. Had our troops been trained better, and worried less with the pick-axe and spade, by this time our army would have been in a condition to have sought for their enemies in turn. I am pretty sure this cannot be the case soon under our present system.

The enemy's army has been said to amount to twenty-five thousand effective men, but I don't believe it exceeds seventeen thousand. Ours on this side the North River amount to about seventeen thousand effective, but great numbers of the sick are recovering very fast.

Agreeable to your orders, directed Captain Hindman to get me a stamp made in Philadelphia, and the arms shall be stamped, &c.

Being often interrupted and hurried, you'll excuse this scrawl, and believe that I remain, with sincerity and real regard, gentlemen, your very obedient and humble servant,
W. SMALLWOOD.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

PETITION OF WILLIAM M'NEALL.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York, in Congress convened:

The Petition of WILLIAM McNEALL, of the County of DUTCHESS, Trader, humbly sheweth:

That about twelve months ago he was possessed of one hundred and thirty-three bushels of salt, which he put in the store of Captain Bogardus, situate near the river. That finding the inhabitants of this County were greatly in want of this necessary article, he condescended to sell the same to them at the rate of four shillings and sixpence a bushel, excepting thirty bushels which he reserved for the salting of divers quantities of beef and pork which he was to receive of several persons who were indebted to him in divers sums of money, and had no other way of paying him the same. That your petitioner, in order to keep the salt for the purpose aforesaid, gave not long since ten shillings a bushel for a quantity of salt to repack some barrels of pork which he sold for the use of the Continental army. That notwithstanding which Colonel Dirck Brinckerhoff, of this County, induced as your petitioner supposes by pecuniary views, and in hopes to take advantage of the present suspension of the laws of this State, did, about three weeks ago, in the absence of Captain Bogardus, the owner of the store, and without my knowledge or approbation, take out of the said store the said thirty bushels of salt, and appropriate the same to his own use and private emolument, whereby your petitioner is greatly injured and prevented from receiving in payment for the money owing to him the said quantities of beef and pork which he designed for the use of the Continental army, and in all probability will by that means forever lose the same. That your petitioner humbly conceives that acts of this kind greatly injure the happiness of society, and if permitted, will, beyond doubt, reduce us almost to a state of nature, and drive us to the disagreeable alternative of repelling force by force, or of tamely submitting to the lawless invader. That your petitioner is well assured that an act thus vicious in its nature will never, in the opinion of this honourable Convention, appear sanctified by the wealth or elevation of the aggressor, but that ample justice will be administered without respect to persons. Induced therefore by this consideration, your petitioner humbly prays that this honourable Convention would be pleased to order the said Dirck Brinckerhoff to appear before you at some speedy day to be appointed for that purpose, to assign his reasons, if any he hath, for such his unprecedented conduct, and if not satisfactory to this honourable Convention, that your petitioner may have restitution of the salt aforesaid and damages for the injury done to him. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

WILL. McNEALL.

Dutchess County, October 17, 1776.

HENRY WISNER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Peekskill, October 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: When I left you last evening, I went to Van Wikes, and finding that Colonel Cortlandt was gone, and the night near at hand, I went back to my lodging, and set off early this morning, depending that Colonel Cortlandt had orders to stop the troops, and some directions what to do with them when here. I arrived here about eleven o'clock, found the Colonel at his farm, without so much as the resolve of Convention, or orders to stop the troops. He expected Mr. Duer to have brought them with him, and therefore did not attend to them so much as he would otherwise have done. It seems, however, that the troops are mainly gone forward, but for what purpose I don't know; if they are intended for quelling the Tories, they are greatly wanted here. Many were from Croton river are gone on board the men-of-war. Colonel Cortlandt knows of twelve. They have taken many cattle on board. Mr. Gilbert Cortlandt went to the commanding officer at Tarrytown, who told him that he would have sent men to guard the shores, but could not do it, as he had no orders. The shores are without guards, from Tarrytown to this place. If part of the troops are to be sent back, I believe they had best be sent by water, as the men are much fatigued.

I beg you to send the resolves of Congress as to our appointment, and the Commissaries to provide for the troops. A little to the northward of this place is a very narrow pass, with a very high hill by the side, from which stones might be thrown to great disadvantage, if the enemy appear there.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of Convention.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I do myself the honour to enclose you an account of the articles I have purchased for the use of your family. You will observe that I have purchased five pewter dishes and one dozen soup plates. Few stone dishes were to be had, and at a rate higher now than pewter. No soup plates were to be had, of any kind, except those I have purchased. The pudding dishes will answer many purposes. I hope, however, to see them appropriated to the purposes they were intended when made.

These articles will be put up in a box, directed for you, and delivered to Mr. Avery, with directions to forward them with all possible despatch. I have directed Mr. Avery to send up the wine with all convenient despatch to you: I am informed it is not so good as I could wish you to drink. However, it is ten times better than none. Not an ounce of tea is to be procured.

This morning I was honoured with a letter from my General, enclosing General Arnold's and your letters, announcing the almost total destruction of our fleet; but among the frowns of Providence we have the blessing of General Arnold's safe return. I feared much for him. I hope, however, he will still humble the pride and arrogance of haughty Britons, and convince them that one defeat does not dispirit Americans.

I am, with respects to Generals St. Clair and Arnold, and the gentlemen of your good family, yours very sincerely,
RICH'D VARICK.

To the Hon. General Gates.

P. S. We have no news from our southern camp. It is said a cannonading was heard down Hudson's river two days since.

R. V.

I shall prepare muster rolls, if the enemy do not disturb you soon. I shall send them up, and expect to be sent there as soon as my General returns.

R. V.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 17, 1776

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 15th I received last night. I have ordered all the Militia from below, and have sent an express to hasten Colonel Dayton.

If the communication should be cut off by the way of Lake George, it will be absolutely necessary to have a number of batteaus at Skenesborough, not only to transport men, but flour and even cattle. You will therefore send batteaus to that place, if there is not a sufficient number already there. I should be informed whether it is probable any cattle may still go by land. Cannot what few vessels you have left be sent to Skenesborough to take in provisions there, and serve as a convoy to the batteaus? Pray inform me very particularly.

Spades cannot be procured any where in the country.

God bless you, my dear General, and believe me most sincerely, yours, &c., &c.,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, October 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I arrived at this place last Monday evening. After a long and tedious sickness am recovered, and thought proper to inform the General that when I came to Fort Ann I found a letter directed to Colonel Yates, wherein was orders from General Schuyler that I should take command at that post. When I came to this place found that business was dull, and would be glad of your directions in the matter. The orders in the letter was that I should have a fort built around the barracks and store, and see that the roads was mended, which are as yet in a very poor condition.

My seeing this fort nothing near finished, have employed the men I had to finish the fort, and expect to finish it to-morrow.

I have sent you two hundred and eighty boards down. I have also sent boats to Cheshire's for more, which I expect back to-day, and will send you more to-morrow; and also send you by the same boat the crank of a saw-mill, and all the intrenching tools that can be spared from this place. I keep but few to finish this fort. Spades there is none at this place. I shall send to Cheshire's for all there is there, and forward them as fast as possible. I wrote to the General the 15th instant, and have as yet no answer, which makes me think the letter miscarried.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,

CORN'S WYNKOOP.

To Major-General Gates.

JOHN B. SCOTT TO GENERAL GATES.

Mount Independence, October 17, 1776.

SIR: Presuming upon that justice and humanity that so strongly mark your Honour's character, I have taken the liberty to address you upon my unhappy situation.

A private quarrel happening between Colonel Maxwell and myself, which I expected would have terminated in another manner, I was arrested by him and have continued under arrest eleven days without any trial. As the money I drew upon the pay roll which I am charged with having falsely presented, has been again repaid into the hands of the Paymaster, for which I have a receipt upon account of the publick, except a small part paid the men, which has nothing to do with the dispute—I also have six or seven hundred dollars of my own private property in the hands of the publick,—this being the case, it would be impossible it should receive any injury if your Honour would be pleased to order me discharged from my arrest, pursuant to the articles of war, as it does not appear possible to settle it in the present situation of the army; and if ever hereafter upon settlement of the account I should appear any ways culpable, I shall with the greatest cheerfulness submit to any punishment your Honour shall think proper.

Confinement is at any time disagreeable, but now more particularly so, when our country so loudly calls upon every individual to appear with arms in their hands for her defence. Conscious of my own innocence, it stings me to the soul when I reflect that I possibly by this means may be deprived of the only opportunity that ever may occur during the course of my whole life to render a service to my bleeding country. Your Honour's compliance will eternally be remembered with the greatest gratitude.

I am, sir, with much respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN B. SCOTT.

To Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-Haven, October 17, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of the 11th instant have duly received; and as the formation of the new army is a matter that demands our earliest attention and utmost despatch, am in hopes by this time you are able to furnish me with a list of officers as requested in my last.

And as I find there is a great complaint for want of Surgeons and medicines in the army at New-York, lest that should be the case likewise in the Northern army, must beg leave to call your attention thereto, that timely care be taken that a sufficient number and supply may not be wanting in that department. You'll therefore please to give me notice by the return of this post of whatever is needful and expedient, in order that we may give all the timely assistance in our power.

I am, with esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

New-Haven, October 17, 1776

SIR: Have to acknowledge the receipt of your favour by Mr. Brown, enclosing General Arnold's account of the engagement on the lake. The bearer thereof gives a verbal account of a subsequent rencounter there, which has turned out more favourable than the first. We are anxious to know the event.

Your hurry, I suppose, has prevented your attention to the nomination and designation of the officers for the new army; must therefore beg leave again to remind you of it, that it may be forwarded with all that despatch the necessity and importance of the case requires.

Am fearful you will find a want of Surgeons and medicines especially, if any considerable action should come on. Have wrote to General Schuyler on that subject. Please to let me know by the return of this post the situation you are in, and whatever is needful in our power to supply, that we may forward the same.

Am, with esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

PHINEAS FANNING'S PAROLE.

I promise, on my word of honour, not in any wise to forward or assist the subjects or allies of the King of Great Britain, in their operations against any of the United States of America during the present war. I also further promise that I will return to my usual place of abode in Suffolk County, and remain in said County until required by the Convention of the State of New-York or General Washington, when I promise to appear before them in person.

Given under my hand, at Guilford, this 17th day of October, 1776.

PHINEAS FANNING.

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN MEETING.

At a town meeting of the Town of Providence, legally warned and assembled on the 17th day of October, A. D. 1776, Mr. Charles Keene, Moderator.

Whereas much uneasiness hath arisen on account of the purchase of a quantity of Butter for the use of the inhabitants of Nantucket, occasioned by a suspicion that the same might be appropriated for the use of the enemies of the United States of America; and as Mr. Samuel Starbuck, the purchaser, has appeared before this meeting, and there being no evidence that the same was designed for our enemies, and it being understood by this meeting that the exportation of any kind of Provisions to Nantucket is contrary to law, unless under regulations ordered by the General Assembly of this State in October last, and Mr. Starbuck, for removing this uneasiness, is willing that said Butter should be stored until the General Assembly shall meet and make order respecting the exportation of Provisions to Nantucket; it is therefore Voted, That Captain John Updike, James Black, and Arthur Finn, Esqrs., be a committee immediately to store the same in some suitable place until the Assembly shall meet, excepting two firkins of Butter which Mr. Starbuck wants for his own use. And the Deputies of this town are requested to lay this matter before the General Assembly for their direction herein, this town highly disapproving of the exportation of any Provisions to Nantucket until the sentiments of the General Assembly are known.

CAPTAIN JONES TO ROBERT MORRIS.

Providence Sloop-of-War, at Newport, Rhode-Island, }
October 17, 1776. }

HONOURED SIR: I wrote to you at sea 4th ultimo, by the brigantine Sea-Nymph, my second prize. I have taken sixteen sail, manned and sent in eight prizes, and sunk, burned, or destroyed the rest. The list of prizes is as follows:

Manned and sent in.

1. The brigantine Britannia, a whaler.
2. The brigantine Sea-Nymph, West-Indiaman.
3. The brigantine Favourite, do.
4. The ship Alexander, Jersey, Newfoundlandman.
5. The brigantine Success, do.
6. The brigantine Kingston Packet, Jamaica.
7. The brigantine Defiance, Jersey, do.
8. The sloop Portland, whaler.

Burnt or destroyed.

1. The ship Adventure, of Jersey.
2. The brigantine Friendship, Jersey.
3. The schooner John, London.
4. The schooner Betsey, Jersey.
5. The schooner Betsey, Halifax.
6. The schooner Sea-Flower, Canso.
7. The schooner Ebenezer, do.
8. The schooner Hope, do.

I have written from time to time to the Marine Board, and furnished them with particular accounts of all my proceedings, and I now send copies of my former letters. I arrived here 7th current, and I would not have lost a day without writing to you and to the Board, had not the Commodore proposed to me to take command of an expedition, with the Alfred, Providence, and Hamden, to destroy the fishery of Newfoundland, but principally to relieve an hundred of our fellow-citizens, who are detained as prisoners and slaves in the coal-pits of Cape Breton. All my humanity was awakened and called up to action by this laudable proposal, and I have been successfully employed in refitting and getting the Providence in readiness, but am under the greatest apprehension that the expedition will fall to nothing, as the Alfred is greatly short of men. I found her with only about thirty men, and we have with much ado, enlisted thirty more; but it seems the privateers entice them away as fast as they receive their monthly pay.

It is to the last degree distressing to contemplate the state and establishment of our navy. The common class of mankind are actuated by no nobler principle than that of self-interest; this, and this only, determines all adventurers in privateers, the owners as well as those they employ. And while this is the case, unless the private enrollment of individuals in our navy is made superiour to that in privateers, it never can become respectable, it never will become formidable; and without a respectable navy, alas America! In the present critical situation of affairs, human wisdom can suggest no more than one infallible expedient: inlist the seamen during pleasure, and give them all the prizes. What is the paltry emolument of two-thirds of prizes to the finances of this vast Continent? If such a poor resource is essential to its independency, in sober sadness we are involved in a woful predicament, and our ruin is fast approaching. The situation of America is new in the annals of mankind;

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

her affairs cry haste, and speed must answer them. Trifles, therefore, ought to be wholly disregarded, as being, in the old vulgar proverb, "penny wise and pound foolish." If our enemies, with the best-established and most formidable navy in the universe, have found it expedient to assign all prizes to the captors, how much more is such policy essential to our infant fleet. But I need use no arguments to convince you of the necessity of making the emoluments of our navy equal, if not superiour, to theirs. We have had proof that a navy may be officered almost on any terms; but we are not so sure the officers are equal to their commissions; nor will the Congress ever obtain such certainty, until they in their wisdom see proper to appoint a Board of Admiralty competent to determine impartially the respective merits and abilities of their officers, and to superintend, regulate, and point out all the motions and operations of the navy

Governour Hopkins tells me, he apprehends I am appointed to the Andrew Doria. She is a good cruiser, and would, in my judgment, answer much better were she mounted with twelve six-pounders, than as she is at present with fourteen fours.

An expedition of importance may be effected this winter on the coast of Africa with part of the original fleet; either the Alfred or Columbus, with the Andrew Doria and Providence, would, I am persuaded, carry all before them, and give a blow to the English African trade, which would not soon be recovered, by not leaving them a mast standing on that coast. This expedition would be attended with no great expense; besides, the ships and vessels mentioned are unfit for service on a winter coast, which is not the case with the new frigates. The small squadron for this service ought to sail early, that the prizes may reach our ports in March or April.

If I do not succeed in manning the Alfred, so as to proceed to the eastward in course of this week, the season will be lost; the coal fleet will be gone to Halifax, and the fishermen to Europe. I will not, however, remain inactive, but proceed to cruise in the sloop near Sandy-Hook. Three of my prizes are arrived here, and one or two more to the eastward.

I am, &c.

Alfred, October 30, 1776.

I did not conclude my letter till I was enabled to give you a satisfactory account of the present expedition. I took command here the 22d, and finding that we could not man the ship and two vessels without wasting too much time, I concluded to leave the Providence, and proceed with the Alfred and Hamden. I took the men out of the Providence and her prizes, which made up my muster roll here to one hundred and forty or upwards. When I was ready to proceed on the 27th, the Hamden was run upon a sunken ledge, which knocked off her false keel, and she hath since continued to make so much water, that we concluded her unfit for sea, and therefore have shifted her men into the Providence. I am once more in readiness to take my leave of Rhode-Island to-morrow morning. I am, however, duly sensible that the expedition cannot but fall greatly short of what it might have effected had I been enabled to proceed a fortnight sooner. I hope the Andrew Doria will be included in the next expedition wherein I am concerned.

If Mr. Hewes is in Philadelphia, I must thank you to make my apology for not writing; and if you please, show him this and my former letter.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem and respect, sir, your very obliged, and very obedient, humble servant,
JOHN PAUL JONES.

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN MEETING.

At a town meeting of the town of Providence, legally warned and assembled, on the 17th day of October, A. D. 1776:

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO MESHECH WEARE.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, Council Chamber, }
Watertown, October 17, 1776. }

SIR: Some time since your State were informed that this Government had passed an act entitled "an act to prohibit the exportation of lumber for a limited time," that your General Assembly might pass a similar act if they thought proper. I am now directed to inform your Honour that the Great and General Court of this State, considering the great and manifest advantages that accrued, or might accrue to the United States of America from the act aforesaid do now cease and subside, and considering, also, that many inconveniences do arise from the operation of said act, have thought fit to repeal the same. It was thought necessary to give you notice of this measure immediately, that, in case your State should have passed an act prohibiting the exportation of lumber, they might repeal the same likewise, if they judged proper.

In the name and behalf of the Council, I am, with respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

To Meshech Weare, Esq., President of the Council in the State of New-Hampshire.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

SIR: A number of French gentlemen, in the character of military officers, have lately arrived here from Cape Francois. They are come to offer their services to the United States, and for that purpose applied to the Council of this State, with whom, by a Committee, they have had an interview; but they were referred to your Excellency.

Captain Littlefield, the master of the vessel in which they came hither, says that the French Governour at the Cape sent for him, and told him they were gentlemen of good character, whose honour might be relied on, and that the reason why he did not give to them letters recommending them to the service of the States, was because it would have been inconsistent with the peace subsisting between France and England, but desired him to let their character be known as he had given it.

I expect they will furnish me with a memorandum of their names, and what commissions they hold, or have held, in the service of France, in which case a copy of it will be enclosed.

I have the honour to be, in the name of the Council, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

They purpose that one or two of their number (ten in the whole) should proceed to New-York or Philadelphia; and it is in consequence of their desire that this letter waits upon you, as does one of a similar tenour upon the President of the American Congress.

JAMES BOWDOIN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Boston, October 17, 1776.

SIR: A number of French gentlemen, in the character of military officers, have lately arrived here from Cape François. They are come to offer their service to the United States, and for that purpose applied to the Council of this State, with whom, by a Committee, they have had an interview; but they were referred to his Excellency General Washington, who possibly may refer them to the honourable Congress.

Captain Littlefield, the master of the vessel in which they came hither, says that the French Governour at the Cape sent for him, and told him they were gentlemen of good character, whose honour might be relied on, and that the reason why he did not give them letters recommending them to the service of the States, was because it would have been inconsistent with the peace subsisting between France and England, but desired him to let their character be known as he had given it. I expect they will furnish me with a memorandum of their names, and what commissions they hold, or have held, in the service of France, in which case a copy of it will be enclosed. They purpose that one or two of their number (ten or twelve in the whole) should proceed to New-York and Philadelphia; and it is in consequence of their desire, that this letter waits upon you.

In the name of the Council I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To the Hon. President of Congress.

Enclosed is the memorandum above referred to.

PETITION FROM FANEUIL AND OTHERS TO THE ASSEMBLY OF MASSACHUSETTS-BAY, AND A RESOLVE PASSED BY THE SAID ASSEMBLY.

[Read 26th December, 1776: To be referred to Gen. Washington.]

To the Honourable Members of the Council and Assembly of MASSACHUSETTS-BAY:

GENTLEMEN: The very polite manner in which you have received our first solicitations to serve in the United States of America, and the hopes that we have of being shortly put into such a situation as to prove to you the great solicitude we have of marching against our common enemy, hath discovered to us the most likely means of attaining so desirable an end. We hope that you will regard our proposal as tending to the publick good, and that you would allow us to show you the manner in which French gentlemen of birth and education acquit themselves of their engagements.

The family of the deceased Peter Faneuil is sufficiently known at Boston for the services he has rendered to the town. One of the descendants of the family of the said deceased, employed in the service of France, and expert in the military art, comes to the bosom of his family to offer his services. Many of his friends, animated with the desire of glory, have attached themselves to his fortune. We have already presented our intentions to the respectable members of the Council of this State. They have honoured us with their protection, in giving us letters to the Congress, with which we have deputed two of our company. We are at present unacquainted in what manner the honourable Congress have received our proposals. Since that time we have learned that a great number of Canadians have fled from the inhumanity that the British army exercises over them; they are scattered about in the different parts of the Continent, and wait only for the moment of being formed into a regiment commanded by French officers. We have a sufficient proof of their good disposition for the service by many who are now at Boston. We have presented them to General Ward, and they have certified to him what we here advance. How advantageous and useful will it be for the United States, if we being provided with our commissions, could with our diligence and care put these brave people in a state to revenge themselves, and to aid you in driving from the States, tyrants more avidious of the riches of your States than of the glory we seek to acquire!

Thus, gentlemen, to give more solidity to our request, we have thought necessary to present to you the plan of the formation of a regiment in battalion; the ranks of officers and under-officers. We shall set forth to you the number of men necessary for the completion, and will also show you the formation of a regiment in battalion, in parade, and in column, and describe to you the employments of officers and under-officers, that you may not be surprised at the great number that are necessary. We will show you the uniform that we propose to be given to our troops. It will be necessary, if our proposal meets with an agreeable reception, that our first men should be well dressed, that the Canadians may be induced to enlist, and we will immediately begin to dress, exercise ourselves, and raise the first recruits.

The uniform that we propose to have is a white coat, waistcoat and breeches; collar, facings and cuffs, blue; a yellow button; hat embroidered with gold for the officers; a white cockade and black guetres.

The arms of an officer are a fusil, a bayonet, a sword, cartouch-box with straps, and a girdle of black leather. The under-officers and Grenadiers will be armed with a fusil, bayonet, sword in the cartouch-strap, and girdle of black leather. The soldiers will be armed with a fusil, bayonet, cartouch-box, girdle for a bayonet, black straps for the cartouch-box, plain hat and white cockade.

The drummers will be dressed in blue de roy; facings, collar and cuffs white; the sleeve of the coat streaked with thirteen stripes of different colours; armed with a sword; a drum, with the arms of liberty; the sling of the drum and girdle of black leather; and an embroidered hat.

The superiour officers in boots; and for arms a sword, with a belt of black leather. The Grenadier officers, together with their company, to have a fur cap with a brass plate engraved with a grenade in the middle; a plate likewise upon the cartouch-box with a like engravour.

We shall wait your Honours' answer, to the end of communicating to you the order and discipline we propose to have observed.

The under-officers, grenadiers and soldiers, should have their knapsacks furnished with two shirts, two pair of stockings, one pair of guetres, and two pair of shoes.

If our proposal, gentlemen, that we present but at the instigation of many respectable gentlemen in your States, should meet with your approbation, we could recommend the hastening of our commissions, that we might put our troops into such a situation as to march as soon as may be under the orders of your Generals.

Be persuaded, gentlemen, of the sincerest prayers which we offer for your prosperity, and the continuation of the successes that your conduct and experience merit.

We have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

FANEUIL, MARCE,
COPPIR DE LA GARDE.
BANNAL DE LABOULBENE.

SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE EARL OF DUNMORE.

Whitehall, October 18, 1776.

MY LORD: I have received your Lordship's letter to me of the 4th September, by Major Cuyler, and had the honour to lay it before the King; and as I am sure it will be a great satisfaction to your Lordship to know that your conduct in leaving Virginia is approved by his Majesty, I take the opportunity of Major Cuyler's return to acquaint you therewith.

I am, etc.,

GEO. GERMAIN.

To the Earl of Dunmore.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE
Whitehall, October 18, 1776.

I have had the honour to submit to the King the proposal contained in your letter to me of the 2d of September, No. 25, for an augmentation of the corps of Hessian Chasseurs, commanded by Colonel Donop, and I have the satisfaction to acquaint you that his Majesty is graciously pleased to approve of what is proposed, and the proper steps will immediately be taken for entering into a treaty with the Landgrave of Hesse for that purpose; and as I do not foresee any difficulty in effecting it, I have no doubt you will receive them early in the next campaign.

The arrangement you have made for a more exact method of settling the accounts of subsistence and contingencies of the new levies, appears to be very proper, but as it belongs to the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury to give directions upon that head, I have communicated to their Lordships your letter to me, No. 24, and I have no doubt you will receive their Lordships' approbation of the commission you have given to Captain Mackenzie, and the appointment you have made him in consequence thereof.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAIN.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO GENERAL SIR WILLIAM HOWE.
Whitehall, October 18, 1776.

SIR: I had infinite satisfaction in receiving from Major Cuyler your publick despatch of 3d September, wherein you inform me of the success of the King's forces against the Rebels upon Long-Island.

The behaviour of both officers and soldiers, British and Hessians, was (as you well observe) highly to their honour, and has consequently obtained his Majesty's strongest approbation.

Conscious as you must be of having discharged your duty in a most distinguished and exemplary manner, you will scarcely imagine that you are not included in the above general description. To you, sir, however, I am commanded to signify, in more particular terms, the high opinion which your Sovereign entertains of your services on that trying and glorious occasion.

Those who in the early part of your life, from an observation of the inborn courage and active spirit which you manifested in inferiour stations, were led to form favourable conjectures relative to your future exploits, will, with me, be happy to find their expectations so fully answered, and will be agreeably surprised to see you making such hasty advances towards military excellence, by thus uniting to the fire of youth all the wisdom and conduct of the most experienced commander.

Such is the persuasion which I have of Vice-Admiral Lord Howe's skill, and his attention to the good of the service, that even though you had not particularized the judicious movement of the ships on the 27th at daybreak, I should undoubtedly, have nevertheless concluded that his Lordship had availed himself of every circumstance, and made every manœuvre which was likely to deceive or annoy the Rebels, and to advance the glory of his Majesty's arms.

The expedition, regularity and success with which the debarkation of the troops and cannon were effected, at the same time it does infinite honour to Lord Howe, who made the disposition, reflects no small degree of credit upon Commodore Hotham, who had the conduct of that important service. It was, indeed, natural to expect that both men and officers, sensible as they are that they were acting under the all-inspecting eye of an Admiral whom they so deservedly love and admire, would exert themselves to the utmost, and execute his Lordship's commands with punctuality as well as cheerfulness.

I beg leave to congratulate you on a victory to which you so eminently contributed, and have the honour to be, &c.,

GEO. GERMAIN.

LORD GEORGE GERMAIN TO SIR WILLIAM HOWE.

Whitehall, October 18, 1776.

SIR: It is impossible that any person who has duly attended to your military conduct, and found it from your entrance into the army invariably directed by an unintermitted ambition to serve your King and country, can imagine that your meritorious behaviour has been unnoticed by his Majesty, or that his gracious approbation has not been frequently communicated to you by his Ministers in their respective despatches.

His Majesty, however, being desirous that the high sense which he has of your successful endeavours to serve him should be still of greater notoriety, has thought proper to afford you a more publick testimony of his Royal favour, and has, therefore, out of his special regard to merit wherever it is found, been graciously pleased to nominate you to be one of the Knight's Companions of the most honourable Order of the Bath.

You will accordingly receive herewith the proper insignia, together with a dispensation for wearing them, and also the statutes of the order.

I have likewise the honour to transmit to you a letter from Lord Viscount Weymouth, addressed to Vice-Admiral Lord Viscount Howe, which you will please to deliver to his Lordship.

You will learn from the enclosed copy thereof, that the King has been pleased to direct his Lordship to perform the ceremony of investing you with the ensigns of the order.

You will do me the justice to believe me sincerely happy in conveying to you this additional mark of his Majesty's increasing approbation of your conduct, and will give me leave to offer you my most unfeigned congratulations upon this unsolicited accumulation of your honours.

I am, &c.,

GEO. GERMAIN.

Williamsburg, October 18, 1776.

It was last Tuesday resolved in the House of Delegates, that six new battalions of Infantry be raised and employed in the Continental service, upon the terms and according to the requisition of the General Congress; and that provision be made for completing the nine battalions formerly raised, and extending the additional bounty to such of them as shall be willing to enlist on the like terms; and a bill is ordered to be brought in pursuant to the said resolution.

JAMES NOURSE TO GENERAL GATES.

Piedmont, Virginia, October 18, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Mrs. Gates being here with Mr. Gates, in their way to the northward, I take the opportunity to express my hopes of your favouring me with a line now and then.

I thank you for the respectable footing you have established our affairs on, on the lakes. Your private concerns here, I think, go on as well as can be expected when the primum mobile is from home. Your overseer would make rather a better second than first upon the plantation. Shall therefore take the liberty to interfere more with his manœuvres than I chose to do the first year.

I am angry with you for not taking my pistols when you left here, as I lately learn you wanted a pair.

How like you the Constitution of the State?

Religion being likely to come next upon the carpet, I offer my services for burgess, in the room of Rutherford, who is chosen Senator. Pendleton, Hite, Willis, Henshaw, are also candidates. There are two vacancies, Drew having accepted a place. I burn to kick out the Athanasian creed, to which we owe the existence of so many deists and atheists; and that, in the publick worship, we rationally adore the one only self-existent God, through Christ Jesus.

General Lee, you'll hear, is arrived at New-York. Joseph is returned to us from Philadelphia, for a few days. My wife is better, upon the whole, than usual. The children are all well. James is Captain of a Minute company, and seems inclined, when we set about raising our battalions, of entering into the Regulars, which, I apprehend, will be easy, as several of his men are ready to attend him. But if I should go to Williamsburg, can but illy spare him. However, I only purpose being there till I can get the church of Virginia established, and a freedom of conscience and from tax for all other sects.

Jacob Hite, you will find, has met with an exemplary punishment. John and Tom are gone out to seek after the wreck of his fortune, and after the good old woman and his daughters.

When will our infatuated countrymen give over their oppression? Surely it is a great blot in the character of Lord Howe, to be their instrument in endeavouring to establish tyranny. May the Almighty confound their devices, and bless my friend with health and success, that we may once more enjoy our tranquil retreat.

My wife desires her affectionate compliments. Joseph, James, Kate, Charles, &c., &c., to No. 12, their respectful ones; and I am, dear sir, sincerely yours,

JAMES NOURSE.

To Major-General H. Gates.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[No. 11.] In Council of Safety, Annapolis, October 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have it in command from Convention to inform you that a Rifle company, on the Continental establishment, is raised in Harford County, in this State, but are in want of both guns and blankets; and to request you would, by the first opportunity, let us know whether you would have them march to Philadelphia to be supplied, as it will be impracticable, in any reasonable time, to furnish them here. Money will be wanted to supply them with necessaries, and also to accommodate them on their march.

For and on behalf of the Council, I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

DAN. OF ST. THOS. JENIFER, President.

To the President of Congress.

We have some flint stones, but cannot procure a manufacturer.

THOMAS BOND TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 18, 1776.

SIR: I am to inform you that it is not in my power to purchase blankets and linen fit for tents. Arms I have about forty, but believe shall be able to procure as many as the company may want. They will want some repairs. The company is now up, and Captain Harris waits on your Board for orders. I could have purchased blankets and linen, but at a much higher price than the Council thought reasonable. I have sent up to Pennsylvania, where I hear is linen and blankets, both country made; and as the blankets is larger than those from Europe, I am afraid they will fail. As to the blankets in Harford town, it is uncertain that the company mentioned in your letter will leave any for Captain Harris.

I should be much obliged for a line from your Board. Any thing in my power you may depend upon.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

THOS. BOND.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., &c.

CAPTAIN BOND TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Mr. Bailey, the Lieutenant of Captain Deems's company, intends to continue in said company, and the men of Nor—'s company are discharged, but must go in the other. The men are strolling about town, and if any officer except Captain Deems was appointed, they would inlist during the war. Captain Deems tells me he has orders from you to inlist during that time; and if you think proper to appoint me, may take this for an application to inlist for the same time. Excuse haste.

Your very humble servant,

NATHANIEL BOND.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CONTINENTAL AGENTS.

In Marine Committee, Philadelphia, October 18, 1776.

SIR: Herein you will find enclosed two resolves of the Continental Congress, of which we have the honour to be members, whereby you'll observe you are ordered to account with us from time to time for the Continental share of all prizes received and sold by you as agent, and to pay the amount thereof to our order. In obedience to this resolve, we think proper to lay it down as a rule that you state your accounts every three months, crediting therein the Continental share of every prize whose accounts can be settled and included within that quarter of a year, and that you add thereto a schedule containing an exact account or state of all the prizes that then remain in your care whose accounts are unsettled; and we desire that you will constantly remit us undoubted good bills on this place as you can meet with them, which will save the trouble and risk of sending money. In taking drafts, prefer those of the Continental agents, Paymasters, and Commissaries, to any other, provided they are drawn on the President of Congress, this Committee, or any other publick board, for publick service. Next to these, undoubted good private bills, but none others; and when neither one or the other can be met with, inform us, and of the sums you have, that we may give particular orders respecting the remittance or application thereof.

By the other resolve you will find yourself under orders of Congress to make a just distribution amongst the officers and men concerned in taking each prize as soon after the sales as possible, agreeable to the rules and regulations made by Congress in this respect; and it is our duty to see this punctually complied with, as the service has already suffered by delay. Therefore we desire you will always make the said distribution soon as can be after the sale, and transmit us duplicates of the accounts and your proceedings therein.

We shall allow you all your just expenditures on account of the Continent, to be charged against their share of the prize money; but those charges must be supported by vouchers.

We are, sir, your obedient servants,

JOHN HANCOCK,
ROB. MORRIS,
ARTHUR MIDDLETON,

Richard Ellis, Esq., do., Newbern, } N. Carolina.
Cornelius Harnett, Esq., do., Wilmington, }
Livinus Clarkson and John Dorsius, Esq's, do., Charlestown, S. C.
John Wereat, Esq., Continental Agent, Savannah, Georgia.

Resolved, That the present Continental Agents do account with the Marine Committee from time to time for the Continental share of all Prizes received and sold by them, and that they pay the amount of such Prizes to the order of said Committee.

Resolved, That the said Agents do make just distribution of the share in all Prizes that appertain to the officers and crews of the Continental ships-of-war, agreeable to the rules and regulations of Congress, as soon after the sales of each Prize as possible.

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO PRIZE AGENTS.

October 18, 1776.

SIR: We have the honour to enclose herein a resolve of the Continental Congress, of which we are members, whereby you will see we are empowered to order a proper and just distribution of all prizes taken by the cruisers General Washington caused to be fitted out on Continental account, and also that we are authorized, or rather ordered, to receive from the agents who received and sold the said prizes, the Continental share thereof; and as we find you have been employed as an agent in this business, we desire that you will immediately send us an account of the prizes that have been put under your care, with copies of the decrees of the Court of Admiralty, inventories of ships and cargoes, with copies of the accounts sales properly authenticated, an account current for each prize wherein you will credit the neat proceeds, and charge the share appertaining to the officers and crews who were interested in the capture, and also the Continental share, agreeable to the rules and regulations laid down by Congress; and a general account current, wherein you will credit the Continent for their share in every prize, and charge for all such remittances as you make to us in consequence of these orders, as well as for any other just charge you have to make against them. We desire that you will remit to this Board whatever moneys you have in hand arising from the Continental share of the prizes put under your management. And as there are many persons gone from hence to purchase prize goods, you may procure drafts on this place from undoubted, safe, good men, which will save the trouble and risk of sending the money; or you may pay it in to the Continental Paymaster, at Boston, Ebenezer Hancock, Esq., and transmit us his draft on the President of Congress; or the Hon. Thomas Cushing, Esq., John Bradford, Esq., of Boston, or John Langdon, Esq., of New-Hampshire, have occasion for money on our account: their drafts on ourselves will be good, and the sooner you make these remittances and render the accounts the better. We must also enjoin you to make an immediate division and distribution of that share of prizes that appertains to the officers and crews that took them, agreeable to and in strict conformity with the rules and regulations of Congress, and that you transmit us as soon as can be duplicates of those accounts, as it is our duty to see this business perfected; other ways the maritime service of America will suffer greatly by the discouragements from delays in the payment of prize money, &c. Where any part of the prizes have been applied to Continental use, that part must be valued and included at the valuation in the new account of sales; if applied to the use of yours or any other State, they must pay the valuation, and that be included in the account sales.

Expecting your compliance, with an answer to this letter, we remain, sir, your obedient servants.

To William Bartlett, Esq., in Beverly.
William Watson, Esq., in Plymouth.
John Wentworth, Esq., in Portsmouth.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN JAMES ROBINSON.

October 18, 1776.

SIR: The honourable Congress having directed that you should make a voyage under orders of the Secret Committee, you are therefore to receive their instructions and comply with them, giving us notice when the service by them required is performed, that we direct your future operations. During the present voyage we expect you will transmit us any useful or important intelligence that comes to your knowledge. You are to take good care of the Sachem, her stores, provisions, and materials; preserve good discipline amongst your officers and men, but use them well. Treat any that become your prisoners with humanity, and in due time return copies of your journal and log-book into this office.

Wishing you success, we are, sir, your humble servants.
To Captain James Robinson, of the sloop Sachem.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN HALLOCK.

October 18, 1776.

SIR: Congress having ordered us to consign you over to the management of the Secret Committee for the present voyage, you are to receive from them such orders as they think proper to give, and fulfil the same. After doing so, give us notice, that we may direct your future proceedings. We expect you will, during this voyage, take good care of the Lexington, her stores, provisions, and materials; that you preserve good order and strict discipline amongst your officers and men, at the same time using them well. Treat your prisoners, if any shall fall into your hands, with humanity; transmit us accounts of any interesting intelligence that comes to your knowledge, and in due time lodge in this office copies of your log-book and journal.

We are, sir, your humble servants.
To Captain William Hallock, of the brig Lexington.

CONSIDERATIONS ON THE PRESENT REVOLTED STATE OF AMERICA, ADDRESSED TO ITS INHABITANTS AT LARGE.

Whilst America retained her allegiance, Great Britain was the guardian of America; even since her revolt she has proposed terms of reconciliation, and through his Majesty's Commissioners, still leaves open the door for honourable accommodation. But the Colonies have now levied war against the parent State; that war must be prosecuted with vigour, with effect, until America submits to the constitutional authority of Great Britain.

The employing German Protestant troops (whose renown for valour is equalled only by their Prince's firm and steady alliance to the King of Great Britain) is a measure at this critical juncture full of true wisdom and good policy. The deluded Colonists, running wildly after the shadow of liberty, have lost the substance. The present armament will restore the Americans to freedom—to that freedom which is enjoyed under a British constitution. It will relieve them from the most degrading species of tyranny, Republican tyranny. Every dispassionate and well-disposed American must despise the idea of Republicanism. The experiment has already been made during the usurpation of Oliver Cromwell, and experience has showed it, by the restoration of King Charles the Second, to be totally incompatible with the magnitude and majesty of a great empire. It is a system of government fit only for the citizen of a small State. Monarchy, limited Monarchy, can alone preserve liberty to the subject, and give energy to the government.

Let not, then, the deluded and deceived Americans passionately follow courses that must lead them to destruction, nor longer continue under the false persuasion that Great Britain means to make them slaves, which their own senses, if they will consult them, and the experience of their own domestick situations, must contradict. But let them give a friendly attention to the honourable declaration of his Majesty's Commissioners for restoring peace to America, and let them accept the blessings of peace upon such favourable propositions as will strengthen the union of the British empire.

Then will the fleets and armies that now occupy their coasts and frontiers be no longer the scourge, but again become the protectors as well as pride and glory of both Great Britain and America.

CAMILLUS.

New-York, October 18, 1776.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 21, 1776.]

Harlem Heights, October 18, 1776.

SIR: I was yesterday morning honoured with your favour of the 15th, with the resolutions of the 11th and 14th. The latter, by which Congress have authorized me to appoint Mons. Penet a brevet Aid-de-Camp, claims a return of my acknowledgments.

Last night I received a letter from Mr. Varick, Secretary to General Schuyler, enclosing a copy of one from General Arnold to General Gates. The intelligence transmitted by General Arnold being of an extremely interesting and important nature, I thought it advisable to forward the same immediately by express. You have a copy herewith, which contains the particulars, and to which I beg leave to refer you.

The accounts transmitted yesterday by post will inform you of the movements of the enemy, and of the measures judged necessary to be pursued by us to counteract their designs. I have nothing to add on this head, except that ten or eleven ships, which have been prevented passing Hell-Gate for two or three days for want of wind, are now under way, and proceeding up the Sound. Among them there appears to be two frigates, the rest probably have in stores, &c.

Enclosed is a copy of the last general return I have been able to obtain. It only comes down to the 5th instant. The situation of our affairs, and the almost constant necessity of sending detachments from one place to another to watch the enemy's motions, have prevented the officers from making them with regularity.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

Schuyler Island, October 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday morning at eight o'clock, the enemy's fleet, consisting of one ship mounting sixteen guns, one snow mounting the same number, one schooner of fourteen guns, two of twelve, two sloops, a bomb-ketch, and a large vessel, that did not come up, with fifteen or twenty flat-bottomed boats, or gondolas, carrying one twelve or eighteen pounder in their bows, appeared off Cumberland Head. We immediately prepared to receive them; the galleys and Royal Savage were ordered under way; the rest of our fleet lay at an anchor. At eleven o'clock they ran under the lee of Valcour, and began the attack. The schooner, by some bad management, fell to leeward, and was first attacked; one of her masts was wounded, and her rigging shot away. The Captain thought prudent to run her on the Point of Valcour, where all the men were saved. They boarded her, and at night set fire to her. At half-past twelve the engagement became general, and very warm. Some of the enemy's ships and all their gondolas beat and rowed up within musket-shot of us. They continued a very hot fire with round and grape shot until five o'clock, when they thought proper to retire to about six or seven hundred yards distance, and continued until dark. The Congress and Washington have suffered greatly; the latter lost her First Lieutenant, killed, Captain and Master wounded. The New-York lost all her officers except her Captain. The Philadelphia was hulled in so many places, that she sunk about one hour after the engagement was over. The whole killed and wounded amounted to about sixty. The enemy landed a large number of Indians on the island and on each shore, who kept up an incessant fire on us, but did little damage. The enemy had to appearance upwards of one thousand men in batteaus, prepared for boarding. We suffered much for want of seamen and gunners. I was myself obliged to point most of the guns on board the Congress, which I believe did good execution. The Congress received seven shot between wind and water, was hulled a dozen times, had her mainmast wounded in two places, and her yard in one. The Washington was hulled a number of times, her mainmast shot through, and must have a new one; both vessels are very leaky, and want repairing.

On consulting with General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth, it was thought prudent to return to Crown-Point, every vessel's ammunition being nearly three-fourths spent, and the enemy greatly superiour to us in ships and men. At seven o'clock, Colonel Wigglesworth, in the Trumbull, got under way, the gondolas and small vessels followed, and the Congress and Washington brought up the rear. The enemy did not attempt to molest us. Most of the fleet is at this minute come to an anchor. The wind is small to the southward. The enemy's fleet is under way to leeward, and beating up. As soon as our leaks are stopped, the whole fleet will make the utmost despatch for Crown Point, where I beg you will send ammunition, and your further orders for us. On the whole, I think we have had a very fortunate escape, and have great reason to return our humble and hearty thanks to Almighty God for preserving and delivering so many of us from our more than savage enemies.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,
B. ARNOLD.

P. S. I had not moved on board the Congress when the enemy appeared, and lost all my papers and most of my clothes on board the schooner. I wish a dozen batteaus, well-manned, could be sent immediately to tow up the vessels in case of a southerly wind.

I cannot in justice to the officers in the fleet, omit mentioning their spirited conduct during the action. B. A.

PROCEEDINGS OF A COUNCIL OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

At a Council of War held at the Head-Quarters of General Lee, October 16, 1776:

Present: His Excellency General Washington.

Major-Generals Lee, Putnam, Heath, Spencer, Sullivan.
Brigadier-Generals Lord Stirling, Mifflin, McDougall,
Parsons, Nixon, Wadsworth, Scott, Fellows, Clinton, Lincoln.

Colonel Knox, commanding Artillery.

The General read sundry Letters from the Convention and particular members, of the turbulence of the disaffected in the upper parts of this State; and also sundry accounts of deserters showing the enemy's intention to surround us.

After much consideration and debate, the following question was stated: whether, (it having appeared that the obstructions in the North River have proved insufficient, and that the enemy's whole force is now in our rear on Frog Point,) it is now deemed possible in our situation to prevent the enemy cutting off the communication with the country and compelling us to fight them at all disadvantages, or surrender prisoners at discretion?

Agreed, with but one dissenting voice, (viz: General Clinton,) that it is not possible to prevent the communication, and that one of the consequences mentioned in the question must certainly follow.

Agreed, that Fort Washington be retained as long as possible.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 13, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

The General expressly orders that the men have four days' provisions ready dressed at all times; for which purpose the Commissaries or the Deputies are to keep the butchers constantly, killing till such supply is had; and one man from every mess is to be kept cooking. The commanding officers of regiments, and others, are most earnestly requested to see this order carried into immediate execution.

Supplies of ammunition may now be had, so that any officer who now neglects getting what is necessary, must be accountable to his country and the men under his command.

When any regiments are about to march, they are to have their tents struck, rolled up, and a guard under the command of a careful officer to attend them and the baggage, who is not, under any pretence, to leave them without orders.

As the enemy seem now to be endeavouring to strike some stroke before the close of the campaign, the General most earnestly conjures both officers and men, if they have any love for their country, and concern for its liberties, regard to the safety of their parents, wives, children and countrymen, that they will act with bravery and spirit, becoming the cause in which they are engaged; and to encourage and animate them so to do, there is every advantage of ground and situation, so that if we do not conquer, it must be our own faults. How much better will it be to die honourably fighting in the field, than to return home covered with shame and disgrace, even if the cruelty of the enemy should allow you to return! A brave and gallant behaviour for a few days, and patience under some little hardships, may save our country, and enable us to go into winter quarters with safety and honour.

The marching of some troops to King's Bridge makes it necessary to reduce the picket to six hundred men, and the fatigue proportionably.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 14, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

Colonel Bailey's regiment is immediately to join General Clinton's brigade, at present under the command of Colonel Glover. Colonel Lippett's regiment is to join General McDougall's brigade. Each of these regiments are to take their tents and cooking utensils, and to lose no time. The two Connecticut regiments under the command of Colonel Storms and Major Greaves, now upon York Island, are to be in readiness to march into West-Chester at a moment's warning.

The brigades which will then remain on the island will be in two divisions, the first composed of Heard's, Beall's, and Weedon's, to be under the command of Major-General Putnam; the second, consisting of Lord Stirling's, Wadsworth's and Fellows's, to be under the command of Major-General Spencer.

General Putnam will attend particularly to all the works and necessary places of defence, from the line which was intended to be run across from Head-Quarters inclusively, up to and including the works on the island above that place, as far as hath usually been considered as belonging to this division of the army. He will also attend particularly to the works about Mount Washington, and to the obstructions in the river, which should be increased as fast as possible.

General Spencer is to take charge of all the works from Head-Quarters to our front lines to the south, and attend particularly to all weak places, seeing they are secured as well as time and circumstances will permit. But as there may be more fatigue men wanted in one division than the other, they are each to furnish for such works as the Chief Engineer shall direct, seeing that the duty fall equally upon the officers and men of each division.

A report is immediately to be made by the commanding officers of regiments to their several Brigadiers, of the state of ready-dressed provisions, that if there be any neglect or deficiency, the one may be punished and the other rectified.

The Court-Martial of which Colonel Weedon was President, is dissolved. A new one to be formed, Colonel Ewing to preside.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 15, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

Colonel Joseph Reed's regiment is to join General McDougall's brigade; and Colonel Hutchinson's, when the work he is ordered to execute is finished, is to join General Clinton's brigade, at present under the command of Colonel Glover.

Sargent's, Ward's, and Chester's regiments, and the regiment commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Storrs, are to form a brigade, and be under the command of Colonel Sargent.

Colonel Storrs's, and the regiment under Major Greaves, are to march immediately into West-Chester; the first to join the brigade he is appointed to, the other to join the regiments commanded by Colonels Douglass and Ely, and with them be under the command of General Saltonstall, as Colonel Horseford's and Major Rogers's regiments are; but to remain where they at present are till further orders. These five regiments to compose General Saltonstall's brigade.

The other two Connecticut regiments, encamped upon Harlem river, opposite Head-Quarters, are, for the present, from their situation, to be annexed to General Parsons's brigade, and be under his command.

The brigades are now to be formed into divisions, those on York Island as mentioned in yesterday's orders. Nixon's, McDougall's, and that commanded by Colonel Glover, to compose one, under the command of Major-General Lee; Parsons's, Scott's, and Clinton's, another, under the command of Major-General Heath; Saltonstall's, Sargent's, and Hand's, another, under the command of Major-General Sullivan; and the Massachusetts Militia another, under the command of Major-General Lincoln.

The General in most pressing terms exhorts all officers commanding divisions, brigades, and regiments, &c., to have their officers and the men under their respective commands, properly informed of what is expected from them, that no confusion may arise in case we should be suddenly called to action, which, there is no kind of doubt, is near at hand; and he hopes and flatters himself, that the only contention will be who shall render the most acceptable service to his country and his posterity. The General also desires that the officers will be particularly attentive to the men's arms and ammunition, that there may be no deficiency or application for cartridges when we are called into the field.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 16, 1776.

(Parole, Burlington.) (Countersign, Boston.)

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 17, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

There are a number of priming-wires and brushes in the Commissary's store near General Spencer's quarters, and at King's Bridge; in the latter a number of pouches, which are to be distributed among the brigades. The Brigadiers are desired to send to those places where they may receive priming-wires and brushes. The pouches are to be divided, and each Brigadier is to send for his proportion as soon as possible, and have them filled with spare cartridges.

As the movements of the enemy makes an alteration of our position necessary, and some regiments are to move towards them, the commanding and the other officers of regiments are to see the following orders punctually executed:

The tents are to be struck, and carefully rolled, the men to take the tent poles in their hands; two men out of a company with a careful subaltern, to go with the baggage, and not leave it on any pretence. No packs, (unless of sick men,) chairs, tables, benches, or heavy lumber, to be put on the wagons. No person, unless unable to walk, is to presume to get upon them. The wagons to move forward before the regiments, the Quartermaster having first informed himself from the Brigadier, or Brigade-Major, where they are to pitch. Every regiment under marching orders, to see they have their flints and ammunition in good order and complete.

Lieutenant Nevins, of Colonel Tyler's regiment, is to do the duty of Captain in the room of Major Chipman, lately promoted.

Daniel Lyman, Esq., is appointed Major of Brigade to General Fellows, and is to be respected accordingly.

A General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Ewing was President, having convicted Lieutenant Pose, of the Rangers, of the scandalous crime of "conniving at plundering, contrary to frequent and express orders," and sentenced him to be cashiered, the General approves the sentence, and he is accordingly cashiered.

The same Court having convicted Corporal George Wilson of "plundering Mr. Bushey's house, at Harlem," and sentenced him to receive thirty-nine lashes, the General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed to-morrow on the parade, before the guards march off. The Provost Marshal to see it done.

Colonel Weedon's and Colonel Reed's regiments to join Lord Stirling's brigade, immediately.

Major Parker, of General Heard's brigade, to attend the works, and be excused other duty.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 18, 1776.

(Parole, Stamford.) (Countersign, France.)

As the brigades of the army now move at such distance from each other, that a punctual attendance at Head-Quarters for orders cannot be expected, one Brigade-Major from each Major-General's division, is to attend as early in the day as he can. The several Brigade-Majors, or Adjutants who act as such, are to attend him at a stated hour, and then distribute the orders through the several brigades and regiments, as fast as possible.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Harlem Heights, October 18, 1776.

SIR: It being evident that the enemy, who have landed the main body of their army on Frog's and Fell's Points, have digested a plan of penetrating into the country, and forming a line in our rear, I have the honour to inform you, by his Excellency's command, whose attention has been called from hence this morning by their motions, that he apprehends the Stockbridge Indians might render material service here as scouting parties, if the situation of affairs in the Northern army do not require their continuance there. As the propriety of sending the whole or any part of them down, will depend upon the intelligence of the enemy's motions in Canada, and the prospect there may be of their crossing the lakes, his Excellency means to submit it entirely to your discretion and opinion, not wishing 'em to be ordered here if you conceive that they will be wanted there from the appearance and complexion of things.

I am, &c.,

R. H. HARRISON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

P. S. His Excellency received Mr. Varick's letter of the 14th by last night's post, and despatched an express to Congress with a copy of General Arnold's to General Gates.

ON THE EMPLOYMENT OF INDIANS IN AMERICA.

Having served in America during the greatest part of last war, I think I may, without vanity, presume to be a tolerable judge of the best method of conducting the operations of a campaign in that country; and notwithstanding the aversion which General Carleton is said to have to the employing Indians in his army, yet I must freely give it as my opinion, that nothing could tend more to render his schemes successful than a competent number of these men under proper regulations.

The employing a body of fifteen hundred or two thousand Indians would be attended with many and great advantages. I shall content myself at present with pointing out a few of them. And first, such a body would effectually secure the British troops from all kinds of surprise, by scouring the woods for many miles round, and giving timely notice of any danger before it arrived. No one who has not been in America can conceive with what swiftness the Indians scamper through their woods, and with what certainty they can distinguish objects at a considerable distance. The fact is that the Indians will distinguish objects in their woods at twice, if not three times, the distance that Europeans can; and this faculty (or, if you will, habit, as it is only the improvement of a natural faculty) they acquire by their daily practice in pursuing their enemies or their game. In these pursuits they are as swift and as sharp-sighted as lynxes, and, I may add too, as cunning as foxes; for they will sometimes lie flat upon the ground, covering themselves with the leaves and branches of trees, and in this way will remain undiscovered till their enemy or their game is close upon them, when they suddenly start up, and make sure of their prey.

The security which such a body of Indians would give to the King's forces, particularly by night, would be of the last importance, as it would enable them to sleep as quietly and as soundly in camp as if they were at home in their own beds; whereas when troops are in danger of being every moment surprised, they may be said to doze rather than to sleep; and though the usual time might be allowed them every night for rest, yet they are very little refreshed by these broken slumbers, and in the space of a few days are so totally exhausted as to be altogether unfit for action.

In the next place, these Indians might be employed in distributing manifestoes among the inhabitants of the back settlements, acquainting them with the approach of the Royal army, which would restrain the factious, confirm the wavering, and encourage the loyal and well-affected to persevere in their pacifick intentions.

But the chief advantage accruing from such a body of Indians, is the terror it would strike into the Colonists in general; for nothing can exceed the idea they entertain of a hostile visit from these savages. God forbid, however, that I should recommend the letting loose these barbarians in all their native cruelty and ferocity. Rather than consent to this, I would willingly forego all the benefits arising from their service. But I think there is a possibility of using them as bugbears, without allowing them to act as hell-hounds, though this will require the most delicate management: it will require the direction of a man open, frank, generous, and affable, such as was that of the late Sir William Johnson, who could rule and control the passions of these Indians at pleasure; but whether this be the character of General Carleton is best known to those who are personally acquainted with him, which is not the case of yours, &c.,

A SOLDIER.

London, October 22, 1776.

COLONEL REED TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, October 18, 1776.

SIR: The very critical state of our army, and frequent movements of the enemy, render it almost impossible for the General to write himself without neglecting more important duties. He therefore directs me to answer your letter of the 14th, and to say that the Captains of the galleys from your State have misbehaved invariably from the first moment they came, to the time of their departure from hence, about a week ago; that the accumulation of business and a hope that they would retrieve their reputation prevented your having an earlier information of their behaviour. They are now under the sentence of a Court-Martial for misbehaviour in the first attack made on the ships in the North River, and on every other occasion since have manifested such want of spirit and judgment as to be despised by the whole army. In the late affair, Captain McCleave must be excepted from the general censure, as he managed with prudence and propriety. But Captain Tinker, with the wind at south, and on the tide of flood when the ships could move, left his vessel, though stationed as a guard, to go up to King's Bridge after some clothes, as he pretends. The consequence was, that in the hurry and confusion and long before they were in danger, they left the galley aground, though they might have burned or bilged her. The enemy took possession of her in half an hour; and she, with the other left under the like circumstances, will probably prove the most formidable force they can have to oppose us on the river. There was a place of safety provided for the other galleys, which they might have got into, as well as McCleave, but they passed it in their hurry.

I am, sir, by his Excellency's command, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH REED, Adjutant-General.

Agreeable to your request, the General has dismissed Captain McCleave and his crew. The other is up the river.

COLONEL RICHMOND TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Heights near Harlem, October 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I this day received your Honours' letter of the 11th instant, communicating your instructions to stop the money due to the State of Maryland from the several people mentioned in the accounts therein enclosed, amounting to £3,675 17s. 5d. I will endeavour to do this as soon as possible, but fear the whole cannot be received till the pay for the months of September and October is issued by the Paymaster-General. The men having suffered great losses in clothes on Long-Island, will want the whole of the money remaining due to them for July and August, to procure such covering as is to be had. The pay abstract of Continental pay due to the battalion and Veazey's company and Hindman's, (the battalion and Veazey's company commencing 5th July, the time they were voted into the service of the continent, and Hindman's the 26th of same month, the time he received his last orders to march, calculated to the 31st August,) amounts to £4,126 15s. 2d., out of which the State of Maryland, by the Paymaster there, and through the hands of Colonel Smallwood, has advanced upwards of sixteen hundred pounds, which will be received for the State as soon as possible, and remitted as soon as received.

The battalion and Veazey's company will have three days' pay due to them from the State of Maryland, which it is proposed to pay them out of the last-mentioned sum. The money is ready at the Paymaster-General's office; but on account of the alarm of the enemy's landing troops on different parts of the main lands of this continent, from the Sound, I have thought it advisable to put off receiving it till our troops get a little settled in their new encampment above King's Bridge, to which place they marched from hence last Saturday.

You will be pleased to observe that the sum of two hundred pounds charged in the accounts received from you as advance Captain Veazey, is not included in the sixteen hundred pounds above mentioned, Colonel Smallwood having paid him, at Philadelphia, half a month's pay for his company, amounting to £118 17s. 6d., not knowing that such a sum had been paid him at the commencement of his march. Captain Hindman informs me received Maryland pay to the 3d August; so that there will be due the State from that company the amount of the whole company's pay for eight days, viz: from the 26th of July to the 3d of August.

With regard to the four Independent companies, viz: Gunby's, Thomas's, Woolford's, and Bracco's, which have joined the battalion lately, I do not know how to make out their pay accounts against the continent, not having been informed at what time they were considered as having entered into its service. I have understood that most of the four received a month's pay advanced them at Philadelphia; but they have received none since they came here, nor do I expect they will till about the beginning of November, when they may possibly be paid up to the end of October, with the rest of the troops. I shall be very glad to be informed by your Honours, as soon as possible, of the time these four companies entered the service of the continent, and also whether I am right or not in fixing the time of the battalion and Veazey's on the 6th, and Hindman's on the 26th, of July.

I will send you a particular account of the disposal of the pay, now laying ready, as soon as I have paid off the men and settled the account to that time. In the mean time I shall execute any of your commands in the best manner I am capable of; and am, with great respect, your very obedient servant,

CHRIS'R RICHMOND.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

P. S. Captain Scott informs me he paid a sum of money, in part of the State's account against him, to Mr. Charles Howard, credit for which is not given; and I think Captain Adams paid some money to some person, in part of his account.

GENERAL HEATH TO CAPTAIN HORTON.

King's Bridge, October 18, 1776.

CAPTAIN HORTON: You will remain with the cannon and howitzer which were ordered up with you, at the place where you were directed to take post by the General, which I suppose is to cover our ships and prevent the enemy burning them or cutting them out. If there is not a sufficient number of men there to cover them, upon your signification of it they shall be sent to you. As soon as the ships are got off, you will return with the cannon, &c. Major Crafts will return with his howitzer immediately.

I am, sir, your humble servant, W. HEATH.

DEPOSITION OF LIEUTENANT WILLIAM B. ALGER.

William B. Alger, a Lieutenant in Captain Darland's company, in Colonel Humphrey's regiment, being duly sworn and examined, says, that on or about the 3d of October, instant, he was at the house of Jacob Deane, in Charlotte Precinct, in the Nine Partners; that he asked the said Deane whether he had any deerskins to sell; that the said Deane told him he had, and accordingly laid out several skins. That the man offered to part with the skins, and that he, the deponent, agreed to give him the price he asked for them; that the deponent asked him whether he would not abate any thing of the price he asked; that the said Deane told him that it depended upon what sort of money he meant to pay him; that the deponent told him that he meant to pay him in the money which was current, namely, Continental money; that he had no other money. That the said Deane said that he would not part with his skins for that money; that he never has taken that money, and never intended to. And further this deponent saith not.

WM. B. ALGER.

HENRY WISNER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Peekskill, October 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have been taking a view of the adjacent hills this morning, at the entrance of the Highlands on the south side, and find them capable of being made quite defensible with very little expense.

The hill at the north side of Peekskill is so situated with the road winding along the side of it, that ten men on the top, by throwing down stones, might prevent ten thousand passing. I went on the top this morning, and rolled some stones down; it made a most violent appearance; some of them sprang twenty feet high. I believe nothing more need be done than to keep great quantities of stone at the different places where the troops must pass, if they attempt penetrating the mountains. The troops that went over towards Fishkill are returned. I believe it will be best to have the greatest part of them stationed along between this and Tarrytown. Colonel Cortlandt is very busy getting things put in a proper way for the subsistence of the troops. I am this moment setting off for Fort Montgomery to get the Engineer to come and assist us with his advice. I have procured a man who understands making flints. If Mr. Harper is not gone home, I beg him to send a cart-load of the stone that he told me of. If he is gone, pray write after him. I am convinced that the man understands how to make them.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

COLONEL SNYDER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Montgomery, October 18, 1776.

Whereas, by a resolve of said Convention, bearing date the 7th of September last past, it was ordered to raise six hundred men out of the Militia of the several Counties therein mentioned, and to form a regiment to reinforce the garrisons at the Forts Constitution and Montgomery in the Highlands, under the command of the Field Officers appointed by said Convention, to wit: First Colonel Johannis Snyder, Lieutenant-Colonel John Bailey, Jun. And whereas I have, immediately upon the receipt of said resolve, met the several Colonels of the several regiments of Ulster County, in order to agree what number of men each regiment should raise in proportion of the two hundred men ordered to be raised in said County of Ulster, and agreed as follows:

Colonel Johannis Snyder's regiment, - 38 privates.
Colonel Jonathan Hasbrouck's regiment, 62 do.
Lieut. Col. James McClaughry's regiment, 56 do.
Lieut. Col. Jacob Hornbeek's regiment, 44 do.

Total, - - - - - 200

And whereas I arrived at this place (Fort Montgomery) the 27th of September last, with the quota of my regiment, except five, who were sick and unfit, and, since my arrival here, my regiment now amounts to the number as follows:

From Col. Snyder's regiment, present	33	wanted	5

Present 379 wanted 221

GENTLEMEN: There is a true state of my regiment, now under my command, whereof three companies are stationed, by General Clinton's orders, at Fort Constitution, under the command of Colonel Bailey. Gentlemen, I think it necessary that your honourable Board should issue your orders to the several Field Officers of the several Counties to order the deficiency of their quota of men immediately to join my regiment. If that should not be the case, there is no prospect for raising of men for the future, for the best of men are chiefly already in the service, and those that are rather disaffected to the cause decline, and will not go even if it fell to their lot by ballot; and it appears to me, that the Field Officers have little or no concern about it, for I never received as much as a return from any of the Field Officers, whether they had raised and ordered their quota of men to join my regiment. So, gentlemen, I shall rest this matter to your superiour wisdom, and shall conduct myself agreeable to your directions, and remain, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOH'S SNYDER, Colonel.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, now convened at the Fishkill.

COLONEL SNYDER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fort Montgomery, October 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas, by resolve of your honourable Board, bearing date the 7th September last past, I am appointed Colonel, to command six hundred men, to be raised in the several Counties therein mentioned, to reinforce the Forts Constitution and Montgomery in the Highlands; and whereas I arrived here the 27th of said September, and the several officers appointed by the Field Officers of the several Counties, now here present, and at Fort Constitution, are as follows, to wit:

In the County of Ulster: Captain, Frederick Schoonmaker; his First Lieutenant, Daniel Graham; his Second Lieutenant, Cornelius Van Wagener. Captain, William Telfort; his First Lieutenant, William Kuddeback; his Second Lieutenant, Hendricus Feerpenning, Jun. Captain, Matthew Johnson, Jun.; First Lieutenant, ; Second Lieutenant, Evert Hoffman.

In Orange County: Captain, James Sawyer; First Lieutenant, George Luckey; Second Lieutenant, Gilbert Veail.

In Dutchess County: Captain, Thomas Storm; First

Lieutenant, Eliakam Barman; Second Lieutenant, not returned. Captain, Ebenezer Husted; First Lieutenant, John Wilson; Second Lieutenant, David Ostrom.

In the County of Albany: Captain, Ithamar Spencer; First Lieutenant, Henry Irwin; Second Lieutenant, John Murray. Captain, John Williams; First Lieutenant, Philip Staats; Second Lieutenant, Peter Van Berregan.

And whereas, by virtue of said resolve, I have appointed David Bevier Adjutant, and Coenraedt Jo. Elmendorph Quartermaster; and I conceive it necessary the gentlemen appointed as above should have commissions from your honourable Board, in order to confirm their appointments, and also to exercise their power more satisfactory to their men under their command; therefore I desire your favour to make out the commissions for the several gentlemen above appointed in their ranks, and send the commissions to me by the bearer hereof, Lieutenant Daniel Graham, who is sent for that purpose; and your so doing you will oblige your humble servant,

JOH'S SNYDER, Colonel.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, now convened at the Fishkill.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saratoga, October 18, 1776.

SIR: General Waterbury, who is prisoner on his parole is on his way from Albany to Connecticut. I have advised him to go directly from Albany to you. He is capable of giving you that information you requested in your last favour to me. He is not only a brave and good officer, but a candid and honest man, uninfluenced by any unbecoming prejudices. He will also acquaint you with the state of our affairs at Ticonderoga.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your obedient and very humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 18, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: As too much precaution cannot be had to prevent the enemy's ships from getting into your rear, and thereby intercepting your supplies, permit me to suggest the necessity of throwing one or more booms across from the redoubt to Mount Independence; but lest booms should be insufficient, it would be well to anchor large rafts of timber in the channel.

Strong parties should be sent out to meet and escort the cattle that are now on the way up. Hereafter, the cattle will go to Skeensborough; and as the weather will soon be such as to preserve meat, I propose that they shall be killed there, and the quarters sent to you.

By this express I send orders to Colonel Gansevoort to kill what cattle there may be at his post, and to send them over to you.

The difficulty of keeping the Militia without any tents or other shelter will be extreme; and if you should discover that the enemy do not mean to attack you, I wish to be advised of it the earliest possible.

I am, dear General, very sincerely, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

New-London, Friday, October 18, 1776.

Last Monday a regiment of Continental troops, commanded by Colonel Richmond, arrived here from Rhode-Island.

Last Saturday the wife and daughter of one John Hill, a prisoner confined in Boston jail for being concerned with Crean Brush and others in robbing the inhabitants of Boston when that place was evacuated, came to this town from Providence by water, and were endeavouring to get a passage to the west end of Long-Island, but were stopped by the Committee of this town, and on examination were found upon them sundry papers containing matters of intelligence respecting the people and state of the country, sent from said Hill and others in Boston to General Howe. It appears, from the papers found upon them, that they had been possessed of other papers, which they had secured or destroyed. They were both sent back with the papers, under a proper convoy, to the place from whence they came.

The Montgomery privateer belonging to Providence, has taken and sent into this port a schooner from Cape Nichola Mole, bound to Halifax, having on board nine thousand gallons of molasses and six thousand weight of sugar. The privateer had been out but twenty-four hours when she took this vessel.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES.

New-Port, October 18, 1776.

SIR: The owners of Captain Dennis's sloop have delivered two of the men which signed their articles, and have given sufficient security that they will not carry away any of the men belonging to the fleet. If you find any men on board that do belong to the fleet, take them out and then discharge the sloop. As there are some of the owners that are men of honour, and will not do any such thing, it will be hard that they should suffer for one man that has behaved out of character. So that upon the whole think it best to let the sloop and her people go.

I am your friend and humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To John P. Jones, commander of the Providence, or Hoys-teed Hacker, Esq., commander of the Hamden.

Newburyport, October 18, 1776.

Yesterday came in here a prize brig bound to White-Haven, laden chiefly with mahogany. She was taken about a fortnight ago by the Hancock privateer, Captain Wingate Newman, from this port.

ADDRESS OF THE LORD MAYOR, ETC., OF THE CITY OF YORK TO THE KING.

St. James's, October 19, 1776.

The following Address of the Lord Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Commons, of the City of York, in Common Council assembled, having been transmitted to the Earl of Suffolk, one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, has been presented to his Majesty; which Address his Majesty was pleased to receive very graciously.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

The humble Address of the Lord Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Commons of the City of York, in Common Council assembled:

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN: We, your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Lord Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, Sheriffs, and Commons, of your ancient city of York, beg leave, with joyful hearts, to congratulate your Majesty upon the late glorious success of your forces in America.

We regard, with just indignation, the avowed and hostile defiance of some of your Majesty's Colonies to the legal authority of the mother country, by which they have been so liberally cherished and supported, and from which they derive the most signal advantages. So ungrateful a defection, aggravated by such acts of violence and cruelty that it became dangerous to be loyal, obliges us to acknowledge the justice of coercive measures, at the same time that we lament their necessity. But we trust that by the wisdom of your Majesty's councils, and the terror of your arms, the authors of this unnatural rebellion will speedily be subdued, your Majesty's faithful American subjects freed from oppression, and those who have been deluded by faction will, by a timely submission, become fit objects of your royal clemency and benevolence.

Permit us, sir, to assure your Majesty, that our hearts are warm with affection for your royal person, family, and Government; that we are zealous friends to law, liberty, and order; and determined enemies to faction, licentiousness, and sedition; and that we regard the honour and dignity of your Majesty's crown, and the supreme authority of the British Legislature, as the great pillars of that excellent Constitution on which depends the freedom and prosperity of every branch of the British empire.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED DUBLIN, OCTOBER 19, 1776.

By a letter from Lisburne, dated October 15, we learn that an American privateer came to anchor in the harbour of Newhaven the 13th instant, and demanded provisions, for which payment was offered. She mounted eighteen carriage guns, and one hundred and five men on board, and is a new vessel well built. She remained but a few hours, then weighed anchor, and sailed to the northward.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant having signified to the Lord Mayor that his Excellency had appointed the Larne armed cutter, Captain Cunningham, to convoy the trade to London, his Lordship gave proper notice accordingly to the merchants and captains of ships.

ALEXANDRIA (FAIRFAX COUNTY, VIRGINIA) COMMITTEE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 4, 1776: Referred to the Board of War.]

Virginia, Fairfax County, October 17, 1776.

SIR: At the request of the inhabitants of the town of Alexandria, I take the liberty to trouble you with the enclosed order of the Virginia Council, understanding that Messrs. Hughes, of Frederick County, Maryland, (who are the only persons in this part of the Continent to be depended on for cannon,) are under contract with the Congress for all the cannon their works can possibly make in a year, and having no other means of carrying the above-mentioned order of Council into execution, the inhabitants of the said town humbly beg leave through you, sir, to represent their case to the honourable the Congress, and pray for an order to Messrs. Hughes, to furnish them with the cannon wanted, out of those engaged for Continental service. They are unacquainted with the terms of Messrs. Hughes contract, but if the price is more than thirty-five pounds, Virginia currency, per ton, the rate our Council have prescribed, they will pay the difference themselves. If the Congress is pleased to indulge them with such an order, the sooner it can be granted the better, as the fortifying the said town will be very advantageous to the trade of great part of Virginia and Maryland, and give considerable encouragement to foreign adventurers, by affording them protection at a good port where they can speedily procure cargoes of country produce.

I beg the favour of an answer as soon as convenience will permit; and am, with much respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

G. MASON,

Chairman of Fairfax County Committee.

Williamsburg, in Council, September 7, 1776.

The Board having considered the petition of the inhabitants of the town of Alexandria, setting forth among other things their defenceless condition, though accessible to ships-of-war under forty or fifty guns, and praying that they might be permitted to purchase at the publick expense sixteen iron Cannon, viz: ten eighteen-pounders, and six nine-pounders, to be mounted on two substantial Batteries which had been lately erected on advantageous situations in that town, and which are now completed, with proper embrasures for Cannon, directly under which the channel of the river runs, so that no ship can pass at much more than a quarter of a mile distance; and that they might also be allowed to purchase in the same manner, two small Forges for heating the nine-pound shot, with a sufficient quantity of Ordnance Stores; and further praying, that out of the two Militia companies now in the said town, there might be formed one Artillery company, to consist of fifty matrosses with proper officers, to be duly exercised at the said Batteries twice a week, and to receive, only when on duty, the same pay with other Artillery companies:

Ordered, That the petitioners be accordingly permitted to purchase the Cannon, Forges, and Ordnance stores aforesaid, taking care not to exceed thirty-five pounds per ton, for the Cannon, including the expense of proving the same, and to procure the same as much lower, and the other articles as cheap, as possible.

The Board do not think themselves authorized to order an Artillery company to be formed, and therefore refer that part of the petition to the consideration of the General Assembly, which will sit probably as soon as the several articles above mentioned can be procured.

CHARLES RUMSEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Elk River, Cecil County, October 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Northern posts leaving this place before the arrival of the Southern, I can't answer any of your directions, as no letter has come to hand.

The company out of my battalion will be ready in two days at most, as I have purchased blankets, guns, and kettles, since which we have received from Mr. Gerrard Hopkins kettles and three tents, very thin.

Your particular directions shall be obeyed by, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

CHARLES RUMSEY.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

AMOS GARRETT TO MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

Swan Creek, October 19, 1776.

SIR: You have on the other side the copy of my last I sent two days ago, with a man to be sent to Baltimore for the stores for Captain Holland's company. The company has had a meeting yesterday, and have concluded to set off for the camp next Wednesday.

On their meeting, their arms has been reviewed; and what are concluded to be carried, and what can be collected, will call for more money than I have got for that purpose. Two of the gentlemen that agrees to assist me being on the inquiry for blankets, &c., Captain Holland has signified to me that to expedite their departure, he thinks it expedient to request the Council of Safety to forward up a further sum for that purpose. Mr. James Hall waits on you, and if it is agreeable, a further sum of one or two hundred pounds may be sent up, which I will account for in the equipment of that company.

Having no Quartermaster to attend them, there must be provision made for their subsistence to where they can be supplied. If you send the money, you will direct how to be employed if more than necessary for the company's expense.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

AMOS GARRETT.

N. B. There are twelve muskets fixed at Mr. Richard Dallam's factory. Please to order if to be taken for this company.

THOMAS WHARTON, JUN., TO COLONEL CADWALLADER.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, October 19, 1776.

SIR: Frequent complaints having been made to this Board that the officers who have received the pay of the privates do withhold their money from them, to the great injury of the service, as it tends to discourage the soldiery and unfit them for duty, and is certainly an unjust, base conduct, beneath the character of a good officer and an honest man, this Board is determined to discourage all such unworthy practices, and to make an example of any officer who shall be found guilty. We therefore request you will make particular inquiry into the conduct of your officers, and report such, if any have withheld the monthly pay from their men; and in future we earnestly recommend to you a strict attention to this matter, so as to prevent complaint of this kind.

By order of the Council:

THOS. WHARTON, JUN., President.

To Lieutenant Colonel Lambert Cadwallader.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, October 19, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This will be handed you by Captain Roche, who has at length finished his business here, and got orders for you to build another ship, as you will see by the letters from the Marine Committee to you.

After I wrote you last Tuesday, I received yours of the 30th ultimo, and desired the clerk of the Secret and Marine Committee to take out from the books the sums of money you have received of each of those Committees. The sum you have received of the Secret Committee is twenty-five thousand dollars; but the clerk was so engaged he could not give me the other account at this time; will try to send it you next week.

I mentioned in the Marine Committee that you were desirous to know whether you were to allow any passenger or seaman on board any of the prizes their adventures, or private property, more than the wages to the seamen agreeable to the resolve of Congress. They informed me they had not given any orders about it, and that it was not in their power to give any orders different from the resolves of Congress, yet it seemed to be the desire of the Committee that such passengers and seamen as behaved themselves decently should be dealt well by, and not stripped of every thing that might be taken from them by the rules of war.

As for news, I have none at present to communicate. We have had no certain accounts from our camp at Harlem, since the 13th. There are some flying accounts, but Captain Roche, as he passes that way, will be able to give you a true account of our affairs there.

A great number of foreigners, especially French officers, are daily almost arriving here, and requesting to be employed in our army, many of whom are well recommended.

Colonel Whipple is not arrived here yet. I shall look for him every day now till I see him, when I shall return home, and, after your example, enjoy the pleasure of residing in my own country in future.

Remember me to all friends, and be assured that I am your affectionate friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

P S. I am much better in health than I was for four or five weeks.

GEORGE TAYLOR TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
Shrewsbury, October 19, 1776

SIR: I herewith send you by the bearer, Captain Smock, six prisoners, which I took out of a schooner which was drove on shore the 14th instant, on the Jersey shore, near where I was stationed to guard the coast. As to particular circumstances, refer you to said Captain Smock. I have given an account of the vessel and cargo to General Mercer, and make no doubt but it came to hand. I have orders from the General to take care of the vessel till further orders. As to the vessel's hull, it lies exposed and likely to be lost the first eastwardly storm. She might, perhaps, be sold to the advantage of the owners or publick, whoever it is that is to have the benefit. Your directions in the above shall be my particular guide. I have also sent one Captain Moore, a gentleman who was on board the schooner when taken; he appears to be a man in distress, therefore I have taken the liberty to send him amongst the rest, as it can't be but very little odds in the expense. Should be obliged to your Honour to pay off the Captain's account of travelling expenses, &c.

I am, with much esteem, your very humble servant,
GEO. TAYLOR.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
[Read 21st October, 1776.]
Perth-Amboy, October 19, 1776.

SIR: General Washington has, by his instructions just now come to hand, directed that some of the Hessian prisoners should be permitted to make their escape for the purpose of distributing the advertisements of Congress among their countrymen in the army. As the prisoners were sent off yesterday, it is probable that Mr. Lodowick, who is entrusted with this, will not overtake them before they have reached Philadelphia. You will then please to determine whether it may not be more eligible to let the Hessians rest a few days, to form an acquaintance with some of their countrymen who have experienced the advantages of free government, and then to exchange, or induce some of them to return to their corps, as having escaped from confinement. I have directed that if any of the Hessian prisoners are willing to join their regiments, and to take over some of the advertisements to show their countrymen, that such men may be immediately ordered to this post in compliance with the General's instructions. But if they have reached Philadelphia, he is to take the sense of Congress in the further prosecution of this affair. What advertisements I had, have been several weeks ago sent over to Staten-Island.

The fleet mentioned in my letter of the 17th, proves to be one hundred and fifty sail, gone up to York. Some more ships appear to be coming in to-day.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
HUGH MERCER.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

Besides the return transmitted to Congress, we have brought off from Staten-Island thirty muskets, four pistols, four hangers, and three bayonets, also one standard of Light-Horse.

HENRY KNOX, Colonel.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM FORT LEE, (LATE FORT CONSTITUTION, BUT NOW ALTERED BY GENERAL ORDERS,) DATED OCTOBER 19, 1776.

Yesterday's affair was honourable to us. Three regiments, Glover's, Reed's, and Shepherd's, of Massachusetts, under Colonel Glover, who commanded the brigade,* were

* October 18, 1776.—The regiment at Westchester Causeway had been relieved by another. The officer on command there this morning sent up an express to General Heath, informing him that the British were opening an embrasure in their work at the end of the causeway, and that he apprehended they intended, under a cannonade from this, to attempt to pass. General Heath ordered one of his aids to gallop his horse to the officer commanding the brigade, near Valentine's, the nearest to Westchester, and order him to form his brigade instantly. Arriving himself by the time the brigade was formed, he ordered the officer to march with the utmost expedition to the head of the causeway, to reinforce the troops there, himself moving on with them. When the troops had advanced to about half the way between the head of the creek and the post at the head of the causeway, another express met him, informing him that the whole British army were in motion, and seemed to be moving towards the pass at the head of the creek. Upon this, the brigade was ordered to halt, the whole to prime and load, and the rear regiment to file off by the left, and march briskly to reinforce the Americans at the pass at the head of the creek. At this instant General Washington came up, and having inquired of General Heath the state of things, ordered him to return immediately, and have his division formed ready for action, and to take such a position as might appear best calculated to oppose the enemy, should they attempt to land another body of troops on Morrisania, which he thought not improbable. General Heath immediately obeyed the order.

The wind was now fresh at southwest. The British crossed to the other side of Frog's Neck, embarked on board their boats, crossed over the cove, landed on Pell's Neck, and moved briskly upwards. Three or four of the American regiments advanced towards them, and took a good position behind a stone fence. When the British had advanced sufficiently near, they gave them a pretty close fire, which checked them, and even obliged them to fall back; but being immediately supported, they returned vigorously to the charge. The action was sharp for a short time, but the Americans were soon obliged to give way to superior force. Shepard's, Reed's, Baldwin's, and Glover's regiments had the principal share in this action. The Americans had between thirty and forty men killed and wounded; among the latter, Colonel Shepard in the throat, not mortally, although the ball came well-nigh effecting instant death. The loss of the British was not known, but must have been considerable. They advanced almost to New-Rochelle, and halted. The American army extended its left.

A number of boats went down towards New-York. It now became necessary immediately to quit the position in the neighbourhood of King's Bridge, the British being in the rear of the left of our army; and it is not a little unaccountable that they did not attempt to stretch themselves across to the Hudson, which might have been done with great ease. They only moved higher up on the other side of the little rivulet Brunx, which was generally fordable. The White-Plains were fixed upon for the next position of the American army. A strong garrison was to be left at Fort Washington, and General Heath was to leave one of his regiments to garrison Fort Independence.—Heath.

advanced under cover to receive the enemy, marching out towards the country. Colonel Shepard was well covered under a wall, and at thirty or forty yards gave their Grenadiers and Infantry an unexpected heavy fire, then a second and third, which broke the enemy so much that they ran away as fast as they could, in confusion. They returned with field-pieces and outflanked our party, which occasioned our people to retreat to a short distance, where they rallied well and kept their ground against their cannonade and numbers. Our men behaved with remarkable spirit and coolness, and I think are in a good way to do great things. We lost a few, thirty or forty killed and wounded. Two deserters from the enemy say they lost one thousand, but really I have the best opinions to believe they lost one hundred and fifty or upwards, as our men fired with great coolness at a good distance. They are trying to surround us. It won't be easy; and I am mistaken if they don't meet some severe rubbers.

HENRY WISNER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Peekskill, October 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have been so unfortunate as not to receive a line from you since we left Fishkill. Dikeman was here this morning, said he had a letter for us, but Colonel Cortlandt and myself were both out, and he took the letter with him. Cergeer was also here, said he had a letter for us, but had lost it. Mr. Machin is here. We have, with him, been taking a further view of the adjacent hills. He is fully of opinion with us that the building any fortifications in this part of the country would be labour badly spent, and worse than lost.

I have been at Fort Montgomery and at Red-Hook. If two eighteen or twenty-four pounders were placed at Red-Hook I believe the British ships might be kept from anchoring in Peekskill Bay, and by that means the navigation to Peekskill might be kept open; and in my opinion unless that can be done, the fort at Red-Hook had better never been built. However, I believe it would be right to try to get them. There is several vessels at Fort Constitution laden with boards, brick, lime, &c., for the use of the army. They might very safely be brought down, while the winds hold northwardly, but they will not come without your advice.

Colonel Cortlandt is now at Croton, and has been so much engaged that he has not had time to join me in any letter yet. Yesterday the King's ships hoisted sail and came up several miles, but the wind sprang up to the northwest, and they came to below Verplanck's.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

HENRY WISNER.

To Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of Convention.

ROBERT HODGE TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Fishkill Landing, October 19, 1776.

SIR: The evening before last, when we had the pleasure of your company, through mistake you carried away the key of one of the rooms of the store. By sending said key with the gentleman who will deliver this to you, it will oblige Mrs. Bush. I am, sir, your most humble servant,

ROBERT HODGE.

To John McKesson, Esq., Secretary to the Convention, at Fishkill.

NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Committee of Safety, Fishkill, October 19, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Committee of Safety of the State of New-York to transmit the enclosed copy of a letter this moment received from Major-General Schuyler, at Ticonderoga. You will please to communicate the same to Congress.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776, six o'clock, afternoon.

SIR: By letters from Generals Gates and Arnold, I am advised of the total destruction of our fleet on Lake Champlain, and that it is beyond doubt that the enemy mean to attack our army at Ticonderoga. I have written to General Ten Broeck to march up the Militia under his command, and I have also applied for that of the neighbouring States. General Gates wished to be sustained by an army of ten or twelve thousand men. It is certainly of the highest importance that all the Militia that can be spared should march up without delay, either to support General Gates, if there should be time, or to cover his retreat should he be reduced to the necessity of quitting his ground; and I must therefore entreat your aid. Permit me to suggest that I believe the Convention's moving to Albany would be attended with good consequences.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

PHILIP SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Abraham Yates, Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

ABRM. LOTT TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Beverwyck, October 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: It is with pain that I find myself under a necessity of again addressing instead of attending you. But when I consider that I have to do with a respectable body, who will do me the justice to believe that want of time, and not want of inclination, has prevented my waiting on them, I find myself in some measure relieved.

The truth is I have been assiduously employed in preparing my accounts, ever since I had the honour to write you by Mr. Campbell, and have now got them in such a train that (barring interruption by visitors drove from the city, which frequently happens since its evacuation, and by indisposition) I hope to be able to set out in about ten days. Mr. Morris, who I expect will be the bearer of this, will, I trust, convince you I do not mean to make any unnecessary delay, but that I will attend as soon as in my power; which I hope you will believe, as well as that I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

ABRM. LOTT.

To the honourable Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York.

THE COUNTY COMMITTEE FOR CHARLOTTE.

Skeensborough, October 19, 1776.

Resolved, That the Delegates of this County be requested to desire the Convention of this State to advance on loan the sum of two hundred Pounds, in order to defray the contingent expenses in this County. And if the request is complied with, any of the Delegates giving their receipt to the Treasurer with this resolution, it shall be acknowledged by this Committee a sufficient voucher for the same; and when it shall be thought proper (by the Convention or future Legislature of this State) that the money shall be repaid, this Committee will cheerfully coöperate with the same.

Resolved, That the Chairman of this Committee write a letter to William Duer and Alexander Webster, Esqrs., to remit the aforesaid sum of two hundred Pounds to this County with all convenient speed.

By order:

JNO. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

Attest:

JOHN GIBSON, Clerk.

H. GLEN TO ELISHA AVERY.

Schenectady, October 19, 1776.

SIR: In your last you mentioned that the post at the German Flats was without a Commissary, and that one Mr. Post was recommended to you as a proper person: should I think him a fit person, I might inform him with the contents. Accordingly I wrote him he might have that post should he think proper. I have received his answer, wherein he acquaints me he will accept of that post. I look upon him as a proper person. He wants instructions, some quires of paper for his books, and he wants to know his wages per day, and how many rations he will be allowed. Please to send his instructions as soon as possible, and paper to my care, and I shall immediately forward it to him. His name is John Post.

As I expect my batteaus down from Fort Schuyler a Monday evening, and have no flour ready to load them, but there is sufficient to be had, but the merchants seem not willing to part with it at present, I will be glad to know to-morrow or day after what the Albany market price is. As I have no pork but a very little for the batteau-men, and as I expect Colonel Dayton's regiment down here a-Monday, which is going to Fort George, I will be under the necessity of buying a few head of cattle.

I am your most humble servant,
H. GLEN.
To Elisha Avery, Esq., D. C. General, Albany.

J. BALDWIN TO GENERAL GATES.

October 19, 1776.

SIR: I have viewed the ground mentioned by Colonel Willard, and think, as they are commanded by several neighbouring grounds, that it cannot be fortified to advantage, but would recommend taking post on the hill north of the Great Bridge, if your Honour can spare about five hundred brave men to occupy that ground, which I think may be done to great advantage.

I have ordered the block-house at the mill to be put in the best defence, which is now doing. I would recommend the placing two or three small ship guns in the block-house.

One hundred men are filling up the Crown-Point road three miles, from Colonel Willard's and Brewer's regiments.

I would also recommend the getting eighteen dozen poles twelve feet long, to be sharpened and placed in the Jersey redoubt for the present as spears.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

J. BALDWIN, Engineer.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO THE COMMANDING OFFICER AT BOSTON.

New-Haven, October 19, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed act of the State of Connecticut shows the subject of my present application for your friendly assistance for the relief of Colonel Ethan Allen and eighteen other prisoners with him at Halifax. You will feel for their distresses, and I am earnestly to request your kind interposition to assist Mr. Levi Allen, the bearer, to procure the release of his brother and the rest of those unhappy sufferers with the Colonel, or at least to render them your best help.

I am, with sentiments of esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Commanding Officer, Boston.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, October 19, 1776.

SIR: Your letter requesting an account of the prisoners in this State I have duly received, and ordered the Sheriffs of the several Counties to make return to me of the number of prisoners in their respective Counties, and of their different stations, which return has not been yet made.

I also wrote immediately to Governour Trumbull, of Connecticut, to know where their prisoners were to assemble, that they might both go together, but have had no answer, but shall endeavour to forward them when I shall receive information from him. Since which I have received a letter from the Captain of the Syren frigate, off Block-Island, that he had a number of prisoners on board, taken in merchant ships, whom he has orders from Lord Howe to exchange for others of equal stations.

I inform your Excellency that a prize ship is brought in here, having a quantity of blankets, some coarse woollen goods, linens, and shoes, which the owners of the armed vessel who took her are desirous may be purchased for the use of the army; and in order that those goods may not be scattered, they propose that they be all put up in one lot together, and no stranger be allowed to bid them off, unless he shall produce orders from you or the Congress that he is making purchase of them for the army.

I should be glad, if your Excellency should think proper, that you would appoint somebody immediately to purchase the same. If you should make any appointment for that purpose here, I would just inform that Messrs. Clark & Nightingale, Mr. John Brown and myself, are all interested in the privateer, and therefore not so suitable for such appointment as others. Mr. Daniel Tillinghast here is the Continental agent, and I believe a good man.

I am, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN BRADFORD.

Newport, October 19, 1776.

SIR: I understand by Captain Jones, that there is some junk and sails on board the prize ship, which he sent into Bedford, and as them articles are much wanted on board several of the Continental vessels in this port, should be glad you would send all those articles, more than barely wanted for the ship, by the first opportunity to this place to me; or, in my absence, to Mr. John Manley, deputy agent here, and by so doing you will forward the service.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To John Bradford, Esq., Agent for the Massachusetts, or in his absence, to his Deputy at Bedford.

NATHAN RUMSEY TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

Nantes, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: An ardour for the success of the present Continental cause will, I doubt not, excuse a seeming impropriety in my addressing a body with the members of whom I have the honour of claiming little or no acquaintance.

I am here during the war, and my connection with Mr. Penet (for whose character I refer you, gentlemen, to the Secret Committee of Congress) influences me to request that preference in your business which we have already been honoured with from the Secret Committee of Congress.

Much pains have been taken to obtain a possibility of doing the American business from hence, which I have the satisfaction of informing you have met with such success as renders it in our power to supply the Continent with any article they please.

The articles which may be imported to advantage from hence are Vitrey linens fit for coarse shirting or sails, coarse cloths for soldiers, or negroes, clothing, and blankets, with all kind of military articles.

Letters directed to Penet & Rumsey, to the care of Mr. John Grnel, of this city, Messrs. Remless De Basmazier and Raimboux, merchants in Bordeaux, or Monsieur Stephen Cattraleu, of Marseilles, will be carefully forwarded.

With the utmost respect, I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

NATHAN RUMSEY.

To the respectable Members of the Convention for the Province of Maryland.

VAN BIBBER AND HARRISON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

St. Pierre, Martinique, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Our last respects to you were by Captain Martin, who sailed from this place the 11th current with a valuable cargo. Since then your favours of the 12th September have come safe to hand per the Molly, Captain Conway. His cargo, though a very proper one, we are sorry to acquaint, has come to a most wretched market. Fifty-seven shillings per barrel for his flour, and thirty-six for his bread, is the most we have been able to obtain, and his tobacco is yet unsold. Since disposing of this flour, a cargo of Philadelphia superfine has been sold for fifty-three shillings. This fall has been occasioned by the immense quantities that have arrived and continue to arrive from France, on a supposition that it would be a scarce article here. We fear there will be no change for it till towards the middle of the winter and spring, when we imagine it will begin to advance again, as in all probability the exportations from France will cease when it is known how badly their speculations must turn out; and plenty as flour is, we know of nothing that can be sent from Maryland that will turn to a better account; so surprisingly are we glutted with tobacco and all kinds of provisions.

We almost despair of supplying you with the large quantities of woollens and salt that you want; they are scarce and command ready cash; but we shall do our best.

As vessels with you are difficult to procure, and markets here very low, we fear you cannot easily remit us money sufficient for the extensive engagements we have and are to enter into. We would therefore beg leave to propose a method which we think may be employed with more success and facility than any other at present. It is, if possible, to get a boat or two out from South-Carolina with indigo. One pilot boat ballasted with that article would yield more money here than any three or four brigs with flour and tobacco. It is constantly worth from six shillings to twelve shillings per pound, (according to quality,) and is the only article of our exports that can be shipped from hence to France; and the risk of getting it here will be trifling, as it may be sent in such small fast-sailing vessels.

A part of Captain Martin's tobacco has been sold in Statia at forty-two shillings per hundred weight, and yesterday we shipped the remainder for that place.

We hope to despatch Conway in eight or ten days with some woollens, muskets, duck, &c.

And we are, &c.,

VAN BIBBER & HARRISON.

PETER T. CURTENIUS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This serves to inform you that I have purchased at this place for the use of the New-York troops, 1,109 pair buck-skin breeches; 1,608 pair milled stockings; 85 felt hats; 1,939 check shirts; 1,928 white shirts. All which I have had packed and stored in this city. I would have forwarded them (agreeable to a resolve of Congress of the 25th September) to Head-Quarters, if we had not received an account yesterday that our army was going to retreat from New-York Island, and therefore thought it most prudent to leave the goods here, until I know where Head-Quarters will be fixed.

Besides the above, I have purchased here linen enough to make about two thousand shirts more, which will be made in about five weeks. At Brunswick I have got about four hundred pair of shoes ready to deliver, and have engaged from different shoemakers in the Jerseys about one thousand pair more, which will be ready by Christmas.

At Tappan I have about one hundred pair leather breeches, and at Hackensacks about one hundred pair more, and two hundred and thirteen ready-dressed deer-skins; also about one hundred and sixty felt hats, two hundred rifle frocks, ninety pair of shoes, and about four hundred shirts. As to cloth and blankets, I have not been able to get any, because the Congress secure all the woollens that come in here, and they have given orders to persons in every seaport town on the Continent to do the same; all which will be sent to the Quartermaster-General at Head-Quarters, where no doubt our troops will get their share. I shall endeavour to get all I can of the clothing, which are still deficient; but am afraid I shall fall much short in procuring the whole quantity of shoes, stockings, felt hats, and leather breeches, for which you were pleased to give me orders to purchase, they being very scarce this way, owing to the number of purchasers here. Would it not be proper to give the Committees in each county and town orders to purchase as many of these articles as they could get, it being impossible for one man in a State to get the whole, as times are now circumstanced, particularly in our State?

I take the liberty to return the resolve of the Convention authorizing me to borrow £2,000, on the credit of which I have not been able to get more than £3,200. This sum came vastly short to pay for the goods I had bought, and therefore have been obliged to advance of my own cash the sum of £3,844 6d., and I owe £10,651 6s. 1d. more; together amounts to £14,495 6s. 7d., say £15,000, as some accounts are not come in yet; which sum should be glad the Convention would be pleased to send by Mr. Dykeman to my house at Paramus, next to Mr. Hopper's, (for which place I set out to-morrow,) as soon as possible, and I must beg that the Convention would not disappoint me, for I am almost exhausted, and people calling on me for money daily, which is very disagreeable. Our Convention money will not pass here; therefore should be glad to have it in Continental money, of which Mr. Livingston tells me there has been lately sent from here to your Treasury one hundred thousand dollars.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER T. CURTENIUS.

I shall be at Paramus the latter end of this week.

P. S. We have just now an account come that the prize with woollens worth thirty-seven thousand pounds sterling is safe arrived at Falmouth; also the rich Turkey ship. This will make a good parcel of coats. There is also arrived a ship from France at Rhode-Island, with six thousand yards of cloth, and about five hundred blankets.

COLONEL GRIFFIN TO RICHARD PETERS.

Perth-Amboy, October 20, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you will find a general return of the army in Jersey, commanded by General Mercer. I must request the favour of you to transmit me by the first opportunity, the late resolve of Congress relative to the additional pay of the officers, or please inform me whether it takes place from the time of the ordinance passing; whether the Staff, or what part of it, is affected by it. It seems the Adjutants have orders to increase their rations, and of course their pay; in short, all the officers are making out their pay rolls at an advance of fifty per cent. Your complying with this request, may be of service to the States, and will much oblige your most obedient,

SAMUEL GRIFFIN, D. A. G.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of War, at Philadelphia.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON, DATED NEW-YORK, OCTOBER 20, 1776.

No doubt but before you receive this, you'll be informed of the King's troops being in possession of New-York, to the great satisfaction of the loyal part of its inhabitants, who have for a long time past suffered every hardship from a set of tyrants that is possible to be conceived; however, they are now rewarded who have withstood the traitors and remained firm to their King. The Howes do all that is possible to alleviate the sufferings of a persecuted people, who, rather than turn Rebels, have despised death and ruin; and if it had not pleased God to send us relief, dreadful would have been the consequence to every person that dared to be honest; however, we are now protected in our lives and properties, and some thousands have joined the King's troops; and every time they attack the Rebels they rout them with great loss; they fly before our victorious army on every onset; and I don't doubt but in a very little time this daring rebellion will be crushed. It would before now have been the case, had not the Americans been fed with hopes from the Court of France. But now let France or any other Power dare to assist them, we are prepared, and don't at all fear but we shall be able to give them a proper reception. It is resolved to attack Washington directly. Proper dispositions are making for that purpose; and I hope by the next letter to give you an account of an end being put to a Government that have dared to call themselves the Independent States of America. Almost all the New-Yorkers have returned to their allegiance, and there is not a doubt but the other Colonies will do the same when they dare declare themselves, and be properly supported by Government.

There is a broad R put upon every door in New-York that is disaffected to Government, and examples will be made of its inhabitants; on the other hand, every person that is well affected to Government, finds protection.

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Camp at Fort Lee, (lately Fort Constitution,) }
October 20, 1776. }

SIR: I was at Head-Quarters near King's Bridge with his Excellency General Washington last night, and on leaving him was desired to send by express, to acquaint you that the army there are in great want of a large supply of cartridges, which no person can be spared to make; therefore he requests that you will order all that are now made up at Philadelphia, to be sent forward in light wagons that can travel with great despatch, as they are really very much wanted; and as none can be made up here, that persons be employed at Philadelphia to continue at that business to furnish a full supply for the army.

Mr. Commissary Lowry is in great want of a supply of salt, which he begs may be sent to Trenton to enable him to furnish provisions for the army at King's Bridge, which are much wanted, and the supplies from Connecticut may be shortly cut off; and I have great reason to apprehend the evil will soon take place, if not wholly, in part. The article of salt is essentially necessary and must be procured if possible. Fresh provisions cannot be passed over without great difficulty, and the state of health of the troops from a taxed habit, requires a supply of salt. Mr. Lowry mentions the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania having a quantity.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Mount Washington, October 20, 1776.

DEAR MR. DUER: General Washington has directed me to form a magazine somewhere in your neighbourhood, but as he is not acquainted with your cherche de payé, he has directed me to apply to you, and take your opinion on the subject. Let me entreat you to consult Mr. Livingston, and some other friends on that head, and give me your opinion by the bearer, who will wait your answer to this letter.

In the mean time, please to procure thirty thousand bushels of grain, (Indian corn and oats in equal proportion,) one thousand tons of English hay, and five hundred tons of rye-straw, and order them to be deposited in such places as you may think, after consulting Mr. Livingston, most likely to answer our wants. The General thinks that the magazines should be remote from the North River.

Our army must regulate their movements by those of the enemy. We believe they have some design against the White-Plains, as they have been checked at East-Chester, and cannot draw their line across the isthmus, opposite to East-Chester, without risking the loss of great part of their army. I mentioned this for your direction, as it will be imprudent to form a magazine so near to us as the White-Plains.

I want immediately one hundred good teams of horses or oxen each, and request you to produce them by such means as are most expeditious. An application to your honourable Convention will, in my opinion, answer the purpose. I will allow such price as you may judge reasonable, and let me likewise entreat you to have the teams put under the direction of ten conductors, active, prudent men, who will keep the drivers and horses in good order, each conductor to have charge of ten teams. The horses or oxen to be branded with the letters C. A. I mean to purchase the teams. If they cannot be purchased, you may hire them at the most reasonable rates.

In great haste, I am yours, attached,

THOS. MIFFLIN, JUN.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read, October 21, 1776.]

King's Bridge, October 20, 1776, half-after one o'clock, p. m.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency to transmit to you the enclosed copies of despatches which just now came to hand, and which contain intelligence of the most interesting and important nature respecting our affairs in the Northern department. His Excellency would have wrote himself, but was going to our several posts when the express arrived.

The enemy are pursuing with great industry their plan of penetrating the country from the Sound, and of forming a line in our rear. They are now extended from Frog's Point to New-Rochelle, from whence, it is generally conjectured, they mean to take their route by way of the White-Plains, and from thence to draw a line to the North River. We on our part have drawn our whole force, except the regiments intended to garrison Fort Washington, from the Island of New-York, and have possessed ourselves of the heights, passes, and advantageous grounds between New-Rochelle, where the van of their army now lies, and the North River. They will, in all probability, attempt to effect their purpose by moving higher up; if they do, our forces will move accordingly, it being a principal object to prevent their outflanking us. On Friday one of their advanced parties, near East-Chester, fell in with part of Colonel Glover's brigade, and a smart and close skirmish ensued, in which I have the pleasure to inform you our men behaved with great coolness and intrepidity, and drove the enemy back to their main body.

I have the honour to be, in haste, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROB'T H. HARRISON.

Saratoga, October 16, 1776, six o'clock afternoon.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you have copies of letters from Generals Gates and Arnold, announcing the total destruction of our fleet on Lake Champlain. I shall write to every State nearest me to march up their Militia to support our army, as the enemy will doubtless very soon attack it, and do every thing in my power to prevent their penetrating into the country, should our army be obliged to give way, which I have good hopes will not be the case.

I am, dear sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To General Washington.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, King's Bridge, October 20, 1776.

SIR: This is designed to inform you of our alarming situation on account of the state of our provisions. From the last intelligence I have been able to obtain, there are not more than fifteen hundred barrels of flour here and at our posts on the Island of New-York, (including three hundred that came from the Jerseys last night,) and about two hundred barrels of pork; nor do I learn that there are many, or but very few, live cattle collected at any place within the neighbourhood. As the passage across the North River is precarious, and much, if not entirely, in the enemy's power, but little or no dependence should be had in supplies from that quarter. I must therefore request and entreat your every possible exertion to have large quantities of provisions carried to the interior parts of the country with the utmost expedition, out of the reach of the enemy, who are trying to penetrate from the Sound, and to form a line in our rear, from whence proper supplies may be immediately drawn for the subsistence of our troops. If this is not done, I fear, I am certain that the fatal consequences attending on mutiny and plunder must ensue; indeed, the latter will be authorized by necessity. I cannot undertake to point out the particular places where stock should be drove to; but it is absolutely necessary that large quantities should be kept in our rear, to be killed or moved, as occasion may require. If the enemy advance from the Sound, so must we. They must never be allowed, if it is possible to avoid it, to get above us, and possess themselves of the upper country. As soon as I heard that they had landed at Frog's Point, and that they had digested a plan of getting into our rear, I gave orders that the provisions and other stores should be removed from Norwalk, &c., into the country, to the White-Plains, as the first and most convenient stage: whether they have, I have no certain information. In short, sir, I beg that you will have supplies immediately in our rear, to be drawn or moved back, as circumstances may be, or the most fatal and alarming consequences to this army and the liberties of America may, and will in all probability, follow. You must not stop on account of expense, nor to collect large quantities before they are sent off. Ten in a drove will be of material consequence. I have ordered a respectable force for the protection of the provisions now at the Plains.

I am, &c.

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Jos. Trumbull, Commissary-General Provisions:

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, King's Bridge, October 20, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am to acknowledge the receipt of your two favours of the 16th and 17th, and Mr. McKesson's of the 14th. We have been so much upon the move for some days past, that I had it not in my power to sit down to write before. To be obliged to follow an enemy whose route is a secret to us, is not a little distressing, especially as we have not wagons sufficient to transport our baggage and provision. The latter must be particularly attended to, or the army must perish. Upon a survey of our stores, we find we are not so fully stocked as we could wish. Flour is what is most likely to be wanted. His Excellency therefore calls upon your Convention in the most pressing manner, and begs you will set every engine at work to send down every barrel you can procure towards the army, always ordering the persons who conduct the wagons to inquire how far, and upon what roads, the enemy are advanced, lest they fall into their hands.

All the cattle that can be collected you will please to have drove down, using the same precautions when they come near the advanced posts. The General has given orders for the removal of all our magazines from the Sound; but the enemy have such an advantage by the command of the water, that possibly some may be intercepted; it therefore behooves us to double our diligence in procuring supplies from every quarter that remains open. The Commissary-General is sent for from the eastward; his presence will be of great service; but, in the mean time, great dependence must be put upon the exertions of all our friends in your quarter.

The Quartermaster-General has sent up agents who will give directions concerning the brig and sloop at the Fish-kill Upper Landing. And the General desires that Mr. Philips would not send down the powder from his mill, but keep it in some secure place till further orders. This is in answer to Mr. McKesson's letter of the 14th. Our hurry will excuse my not writing to him particularly.

I enclose you a letter from Colonel Denny, by which it appears that he is vigilant in watching the motions of the men-of-war; but the General will, notwithstanding, give him a hint of what you say.

The enemy's van is at New-Rochelle; we continue to outflank them, and hope will succeed. We have had one little skirmish, in which our troops behaved amazingly well.

Arnold has certainly been worsted on the lake, but it is no wonder, considering the difference of strength; but the wonder is, that we should have been so misinformed as to the naval force of the enemy. I am afraid our scouts make the news they bring home.

You cannot expect the regular information I have heretofore given you; but remember no news is good news. You shall always have any thing remarkably good or bad: it is no time to stand upon trifling matters.

I am, dear sir, sincerely yours,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

The powder had got to the bridge last Saturday week; two tons at the mill.

To William Duer, Esq.

COURTS-MARTIAL.

At a Brigade Court-Martial, ordered by Brigadier-General McDougall, for the trial of Deserters and offences not capital:

Lieutenant-Colonel Ware, President.

Members:

Captain Hull ,	Lieutenant Strong ,
Captain Pelton ,	Lieutenant Grant ,
Captain Gunby ,	Lieutenant Sanford ,
Lieutenant Hues ,	Lieutenant Gaither ,
Lieutenant Jackson ,	Lieutenant Neale ,
Lieutenant Roxburg ,	Ensign Livingston .

Ensign Fairly, of the late Colonel McDougall's regiment, brought before the Court, and accused of taking the fatigue-men off the fatigue, contrary to general orders. The prisoner, being arraigned on the above complaint, pleads and confesses that he marched the fatigue-men off contrary to general orders, but that it was the next morning after the orders were issued, and he had not heard them; and that he was under the command of Lieutenant Kidd, and it was by his order that the men marched off.

Evidence Adjutant Vanhook informs the Court that he did not that evening read the orders to the regiment, as they came very late. The next morning, he says, he mentioned the orders to the men, but does not know that Ensign Fairly was present; and that the Orderly-Sergeant of that company has not an orderly-book, and the officers no paper to furnish their Sergeants with.

The Court, being cleared, are of opinion that Ensign Fairly's justification is sufficient, and acquit him of the charge alleged against him.

Lieutenant Kidd, of late Smallwood's regiment, brought before the Court, and accused of taking the fatigue-men off fatigue, contrary to general orders. The prisoner, being arraigned on the above complaint, pleads guilty, but says he was not acquainted with the orders.

Lieutenant Cole, Engineer, deposeth: As soon as Lieutenant Kidd had marched his men to the fort, he drew an order for the rum, and paraded them to march home. I then ordered him to go to work with his men, and told him 'twas contrary to general orders to go home to breakfast, and if he did go home he would report him. He informs that he had occasion to be absent about fifteen minutes, and when he returned Lieutenant Kidd had his party paraded, and marched them off, and did not return till after eleven o'clock, and before twelve he marched off to return his tools.

Captain Woolford deposeth: That he was that day on fatigue, and saw Lieutenant Kidd marching off to return his tools; that he immediately went and ordered him back; he answered that it rained, and his men should not work. The Captain then says that he informed him the rain was very trifling, and, as he was under his command, he should return; with which he complied. That at one o'clock the Captain dismissed the party for dinner, and Lieutenant Kidd did not return in the afternoon.

Lieutenant Kidd pleads that he was sick, and unable to go in the afternoon.

The Court, being cleared, are of opinion that the prisoner ought to be dismissed from the service for his offence.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ware, President.

Members:

Captain Hull ,	Lieutenant Roxburg ,
Captain Pelton ,	Lieutenant Grant ,

Captain Cornelius Hardenbergh, of Colonel Ritzema's regiment, under an arrest, brought before the Court, and charged by Lieutenant Lownsbury with defrauding his men. The prisoner, being arraigned on the above complaints, pleads "Not Guilty."

Lieutenant Lownsbury, on oath, deposeth: That about the 22d of April, when Captain Hardenbergh was paying off his men in Kingstown, I informed him that he did not pay them the whole of their subsistence and wages. He informed me he would rectify it after he came to New-York. After the company came to New-York, I repeatedly desired him to settle with the men for what he had not paid them. The Captain informed me that he would not do it. I informed him I must report him; he answered that I might do it as soon as I pleased. I was present when John Freer applied to the Captain for what was due when he was paid at Kingstown; the Captain answered him that he would not pay him, and he might get it if he could.

Lieutenant Newkerk on oath deposeth: That at Kingstown, Daniel Mowers, a soldier in said company, applied for his wages. Lieutenant Lownsbury being present, told him he would not receive any unless he received the whole. The Captain replied, he had paid all the men in that way, and if there was any mistake he would rectify it when he came to New-York. After the company came to New-York, he was repeatedly applied to, to settle those accounts; but he never has settled them, and I heard him at one time absolutely refuse. I was present when John Freer demanded, at New-York, what was due at Kingstown. The Captain answered, that he would not pay him, and he might get it as he could. He further informs, that Lieutenant Lownsbury had advanced money to some of the soldiers; and, after the Captain drew the money for the men, he refused to pay the orders.

The Court, being cleared, are of opinion that, by the evidence, and by comparing his pay abstracts with the receipts taken from his men, from the date of their enlistment to the 10th of April, that he has defrauded his men of a considerable sum, and are of opinion that he shall be cashiered, and deemed unfit for an officer; and that his crime, place of abode, and punishment, be published in the newspapers in and about the camp, and the Colony from which the offender came, as expressed in the second and fourth additional articles of war.

FRANS. WARE, President.

ELISHA AVERY TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

GENTLEMEN: The immediate necessity there is for flour to supply the forces of the United States in the Northern department at this critical juncture, they being in danger of being soon attacked by the enemy, and not being supplied but for a short time, and a reinforcement daily going to their assistance, which will greatly add to the consumption of that article, together with the present scarcity in this city, induces me to request your interposition and aid in procuring a supply for the above purpose. Being informed that the greatest part of the flour upon both sides of Hudson's river is purchased up by contractors, by order of your honourable body, by which means the persons I have sent out on that business, have not been able to procure but a small quantity. I must therefore entreat you to take the matter into consideration, and grant me such assistance as is in your power and the exigency of the case requires, and must humbly request that you will order two thousand barrels flour sent up to this place as soon as possible; otherwise the army will be cut short, and perhaps the consequences will be fatal.

I am, with due submission, your Honours' most obedient and most humble servant,

ELISHA AVERY, Deputy Commissary-General.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York.

Albany Committee Chamber, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We join in the Commissary's request, and beg you will send forward with all despatch, if not the whole quantity, as much as can be spared for this department. By order:

JOHN BARCLAY, Chairman pro tem.

To the Convention of the State of New-York.

GENERAL WILKINSON TO GENERAL ST. CLAIR.

Albany, October 20, 1776.

I should think myself inexcusable, my dear General, for not writing you earlier, if I did not render a sufficient apology for my conduct, by assuring you that such has been the severity of my disease since I left Ty, that I have not been able to govern my fingers till within these few days. I have been here three weeks, during two of which I had a fever tacked to me, which prostrated me without intermission. It is at last, however, subdued, and has left me a pretty good appetite; but as I recover very slowly here, I purpose moving out of town to Kenter-Hook, a situation from which I am promised great things. The Lord grant it may soon enable me to join you.

General Washington has in person lately dislodged a considerable number of the enemy, who had landed on a place called Frogg Point; further particulars have not yet reached town. Lee is commanding the lines during his absence. It is said the General has brought six thousand Southern troops with him, though it is mere report.

The vessels which have passed the chevaux-de-frise are two forty-gun ships, and a number of tenders. They vary their station, though for the most part, they remain in Toppon sea or bay. They have picked up several Albany sloops, and greatly harass the rest.

If I get well soon, I shall bring up such things as will help to render the winter comfortable, but if my disorder is spun out to any length, my cash will be exhausted.

I am, my dear General, with respect and affection, your ready friend and servant,

JAMES WILKINSON.

Pray write me. Mr. Avery, if you'll address to his care, will see the letter conveyed to me with safety. J. W.

COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 20, 1776.

SIR: Having been appointed by Congress as a Committee to examine into and transact certain matters relative to the army in the Northern department, and having spent several days with General Schuyler, at Albany and this place, in execution of part of our commission, we were about to proceed to Ticonderoga; but being informed by the General of the great probability of our army being now attacked by the enemy, or that such an event might be hourly expected, we have concluded to wait here until we shall have the pleasure of hearing from you. If the enemy have not yet made their attack, and you think it probable that we may be able to reach Ticonderoga, and have an opportunity of conversing with you and the other principal officers of your army, and to inspect into its present state before that event may happen, we shall immediately, upon being advised by you, proceed on our journey.

With great respect, we are, sir, your most obedient and very humble servants,

RICH'D STOCKTON,
GEO. CLYMER.

To General Gates.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 20, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: A Committee from the Convention of this State are just arrived here, and have brought me sundry resolutions of Congress, of which enclose you a copy. They are so well calculated to encourage the soldiers to enlist that I send this by express to you. I am in hopes that when the soldiers know that they are to have the clothing gratis, besides the bounty of twenty dollars by the former resolution, that they will not hesitate to continue in the service of their country. You will therefore please to publish them. I am very anxious to hear from you.

The Militia are coming up, and as they will be in a very disagreeable situation for want of shelter, the sooner they can be discharged the better. If, therefore, there should happily prove no occasion to detain them, you will advise me thereof, and send express through Skenesborough to those from the Massachusetts, &c.

I am, dear General, with every friendly wish, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. General Gates.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, October 20, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of the 17th instant, and according to your orders have sent Mr. Langdon and Richard Ludlow, the latter of which is Major Skene's overseer, together with Robert Gordon, William Hutton, Andrew Stevenson, Benonia Pendock, and George Boyle, to Litchfield, (the last five, inhabitants of this place,) and all convicted before the Committee of being enemies to the common cause.

I have sent you nine bushels and three pecks of corn; as for oats, the inhabitants have none thrashed. New corn, I can buy enough in the ear. They say they have no time to shell it. If the General pleases to have such, a line is sufficient, and I will do my endeavour.

According to your orders I send you a stallion and two mares of Major Skeene's, which is all that is broke. There is several breeding mares, and colts, and some young horses. They say all their riding horses was stole last fall. There has been a great number of riding horses on the ground, but they are all horses that was left here by the New-England officers.

The small vessel is loaded with boards; and expect ten batteaus down with boards this day, and shall forward them to-morrow. Our Commissary has left us before I came to this place, and has gone to Albany and has not as yet returned, so that we are very bad off for want of a Commissary.

I am, dear General, yours,

CORN'S WYNKOOP.

P. S. Candlewick is an article that is immediately wanted at this place.

GENERAL WILLIAM MAXWELL TO GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

Ticonderoga, October 20, 1776.

SIR: I heartily congratulate you on the honourable promotion you have had, viz: to be the first Governour of the free State of New-Jersey. As it is a plant you have had a great share in raising and pruning, I wish you sincerely a long and happy enjoyment of the fruits of your labour.

I will try to give you some account of our affairs here at present, in a private way. You must have heard that a few days ago we had a fine fleet and tolerably good army, but General Arnold, our evil genius to the north, has, with a good deal of industry, got us clear of all our fine fleet, only five of the most indifferent of them, one row-galley excepted; and he has managed his point so well with the old man, the General, that he has got his thanks for his good services. Our fleet, by all impartial accounts, was much the strongest; but he suffered himself to be surrounded between an island and the main land, where the enemy landed their men on both places, and annoyed our men from both places more than from their vessels; but still our people repelled them with ease the first afternoon. In the night he gave orders to every vessel to make the best of their way, by which they became an easy prey, beat by one, twos, and threes, and ran them on shore, or destroyed them all; but one row-galley fell into their hands. This was a pretty piece of admiralship, after going to their doors almost, and bantering them for two months or more, contrary to the opinion of all the army. Had we our fleet here, we would give ourselves but little concern about the enemy.

If they do come and attack us, as is generally thought, we have no more opinion of his abilities by land than water. I am something of opinion they will not come, but be contented for this time, as they have done more than they had any reason to expect.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
WM. MAXWELL.

J. TRUMBULL TO THE COMMITTEE AT BENNINGTON.

Ticonderoga, Head-Quarters, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The late success of the enemies of American liberty on this lake, renders it probable, I might say certain, that this post will very soon be attacked. In that case, as the enemy may perhaps attempt a blockade rather than an immediate attack on our lines, a large supply of provisions will be absolutely necessary. You are therefore requested, gentlemen, to lend all the assistance in your power in forwarding provisions of every kind from Bennington to this place, by way of Skeensborough.

The badness of the road may render it necessary to send flour, &c., &c., on pack-horses, in bags. If no other method is practicable, make use of that. Regard not the expense. Mr. Yancey, Deputy Commissary-General, has the general orders to pay every necessary expense and charge that may arise.

I am, gentlemen, by the General's order, your very obedient servant,

J. TRUMBULL,
Deputy Adjutant-General.

To the gentlemen of the Committee of Safety for the town of Bennington.

JAMES YANCEY TO THE COMMITTEE AT BENNINGTON.

Tyconderoga, October 20, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This is to inform you that in consequence of a number of disaffected persons in and about Albany to the common safety of this Continent, there is a great danger of the too long delay of the contracted provisions for this army, from that place, and in particular the article of flour, and that we have not more than will answer for bread for the army present than about sixteen days; and as the advances of the enemy may be but slow, and in order for a blockade, and to cut off all communication to this place, all which makes it of the utmost consequence that we have an immediate supply; and as I am appointed and empowered to act and contract for every necessary provision for this department, by the Commissary-General, Joseph Trumbull, Esq., I thought it of the highest importance to make this pressing application that you would contract and immediately forward to Skeensborough landing, all the flour that can be purchased for the army on the Northern department. And relying, gentlemen, upon your publick patriotism to serve your country, I make not the least doubt that you will comply with this request. And as to your pay, I will furnish you from time to time with the Continental currency, as fast as my present hurry of business will permit; and beg you will forward me your answer immediately, how much you will be able to supply me with, and in what time, so that I may be able to satisfy the Commander-in-Chief at this place with this very important business.

And you will greatly oblige, gentlemen, with respect,
your most humble servant,
JAMES YANCEY, D. C.

To the Chairman of the Committee of Safety and Correspondence, at Bennington.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM TICONDEROGA, DATED OCTOBER 20, 1776.

The enemy are in possession of Crown-Point, and we expect they may fancy this ground in a day or two. They must pay a great price for it, however, as we value it highly. Fourteen boats, or birch canoes, with Indians, were just now seen by our guard-boats, five miles from this. We expect an attack every moment; whenever it comes, it will be furious, and the defence obstinate, cruelly obstinate.

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL GATES.

Ty Mills, October 20, two o'clock, P. M., 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Lieutenant Stone, with my servant, has just this minute returned; has been gone three days; gives the following account: that he has been in view of the enemy all day yesterday; that the enemy are in great motion for moving some way or other; that he went so near last night that they discovered him, and a large scout was sent out after him. That he took the woods, and that he came across the tracks of several parties this day; that the enemy appear to be fortifying on the east side of Crown Point. That the Indians and Canadians are very numerous; but cannot ascertain the number. Also, that the Indians drove off a number of our cattle. That there were men with shoes that met the Indians, who took them away; and that he supposes that there is a number of the inhabitants here that are assisting in getting our cattle to the Indians, &c. He will wait upon your Honour as soon as he has refreshed himself.

I am, sir, yours, &c., SAMUEL BREWER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

AN ORATION DELIVERED AT THE HEAD OF COLONELS MOTT'S AND SWIFT'S REGIMENTS, WHEN UNDER ARMS, EXPECTING THE APPROACH OF THE ENEMY HOURLY, AT MOUNT INDEPENDENCE, SUNDAY, OCTOBER THE 20TH, 1776; BY THE REV. MR. TENENT, CHAPLAIN.

"Be ye not afraid of them: Remember the Lord which is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses."—Nehemiah, iv. 14.

No exhortation can be more applicable and pertinent for us, my dear countrymen and fellow-soldiers, at this time and under our circumstances, than this, which was delivered by good Nehemiah to the Jews, when their proud, their haughty, and oppressive enemies were coming upon them, for their destruction.

When danger approaches, it is natural for man to be afraid, and our fears generally increase in proportion to our dangers; and sometimes, by indulging the former, we are rendered incapable of escaping the evil which impends. It is therefore necessary to keep a guard upon this passion, lest in its excess it should prove ruinous. This is necessary, in an especial manner, for the soldier. "Be not ye afraid of them" is the voice of Heaven, the voice of your bleeding country, the voice of the church, and the voice of all who are dear to you, with respect to the approaching foe. The hour is expected, when, with the blessing of Heaven, you will have it in your power to do the most signal, important, and lasting service to your native land. She asks, she entreats, she calls, with a solemn, but pathetick tone, yea, she demands, your service, your most vigorous exertions, to save her from ruin. Let her not be disappointed; but as she hath honoured you with martial attire for her defence, do her honour, do yourselves honour, by using the weapons of your warfare with that heroism, firmness, and magnanimity which the cause requires. When our enemy approaches, be ye not afraid of them; let not your spirits sink, but rather rejoice that you have an opportunity to contribute your whole might for the deliverance of your country from the disturbers of the common peace, and robbers of the rights of mankind. I mean not that you should entertain a contemptible idea of the strength of your enemy. They will no doubt come strong, prepared to the battle, and will fight valiantly. But they fight in an unrighteous cause; they are armed to deprive us of our liberty and property; they are armed to ruin our families, to murder both them and us, or reduce us to the most abject slavery. And will not you, gentlemen, under these circumstances, fight valiantly too? Shall your courage be less than theirs, when your all is at stake? Consider they are made of the same materials with yourselves. Though transported from foreign climes, they are flesh and blood. They are but men, who are subject to the like hopes and fears with yourselves; and a ball well directed will humble them as quick as any, even the feeblest, of you. Be not ye, therefore, afraid of them, for they are not invincible. Be not afraid of them, because they are engaged in a wicked and unrighteous cause, which the righteous Lord abhorreth. Be not afraid of them, though their numbers should be superiour to yours, because you are possessed of advantages which they have not: you have the ground and all the works you have made on it. Be not afraid of them, because the want of courage will prove your ruin. There is nothing but victory or an honourable death before you. There is no retreat for you; and if you are taken prisoners, no doubt you would soon be discharged, as our friends who were lately captivated were, with their baggage and a few days' provision, but with this additional and horrid circumstance, that before you are two miles from this encampment, you will be overtaken, in your disarmed condition, by savages, Canadians, and Hessians, who will at once plunder and sacrifice your lives with barbarity which cannot be described. General Carleton's late conduct was only designed to deceive: his affected clemency is to be dreaded. Expect not mercy from an enemy who are fighting in support of tyranny: it cannot, it will not be shown any longer than it is for their interest. The scheme of this cunning man is evidently this: he supposed that you would conclude, from what was past, that if you were compelled to a hot engagement, that you would rather submit, expecting the same lenity which your captive friends have had, than fight as the sons of freedom ought to fight. Let the fox be caught in his own trap. Believe him to be your bitter enemy, and, according to Scripture language, reward your enemies, and your country's enemies, even as they have rewarded you, and render double to them. Be not afraid of them. Remember the Lord, which is great and terrible. Call to remembrance His almighty name. Let the strength of Israel be your trust. Implore His aid and assistance. Under His banner go forth to battle. In His name and strength meet the approaching foe, determined to conquer or gloriously die. Remember His name, which is great and terrible—sufficiently great and terrible to vanquish your enemies, and cause them to flee before you; and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses. Do the work of the Lord faithfully. Play the men for your kindred and for your estates, which are in jeopardy. So shall those of you who may fall in battle be immortalized for your valour; your names shall be had in grateful remembrance by America's latest posterity; and those of you whose lives shall be spared in the bloody conflict, shall return with great joy to your friends, and be received with the high honour of conquerors and deliverers of this oppressed land. Your officers, I doubt not, will set your example; and I hope you will all be engaged to support the honour of New-England, and of the State, in a particular manner, which has employed you. Your wives and children, your aged parents, your brethren and sisters, look to you, under God, for salvation. The peace of all our frontier inhabitants depends upon your success. You have the prayers of thousands for victory; and be assured, if you are victorious, the enemy will, from hence forward, cease to expect a submission from these United States. If you are victorious, the virgins of our land and all your dear connexions will hail you welcome upon your return, with high applause and great joy; yea, Zion herself will be glad.

May the Lord inspire you all with that magnanimity which makes the great and successful soldiers! May He cover your heads in the day of battle, and crown our arms with victory! and the glory shall be given to Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; world without end. Amen!

COLONEL WARNER TO GENERAL GATES.

Castleton, October 20, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: On receiving information of the defeat of our fleet, I made application to the officers of each regiment on the Grants, and they have called for volunteers, but have not gave orders for the which, until the reception of your orders last night; since which Colonel Brownson hath sent back an express to Major Rose, to raise rest of his regiment, to join Colonel Mead at Otter Creek; for Colonel Mead's broken handful of men will not answer your purpose at that post. The volunteers he is a-coming on with to Fort Independent as soon as they arrive at this place, as a part are already collected. I have sent your orders, by an express, to Colonel Robinson, who commands the lower regiment. I make no doubt he will be on.

Should be glad of further orders by the bearer, though we shall come on as soon as the men are come together. We expect a part of the lower regiment every moment, and shall proceed as soon as possible.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

SETH WARNER.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL BELLOWS TO GENERAL GATES.

To His Excellency General GATES:

SIR: As we have no particular express and various rumours in respect of your situation, and being ready, with all my interest and influence, for your assistance, I send by the bearer, Mr. Amos Babcock, for particular instructions and advice, on whose instructions you may depend.

From your humble servant, at command,

BENJAMIN BELLOWS, Jr.,

Colonel of the 16th Regiment of Militia, in the State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

To General Gates, at Ticonderoga.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Boston, October 20, 1776.

SIR: The Council took the earliest opportunity to lay before the House of Representatives your Honour's letter requesting the loan or purchase of a quantity of sulphur, in behalf of the State of Connecticut; in consequence of which they passed a resolve, which is now completed, that your State should be furnished on loan one ton of that article, to be replaced as soon as conveniently may be. As it was apprehended the carriage by water from Dartmouth to Norwich would be the easiest way in which you could send for it, the enclosed order from our Commissary on Lemuel Williams, Esq., at Dartmouth, written under the said resolve, waits on you for that purpose.

With great esteem, I am, in the name of the Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES BOWDOIN, President.

To Hon. Jonth. Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut.

Wrote under the resolve before mentioned, viz:

LEMUEL WILLIAMS, Esq.—SIR: Deliver to the order of the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of Connecticut, one ton of sulphur, taking a receipt therefor on this paper, as above directed, and sending the same to me.

RICHARD DEVENS, Commissary-General.

PLIARNE, PENET & CO, TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Nantes, October 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Although we have not the pleasure of your acquaintance, we nevertheless shall take the liberty to assure of our respects and make our offers of service to you in Europe; and for your assurance of what we have the honour of offering, will refer you to the honourable Continental Congress and Secret Committee of Philadelphia, to whom our names are well known, and with whom we passed a contract in February last for the furnishing of ammunition and other necessary articles in your present situation. And further, you may inform yourselves of Governor Cooke, at Providence, and Messrs. Nicholas & John Brown, of the same place; for which last we have despatched two vessels since the establishment of our house in this place.

We hope after your informations concerning us, be it from the Congress or the Generals of the army, and in particular from Doctor Franklin, that you will be satisfied in order to put confidence enough in us to consign all vessels you send for this port to our house. And we flatter ourselves to find the best sale possible for your merchandise, and send in return what goods you will think proper to order, if they are to be had in France.

We are able to furnish you at demand with cannon and gunpowder, saltpetre, sulphur, lead, iron and brass cannons of all sizes, muskets such as we have sent the Congress, being of the last mode for the Infantry of France, proved, well finished and perfectioned, with double bride locks.

We have muskets of all proof, from twelve to twenty-two livres per piece, with bayonets and steel ramrods, and bores suitable for ball of fourteen or sixteen to the pound. All the muskets are uniform, of the same size and same model. We have also handsome and good gun-locks, which are well finished and conditioned.

We have the honour of observing that there is only our house able to furnish you with the foregoing articles, and that we shall take upon us the risk and dangers of putting them on board, and to let your vessels go out of our port freely. They are powers that we are trusted with, and which we have in hands. Not any other in France shall be able to give you the like advantages and furnish you with such ammunition, which we receive directly from the manufactories of the King.

We are able to furnish you also with all kinds of broad-cloths for clothing of soldiers. We have sent a quantity to Messrs. Brown, of Providence. We have them of all colours, good quality, and well assorted, for the price of five, six and seven livres per ell; but the following colours of the same quality will be somewhat higher: such as scarlet, Prussian blue, yellow, and green. And further we are able to furnish you with such cloths as will be desired; likewise with all kinds of blankets, from three, four, five, six and seven livres per piece; also linens for shirting the troops, from thirty to fifty sous per ell. We shall be able, gentlemen, to furnish in general with every kind of merchandise of the first quality, and at the most reasonable rates; and you may assure yourselves that we shall despatch immediately every vessel you shall think proper to address us, whether the cargo is sold or not.

We have established our house in this place, thinking it the safest and most convenient port in France for the American trade, and we have entered in partnership with one of the richest and first houses for business in Nantes; the name is J. Gruel, merchant, upon Isle Feydean. Therefore, in addressing your vessels to that house, by giving us immediate notice, will be the same as if addressed directly to us, making but one and the same house for all the trade we have with North America.

In case you should send a vessel to Bordeaux, we take the liberty of recommending to you the house of Messrs. Reculé de Bamarain & Ramibeaux, being one of the most principal houses there, and who we think will do your business better than any other can do.

We have in our house, and at the head of our affairs that we transact with North America, Mr. Wilt, a young man from Philadelphia, who holds our correspondence in English. Therefore, if you should have any affairs particular or secret to transact or negotiate, you may be assured of the order and discretion that reigns in our house.

We have the honour to be, in the mean time, with our most sincere respects, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servants,

PLIARNE, PENET & Co.

To the respectable Members of the Secret Committee of the Province of New-York.

CAPTAIN DEAMS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore County, October 21, 1776.

WORTHY GENTLEMEN: Since my being last with your Honours I take this opportunity to say that I have used the greatest exertion in purchasing guns, and can get but thirty. As for blankets, have got but few. I have sent my Lieutenant where I informed you of some to be sold, but he has not returned; therefore think it impossible to equip the company to march in the limited time, &c. Therefore inform me by express how I shall proceed to enlist, as the chief of my officers and some officers particular is willing to join during war. Therefore inform me what to give, and how they shall be clothed, &c., and whether to find themselves, or the Province; how much bounty they shall receive, and those who never yet enlisted, as my company is allowed by several Field officers that have inspected them to surpass almost any in the County; and am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

FREDERICK DEAMS, Captain.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

NICHOLAS MACCUBBIN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 21, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: The engagement I have entered into with your Honours I would gladly expedite as fast as possible, for which purpose I have supplied myself with a sufficient quantity of leather, but workmen are very scarce.

I have applied to Lieutenant Brown, of the Artillery, who tells me that several shoemakers may be spared to work upon this emergency, but is desirous to have your Honour's permission, for which I make bold to apply to your Honours for your approbation, that I may complete the work before the time limited, and be ready, in case of necessity, to obey your further orders.

Am, with great respect, your obedient and obliged, humble servant,

NICH'S MACCUBBIN.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO WILLIAM BINGHAM.

Philadelphia, October 21, 1776.

SIR: We send you herewith a copy of what we wrote you the 21st ultimo, and the 1st of this month, per the sloop Independence, Captain Young, and hope some of the articles that were to be forwarded to your island, or St. Eustatia, by Mons. Hortalez, have arrived; in that case you will apply for, receive, and ship them, by those opportunities of our Continental cruisers which are sent for that purpose, and also to bring back such woollen goods as can be procured, agreeable to the orders of the Secret Committee.

You'll observe this goes by the schooner Sachem, Captain Robinson, to Martinico. A copy of it we send by the armed brigantine Andrew Doria, Captain Isaiah Robison, to St. Eustatia, where he values on Mr. Samuel Carson, merchant. And if you have made application to the Governor there, in consequence of our former letter, you must renew it now, and give orders for some of the articles to be remitted by the Andrew Doria, or the vessel that is to sail under her convoy; and we think you had best send us by every good conveyance, both from St. Eustatia and Martinico, a part of those supplies.

We are, sir, your obedient servants.

To William Bingham, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO AUGUSTUS LAWRENCE AND SAMUEL TUDOR.

Philadelphia, October 21, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your letter of the 7th instant, advising that the ships Congress and Montgomery were then nearly ready for launching, was received. You'll observe the above names are now to be given to those ships.

We are, at this distance, at a loss to direct their destination. The Marine Committee have therefore wrote to the Convention for the State of New-York, now at the Fish-kills, requesting that they would give you proper directions relative to the launching and otherwise disposing of those ships, with their stores, so as to preserve them in the best manner you can from being destroyed.

You are therefore to correspond with the said Convention for that purpose.

Your humble servants,

FRA. LEWIS.
PHIL. LIVINGSTON.

To Messrs. Augustine Lawrence and Samuel Tudor.

FRANCIS LEWIS TO CAPTAIN HODGE.

Philadelphia, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 18th instant. In answer thereto relative to the ship Montgomery, we have lately wrote to the Convention for the State of New-York, leaving it to them to give directions in what manner to dispose of the ships at Poughkeepsie. They are now convened at the Fishkills. If they should find it practicable to get those ships out this year, Congress are disposed to have them fitted and manned with all expedition; but in this you must consult the Convention and superintendents. If there should be a probability of getting the ships out, you should furnish us with a list of such officers as yourself, with the gentlemen of the Convention, shall recommend.

You may apply to the Treasurer, Mr. Denning, or draw upon me here, for what money you may be in want of for your present supplies, on account of your sloop freight.

I am, sir, your very humble servant, FRA. LEWIS.
To Captain John Hodge.

JACOB BAMPER TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENT.

Philadelphia, October 21, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: Excuse my boldness for writing to you. What made me write to your Honour was that I had a letter from the Hon. Philip Livingston, Esq., to you, concerning assisting in getting me in our army. I was on my journey to deliver you the letter myself, but I was taken very ill, that obliges me to return. There is a young gentleman who will deliver the letter from the above-named gentleman, if your Honour will be so kind as to send a few lines by the post to me concerning the matter. And in the meanwhile I remain your very humble servant,

JACOB BAMPER.

To the Committee of Arrangement.

MEETING IN THE STATE-HOUSE YARD, PHILADELPHIA.

Philadelphia, October 22, 1776.

At a meeting of a large and respectable number of the citizens of Philadelphia, in the State-House yard last night and this morning, Colonel John Bayard in the chair, the following Resolutions were agreed to by a great majority, and affectionately recommended to their fellow-citizens in every part of the State of Pennsylvania.

Resolved, 1. That the late Convention was called for the express purpose of forming a new Government in this State, on the authority of the people only, with power also to appoint Delegates in Congress, and a Council of Safety.

2. That the said Convention assumed and exercised powers with which they were not entrusted by the people.

3. That in the Constitution formed by the said Convention, the Christian religion is not treated with the proper respect.

4. That the said Constitution unnecessarily deviates from all resemblance to the former Government of this State, to which the people have been accustomed.

5. That it is the sense of this meeting that the people did not desire such strange innovations, but only that the kingly, parliamentary, and proprietary powers should be totally abolished, and such alterations made as would thereby be rendered necessary, so that a well-formed Government might be established, solely on the authority of the people.

6. That the said Constitution differs not only unnecessarily from that to which the people have been accustomed, but in many important articles from every Government that has lately been established in America on the authority of the people—from the sentiments of the honourable the Continental Congress respecting government—and from those of the most distinguished authors who have deliberately considered that subject.*

7. That several regulations essential to the welfare of the community are omitted in the said Constitution.†

8. That the several regulations improper to be taken notice of therein, are mentioned in the said Constitution.‡

9. That the said Constitution is confused, inconsistent, and dangerous.||

* The said constitution differs from others lately formed in these particulars: 1st. It establishes only a single Legislative body. 2dly. It renders the Judicial dependent on that single Legislative body, who may remove any Judge from his office without trial, for any thing they please to call "misbehaviour." 3dly. It renders the Executive dependent on that single Legislative body; by whom alone the Executive officers are to be paid for their services; and by whom, from the great disproportion between the numbers of the Assembly and Council, the President and Vice President must always be annually chosen; besides that, every officer, Executive, or Judicial, may be impeached by the Assembly, before six of the Council thus dependent on the Assembly, and be tried and condemned. 4thly. It erects no Court of Appeals, more necessary here than in some other States, as our Supreme Court may try causes in the first instance, and finally determine them, so that there is no mode settled for correcting their errors.

The said constitution differs from the sentiments of the honourable Congress, in rendering every Judge in the State entirely dependent on the single Legislative body; for in the first petition to the King of Great Britain, the Congress in enumerating "grievances," say "the Judges of courts of common law have been made entirely dependent on one part of the Legislature for their salaries as well as the duration of their commissions." Again: the said constitution differs from the sentiments of the honourable Congress, in not having "separated and distributed powers into different hands for checks, one upon another;" for in their address to the inhabitants of Canada, mentioning government, and the detestable frame established for that Province by a late statute, they say "the several powers being separated and distributed into different hands for checks, one upon another, is the only effectual mode ever invented by the wit of men, to promote their freedom and prosperity." But here is no "distribution of power into different hands, that one may check another." On the contrary, the Executive and Judicial powers are made unduly dependent on a single Legislative body, the Assembly: so that, in truth, the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial powers, may be said to be united in one body—the Assembly, though there is a semblance, on a slight view, of their being separated. Indeed, the resemblance between the said constitution and the artful but destructive one established by the statute before mentioned, is so great that the following words of the Congress suit the one as well as the other, only changing the word "Minister" for the word "Assembly." "Here is, indeed, an appearance of the several powers being separated," &c., as before. But examine the specious devices, and you will find it, to use an expression of Holy Writ, "a whitened sepulchre." The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial powers are all moved by the nods of a Minister.

If any reasonable man could possibly entertain a doubt concerning the meaning of Congress in using the words before quoted, that meaning will be clearly explained by the several constitutions lately formed on this Continent with the advice and assistance of those very gentlemen in their respective States, who, as members of Congress, used the before-quoted words, and must have known their own meaning.

How widely the said constitution differs from the sentiments of the most distinguished writers on the subject of Government, will appear by the following quotations from two authors of so high a reputation among civilized nations, that it is needless to add any other.

The Baron De Montesquieu, "whose name (the Congress declare) all Europe reveres," says: "The political liberty of the subject is a tranquillity of mind arising from the opinion each person has of his safety. In order to have this liberty, it is requisite the Government be so constituted as one man need not be afraid of another. When the Legislative and Executive powers are united in the same person, or in the same body of magistrates, there can be no liberty; because apprehensions may arise lest the same Monarch or Senate should enact tyrannical laws, to execute them in a tyrannical manner. Again: there is no liberty, if the power of judging be not separated from the Legislative and Executive powers. There would be an end of every thing, were the same men, or the same body, whether of the nobles or the people, to exercise those three powers, that of enacting laws, that of executing the public resolutions, and that of judging the crimes or differences of individuals." The learned Baron then proceeds with a long and much-admired chapter on the English constitution, wherein he greatly commends its distribution of Legislative power into several branches, &c., which cannot be inserted in the compass of these notes.

Mr. Addison, the strenuous and undaunted advocate for virtue, piety, liberty, and just government, even in a corrupt age, (and though conversant in courts,) says: "If there be but one body of legislators, it is no better than a tyranny; if there are only two, there will want a casting voice, and one of them must at length be swallowed up by disputes and contention that would necessarily arise between them. Four would have the same inconveniences as two, and a greater number would cause too much confusion."

† 1st. Not establishing a Court of Appeals. 2dly. Not ascertaining the number of Judges in the Common Pleas and Orphans' Courts, whether the same persons are to be Judges in both courts and in the sessions, as usual heretofore, or whether the powers are to be separated; if to be separated, who is to do it, as the power of a future Legislature is, by the twenty-sixth section of the frame, expressly confined to "other" courts; if not to be separated, whether any other Judges are to be added to the Justices of the Peace chosen by the people; and by whom to be added. 3dly. Not determining what qualifications as to property, shall enable a man to be chosen a member of Assembly, and thereby become one of the sovereigns of Pennsylvania. 4thly. Not providing what laws shall be in force within this State, &c., &c., &c., &c.

‡ Relating to—1st, insolvent debtors—2dly, fishing, fowling, and hunting—3dly, entails, &c., &c., &c.

The late Convention ordered, that "the future Legislature of this State shall regulate entails in such a manner as to prevent perpetuities," when it is notorious that "entails were regulated in such a manner as to prevent perpetuities," long before the meeting of the late Convention.

10. That the said Constitution ought to be altered and amended.

11. That no mode is settled by the said Constitution for altering or amending the same, but that of a Convention to meet more than seven years hence, if a Council of Censors shall be chosen in the year 1783, and if two thirds of that Council shall agree to call such a Convention to meet within two years afterwards.

12. That the late Convention, on the 5th day of September last, in the afternoon, as appears from the minutes of their proceedings, ordered four hundred copies of the proposed plan of Government to be printed and published "for consideration;" and on the 16th day of the same month, proceeded on the confirmation thereof, making only immaterial alterations.

13. That therefore the late Convention did not allow time to the people of this State to take into their consideration the proposed frame of Government.

14. That the late Convention did not know that the said frame of Government would be agreeable to the people.

15. That therefore the conduct of the late Convention in establishing the Constitution aforesaid absolutely for more than seven years, and not settling some mode for making alterations and amendments within that period, if they should be judged expedient, without overturning the Government, was a high violation of the rights of the freemen of this State.

16. That the conduct of the late Convention, in prescribing oaths and affirmations, to be taken for the support of a Constitution unprecedented on this Continent, not to be altered or amended for more than seven years, however exceptionable or dangerous it might prove, and which the people have had no experience of, nor have been allowed time to take into their consideration, was a high violation of the rights of the freemen of this State.

17. That it is the sense of this meeting that the people are generally and greatly dissatisfied with the said Constitution.

18. That it is the sense of this meeting that the late increase of the number and insolence of Tories and persons disaffected to the independence of this State, and the feebleness of its public measures, are greatly owing to that general dissatisfaction.

19. That more dangerous consequences may be expected, unless the unhappy causes of such dissatisfaction can be removed, by procuring proper alterations and amendments to be made in the said Constitution.

20. That such alterations and amendments are immediately and absolutely necessary for promoting the happiness of Pennsylvania, and advancing the welfare of our great American cause, and cannot with safety to the publick be deferred.

21. That for the attainment of these salutary purposes, the freemen of the several Counties in this State be instantly and most cordially invited to accede to the foregoing resolutions, and to agree to and concur in executing the following.

22. That at the election to be held on the 5th day of November next, the electors ought not to take the oath or affirmation required by the ordinance of the late Convention, dated on the 26th day of September last.

23. That the inspectors and judges of the said election ought not to take the oath or affirmation recited in the ordinance aforesaid.

24. That every inspector and judge ought to take the oath or affirmation prescribed by an act of Assembly of the late Government of Pennsylvania, made in the year of our Lord 1766, and entitled "an act directing the choice of inspectors, and for holding the general elections in this Province."

25. That the members of Assembly, to be chosen at the said elections, ought not to take the oath or affirmation, or to make or subscribe the Declaration mentioned in the tenth section of the frame of Government formed by the late Convention.

26. That when two-thirds of the members elected have lished in all cases without exception; in another part, persons may be tried and condemned by six of the Council. The Council of Censors may pass public censures without any trial, which censures may be worse than death. The Council of Censors and the Convention to be called by them are to be vested with powers that will occasion convulsions in the State, &c., &c., &c., &c.

met and chosen their Speaker, before they proceed to business, each member ought to make and subscribe the following declaration: "I, [mentioning his name,] profess faith in God the Father, and in Jesus Christ his eternal Son, and in the Holy Spirit, one God blessed for evermore. And I do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be given by Divine inspiration." And to take this oath or affirmation: "I, as a member of this Assembly, will not propose or assent to any act, vote, or resolution, which shall appear to me injurious to the people; nor do or consent to any act or thing that shall have a tendency to lessen or abridge their rights or privileges; but will, in all things, conduct myself as a faithful and honest representative and guardian of the people, according to the best of my judgment and abilities. I do renounce and refuse any allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain, his heirs, or successors, or any in authority under him or them. And I will not, directly, or indirectly, do any act or thing prejudicial or injurious to the independence of Pennsylvania."

27. That the said Assembly ought to have full powers to make such alterations and amendments in the Constitution aforesaid, as the said Assembly shall judge to be proper.

28. That the said Assembly ought also to have full power to enact such ordinances as the emergencies of publick affairs may indispensably require.

29. That after making such alterations and amendments, and enacting such ordinances, the said Assembly ought to publish the said alterations and amendments for the consideration of the people, and then, if they shall think proper, adjourn themselves for a convenient time, in order to collect their sense upon such alterations and amendments, vesting a power in the Speaker to call them together again before the time to which they shall be adjourned, if it shall be necessary.

30. That the carrying on the said election, without the electors taking the oath or affirmation prescribed by the aforesaid ordinance, of the 26th day of September, ought to be considered and observed by the members of Assembly chosen at such elections, as express instructions to them not to take the oath or affirmation, or to make or subscribe the declaration mentioned in the tenth section of the frame of Government, to make such alterations and amendments in the Constitution formed by the late Convention, as the said Assembly shall judge to be proper, and to conform to the two next preceding resolutions.

31. That no Counsellors ought to be chosen at the election to be held on the 5th day of November next.

REMARKS ON THE PROCEEDINGS AND RESOLUTIONS OF THE MEETING IN THE STATE-HOUSE YARD, ON MONDAY AND TUESDAY, OCTOBER 21 AND 22, 1776.

In the day of adversity, consider.—Eccles.

Philadelphia, October 30, 1776.

Had our ambitious enemies been guided either by conscience or common prudence, they had paid some attention to the Divine motto which heads this essay. They would have considered, and given their fellow-citizens time to consider, the inconceivable danger they are plunging them into, by endeavouring to prejudice them against the Constitution of their country. But, say they, there was no time to be lost. There are some such defects in the Constitution as render it impossible for a man of sense to bear it one hour.

I have soberly asked those gentlemen how they know this Constitution is so very deficient? They tell me every one says so, nobody likes it, the whole body of the people, Whigs and Tories, exclaim against it in all parts of America. I answer that it is no strange thing. Minorca was in a like uproar at the trial by juries being offered to the inhabitants, and even the virtuous and sagacious citizens of Philadelphia are endeavouring to render it impracticable in Admiralty cases, notwithstanding it is an institution of their late idolized Assembly. Copernicus's system convulsed the world, and nearly cost Galileo his life. It cost him his honour, which brave men count much dearer than life. Consideration might have brought the Minorquins to reason. The bulk of mankind now admires Galileo. All I would argue from this is, that the clamour which is falsely said to be universal against our frame of Government might be nearly so, and yet the frame as perfect as human nature could make it. Tate and Brady's psalms differ nothing essentially from the old version, but in superiority of style and metre, yet who is ignorant of the heats and animosities that elegant aid to Divine worship occasioned? Had the publick tranquillity, safety and happiness, been the single object of their politicks, they would not have disgraced so noble a cause with mere rout and clamour.

It is well remembered that no people were more for calm and dispassionate measures, while the powers and increasing profits of Government were within their reach, and they had a prospect of estates for life in the sunshine of royal and proprietary favour. But now alas! their moderation has quite deserted them, they will not be governed by leather aprons; places, by this tyrannick, this intolerable Constitution, are rendered entirely dependent on the people, who hate to pay much money for little service. Besides, by a very convenient indulgence in our old mode of proceeding, in favour of which many of us are much prejudiced, an enterprising man might be a Delegate in the Continental Congress, a member of General Assembly, and hold nearly as many Executive offices as he pleased. Now a Judge of Admiralty must entirely give up the privilege of prescribing rules for his own conduct, or relinquish his post. This separation of Legislative and Executive power, and the amazing precautions taken to prevent the inveteration of power, are the really obnoxious articles in the Constitution, and neither the catholicism of the creed, nor strictness of the oath of allegiance—which, by the way, is the most rational and most unexceptionable that ever was offered to mankind. But, alas! we are disunited, say the honest, unthinking people, and our wise and good men tell us that if we do but dispense with the oath of qualification, which must bar the gentry, whose whole souls are bent upon the prejudice, injury, and final overthrow of our free Constitution, omit the election of a Counsellor, and instruct the Assembly to amend the Constitution till we all like it, we shall agree quietly.

For God's sake, gentlemen, consider a moment what you are about! Is an oath that bars an inveterate enemy who would enter a garrison on purpose to throw open its gates to the besiegers, a tyrannick, cruel, and unreasonable thing? Did not the law, which excluded Germans resident in Pennsylvania, for many years, and every man below the value of fifty pounds in clear estate, bear as hard upon the honest friends of our country as could be? and yet this was never complained of, but wished to be continued by these wonderful sticklers for free election. For my own part, I care not how free our future elections may be, provided the persons we elect be not empowered to subvert our legal freedom when elected.

The Constitution has ever been understood to be the charter or compact of the whole people, and the limitation of Legislative and Executive powers. The people at large, by their Delegates, are the only proper makers and amenders of such compacts, and whatever man or body of men goes about to alter, add or take away, from a Constitution thus formed, by any other means than the consent of the community at large, is guilty of high treason against the State, and justly liable to the punishments by law established for the same.

Our Convention was delegated in so fair a manner, that even from our enemies we have never heard a complaint of the least omission of any thing requisite to render that important body a full representative of the whole people. They were sent to frame and establish a Constitution, without any instruction to wait a moment longer than it was finished; the necessity of the State called for that expedition, as we too evidently find by the violent sedition already stirred up amongst us. They perfected their work in so masterly a manner, that the idolators of power have sifted it as Satan did Saint Peter, to find flaws in it to expose it to contempt and detestation; and at last their masterly penetration found out it must be a vile thing, because a certain schoolmaster* had a principal hand in forming it. If such criticks had been a little better schooled, they would, perhaps, have said, with Alexander the Great, that they owed more to Aristotle for their education, than Philip for their descent to the heirship of a Kingdom.* I am well informed, that in their first secret cabal, one proposed attacking the Constitution on the religious quarter; a more conscientious gentleman, as nemo repente fit turpissimus, objected and said he thought it abominable to bring religion into political debates, and was, for his part, of opinion that creeds had nothing to do in civil Constitutions, but that he was answered the people could not be moved otherwise, and the necessity of the case carried the question. But here a scene opens upon us too black for description, too base for imagination, and too detestable to escape the execration of future ages, who shall be informed that billets were handed about to persons throughout all parts of the city, who were judged proper subjects to work upon, carefully passing by those who were a little better acquainted with proceedings of this nature, than to be expected to swallow the artfulness which was cooked up to inflame their passions and mislead their judgments, to the destruction of their own, and the peace, liberty, and happiness of posterity. It is very remarkable, that gentlemen who came to impeach the Convention for tyranny, in imposing declarations of our attachment to the Government, could not suppose themselves ready to proceed on their business till they had actually subscribed a tantamount declaration. After this their grand conductor, or as orator Puff repeats ad nauseum, their leader, proposes for their consideration: "That the late Convention was called for the express purpose of forming a new Government in this State, on the authority of the people only, with power also to appoint Delegates in Congress, and a Council of Safety." As this was a truth unquestioned by all men, it was judged a good entering wedge for all that followed, for few besides the Lycurgus of the Delaware State, would have conceived it implied a conclusion that any restriction of their commission, and consequent censure of their conduct, was implied by that resolve. However, having got that down, the second was proposed, viz: "That the said Convention assumed and exercised powers with which they were not entrusted by the people." This bold assertion might well have entitled the cool, the moderate man, the friend to peace, liberty, and lawful Government, to expect some evidence in support of so daring a charge against the majesty of the whole people in their unquestioned representative. The Constitution was demanded to be brought forth and read, and the instances in it pointed out which could ground the allegation. But all in vain; and when the mighty introducer of the resolutions harangued the people on the cruel designs of their Delegates, the burden of his song rested on their remaining at ease in Philadelphia, while he was risking his life on the Sound of Staten-Island. He indeed said they had exceeded their power in many things. Colonel Mallack, though greatly indisposed, was fired at so wretched an attempt to render men odious for doing what they must have been the most criminal traitors to the Commonwealth had they neglected. He read over a list of the extra articles they had acted upon, and at the end of each asked the people, was that wrong, cruel, or oppressive? They answered in the negative, or were silent, to all. The premier orator then said, the gentlemen on the other side might spare themselves the labour of vindicating those articles, as he had no reference to any thing without the Constitution. On this Dr. Y—g observed, that he should feel for the present Assembly in a too sensible manner, if they should be induced to resolve that the most important body that ever convened on the affairs of this State exceeded their powers in the instance wherein they had no limitation. Noise, clamour, and vague declamation, ended the debate on the second resolution, and the question being put, was decided in the affirmative.

* Mr. James Cannon, a learned, sensible, and disinterested patriot.

After so clear a demonstration of popular infatuation, the last-mentioned gentleman spoke but little more, and did not appear on the next morning, to which the meeting was adjourned.

On the fourth article: "That the said Constitution unnecessarily deviates from all resemblance to the former Government of this State, to which the people have been accustomed," Messrs. M—k and C—n observed, that in a Government founded on charters from two Sovereigns, it was hard to find many articles which could serve as copies for sections of a Constitution framed on the authority of the people only. And that too many members of the Convention had a most just and inveterate abhorrence to that wretched jumble of regal and proprietary domination, to wish to rake into it for any materials they needed. However, the people who composed that meeting passed the resolution, as they did every one that was read to them, without the least alteration.

* They quite forget Dr. Franklin, and David Rittenhouse, A. M., were in Convention. 'Tis true they remember Colonel Mallack, but only to inform the true proprietors of dominion (the rich) that the fellow is an upstart and does not keep a chariot.

At the Tuesday meeting, understanding that the absurdity of swearing to support a Government that "should be made" by an Assembly they should instruct for the purpose, was too glaring, they expunged that article, and did not put it to vote.

The large and respectable meeting, of between two and three hundred persons convened for the patriotick purpose of overthrowing the Constitution, then resolved that their judicious resolutions should be affectionately recommended to their fellow-citizens in every part of the State of Pennsylvania, and some persons were accordingly despatched with them.

How clear these ambassadors will steer of "Kingly" and "Proprietary" votaries in their present tour, is not quite evident to persons who observe a wonderful softness of disposition lately where there was heretofore the most profound contempt on one side, and as hearty resentment on the other.

Nothing less than dementition, or a total inattention to the probable consequences of so dangerous a measure, could ever have led a number of honest and worthy men to patronize so pernicious an experiment. Could they consider a moment the behaviour of our common enemies on the occasion, they could not fail to draw instruction from it. They know well the consequences of suffering the Legislature to amend constitutions. They have seen the effects of it in the several changes of the condition of the people in Europe. A little reading would inform us that the slavery and misery of every State that ever lost its liberty, was the consequence of people's negligence in this very point. A point of more importance than all the words in my power will ever be able to communicate.

To conclude, fellow-citizens, be advised by a person who can have no interest in deceiving you, to hold fast your Constitution as the sure hope of your political salvation. 'Tis time enough to have it amended when experience and cool reflection on all the arguments that can be offered for and against it can ripen your judgments for so weighty an affair. At present you are sensible the opposers of your free Government have mightily and very rudely troubled the waters, and if you do not find they aim to fish advantages to themselves out of the publick disquiet, never again give credit to

New-York, October 21, 1776.

On Monday last, the Perseus, Captain Elphinson, with eleven sail of transports, having on board troops and provisions, arrived in port, after a passage of eleven weeks from Portsmouth. The Perseus took two privateers and a trading vessel with a valuable cargo off the coast, and brought them safe into port.

On Friday sixty-five sail of vessels, under convoy of the Diamond and Ambuscade, with the second division of the Hessians and one thousand Waldeckers, under the command of the General Knyphausen and Schmidt, and a number of recruits for the British troops, in all about eight thousand effective men, arrived off Sandy-Hook. They sailed from Plymouth Sound the 27th of July. In the fleet are several victuallers, and vessels laden with draught horses for the train and baggage of the army. In the Diamond arrived the Earl of Winchelsea and the Hon. Mr. Finch, son to the Earl of Aylesford.

It is remarkable that not one of so great a convoy is missing; and the troops are in exceeding good health and spirits. The men-of-war brought in some prizes.

When the ships left England, a report of the death of General Conway prevailed at Portsmouth.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PENNSYLVANIA EVENING POST.

Trenton, November 4, 1776.

SIR: Accidentally meeting with the enclosed newspaper, I could but admire at the pains which the enemies to the free States of America are taking, in order to reëstablish the old constitution of New-York; an attempt, which, I conceive, ought to be made publick, in order that the people at large might determine on what conduct they would show to such as dared to break so important a link in the chain of union; and, as I cannot but view this breach or attempt of the utmost importance to the peace and well-being of every State, I make no doubt you will give a place in your useful paper to that publication under the New-York head of October 21, by which you will oblige your humble servant,
A FRIEND TO AMERICAN FREEDOM.

New-York, October 21, 1776.

In consequence of the advertisement in our last, requesting his Majesty's loyal subjects, inhabitants of the City and County of New-York, to meet at the City-Hall on Wednesday, the 16th instant, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, a very large concourse of people attended at the place and time appointed. The members of his Majesty's Council, the Judges, and all the other well-affected citizens who were not driven away by the hand of violence, or sent prisoners to other Provinces, were present; when a decent and respectful address to Lord Howe and General Howe, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to America, was read, representing the firm attachment of the inhabitants to our rightful and gracious Sovereign George the Third, and their sense of the constitutional supremacy of Great Britain over these Colonies; lamenting the interruption of that harmony which formerly subsisted between them, and praying that this City and County might be restored to his Majesty's peace and protection. The address was unanimously approved and adopted, and it was agreed that the inhabitants should all sign it. But the number assembled being too great to sign at that time, two respectable citizens were appointed to attend at a publick house adjoining the City-Hall, from ten o'clock, A. M., to two o'clock, P. M., every day, to take subscriptions till all had signed. As this measure was the first step that was necessary to be taken on our part towards effecting a reconciliation with Great Britain, joy was lighted up in every countenance on the prospect of returning peace and union with the parent State. The populace expressed the feelings of their hearts by loud acclamations and shouts of applause.

After this an affectionate address to his Excellency William Tryon, Esq., our worthy Governour, was read, "requesting him to present the above address to the Commissioners, and otherwise to exert himself that the prayer of it might be granted." This address was also unanimously approved and agreed to, and the Hon. Mr. Chief-Justice Horsmanden was desired to sign and deliver it to his Excellency, in behalf of the inhabitants.

The well-known humanity of the Commissioners, and the tender regard they have manifested for the welfare of America, in their several Declarations, afford the most flattering hopes that the address to them will be productive of the desired effect; and it is most devoutly to be wished that the Continent may follow the example of this city, that the Americans in general may avail themselves of his Majesty's clemency and paternal goodness in offering to restore them to his royal protection and peace. Those who continue deaf to such benevolence, and thereby prolong the present destructive and unnatural rebellion, will be utterly inexcusable in the sight of God and man. Their obstinacy must be detested by the wise and virtuous; the inevitable ruin attending it will be unpitied by all, and posterity will execrate their memories.

PETITION AND REPRESENTATION OF QUEEN'S COUNTY, IN NEW-YORK.

To the Right Honourable RICHARD, Lord Viscount Howe, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, and to His Excellency the Hon. WILLIAM HOWE, Esquire, General of his Majesty's Forces in AMERICA, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to his Majesty's Colonies in NORTH-AMERICA.

The humble Representation and Petition of the Freeholders and Inhabitants of QUEEN'S County, on the Island of NASSAU, in the Province of NEW-YORK:

Your Excellencies having, by your Declaration of July last, opened to us the pleasing prospect of returning peace and security, long banished by the many calamities surrounding us, we entertained the most sanguine expectations that the Colonies would at length have submitted to their duty, and acknowledged the constitutional authority they had so wantonly opposed.

When we compared the dismal situation of the country, suffering under all the evils attending the most convulsive state, with the mild and happy government it had before experienced, we saw no ground for hesitation; from happiness we had fallen into misery, from freedom to oppression! We severely felt the change and lamented our condition. Unfortunately for us, these hopes were blasted by the infatuated conduct of the Congress. Your Excellencies, nevertheless, having been pleased by a subsequent Declaration again to hold up the most benevolent offers, and to repeat his Majesty's gracious intentions towards the obedient:

Permit us, his Majesty's loyal and well-affected subjects, the freeholders and inhabitants of Queen's County, humbly to represent to your Excellencies that we bear true allegiance to his Majesty George the Third, and are sincerely attached to his sacred person, crown, and dignity; that we consider the union of these Colonies with the parent State essential to their well being; and our earnest desire is that the constitutional authority of Great Britain over them may be preserved to the latest ages.

And we humbly pray that your Excellencies would be pleased to declare this County at the peace of his Majesty, and thereby enable us to receive the benefits flowing from his most gracious protection.

To His Excellency WILLIAM TRYON, Esq., Captain-General and Governour of the Province of NEW-YORK, and the Territories thereon depending, in AMERICA, Chancellor and Vice-Admiral of the same, &c., &c., &c.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the freeholders and inhabitants of Queen's County, are happy once again to address your Excellency in the capital of the Province. We heartily congratulate you on your return, which we consider as the earnest of further success, and hope, ere long, the whole Province will feel the blessings of your Excellency's upright administration.

Anxiously do we look forward to the time when the disobedient shall return to their duty, and the ravages of war cease to desolate this once flourishing country.

That we may be restored to the King's most gracious protection, torn from us by the hand of violence, and quicken others, by our example, to embrace the repeated invitations of his Majesty's Commissioners, we have resolved on and subscribed a dutiful representation and petition, setting forth to them our loyal disposition, and praying that the County may be declared at the King's peace.

We entreat your Excellency to present our petition; and rely on our known humanity and benevolence for the exertion of your influence in behalf of the well-affected County of Queen's, that it may again, in the bosom of peace, enjoy the royal favour under your Excellency's paternal care and attention.

Signed by desire of, and in behalf of, one thousand two hundred and ninety-three freeholders and inhabitants, by DAVID COLDEN.

Queen's County, October 21, 1776.

New-York, November 12, 1776.

SIR: In compliance with the request in the address presented to me by you, in behalf of the inhabitants of Queen's County, I, immediately after my return from Head-Quarters, waited on Lord Howe, one of the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to his Majesty's Colonies, and presented to his Lordship the very dutiful and loyal petition and representation of the said inhabitants, who was pleased to say, "he would take the earliest opportunity of communicating with General Howe on the occasion."

This publick testimony from the inhabitants of Queen's County, of their unshaken loyalty to our most gracious Sovereign, and of their zealous attachment to the British constitution, is particularly agreeable to me, and entitles them to my best endeavours for a speedy accomplishment of their wishes; the season and the expediency of the granting whereof are safely and happily committed to the wisdom and direction of his Majesty's Commissioners.

I am, with regard, sir, your most obedient servant,
 WM. TRYON.

To David Colden, Esq., of Queen's County.

DIVISION ORDERS.

King's Bridge, October 21, 1776.

Order of march to be observed by the Division of the Army under the command of Major-General HEATH, in their route from this place to WHITE-PLAINS.

The division is to march from the left, (except four regiments of General Clinton's brigade,) if possible, at eight o'clock this morning. The advance guard is to consist of one hundred men, taken from General Scott's brigade, which is to be followed by the heavy artillery. The column will then follow by platoons or file; the six and three-pounders between the first and second, third and fourth regiments of each brigade. Each regiment will throw out a flank-guard; and General Parsons will order a rear-guard of fifty men. Each brigade is to have a wagon-load of tools, which will march with the heavy artillery. A number of the spears at Fort Independence are to be loaded on the wagons of tools. Colonel Thomas and Colonel Drake will send to each regiment a guide who is well acquainted with the road to White-Plains, and the vicinity of that place. General Clinton, with the regiments of his brigade, except Colonel Thomas's, will remain here until the afternoon. He will send away all the stores and provisions, &c., which will not be wanted for the detachment which is to be left here. He will march his brigade by the Albany road to Dobbs's Ferry, receive his baggage, &c., from the boats, and then join the division without delay. Should the division be attacked on the march, the line will instantly form, the reserve at one hundred paces in the rear; the light artillery as it is posted on the march; the heavy artillery on the nearest commanding height, and to be covered by Colonel Prescott's regiment. A detachment of six hundred men to be left at this post until further orders. They are to be under the command of Colonel Lasher. Two hundred and fifty at Colonel Thomas's barracks, fifty at Colonel Swartwout's, fifty at General Scott's, fifty at Colonel Prescott's, fifty at Colonel Pauling's, fifty at Colonel Nicoll's, and one hundred at Colonel Graham's. This detachment is to mount proper guards and pickets, and to have alarm-posts in the different works. The guards now at Morrisania to be called in this evening, and follow the division to-morrow morning; and a small guard to be sent to the Heights that way, and constantly kept for the security of the camp. General Clinton will give a copy of this order, as far as relates to the detachment, to the commanding officer thereof, before he marches.

W. HEATH, Major-General.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO WILLIAM DUER.

Camp on Valentine's Hills, October 21, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Since his Excellency's letter of yesterday, nothing of importance has transpired, unless the marching of the enemy to-day from East-Chester towards New-Rochelle is considered in that light. Intelligence of this event was just now brought here, and of which I have transmitted notice to his Excellency, who went out early this morning to visit the posts on the left of our line and the White-Plains.

I am, with great esteem, your most obedient servant,
ROB. H. HARRISON.

To William Duer, Esq.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 25, 1776.]

Head-Quarters, Valentine's Hills, October 21, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency being absent on a visit to the several posts on the left of our lines and at the White-Plains, I have the honour to inform you, by the favour of Colonel Whipple, that, since my letter of yesterday, no event of importance has occurred.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,
ROBT. H. HARRISON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO MAJOR ROGERS.

White-Plains, October 21, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby requested to make the best stand you can, with the troops under your command, against the enemy, who, I am informed, are advanced this morning to Maroneck; and I will, as soon as possible, order a party to attack them in flank, of which you will be further informed in proper time. Be cautious of mentioning design.

I am your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major Zabdiel Rogers.

Be pleased to send the enclosed by a faithful officer, to be communicated to all the troops on road through Connecticut.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL TRUMBULL.

White-Plains, October 21, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you yesterday, expressive of my apprehensions on account of provisions for this army. I came to this place just now, in order to inquire further into the state of this article, and to look a little into the situation and nature of the country. I have no reason, either from information or observation, to alter my opinion of yesterday, and therefore again and again entreat your every exertion to supply these posts in time with flour and beef for present use. To do this, much land carriage will become unavoidable. Of course no time is to be lost to provide a number of teams. Besides the supplies necessary for immediate use, it is absolutely necessary for magazines to be laid up in secure places, removed from the water, in Connecticut, and at such others as were mentioned in my last, and circumstances may direct.

The enemy mean, from present appearances, either to get round us, or to coast it along upon the Sound, in order to destroy our provisions and stores. To prevent the first, I am extending my line along as they do; to guard as much as possible against the second, I have ordered the officers in their several departments to remove, as fast as possible, all Continental property from the water; but the want of teams is a most dreadful misfortune. I shall only add, that, as soon as you can put matters into a proper train in the country, your presence at camp will be much wanted, and that I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Jos. Trumbull, Commissary-General of Provisions.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL M'INTOSH.

White-Plains, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I wrote to you a few days ago, desiring, if you did not find matters ready for the expedition to Long-Island, that you would move forward with the two Massachusetts regiments under your command. I have further reason to repeat my orders to you on that head. The enemy are advancing by parties from their main body, which now lays at New-Rochelle, and taken possession of the posts upon the Sound, with design to cut off our supplies from the eastward by water. They advanced, early this morning, to Mamaronick, which our people shamefully abandoned at their approach, not for want of numbers, but want of a good officer to lead on the men.

I therefore again desire, that, if matters are not ready for your intended expedition, you would lay it aside for the present, and march immediately with the two regiments under your command towards Byram river, and also desire Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston to come forward with the companies which he has under his command. When you arrive at Byram river you will send an express forward to Brigadier-General Lord Stirling, who commands here, and he will give you orders how to dispose of the men under your command.

I am, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel L. McIntosh, of Georgia.

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO ROBERT YATES.

Yonkers, October 21, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: The continued movements of our army have prevented my answering your favour of the 4th current. The warrants for filling up the four regiments were delivered out in so irregular a manner, and no final arrangement made of them, that it is impossible for me to give you a rank-roll of our present regiment. Secretary McKesson is the only one I know can furnish you with what you want.

All the discerning officers of the army see the necessity of having good officers in it. Without that, you never can have a regular or brave army. The contrast between those troops who are well and those who are ill officered, now in service, is so great, that it is impossible to have an adequate idea of it but by experience. It has made such an impression on the minds of every man of sense, civil as well as military, from the neighbouring States, who have viewed the army, that they are determined to make one vigorous effort to obtain good officers for the new army. I hope ours will not be wanting in a measure so necessary for their honour and the common safety. Old men without experience, are utterly unfit for the army. They want ambition, which is the life and soul of a soldier; nor are they fit for it if they have seen service, unless they are men of genius, capable of improving by service; otherwise they are a burthen to it. They are useless old boys, who pride themselves in having been in service, without profiting by it. If you would have officers and soldiers, the former must be men of condition in the country, or men who have a sense of honour, and whose class in life is respectable. These are necessary qualifications, among others, to make the officer. Where these meet in men of genius, those they command will be soldiers; but without it, they will only be men. The honour and security of my country have induced me to be thus free in giving you my sentiments on this important subject.

My old regiment has no Field Officer, which has been of great prejudice to it, Colonel Zedwitz being cashiered, and Major Tuthill dismissed the service at his own request. It is greatly reduced by the desertion of the men who had wives, &c., in New-York, and those belonging to Captains Hyatt's and Steenrod's companies, recruited out of the County of Westchester. However, there are some good officers and men in it, worthy to be retained in the service. Even the bones of a regiment are of great moment in the forming one. No time should be lost in appointing Field Officers for it. It gives me great concern that many valuable officers of my regiment of last year will not enter the service unless they are placed in their relative rank with Colonel Dubois.

I have stolen this moment, and know not how soon my brigade may be called to engage the enemy. I must therefore refer you to the enclosures.

I am, with sentiments of respect, yours and the Committee's very humble servant,

ALEX'R McDUGALL.

To Robert Yates, Esq.

COLONEL HASBROUCK TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Newburgh, October 21, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: By a resolve of Congress passed in July, to raise the one-fourth part of the Militia, to continue in service until the last day of December next, whereby we were empowered, if there were not a sufficient number of Militia officers that should be willing to enter the service, that the Field Officers were to appoint such persons as they should judge proper, of which there were not a sufficient number of subalterns, and did appoint Cornelius Hasbrouck First Lieutenant, Leonard Smith Second Lieutenant, under Captain Samuel Clark; Johannis T. Jansen First Lieutenant, Johannis Brown Second Lieutenant, under Captain John Graham; and William Erwin Second Lieutenant, under Captain Jacob Concklin.

The above-written gentlemen have not as yet been commissioned. Therefore desire you would favour them with commissions as soon as possible, as they have been now nearly three months in service uncommissioned.

Your compliance with my request will much oblige, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JONATHAN HASBROUCK, Colonel.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, now convened at Fishkill.

Newburgh, October 21, 1776.

At a meeting of the Field Officers of the County of Ulster, met at the house of Mrs. Ann Dubois, and unanimously agreed that Major Andrew Wyncope take the command of two Captains, four Lieutenants, and two hundred privates, which were to be raised by a resolve of Congress, out of the County of Ulster, for the space of two weeks.

This from, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

JONATHAN HASBROUCK.

INFORMATION RELATING TO THE ENEMY, COMMUNICATED TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

October 21, 1776.

On Friday last the main body of the enemy's army decamped from Frog's Point, and landed on Pell's or Rodman's Neck, east of the East-Chester creek, commonly called the Manor of Pelham. Soon after their landing, three regiments of my brother's brigade, commanded at present by Colonel Glover, attacked their advanced party, and repulsed them, killing, it is supposed, about one hundred; but they being sustained by their main body, our detachment was ordered off, and they accordingly retreated with the utmost good order, losing in the whole action only twenty-three killed and wounded. The enemy have since moved slowly eastward, and now lay from where they first landed extended about one mile east of New-Rochelle. Our army lays in their front, about two and a half miles distant; the left wing at White-Plains, the right at this place, where my brigade now is; but I think it probable in a day or two I shall be ordered to the left, in which case I shall be nearer to you, the only reason I can have to wish it.

A few days ago General Mercer went to Staten-Island, with about two thousand men, and took twenty-seven prisoners, Hessians and Highlanders, and killed three or four. He lost about three men, and indeed was very near surrounding and defeating the whole of the enemy. They have since ordered a brigade to reinforce that island, and I daily expect to hear some good news from Long-Island. The enemy has had a small reinforcement arrived of Light-Horse, &c., within a few days.

I don't recollect any thing else worth mentioning, nor have I time for recollection.

JAMES AUCHMUTY TO JOHN JAY.

Bedford, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I am much obliged to you, and take this opportunity of returning you thanks for forwarding my letter to my brother. I am sorry that I am under the necessity of still making application to you for your interest, that I may be paid what is allowed to prisoners of war, I not having received one shilling, either for myself, wife, or son, since I was taken. All the other gentlemen have received it.

I am, sir, with respect, your most humble and most affectionate servant,

JAMES AUCHMUTY.

Major Lockwood was desired to inform Mr. Jay that after writing the within letter, he advanced to Mr. Auchmuty, on his receipt, eight dollars.

STEPHEN WARD TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

October 21, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with the appointment of the honourable Convention, and their resolves therewith, in the construction of one of which the Deputy Commissary and myself differ. I contend that by the third resolve no hides are meant but the hides of such cattle as the owners refuse to sell; he contends that the hides of all the cattle purchased in this County are meant. I shall be proud to have the direction of the honourable Convention, but beg leave to observe that the expense of the carriage of the hides through the Highlands will nearly equal the value, and with submission to the better judgment of the Convention, I conceive it will be for the interest of the State, that if there is any purchasers here they should be immediately sold. However, the directions of the Convention shall be my guide.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your obliged, humble servant,

STEPHEN WARD.

To Robert R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention, at Fishkill.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fishkills, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I received your Excellency's favour by the hand of Mr. Wallace, by which I am informed and think it just that vouchers should be had; and should have sent them, but was informed that only an abstract was needful; and also, I determined to have waited on your Excellency myself; as I was desired by the Committee and by the State of New-Hampshire to continue the men I had employed on the road, to fortify and guard our frontiers, which I did until the 10th of September, and was desired by them to lay the whole account before your Excellency; but being soon ordered to attend on the Convention of this State, as a member, and considering the remaining pay was more proper by way of this or New-Hampshire State, I neither sent the remaining account nor waited upon your Excellency. I should now have waited on you, but the troubles to the northward require me to return to the Counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, where I have the command.

I have sent a roll of the men, with their entries and dismissions, and also the account of supplies; but as much of the stores provided were used in the after-service, have only charged one pound of meat per day per man, and two barrels that were lost, and the proportion of wheat, &c.

I also offer an account of supplying twelve Indians eight weeks, which I did without any authority, but thought it good for the States, two of which are enlisted into our service; the others hunting eastward. They belong to the St. François tribe.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
JACOB BAYLEY.

To General Washington.

COLONEL WHITING TO THE ALBANY COMMITTEE.

King's District, October 21, 1776.

SIRS: By several ways, I am informed that your Board determined to send the Tories that are now at Albany to Hartford; therefore I thought it my duty to inform your Board of some matters as they appear within and around our district: That the unfriendly party have disregarded all orders relative to the call to march to Fort Edward; that they have since been seen to ride about in the night, and some of their houses with numbers in them late at night; that John Savage and Richard Powers were at home. Our regiment marched; and it is highly probable, in my view and others, that they determine to rescue the Tories out of the hands of the guard, unless it be a strong one, which I pray may be, at least until they have passed through the land of the Moabites.

The friends to this State I got together as soon as I arrived, and we determined at once to enroll ourselves, and keep in large companies, without intermission, until we can be better satisfied that we are in some degree secure from that abandoned set of persons that have and still are unwearied in their wicked machinations to complete our ruin. I hope, sir, you will at least send us such directions that will encourage and strengthen us, as our situation is, in my view, distressing, being kept in a constant danger of having our arms taken from us; and what else they may have the boldness to do, God only knows. I am sensible the mode we have adopted is and will be attended with great expense; but as matters stand to the northward and southward, I cannot conceive that we are safe among internal enemies, unless constantly under arms. I could wish for more of our regiment to be at home, if for the good of the whole, or some Rangers to be on this side of the North River; but submit this matter; and remain, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

W. B. WHITING.

To Mr. Barclay, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saratoga, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I did myself the honour to write you by General Waterbury, and referred you to him for the information you had requested in a former letter. The critical situation of affairs in this quarter has so entirely engrossed my attention, that I have not had a moment's leisure to turn my thoughts to the subject.

We are, happily, at present well supplied with medicines, and I have had no complaints that Surgeons are wanted.

On Wednesday night I received letters from Generals Gates and Arnold, advising me of the destruction of our fleet; since which I have not received a line.

The first of the Militia are just arrived here. I am greatly distressed for want of information to know how to dispose of them.

As six tons of powder and a quantity of lead is lately safely arrived at Ticonderoga, I am in hopes the enemy will not be able to dislodge our troops, if they should attempt it.

I am, with esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL WARNER.

Ticonderoga, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I have this moment received your letter by Lieutenant Fifth Series.—VOL. II.

tenant Spafford. I much approve of your zeal and activity in spurring up the Militia to come and defend their country. They cannot be too soon here.

I have a good many huts and some spare tents, with which I will endeavour to cover the Militia upon their arrival.

I am, sir, &c.,

HO. GATES.

To Colonel Warner.

ISAAC PEIRCE TO COLONEL GANSEVOORT.

October 21, 1776.

SIR: The General orders me to inform you that it is his intention that the boats at your post be all kept in good repair, and that you immediately order the Assistant Quartermaster-General there that they be gathered and fitted for service, there being heavy complaints against him for neglecting this branch of his department.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

ISAAC PEIRCE, Aid-de-Camp.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Gansevoort.

GENERAL GATES TO CAPTAINS STILTON AND PARKER.

Ty, October 21, 1776.

SIRS: I do expect you and the party under your command continue to exert your utmost vigilance in finishing the cutting of the road to and from Castle-Town. I am informed you have done nothing worth notice these four days past. Let me hear a better account of you soon.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

HO. GATES.

To Captains Stilton and Parker.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL PELISSIERE'S OBSERVATIONS ON THE JERSEY REDOUBT.

It is highly probable that the enemy will attack that redoubt at the salient angle on the north side, for the following reasons:

Firstly. Their column cannot be enfiladed from that angle.

Secondly. Their left, bearing on the water side, cannot be galled on that quarter.

Thirdly. That angle is not at all defended.

It is true the next redoubt may fire a little on the right of the column of the enemy, but nothing stops a column which is not enfiladed.

It is evident that a column cannot be enfiladed from that acute angle, and that, therefore, the column will succeed. The enemy may then form a lodgment in the ditch without being seen either by the guard in the redoubt, the flanks of which are not defended, or by the next redoubt. And even though they should be seen from that redoubt, we could not fire upon them from that without running an imminent danger of firing upon ourselves. In this case the enemy have two ways left of carrying the redoubt: 1st. They can blow up that angle by opening a gallery under it. 2dly. By storming it, in which last case every thing will be in their favour. 1st. They may, unseen, destroy the fraises. 2d. The interior epaulement, which is now making within the redoubt, is an insuperable obstacle to the continual fire which might be made for preventing its being carried; for now there is no sufficient room left between that epaulement and the banquette of the parapet. But even though there should be no epaulement, there is not room enough between the banquette and the platform of those guns which fire on the water; so that the troops within cannot perform their manœuvres.

I judge, therefore, that if the redoubt be attacked it will be at that acute angle, and that if attacked it must be carried, unless another redoubt should be made to cover it. And this last redoubt ought to be strong enough not to be itself carried by the enemy, for it cannot be too much remarked that the Jersey redoubt on account of its too acute angle, cannot defend it.

This is my opinion on that subject, and I conceived my duty directed me to communicate it to the General.

October 21, 1776.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

By the Hon. JONATHAN TRUMBULL, Esq., Governour, Captain-General, and Commander-in-Chief of the State of CONNECTICUT:

A Proclamation.

The present alarming situation of our publick affairs loudly calls for our most vigorous exertion in defence of every thing dear and valuable in life. I do, therefore, at the desire, and agreeable to a special act of the General Assembly of this State, issue this proclamation, hereby ordering, and earnestly exhorting the Militia, and all able-bodied and effective men within this State, immediately, and without loss of time, to equip and hold themselves in readiness to march, upon the shortest notice, as exigencies may require, as their assistance may become absolutely necessary in a very short time. Fully confiding in the virtue and publick spirit of the good people of this State, that has at all times exerted itself in so glorious a cause, that they need no stimulus to duty at this all-important juncture; at the same time earnestly exhorting the people of all ranks, deeply to humble themselves before Almighty God, under the tokens of his displeasure against us, repent of their many sins, and implore the assistance of the God of armies for our deliverance and salvation.

Given under my hand in New-Haven, the 21st day of October, Anno Domini 1776.

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, New-Haven, October 21st, 1776, Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for four hundred Pounds, lawful money, in favour of Colonel Joshua Porter, to enable him to carry on the Cannon Foundry, &c., and to be in account. (Order drawn 21st October, 1776, delivered Colonel Porter.)

Voted and Resolved, To direct Colonel Joshua Porter, and he is hereby directed, to borrow forty bushels of Salt on the credit of this State, for the use of the Cannon Foundry under his care, and the same shall be replaced by the State to any gentleman who shall lend him the same on credit of this resolve. (Copy delivered Colonel Porter, October 21st, 1776.)

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I am now to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 15th instant, enclosing the copy of a letter from Peter R. Livingston, Esq., which came to hand at this place, and was communicated to the General Assembly now sitting here. By their desire I have sent orders to Major Elisha Sheldon, with the troop of Horse under his command, and two companies of the First Regiment, to march to Fishkill, in the State of New-York, and there obey your orders.

I have also, by like desire, issued my proclamation, requiring the Militia, and all able-bodied effective men in this State, to arm, accoutre, and equip themselves, and be in readiness to march wherever the exigencies of the State may require, and they shall be ordered.

Considering the services and sufferings of our Militia the past summer, the present sickness that prevails among them since their return from the army, and the necessity of their attention to country business, to secure a sufficient supply of provisions for the ensuing year, it is judged that this is all that we can do, consistent with prudence, at present. The Horse now ordered to march will probably amount to about two hundred in the whole.

You will find enclosed copies of letters from Generals Schuyler, Gates, and Arnold, respecting the transactions at the northward. I am further advised that after the action of the 12th, which General Arnold describes, the fleet under his command began to fall down the lake, but had not got far from Schuyler's Island when a northerly gale, favourable to the enemy, pushed them up with our shattered fleet, and obliged them to commence a second engagement, which was continued with great disadvantage on our side, though with great spirit and bravery, for five glasses, when the superiour strength of the enemy prevailed to the almost total ruin of our fleet. General Arnold, in the Congress galley, fought till he could stand no longer, run her ashore, burnt her, and escaped. General Waterbury fought the Washington till she was sinking under him, he was obliged to strike, and was made a prisoner, though it seems he is returned to Ticonderoga, probably on his parole, and is expected here soon. Colonel Wigglesworth, in the Trumbull, is got to Ty, and is the only galley saved; one galley not completed is safe. Our strength on the water now remaining, is one sloop, twelve guns; two schooners, eight guns each; two galleys and one gondola. What it was before these encounters, the enclosed copy of a return will show. The enemy's strength appears larger than at first; it is as follows:

1 ship, - - - - -	18 guns, 12-pounders;
1 schooner, - - - - -	14 " 6 "
1 do. - - - - -	12 " 6 "
1 rideau, - - - - -	6 " 24 }
	12 " 12 }
	all brass.
	4 8-inch howitzers,

28 gondolas, 1 gun each, 12, 18, and 24-pounders.

1 8-inch howitzer.

Our people are all retired to Tyconderoga, where it is their design, it is said, to force the enemy to make an attack on our works at the French lines, by the Crown-Point road, by obliging them to land below our army; that they will lay our two remaining galleys in the channel, where their fire will cooperate with the Jersey redoubt and the battery on Mount Independence. By this means they hope to prevent their passing higher up than our advanced posts. I hope for a more full and particular account from General Waterbury, who is expected here soon.

Colonel Richmond, with his regiment, consisting of four hundred men, with fifty-four whale-boats, arrived some days since at New-London. I have ordered him and Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, with their men, the whale-boats, and twelve hundred tons of small craft, to come to me at this place without delay. They are designed for the Long-Island expedition, with Colonel McIntosh, at Fairfield. They may be hourly expected. I could wish General Clinton, Brigadier-General of the Militia in the State of New-York, might be sent to take upon him the conduct of this expedition, if he can be spared, and also to be informed whether your Excellency would think proper to give any different orders respecting it.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq.

[Note by General Washington.]

[22d October, 1776.—Wrote Governour Trumbull to order the troops intended for Fishkill, to come by the rear of our army at or near to White-Plains, to take orders. That General Clinton can't be spared, and advising the Long-Island expedition to be given over if the troops are not on the very point of embarking, and that they should be moved this way, as they may be of material service in flanking the enemy, and the situation of our affairs calling for every assistance.]

At a General Assembly holden at New-Haven, in Connecticut, on the second Thursday of October, A. D. 1776:

Whereas the near approach of the enemy to the western parts of this State, as well as the critical situation of the Continental army, and the danger there is of the enemy's cutting off all communication between the country and the army, calls for the utmost speedy exertion of all our force and strength in that quarter, to oppose the further inroads of the enemy, as well as to facilitate the operations of our army:

Resolved, That as many of the Militia as are fit for service, and of others, householders, &c., able-bodied, effective men, within the limits of the Ninth, Tenth, Thirteenth, and Sixteenth Regiments, within this State, be immediately called forth, well armed and equipped, and embodied under the command of Major-General Wooster, appointed by this State to lead them forth, command, and direct them in the necessary operations against our enemy, and to give all possible relief to our army; notifying the General and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental army of his situation and readiness to coöperate with him, taking such directions from him as he may obtain, how and in what manner he may most conduce to his assistance and annoy the enemy; and to consult and advise with any other General or commanding officer or officers of our army who may be nearest to him for that purpose.

At a General Assembly holden at New-Haven, in Connecticut, on the second Thursday of October, A. D. 1776:

Resolved by this Assembly, That the Third Regiment of Light-Horse, and the troop of Light-Horse in the Tenth Regiment of Militia be ordered forthwith to march to the western part of this State, to join the forces under the command of Major-General Wooster, who is hereby directed and empowered to give orders for their march, operations, and stations.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, October 21, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 18th and 19th instant. The whale-boats are not yet come, and am very much in doubt whether they will be here to-day, as the wind is very high against them. They set out yesterday from New-London, as I am informed by Colonel Richmond, but were not able to proceed far. The Colonel and some of his officers are here; their determination is to proceed for New-Haven to-day. My stay here is only to hurry the boats.

But one or two of the vessels Mr. Shaw has engaged have arrived here from the eastward, so that we have at this place very little more than half the vessels wanted. I shall do all in my power to hurry forward, as I am convinced a better opportunity can never offer, as we have it now in our power to be very serviceable. I have several spies employed on Long-Island, but expect no intelligence of importance before I make my landing good there.

Colonel Smith's regiment, by my orders, were to rendezvous at New-Haven, the 20th of this month. I send our Commissary in order to make provision for them; this he has, through neglect, omitted to do, and I fear they will be distressed on this account. Their officers will doubtless apply to your Honour on their arrival. If they do, I should be extremely glad they were sent forward immediately to Fairfield, and an order given to the Commissary to supply them at that place until we join them.

I remain, with respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

EXTRACTS FROM TWO LETTERS FROM THE WESTWARD.

Newport, October 21, 1776.

You have guessed right as to New-York: it is evacuated. It might have been destroyed; but as I heard a gentleman say, it is not worth while to burn a barn because rats may get possession of it. I have no more doubt that we shall repossess that city than I have that I shall return home if I live. Boston was in the hands of the enemy!

By accounts from deserters, and a man who had been a Sergeant in Captain Lamb's company of Artillery, and made his escape from Point-aux-Tremble, we are informed that the enemy's army had been sickly; that the Canadians had been so plundered and abused by them that they would not join the British army, and that fifty of that army had agreed to desert, but were unluckily discovered. That the enemy's naval force was equal to ours, but their land force inferior.

I suppose the Tories begin to rear their heads from Howe's late successes. Poor wretches! they will never see the day that the sceptre of Great Britain will be recognized in America again.

Newport, October 21, 1776.

Since the 14th instant, arrived at safe ports a transport snow, of two hundred and fifty tons, loaded with provisions for New-York, taken by Captain Jauncey; a bark of about two hundred tons, from Jamaica, loaded with sugar, &c., taken by the Cabot, Captain Hinman; a ship of three hundred and seventy tons, loaded with fish and lumber, from Nova Scotia, for Jamaica, taken by Captain Job Pearce; a ship of about three hundred tons, from Quebeck for London, ballast with coal, &c., taken by Captain Stacey; a schooner from the West-Indies for Newfoundland, loaded with rum, &c., taken by Captain Coffin; and several others, but by whom taken we have not learned.

Newport, October 21, 1776.

Captain Vickary, in fifteen days from Hispaniola, informs that about a fortnight before he sailed, an English frigate took an American vessel near that island, and carried her off for Jamaica; and that a French frigate, whose topmasts were then down, got ready and sailed in two hours for Jamaica, to demand the American vessel, but had not returned when Captain Vickary came away; and that no vessel is suffered to wear English colours in any French port, but Continental colours are displayed every Sunday, and much admired.

Captain Stout, who arrived here yesterday, p. m., from Rye, about twenty miles on this side King's Bridge, informs that on Friday, under a very heavy fire from a number of ships, the enemy landed about ten thousand men at a place called Rodman's Point; that General Lee sent about five hundred men down to attack them, and retreat back to the place where he lay with about three thousand in the front, and the like number as a flanking party. The five hundred engaged the enemy and retreated; the enemy followed till they came within about fifty yards of General Lee, till then undiscovered, when his party gave three very heavy fires, which threw them into great confusion, upon which the flanking party began to play upon them so warmly that they only gave one or two fires, and retreated with great precipitation, being pursued by our troops till they got under cover of their ships. The loss on our side was very small; that of the enemy's not ascertained, but supposed to be very great.

TO THE INDEPENDENT SONS OF AMERICA.

Because Divine Providence, infinitely wise, and ever propitious to America, has not seen fit to crown all our wishes, by completing the total defeat of our enemies at once, some little souls cry, "Alas! what shall we do? Our enemies gain ground; I do not know what will become of us, unless we make terms of reconciliation." Let every thought like this perish unuttered, for infamy will mark him for her own who dares to speak it. Shall Americans, who are millions strong and own near half the world, at the loss of a few lives and a few acres of ground, pause in the race of glory, and halt between freedom and slavery? It is the voice of nature and of reason, the call of honour and of Heaven, to resist the murdering tyrants whilst there is a freeman living. He is unworthy of liberty, and deserves to have his name blotted out of creation, who would not be willing to die to save his country.

The immortal Brutus said, "after he devoted himself to his country, he lived a life of liberty and glory;" and every elevated mind knows that one day of freedom outweighs, in the scale of happiness, an eternity of slavery.

The sons of freedom are forever to observe the same rule with tyrants that is given respecting the Devil: "Resist them even unto death."

Tyranny has set up her bloody standard against us. The King of Britain, with his murdering legions, like so many fiends let loose from chains of darkness, are every hour exerting all their powers, with infernal rage, to complete the destruction—of whom? Their best friends and benefactors—those who have laboured, have studied, have fought and bled for them, and, if it had been possible, would have wearied Heaven with prayers for their prosperity and happiness. Oh, George! Oh, Britons! your ingratitude and guilt surpass the deepest dye that human thought can paint.

My countrymen, can you think of consigning yourselves and your posterity to the tyranny of such incarnate demons? Such a thought must freeze your blood and chill your souls with horror, for death is infinitely preferable; and, with submission to the will of Heaven, I hope every American will rather die fighting for the independence of his country, than give up one precious article of liberty. We have not only a glorious cause as ever men were engaged in, but we have a bright prospect of success. Let us pause for a moment, and look back with gratitude and pleasing astonishment on the favours of Providence, the scenes we have passed through, and the progress we have made in the short space of seventeen months past, and our hopes must rise, our vigour kindle, and our faith grow stronger, as we tread back upon those steps of time, every hour of which has been big with importance and with favours to America. We are at this time nineteen times as strong for battle as we were on the day the war began. We are a hundred and ninety-nine times as strong at sea, and increase with an unexampled rapidity in military skill, in arms and all the implements of war, and in every important interest. Then what have we to fear? Nothing but unpardonable folly in ourselves can ruin our cause; for as sure as the rising sun will reach its meridian, (unless we fail in our duty,) so sure will the rising States of America reach the summit of human glory.

A SOLDIER.

RICHARD DERBY TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Salem, October 21, 1776.

SIR: Captain Fisher has put into my hands the enclosed note, to which he is very desirous of having some answer.

The Tyrannicide is hauled down the road, and may be ready for the sea by the time the Captain's sailing orders reach him. I wish he may not be confined to narrow limits. When Captain Souther first sailed, I took from Captain Fisk his general instructions, as Captain Souther had none given him with his commission. Therefore others must be sent for him. His Lieutenant, the bearer of this, has brought up the commission, which, if necessary, may soon be altered, by erasing "sloop" and inserting "brigantine." The Second Lieutenant was very desirous to be discharged, and therefore a new one must be commissioned. Captain Fisk recommends Mr. Jonathan Gardner, junior, who, I think, is a suitable person. If the Board choose it, the Massachusetts and Tyrannicide may be ordered to cruise together.

Captain Souther is not arrived here with his prize, nor do I hear of his being at Boston. So much difficulty and trouble has happened in consequence of her, I almost wish he had never seen her.

I am constantly about the Colony vessels and attending the Maritime Courts, &c., &c., that I know not when I shall have the pleasure of seeing your Honour at Watertown. Are any Prize-Masters to be appointed or allowed on board these vessels? Have the Court fixed on the several rations to be served on board?

I have wrote hastily, and hope the Board will excuse any incorrectness; and am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

R. DERBY, Jun.

To the honourable President of the Council.

In Council, October 21, 1776.

Read, and committed to William Seaver and Walter Spooner, Esquires, to take the within letter, and papers accompanying the same, into consideration, and report.

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The Council and Assembly of this State have appointed Jonathan Blanchard, Benjamin Giles, Stephen Evans, and David Gilman, Esqs., a committee to repair to the camp, and there use their utmost endeavours to promote the raising our quota of men for the new army; and we pray leave to introduce those gentlemen to your Excellency's favour and protection, resting fully assured that you will afford them every assistance in your power in expediting the very necessary and important business of their mission.

SIR: The Council and Assembly of this State have appointed Jonathan Blanchard, Benjamin Giles, Stephen Evans, and David Gilman, Esquires, a committee to repair to the camp, to use their endeavours to promote the raising our quota of men for the new army, who will wait on you with this. We have no doubt, from your zeal in the American cause, but that you will lend them all assistance in your power in expediting the very necessary and important business of their mission.

In behalf of the Committee, I am, sir, with due respect, your very humble servant.

INSTRUCTIONS TO TICONDEROGA COMMITTEE.

State of New-Hampshire, in Committee of Safety, }
at Exeter, October 21, 1776. }

To JONATHAN BLANCHARD, BENJAMIN GILES, STEPHEN EVANS, and DAVID GILMAN, Esquires:

You being appointed by the Council and Assembly of this State a Committee to repair to Ticonderoga, there to endeavour to promote the raising our quota of men for the Continental service, and if you find it unlikely to raise the whole there, then for one or more of you, agreeable to the resolves of Congress, to proceed from thence to New-York, and endeavour to promote the raising the remainder there; and the Council and Assembly having adjourned and left the giving you further directions to this Committee:

Therefore, you are instructed when you arrive at Ticonderoga, to consult with the General and other officers about transacting your business, and fill up and deliver the commissions for Field-Officers for two regiments, to men of the most esteemed capacities, especially for knowledge in military affairs, belonging to this State who have served in the army; and there with the advice of the respective Field-Officers, fill up and deliver commissions to the several officers, Surgeon and Chaplain for each regiment; and you may assure the officers and soldiers that in addition to the Continental pay, bounty, and clothing, this State will in every respect give the same to their troops that the State of the Massachusetts-Bay theirs, and that this State will during their service do every thing to make their duty as easy and their circumstances as comfortable as possible, and will do their utmost endeavours that such necessities as the troops may want shall be transported where they be, and sold at the lowest rates. The medicines sent by you being part of what this State have procured with a great deal of difficulty, they send for the benefit of their distressed brethren in the service, and would have you divide it among the regiments raised in this State. You are to advise us from time to time, of every material occurrence; and after making all the despatch in your business that circumstances will allow, to make return of your doings.

Mr. BLANCHARD's return of the Committee's doings at TICONDEROGA.

Mr. Blanchard, one of the Committee appointed by the Council and Assembly of this State to repair to Ticonderoga to officer and raise two battalions for the Continental army, begs leave to inform the honourable House that the Committee arrived at that place on the 2d day of November, instant; that the next day they waited on General Gates, and advised with him.

The Committee likewise consulted the Field-Officers and Captains now in the army from this State.

That on the eighth day the Committee appointed and commissioned the following gentlemen for Field-Officers for the First and Second Battalions, viz:

John Stark, Esq., Colonel; Joseph Cilley, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel; George Reed, Esq., Major;—First Battalion.

Enoch Poor, Esq., Colonel; Nathan Hale, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel; Windborn Adams, Esq., Major;—Second Battalion.

Mr. Nathaniel McClintock appointed and commissioned Adjutant to the Second Battalion.

The Committee appointed Jasen Waite, of Alstead, Esq.; Amos Morrell, of Epsom, Esq.; Amos Emerson, of Chester, Esq., (Lieutenant advanced); Isaac Tarwell, of Charlestown, Esq., (Lieutenant advanced); Ebenezer Frye, of Pembroke, (Lieutenant advanced); Captains of the First Battalion.

Benjamin Titcomb, of Dover, Esq.; Frederick Mordent Bell, of Dover, Esq.; James Norris, of Epping, Esq.; James Carr, of Somersworth, Esq.; John Drew, of Barrington, Esq.; Elijah Cloyce, of Fitzwilliam, (Lieutenant advanced); Samuel Blodgett, of Goffestown, (Lieutenant advanced); Captains for the Second Battalion.

The Committee delivered to each Captain inlisting orders, and appointed several Subalterns, and gave orders likewise.

The General informed the Committee that the money in the military chest was nearly exhausted, that he could ill spare any. He however delivered to Colonel Poor about five thousand dollars, which he distributed among the recruiting officers.

The several officers inlisted near one hundred men, and the Committee applied to the General to appoint a Muster-master, but he declined. The Committee then appointed Colonel David Gilman; he passed about thirty, (the others immediately upon their inlistment had furloughs.) They were sworn before Benjamin Giles, Esq.

The General proposed to discharge all the Continental troops from this State on Friday, the 15th instant.

The Committee then took under consideration the want of money, the immediate release of all the old troops, and soon discharge of the Militia, that several battalions of Jersey troops were to tarry till March, and upon the whole thought advisable for the service of this State to leave that place. Benjamin Giles and David Gilman, Esquires, set off for New-York, to fill up the vacancies in that department.

The Committee were as industrious in their business, and as attentive to their orders, as possible, and hope that their doings will meet the approbation of the General Court.

The Committee at New-York appointed: Captain, Jeremiah Gilman, of Plastow; First Lieutenant, William Sartell, of Charlestown; Second Lieutenant, William Hutchins, of Weare; Ensign, Nathaniel Kimball, of Plastow.

Captain, John House, of Hanover; First Lieutenant, Gould, of Cockermouth; Ensign, Blake, of Lebanon.

Captain, Caleb Robinson, of Exeter; First Lieutenant, Moses Dustin, of Candia; Second Lieutenant, Micah Hoit, of Newtown; Ensign, Ebenezer Light, of Exeter.

Captain, William Scott, of Peterborough; First Lieutenant, Moody Dustin, of Litchfield; Second Lieutenant, Josiah Monro, of Amherst; Ensign, Benjamin Snow, of Plymouth.

Lieutenant-Colonel Coburn recommends Amos Coburn, for Second Lieutenant; Adonijah, for Second Lieutenant, or Ensign; Captain Holmes, of Walpole, for a Captain.

Return of men at TICONDEROGA, (without date.)

We are at present unable to furnish you with the proportion of men raised in the several towns, as many of our officers and men have not joined us; but till we are able to make it, beg leave to transmit the returns of rank and file who have joined: sick, well, and on command in gross, viz: Colonel Cilley, 382; Colonel Hale, 306; Colonel Scamuel, 324.

PETITION OF JONATHAN BURT.

These may inform all persons whom it may concern, that on the 22d of October, 1776, Lieutenant Levi Hooper requested of me, the subscriber, a horse for Mr. Babcock to ride post to Ticonderoga for information concerning the Militia being sent for by General Gates. I readily granted Mr. Hooper his request, with a good sound, well horse, and on the 2d day of November, Mr. Babcock sent my horse home.

I myself, being in the army, am not able to say how the horse was upon his return, but Mr. Elisha and Benjamin Marsh saw the horse when he came home, that he appeared to them not well, with his hind legs very much swollen, and his eyes sunk in his head, and upon my returning home from the army in November 14, I found my horse very sick; my folks had not put him to any service valuable, by reason of his not being well. I sent for Mr. William Glazer, the farrier; he told me the horse was hurt by being overdone, and took cold that caused a stoppage in his water, and that his journey was the means of his disorder. I followed his directions for the horse, and that on the 24th day of November, the horse died. I opened the horse and found his fat melted, and his caul almost consumed, and it appears plain to me, the hardships of the journey of the horse was the means of his death. Therefore would request of this State some consideration for my horse, which I valued at twelve pounds. Mr. Glazer can testify to these things, and Mr. Marshes; this request being granted will oblige me,

JONATHAN BURT.

CAPTAIN DOUGLASS, OF THE ISIS, TO MR. STEPHENS.

Quebeck, October 21, 1776.

Having for the space of six weeks attended the naval equipment for the important expedition on Lake Champlain, I on the 4th instant saw with unspeakable joy, the reconstructed ship now called the Inflexible, and commanded by Lieutenant Schank, her rebuilder, sail from St. John's, twenty-eight days after her keel was laid, towards the place of rendezvous; taking in her eighteen twelve-pounders beyond the shoal which is on this side the Isle-aux-Noix, in her way up.

The prodigies of labour which have been effected since the Rebels were driven out of Canada, in creating, recreating, and equipping a fleet of above thirty fighting vessels of different sorts and sizes, and all carrying cannon, since the beginning of July, together with the transporting over land, and afterwards dragging up the two rapids of St. Terese and St. Johns, thirty long-boats, the flat-bottomed boats, a gondola weighing about thirty tons, and above four hundred batteaus, almost exceed belief. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief of the army and all the other Generals are of the opinion that the sailors of his Majesty's ships and transports, have, far beyond the usual limits of their duty, exerted themselves to the utmost on this great and toilsome occasion; nor has a man of that profession uttered a single word expressive of discontent, amidst all the hardships they have undergone, so truly patriotick are the motives by which they are actuated. To crown the whole, above two hundred prime seamen of the transports, impelled by a due sense of their country's wrongs, did most generously engage themselves to serve in our armed vessels during the expedition, and embarked accordingly. Such having then been our unremitting toils, I am happy beyond expression in hereby acquainting my Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty that the destruction of almost the whole of the Rebel fleet, in two several battles on the 11th and 13th instant, is our reward. I have received a letter from Captain Pringle, of the Lord Howe, armed ship, who commands the officers and seamen on the lake, and who bestows the highest encomiums on their behaviour in both engagements. The Rebels did by no means believe it possible for us to get upon Lake Champlain this year; were much surprised at the first sight of the van of our force; but ran into immediate and utter confusion the moment a three-masted ship made her appearance, being a phenomenon they never so much as dreamed of. Thus have his Majesty's faithful subjects here, contrary to a crude but prevailing idea, by straining every nerve in their country's cause, outdone them in working, as much as in fighting. The ship Inflexible, with the Maria and Carleton schooners, all reconstructions, did the whole of the second day's business, the flat-bottomed rideau called the Thunderer, and the gondola called the Loyal Convert, with the gun-boats, not having been able to keep up with them. The said gondola was taken from the Rebels the day the siege of Quebeck was raised. The loss we have sustained, considering the great superiority of the insurgents, is very small, consisting of between thirty and forty men killed and wounded—seamen, soldiers, artillery-men and all; eight whereof were killed outright, and six wounded on board of the Carleton. As to further particulars, I must refer you to Lieutenant Dacres, who, in justice due to his merit for the part he bore in destroying the Rebel fleet, I am happy in sending upon this occasion to their Lordships in the Stag transport; as also in thereby complying with the General's desire, who, for the same reason, is pleased to honour him with the conveyance of his despatches.

WILLIAM CARMICHAEL TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Amsterdam, October 22, 1776.

SIR: I enclose a letter, which I expected to deliver ere this in person. I arrived here last Friday, and had so many inquiries to make to gratify Mr. Deane's curiosity, that it has not been in my power to attend to you so soon as I could wish. For fear that I should not be able to leave this to-morrow to do myself the honour of waiting upon you, I have sent this letter. When I come to the Hague, I shall put up at the Hotel de Turenne, where you will do me much pleasure to leave your address particularly. The knowledge I have had of you for many months, by Mr.

Deane and others, makes me regret every moment that delays me here and denies me the pleasure of assuring you in person, how much I am, what every true American is, Your very humble servant,

WILLIAM CARMICHAEL.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.
Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Our worthy friend, Dr. Franklin, being indefatigable in the labour of his country, and few men so qualified to be useful to the community of which he is a member, you will not be surprised that the unanimous voice of the Congress of Delegates from the United States of America has called upon him to visit the Court of France, in the character of one of their Commissioners for negotiating a treaty of alliance, &c., with that nation. He is the bearer of this letter, and on his arrival will forward it. To him we refer you for information as to the political state of this country; our design in addressing you at this time being only to continue that correspondence, which he has opened and conducted hitherto on our behalf.

We request to hear from you frequently; and if you make use of the cypher, the Doctor has communicated the knowledge of it to one of our members. Your letters, via St. Eustatia, directed to the Committee of Secret Correspondence, then put under a cover to Mr. Robert Morris, merchant, Philadelphia, and that letter covered to Mr. Cornelius Stevenson or Mr. Henricus Godet, merchants at St. Eustatia, or under cover to Mr. Isaac Gouverneur, merchant at Curaçoa, will certainly come safe, and if you can send with them regular supplies of the English and other newspapers, you will add to the obligation. The expense of procuring them shall be reimbursed, together with any other charges, and a reasonable allowance for your time and trouble in this agency. The members of this Committee, styled the Committee of Secret Correspondence, are John Jay, Thomas G. Johnson, Robert Morris, Richard Henry Lee, William Hooper, and John Witherspoon; and as vacancies happen by death or absence, the Congress fill them up with new members; which we mention for your information, and with great respect and esteem remain, sir, your most obedient, humble servants,

ROBERT MORRIS,
RICHARD HENRY LEE,
JOHN WITHERSPOON,
WILLIAM HOOPER.

ADDRESS TO THEIR EXCELLENCIES RICHARD VISCOUNT HOWE, ADMIRAL, AND WILLIAM HOWE, ESQUIRE, GENERAL, OF HIS BRITANNICK MAJESTY'S FORCES IN AMERICA.

MY LORD AND SIR: Your Declaration at New-York has reached this place. It has occasioned surprise and concern. The known honour and abilities of your Excellencies, and your Declaration, appear perfect contrasts. The latter is an unnatural production. Hurt, as I am, to see your names so prostituted, I cannot restrain myself from making a few remarks to your Excellencies upon a subject which, by endangering your reputation, distresses every generous mind. I shall first state your Declaration:

"By RICHARD VISCOUNT HOWE, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, and WILLIAM HOWE, Esquire, General, of His Majesty's Forces in AMERICA, the King's Commissioners for restoring peace to His Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in NORTH AMERICA, &c., &c., &c.:

"DECLARATION.

"Although the Congress, whom the misguided Americans suffer to direct the opposition to a reestablishment of the constitutional Government of these Provinces, have disavowed every purpose of reconciliation not consonant with their extravagant and inadmissible claim of Independence, the King's Commissioners think fit to declare that they are equally desirous to confer with his Majesty's well-affected subjects upon the means of restoring the publick tranquillity, and establishing a permanent union with every Colony as a part of the British Empire. The King being most graciously pleased to direct a revision of such of his royal instructions to his Governours as may be construed to lay an improper restraint on the freedom of legislation in any of his Colonies, and to concur in the revisal of all acts by which his Majesty's subjects there may think themselves aggrieved, it is recommended to the inhabitants at large to reflect seriously upon their present condition and expectations, and judge for themselves whether it be more consistent with their honour and happiness to offer up their lives as a sacrifice to the unjust and precarious cause in which they are engaged, or return to their allegiance, accept the blessings of peace, and to be secured in a free enjoyment of their liberties and properties upon the true principles of the Constitution.

"Given at New-York, 19th September, 1776.

"Howe,

"W. Howe.

"By command of their Excellencies:

"STRACHEY."

And now, not to detain your Excellencies by making observations upon Lord Howe's not assuming his military title displaying the nature of his supreme hostile command in America, by which unusual and designed omission, the ignorant, seeing his name contrasted with that of a General clothed in all his terrors, may be entrapped to believe that his Lordship is to be considered in a more amiable point of view, a mere Commissioner only, for restoring peace, without any military command to intimidate and coerce. Not to wound your delicacy by admiring the wisdom of your appealing from the Congress to people confessed by you to be directed by that honourable Assembly, my remarks shall be confined to the more material parts of your Declaration, which, I am sorry to say, are in every respect unworthy your good sense and high characters.

Your Excellencies "think fit to declare" that you are desirous "of restoring the publick tranquillity." But is the end your Excellencies aim at, our honour and advantage? Is it to give a free scope to our natural growth? Is it to confirm to us our rights by the law of nature? No! It is to cover us with infamy. It is to chill the sap, and check the luxuriance of our imperial plant. It is to deprive us of our natural equality with the rest of mankind, by "establishing" every State "as a part of the British Empire." In short, your Excellencies invite men of common sense to exchange an independent station for a servile and dangerous dependence! But, when we recollect that the King of Great Britain has, from the throne, declared his "firm and steadfast resolutions to withstand every attempt to weaken or impair the supreme authority of that Legislature over all the dominions of his crown;" that his hirelings in Parliament and tools in office, abhorred by the English nation, have echoed the sentiment; and that America for ten years has experienced that King's total want of candour, humanity, and justice, it is, I confess, a matter of wonder that your Excellencies can appear so lost to decency as to hold out subjection as the only condition of peace; and that you could condescend to sully your personal honour by inviting us to trust a Government in which you are conscious we cannot, in the nature of things, place any confidence—a Government that you are sensible has been, now is, and ever must be, jealous of our prosperity and natural growth—a Government that you know is absolutely abandoned to corruption! Take it not amiss, if I hint to your Excellencies that your very appearing in support of such a proposal, furnishes cause to doubt even of your integrity, and to reject your allurements lest they decoy us into slavery.

The Declaration says: "The King is most graciously pleased to direct a revision of such of his royal instructions to his Governours," &c., "and to concur in the revisal of all acts by which his Majesty's subjects may think themselves aggrieved." But what of all this? Your Excellencies have not told the people who "think themselves aggrieved" that they are to be a party in the revision. You have not even told them who are to be the revisors. If you had, it would be nothing to the purpose; for you have not and cannot tell them, and engage that even any of the instructions and acts, being revised, shall be revoked and repealed; particularly those by which people "may think themselves aggrieved." But if such are not to be repealed, why have you mentioned, "think themselves aggrieved?" If they are intended to be repealed, why did not your Excellencies come to the point at once and say so? It is evident your Excellencies are by your superiours precipitated into a dilemma. You have not been accustomed to dirty jobs, and plain dealing does not accord with your instructions; otherwise, in the latter case, I think you are men of too much sense and honour to have overlooked or suppressed so material a point of information. However, you say instructions and acts are to be revised. We see that you have laid an ambuscade for our liberties; the clause is carefully constructed without the least allusion to the revisors, or to the words revoke, redress, repeal. In short, it appears to be drawn up entirely on the plan of a declaration by King James the Second, after his abdication, as confidentially explained by James's Secretary of State, the Earl of Melford, to Lord Dundee, in Scotland. For Melford writes to Dundee, "that notwithstanding of what was promised in the Declaration, indemnity and indulgence, yet he had couched things so that the King would break them when he pleased; nor would he think himself obliged to stand to them;" and your Excellencies have "couched things so," that more words upon this subject are unnecessary.

"It is recommended to the inhabitants at large to reflect seriously upon their present condition." Is it possible your Excellencies can be serious, and mean any thing by this recommendation? Can you be ignorant, that ever since the birth of the Stamp Act, the inhabitants at large have been reflecting upon their deplorable condition? Can you have an idea that, after such a length of time, during which they have been continually kept to their reflections, by the Declaratory Law, the Tea Act, the Boston Port Bill, and those then passed to annihilate the Charter of Massachusetts-Bay, the Quebeck Bill to establish Popery, the Fishery Bill to coerce by famine, the British commencement of the late civil war, and the act of Parliament in December last, declaring the inhabitants Rebels—I say, after such a series of causes for reflection, and that your Excellencies now find us in arms against you, determined on independence or death, can you possibly entertain an idea that we have not reflected seriously? On the contrary you know, that we are prepared to offer up our lives in evidence of our serious reflections! In addressing a world, you ought to have some attention to the propriety of your recommendations, if only from a regard to your own reputation.

You are pleased to term our cause "unjust." In this there is nothing so surprising, as your being lured to give such a sentiment under your hands—signing your own disgrace with posterity. You know that the virtuous characters throughout Europe, on this point differ with your Excellencies; and I most respectfully submit, whether there is not some little degree of presumption in your signing an opinion, in contradiction to the opinion of thousands, who, without derogating from your Excellencies, are at least as well able to judge upon the point as you are?

But you add, that our cause is "precarious." Allow me to make a proper return to your Excellencies by informing you that all the affairs of men are precarious, and that war is particularly so. However, if your Excellencies meant to insinuate that our cause is precarious from an inability in us to maintain it, I beg leave to ask General Howe what progress his arms made during his command at Boston? And what shining victories, and important conquests you have achieved since your junction at Staten-Island? The eulogium,

—duo fulmina belli

cannot yet be applied to your Excellencies. General Howe's repulse from the lines on Long-Island, and his victory over the advanced guard of three thousand men, reflect no great degree of glory on the corps of at least twelve thousand that he commanded. Nor can you boast much of the action on New-York Island on the 15th September, when a few more than eight hundred Americans, attacking three companies of light troops supported by two regiments, the one Scotch, the other Hessian, drove them from hill to hill back to your lines, and carried off three pieces of brass cannon as trophies of their victory. And when General Washington, on the 2d of October, caused a large detachment to draw up to Harlaem Plains to cover the inhabitants between the two armies, while they carried off their effects, the march and continuance of the British troops in order of battle, within long shot, without firing a gun to interrupt the service, is at least some slight degree of evidence that they respect and stand in awe of the American arms. In short, without being unreasonable, I think I may be allowed to say, that these particulars do not show that our cause is so precarious as your Excellencies would insinuate it to be, and to recommend that your Excellencies "reflect seriously upon your present condition," and abandon "the unjust cause in which you are engaged," while you yet may preserve your reputation from the reproaches of posterity.

Your Excellencies call upon the inhabitants at large "to return to their allegiance." It is as if you had commanded a body of troops to advance to the assault before you had put them in order of battle. I tell your Excellencies, that protection must precede allegiance; for the latter is founded on the benefit of the former. That the operations of the forces by sea and land under your orders, demonstrate that your King is not our protector; and that the allegiance of America to the King of Great Britain is now utterly out of the question.

But you attempt to allure the inhabitants by telling them they may "be secured in a free enjoyment of their liberties and properties, upon the true principles of the Constitution." Will your Excellencies tell us where those principles are to be found? You must say they are not to be found in the present British Government. Do we not know that the majority of the two Houses of Parliament are absolutely under the King of Great Britain's direction? They make and repeal laws; they agree with or reject motions; they vote money even without limitation of sum at the pleasure of that King's Minister, in whose pay they actually are; and your Excellencies as men of honour dare not deny these things. Will you then say that, where there is such a dependence, the true principles of the Constitution operate? The history of the present reign, all Europe would witness against you. Those principles have been long despised by the rulers, and lost to the people—otherwise, even at the commencement of the present reign, we should not have seen the dismissal of the virtuous Chancellor of the Exchequer, Legge, because he would not quit his seat in Parliament at the instigation of the last Prince of Wales; nor the massacre in St. George's Fields, and the royal thanks to the assassins; nor the repeated and unredressed complaints to the Throne; nor the unheard of profusion of the publick treasure, far exceeding the extravagance of a Caligula or a Nero; nor the present ruinous situation of Great Britain; nor the present war in America, for the worst of purposes kindled by your King. Can your Excellencies be so wanting to yourselves, as, at this time of day, on the part of your master, seriously to talk to us of a security upon the true principles of the Constitution! Did it never strike you that the Americans would expect to see such principles operating in England, before they could be duped into a belief that America could possibly feel their effects from the dark recess of the royal palace? The Lord Mayor of London has openly charged Lord North, and the Lords of Admiralty, with licensing ships to trade to all parts of America, in direct disregard, contempt, and defiance of an act of Parliament to the contrary, passed so late as December last. And yet, your Excellencies do not scruple to talk to us of a security upon the true principles of the Constitution! Let the fountain be sweet, and then its stream may be salutary.

Your Excellencies say "the King is most graciously pleased to direct a revision" of instructions and acts. If you really mean to conciliate, why will you insult the inhabitants at large? It was "the King's" bounden duty to have directed, not only a revision, but an amendment of his instructions, and to have recommended a repeal of the acts when the people first complained of them. But he, having been criminally deaf to the cries of the injured, to terrify them into silence—having burnt their towns, restrained their trade, seized and confiscated their vessels, driven them into enormous expenses, sheathed his sword in their bowels, and adorned the heads of their aged, women, and children, with a cincture made by the scalping-knife of his ally the Indian savage—you now tell these injured people, that "the King is graciously pleased to direct a revision!" His very mercies are insults!

And so your Excellencies, besides your military commands as Admiral and General, are also "Commissioners for restoring peace." Is there not some error in this title? Ought we not instead of "peace" to read tyranny? You seem armed at all points for this purpose, and your very language detects the latent design. But you are Commissioners, and for the important purpose of "restoring peace," you are honoured with a power—"to confer." And you have condescended to be mere machines through which, as through speaking trumpets, words are to be sounded from America to Britain! How much lower is it possible for your Excellencies to degrade yourselves in the eyes of the world? By this, it is most evident, the British King has not one generous thought respecting America. Nor does he mean to grant terms upon the true principles of the Constitution. For, if to grant such terms was bona fide the intention of your master, without doubt you would have been vested with competent powers. But he plainly means to grant nothing that he can possibly avoid, and therefore he would have the matter of negotiation drawn into length under his own eye. Can we place any confidence in such a Prince? His aim is to divide, not to redress, and your Excellencies' Declaration is but a continuation of Lord North's conciliatory plan.

Thus, while we remember that Lord North declared, on the 20th of February, 1775, that his famous conciliatory plan was rather calculated to break a link in the American chain of union than to give satisfaction to the people, and that the exercise of the right of taxing every part of the British dominions must by no means be given up, that Lord Mansfield, on the third reading of the bill declaring war against the United Colonies, affirmed that he did not consider who was originally in the wrong, they were now to consider only where they were, and the justice of the cause must now give way to their present situation. When we consider the King of Great Britain's speech to the Parliament on the last of November, and the Commons' address and his answer on the 7th of December, 1774—the Commons' address of the 9th of February, 1775, and the royal answer; and the speech from the throne at the last opening of the Parliament, October the 26th, 1775—all declaring an unalterable purpose to maintain the supreme authority of that Legislature over all the dominions of the Crown—in other words, their unalterable purpose, to bind us in all cases whatsoever; when we see your hostile array and operations, in consequence of those declarations—I say, when we consider these things, we can be at no loss to form a just idea of the intentions of your King, or to conceive what your Excellencies mean by "the true principles of the Constitution." Nor are we to be caught by any allurements your Excellencies may throw out: you confess, and we know that you, as Commissioners, have not any power to negotiate and determine any thing.

But, unanswerable as the reasons are against America returning to a subjection under the British Crown, now in fact become despotick—and America, after unheard-of injuries, infinite toil, hazard and expense, her inhabitants called cowards by your master's servants, civil and military, having declared herself independent—did not your Excellencies feel a little for our honour, when you, at the head of your armies, held out to us subjection and peace? Did not you feel the dignity of your characters affected when you, under the guise of a security upon the true principles of the Constitution, recommend to "the inhabitants at large" to rescind their decree, and by their own mouths declare themselves the most contemptible people in history, which gives no example of such baseness—render their name a term of reproach among all nations—and forbid each other from placing any, the least degree of confidence in, and all foreign States from paying the least degree of credit to, their most solemn declarations? In short, to submit to a Government abandoned to corruption, lost to a sense of justice, and already but a step behind absolute despotism—a Government that has long been and ever must be jealous of our rise, and studious to depress our natural growth! Did not your Excellencies blush and shrink within yourselves when you asked men, who had been almost ruined by your gracious master, to abandon the honourable and natural station of independence, and stoop to kiss his hand, now daily bathed in, and which ever must continue stained by, the blood of a friend! a brother! a son! a father!

That your Excellencies may "reflect seriously" upon "the unjust cause in which you are engaged," and that the name of Howe may be enrolled with the names of Marlborough and Efingham, are the wishes of

A CAROLINIAN.

South-Carolina, Charleston, October 22, 1776.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War Office, Philadelphia, October 22, 1776.

SIR: The Congress having done the Board of War the honour of referring to them your letter for consideration and execution, we beg leave to inform you that we have ordered two hundred thousand cartridges to be instantly forwarded you. Light wagons have been got and are fitting ready, and you will receive the above supply by to-morrow evening, or the next morning. We have employed persons to make up a quantity for the use of the army, which shall be forwarded to your care as soon as a proper number shall be completed. We cannot, however, but wish that General Washington could procure such supplies of ammunition as he may want from the Eastern States, there being very little in this city, from whence alone every demand to the southward of Hudson's river must be answered. Every assistance, however, that can be, shall be afforded you, as well as his Excellency the General, from this office.

We have given orders about the purchase of salt, the result of which you shall hear so soon as we can write satisfactorily.

With every wish for your success and honour, we, sir, are your very obedient, humble servants.

By order of the Board of War:

EDWARD RUTLEDGE.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq.

RESOLUTION FOR RETURN OF PRISONERS SUSPENDED.

In Congress, October 22, 1776

Resolved, That the Resolution respecting sending home the Canadians, be suspended till further orders.

That the Board of War be directed to order the several Prisoners in Philadelphia to the places of their destination, and that they write to the several Committees who have the charge of Prisoners, not to suffer them to go beyond the bounds allowed them, nor to permit any of them to come to Philadelphia without leave first obtained from the Board of War.

War Office, October 22, 1776.

The foregoing resolutions of Congress are published by order of the Board of War, for the information of all persons concerned therein, of which the several Committees who have the charge of prisoners captivated by the armies of the United States, residing in this or any other of the confederated States, are desired to take notice. And all prisoners of war now in Philadelphia are required immediately to repair to their several places of rendezvous, without staying any longer in Philadelphia on any pretence whatsoever.

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

JOSEPH HALLETT TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Princetown, October 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with your desire or order of the 18th September, I have been into New-England. I found there a very inconsiderable part of the goods Captain Rogers had taken and carried into Fire-Island inlet, and from thence carted across the island to Huntington. The whole, I think, will not sell for more than five hundred pounds. They consist of the following articles, viz: one hogshead and six barrels of sugar, four barrels and two bags of coffee, four barrels of cocoa, one box tea, nine pieces sail-duck, twelve barrels oil, with one or two more small articles.

He sent round to Providence a small sloop that he and Captain Pond took in coming from Halifax, bound to New-York, with a parcel of intrenching tools. These I ordered down to New-York soon after the vessel was taken, and sold them to General Washington. The goods and sloop now in New-England, I have taken the necessary steps to have them condemned and sold; when done shall forward you the sales.

I have supplied Captain Rogers with the greatest part of his provision for a four months' cruise, and money to purchase the remainder. I also advanced him a sufficient sum of money, including that sum you had in the hands of Mr. Hobart, to pay his ship's company their whole wages, except one month's pay, which I thought best to withhold lest they should choose to look out for new quarters. I am in hopes the sloop will get to sea in a few days.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,

JOSEPH HALLETT.

To the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

MAJOR GREENE, OF DE LANCEY'S BRIGADE, TO CAPT. SMITH.

Hampstead, Long-Island, New-York, October 22, 1776.

SIR: Mr. French, your Lieutenant, who arrived here this morning, and delivered over the two persons made mention of in your letter to me, informs me that there are a considerable number of horses, the property of notorious Rebels and disaffected people, in the eastern part of the County of Suffolk. You are, therefore, to send out strong and sufficient parties to drive in all the horses you can find so circumstanced; convene them all at your quarters. As you will not lose time in the execution of this business, I doubt not but they can be with me at Hampstead on Friday or Saturday next.

I am, sir, your very obedient servant,

JOSEPH GREENE,

Major First Battalion, Brigadier-General
De Lancey's Brigade.

To Captain Smith.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, Valentine's Hill, October 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: From my remote situation, and my ignorance of the country in which the army under your command to the northward is to act, it is impossible for me to give my peremptory orders, or scarcely my opinion, as to the direction of matters, in your quarter. I am confident your own good sense, zeal, and activity, will suggest to you the most probable means of making amends for the heavy loss we have sustained by the destruction of General Arnold's fleet upon Lake Champlain; but my experience of the many evils attending the calling in a considerable body of raw Militia obliges me to give you my sentiments upon that head, and to tell you that I fear they will render you more disservice than any real good. From their want of every camp necessary when they join a regular army, they commit an intolerable waste of stores, which, once put into their hands, can scarcely be ever regained, and are so much dead loss to the publick; and for want of regularity in their drafts of ammunition, provision, and other necessaries, they consume much more than is convenient to spare from a garrison near a source of supplies, much less from one at such a distance that it requires every exertion to keep up the magazines at the best of times.

I have been informed that Ticonderoga, properly garrisoned and supplied with provision and ammunition, is almost impregnable, even at a season of the year when an army can lay before it with the greatest convenience; if so, instead of calling up a number of useless hands and mouths, (for such I deem Militia in general,) I would advise a collection of as much provision as could possibly be got together, which if sufficient for nine thousand effective men, of which your army consisted by General Arnold's letter, I should imagine you could keep Burgoyne and Carleton at bay till the rigour of the season would oblige them to raise the siege, not only for want of conveniences to lay in field, but for fear the freezing of the lake should make their return impracticable in case of accident. I would recommend the removal of carriages and draft cattle of all kinds from the country adjacent, that if they should attempt to slip by Ticonderoga by any other route, and come down upon the settlements, that plan should be rendered abortive for want of means of conveyance for their baggage and stores. I am unacquainted with the extent of your works, and consequently of the number of men necessary to man them. If your present numbers should be insufficient for that purpose, I would then by all means advise your making up the deficiency out of the best-regulated Militia that could be got. Some might likewise be useful in bringing up supplies and fill the places of men who would render more service with arms in their hands. You will always be kind enough to bear in mind that I am giving my opinion, not issuing my orders. The vexation I have experienced from the humours and intolerable caprice of Militia at a critical time, makes me feel sensibly for the officer who is to depend upon them in the day of trial. Upon the whole, I beg you may not be influenced by any thing I have thrown out; you have had experience of the temper of the people who will probably march to your assistance, and therefore know whether they differ in character from those who have reinforced the army under my command.

In full confidence that you will do what seems best to your judgment, I submit the matter entirely to you, only esteeming myself happy if any hints of mine should be serviceable to you.

I am, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Camp on Valentine's Hill, October 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by his Excellency, whose business has called him from hence, to acknowledge his receipt of your favours of the 12th and 15th instant, and to inform you in answer to the first, that he will mention the case of the French gentlemen to General Lee, and obtain his opinion as to the best mode of providing for 'em in a useful way. The horses belonging to the Light Dragoons which were taken, he thinks will be very serviceable, and he will write to General Ward or one of the agents to purchase them.

In respect to your requisition for an immediate return of ordnance stores, his Excellency says it cannot possibly be complied with in the present unsettled state of the army. In order to effect the good purposes you have in view, he would take the liberty to recommend the establishing of magazines of ammunition and other ordnance stores in proper places of security, from whence supplies could be occasionally drawn. As large quantities are constantly in demand in time of war, he does not conceive your provision in these instances can be too great. He will direct the regimental returns in future to include arms and accoutrements, and the Commissary-General to transmit monthly lists of rations. He thinks the regulation extremely proper, though he apprehends the information to be premature respecting the over-quantity suggested to have been drawn, having heard no suspicion of the sort in this army of late.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp on Valentine's Hill, October 22, 1776.

SIR: Sundry matters of importance having called his Excellency's attention from here this morning, I have the honour, by his command, to acknowledge his receipt of your several favours of the 19th and 21st instant.

His Excellency thanks you for the forces you have ordered to the Fishkills, and would recommend that in their route they should march by the rear of our troops, at or near the White-Plains, where he would wish them to halt, and for the commanding officers to apply to him for orders. He is sensible of the past exertions of your State, and is confident that nothing on their part will be wanting to advance the publick cause. The proclamation you have issued he thinks a judicious step, and that many salutary consequences may result from it. He hopes an implicit regard will be paid to it, and that every effective man will prepare himself in the best manner that circumstances will admit of, to serve as exigencies may require. The intelligence respecting the engagements and defeat of our fleet upon the lake he had received before your favour.

In respect to your request for General Clinton to command the intended expedition to Long-Island, I am directed by his Excellency to inform you that the situation of our affairs will not allow of his compliance; and further, that if the troops are not on the very point of embarking, that he is of opinion the expedition had better be deferred and the troops moved this way. They may be of material service to us, and great annoyance to the enemy in galling their flank. A considerable part of their army is now at New-Rochelle, and some advanced as far as Marinack. All their movements indicate their intention of penetrating the country from the Sound, by way of the White-Plains; and to stop their progress, our utmost exertions will be employed. These matters his Excellency desired me to mention to you, and to submit to your consideration, conceiving himself that under the present circumstances of our affairs, the moving of the troops this way may be attended with many valuable consequences, and more than if sent across the Sound.

I have the pleasure to inform you that a detachment of our men, under the command of Colonel Hazlet, surprised Major Rogers and his regiment last night, at Marinack. They brought off thirty-six prisoners, and about sixty muskets. The number of slain is not ascertained. It is said that a good many of them fell; and further, that if the guides had pursued strictly their instructions, the whole would have been cut off. We had two men killed and twelve wounded; among them Major Greene, of the First Virginia regiment, an officer of great merit.

In haste, I have the honour to be, with very great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL GLOVER, DATED MILE SQUARE, OCTOBER 22, 1776.

You no doubt heard the enemy landed all their army on Frog's Point the 11th instant, leaving only twelve hundred men in York, and there remained until the 18th, which was Friday. I arose early in the morning and went on the hill with my glass, and discovered a number of ships in the Sound under way; in a very short time saw the boats, upwards of two hundred sail, all manned and formed in four grand divisions. I immediately sent off Major Lee express to General Lee, who was about three miles distant, and without waiting his orders, turned out the brigade I have the honour to command, and very luckily for us I did, as it turned out afterwards, the enemy having stole a march one and a half miles on us. I marched down to oppose their landing with about seven hundred and fifty men, and three field-pieces, but had not gone more than half the distance before I met their advanced guard, about thirty men; upon which I detached a Captain's guard of forty men to meet them, while I could dispose of the main body to advantage. This plan succeeded very well, as you will hereafter see. The enemy had the advantage of us, being posted on an eminence which commanded the ground we had to march over. However, I did the best I could, and disposed of my little party to the best of my judgment: Colonel Reed's on the left of the road, Colonel Shepherd's in the rear and to the right of him, Colonel Baldwin's in the rear and on the right of Shepherd's, my own regiment commanded by Captain Courtis, (Colonel Johonnot being sick, and Major Lee being Brigade-Major,) bringing up the rear with the three field-pieces of artillery. Thus disposed of, I rode forward—(oh! the anxiety of mind I was then in for the fate of the day—the lives of seven hundred and fifty men immediately at hazard, and under God their preservation entirely depended on their being well disposed of; besides this, my country, my honour, my own life, and every thing that was dear, appeared at that critical moment to be at stake—I would have given a thousand worlds to have had General Lee, or some other experienced officer present, to direct, or at least to approve of what I had done—looked around, but could see none, they all being three miles from me, and the action came on so sudden it was out of their power to be with me.)—to the advance guard, and ordered them to advance, who did, within fifty yards, and received their fire without the loss of a man; we returned it, and fell four of them, and kept the ground till we exchanged five rounds. Their body being much larger than mine, and having two men killed and several wounded, which weakened my party, the enemy pushing forward not more than thirty yards distant, I ordered a retreat, which was masterly well done by the Captain that commanded the party. The enemy gave a shout and advanced; Colonel Reed's, laying under cover of a stone wall undiscovered till they came within thirty yards, then rose up and gave them the whole charge; the enemy broke, and retreated for the main body to come up. In this situation we remained about an hour and a half, when they appeared about four thousand, with seven pieces of artillery; they now advance, keeping up a constant fire of artillery; we kept our post under cover of the stone wall before mentioned till they came within fifty yards of us, rose up and gave them the whole charge of the battalion; they halted and returned the fire with showers of musketry and cannon balls. We exchanged seven rounds at this post, retreated, and formed in the rear of Colonel Shepherd and on his left; they then shouted and pushed on till they came on Shepherd, posted behind a fine double stone wall; he rose up and fired by grand divisions, by which he kept up a constant fire, and maintained his part till he exchanged seventeen rounds with them, and caused them to retreat several times, once in particular so far that a soldier of Colonel Shepherd's leaped over the wall and took a hat and canteen off of a Captain that lay dead on the ground they retreated from.

However, their body being so much larger than ours, we were, for the preservation of the men, forced to retreat, and formed in the rear of Baldwin's regiment; they then came up to Baldwin's, but the ground being much in their favour, and their heavy train of artillery, we could do but little before we retreated to the bottom of the hill, and had to pass through a run of water, (the bridge I had taken up before,) and then marched up a hill the opposite side of the creek, where I left my artillery; the ground being rough and much broken I was afraid to risk it over. The enemy halted, and played away their artillery at us, and we at them, till night, without any damage on our side, and but very little on theirs. At dark we came off, and marched about three miles, leading to Dobb's Ferry, after fighting all day without victuals or drink, laying as a picket all night, the heavens over us and the earth under us, which was all we had, having left our baggage at the old encampment we left in the morning. The next morning marched over to Mill Square. I had eight men killed and thirteen wounded, among which was Colonel Shepard, a brave officer.

Sunday, General Lee sent for and informed me there was two hundred barrels of pork and flour at East-Chester, if the enemy had not taken it; would be glad I would think of some way to bring it off. I sent out and pressed fifteen wagons, and at night turned out the whole brigade, and went down so nigh the enemy we heard their musick and talk very plain, and brought off the whole.

Wednesday, sent out a scouting party, principally from my own regiment, who met with a party of Hessians, and attacked them, killed twelve and took three prisoners; one of the slain was an officer of rank, on horseback, the horse was taken and brought off. We had one man mortally wounded, of Colonel Baldwin's regiment.

Sunday, the enemy struck their tents, and were on a march in two columns, one to the right, and the other to the left, towards the North River. General Lee immediately gave orders for his division, which consisted of eight thousand men, to march for North-Castle, to take the ground to the eastward and north of them, about fourteen miles distance. We had not marched more than three miles before we saw the right column advancing in a cross road to cut us off, not more than three-quarters of a mile distance; this being our situation, eight thousand men on the road with their baggage, artillery, and one hundred and fifty wagons, filled the road for four miles. We then turned off and marched by Dobb's Ferry road, and got into White-Plains about ten o'clock, Monday morning, after being out all night. We left General McDougall's brigade posted on a height between the enemy and us, to cover our march. About twelve o'clock they attacked him with a heavy column, supported with twelve pieces of artillery, who pressed him so hard was obliged to retreat, having twenty men killed and about forty wounded, and wholly from their artillery. I am posted on a mountain, commanding the roads to Albany and New-England; the enemy on one opposite, about one mile distance. We expect an attack every moment; I don't care how soon, as I am very certain, with the blessing of God, we shall give them a drubbing. Where you will hear from me next is very uncertain.

COMMITTEE FOR THE DETECTION OF CONSPIRACIES IN NEW-YORK.

In Committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York, for inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies which may be formed in the said State against the liberties of America, Fishkill, October 22, 1776:

Resolved, That the Chairman of this Committee be directed to apply to the Committee of Safety for five hundred Pounds for the use of this Committee, for the expenditure of which this Committee will be accountable to the Convention of this State.

Ordered, That the Secretary furnish the Chairman with a copy of this Resolution.

Extract from the Minutes:

A. W. D. PEYSTER, Secretary.

NEW-YORK CONVENTION TO FRANCIS LEWIS.

Fishkills, October, 1776.

SIRS: We are informed that there is two cargoes of salt belonging to the Continent under your direction, the one at New-Rochelle, the other at New-London. As there is a pressing necessity for securing the provisions that lay contiguous to the enemy, we request that you will sell us this salt for the publick service. The reason of this application is to prevent, if possible, a quantity of provisions falling into the hands of the enemy. Nor is the salt itself which lies at New-Rochelle out of danger.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, October 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer is Abraham Groot, who has been express for me with your letter to Colonel Dayton, and has brought a letter back for the General, which I now forward by him. As I wrote you in my last, I had purchased two acres of land for the barracks, and that the materials are chiefly ready, but am entirely without a single person, either carpenter or mason. They are all gone with the Militia. The Militia from this are commanded by Colonel Abraham Wemple. I have nobody left but twenty-four men for wagoners, who stand ready with their wagons to take in the baggage of Colonel Dayton arrived at the river.

Should the General think proper, I wish he would order between twenty and thirty carpenters back out of Colonel Wemple's regiment, and as many masons as there is in the whole regiment, which is not many, to carry on the barracks. Unless I am furnished with the above number of men, I won't be able to get the barracks done this fall, as the season is far advanced.

I have a letter from Mr. Avery, Deputy Commissary-General, who acquaints me that he has the General's order that all the flour I have purchased in this town be forwarded to Fort Stanwix. The rest must be forwarded to Fort George and Fort Edward. Accordingly I have yesterday began in sending off flour to Fort George, (sixty barrels) and shall be able to send two hundred barrels this week, I hope, if I am not disappointed with wagons.

I shall expect to hear from you by the bearer whether I am to expect the carpenters and masons, and what I must do with the two companies of batteau-men, as I will have no flour just now to load them. But it will not do to discharge them now; a body does not know what may happen. There is a good stock of provision at Fort Schuyler, which I am very glad of, and there is a good quantity at the German Flats. There was, on the 18th of this month, five hundred barrels of flour, one hundred barrels of pork, eleven barrels of beef, some cattle, and some other articles of provision at Fort Stanwix, which will last the troops that are to be stationed there this winter a very long while.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

HENRY GLEN.

To His Excellency General Schuyler.

J. TRUMBULL TO THE COMMITTEE AT BENNINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Tyconderoga, October 22, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The General earnestly requests the Militia of Bennington, and the country adjacent, to march immediately to this post.

The late success of the enemies of America on the lakes, renders it necessary for us to use every method to exert every nerve for the defence of this post. The preservation of our country, your own happiness, depend much on the success of this army.

Orders have been long since sent to the Colonels of the upper and lower regiments of Militia in the Grants; but lest they should have miscarried, I am ordered to repeat them.

I am, gentlemen, your very obedient servant,

JOHN TRUMBULL, Deputy Adjutant-General.

To the honourable Chairman of the Committee of Safety, at Bennington.

CAPTAIN STEWART TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, October 22, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I sit down to write a few lines to you, as I flatter myself you will not be displeased to hear I am getting much better. The Doctors suffer me this morning to take a short ride, which I hope will be of much service to me, and to-morrow intend setting off for Albany. My stay there, I hope, will be but short, and you may depend the first moment I am able I shall again return to my duty.

Where the Regulars are, it would give me great pleasure to know. Mr. Morris and the rest of the gentlemen who were at Ticonderoga, informed me they were at Crown Point, and repairing the saw-mill there. If so, have some hopes that an attack may not be made for some time at least, and possibly I may be with you by that time. They conjectured they had an intention of repairing the barracks at Crown Point.

Doctor Brown is very sorry his state of health will not permit his complying with your orders, he being extremely ill in the gout at present; and when he may be better, God knows.

I hear there is at least three thousand Militia at Fort Edward on their way to you. Can't hear of much provisions on the road. Shall hurry it on as I go along. This scroll has so fatigued me that I must conclude by assuring you I am, my dear sir, your affectionate friend and obedient, humble servant,

WALTER STEWART.

Pray remember me to all friends with you.

GENERAL GATES TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Tyconderoga, October 22, 1776.

SIR: At three o'clock this morning I had the honour to receive your favour of the 17th instant, from New-Haven.

When I sent General Schuyler the account of our loss upon Lake Champlain, I requested him to despatch a copy of General Arnold's letter to your Excellency. Lest that should have miscarried, the General sends you, enclosed, a copy thereof. It would have been happy for the United States had the gallant behaviour and steady good conduct of that excellent officer been supported by a fleet in any degree equal to the enemy's. As the case stands, though they boast a victory, they must respect the vanquished. General Waterbury has doubtless, by this time, waited upon your Excellency.

The Director-General of the Hospital in this department arrived at Albany the 5th instant, with a large parcel of medicines purchased in the Eastern Governments, so that we are not likely to suffer more for want of physick. The Sub-Director of the Hospital and three Mates are come here, by my order, from Lake George, and every thing necessary is prepared by them, in case of an immediate action. Surgeons we have plenty. I wish they were all good; but I hope we shall have a sufficient portion of skill, upon the whole, in that department.

General Carleton, with his fleet and army, are at Crown Point. The exact number of the latter we cannot yet ascertain; nor whether he does not wait for the whole to join him from St. John's, &c., before he makes his grand attack. You may be assured nothing shall be wanting upon our part to give him a proper reception; and General Schuyler assures me the Militia from all quarters have been summoned to reinforce the army. I am in hourly expectation of their arrival.

I wish it may be in your Excellency's power to forward a quantity of flour to Skeensborough, by the way of Bennington. If it cannot be carted, I think it might be sent in bags, upon pack-horses. This is to provide against the worst. We are not in any immediate danger of a scarcity.

In answer to that part of your Excellency's letter relative to the officers of the State of Connecticut who have served in this department, I am to acquaint you, sir, that I think Colonel Swift, Lieutenant-Colonel Starr, Major Bigelow, Major Sumner, and Major Sedgwick, are officers who I can recommend as worthy of the rank they hold in the army of the United States. Of the other Field Officers, I am silent. As to the Captains and Subs, I have had no opportunity to know them sufficiently to say anything in their dispraise.

Spades, or iron shovels, are exceedingly wanted at this place. I have wrote repeatedly to General Schuyler, for six weeks past, but cannot procure any from him. He tells me, in his last letter, not one is to be had from Albany. One hundred at a time would be a seasonable supply. Shingle nails are also in great request here.

Trusting that the wise Disposer of all human affairs will bless our cause, the cause of freedom and mankind, I rest, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Governour Trumbull.

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL GATES.

Ty Mills, October 22, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Captain Whittlesey has made application to me, to recommend it to your Honour to have the Indians discharged. It is with the utmost difficulty I have kept them in any order until now. I most earnestly beg you will dismiss them, if you think it consistent with duty, &c.

I am sir, your Honour's very humble servant,
SAMUEL BREWER, Colonel.

To General Gates.

BEHOLD A COWARD!

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, October 22, 1776.

The publick are desired to take notice that Daniel Pittee, Ensign in Captain Timothy Stow's company, in Colonel Wheelock's regiment, applied at Head-Quarters for a discharge, upon hearing that the enemy were likely to attack our lines. He was refused, and the next day deserted the camp. This infamous runaway belongs to the south parish of Dedham, County of Suffolk.

Published by order of Brigadier-General Brickett:

ANDREW BROWN, Major of Brigade.

INDIANS OF ONENHOGHKWAGE AND TUSCARORA TO THE OFFICERS AT OTSEGO LAKE.

Onenhogkwage, October 22, 1776.

BROTHERS, THE CAPTAIN AND OTHER OFFICERS OF THE COMPANY OF RANGERS AT OTSEGO: We have been several times astonished, hearing your intentions. We understand your business is to range the woods in pursuit of Indians that are painted, or have feathers in their caps, and intend to fire on them wherever you find them. Our people are just going out to hunt, as usual, in the woods where you pass along. Hunting is their sole intention, and they go out with no other design than in the pursuit of the necessities of life. We have no bad design; neither are there any hereabouts that are ill-disposed that we know of: therefore we hope you will quiet your minds, and suffer no fears about us to trouble you, nor trouble yourselves about our customs of painting or wearing feathers on our heads, for that is no sign of bad intentions; and our young men have always practised it, thinking it no harm or breach of friendship with our brothers.

We should not have written, if we had heard it only as flying report; but we have been told four or five times by William Johnston and Glasford, that you determine to fire on any you find in the woods painted. Every time any of us go to Tyonadello, they repeat the story, and charge us not to paint. Therefore what must we think? Must we not conclude that it is dangerous for us to improve our old hunting-grounds? We had such news concerning the inhabitants of Cherry Valley last summer, and our head men sent to them to know the reason of it. They assured us the report was false. We hope it will appear to be so now. We hope you will inform us speedily if you have no design against us, and endeavour to prevent such reports being spread amongst us, which you may be sure will make trouble. We know no reason why we should stay from our hunting, or leave off painting according to our custom.

From the

WARRIORS AND HUNTERS OF ONENHOGHKWAGE
AND TUSCARORA,

I shall speak a word now, brothers. I have observed their conduct, and don't discover any bad design in them; wherefore I was troubled in my mind when the speech of one of your company was interpreted to me by William Johnston at Tyonadello. I could not receive it as a falsehood from him, and I can't expect they will leave off painting for your threats; for I have, for many years past, entreated them, from time to time, on the Sabbath, to break off from that custom, but they are so in love with it, that they will not hearken. Therefore, I entreat that you would not trouble yourselves about the customs of our people, but take care of those among yourselves which you know to be dangerous. I hope you will find out means whereby to preserve peace and unity between us and you, and also among yourselves.

These from your brother,

ISAAC.

Interpreted by

AARON CROSBY, Miss'ry.

To the Officers of the Rangers, Otsego.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, October 22, 1776,

Voted, To allow Adam Babcock & Co. two of the Cannon taken on board the ship Guineaman, and brought in by Captain Harding to New-London.

Voted, To appoint an Ensign, and give him orders to enlist twenty men, without premium, and at forty shillings per month, to be for the defence of the United States of America, and to man the Fort at Milford Harbour, until further orders, and to serve until the 25th day of December next, unless sooner discharged; and Captain Benjamin Hine is appointed an Ensign for said service, with the pay of an Ensign.

COMMITTEE OF DANBURY, (CONNECTICUT,) TO EBENEZER LOCKWOOD.

Danbury, October 22, 1776.

SIR: Having received your letter of the 20th instant, with three officers, who, you inform us, are prisoners of war, and a copy of their parole; likewise we received them into our custody, and shall endeavour to conduct towards them agreeable to the resolves of Continental Congress in such case made and provided.

By order of the Committee of Inspection for the town of Danbury, per

THOMAS STEVENS, Chairman.

To Esquire Ebenezer Lockwood, at Pound Ridge, Westchester County.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO PRESIDENT OF NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, Valentine's Hill, October 22, 1776.

SIR: By command of his Excellency I enclose you a letter for General Schuyler, under a flying seal. After submitting it to the perusal of the Convention, please to seal it, and forward it by express.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To the Hon. Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of Convention at Fishkills.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM PROVIDENCE, (RHODE-ISLAND,) DATED OCTOBER 22, 1776.

The frigate called the Providence is gone to Newport. The Warren was under sail last Sunday, and outsails all the boats in the river, upon a wind, without mainsail or top-gallant sails being set. How the Providence sails, I know not, as she went down before the wind, directly from me. They are two very fine ships, a credit to our little State.

There has been brought into this port thirty-two prizes, a pretty good beginning. There is now fitting out two twenty-gun ships, and there will be soon two new brigs built, on purpose for the business, to mount eighteen six-pounders each. This addition to our fleet will make no small show upon the list of our naval department.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN JOHN PAUL JONES.

Newport, October 22, 1776.

SIR: You are directed to go on board the Alfred, and take the command of her, and go to sea with her and the Hamden, Captain Hacker, who will be directed to keep company with you, and follow your directions. You will form such signals, and appoint such rendezvous, as you think will best answer the end of keeping company.

You are to take all British vessels, and all vessels bound to any port under the jurisdiction of the King of Great Britain, except Bermudas and New-Providence. You are, with the force under your command, to endeavour all in your power to destroy all the coal vessels you may find at or near the coal-mines at the Island of Cape Breton, and do all in your power to relieve a number of our unfortunate brethren who are prisoners, and employed in that cruel and hard service. When that is effected, and the weather will permit, you are to cruise for transports and other vessels bound to Canada, or go to Newfoundland, and destroy as much of the fishery as you possibly can, if you think the season not too far advanced; and when you think the season too cold for that station, you may cruise as long as you well can for transports bound from Great Britain to New-York. You may send any vessels into port for trial that you may think are acting detrimental to the interest of the American States.

Such vessels as you may take, which you think are not worth your while, or may not be convenient, to send into port, you may destroy, first taking the hands out.

My advice is, when your cruise is over, that you return into some port in New-England, in order for a winter's expedition.

You will send your prizes into such ports in the United States of America as you judge you can get them in with most safety. You may, if you please, send a proper person in a prize, if you should take any one fit for that purpose, to some port in France, and there to sell her and cargo, and purchase some small armed vessel, and with the overplus money lade on board her such goods as may answer best for the supply of the navy or army, first ballasting her with sulphur, you giving him orders for that purpose.

I am, sir, your friend and humble servant,
ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To John P. Jones, Esq., Commander of the ship Alfred, in the service of the United States of North America.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN JONES.

Newport, October 22, 1776.

SIR: You are desired to attend at a Court-Martial to be held on board the ship Alfred, at two o'clock this afternoon, for the trial of Samuel Halm or Emom, Thomas Donchoe, James Robinson, and John Robinson, for mutiny.

By order of the Hon. Esek Hopkins, Esq., Commander-in-Chief:

SAMUEL LYON, Secretary.

To John P. Jones, Esq., Commander of the Providence.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN HACKER.

Newport, October 22, 1776.

SIR: You are to go to sea with the Hamden under your command, in company with the Alfred, and take and follow such directions as you may receive from Captain Jones respecting your cruise. If you should part with the Alfred by accident, you are to do all in your power to join her; but should you not be able to join, you are to cruise, as long as you can, in such station as you think will be most likely to intercept the provision vessels from Great Britain, bound either to Canada or New-York.

You may destroy any ship or ships which you cannot easily man, and send into port, first taking out the hands. You will send your prizes into such ports as you judge you can with most safety get them into any of the United States of America.

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To Hoysteed Hacker, Esq., Commander of the brigantine Hamden, in the service of the United States of North America.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN BRADFORD.

Newport, October 22, 1776.

SIR: The above and annexed is a list of what goods belonged to the Captain and passengers on board the ship Ester, sent into Deptford by the Cabot; and as it has been customary in this State for the Captains to have their private adventures, and the Agent here has always delivered it by my consent, and as the above list does not seem to me unreasonable, I think you will do well to deliver the same to the persons they belong to, and you may depend that in so doing you will do but right.

Lieutenant Weaver acquaints me that the men on board the prize ship Ester want some supplies. These are, therefore, to desire you to supply him with sufficient money for that purpose, and take his receipt, and charge it to the Continent.

I am, &c.,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To John Bradford, Esq., Agent for the Continent in the State of Massachusetts-Bay, at Deptford, or, in his absence, to his Deputy there.

AARON ROOT TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Sheffield, October 22, 1776.

SIR: Some time since, the honourable Council was pleased to honour me with a commission of Lieutenant-Colonel in the First Regiment of Militia, in Barks, for which I beg leave, through your Honour, to return my sincere thanks to the honourable Board and House. My advanced age and infirm state of health would at that time have induced me to decline, had not I have listened to the advice and even importunities of some partial friends; since which time, Colonel Hopkins and Major Jackson have engaged in the service, the former of whom is in such an ill state of health that there is very little prospect of his recovering; Major Brown is dead. The whole burthen of ordering and directing the Militia in consequence falls on me. To the performance of my duty herein, for the reasons before hinted, I feel myself wholly unequal. My health still continuing in an impaired state, and it being with reason expected that those who are in office should not be inactive in this time of danger, a disinterested regard for the good of my country and the present all-important contest, induces me humbly to lay my case before the honourable Council and House, and beg leave to retire, that some gentleman whose exertions may have a greater tendency to be of service, may be appointed in my stead.

I am, with great respect, your Honours' most obedient and very humble servant,

AARON ROOT.

To the honourable President of Council.

Portsmouth, October 22, 1776.

Saturday last, was sent into this port a prize brig, bound to Bilboa, with two thousand quintals of fish, taken by a Salem privateer.

Monday, the 14th instant, arrived at Falmouth, Casco Bay, a large ship from Jamaica, bound to London, laden with five hundred hogsheads of sugar, and fifty hogsheads of rum, taken by the privateer Retaliation, from Beverley, Giles commander. The ship mounted six carriage-guns, and fought the privateer two hours before she struck.

Tuesday last, arrived at Falmouth, Casco Bay, a large brig, the Mary and James, commanded by Thomas More. She was from Falmouth in England, bound to Naples, laden with bales and boxes of goods, cocoa, pepper, alum, tin, lead, &c., taken by Captain Simon Forrester, in the privateer sloop Rover, from Salem.

Williamsburg, November 15, 1776.

Last night an express arrived from Colonel Christian, with letters to the Governour, dated October 23, giving an account of his having passed the Tennessee river on the 18th of that month, without any molestation from the enemy, and after marching through several Indian towns, at length arrived safely in the Island town, the lowermost but one on the river, which he found had been precipitately abandoned, the Indians having only had time to carry off their clothes and the best of their household goods, with which they pushed off in canoes down the Tennessee. They left behind them their horses, cattle, hogs, fowls, and even dogs, with their whole crops of corn and potatoes, which the Colonel learned was a very great one. He expected at his camp in the Island town, as next day, the Raven warrior of Chote, with Oucanastota, the Little Carpenter, and a number of other chiefs; having given them to understand, that if they did not immediately come in and make submission, and agree to such terms as he should deem to be reasonable, that he would lay waste all the towns, and pursue their fugitive countrymen as far as the Creek nation.

The Colonel thinks it probable he may enter into a treaty with them, as he has good reason to believe that all the old warriours had been averse to the war, and that the rest were stirred up by Cameron, by bribes and threats. Two of his scouts, on the road to Hywassee, found an old woman and two children in the woods, almost famished with hunger and cold, having been out six days and nights without fire, or provisions of any kind except berries and haws. The soldiers took compassion upon the poor wretches, made them a fire, and give them victuals. They also met a young man who had lost his wife, and was then in search of her; they called to him to come to them, on which he clubbed his gun and came up. He informed that the villain Cameron pushed off to the Creek nation as soon as he heard Colonel Christian had crossed Broad river.

I am some engaged in framing a government for this State.

I beg to be remembered most respectfully to Lord Stirling.

LUX & BOWLY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Captain Kilty applied to us yesterday for cordage to fit out the Ninety-two; but we have met with such difficulty in procuring hemp to go on with the engagements we are already under, that we cannot furnish him, unless you think proper to take off so much as he may want from the quantity we are to furnish for the gondolas, &c., and then we apprehend it will be impossible to get rigging for them till next summer.

Captain Patterson called on us for some brimstone, which we delivered.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

LUX & BOWLY.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Schuyler, Albany.

We send it by the sloop Sachem, Captain James Robinson, under cover to William Bingham, Esq., at Martinico, who will forward the same.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO SILAS DEANE.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

SIR: We lately wrote you very fully by Mr. William Hodge, Jun., who went passenger in the sloop Independence, to Martinico, from whence he will proceed to France, and deliver you sundry despatches from this Committee; amongst the rest was the plan of a treaty with the Court of France, and instructions of Congress relative thereto; and this day we have enclosed you instructions relative to treaties with other nations, and sent them under cover to William Bingham, Esq., at Martinico. Enclosed herein are triplicates of the whole, which we send by the brig Lexington, William Hallock, Esq., commander, under cover to Mr. Stephen Ceronio, at Cape François, to be forwarded from thence to Messrs. Delap, at Bordeaux, and we hope in due time you will receive the whole safely.

For and on behalf of the Committee of Correspondence, I am, dear sir, yours, &c.,

ROBERT MORRIS.

To Silas Deane, Esq.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

SIR: The enclosed letter for Messrs. Samuel & J. H. Delap, of Bordeaux, contains some papers of importance, and I request you will most carefully forward it under a French cover to them by first good safe conveyance.

I am yours, &c.,

To Mr. Stephen Ceronio.

P. S. Pray advise what ship you send it by.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The packet enclosed herewith is of importance to Mr. Deane, and I beg the favour of you to forward it to him as quickly after you receive it as possible. I think you had best send it by express, the expense of which he will cheerfully pay, and you must not suffer it to go by any conveyance in the least degree doubtful.

I am, sirs, your obedient servant, ROBERT MORRIS.

To Messrs. Samuel & J. H. Delap.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO SILAS DEANE.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

SIR: We have already wrote you two letters of this date by different conveyances. The present we send by the Andrew Doria, Isaiah Robison, Esq., commander, for St. Eustatia, from whence it will be sent to William Bingham, Esq., at Martinico, and by him be transmitted to you in a French bottom.

You will find enclosed two resolves of Congress passed yesterday. From one of them you will learn that Thomas Jefferson, Esq., declined going to France, and that Arthur Lee, Esq., of London, is elected to serve as a Commissioner in his stead. You will therefore contrive to give him immediate notice to repair to you, and then deliver him that resolve and the enclosed letter. By the other resolve you will see that Congress direct you to procure eight line-of-battle ships, either by hire or purchase. We hope you may meet immediate success in this application, and that you may be able to influence the Courts of France and Spain to send a large fleet at their own expense to act in concert with these ships, which should be expedited immediately with directions to the commander to make the first port he can with safety in these States, preferring this, if winds and weather favour him; and he must also have instructions to subject himself totally after his arrival to the orders of Congress.

We are, sir, yours, &c.

ROBERT MORRIS.

To Silas Deane, Esq.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO WILLIAM BINGHAM.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

We have wrote you already by this conveyance of the brigantine Andrew Doria, to St. Eustatia, which we deem a safer than the Sachem, as she sails faster and is of more force. Therefore we now enclose you some very important despatches for Mr. Deane, and request you will forward them by the very first good conveyance, advising us hereafter the vessel and master's name by which they go, and also of their arrival when you hear it.

We are, sir, yours, &c.

To William Bingham, Esq.COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO ARTHUR LEE.
Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

SIR: By this conveyance we transmit to Silas Deane, Esq., a resolve of the honourable the Continental Congress of Delegates from the thirteen United States of America, whereby you are appointed one of their Commissioners for negotiating a treaty of alliance, amity, and commerce, with the Court of France, and also for negotiating treaties with other nations agreeable to certain plans and instructions of Congress, which we have transmitted by various conveyances to Mr. Deane, another of the Commissioners. We have requested him to give you immediate notice to join him, and on your meeting to deliver this letter, and lay before you all the papers and instructions; also to deliver you the resolve whereby you are appointed. We flatter ourselves from the assurances of your friends here, that you will cheerfully undertake this important business, and that our country will greatly benefit of those abilities and that attachment you have already manifested in sundry important services, which, at a proper period, shall be made known to those you would wish.

This Committee will think it proper to address all their despatches unto Mr. Deane, until they have certain advice that his colleagues have joined him; but the communication of them will be the same as if addressed to the whole.

We remain, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient servants,

ROB'T MORRIS.
B. FRANKLIN.To Arthur Lee, Esq.MARINE COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOUR OF NORTH-CAROLINA.
Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have ordered Commodore Hopkins immediately to proceed to Cape Fear, in the State of North-Carolina, with the following vessels under his command: the Alfred, of 30 guns; Columbus, 28 guns; Cabot, 16 guns; Hamden, 16 guns; Providence, 10 guns; frigate Warren, 32 guns; Providence, 28 guns; if these two last mentioned can be made ready in season.

The object of this expedition is to take or destroy the British men-of-war in the river of Cape Fear, or any other cruising upon the southern coasts with a view to distress the trade of yours and the southern States. Strong as the Commodore may be with the four that accompany him from Rhode-Island, yet we wish to put as little as possible to the hazard, but pursue this measure with the fullest confidence of success. We request that you will, upon the earliest information of Commodore Hopkins being off your coast, despatch the two Provincial armed vessels, and any others which may be under your control, to join him and coöperate with him in this important expedition, in the event of which your State is particularly and essentially interested. You will therefore hold your vessels in perfect readiness to comply with this requisition.

We beg leave to hint to you the necessity of providing skilful pilots for conducting the Commodore, that he may suffer no delay nor run no risk from his ignorance of the coast of North-Carolina. As the success of this attempt depends much on the secrecy with which it may be conducted, we need say nothing to urge you on the strict observance of this injunction.

We are, gentlemen, your humble servants.

To the Governour and Council of North-Carolina.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

October 23, 1776.

SIR: Since our last we are informed that the Galatea, a new twenty-gun ship, with the Nautikus, of sixteen guns, are gone to cruise off the capes of Virginia. These ships you will endeavour to fall in with, and take or destroy, in your way to Cape Fear. We are also informed that the Raven, of twenty guns, and the Sphynx, of sixteen, have quitted Georgia and South-Carolina, but where gone we know not. You may take with you to the southward both the Rhode-Island frigates, as well as the Cabot, if they are ready; and we will write to North-Carolina to have two fine brigantines belonging to that State in readiness to join you. They have sixteen guns each, and near one hundred men. You had best send one of your fleet into Occrock Inlet for them, as they are in there. We understand the sloop Providence, Captain Jones, has put into Rhode-Island. You may add him to your fleet, and then you'll be very strong. As this service to the southward is of much publick importance, we expect from your zeal and attachment to the interest of the United States, that you proceed on and execute this service with all possible vigour and despatch.

Wishing you health and success, we are, sir, your humble servants.

To Esek Hopkins, Esq.

P. S. We are informed that two ships-of-war passed the other day along the Jersey shore, steering southward; we know not whether to cruise off the mouth of Delaware or join the southern ships. But we deem it highly proper that you provide yourself with a very quick boat, commanded by a spirited, sensible, and skilful man, to precede your fleet, and bring you intelligence of the number, force, and situation of the enemy's ships. It might not be amiss for you to remain a short time within the capes of Virginia, until the tender should reconnoitre and inform you of the state of things at Cape Fear.

MARINE COMMITTEE—INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE CAPTAINS
MANLEY, M'NEIL, AND THOMPSON.

October 23, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We expect the Continental frigates Hancock, Boston, and Raleigh, under your respective commands, are either now ready for the sea, or shortly will be so. You are hereby directed to act in concert and cruise together, for the following purposes, and on the following stations. Your first object must be to inform yourselves in the best manner possible if any of the British men-of-war are cruising in the bay of Boston or off the coast of Massachusetts; and all such you are to endeavour with your utmost force to take, sink, or destroy. Having effected this service, you are to proceed together towards Rhode-Island, and there make prize of or destroy any of the enemy's ships-of-war that may be found cruising off the harbour or coast of Rhode-Island. The prizes you make are to be sent into the nearest port. When you arrive at Rhode-Island, if Commodore Hopkins should not be already sailed on his southern expedition, and the two frigates built in that State should not be ready for the sea, in that case you are to join Commodore Hopkins, and proceed with him on the said expedition, producing these orders to him to justify the measure. But if the Rhode-Island frigates should be ready for the sea, there will be no occasion for you, or either of you, to go southward; and you will proceed, taking with you any Continental vessel that may be at Rhode-Island and ready, if Commodore Hopkins should be sailed before you come there, and proceed to cruise against the enemy's ships and vessels that may be found off the coast between the harbour of Newport and the banks of Newfoundland.

We have no doubt, from your zeal and attachment to the cause of America, that you will execute this service with all possible despatch and vigour; and so bid you heartily farewell.

Philadelphia, October 23, 1776.

By means of a person who has lately made his escape out of New-York, we learn that General Howe makes every one of the inhabitants swear to submit and be obedient to the laws of the British Parliament, "in all cases whatsoever."

Monday last, arrived here the schooner Sally, from Bermuda, with salt, &c., by whom we learn that the Galatea, a twenty-gun ship, and the Dreadnought, of eighteen, were at Bermuda, where they had carried in several prizes. That the Galatea was to sail in a short time, and to cruise off the capes of Virginia.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Cumberland County, held in the Town of Carlisle, the 23d day of October, 1776.

The above meeting being called by a circular letter addressed to the members of the said County Committee in each township, signed by the Chairman of the Committee of Correspondence, requesting them to collect the sense of the inhabitants of their respective township concerning the oath directed by an ordinance of the late Convention of this State, to be taken by every elector before his vote for representatives shall be received.

After the occasion of the meeting was opened to the Committee, the sense of the different townships was called for, and taken through their delegates, respecting the oath above referred to; and it appeared that a very great majority were satisfied with the oath and Constitution; and, after some debate had thereon, the question was put whether this Committee be satisfied with the oath above referred to, and the Constitution as framed by the late Convention? The votes being taken, it appeared that a great majority were satisfied, and that the above be published in the newspapers.

Signed by order of the Committee:

ALEXANDER LAUGHLIN, Chairman.

Carlisle, Pennsylvania, October 25, 1776.

When the Gazette of the 2d instant came to hand, wherein an ordinance of the late Convention of this State, passed at Philadelphia the 26th of September last, was published, the Committee of Inspection and Observation of Cumberland County saw that the ordinance required every elector in this State, before his vote shall be received by the inspector, to take an oath, or affirmation, which they apprehended to be an unprecedented imposition, and an unjustifiable violation of their rights as freemen, and resolved that it was their immediate and indispensable duty to call the County Committee together. They wrote a letter for that purpose, and directed a copy thereof to the representatives in County Committee of each township, and therein made it their earnest request that, in the mean time, they would use every means in their power to learn and collect the sentiments of their constituents on this important matter, that they might be enabled to represent them at the meeting of the Committee.

The County is divided into twenty-three townships, whereof the town of Carlisle is one. In pursuance of that letter, one or more representatives from eighteen townships appeared on Tuesday, the 22d day of this instant, in the Court-House at Carlisle. After a Chairman and Clerk were appointed, and the occasion of the meeting of the Committee at that time opened: on motion, the representatives of each township delivered the sentiments of their constituents concerning the oath aforesaid; when it appeared that ten townships were satisfied with the oath and constitution framed by the late Convention; and, after reasoning on the subject, the question was put, viz: Whether the members of the Committee present were satisfied with the constitution and oath aforesaid, or dissatisfied? It appeared that the representatives of twelve townships were satisfied, and of six townships were not satisfied. The Clerk then entered a short minute of the above proceedings; and, on motion, resolved that it be printed in the newspapers. Afterwards, a Committee of two members were appointed to prepare and correct the minute aforesaid for the press, who, after a considerable time, made report in writing to the Committee, which was read, and occasioned debates. At length the question was put, viz: Whether a short minute, as entered by the Clerk, should be printed, or the facts as they happened; when it was carried by a majority that the minute, as entered by the Clerk, should be printed; and a copy of that minute was transcribed by a member, to be sent to the press.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

The subscribers then declared that, as the minute aforesaid did not convey the ideas of the proceedings in the manner they conceived of them, they would send the facts as they happened to the press, which they now do, that every reader may know them.

GEORGE STEVENSON,
STEPHEN DUNCAN, and
SAMUEL LAIRD.

COMMISSIONERS FOR PENNSYLVANIA TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Mount Washington, October 23, 1776.

SIR: The anxious concern we feel for the general cause, as well as the particular line of duty marked out to us by our instructions from the State of Pennsylvania, is the occasion of the present trouble to your Excellency.

When we had the honour of waiting on you at this place about a month ago, we were assured by the Adjutant-General that recruiting orders should be immediately issued for the Continental battalions raised in Pennsylvania, then at and near New-York Island. This assurance was given us on the 8th of October; and, in full confidence that they would be issued generally, we set out the next day for Tyconderoga. On our return, a few days ago, we came to the camp at the White-Plains, and from Colonel Hand we understood that he had received the orders, and, in consequence of them, had recruited more than an hundred men out of the Flying-Camp for his battalion only, and would have been able to have completed the whole, had it not been for the frequent movements of the army, which had unavoidably prevented him.

At our return to this place we naturally inquired of Colonels Magaw and Cadwalader what success they had met with in their enlistments, when, to our astonishment, they informed us that they had not received any orders for that purpose.

Your Excellency, we doubt not, had good reasons for issuing the orders to Colonel Hand only, and not to the other gentlemen. However, as we are informed by General Ewing that many of the Pennsylvanians in the Flying-Camp under his command are willing to enter into the service on the new establishment, and as Colonels Magaw and Cadwalader are near, and could with ease enlist them, we have thought it our duty to represent the affair to your Excellency, and doubt not but that the zeal and ability you have ever exerted in the cause of American liberty, will induce you to take the most proper measures for effectuating that glorious purpose.

We have the honour to be, with the greatest esteem, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servants,

JAC. POTTER,
WM. CLARK,
JOHN MORRIS, Jun.,
Commissioners for Pennsylvania.

To His Excellency General Washington, at White-Plains.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A GENERAL OFFICER, DATED MOUNT WASHINGTON, OCTOBER 23, 1776.

Two deserters came over to us from the York Island lines the evening before last, who say the enemy's loss on Friday was more than eight hundred killed and wounded. They saw many of the wounded, who all agree in their accounts of a heavy loss on their side. A strong party of Hessians were ambushed by two of our regiments, Read's and Shepherd's, and drove to their main body, which advanced, and obliged our men to retire about six hundred yards. This finished the action, the enemy contenting themselves with the ground they had gained. We had only fifteen hundred men engaged, and not more than two thousand near the field: the enemy had at least eight thousand. The enemy pushed that night three miles along the coast to New-Rochelle, where their advanced party remained yesterday.

After the action, our artillery and that of the enemy were employed in annoying each other. During the fire of the artillery, the deserters say, a sentry at General Howe's tent was killed at the door; the ball entered the tent, and shattered General Howe's leg so as to endanger his life. One of the deserters declares he heard his Captain mention it to several officers. They belong to the Fortieth Regiment.

Major Rogers advanced the evening before last, with his corps of Tories, to Mamoraneck. A party was detached against him; they killed many, took thirty-six prisoners, sixty-five muskets, and as many blankets, and completely routed the rest of the party. This blow will ruin the Major's Rangers. The enemy have received a reinforcement of Hessians, and some British troops. Their station last night was at New-Rochelle. We now outflank them, so that the least movement of theirs from the shore must produce an action.

Our troops are in high spirits, and very anxious to engage the enemy. We cannot answer for the fate of war; but I think America has little to fear from General Howe's army, who have gained no ground but what they could reach by their shipping.

The enemy have left only sixteen hundred men on York Island. They have detached two brigades to oppose Colonel Livingston, who is gone with twelve hundred men to the east end of Long-Island. He embarked at Fairfield last week, and, it is said, has carried off many cattle from the enemy's party on that island.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM EAST-CHESTER, NEW-YORK, DATED OCTOBER 23, 1776.

The enemy have landed the main body of their army at East-Chester, where we had a small engagement; we lost twelve men, but had the advantage of them. We have authentick intelligence of their losing five hundred, killed and wounded. The enemy lay on the East River and we on the North, two miles distant from each other, except our advanced guards, twenty-five miles from New-York. We have New-York Island still in our possession, with a garrison of eighteen hundred men, commanded by General Putnam. The main body of our army lays at the above-mentioned place, waiting for the enemy to attack us. It is my opinion, if they should not do it soon, we shall attack them. We have gained the advantage of them the two last engagements. There is no dispute but what a general attack will commence very soon. I have just received intelligence of a battle that was fought last night at Merry-nick, about seven miles from this; the enemy had a number killed and wounded; we took thirty prisoners. I cannot learn what loss we sustained; but we came off victorious.*

* October 21, 1776.—At about four o'clock, p. m., General Heath's division moved from above King's Bridge, having, besides their light field-pieces, two heavy iron twelve-pounders. About eight o'clock in the evening, they passed General Lincoln's quarters, on Valentine's Hill, where the Commander-in-Chief was to spend the night. General Heath waited upon him, to know if he had any particular commands for him. The Commander-in-Chief only advised to send forward one of his regiments, to occupy the road coming from Ward's Bridge, nearly to whose farm the British had now advanced; lest, apprised of his moving, they should annoy his right flank, which, if it had been day-light, would have been open to their view. But before the column reached this cross-road, it was learnt that Colonel Jonathan Brewer's regiment of artificers, who were pretty strong, and well-armed, were to pass the night at the entrance of the road, leading to the bridge before mentioned. The division reached Chaderton's Hill, to the south of White-Plains, at four o'clock in the morning of the 22d, having marched all night. The instant General Heath ascended the hill, he noticed, to appearance, many flashes, resembling the flash of the pan of a musket, on the other side of the lot, on which he immediately ordered a Captain with a party to discover what it was; who returned that he could not make discovery of any thing. These were indeed the flashes of discharged muskets at some distance; the height of ground having decoyed the appearance of the distance. Lord Stirling, who was before in this vicinity with his brigade, had formed an enterprise against Major Robert Rogers's corps. The old Indian hunter in the last French war, who had now engaged in the British service, with his corps, now lay on the outpost of the British army, near Marroneck. The enterprise was conducted with good address; and if the Americans had known exactly how Rogers's corps

CH. D. WITT,
ROB'T HARPUR,

Committee of the Convention of this State.

Recruiting officers are to be particularly careful to inlist no deserters, nor any Englishman, Scotchman, or Irishman, who has no connexion in this country. All who have families or friends of good fame in the country are most eligible; and the officers so recruiting shall be allowed the usual compensation for each man they shall inlist. Also apprentices, without leave of their masters, are not to be inlisted.

ROB'T HARPUR,
CH. D. WITT,

Committee as above.

Recruiting officers, Lieutenant William Tapp, Lieutenant Benjamin Walker, Ensign James Fairley, for the First Regiment of the New-York forces to be employed, hereby empowered to recruit in the regiment, the camp, or the country, as occasion may require.

CH. D. WITT,
ROB'T HARPUR,

A Committee of the Convention of the State of New-York.

No inlisting or billeting money shall be allowed the recruiting officer for any recruit he may engage, who will not qualify and pass muster. Until more particular orders, the said recruiting officer is hereby enjoined to exert himself with all fidelity in procuring such able-bodied men as may be active, do honour to the inlister, and be of that essential service to their bleeding country which at this most critical juncture it now demands.

TENCH TILGHEMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 23, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I wrote you last night that General Lee's lay, they would probably have killed or taken the whole. As it was, thirty-six prisoners, sixty muskets, and some other articles were taken. The Major, conformably to his former general conduct, escaped with the rest of his corps. This was a pretty affair, and if the writer could recollect the name of the commanding officer, with pride and pleasure he would insert it. He belonged to one of the Southern lines of the army, and the whole of the party were Southern troops.

October 22, 1776.—The same day General Heath moved his division, and took post on the high strong ground, to the north of the Court-House, General Sullivan's division reached the Plains in the course of the succeeding night. In the position of White-Plains, General Heath's division was on the left of the line. On his left was a deep hollow, through which ran a small brook, which came from a mill-pond, a little above. On the east side of this hollow was a very commanding ground, which would enfilade the division. The top of this high ground was covered with wood. To this hill he ordered Colonel Malcom with his regiment of New-York troops, and Lieutenant Fenno, of the artillery, with a field-piece, directing them to take post in the skirt of the wood, at the south brow of the hill. The ground, from General Heath's left to the right, descended gradually a very considerable distance, and then gradually ascended up to the plain, and still on to the right to more commanding ground. On this was the American army formed, the line running nearly from northeast to southwest. There were some strong works thrown up on the plain, across the road, and still to the right of it. Chaderton's Hill was a little advanced of the line, and separated from it by the little rivulet Brunz. A body of the Americans were posted on this hill. Head-Quarters were on the plain, near the cross-roads. General Heath's division had only slight works for musketry.—Heath.

division was engaged. The particulars are as follows: the General has detached a number of small parties very far among the enemy's posts. He expected they would be attacked, and therefore ordered out Colonel Hand with two hundred rifles to support them. The thing fell out as was expected; the small parties fell back as far as the supporting one, and were followed by a considerable body of Hessians, between whom and Colonel Hand a smart skirmish ensued. It ended in a victory on our side, with only the loss of a man or two. Our people drove them from the field, and took possession of a house where the Hessians had been. They buried ten, and brought in three prisoners, one of them mortally wounded, and a parcel of shirts which had been left to wash.

I am really in hopes that we have fairly outflanked General Howe, and that he will not be able to get across our front. We press him close to the Sound, from which he has made no westing, in the sea phrase, and if he makes much more easting, and endeavours to stretch across, he will need as large an army as that of Xerxes to form a line.

Every man of thirty-six taken at Maroneck are natives of this Government. If I was superstitious, I should call it a judgment.

I am more afraid of the Northern army than the neighbouring one. If they defeat General Gates, I don't see what is to hinder them from being on our backs; but still I think if Gates is well provided with provisions and ammunition, he may keep them at bay till the season obliges them to quit the ground.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq.

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON TO PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

Albany, October 23, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the direction of the Committee of Safety, immediately on the receipt of your letter, I set out for this place. I have not, since my arrival, been able to find more than one member of the Committee, the rest being either gone with the Militia, or employed on some other publick business. The Committee of Arrangements are with General Schuyler, at Saratoga. I am unwilling to send for them till they have despatched their business, as I consider it as more important than any they can do here. Every necessary measure has, I believe, been already taken to support the Northern army, so that I cannot imagine that our stay here will be very useful. I shall therefore, unless I have directions to the contrary, return in a few days to Convention. In the meanwhile I cannot help recommending as an object of some moment, the immediate establishment of passes to this place, transmitting the earliest intelligence by handbill, since nothing else can effectually silence the falsehoods that are daily propagated by the disaffected.

I have the honour to be your most obedient servant,

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

To the Hon. Peter R. Livingston, Esq., President of the Convention.

COL. SMALLWOOD TO MARYLAND DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Camp on Philips's Heights, October 23, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Captain Peter Adams, from past services being very much reduced, and rendered incapable of attending his duty in his military department, proceeds to Philadelphia for recovery of his health; and being in want of money, which at this time I have not an opportunity of drawing, though upwards of two months pay due, must request you would advance such sum as he requires, or any thing due him, and much oblige your obedient, humble servant,

W. SMALLWOOD.

To William Paca, Esq., or any of the Maryland Deputies at Congress.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 4, 1776.]

Saratoga, October 23, 1776.

SIR: I was greatly at a loss to what cause to impute that very rapid increase of calumny, which I experienced after my return from the Indian treaty. I did not know that I was principally indebted to Congress for this misfortune, until yesterday, when, and never before did I see the resolution of the 17th of August last, which, whilst it exculpates General Wooster from any mal-conduct in Canada, is couched in such terms as to leave even to the candid and judicious, no alternative but that of supposing that Canada was not properly supplied either by Congress or me. Judge on whom the publick censure would fall, and let every gentleman in Congress for a moment fancy himself in my situation, let him candidly scan that resolve, and then let him conclude what my feelings must be from his own. Is it, sir, consistent with that dignity which should be inseparable from the most respectable body on earth, thus partially and precipitately to enter into a resolution which leaves so much room for the publick to consider me as a faithless servant? Deeply sensible of the injury I have sustained from the hand which ought to have supported me, I shall endeavour yet to be patient, and do my duty in this critical conjuncture with zeal, alacrity and firmness, supported by the consciousness of my integrity, and the expectation of a speedy opportunity of vindicating my character, and of testifying to the world not only the rectitude of my intentions, but the propriety of my conduct.

I have not had a line from General Gates since Wednesday last, so that I cannot give Congress any account of what the enemy are doing, or where they are. The Militia is, however, marching up to support the communication, and I have no doubt but we shall be able to keep it up.

I have not received a line from General Gates since the 16th instant. Colonel Potter, who arrived last night from Ticonderoga, was desired by General Gates to inform me that the British army was at Crown-Point, and that he expected an attack daily; that he wanted spades, with which I cannot furnish him; that the army was plentifully supplied with beef, but that their flour was reduced to sixteen days, little having been sent up by the new Commissary, who now writes me that he cannot procure supplies without my assistance. I have taken measures to remedy this evil, and have taken such others, as I doubt not, will effectually prevent the enemy from intercepting our supplies.

The moment that General Ten Broeck, with the Militia, is passed this, I shall hasten to every part of the communication to remedy the disorders which the inexperience of the Commissary has occasioned. I am at present confined with a disagreeable and painful scorbutic eruption, which will go off in a few days, and always leaves me in better health. Messrs. Stockton and Clymer proceed to Fort George this morning.

The last resolution of Congress allowing clothing to the troops that shall reinlist, I received from the Convention of this State, and have requested General Gates to publish it. I hope it will have some good effect, and be a means to induce the soldiers to reinlist.

General Waterbury has entreated me to recommend him to Congress to be exchanged for General McDonald or any other officer. I wish it to be accomplished.

I am in great hopes that General Carleton will meet with a repulse; but should I unfortunately be mistaken, I shall nevertheless not despair of confining him to the lakes, if I can keep four or five thousand men in a body.

I am, sir, most respectfully your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, October 23, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday I received Mr. Harrison's letter of the 18th instant, respecting the Stockbridge Indians. They have all left the army in the course of the last week, and are returned home. I have not had a line from General Gates since the 16th.

The British army, under the command of General Carleton, were at Crown-Point on Monday last, and I suppose will make an attempt on Tyonderoga in a few days, if they have not already. The Militia move up slowly and very reluctantly.

Finding that Mr. Avery, the present Commissary in this department, as being a stranger, was not likely to get a supply of flour, I have requested the Committee of Albany and others to make purchases, and have so arranged matters that I hope the enemy will not be able to interrupt the necessary supplies for the army if the Militia will do their duty.

I am, dear sir, with great esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.
To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR TO GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

Tyconderoga, October 23, 1776.

SIR: As the army is to be new-modelled, and Captain Howell, from your Province, has requested me to mention him to you, I could not in justice to him refuse it; and it affords me an opportunity at the same time of paying my compliments to you.

Captain Howell has, I am well satisfied, behaved since I joined the army in every respect as a gentleman and an officer, and been very attentive to military discipline, so much as to have attracted the notice of General Gates, who appointed him a Major Brigade, in which station he has acted for some time to his satisfaction; but as that is only a temporary appointment, and he inclines to remain in the service, he would be glad of something more certain, which will be doing me a favour, and I would not presume to recommend a person to you whom I did not think deserving.

Since the disaster that happened our fleet, of which you heard long ago, the enemy have made no motion; three of their vessels, with a number of flat-bottomed boats and gondolas, remain at Crown-Point, and their army, or rather part of it, encamped on the opposite side of the lake. Their other vessels are gone back, probably for their cannon and stores, which they might think improper to risk on the issue of an engagement. We expect them here every moment, and have the strongest hopes, and those not ill-grounded, of giving a good account of them. If success attends this campaign, peace and freedom, glorious objects to America, will be the consequence; at all events, America must be free.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,
AR. ST. CLAIR.

To His Excellency William Livingston.

COLONEL BROWNSON TO GENERAL GATES.

Castleton, October 23, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I should have come on in company with Colonel Warner, but my men doth not come on as I expected, and we hear of a cursed plan a laying by the Tories below, which we must break up before we can come on. Carleton allowing our northern settlers to continue on their farms in peace, will favour much to lull our people to rest. We must return and put another spur to their sides. Shall return about forty or fifty miles, as the Tories begin to grow very bold. We have been hindered here this two days with men that are unfriendly, but at length we have sent them under guard to work at the block-house and on the road through Otter creek till further orders. Shall stir up the people what lies in my power, and make the greatest despatch to Mount Independence. Major Rice will come on with a few men to join the army.

From your most obedient and very humble servant,
TIMOTHY BROWNSON, Colonel.
To General Gates.

ELKANAH DAY TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Westminster, October 23, 1776.

SIR: This may inform your Honour that some time in August last past, I was appointed by the Joint Committee to be a Captain, to serve in Major Joab Hoisington's detachment of Rangers, whereupon I exerted myself with my best influence to complete a detachment, but by reason of the multiplicity of my business as a physician, the calls on me from the sick and distressed are so perpetual, who are totally unwilling that I should discontinue my practice with them, I therefore do, or at least beg leave to, resign my appointment and trust in department.

Sir, most heartily acknowledging all favours, paying that deference due to your respectable body, wishing the American arms the blessings of success, and in due time a complete victory over their tyrannical foes, I am, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

ELKANAH DAY.

To the President of the honourable Convention for the State of New-York.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

New-Haven, October 23, 1776.

SIR: You will find enclosed copy of letter to General Gates, from General Arnold, respecting the transactions at the northward. I am further advised that after the action of the 12th, which General Arnold describes, the fleet under his command began to fall down the lake, but had not got far from Schuyler's Island, when a northerly gale, favourable to the enemy, pushed them up with our shattered fleet, and obliged them to commence a second engagement, which was continued with great disadvantage on our side, though with great spirit and bravery, for five glasses, when the superiour strength of the enemy prevailed to the almost total ruin of our fleet. General Arnold, in the Congress galley, fought till he could stand no longer, ran her on shore, burnt her and escaped. General Waterbury fought the Washington till she was sinking under him, he was obliged to strike, and was made a prisoner, though it seems he has returned to Ticonderoga, probably on his parole, and is expected here soon. Colonel Wigglesworth, in the Trumbull, is got to Ty, and is the only galley saved; one galley not completed, is safe. Our strength on the water now remaining, is one sloop, twelve guns; two schooners, eight guns each; two galleys and one gondola. What it was before these rencounters, the enclosed copy of a return will show. The enemy's strength appears larger than at first; it is as follows:

1 ship,	- - - - -	18 12-pounds.
1 schooner,	- - - - -	14 6 "
1 do.	- - - - -	12 6 "
1 rideau,	- - - - -	6 24 }
		12 12 }
		4 8-inch howitzers.

28 gondolas, 1 gun each, 12, 18, and 24-pounds.
1 8-inch howitzer.

Our people are all retired to Ticonderoga, where it is their design, it is said, to force the enemy to make an attack on our works at the French lines, by the Crown-Point road, by obliging them to land below our army; that they will lay our two remaining galleys in the channel, where their fire will coöperate with the Jersey redoubts and the battery on Mount Independence. By this means they hope to prevent their passing higher up than our advanced posts. I hope for a more full and particular account from General Waterbury, who is soon expected here.

Colonel Richmond came to this town by land yesterday, and waits here for his regiment to come in the whale-boats, which are hourly expected.

Mr. Hazard will communicate his knowledge from General Washington's Head-Quarters, which is the fullest that I have.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Hon. Governour Cooke.

New-Haven, October 23, 1776.

SIR: Please to furnish the ship Oliver Cromwell with provisions and necessary stores of every kind for a cruise of about two or three months.

By order of the Governour and Council of Safety:

BENJ. HUNTINGTON, Clerk p. t.

To Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jr.

New-Haven, October 23, 1776.

The Hon. Richard Law, Esq., is appointed a delegate to represent this State in the Continental Congress, in addition to those chosen last year, who are reelected to that important trust.

The enemy have extended themselves this way as far as New-Rochel, and small parties of them have advanced as far as Marrineck. In one of the churches at New-Rochel was stored more than two thousand bushels of salt, which has fallen into the hands of the enemy. It was owned by the State of New-York.

Last Friday there was a smart skirmish near the above church, between a detached party of the enemy and one from our army, in which we lost eight or ten men, and some wounded. Among the latter was Colonel Shepard, of the Massachusetts-Bay, who was slightly wounded in his throat, and who commanded the party. The enemy's loss is not known.

We hear that near two hundred sail of the enemy's fleet are this side Hell-Gate, the chief of them lying near Hart Island.

WILLIAM SEVER TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Watertown, October 23, 1776.

SIR: As it is highly probable the Court will to-morrow call for a return of the effective fire-arms in your hands as Commissary, I am directed (as Chairman of a Committee who are reporting that such report be made) to advise you of it, as we apprehend it is necessary such return be made as soon as possible; and am, sir, your humble servant,

W. SEVER.

To Richard Devens, Esq., Commissary-General.

P. SIM SMITH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In July last I received an order from your honourable Board, directing a Court-Martial to be held on the 15th of that month for the trial of Captain John Mackall and Levin Miles, of Calvert County, belonging to the Fifteenth Battalion of Militia.

In consequence thereof I called a meeting of the members on the day appointed, and summoned the parties to appear with their evidences. A sufficient number of members attended to hold a Court-Martial, and Captain John Mackall appeared agreeable to summons, but not being provided with his evidences, and Levin Miles having been sent express by Colonel Sommerville to your honourable Board, the Court-Martial adjourned to the Monday following, the 22d instant. On that day I attended at the place appointed, but none of the members appeared; but some of them, I think the greater part, together with Levin Miles, being on duty, either at Drum Point or at St. George's Island, watching the motions of Lord Dunmore's fleet. Thus circumstanced, I was at a loss how to act, and 'twas doubtful with me whether I had power alone to adjourn to a future day. If I had, 'twas altogether uncertain whether the members would be at liberty to attend, and our election coming on the week following, I determined at last to postpone any further proceedings thereon for the present. Indeed, had a Court-Martial been held, and the parties ready for trial, we could not have proceeded with propriety, as the charge against them was not expressed in the order, and Colonel Mackall had not furnished me with it. I have since applied to him for the charge, and his answer was that he had lodged it with the Council of Safety, signed by Colonel Somerville and himself, where he referred me. I then resolved to return the order to your honourable Board, with the reason why I had not proceeded, but unluckily had mislaid it amongst some other papers, and could not lay my hands on it till within a few days past. I now enclose it, and hope your honourable Board will not impute the Board with neglect or disobedience of your orders, but to the reasons above assigned. And should you think it expedient to renew the order, must request that the charge against the parties may be thereto annexed, and be assured I will immediately proceed thereon agreeable to your directions.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PAT. SIM SMITH.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

SIR: I have only time to forward the enclosed resolves.* The cartridges are on the way, and, I hope, will arrive in season. The Congress will be attentive to all your requests.

With sentiments of esteem, and every wish in your favour, I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

* Dated October 14, 15, 16, 18, and 23, 1776.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War Office, October 24, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War have directed me to enclose you the plan they intended to present to Congress for preventing abuses in regiments or companies receiving more rations than they are entitled to, an evil which has been complained of perhaps with too much foundation.

It frequently happens that sick soldiers are either left behind at posts or places through which their regiments or companies are marching, or they are sent to hospitals at a distance from their corps. These unhappy people, or some of them, are often thought incapable, and discharged by the Director or Surgeon of the hospital as unfit for service, and turned out to beg their subsistence to their homes, or places of their former residence, although they may have pay due to them sufficient to support them. This not only raises compassion, and from this motive should be remedied, but is extremely detrimental to the service, by deterring others from inlisting.

The Board therefore have thought that the soldiers so discharged, should have it in their power to receive their pay in whatever part of the States they may be, and have accordingly formed a plan to enable them to do it, and request your Excellency's advice on both these subjects.

With the greatest respect, I have the honour to be your obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency George Washington.

Plan referred to in RICHARD PETERS's Letter to General WASHINGTON, dated War Office, OCTOBER 24, 1776.

That each regiment, troop, or company, be mustered either by the Mustermaster-General, or his Deputies, times in every year, if the situation of the army will admit thereof, and that the Mustermaster-General, or his Deputies, shall return exact accounts thereof monthly to the Commanders-in-Chief of the several departments, and furnish copies of such returns to the Adjutant and Commissary-General, or their Deputies.

That the Commissary-General, or his Deputies, shall return to the Adjutant-General, or his Deputies, monthly, an exact account of all rations drawn by each regiment, troop, or company, in the course of the month; and the said Adjutant-General, or his Deputies, shall return the same to the Commander-in-Chief of the several departments, to be transmitted to Congress as part of the general returns of the army.

That the Captains or commanders of every troop or company, shall, at the time a sick non-commissioned officer or soldier shall go to the hospital, send with such sick non-commissioned officer or soldier, an exact account of what pay is due him, and in case of discharge from the hospital, as unfit for further service, the Director or Surgeon of such hospital shall certify what pay is due the non-commissioned officer or soldier so discharged; and the Captain or commander of the troop or company out of which such officer or soldier shall go to the hospital, shall not receive the pay of any officer or soldier so sick or discharged; but such non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be paid at any pay-office or place by any person in the United States authorized to pay the Continental troops, on producing such certificates, which shall be kept as vouchers by the person so paying, and copies thereof delivered to the officer or soldier receiving his pay.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War Office, October 24, 1776.

SIR: By order of the Board of War, I have the honour to inform your Excellency that the Congress have this day given them direction to order the two Virginia regiments now at Chester, immediately to Trentown, there to wait your Excellency's commands; and at the same time to acquaint you of the situation of the people of this State, that, having as comprehensive a view of the state of affairs as possible, you may make such disposition as the good of the service may require.

The Council of Safety of this State requested some days since a conference with this Board, in order to lay before it a representation of their situation and expectations. In the course of this conference it appeared very clearly, that they were in a most defenceless condition; that they had no works upon the river except one fort unfinished; that the Militia of this city are inactive and languid to the last degree; and, to close their distress, a number of the people of this place were disaffected. Indeed, they went so far as to say that, in their judgment, a large party might be found to espouse openly the cause of the enemy, should our affairs run retrograde at New-York. As your Excellency, however, must know more of your own strength and your own intended operations than Congress possibly can, and as it is of the greatest importance than you should be supported at all events, General Stevens, with the Virginia forces, will take post at Trentown, in order to obey such commands as you may be pleased to give him.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO THE COMMISSIONERS IN FRANCE.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Congress having committed to our charge and management their ship-of-war called the Reprisal, commanded by Lambert Wickes, Esq., carrying sixteen six pounders, and about one hundred and twenty men, we have allotted her to carry Doctor Franklin to France, and directed Captain Wickes to proceed to the Port of Nantes, where the Doctor will land, and from thence proceed to Paris; and he will either carry with him or send forward this letter by express, as to him may then appear best. The Reprisal is a fast-sailing ship, and Captain Wickes has already done honour in action to the American flag. We have therefore ordered him to land at Nantes some indigo he has on board, take in refreshments, stores, provisions, or other necessaries he may want, and immediately to proceed on a cruise against our enemies, and we think he will not be long before he meets with a sufficient number of prizes. We have directed him to send them into such of the French ports as are most convenient, addressing them at Dunkirk, to Messrs. P. Stival & Son; at Havre-de-Grace, to Mr. Andrew Limozen; at Bordeaux, to Messrs. Samuel & J. H. Delap; at Nantes, to Messrs. Pliarne, Penet & Co.; and at any other ports in France, to such persons as you may appoint to receive them. When he finishes his cruise he will call in at Nantes, Bordeaux, or Brest, for your orders and advices, which we beg you will have ready for him, lodged at those places.

In consequence of this plan for the Reprisal's cruise, we desire you to make immediate application to the Court of France to grant the protection of their ports to American men-of-war and their prizes. Show them that British men-of-war, under sanction of an act of Parliament, are daily capturing American ships and cargoes; show them the resolves of Congress for making reprisals on British and West-India property, and that our Continental men-of-war and numerous private ships-of-war, are most successfully employed in executing those resolutions of the Congress; show them the justice and equity of this proceeding, and surely they cannot, they will not, refuse the protection of their ports to American ships-of-war, privateers, and prizes. If your application on this head is crowned with success, try any other which it is their interest to grant: that is, to obtain leave to make sale of those prizes and their cargoes, or any part thereof that may be suitable for that country. If you succeed in this also, you must appoint some person to act as Judge of the Admiralty, who should give the bond prescribed for those Judges, to determine in all cases agreeable to the rules and regulations of Congress; and for this purpose we will report to Congress some resolves vesting you with authority to make such appointment, and authorizing such Judge to condemn without a jury, as required here. If these resolves are agreed to by Congress, they shall be immediately transmitted to you. If they are not, that plan must drop, and the prizes must all proceed for America for condemnation. You can in the mean time consult the Ministry whether they will permit such courts in France, and in the French West-India Islands.

If protection is granted to our cruisers and their prizes, you will immediately procure proper orders to be sent to the officers of all their ports on this subject, and write yourselves to those houses we have named at the several ports, that the prizes are to remain for Captain Wickes's further orders. Also lodge such orders with proper persons at the other ports in France. On the contrary, if the prizes are not to be protected in their ports, then give immediate notice to all these houses, and proper persons at the other ports, to furnish the prizes that Captain Wickes, of the Reprisal, may send into their port, with any necessaries the prize-master may judge they stand in need of, and to order him to make the best of his way with the prize to the first safe port he can make in the United States of America. Lodge advice also for Captain Wickes at Bordeaux, Brest, and Nantes, whether his prizes are to be protected in port or not, and whether or not any sales will be permitted. If they are protected, he can take his own time to collect and bring them home under his own convoy. If any sale is permitted, he can sell all perishable commodities and vessels unfit for so long a voyage as to this coast. If no protection for prizes, they will come away by your orders, and need not stay for his. And if they deny protection to our cruisers themselves, he will only remain in port for your advices, and to obtain such supplies as may be necessary.

We have recommended Captain Wickes to take on board his own ship as many valuable commodities as he can, if successful; but should he be unsuccessful in cruising, then Messrs. Pliarne, Penet & Co. may put some goods on board when he is coming away.

You will readily see the tendency these measures have;

and as their consequences may be very important, so we hope your attention to them will be immediate and constant, whilst necessary.

Captain Wickes is a worthy man, and as such we recommend him; and should he have the misfortune to be taken, or meet with any other misfortune, we hope you will adopt measures for his relief. He will treat prisoners with humanity, and we are convinced his conduct will do honour to his appointment.

We have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servants.

In Committee of Secret Correspondence, }
Philadelphia, October 23, 1776. }

SIR: The enclosed letter was wrote and signed before we had an opportunity to transmit it. And having now so good a conveyance as the brigantine Lexington, we transmit the same to you as an official letter from the Committee of Secret Correspondence, which you'll observe is distinct from the Secret Committee, with whom you also correspond. By this letter you'll find we expect some arms, ammunition, money, or clothing may be sent out by our agent, Mons. Hortalez, to the Governour at Cape François, with orders for the delivery of them to whoever may be properly empowered by Congress to receive the same. That power is granted to you, and you'll please to apply to the Governour with our respectful compliments. Desire to know if he has received such supplies. If he has, produce the letter to him; if he has not, then request he will inform you when such supplies do arrive, or any advice respecting them.

When you receive the goods in consequence of this appointment, ship a quantity of them by the Lexington, if they are ready; if not, you may charter suitable French vessels to bring them here, dividing them into many bottoms, and sending an assortment, consisting of part of every article you receive. In short, you must transmit the whole to us in the safest and most expeditious manner you can contrive, consigning to this Committee, for the use and on account of the United States of America.

We are, sir, your obedient servants,

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,
ROBERT MORRIS.

To Mr. Stephen Ceronio.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO LAMBERT WICKES.

In Marine Committee, Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

SIR: The honourable Congress of the United States of America have directed us to commit the Reprisal, under your command, to the management of the Committee of Secret Correspondence for the present voyage or cruise. You are therefore to receive and obey the orders of that Committee.

To us, however, you are to communicate such occurrences as ought to be known by those who superintend the American Navy. To us you must, in due time, transmit copies of your journal and log-book; and to us you are accountable for the care of your ship, her stores, materials, provisions, &c. We recommend particularly that you preserve strict discipline amongst your officers and men, always using them well, but compelling them, if needful, to do their duty; and if you make prisoners, we are sure it will gratify your own feelings to treat them with humanity.

We hold you in much esteem, and flatter ourselves your conduct in the service will always be such as to meet the continuance of it, from, sir, your friends and servants.

To Lambert Wickes, Esq.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Our worthy friend, Dr. Franklin, being indefatigable in the service of his country, and few men so qualified to be useful to the community of which he is a member, you will not be surprised that the unanimous voice of the Congress of Delegates from the United States of America, has called upon him to visit the Court of France in the character of one of their Commissioners for negotiating a treaty of alliance, &c., with that nation. He is the bearer of this letter, and on his arrival will forward it. To him we refer you for information as to the political state of this country; our design in addressing you at this time being only to continue that correspondence which he has opened and conducted hitherto with you on our behalf. We request to hear from you frequently, and if you make use of the cypher, the Doctor has communicated the knowledge of it to one of our members.

Your letters, via St. Eustatia, directed to the Committee of Secret Correspondence, then put under cover to Mr. Robert Morris, merchant in Philadelphia, and that letter under cover to Mr. Cornelius Stevenson, or Mr. Henricus Godet, merchants at St. Eustatia, or under cover to Mr. Isaac Gouverneur, merchant at Curraçoa, will certainly come safe; and if you can send with them regular supplies of the English and other newspapers, you will add to the obligation. The expense of procuring will be reimbursed, together with any other charges, and a reasonable allowance for your time and trouble in this agency.

The members of this Committee, styled the Committee of Secret Correspondence, are John Jay, Esq., Thomas Johnston, Esq., Robert Morris, Esq., Colonel Richard Henry Lee, William Hooper, Esq., and the Rev. Dr. John Witherspoon; and as vacancies happen by deaths or absence, the Congress fill them up with new members, which we mention for your information; and with great respect and esteem, remain, sir, your most obedient servants.

To Mons. Dumas.

COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE TO SILAS DEANE.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We embrace this opportunity of your worthy colleague, and our mutual good friend, Doctor Franklin, to transmit you copies of our letters of the 1st October, by the sloop Independence, Captain Young, to Martinico, from whence they would be carried to you by Mr. William Hodge, Jun., sent in said sloop for that purpose. Those letters contained a commission from the Congress appointing Dr. Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Esq., and yourself, Commissioners on behalf of the United States of America, to negotiate a treaty of alliance and amity and peace with the Court of France; a plan of that treaty; instructions from Congress relative thereto; form of passports for the ships of each nation, &c. We consider these papers as of the utmost consequence, and hope they will arrive safe.

Yesterday we wrote you a few lines, enclosing additional instructions from Congress to their Commissioners, authorizing them to treat with other nations; also, two resolves of Congress, by one of which you would see that Thomas Jefferson, Esq., declined his appointment, and that Arthur Lee, Esq., was appointed in his stead, to whom we enclosed a letter, copy whereof goes herewith. By the other the Commissioners are directed to hire or buy eight line-of-battle ships for the American service. These papers were sent under cover to William Bingham, Esq., our resident at Martinico, with orders to forward them immediately.

We wrote you another letter yesterday, covering duplicates of all the papers and letters mentioned herein, and sent it by the armed brigantine Lexington, William Hallock, Esq., commander, to Mr. Stephen Ceronio, our resident at Cape François, with directions to forward them to Messrs. Samuel & J. Hans Delap, merchants at Bordeaux, who are requested to send the packet from thence by express to you; and Dr. Franklin carries with him triplicates of all these publick papers. We have been thus particular in mentioning them, and the conveyances by which they were sent, that you may know when the whole are received; and we desire you to be equally pointed in advising us thereof, for we shall be anxious to hear of their getting safe, and shall be very uneasy if we don't hear this in due time, for they ought not on any account to fall into the hands of our enemies.

Since Mr. Dickinson and Mr. Harrison were out of Congress, and Dr. Franklin appointed one of the Commissioners at the Court of France, the Congress have filled up the vacancies in this Committee, and the members now are Mr. Jay, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Morris, Colonel Richard Henry Lee, Mr. William Hooper, and Dr. John Witherspoon, which we mention for your information.

We shall continue to address all our advices and despatches to you only, until informed that the other Commissioners have joined you; but you will communicate the letters to them as if directed to the whole, and we depend on you to notify Dr. Lee of his appointment, using the utmost precaution in the method of doing it, or his person may be endangered. We suppose it may be best to have the letter enclosed by the Ministers of France to their Ambassador in England, with proper cautions respecting the delivery of it. Dr. Franklin being the bearer of this letter, it is totally unnecessary for us to enter into any detail of what is passing here, or to convey any political remarks. He being possessed of every knowledge necessary for your information, will communicate very fully every thing you can wish to know.

Therefore wishing you a happy meeting with him, and a successful issue to your labours in the service of your country, we remain, with perfect esteem and regard, dear sir, your affectionate friends and obedient, humble servants.

To Silas Deane, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO CAPTAIN WICKES.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

SIR: The honourable Congress having thought proper to submit the ship Reprisal, under your command, to our direction for the present voyage or cruise, you are to be governed by the following orders:

The Honourable Doctor Franklin being appointed by Congress one of their Commissioners for negotiating some publick business at the Court of France, you are to receive him and his suite on board the Reprisal, as passengers, whom it is your duty, and we dare say it will be your inclination, to treat with the greatest respect and attention, and your best endeavours will not be wanting to make their time on board the ship perfectly agreeable. When they are on board, you are to proceed, with the utmost diligence, for the port of Nantes, in France, where they will land, and there you will deliver their baggage, &c. It is of more importance that you get safe and soon to France, than any prizes are that you could take. Therefore you are not to delay time on this outward passage for the sake of cruising; but if you are beset with contrary winds, or during the passage be so circumstanced that Doctor Franklin may approve of your speaking any vessels you see, do therein as he shall direct.

We understand the Secret Committee have put on board the Reprisal a quantity of indigo. This you must land at Nantes immediately on your arrival, and deliver it to their order; and they have directed their agents to supply you immediately with whatever refreshments or necessaries you may stand in need of. We deem it essential to the success and safety of your ship that you make a very short stay in the river of Nantes. It is equally so that you keep totally secret where you are bound from thence, or what your business.

These things premised, we take it for granted your stay will not exceed more than two or three days, and that you will rather dispose people to think you are returning back here again; but you are directly to proceed on a cruise against our enemies. You have the resolves of Congress, by which you well know who they are. By them you will know what ships you are authorized to make prize of; and the resolves of Congress must be the rule of your conduct.

We think you had best proceed directly on the coast of England, up the Channel, before they can have any notice of you; and we judge every day, if not every hour, you are there will give you opportunity of making prizes. You will always have some of the French ports at hand, either to send in your prizes or to run into yourself if chased by superiour force. Doctor Franklin will make application at the Court of France for the protection of their ports to the Reprisal and her prizes, and we hope he will be successful therein. However, we propose as follows: Should you take one or two valuable prizes, with woollen or linen goods on board, or such cargoes as you know us to be in immediate want of, that you despatch them immediately, under the command of trusty officers and men, for this port. If you meet other vessels partly loaden with such goods, that you take as many of them on board your own ship as you conveniently can; and that you send all the other prizes you take immediately into some of the ports of France, with orders to apply, at Dunkirk, to Messrs. P. Stival & Son, merchants; at Havre-de-Grace, to Mr. Andrew Limozin, merchant; at Bordeaux, to Messrs. Samuel & J. Hans Delap, merchants; at Nantes, to Messrs. Pliarne, Penet & Company; at any other port, to apply to the commander thereof, for protection until he receives orders from his Court on the subject, and with these orders will also come instructions from Doctor Franklin, Silas Deane, Esq., and Doctor Lee, or some of them, which he must obey. You may direct all the prize-masters to wait in port for your further orders, provided the above gentlemen write that they will be protected; but if that protection is not granted, they must then apply to our agents for such supplies as are necessary, and push away immediately for this continent, making the first safe port they can.

We are convinced you will treat all prisoners with humanity; but we think you had best land them in France whenever they are too numerous on board your ship, to prevent giving alarms in England, for you may depend they will have cruisers out after you soon as they hear of your being there. We expect, therefore, you will make but a short cruise, especially as every day must inevitably throw plenty of English vessels in your way. Perhaps off Falmouth you might meet with a Lisbon packet, and whatever specie you collect, take it on board, and carry it into France, where you may deliver or pay the same to the order of Doctor Franklin, Mr. Deane, &c., or to Mr. Thomas Morris, or his order, as agent for the Secret Committee of Congress; and the Congress will pay here yours and the people's shares of such money, as well as their shares of any prizes or parts of prizes that may be sold there, and the money applied to the publick use.

When you are about to quit your cruise, it may be well to send any prisoners you then have on shore, and make them believe you are coming direct for America, or going round into St. George's Channel, to cruise for Bristol ships, just as you think may be most likely to gain credit. Clear your ship of them, and then run into Bordeaux, Brest, or Nantes, just as may be most convenient. You will find letters from our Commissioners at Paris with Messrs. Delap at Bordeaux, Messrs. Pliarne, Penet & Company at Nantes, or some proper person at Brest, advising you of the success of their application; and if they tell you the prizes are to be protected, you can then write to the prize-masters, and either collect and bring them home under your convoy, or order them to proceed separately, as you shall then judge best. If protection was not to be given, they will come away of course; and in that case we think you should put your ship in good order, advise the Commissioners and Mr. Thomas Morris that you only wait for their despatches. If you have room on board the ship, receive any goods Mr. Morris or they may order; and when you have received their despatches, make the best of your way back to this place or any other ports of safety in these States, bringing with you any prizes you can take by the way.

Should the Court of France grant free protection for our cruisers and prizes in their ports, we think you may do better in Europe than here, respecting which consult with, and be governed by the advice of, our said Commissioners at the Court of Paris; and if prizes are allowed to be sold there, consign all you take to the order of Mr. Thomas Morris, who has correspondents in every port of France, and will take care that justice is done in the management of them.

Your stay in Europe must depend upon the advice of the Commissioners; and your cruises should always be quick, as you can be soon in and out. Keep your ship well manned, fitted, and provided; and let Old England see how they like to have an active enemy at their own door: they have sent fire and sword to ours.

You know we want seamen here. Therefore encourage all you meet with, both at sea and on shore, to enter our service, and send or bring as many of them to these States as possible.

You must, by all opportunities, inform us of your proceedings, and communicate all the useful or important intelligence that comes to your knowledge. A spirited, active conduct in this enterprise will recommend you to all America; and you have our best wishes for your success and honour, being very sincerely, sir, your friends and humble servants.

To Lambert Wickes, Esq.

JOHN LUCAS TO GENERAL GATES.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

HONOURED GENERAL: I embrace this opportunity to let you know that since I arrived in this city I have done every thing in my power in forwarding clothing for your army. Shortly after I arrived, there was three wagons sent off, which I hope will get soon and safe to your assistance, and am in hopes shall in a few days be able to get two or three more off, at which time I shall set off myself to escort them along with despatch. It's very difficult to procure them here, but I give the honourable Congress no rest.

I am extremely sorry to hear the fate of our fleet, which alarms the people of this place very much; but I have still confidence that your Honour and the good troops under your command (should they attempt Tyconderoga) will be able to give them a dressing.

Colonel Lewis's father is well. Mr. Morris is well and expects Mrs. Gates soon in Philadelphia.

I am, in haste, your Honour's humble servant,

JOHN LUCAS.

To Major-General Gates.

GEORGE ROSS TO LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

Philadelphia, October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Pardon my once more writing to you on the subject of our publick affairs. I mean not to direct, trusting in the affection you have for the liberties of our country, which can never be safe but under a free and good government. Believe me that my first wish is that my country be free, and that in every station they please to place me, I will, to the best of my judgment, do my utmost to serve them.

Whatever may be the result of the determinations of the County of Lancaster, I wish they may be communicated with expedition to the neighbouring Counties. Accept of the affectionate regards of, gentlemen, your obliged humble servant,

GEO. ROSS.

To the honourable Committee of Lancaster County.

COLONEL ZEDTWITZ TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Morristown, October 25, 1776.

SIR: The character your Excellency bears among all ranks of people for your universal distribution of justice, benevolence, and mercy, induces me to presume addressing myself to you in my deplorable situation, in hopes you will in some measure relieve my distress.

In my confinement in York I sometimes obtained the liberty of taking the air, from whence I was removed to Newark, East New-Jersey, amongst the insufferable insults of the populace there; likewise I was suffered to walk out in the air. I am now removed, along with twelve other unhappy prisoners, to this place, where we are all closely confined and almost suffocated to death with the nauseous smell of our excrement, and other disagreeable smells, which daily throws some of us into fits of sickness and fevers, which will in the end cost most of them their lives. This they suffer although no crimes can be proved against most of them, but perhaps a saucy word to a sergeant or subaltern officer, for which, though very good soldiers, they lie neglected and confined. Some of them at the hazard of their lives have come over from the enemy, and are much afraid of being caught and hanged for desertion.

In consequence of my confinement, and the unhappy cause of it, (though innocent in fact,) the heart-breaking grief that hath seized me, with the weakness of my constitution, almost worn out in the service of the country, I have contracted a disorder, which every day threatens me with immediate death, caused by a stagnation of blood rising from my heart to my throat, and strangles me for want of breath. Not the least assistance to be had; therefore I cannot hope to live many days unless your Excellency, in your kind clemency, will be so good as to give directions to the gentleman who hath the honour to wait on you to give me liberty of walking in the air, whereby I might get relief, which I cannot do in this close confinement.

I have mortification to hear that there are many evil-disposed people who have the cruelty to take a great deal of pains to represent me in very dark colours to your Excellency, which would make me very unhappy were I not too well assured of your penetration not to be imposed upon by their malicious aspersions.

I will be answerable with my life not to break through your directions in the least, and be sworn on the Holy Evangelists to observe them as sacred. Indeed, I am not able to infringe them.

I am, dear sir, very respectfully, your Excellency's most obliged and most obedient, humble servant,

H. ZEDTWITZ.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces in America.

P. S. Enclosed you have a plan to obtain arms necessary in the army.

A Plan for obtaining Arms the most requisite for the present use of the Continental Army.

To convince this country (which I shall always hold dear to me) that my heart, filled with gratitude for the many favours I have received, will always be ready to render it all the services in my power, I hereby offer myself to procure the above arms cheaper, and by far better, than any merchant on the Continent can procure; and if my counsel is followed, the cannon must be in proportion still cheaper.

The honourable the Continental Congress must fit out, at their expense, a few stout, good sailing, armed vessels, in proportion to the quantity of arms wanted, and be particularly careful in the choice of good, experienced Captains, and man the vessels with good, able, fighting men.

As this expedition cannot be executed without ready money, I have, two months ago, provided for the same. I asked Mr. Le Roy, of New-York, if he could furnish letters of credit drawn upon sight on Amsterdam, for one hundred thousand pounds, or more if necessity required, where, for the value of said sum, he should be reimbursed in paper money at Philadelphia. I likewise mentioned that, perhaps, the honourable the Continental Congress might want the said sum. He replied, any sum they chose he was willing to furnish them with in drafts on his brother in Amsterdam.

As I cannot, with any degree of propriety, have any connection with the payment of the money, it will be requisite that the honourable the Continental Congress should appoint two or more trusty gentlemen, whom they can confide in, to go over and negotiate the business for them.

It is well known the honourable the Continental Congress have been obliged to pay at the rate of four pounds ten shillings each for old firelocks, Philadelphia currency, and greatest part of them very deficient in respect to their inequality of size; the bayonets and locks, the most essential articles belonging to a firelock, very indifferent; but I engage, and hereby contract, to procure and deliver to the gentlemen appointed to negotiate as paymasters, as many thousand stands of small-arms as may be required, at three pounds four shillings currency, for ready cash. They shall be equal-sized and new, double proof, with bayonets, and very neatly worked.

In our present circumstances nothing can be more useful to the army than field-pieces of different sizes, wherewith we may prevent the enemy from destroying the country, repel them, and keep them at a distance, prevent them from scouring the country, and carrying off our provisions.

In my humble opinion, one hundred and twenty four and six-pounders will be necessary: these of entire new construction, very light, and carried upon a steel machine lately invented by the King of Prussia, and can be carried by three men to each piece any where, even upstairs into your room. They are called grasshoppers, very much resembling that insect, and can easily be fired out of the windows of any room or house, as occasion requires. There were several of them fired upon us at Quebeck, which did the most execution against us at the time we stormed the city.

Double fortified nine and twelve-pounders, about thirty or forty.

Whereas I do not know the certain price of the said cannon, the honourable the Congress will be pleased to empower their negotiators and myself with an address to his Prussian Majesty to furnish us with the quantity they stand in need of; and I will be responsible with my life to get from him the desired quantity, and at the original price his Majesty gave for them, which is entirely out of the power of any merchant to procure on equal terms. In order to make ourselves sure, and not expose our shipping to the enemy, it will be best to pass the Texel by Holland, run into the mouth of the Rhine, where we can easily procure sloops to carry our arms up the Weser, and embark the stores in our vessels; from thence set sail immediately for Philadelphia. All the land we must pass, and where our vessels lay at anchor, belongs to his Prussian Majesty, and are situated in the open sea, out of all danger from the enemy.

This is the only plan which can be executed without the least risk. For my trouble I shall require nothing. I beg only for the protection and maintenance of my family till my return, and the second share of any prizes we may be fortunate enough to take in our voyage, and, after my arrival, leave to return, with my family, to my own country the first opportunity. If this plan be so fortunate to meet with your approbation, I will undertake to return in four months from the time I set sail from Philadelphia.

COLONEL CURTENIUS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Paramus, October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The last time I had the honour to write to you was from Philadelphia, the 20th instant, to which beg leave to refer.

Since I came home, Mrs. Curtenius informed me that she had forwarded a letter from the Convention, directed to me; but I have never received it. I thought proper to inform you of this, that you might have an opportunity to send me a copy of it, provided it is not too late to execute the business I was directed to do in the letter.

In my letter of the 20th instant, I requested the favour to have the money sent to me. If it is not convenient to send it, please to let me know, and I will come and fetch it.

I am, with respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER T. CURTENIUS.

P. S. Enclosed is the resolve of Congress which I had omitted to enclose in my letter of the 20th instant.

COLONEL CURTENIUS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Paramus, October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since closing my letter, I received a letter from Mr. Comfort Sands to furnish him with my account against the Congress, as far as it was audited, which is out of my power, because my accounts and vouchers were delivered to Mr. Bancker, who told me he had delivered them to Mr. Paulding at Tarrytown. If they are still in his possession, it will be absolutely necessary to send for them, lest they should fall in the hands of the enemy, which would be a great loss to the State.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER T. CURTENIUS.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkills.

P. S. The person who fetches them must have a carriage, as the box is too large to carry on a horse.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Lee, October 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed you have a copy of the letter in answer to mine to Congress, relative to cartridges. As soon as the cartridges come up they shall be forwarded. Colonel Biddle has wrote to Amboy for ninety thousand that are at that post.

We have collected all the wagons in our power, and sent over. Our people have had extreme hard duty. The common guards, common fatigue, and the extraordinary guards, and extraordinary fatigue, for the removal of the stores and forwarding the provisions, has kept every man on duty.

General Putnam requested a party of men to reinforce them at Mount Washington. I sent between two and three hundred of Colonel Durkee's regiment. Please to inform me whether your Excellency approves thereof.

We shall get a sufficient quantity of provisions over to-day for the garrison at Fort Washington. General Mifflin thinks it not advisable to pull the barracks down yet. He has hopes of our army returning to that ground for winter quarters. I think this would be running too great a risk, to leave them standing in expectation of such an event, there being several strong fortifications in and about King's Bridge. If the enemy should throw in a thousand or fifteen hundred men, they could cut off our communication effectually; and, as the state of the barracks are, they would find exceeding good cover for the men. But if we were to take the barracks down—if the boards were not removed—it would in a great measure deprive them of that advantage. However, I have not had it in my power to do either, as yet.

I have directed all the wagons that are on the other side to be employed in picking up the scattered boards about the encampments. I believe, from what I saw yesterday in riding over the ground, they will amount to many thousands. As soon as we have got these together I purpose to begin upon the barracks. In the mean time, should be glad to know if your Excellency has any other orders to give respecting the business.

I have directed the Commissary and Quartermaster-General of this department to lay in provision and provender, upon the back road to Philadelphia, for twenty thousand men for three months. The principal magazine will be at Equacanack. I shall fortify it as soon as possible, and secure that post and the pass to the bridge, which is now repaired and fit for an army to pass over with the baggage and artillery.

I rejoice to hear of the defeat of that vile traitor, Major Rogers, and his party of Tories; though I am exceeding sorry to hear it cost us so brave an officer as Major Greene.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's obedient servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Esq., at his Head-Quarters, White-Plains.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO JOHN M'KESSON.

White-Plains, October 24, 2 p. m., 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I received your letter of yesterday a few moments since, and was just preparing to answer it when a messenger arrived from towards New-Rochelle, to acquaint us that early this morning the enemy had struck their tents, and were advancing from that to this place along the common road. Every General Officer, myself excepted, were out reconnoitering. I having arrived here last night, where I was left to remove the publick stores, was only left at home. Two other expresses since arrived and confirmed the account of the enemy's advancing, and our army is now drawn up in order to receive them. The General having come in, gives me so much leisure as to acquaint you of the above. As to every other circumstance which has occurred since my last, Colonel De Witt and the other gentlemen of your Committee will be able to inform you. I have only time to add that I earnestly wish to see them, and that I am, most affectionately, yours,

GEORGE CLINTON.

To John McKesson, Esq.

P. S. Pray let Mrs. Clinton know I am well, and that she need not be uneasy about me. It would be too much honour to die in so good a cause. Pray excuse me to Mr. Allison for not answering his two letters.

CERTIFICATE FOR MOSES YEOMAN.

In Committee, New-Paltz, October 24, 1776.

These are to certify that Moses Yeoman hath served in Captain Elias Hasbrouck's company of Rangers, in the character of Second Lieutenant, sixteen days prior to the date of his warrant, on the request of the Committee of Kingston. It is therefore hoped that the honourable Convention of the State will allow said Moses Yeoman pay for his services during that time.

By order of the Committee:

ROB'T BOYD, Jun., Chairman.

To the honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

To sixteen days' wages, - - - - -	£3 16 9
To sixteen days' billeting, - - - - -	1 12 0
	£5 8 9

CHARLES D. WITT TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

White-Plains, October 24, 1776.

SIR: The situation of our moving army prevented the attention of the General Officers to the subject on which we came, till yesterday, and we expect to have it completed by to-morrow, when we shall set out for Convention with all possible speed, calling on General James Clinton in our way.

We are requested by the Generals of our State to inform you of the absolute necessity our troops are in for want of clothing. They think it would greatly promote speedy inlistment if those who are already engaged during the war should be clothed immediately. That the soldiers' coats should by all means be made large, with the pockets on the inside, which is more convenient in rainy weather. That the cloth should be first soaked in water to prevent shrinking. That the coats be of two sizes, and the initial letters of the State, with the number of the regiment, on the buttons. That these clothes may be sent forward to the army in such quantities as you can have finished weekly, is in our opinion indispensably necessary at this time. Shoes and stockings are also much wanted, and should be sent down without delay. We hope the above will be attended to, even in the midst of that variety of perplexing business which we but too well know is the present lot of our worthy Convention or Committee.

As to news, yesterday there were several skirmishes between the out-parties of both armies, in all which we have been successful. In one we killed ten of the villains and took three prisoners; thirty-six of Rogers's band fell into our hands also; and had the orders of Lord Stirling been strictly obeyed, we should have had the whole party with their infamous leader. The foe having retreated from Mamaroneck gives cause to suspect their having laid aside the design of enclosing us.

We are, sir, your and Convention's most obedient and very humble servants,

CH. D. WITT,
ROB'T HARPUR,
LEWIS GRAHAM.

SIR: We cannot omit communicating to you a scheme we have thought of since here of exciting the desertion of Hessians. That two or three hundred thousand short hand-bills, in the German and low Dutch tongues, be sent as soon as possible to our General Officers, who can readily circulate them about the fields so as to answer the purpose of a very general information in a little time, and in their opinion would have a good effect.

Yours, as above.

To the Hon. Peter R. Livingston, President of the Convention, Fishkill.

NATHAN CLARK TO JAMES YANCEY.

Bennington, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 20th instant, per Mr. Crane, came to hand yesterday about eleven o'clock. I immediately notified the Committee, and consulted them on the request you sent three o'clock afternoon of the same day; and within one hour despatched three of the Committee to different parts, to find what wheat was ready on hand to be immediately manufactured in the service of the Northern army; and are informed by their return, three o'clock this afternoon, that one thousand bushels is now ready, and that part is manufacturing, and the remainder forwarding to the mills for manufactory, together with teams to forward it to you as fast as possible. Several teams loaded with flour will be on the road toward Skeensborough this week; the residue will with all convenient speed. In the mean time, provision will be making for further supply. Before the reception of Mr. Trumbull's letter of the 22d instant, received this day, requesting the assistance of the Militia, they were marched, and have doubtless joined you before this. They have left us almost to a man; renders it very difficult to furnish assistance to convey what we have already on hand. Should it be thought expedient to discharge twenty or thirty of the inhabitants from their present post, of those that would be judged by their officers the best capable of assisting with teams, carriages, and persons, to forward provision, it might be beneficial. Mr. Trumbull mentions the conveyance of the above by pack-horses, (if no other way,) which will render its safe conveyance very precarious, as it will be subject to the wet from above and below. If Militia troops or others could be spared to repair the road a little directly, I think it the only way of supplying with any quantity. As we have not had opportunity to apply, we can't ascertain what quantity we can be able to supply. The General may be assured that we shall exert ourselves to the utmost of our ability. In the mean time, ready cash would greatly facilitate the forwarding, as sundry persons are to be dealt with. Could suitable casks be sent every opportunity to pack the flour in, it would be of service, as they are scarce here, and it is difficult to provide necessaries to pack it in, and the coopers are absent. The carriages that come back will easily bring sufficient to pack the next load. Shall readily wait any direction, and let you know every opportunity what supplies we can furnish accordingly.

As we are scattered, you will please to excuse our detaining your messenger thirty-six hours; and it is now nine o'clock at night. He merits the opinion of the Committee of the faithfulness of his trust while here.

We are, gentlemen, with the greatest esteem, and compliments to yourself and Mr. Trumbull, your sincere friends,
NATHAN CLARK, Chairman.

To Mr. James Yancey, Deputy Commissary, at Headquarters, Tyconderoga.

N. B. Captain Farnsworth is now in Connecticut, and his assistant not to be present till next Monday, when his letter will be seasonably delivered. As we have used the boldness to examine the contents, shall supply his place to the utmost of our power.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MOUNT HOPE, NEAR TICONDEROGA, DATED OCTOBER 24, 1776.

All the prisoners which were taken were sent in by a flag of truce, and are not to serve during the war. There was a party of our Indians, with their Lieutenant, who was likewise an Indian, put in irons immediately after they were taken, and, after our men were sent in by the enemy, were delivered up to the savages to be butchered; but, contrary to Burgoyne's expectation, the savages released them immediately, and sent them home after treating them very kindly. Perhaps such an instance as this never was known before, and you may depend on it as fact, as I was in company with the Captain of the Indians yesterday, who informed me of it; and, finally, the enemy's Indians have agreed to return home if ours do, which a number did yesterday; the rest will follow this day.

We are in daily expectation of an attack from the enemy, who are within sixteen miles of us, (Crown-Point), but we are well prepared to receive them, and I hope, in God's name, no man's courage will fail in that day, as the cause of liberty and America depends entirely on the Northern army. Our men recruit daily. We are not in the least want of provisions or ammunition.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Stamford, October 24, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: I have now returned home on parole. Your Honour has undoubtedly heard of my misfortune of being taken prisoner on the 13th instant, on Lake Champlain. I shall give your Honour a short sketch of our engagement, which is as follows:

On Friday morning, of the 11th instant, our alarm-guns were fired, that the enemy's fleet was off Cumberland-Head. I immediately went on board of General Arnold, and told him that I gave it as my opinion that the fleet ought immediately to come to sail, and fight them on a retreat in main Lake, as they were so much superiour to us in number and strength, and we being in such a disadvantageous harbour to fight a number so much superiour, and the enemy being able with their small boats to surround us on every side, as I knew they could, we lying between an island and the main. But General Arnold was of the opinion that it was best to draw the fleet in a line where we lay, in the bay of Valcour. The fleet very soon came up with us, and surrounded us, when a very hot engagement ensued ten o'clock in the morning till towards sunset, when the enemy withdrew. We immediately held council, to secure a retreat through their fleet, to get to Crown-Point, which was done with so much secrecy that we went through them entirely undiscovered. The enemy, finding next morning that we had retreated, immediately pursued us. The wind being against us, and my vessel so torn to pieces that it was almost impossible to keep her above water; my sails was so shot, that carrying sail split them from foot to head, and I was obliged to come to anchor at twelve o'clock, to mend my sails. When we had completed that, we made sail, just at evening. The enemy still pursued all night. I found next morning that they gained upon us very fast, and that they would very soon overtake me. The rest of the fleet all being much ahead of me, I sent my boat on board of General Arnold, to get liberty to put my wounded in the boat, and send them forward, and run my vessel on shore, and blow her up. I received for answer, by no means to run her ashore, but to push forward to Split Rock, where he would draw the fleet in a line, and engage them again; but when I came to Split Rock, the whole fleet was making their escape as fast as they could, and left me in the rear, to fall into the enemy's hands. But before I struck to them, the ship of eighteen twelve-pounders, and a schooner of fourteen six-pounders, had surrounded me, which obliged me to strike, and I thought it prudent to surrender myself prisoner of war. As soon as I was taken, General Arnold, with four gondolas, run ashore, and blew up the vessels ahead of me. One thing I have omitted in the former part of my letter, that is, the Royal Savage run ashore on the Point of Valcour, in the first of the engagement, and was lost.

I will just give the strength of the British fleet upon the lake: One ship carrying six twenty-four-pounders, brass; twelve twelve-pounders, brass; four eight-inch howitzer; one ship, eighteen twelve-pounders; one schooner, fourteen six-pounders; one schooner, twelve six-pounders; two gondolas, one carrying six, the other four carriage guns; twenty-eight row boats, carrying one gun each, from eighteen to twelve-pounders, and some of them carrying howitzers. This is the truest account that I am able to give.

Sir, I would have waited on the Congress in person, had it not have been that my parole confined me to Connecticut. But I hope that I shall not be neglected in being exchanged, if any opportunity there be.

I remain, sir, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, JUN.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President to the Continental Congress.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 24, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour to enclose a copy of a resolve of the General Assembly of Connecticut in favour of Colonel Ethan Allen and others, made prisoners at Montreal in September, 1775, and now in a suffering condition, promiscuously in a common gaol in Halifax, earnestly to request your friendly interposition to procure a speedy exchange of those prisoners.

Your seasonable and necessary care in the premises will greatly oblige Colonel Allen and his fellow-sufferers, serve our common cause, and do an act of justice and humanity towards them.

I am, most respectfully; sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

At a General Assembly holden at New-Haven, in Connecticut, on the second Thursday of October, Anno Domini 1776:

It being represented to this Assembly that Colonel Ethan Allen, together with about eighteen other natives or inhabitants of this State, having been captivated in the service of this and the United States of America by a party of armed forces of the King of Great Britain, near Montreal, in the Province of Quebeck, on the 25th of September, 1775, have suffered great hardships during their captivity, and are now confined, in a suffering condition, promiscuously, in a common jail at Halifax; and Mr. Levi Allen, of Salisbury, is now about to attempt a visit to his brother, the said Ethan, by whom a supply may be transmitted to said prisoners, to whom considerable wages are due:

Whereupon it is resolved by this Assembly, that his Honour the Governour be desired to write on the subject to his Excellency General Washington, to the Continental Congress, or to the Commanding Officer at Boston, or each of them, earnestly requesting such seasonable and friendly interposition as may be necessary in the premises and most likely to procure a speedy exchange of said prisoners. And that the Pay-Table draw an order on the Treasurer of this State to pay out of the Treasury to the said Levi Allen, for the purpose aforesaid, the sum of one hundred and twenty pounds lawful money, taking his receipt for the same, to be advanced and paid to the aforesaid prisoners, on account of their wages, due from the United States of America, and his account thereof to render when requested.

PROCLAMATION BY GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

By the Hon. JONATHAN TRUMBULL, Esq., Governour, Captain-General and Commander-in-Chief in and over the State of CONNECTICUT:

A Proclamation.

Whereas it has been represented to the General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, now sitting in this place, that there are several non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the troops of Horse and Militia in this State, who did not march according to orders issued from the Captain-General, for the defence of this and the other United States of America; and that there are others who deserted said service after they had joined and marched with their respective corps, all since the 1st of July last; and the said Assembly willing to extend their clemency to such as are yet desirous of fulfilling their duty in the service of their country, have authorized me to offer and I do hereby offer and grant full pardon and indemnity to all such non-commissioned officers and soldiers who have been delinquent in manner aforesaid, provided they do immediately return to their duty, and join themselves to their respective companies in either of the regiments now ordered to march under the command of Major-General Wooster, in defence of this and the other United States. And I do hereby declare, that such as shall so return and fulfill their duty in said service as aforesaid, until regularly discharged therefrom, shall receive their wages for the time they did, and shall continue in said service. And I do also hereby strictly order and direct, that due process be forthwith had against all such as shall still refuse to comply with their duty as aforesaid; and all informing officers and other ministers of justice are directed to take every effectual measure to bring said persons to proper and condign punishment. And the several printers in this State are directed to cause this Proclamation to be published in each of their respective papers.

Given under my hand at the Council Chamber in New-Haven, this 24th day of October, A. D. 1776.

JONATHAN TRUMBULL

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO JOHN LANGDON.

Newport, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Upon the trial of Samuel Eslem and Thomas Donchor for mutiny, on board the ship Royal Exchange, it appeared that the mutiny was encouraged or put on foot by the former Captain of her, in which he employed his steward to promise them twenty guineas a man and half the ship and cargo, when they should arrive in England. And on this intelligence, I think it will be right for you to stop his private adventure till that matter is cleared up.

Sir, you are hereby empowered to act as agent for the officers and people belonging to the American fleet, for all vessels that may come within your State.

I am, in behalf of the officers and people, sir, your most humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To John Langdon, Esq., Agent for the American Navy in the State of New-Hampshire.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Newport, October 24, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since I wrote you last, Captain Jones, in the Providence, has arrived here with three prizes, and one ship is arrived at Bedford. Enclosed is a copy of the account of his cruise, that he gave me.

The Cabot has sent the ship into Providence, and yesterday Lieutenant Weaver, of the Cabot, came here from Bedford, where he arrived two days ago in another prize ship. He informs me that when he left the Cabot, she had taken five ships and a brig, all from Jamaica—one of them a three-decker, with upwards of six hundred hogsheads on board.

The Alfred is now manned, and under sailing orders with the Hamden. Captain Jones, of the Providence, has the command of her. Enclosed you have a copy of the orders I have given him, and hope they are such as will meet with your approbation. The reason of my giving orders to Captain Jones to attempt to destroy the ships and their works at the coal mines was, that I received certain intelligence by a master of a vessel directly from there, that there was nearly twenty vessels, and one hundred prisoners employed in that service, guarded by twenty-six soldiers, the Savage sloop of war, and Dawson's brig; and one of them generally at Louisburg.

One of the new ships came down from Providence yesterday; the other got aground but I expect her down the first fair wind. They are nearly fitted every way for the sea, all but men, which they have about one hundred and fifty each. Shall now give my whole attention to their manning.

If you have any particular service for them, should be glad to receive it. I think they will be ready to sail as soon as your orders can reach here; and I hope near manned.

The Columbus is cleaned, and taking her ballast on board; rigging and filling as fast as possible. The sloop Providence will haul into the wharf to-morrow in order to clean. Shall get them out as soon as possible; but expect to meet with great difficulty in getting men, the privateers being so plenty, and having great success, that the men look on their shares better than what they have in the navy.

I am, with great respect, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the honourable Marine Committee at Philadelphia.

LIEUTENANT KNIGHT (PRISONER) TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

South-Hadley, Massachusetts-Bay, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Having formerly addressed your Excellency for leave to be released upon giving my parole not to take up arms until a person of the same rank with myself was sent in exchange, and General Gates having done me the honour per favour of the 24th January last, to signify that your Excellency was truly concerned, it was not then in your power, but the first moment that it could be done with propriety, I might rest assured of the indulgence being granted. Presuming that time is now arrived, from the number of precedents on our side, I beg leave once more to trouble your Excellency with a repetition of my request for myself and a Mr. Arnold, a master in his Britannick Majesty's service, who desires to be indulged on the same terms, as we flatter ourselves a personal application to Lord Howe will be a surer means to promote an exchange for ourselves and fellow-sufferers here.

If it is not intruding, I would mention those plans and papers belonging to me, which, after undergoing your Excellency's inspection at Cambridge, you was pleased to return to me by Captain Melcher. The Committee here, not knowing the nature of these things, have taken them into their possession.

Your Excellency will oblige me in giving some directions concerning them.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
JOHN KNIGHT.

To General Washington.

OLIVER PRESCOTT TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Boston, October 24, 1776.

DEAR SIR: My health is such that I cannot ride to Watertown at present; have therefore at the repeated request of sundry gentlemen, taken the freedom to enclose my commission, and beg the favour of you to get it renewed, and send up by the first opportunity, as there is business of consequence necessary to be immediately done. I have not taken out a commission of the quorum since my appointment; if that should now be agreeable to the honourable Board, it might be of present service to this part of the country. The Representatives for some of the adjacent towns come up every week: perhaps Mr. Sawtell, of Shirley, may this week.

Soldiers are marching from all the towns in the upper part of New-Hampshire State for the relief of our army at Ticonderoga. Twenty-six men march this day from the town of New-Ipswich. I hope our army will be immediately reinforced.

I am, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

OLIVER PRESCOTT.

To the Hon. Henry Gardner, Esq., in Watertown.

SELECTMEN OF BOSTON TO BENJAMIN AUSTIN.

Boston, October 24, 1776.

SIR: Since I saw you the Selectmen have made a strict inquiry and can't find in the town hardly any nails; perhaps we may be able to procure one load. We don't see how it is possible to procure the supply but by taking of those that were lately brought in as prize. It is said they are at Newburyport; we therefore thought it necessary that Captain Torrey should apply to the honourable Council for to assist him. We would not dictate, but we think if orders were given to the proper officers at Newburyport, or wherever the nails are, they might be obtained. We think, that as the case is circumstanced, the common form of proceeding may be dispensed with. It will be necessary that orders should be given to the proper officer to procure wagons for the carriage of them. Any assistance we can give Captain Torrey we shall be ready to do it.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN SCOLLAY, Chairman.

To the Hon. Benja. Austin, Esq.

Boston, October 24, 1776.

Yesterday Captain Daniel Harthorne arrived at Salem from a cruise. On his passage he met with an armed packet, which he attacked. In the engagement, which lasted two hours, he lost three men killed, and nine or ten wounded, himself slightly; since which he has taken, and sent into Cape Ann, a prize snow with oats.

The privateer commanded by Captain Carleton, which sailed from Salem on a cruise, about four weeks since, was taken near Canceau, by the brig Hope, Captain Dawson, a few days after leaving port, and carried into Halifax. Captain Carleton, with some of the crew, made their escape by swimming ashore.

Last Thursday was sent into Hayhannes, by Captain Atkins, the ship Heafield from Ireland, bound to New-York, having on board seventy puncheons of spirits, seventy puncheons of porter, three hundred and fifty tierces of bread, fifty tierces of oat-meal, sixty-one tierces of peas, sixty pork, seventy tierces of beef, one hundred casks of butter, some sweet oil, raisins, candles, flour, and a number of other articles.

Yesterday, arrived in this port, a prize ship from Antigua for London, with about two hundred hogsheads of sugar. She was taken by the Putnam.

ORDERS TO THE COMMITTEE ABOUT THE RANGERS.

State of New-Hampshire, in Committee of Safety, }
October, 24, 1776.

To Colonel Hurd and the gentlemen of the Committee for giving orders and directions to the companies of Rangers on CONNECTICUT River:

This Committee having been informed that the road from Haverhill to Rumney is greatly out of repair, think it advisable for you to send detachments out of the Captain Atkinson's, Simpson's, and Russel's companies to repair said road, seeing that an account of the expense on each town is kept separate.

BY THE KING.

A Proclamation for encouraging Seamen to enter themselves on board His Majesty's ships-of-war.

GEORGE R.

Whereas it is our Royal intention to give all due encouragement to all such seamen who shall voluntarily enter themselves in our service, we have thought fit, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, to publish this our Royal Proclamation; and we do hereby promise and declare that all such able seamen, not above the age of fifty nor under the age of eighteen years, fit for our service, who shall, on or before the 31st day of December next, voluntarily enter themselves to serve in our Royal navy, either with the Captains or Lieutenants of our ships, or the chief officers on board such tenders as shall be employed for raising men for the service of our navy, shall receive, as our royal bounty, the sum of five pounds each man; and all such ordinary seamen, fit for our service, who shall so enter themselves as aforesaid, shall receive the sum of two pounds ten shillings each man, as our Royal bounty, in lieu of all other bounties mentioned in our proclamation dated the 22d day of March last, and our orders in Council of the 1st of May, the 21st of June, and 21st of August following; such respective sums to be paid them by the respective Clerks of the Cheque residing at the ports or places where the ships into which they shall be entered, shall be immediately after the third muster of such seamen. And we do declare that the qualifications of the seamen for entering themselves as aforesaid, shall be certified by the Captain, Master, and Boatswain of the ship or vessel where they shall enter. And for prevention of any abuses by any persons leaving the vessels to which they shall belong, and entering themselves on board any other ships or vessels, in order to obtain the said bounty money, we do hereby declare and command that such seamen belonging to any of our ships or vessels as shall absent themselves from any of the said ships or vessels to which they shall belong, and shall enter themselves on board any other of our said ships or vessels in order to obtain the said bounty, shall not only lose the wages due to them in the ships or vessels they shall leave, but also be severely punished according to their demerits.*

Given at our Court at St. James's, the twenty-fifth day of October, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, in the seventeenth year of our reign.

God save the King!

*Two days after this Proclamation appeared, before it could be possibly known what effect it would have, press-warrants were issued, and upwards of a thousand sailors were taken on the river Thames by surprise. At the same time press-warrants were put in execution in every seaport in the Kingdom.—Remembrancer.

IMPRESSMENT OF SEAMEN.

London, October 28, 1776.

Last night upon the flood tide, about twenty boats, manned and officered, came up the river from Deptford and Woolwich, when a general press began, and every man was taken on board the several ships they boarded, except the master and mate. A Lieutenant was shot with a pistol in boarding a ship, and eight seamen were drowned in endeavouring to swim to shore to avoid the press. By the press gangs taking out the men belonging to the fishing vessels, a very small quantity of fish was brought to market, and the gangs took several persons from Billingsgate, within the Lord Mayor's jurisdiction, which occasioned his Lordship to issue out his order for apprehending the officers of all press gangs in his jurisdiction. The Lord Mayor, Mr. Sawbridge, gave orders to the City Marshals, that they, with their assistants, should take care that the press gangs do not take any men out of the city, unless they produce a legal warrant; and if they do not, to take the officer into custody, that they may be dealt with according to law.

London, October 30, 1776.

There was another hot press from Gravesend to Rotherhithe, and the gangs picked up a great number of hands, but have drove the West-India captains to great distress, their ships being loaded, and not hands to navigate their vessels, although the merchants had paid their men a month's advance, besides their river pay. Yesterday application was made to the Lord Mayor to back the press warrants, which request he refused.

Among the persons impressed happened to be one John Tubbs, one of the city watermen, in the service of the Lord Mayor for the time being. The Town-Clerk was ordered to demand his release, which he did by the following Letter:

Copy of the Town-Clerk's Letter to the Lords of the Admiralty, written by order of the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen.

MY LORDS: William Dawson, Esq., this city's water bailiff, having this day informed the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen, that Lieutenant Tate, of Gravesend, did on the 4th instant impress John Tubbs, one of this city's watermen, I am directed by the said Court to desire your Lordships will give orders for the immediate discharge of the said John Tubbs.

I have the honour to be, my Lords, your Lordships' most obedient, humble servant,

WILLIAM RIX, Town-Clerk.

To the Right Honourable the Lords of the Admiralty.

Town-Clerk's, Guildhall, November 19, 1776.

To which Letter the Town-Clerk received this Answer:

Admiralty Office, November 20, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of yesterday contains a demand on the part of the Court of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the city of London, of the immediate discharge of John Tubbs, who has been impressed, and is stated to be one of the city's watermen.

This is a solemn demand of his discharge as a matter of right, as to which I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Admiralty to observe to you that the condition of John Tubbs makes him clearly liable, in law, to be impressed, insomuch that if he had absconded to avoid the press, he would have been punishable by the Court of Aldermen for so doing.

As matter of right, therefore, it is impossible to give him up; and the demand being made in that form, renders it equally impossible to show that degree of attention to their application which it might otherwise, if circumstances would have allowed it, have been their Lordships' inclination to have done.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

PH. STEPHENS.

To William Rix, Esq., Town-Clerk, City of London.

At a Court of Common Council, the city law officers were ordered to apply for a writ of habeas corpus, for to bring Tubbs before a court of justice. The lawyers having applied, were granted a rule, against the Lords of the Admiralty, "to show cause why a writ in behalf of Tubbs should not be granted." The lawyers were wrong; they ought not to have taken this rule, but insisted upon the writ. The rule came on to be argued on the 28th of November, 1776. The counsel for the city did not go into the general merits of press warrants, but confined themselves specially to the case, and contended for the usage of city exemption, against the usage of Admiralty encroachments.

The Attorney-General, on the part of the Admiralty Board, showed cause why Tubbs should not be discharged, on the ground of exemption to the general power of impressing seamen and seafaring people when the exigencies of the State required it. The Solicitor-General contended for the right in its fullest extent, and said no exception could be maintained that was not supported by act of Parliament. Mr. Wallace said the exception was so loose, as stated in the affidavits in behalf of the rule, that it was impossible to say to what numbers it might be applied, whether to thirty-one, the real number of the Lord Mayor's watermen, or to any other number the water bailiff might think proper to protect. Mr. Cust insisted that the exemption could in the first instance only have originated from the King; that no pretence, much less proof, of any such exemption had been set up; and each of them insisted that the matters stated in the affidavits, to show that the exemption contended for was founded in ancient usage, came short of the least shadow of legal or relative proof that any such usage ever existed in any form. Earl Mansfield here observed, that the arguments promising to be very long, and it being the last day of term, in which a great mass of business remained yet to be transacted, he recommended to Serjeant Glynn to state the grounds of his motion specially, and to give a note of it into Court, in order that the affair might be put off till next term. Serjeant Glynn answered that he was not prepared to enter into such a special state. Lord Mansfield again pressed the propriety of letting the motion lie over till next term, provided that the Attorney-General was satisfied on one hand to receive, and the counsel in behalf of the rule consented, that Tubbs, and sufficient sureties, should enter into recognizances for his appearance the second day of next term. Mr. Dunning said, for his part he was no special pleader, nor would he undertake for his client, as he had no instructions so to do. Lord Mansfield replied, that he only recommended what he wished might be done, for the reasons already assigned. The counsel in behalf of the rule might insist on being now heard, if they thought proper, but the Court had it still in their option to pronounce judgment; so those who pressed the argument, not the Court, nor the counsel on the other side, would be chargeable with the consequences. Mr. Dunning rejoined, that he and his brother counsel asked no favour: they only demanded justice; and so that was obtained, he was very indifferent in what form, or under what circumstances it was administered. Serjeant Glynn, and Messrs. Dunning, Davenport, Alleyne, and Lee, were severally heard in support of the rule. The Court then delivered their opinions seriatim, and were unanimous that the proofs brought in support of the rule were not sufficient; that the Lord Mayor's watermen were entitled to no such claim of exemption; and that the rule ought to be discharged.

The Attorney-General, in the course of the pleadings, said that he had ordered every proper inquiry to be made into the city charters, and the Admiralty books, but that no document of the right of exemption could be produced. An affidavit of William Stephens, Esq., Secretary to the Commissioners of the Admiralty, was read, which set forth that no precedent was to be met with, whereby such a claim could be sustained; and a case was recited, in which the Mayor of London requested the discharge of one of his watermen, and offered to give a substitute, when the Lords of the Admiralty, in consideration of the public importance of his character, not only complied, but dispensed with his offer of a substitute.*

When Mr. Sawbridge's Mayoralty expired, Captain Kirke, a regulating Captain, applied to the new Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Halifax, at a Court of Aldermen, on the 10th December, 1776, to back the press warrants for the city. He attended at the Court, at Guildhall, and was called in, when he informed the Court that he was ordered to wait upon the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen by the Secretary to the Lords of the Admiralty, in order to mention that the impress service could not be carried on with so much ease and effect in the city of London as the service required, without the assistance and support of the civil magistrate, and therefore wished that the Court would direct the constables in the several wards to aid and assist him and his officers when required. He was asked whether he was ordered to wait upon the Lord Mayor only, or the Court of Aldermen; he said upon the Lord Mayor, but as the Court was sitting, he thought it his duty to desire their compliance with his request.

*The claim of exemption seemed to imply a legality in the warrant, which was not approved of by those who are of opinion that impressing is illegal.—Rem.

Mr. Alderman Wooldridge moved, That this Court does not consider the application made by Captain Kirk, as properly made to this Court; which motion was carried by a great majority. Mr. Alderman Harley said that he chose to avow his principles, and desired that Captain Kirk might be called in, and that he should inform him that, whatever might be the resolution of the Court, he should back the press warrants, and give every assistance in his power to the officers employed to impress in the city. Upon this, Mr. Alderman Wooldridge said he wondered that any single member could think of making such a declaration to the regulating Captain in the Court, at the very moment the Court had come to a resolution to take no notice of his application. In this opinion he was supported by several of the Aldermen; and at last, Mr. Harley said that he should indulge the gentlemen by going into another room to communicate his intention to Captain Kirk, which he accordingly did; and, on his return, informed the Court, that he had promised Captain Kirk to protect him in his impress business, and backed his warrants, which he hoped would answer the purpose. Upon this, the Lord Mayor declared, that he would order the city marshals and constables to do their duty, and seize every person who dared to impress in the city; and that if any person so impressed came before him, he should set him at liberty, and commit the officer for a breach of the peace, unless he found sureties for his appearance at the quarter sessions; and then called the City Marshals, and ordered them to do their duty, and not to fail to bring such persons before him as should be found impressing in the city.

Notwithstanding this declaration of the Lord Mayor, the press-gangs came into the city and impressed several persons. On the 16th of December, three Lieutenants of the navy, and a mate of the Culloden man-of-war, were brought before the Aldermen Lewes, Lee, Wooldridge, and Plomer, at Guildhall, for impressing two men the same day within the city. Charles Sotter, who was one of the persons impressed, said that he was seized by one of the defendants, all of whom surrounded him, and he was delivered by them to one of their gang, in order to be taken on board the tender; that several Constables of the Ward of Lime street interfered, and told the officers that they had received particular directions from Sir Watkins Lewes, the Alderman of that ward, not to suffer any press-gang to take any person away without his having been first brought before a Magistrate. The officers offered to attend the Constables to Guildhall, where they justified what they had done under a warrant from the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, endorsed by Mr. Alderman Harley, in these words:

LONDON, to wit: To all Constables and others whom this may concern. Let this warrant be executed within this City and Liberties. Given under my hand and seal the 10th day of December, 1776.

THOMAS HARLEY.

The body of this warrant contained an authority to impress seamen and seafaring men for his Majesty's service, and was directed to Captain Balfour, of the Culloden. Under this warrant, and the endorsement thereon, the officers of the navy contended they had a right to impress within the city of London, and to take the person so impressed immediately on board the tender; that before Mr. Harley had given his sanction, they had frequently done so; that their usual mode was, after seizing the man, to call a coach and drive to the tower. On being asked by the alderman, whether they considered a freeman of London exempt, they refused directly to answer that question; but afterwards Captain Lloyd said he believed he should pay respect to the copy of a man's freedom, and if he had any doubts respecting the propriety of such conduct, he should leave the determination to the regulating Captain, Kirke. The other complainant appeared to be a pensioner, and when he was seized, produced his ticket, and showed a scar on his head, where his skull was fractured in an engagement the last war. This poor fellow, it is feared, will lose his pension, unless the Lords of the Admiralty are properly acquainted that he was compelled to take so active a part in this transaction. Mr. Justice Wilmot attended the examination, and received a severe rebuke for his interference from the Aldermen, who observed that they should have thought it unbecoming in them to have opposed the execution of the law at his office; that he had insinuated the defendants were in the disgraceful situation of prisoners, whereas they had no idea of treating them in any other character than that of gentlemen; that they (the aldermen) were no strangers to the motive that brought on the present hearing, which was to gain, in a course of proceeding, a legal determination of the grand question respecting press warrants. The defendants refused to find bail, and were thereupon committed to Wood street compter.

Next day, December 17, a consultation was held by the Attorney and Solicitor General, and Mr. Wallace, respecting the four Lieutenants then in custody, and it was advised to bail them, which was done.

Copy of the Warrant of Commitment.

To all and every the Constables and other Officers of the Peace for the City of London, and the Liberties thereof, whom these may concern, and to the Keeper of Wood street compter.

LONDON, to wit: These are in his Majesty's name, to command you, and every of you, forthwith safely to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper, the bodies of Thomas Lloyd, David Ramsey, John Hills, and William Colville, being charged before us, his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, in and for the said city and liberties, by the oath of Charles Sotter, John Hutchins, John Holmes, and Thomas Hasted, for severally assaulting them, the said Charles Sotter and John Hutchins, in Lime street, in the said city of London, this day, in breach of his said Majesty's peace, whom you, the said keeper, are hereby required to receive, and in your custody safely keep for want of sureties, until they shall be severally discharged by due course of law; and for your so doing this shall be to you, and each of you, a sufficient warrant.

Given under our hands and seals the 16th day of December, 1776.

WILLIAM PLOMER,
WILLIAM LEE,
THOMAS WOOLDRIDGE.

Thus endorsed: To the Keeper of Wood Street Compter.

GEORGE HATLEY.

London, October 30, 1776.

Sixteen ships of the line were put into commission. A little time after, more ships were put into commission. The press was to man this fleet.

[This armament was suddenly resolved upon. Many reasons were assigned for it, such as, other Powers, particularly France, being arming; the probability of a war between Spain and Portugal, &c. On this occasion great numbers of the naval officers waited on the Lords of the Admiralty and offered their services; those who had interest got ships, &c. It was observed, and mentioned to Admiral Keppel, that he had not waited on the Admiralty Board and offered his services, as others had done. To which he answered: "If the necessities of the times called for his services, and he knew it was the King's desire, he was ready to do his duty, but not in the line of America."]—Rem.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At the Court of St. James's, the 25th day of October, 1776:

Present, the King's most excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas it is requisite for the publick safety, in the present conjuncture of affairs, to prevent the exportation of provisions: It is therefore hereby ordered by his Majesty in Council, that an embargo be forthwith laid upon all ships and vessels laden, or to be laden, in the ports of Great Britain, with black cattle and hogs, beef, butter, pork, and cheese, or any sort of provisions, except fish, corn, or grain of any kind, or pulse; and that the said embargo do continue and remain upon such ships and vessels till further order: But it is his Majesty's pleasure that the said embargo shall not extend to any ships or vessels that shall be employed in carrying provisions to any of his Majesty's West-India Islands, or to any of his Majesty's Colonies in North America, (except the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia;) or to his Majesty's forts and settlements on the coast of Africa, or the island of St. Helena; provided that the owners of such ships or vessels do make oath, on the entry of such ships or vessels, of the due destination thereof to the place to which such ships or vessels shall be so entered to clear out as aforesaid, and do give security by bond to the proper officers of the customs of the port at which such ships or vessels shall enter and clear out, with two other able and sufficient securities, in treble the value of the cargo of such provisions, for the performance of the conditions therein specified; and do thereby engage, that such ships and vessels shall proceed under convoy of one of his Majesty's ships, and shall not desert the convoy on their voyage; and likewise to produce, within twelve months from the date of such bond, from the proper officer of the customs of the port to which such ships or vessels shall go, certificates of their having delivered their cargoes at the places for which they shall have been entered; and no such bonds or securities shall be delivered up but on the production of such certificates. And his Majesty is hereby further pleased to order, that the said embargo shall not extend to any ship or vessel actually retained or employed in his Majesty's service, nor to any ship or vessel which shall be laden by the especial order, and under the direction of the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, with any kind of provisions for the use of his Majesty's fleets or armies. And the Right Honourable the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, and the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are to give the necessary directions for carrying the same into execution, so far as to them shall respectively appertain.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

At the Court of St. James's, the 25th day of October, 1776:

Present, the King's most excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas his Majesty was pleased by his order in Council of the 26th of January last, to lay an embargo upon all ships and vessels laden or to be laden in the ports of the Kingdom of Ireland, with provisions of any kind, (except as therein excepted): And whereas his Majesty was pleased, by another order in Council of the 14th of February following, to declare that the said embargo should not extend to corn or grain of any kind: And whereas it hath been represented, that the said embargo hath in many instances been evaded: It is hereby ordered by his Majesty in Council, that an embargo be forthwith laid upon all ships and vessels laden or to be laden in any of the ports of the Kingdom of Ireland† with black cattle and hogs, beef, pork, butter, and cheese, or any sort of provisions, except

* This is a most extraordinary order of Council. It is no less than giving the Ministry a monopoly of all the provisions in the Kingdom. The merchants must not trade nor speculate in provisions. The planters must not feed their slaves, but to such an amount as the Ministry please. It will most essentially benefit the contractors of provisions for the army in America, and it is not quite clear of suspicion that it was issued at their request.—Remembrancer.

† This is the first instance of such an order respecting Ireland.—Rem.

fish, corn, or grain of any kind, or pulse; and that the said embargo do continue and remain upon such ships and vessels till further order. But it is his Majesty's pleasure, that the said embargo do not extend to ships or vessels bringing cattle of any kind, salted beef, pork, bacon, and butter from Ireland into this Kingdom, pursuant to the liberty granted for that purpose by an act passed in the last session of Parliament; nor to any ship or vessel that shall be employed in carrying provisions to any of his Majesty's West-India Islands, or to any of his Majesty's Colonies in North America, (except the Colonies of New-Hampshire, Massachusetts-Bay, Rhode-Island, Connecticut, New-York, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, the three lower Counties on Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North-Carolina, South-Carolina, and Georgia;) or to his Majesty's forts and settlements on the coast of Africa, or to the island of St. Helena; provided that the owners of such ships and vessels do make oath on the entry of such ships and vessels, of the due destination thereof to the place for which such ships and vessels shall be so entered to clear out as aforesaid, and do give security by bond to the proper officers of the customs, at the port at which such ships and vessels shall enter and clear out, with two other able and sufficient securities, in treble the value of the cargo of such provisions, for the performance of the conditions therein specified, and do thereby engage, that such ships and vessels shall proceed under convoy of one of his Majesty's ships, and shall not desert their convoy on their voyage; and likewise to produce, within twelve months from the date of such bond, from the proper officer of the customs at the port to which such ships or vessels shall go, certificates of their having delivered their cargoes at the places for which they shall have been entered; and no such bonds or securities shall be delivered up before the production of such certificates. And his Majesty is hereby further pleased to order, that the said embargo shall not extend to any ship or vessel actually retained or employed in his Majesty's service, nor to any ship or vessel which shall be laden by the especial order, and under the directions of the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, or of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, with any kind of provisions for the use of his Majesty's fleets and armies. And his Excellency Earl Harcourt, Lord Lieutenant of his Majesty's Kingdom of Ireland, is to give the necessary directions for causing the said embargo to be strictly observed in that Kingdom.

SILAS DEANE TO THE SECRET COMMITTEE.

Paris, October 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have purchased two hundred tons of powder, and ordered the same to be shipped to Martinico, to the care of Monsieur Deant, to direction of Mr. Bingham, for your use. The first cost is eighteen sols per pound, or ten pence sterling. The charges will be added, the amount of which I have not as yet ascertained, and the interest at five per cent. until payment.

I must again urge you to hasten your remittances. Tobacco, rice, indigo, wheat, and flour, are in great demand, and must be so through the year. Tobacco is nine stivers per pound in Holland; rice fifty shillings sterling per hundred weight; flour is already from twenty to twenty-three livres per hundred weight and rising. I have engaged a sale for twenty thousand hogsheads of tobacco, the amount of which will establish the credit of the Congress with the mercantile interest in France and Holland. Let me urge your attention to these articles, though I must say your silence ever since the 5th of June last, discourages me at times; indeed it well nigh distracts me. From whatever cause the silence has happened, it has greatly prejudiced the affairs of the United Colonies of America, and, so far as the success of our cause depended on the friendship and aid of Powers on this side the globe, has occasioned the greatest hazard and danger, and thrown me into a state of anxiety and perplexity which no words can express. I have made one excuse after another until my invention is exhausted, and when I find vessels arriving from different ports in America, which sailed late in August, without a line for me, it gives our friends here apprehensions that the assertions of our enemies, who say you are negotiating and compounding, are true; otherwise, say they, where are your letters and directions? Surely, say they, if the Colonies were in earnest, and unanimous in their independence, even if they wanted no assistance from hence, common civility would cause them to announce in form their Independent States. I will make no other comment on the distressing subject than this. Were there no hopes of obtaining assistance on application in a publick manner, I should be easier under your silence; but when the reverse is the case, to lose the present critically favourable moment, and hazard thereby the ruin of the greatest cause in which mankind were ever engaged, distresses my soul, and I would if possible express something of what I have undergone for the last three months, until hope itself has almost deserted me.

I do not complain for myself, but for my country, thus unaccountably suffering from I know not what causes.

I am, gentlemen, with most respectful compliments to the honourable Congress, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

SILAS DEANE TO ROBERT MORRIS.

October 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have received no letter from you since the 4th and 5th August last, nor any intelligence from the Congress since the 5th June, which not only surprises but distresses me. I now send to care of Monsieur Deant two hundred tons of a necessary article, to be at your orders for use of the Congress. The freight is to be paid in Martinico as customary, and I wish you to ship it for the ports of the Colonies in such a manner and such quantities in a vessel as you shall judge most prudent, advising the Congress of your having received it, and the methods you are taking to ship it to them, praying them to remit you the amount of the freight, as you must make friends in Martinico for advancing the same.

I wish you could write me often, and inform me very particularly what letters you receive from me directed immediately to you, and what ones for other persons. By this I shall know which of my letters fail.

I am, with great respect, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

P. S. Forward the enclosed under cover and with the usual directions in case of capture.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NORTH-CAROLINA, DATED OCTOBER 25, 1776.

A gentleman who accompanied General Rutherford on the expedition against the Cherokees of the Middle and Valley settlements, having just returned, we take this opportunity of communicating to you per post the intelligence which he brings.

General Rutherford, with his whole force, amounting to about two thousand privates, exclusive of pack-horsemen, marched from the head of Catawba river on the 1st of September, and arrived unmolested and undiscovered within thirty miles of the Middle settlements. From thence he ordered a detachment of one thousand men, by forced marches, against the towns, in order to surprise the enemy. The detachment, on their way, were attacked by about thirty Indians, who fired and immediately fled, having wounded one man in the foot. It is but justice to our troops to observe that when they were fired on, and expected the enemy on every side, the only contention among them was who should be foremost to share the danger and the promised fight. The detachment, without further interruption, proceeded to the towns, (which the Indians had evacuated before their arrival,) and destroyed them. From hence about nine hundred men, under the command of General Rutherford, who had left the main body, taking ten days' provision, marched on against the Valley settlements. They found great difficulties, and were much embarrassed, and for want of an intelligent pilot, crossed the mountains at an unaccustomed place, by which means they were to their great mortification, disappointed of an encounter with about five hundred Indians, who were then, and had been for several days before, lying in ambuscade, on the common crossing-place. Two days after this, Colonel Williamson, with the South-Carolina troops, crossing at the usual place, fell into the ambuscade, was attacked, and left twelve killed and twenty wounded, but defeated and put the enemy to rout, with the loss of about fourteen killed. Their loss is supposed to be much greater, but only fourteen were found upon the ground. General Rutherford destroyed the greater part of the Valley towns, killed twelve and took nine Indians, and made prisoners seven white men, from whom he got four negroes, a considerable quantity of stock and deer leather, about one hundred weight of gunpowder, and two hundred weight of lead, to the amount of twenty-five hundred pounds, proc., which they were conveying to Mobile. Colonel Williamson, with the South-Carolina forces, now joined General Rutherford, and having destroyed all the towns, the corn, and every thing which might be of service to the Indians, it was determined by the commanding officers to return to their respective States, it being impracticable to go against the Overhill Cherokees, the gap through the mountains being impassable for an army in case of opposition. General Rutherford's army was never opposed by any considerable body of Indians. He lost three men only.

He supposes many of the Indians lay concealed in the mountains, that some had gone to the Overhills, but that the greater part had fled southwestward to Coosawatee river, bordering on the Upper Creeks. Should the Virginia army meet any signal success against the Overhills, or should they only destroy their towns and corn, we flatter ourselves that the southern States will suffer no further damage this season from the savages, as it will employ their whole time to provide sustenance for their squaws and children.

In Council, at Williamsburg, October 25, 1776.

Ordered, That all the soldiers belonging to Captain Smith's Minute company attend at Gloucester Court-House, on the first Thursday in November next, being court day, in order to receive their pay from William Yates, Esq., Mustermaster-General of the Southern department, who is requested to attend for that purpose.

ARCHIBALD BLAIR, Cl. Con.

Williamsburg, October 25, 1776.

By a gentleman from Fort Pitt we learn that eleven settlers at the mouth of Weeling, about fifty miles below that post, were killed by the Taawahs, Wyondots, Mingoes, and other disaffected Indians, on the 9th of this instant.

CAPTAIN WATKINS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Annapolis, October 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your order I have called up the men that's now here under my command, and have made them acquainted with the resolve of Convention respecting the enrolment of the companies of Artillery. Twenty-five of them tells me they will enlist under the resolve, and from the disposition of many others, I think they will in a little time come into the company.

H. WATKINS, Jun.

To honourable Council of Safety.

WILLIAM JOHNSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Fell's Point, October 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received a line from you requiring me to make tents for Captains Holland and Harris's company of Harford County, but as I cannot get canvas here, must refer to you for procuring the same, if to be had at Annapolis.

I shall be always proud to obey any orders that I may receive from your honourable Board.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM JOHNSON.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

JOHN ENNALLS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

October 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Please to direct a Court-Martial for the trial of Stanley Cook, a Lieutenant in the Nineteenth Battalion, for misbehaviour, and you'll oblige your humble servant,

JOHN ENNALLS.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM THE SECRET COMMITTEE TO THOMAS MORRIS, DATED OCTOBER 25, 1776.

SIR: You will receive herewith a copy of our letter of the 16th instant, whereby you are appointed our agent to superintend all our business in Europe. This goes by the Continental ship-of-war called the Reprisal, Lambert Weeks, commander.

The value of this indigo is particularly intended to be lodged with your banker in Paris, for the use and subject to the order of Dr. Franklin, Silas Deane, and Arthur Lee, &c.

The Reprisal, Captain Weeks, will make but a short stay at Nantes, as she will immediately proceed on a cruise, and if fortunate, some of the prizes may probably be sent into some of the ports of France. The Commissioners will apply at Court for the liberty and protection of their ports. If this should be granted, it's probable that they may also permit the sale of prizes there, and in such case, the prizes, or such parts of their cargoes as are to be sold in France, will be put under your direction. You must take care that every thing is disposed of to the best advantage, apply the proceeds to the payments we have ordered you to make on account of the publick, and render us very exact accounts of what you credit us in this way, and a particular account of sales of each prize. Should Captain Weeks take any specie, he will pay it to you or the Commissioner, or to their or your order for the same purpose, and you must grant him receipts for the same, expressing that you receive it for the use of the United States of America, and that he is to be repaid by Congress.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, October 25, 1776.

SIR: The Marine Committee, being desirous to get the Continental frigates to sea as quickly as possible, request the favour of you to provide sixty-four cannon for the use of the frigate building in New-Hampshire and one of those in Massachusetts, fifty-two of these cannon to carry twelve-pound shot, and twelve of them to carry four-pound shot. The proof that Congress have contracted for the other cannon to undergo is, for the first proof, a weight of powder equal to the weight of one shot, on which charge two shot and three wads. The second proof is powder equal to two-thirds of the weight of one shot, with the same shot and wad as in the first. We wish, sir, that the above-mentioned cannon may undergo similar proof.

Should the ship building in Connecticut not be in equal forwardness with the New-Hampshire frigate, we shall be well pleased if the latter is immediately furnished with the guns provided for the former, adding thereto as many as will make the number twenty-six twelves and six four-pounders. The Connecticut frigate, we hope, may be furnished in due time from the guns above desired to be provided for the New-Hampshire frigate.

Your well-known zeal in the common cause gives us perfect confidence that you will do herein what will most contribute to promote and expedite the publick service.

We are, sir, your humble servants.

To Governour Trumbull, of Connecticut.

GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
[Read October 30, 1776: referred to Dr. Rush, Mr. Ross, Mr. Lynch.]

Elizabethtown, October 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I beg leave to transmit you the enclosed on the subject I had the honour to write the Congress upon some time since. I cannot relieve the men, and yet receive particular applications about it.

I am, sir, your most humble

WILLIAM LIVINGSTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

P. S. You forgot to send me the instructions for privateer's bond, &c.

Bridgewater, in Somerset County, October 14, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of receiving your Excellency's instructions of 8th instant, concerning the prisoners in this County, which seems to respect such prisoners only as have belonged to the British soldiery, of which kind we have but one in this County to my knowledge; but a long illness, of which I am now closely confined, prevents my knowing much of the publick concerns of the County. We have, however, a few prisoners confined at the gaol of this County by your Excellency's orders, which are chiefly seamen of whom, with the one soldier, you have an exact list enclosed.

Should your Excellency be of opinion that these prisoners will be taken in exchange, and that it is necessary they should be sent to Brunswick, you will please to favour me with your further instructions for that purpose; but should you be of opinion that they will not be taken in exchange, I would then beg your Excellency's attention to their situation, which is something particular.

Your Excellency has been informed that their clothing was chiefly left at New-York, owing to the great hurry and confusion in which they were sent from thence. I would therefore humbly propose to your consideration the sending one of them, viz: Captain Duncan Campbell, (who is said to be a gentleman of strict honour,) to New-York on parole, to inquire after their baggage and clothing.

It may also deserve your Excellency's attention that two young men among these prisoners, viz: Robert Colefox and Richard Williams, are natives of New-England; that one of them was employed in the Continental service; that they both fell into the hands of the enemy by misfortune, where they were confined and detained a great while as prisoners, and thought themselves very happy in being retaken by their friends. The consequence of which is that they have lost their clothing and are kept in confinement by those who ought to befriend them; they are now almost destitute of clothing to cover them, and both tell me they will suffer perpetual imprisonment rather than be exchanged and return to the British army or navy. On the contrary they were discharged, and at liberty to go and see their relations and friends, several of whom are now in the Continental service. They would undoubtedly enter into the same service either by sea or land.

I apprehend they are all now considered as Continental prisoners, and wholly at the disposal of the Congress. But should your Excellency please to furnish the honourable Continental Congress with a proper state of facts respecting them, they surely would not hesitate a moment to take order in the matter.

I shall wait your Excellency's further orders for the removal of the prisoners to Brunswick. In the interim I have the honour to be your Excellency's very humble servant,

ROWLAND CHAMBERS.

To His Excellency William Livingston, Esq.

P. S. Since writing the above, I am informed that Peleg Mansfield is in the same situation with the two last above-mentioned prisoners.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM FORT LEE, DATED OCTOBER 25, 1776.

Head-Quarters is now above twenty miles from this place, and we have but little news we can depend upon till a day or two after the transaction. To-day, indeed, I heard the following, which may be worth communicating: One of the vessels up the North River came before Dobbs's Ferry with an intention to cut off the communication. She lay there one day undisturbed; but last night two field-pieces were sent down, and early this morning began to play upon her. They hulled her eleven times out of fifteen. She hoisted sail, but could make no way for want of wind, and was obliged to put out her boats and be towed off; all which time she was exposed to our fire. It is hoped this drubbing will prevent such manœuvres for the future, and oblige the pirates to keep aloof. I am informed that several brigades of our army moved this day up to White-Plains; so that almost all the army is now at that place. Little skirmishes happen almost every day; but they are thought so little of that they seldom are mentioned as news. The most considerable was that with Rogers's party, in which a number was killed and wounded, thirty-six prisoners, with sixty stand of arms. Two of the prisoners prove to be spies, and one a deserter from us. These, I hope, will be made examples of. Several Hessians have been taken since.

October 26.—P. S. Since I wrote the above, I learn that the enemy have got between King's Bridge and White-Plains. That ground was left vacant by the removal of the brigades I have mentioned. A Captain's guard only was left over some provisions till it could be moved. This day about noon the Captain discovered about one hundred Light-Horse and as many Infantry making that way towards him. He retreated to Fort Independence, and the enemy continued their route. Whether this was only a foraging party, or whether sent to take the ground which we had left, I cannot tell. If the latter, I believe it will not be disagreeable. It is probable the brigades were moved higher up on purpose to give the enemy an opportunity of getting in, when they will not be very likely to get out undisturbed.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 4, 1776.]

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 25, 1776.

SIR: The whole of our army is now here and on the neighbouring heights, except the troops left at Mount Washington and King's Bridge, (about fourteen hundred at the former and six hundred at the latter,) and General Lee's division, which now forms the rear, and which is on their march. Our removal and that of the stores have been attended with a great deal of trouble, owing to the scarcity and difficulty of procuring wagons. However, they are nearly effected and without any loss. The General officers are now reconnoitring the several passes leading from the enemy, that the most important may be immediately secured. The situation of their army remains nearly the same as when I had the honour of addressing you on the 21st instant. It differs in nothing, unless it is that their main body is more collected about New-Rochelle. A few of their troops are extended as far as Momariouneck.

On Monday night a detachment of our men, under the command of Colonel Hazlet, was sent out to surprise and cut off Major Rogers if possible, with his regiment, which was posted there. By some accident or another, the expedition did not succeed so well as could have been wished. However, our advanced party, led on by Major Greene, of the First Virginia Regiment, fell in with their out-guards and brought off thirty-six prisoners, sixty muskets, and some blankets. The number killed is not certainly known, but it is reported by an officer who was there, that he counted about twenty-five. Our loss, two killed, and ten or twelve wounded; among the latter, Major Greene, whose recovery is very doubtful.

On Wednesday there was also a smart skirmish between a party of Colonel Hand's Riflemen, about two hundred and forty, and nearly the same number of Hessian Chasseurs, in which the latter were put to the rout. Our men buried ten of them on the field, and took two prisoners, one badly wounded. We sustained no other loss than having one lad wounded, supposed mortally.

The ships-of-war that are in the North River fell down yesterday morning or the evening before to Dobbs's Ferry, to prevent our bringing stores from below by water, and the removal of those that are landed there. As soon as the wagons employed in bringing the baggage and stores of General Lee's division are disengaged, they will be immediately sent to assist those already there to remove them.

On Saturday night we had the misfortune to lose one of the new ships intended to be sunk for obstructing the channel. She parted her cables in a severe squall, when properly ballasted, and bilged as soon as she struck the shore. The other ship was sunk well, and yesterday morning two brigs (both ready) were sent down for the same purpose.

About two o'clock this afternoon, intelligence was brought to Head-Quarters that three or four detachments of the enemy were on their march, and had advanced within about four miles of this place. It has been fully confirmed since, by a variety of persons who have been out to reconnoitre. Their number cannot be ascertained, but it is generally conjectured that the detachments are or will be succeeded by as many columns, composing their main body. Our drums have beat to arms, and men ordered to their several posts. Most probably some important event is upon the eve of taking place. I hope it will be victory in favour of our arms. General Lee, with his division, has not got up, but I hear he is on his march.

Experiment having proved it difficult, if not impossible, to prevent the enemy from possessing the navigation of the North River, and rendering the communication and intercourse between the States divided by it extremely hazardous and precarious by means of their ships-of-war, it has become a matter of important consideration how to remedy the evil, and to guard against the consequences which may result from it. I am charged by his Excellency to mention it to Congress as a matter that employed much of his thought, and that seems worthy of their most serious attention. He has communicated it to several of the General and other officers, and to many gentlemen of sense and discernment, who all agree with him not only upon the propriety, but the absolute necessity that two distinct armies should be formed, one to act particularly in the States which lay on the east, the other in those that are on the south of the river. The whole however to be raised on a general plan, and not to be confined to any particular place by the terms of enlistment. These matters, the apparent difficulty and perhaps impracticability of succours being thrown across the river while the enemy can command it, have induced his Excellency to submit the measure to their consideration, not knowing how their operations may be directed, and foreseeing that innumerable evils may arise if a respectable force is not appointed to oppose their arms wheresoever they are carried.

I have the honour to be, in great haste, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBT. H. HARRISON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, October 21, 1776.

(Parole, Heath.)

(Countersign, Sullivan.)

The hurried situation of the General for the two last days having prevented him from paying that attention to Colonel Glover, and the officers and soldiers who were with him in the skirmish on Friday last, that their merit and good behaviour deserved, he flatters himself that his thanks, though delayed, will nevertheless be acceptable to them, as they are offered with great sincerity and cordiality. At the same time he hopes that every other part of the army will do their duty with equal duty and zeal whenever called upon, and that neither dangers, difficulties, or hardships will discourage soldiers engaged in the cause of liberty, and contending for all that freemen hold dear and valuable.

Head-Quarters, White Plains, October 23, 1776.

(Parole, Denton.)

(Countersign, Chester.)

The guard of the camp are to be mounted from the several divisions of the army. Their numbers to be fixed, and their post assigned them, by the General Officers of that division. General Spencer's division to furnish the main guard, Quartermaster-General's, and Commissary-General's guard, bullock guard, and provost guard.

It has been observed with some concern, that scouting parties go out without any advanced or flanking parties, both which are absolutely necessary for their safety and success, and which they must have on all occasions.

The commanding officers of regiments should, on all marches, draw provisions for the wagoners who attend them, and give them all possible assistance. When their baggage is unloaded they should have the teams drawn up, set a guard over them, and prevent any loss of the horses, or abuse of the drivers, and take care of them till they are ordered away.

Any officer, or soldier, who shall presume to meddle with any horses belonging to the publick, or any other not his own property, will be severely punished. And all officers of the army are requested to stop soldiers who are riding about without saddles, until they give an account of themselves, and if they are found breaking orders, to send the offender to the guard, and the horse to the Quartermaster-General, or to Head-Quarters.

Head-Quarters, White Plains, October 24, 1776.

(Parole, .)

(Countersign, .)

Commanding officers of regiments are immediately to have necessaries dug, decently covered, at a small distance from their encampments. They are every day to be covered over with fresh earth, and once a week to be filled up and new ones dug. All bones, meat, and other dirt of the camp, to be carefully gathered up every day. Those regiments who have not appointed camp colour men, are to do it immediately, and it is the duty of the Quartermaster to see that they do their duty. Two men from every company to be appointed. If officers would reflect how much cleanliness would conduce to their own health, and that of their men, they would want no inducement to attend to it particularly.

The Brigade-Majors of General Spencer's division, are immediately to form a Court-Martial, a Colonel to preside.

General Sullivan's division to furnish its proportion of the detail made yesterday for home guards.

Rolls are to be called three times every day, and the General begs the officers to exert themselves to keep their men from straggling away from the camp. Officers and men would do well to reflect that their safety, their lives, and the liberty of their country, may depend on their being at hand in case of alarm. Any man who is found half a mile from the camp, not on command, will be punished very severely.

All the officers who have assisted in the works to meet at Colonel Putnam's quarters, just above Head-Quarters, at three o'clock this afternoon, in order to lay out a number of works. The Engineers are to proportion the intrenching tools at this place among the several grand divisions, and after to-day to apply to each General commanding such division for such numbers of men as may be wanted for the several works, who are to begin to work at nine o'clock in the morning, and continue working till four in the afternoon.

Brigade-Majors are to have their returns completed immediately.

General Heath's and General Sullivan's divisions not having complied with yesterday's orders to furnish thirty men, they are to do it to-morrow without fail, and to be more careful in future.

It being absolutely necessary that the teams should be collected, in order to be arranged by the Quartermaster-General, the commanding officers of regiments are immediately to send to the parade, at the Court-House, every team not under an actual order to march.

No officer to take any team for any use without an order from Head-Quarters or the Quartermaster-General.

The commanding officers of brigades and regiments, who at any time may be supplied with teams, are to take particular care that the drivers of wagons in their employ are regularly supplied with grain and hay for their horses, if such provender can be obtained in the neighborhood of their respective camps. If the owners of such provender refuse to sell, such commanding officers are to order their Quartermasters to collect as much provender as will be necessary for the publick horses in their service, and give certificates to the owners of the provender of what the Quartermasters may receive or take.

GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

Proceedings of a General Court-Martial held at the Court-House in the WHITE-PLAINS, by order of His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces raised, or to be raised, in the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, October the 25th, 1776.

Colonel Holman, President.

Members:

Lieutenant-Colonel Latimer, Captain Catlin,
Major Gordon, Captain Wolcott,
Captain Harrington, Captain Warner,
Captain Brown, Lieutenant Allen,
Captain Wells, Lieutenant Chamberlin,
Captain Goodwin, Lieutenant Potter.
David Brearley, Judge-Advocate.

The United States of America, vs. Lieutenant Ethan Sickles, charged with breach of General Orders; also with coming under the twenty-first article of the fourteenth section of the Rules and Articles for the government of the Troops of the United States of America. The defendant plead "Not Guilty."

Witness for the States, Colonel Reed, Adjutant-General, being sworn, says the defendant yesterday came by Head-Quarters with two wagons of baggage under his care; that he stopped the wagons; on examination found a sutler in one of them; he asked the defendant if there was not sutlers' goods in the wagons; who answered there was only a small case and a keg containing five gallons of rum; that a barrel of rum in the wagon belonged to the regiment, that another barrel contained soldiers' clothes, but on examination found it to contain chiefly leaf tobacco, and the barrel of rum to belong to the sutler.

The defendant produced no witnesses, but was heard in his own defence.

After mature deliberation of the premises, the Court are unanimously of opinion that the defendant, Lieutenant Sickles, is guilty of disobeying general orders, and of behaving in a scandalous, infamous manner, such as is unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and do sentence him to be discharged from the service.

JONATHAN HOLMAN, President.

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, October 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The Convention having thought it proper to direct me to repair to this place, in order to give (in concurrence with some other General) every necessary support to the Northern army, I did not receive your Excellency's favour till this day.

I am extremely affected at the wants under which the army labour, and your Excellency may depend on my utmost endeavours to remove them. I can at present only suggest my ideas on that subject to gentlemen who have influence at Convention, as nothing can be done at this place. Flour, I believe, may readily be procured in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, which, as it must cross at Mount Washington, may be applied to the present use of the army, while that furnished by this State may be sent to the White-Plains, or to such other place as your Excellency thinks it proper to provide magazines at. It would be easy to send down immediate supplies of flour from this part of the country, were it not for the wants of the Northern army, which has not above fifteen days' provision on hand, without mentioning any allowance for the Militia, who are marching in daily. This is truly alarming in a country where it is by no means impracticable to cut off supplies, and where the utmost vigilance is necessary to keep open the communication.

However, I would not have your Excellency uneasy on this account, as the Committee of Albany (having distributed the business among the different members of their body) have made such exertions, and been so well seconded by General Schuyler, that I am in great hopes in a few days to have nothing to fear on that score. Nor can I doubt, if proper measures are adopted, that the Southern army will be supplied with facility; as I am well satisfied that the stock of provisions in the country is much more than sufficient to answer all their demands, and at any rate it must be had. Your Excellency, by making use of the power vested in you by some resolutions that passed in Convention before I left Fishkill, relative to the grain and stock in Westchester County, may, I am persuaded, obtain a present supply of every thing but flour; and though the teams there are none of the best, yet if your Excellency will give orders for pressing them, so many may be obtained as to make the quantity compensate for the quality. In the mean while more effectual measures will be taken to supply you with wagons. Teams can only be got from Connecticut in any numbers.

Though the White-Plains is a very proper place for provisions designed for immediate use, yet I would submit it to your Excellency whether your grand magazines should not be within or beyond the Highlands. If that should seem too remote, I would recommend some place on the north side of Croton's river, near Pine's bridge, as the country there is very rough, and secured by a river, at the same time that it lays upon a great road.

The measures your Excellency have taken to secure the passes and prevent the enemy from getting above you, appears to me extremely judicious, and I doubt not will be attended with the desired effect, especially if the number of troops sent to the White-Plains and the Highlands can be magnified to the enemy by any of those artifices usual in war. I shall always esteem it a peculiar happiness if (as you politely suppose) my knowledge of the country can in any way contribute to its preservation, or be of the least service to your Excellency, and shall therefore take the liberty your Excellency so obligingly gives me, to suggest whatever may, in any measure, tend to either of these valuable purposes.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United American States, &c., Head-Quarters, King's Bridge.

COLONEL WILKINSON TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, October 25, 1776.

I should think myself inexcusable, my dear General, for not writing you earlier, if I did not render a sufficient apology for my conduct, by assuring you that such has been the severity of my disease since I left Ticonderoga that I have not been able to govern my finger till within these few days. I have been here three weeks, during two of which I had a fever tacked to me, which prosecuted me with intermission; it is at last, however, subdued, and has left me a pretty good appetite; but as I recover very slowly here, I purpose moving out of town to Kenter-Hook, a situation from which I am promised great things. The Lord grant it may soon enable me to join you.

General Washington has in person lately dislodged a considerable number of the enemy, who had landed on a place called Frogg Point. Further particulars have not yet reached town. Lee commanded the lines during his absence. It is said the General has brought six thousand Southern troops with him, though it is mere report.

The vessels which have passed the chevaux-de-frise are two forty-gun ships and a number of tenders. They vary their station, though for the most part they remain in Toppon sea or bay; they have picked up several Albany sloops and greatly harass the rest. If I get well soon I shall bring up such things as will help to render the winter comfortable; but if my disorder is spun out to any length, my cash will be exhausted.

I am, my dear General, with respect and affection, your ready friend and servant,

JAMES WILKINSON.

Pray write me. Mr. Avery, if you will address to his care, will see the letter conveyed to me with safety.

J. W.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 25, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I congratulate you on the success of our arms, accounts whereof you have enclosed. Would it not be well if the whole line was turned out, a few cannon fired, and three huzzas given? It will cheer the spirits of our troops, and damp those of the enemy, for their scouts will doubtless hear the rejoicing.

I have sent two hundred Militia to Fort George; one hundred remain at Fort Edward, two hundred on the road between Jones's and Cheshire's, the remainder to Skenesborough and Tyonderoga, if they can be prevailed upon to cross the lake. I wish Colonel Lewis to come to me as soon as possible. The provision for the army I have ordered in future to go by Skenesborough. You will be pleased to send some of the larger vessels for it.

I am very anxious for a line from you, having received none from you since yours of the 15th instant. I have been much indisposed for several days, but have this morning been out for the first time.

I am, dear sir, with great esteem and respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL BELLOWES.

Tyonderoga, October 25, 1776.

SIR: This moment I have received your note by Mr. Amos Babcock. In answer thereto, I am to acquaint you that I have every reason to expect the immediate approach of the enemy. Nothing but the constant southerly winds that have prevailed for this week past, could, in my opinion, have delayed them so long. Perhaps the happiness or misery of America hangs upon a moment. If you love your country, make use of it, and come forward.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Colonel Benjamin Bellows.

JOHN NOBLE CUMMING TO DR. SCUDDER.

Tyonderoga, October 25, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The fatigues of a long campaign have not made me forget my friends, nor am I yet so weak that I cannot write. I want to know how my old friends are, and what persons of them are distinguishing themselves in the present virtuous struggle. Our campaign has been full of fatigue, as well as unsuccessful, chiefly owing to our too precipitate advances to the northward, or rather our going in so unprepared a manner. We advanced upon the Plains of Abram, quartered in houses scattered for two or three miles, one third of the troops at Point Levi, and one third at St. Roche's, the remainder on the Plain. The number of our troops fit for duty, not exceeding seven hundred men, five hundred sick in quarters chiefly with the small-pox, and further a very small quantity of ammunition; and at the council which was held the night before our retreat, the Commissary informed them that there was not above three days' provision in the store, and no supply nearer than St. John's. Under those circumstances, General Thomas (since deceased) wisely ordered a retreat, which was conducted with as good order as could be expected, and although he was much censured, yet must be allowed to be a good commander by those who are not fond of censure. He was judicious, calm, and resolute; and had matters been represented as they really were, neither the Congress nor the General had been so deceived. However, I think with the favour of Providence, we are now in such a situation as to give them a good return.

Our regiment is in good credit, and on account of the dependence placed in them are fixed in the most dangerous post. We take command of a redoubt called the Jersey battery, mounting eight guns, one of thirty-two, two of eighteen, three of twelve, and two of nine, nearly opposite to which is a boom across the lake. Near this redoubt are four others, each mounting four or five guns. On Mount Independence there is a twenty-gun battery, and above this a half-moon mounting four guns. Our out lines are strong, and I hope manned with those who will do their utmost to support them.

Your Commissioners left this a few days ago. Our regimental return will show that the officers of our regiment in general choose to continue. How we stand recommended we are ignorant of. As for myself I can say, if I have not done as I ought, my conscience acquits me of having done my best for my injured country; and am determined, life and health permitting, to continue doing the same, let my rank be whatever the honourable House shall be pleased confer.

I remain, sir, your affectionate friend and humble servant,
JOHN NOBLE CUMMING.

To Dr. Nathaniel Scudder, Member of Council, New-Jersey.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, October 25, 1776.

SIR: I take this opportunity to inform your Honour that I am extremely unhappy that the badness of the weather has not yet permitted us to proceed from this place to New-Haven, the wind having been so much ahead as to hinder our sailing. I am in some hopes of a change soon; but lest that should not happen, will set out as soon as I have given the necessary orders to the masters of vessels, with as many men as twelve whale-boats can conveniently carry, which is all I have left.

I remain, with respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

Newburyport, October 25, 1776.

Yesterday arrived here the ship Nancy, John Cowan master, burthen about two hundred tons, bound from Cork to Quebec, taken by Captain John Lee, of this place. Her cargo consists of the following articles, viz: eighty barrels of beef, three hundred and twenty barrels of pork, two hundred firkins of butter, one hundred barrels of oatmeal, three hundred and seventy-four barrels of flour, twelve hundred bushels of peas, sixty-eight thousand pounds of bread, two hundred and seven casks of nails, twenty-two barrels and two half-barrels of gunpowder, one arm-chest with balls, &c., sixteen carriage-guns and ten swivels mounted.

Saturday last the General Assembly of the State of New-Hampshire, adjourned to the last Wednesday in November, leaving the remainder of the business to be settled by the Grand Committee, who are now sitting at Exeter. They have also appointed Thursday, the 21st of November, to be kept as a day of publick thanksgiving throughout that State.

We learn that a Salem privateer has taken in the chops of the Channel of England, two ships, one from Jamaica inward bound, and the other outward bound.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM DR. FRANKLIN TO D. C., DATED PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 25, 1776.

Being once more ordered to Europe, and to embark this day, I write this line, &c.

As to our publick affairs, I hope our people will keep up their courage. I have no doubt of their finally succeeding by the blessing of God, nor have I any doubt that so good a cause will fail of that blessing. It is computed that we have already taken a million sterling from the enemy. They must soon be sick of their piratical project. No time should be lost in fortifying three or four posts on our extended coast as strong as art and expense can make them. Nothing will give us greater weight and importance in the eyes of the commercial States, than a conviction that we can annoy, on occasion, their trade, and carry our prizes into safe harbours; and whatever expense we are at in such fortifying, will be soon repaid by the encouragement and success of privateering.

In Council, November 20, 1776: Read and sent down.
JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

GENERAL WARD TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Boston, October 25, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The enclosed papers respect Colonel Ethan Allen, whose brother is the bearer of this; and I beg leave to introduce him to the Council, as he has business respecting Colonel Allen to lay before the Board.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,
ARTEMAS WARD.

To the honourable Council.

COL. HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head-of-Elk, October 26, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 11th I yesterday received, and not before, having been from home at Philadelphia this twelve days, endeavouring to settle my accounts for provisions, carriage, &c., of the Fourth, Fifth, and part of the Sixth regiment of Virginia, from Elk to Chester. The men being near half sick has made their carriage very tedious and expensive, and has taken up my whole time since the 26th of September. You are a judge how much my time was taken up with the Maryland forces before that date. So that for the last two months I have been prevented from taking proper care of my business, otherways should have been at Annapolis before this day. Could wish a Commissary was appointed, as I am now, while I am writing, applied to by Captain Johnson, of the Sixth Virginia regiment, to provide barracks, wagons, and provisions for his company, to pass them on to Philadelphia, and that there is eight hundred Carolinians in the river, which must be provided as above. You, sir, are, as is the honourable Council of Safety, better judges how necessary it is to forward those troops than myself; and you also know that no person here will forward them but myself, in your absence. I must, therefore, beg the indulgence of the honourable Council, if the arrival of those troops and transporting them over should delay my coming to Annapolis longer than they may expect, as I assure you and them on the honour of a gentleman, that nothing else shall delay my coming one day, when I hope to satisfy their Honours that every thing has been done by me that could by a man so circumstanced.

As to the first ninety bayonets sent Mr. Winters, they are not so good as they ought, as most of them were made by young hands in the business, and many of the best of what was there made picked out for the marching companies going to Flying-Camp, the steel not good though the best I could then get, the want of experienced hands in the mill, all plead for their Honours' indulgence. I have sent Mr. Winters some since much better, and have now by me about two hundred, which I flatter myself will merit their approbation, which, with some musket-barrels and large pieces, I fully intend down with as soon as the service above recited will permit.

You will please to lay this before their Honours, though wrote in much haste, as 'tis all truth. I should have wrote to their Honours, but have received no censure from them, save what Colonel Benjamin Rumsay gave me at Philadelphia verbally, who I am much obliged to for his assistance in despatching me; and am, dear sir, your and the honourable Council's most obedient and humble servant,

H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

To Joseph Gilpin, Esq., Convention at Annapolis.

MEMORIAL OF HENRY HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the honourable the Council of Safety of MARYLAND:

The Memorial of your memorialist humbly sheweth:

That your memorialist did provide provisions, wagons, shallops, wood, and other necessities, for the Maryland and Virginia troops, on their way from the Head-of-Elk to the Flying-Camp: that your memorialist, being unprovided with salt provisions, and other necessities, was under the disagreeable necessity of giving more frequently for provisions for said troops than reasonably may be supposed by gentlemen unacquainted with the circumstance of the matter, he seldom knowing when they would arrive till they did, and in some cases being informed of and expecting troops and making provision for them, was disappointed and obliged to salt, and sometimes sell said provisions for considerably less than it cost; bread in such cases entirely lost. This, together with the provision being to be made and provided at the several different places, the weather being warm, of course rendered it impossible to transport them from one place to the other with safety, salt not to be had. This being a just representation of the case, your memorialist beg leave to lay it before and assure your Honours that if his accounts are settled in the common way he shall be a very considerable sufferer.

Submitting the whole of the premises to your Honours' consideration, not doubting of such indulgence in this par-particular case as justice and the necessity of the case may require. And your memorialist, as in duty bound, &c., will,

H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

RECOMMENDATION OF EBENEZER REYNER.

GENTLEMEN: There is a vacancy of a Second Lieutenant in Captain Isaac Perkins's company. We recommend Mr. Ebenezer Reyner, a person proper and fit to fill that place.

To the honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

RICHARD PETERS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

War Office, October 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am directed by the Board of War, in answer to your letter of the 18th instant, to inform you that it is their opinion, and they request you will direct, that the Rifle company you mention in your letter, be immediately marched to Philadelphia. If clothes cannot be provided for them where they are, which would be much the best, as clothing of all sorts is extremely difficult to be had at Philadelphia, and blankets are not to be procured at any rate, they might be armed and accoutred, but might lie here a very considerable time before clothes and blankets could be furnished. You'll therefore be pleased to endeavour at supplying them with blankets and whatever other necessities can be had your way, as this State is drained of all articles required by the army. If muskets were given them instead of rifles, the service would be more benefitted, as there is a superabundance of riflemen in the army. Were it in the power of the Congress to supply muskets, they would speedily reduce the number of rifles, and replace them with the former, as they are more easily kept in order, can be fired oftener, and have the advantage of bayonets.

I have the honour to be your very obedient servant,
RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

JOHN GIBSON TO JAMES BOWDOIN.

Treasury Office, Philadelphia, October 31, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: As Commissioners have been appointed by Congress to liquidate and adjust the publick accounts in the Northern department, and are now assembled at Albany for that purpose, it is necessary they should be furnished by each State with an account of the several advances and payments to the officers and others who have been entrusted with publick money, to enable them to settle the accounts.

We have, therefore, to request you would be pleased as soon as possible to order an account of such advances as your State may have made, the settlement of which may properly fall within the Northern department, to be drawn out, and forward them to the Commissioners by express, in order that the proper stoppages being made, your State may be reimbursed by Congress.

The names of the Commissioners are James Milligan, John Carter, and John Wells, Esquire.

I have the honour to be, in the name of the Superintendents of the Treasury, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN GIBSON, Auditor General.

To the Honourable the President and Council of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

The accounts of your State, to the 14th November, will be sent from this office.

FRANCIS LEWIS TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Philadelphia, October 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As the State of New-York has not been represented in Congress for several weeks past, Mr. P.

Livingston with myself being their only Delegates at present here, we are requested by Congress to apply to you, sirs, for a full representation; therefore hope you will speedily send us one other member that we may be enabled to give our vote for that State which we have been sent here to represent.

We are respectfully, gentlemen, your very humble servants,

FRAS. LEWIS, for self, and
PH. LIVINGSTON.

To the honourable the Convention for the State of New-York.

WILLIAM WHIPPLE TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, October 26, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I arrived here the 24th. The Committee have not met since my arrival, but have mentioned your demand to some of the members. There is no doubt but I shall be in cash to honour your drafts whenever they appear. There is no prospect of cannon from this place; however, I have some hopes from another quarter, viz: Connecticut. The circumstances are these: the cannon are made for the Trumbull, in that State, and there is no prospect of her being provided with other necessities. The Committee have wrote to Governour Trumbull, to procure cannon for two ships, and in the mean time to send those made for the Trumbull to you. From the known disposition of that gentleman to promote the publick good, I have great hopes you will be supplied from that quarter. Orders are gone to Providence to supply you with canvas for a second suit of sails. I don't know but you'll have a wrangle on your hands with the Providence gentry; however, my boy, I'll stand by you as long as I can. The ships here are not so forward as I expected to find them: only three of them are launched. The rank of the Captains in the naval service was established before I arrived. I find Thompson is the sixth on the list. Had I been here, I certainly would have had him higher; however, considering the train after him, I think it pretty well. For want of time must refer you to Colonel Bartlett for news, &c.

In haste, as you see, your affectionate friend and humble servant,

WM. WHIPPLE.

WILLIAM ELLERY TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Philadelphia, October 26, 1776.

SIR: Since my last Congress have received the disagreeable intelligence of the destruction of our fleet on Lake Champlain. The enemy were vastly superiour to us in the number and size of their armed vessels, and in the number of men and weight of metal. General Arnold was obliged to give way to superiour force; but he did not do it until he had sustained the shock many glasses in two engagements, nor until several of his gondolas were sunk, his schooner forced on shore, and the remainder of his fleet were so shattered that it was impossible for him to fight any longer. In this situation he ran the Congress ashore, and lest she should fall into the hands of the enemy burnt her, and, with about two hundred men he had collected, got safe to Crown Point.

Congress have appointed a Committee of Intelligence, to select and publish such intelligence as Congress shall receive from time to time, and it shall be proper to publish.

That Committee have in this week's papers, published an account of the sea-fight on the lake; but omitted some particulars which I have mentioned. They have also given the publick such intelligence as hath been received from the army in the Middle department.

WM. ELLERY.

ABRAM CLARK TO COLONEL DAYTON.

Elizabethtown, October 26, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND: It is long since I received a letter from you, and longer since I wrote to you. The last I received was by Mr. Caldwell. I had then just returned from Philadelphia much indisposed, and was elected into the Assembly; which, though very infirm, I attended for about ten days, and returned home sick, where I have remained ever since, with myself and most of my family much indisposed. We are all got tolerable well except my wife, who hath the third-day ague; and one of my younger children I lost. I propose next Monday to return again to Philadelphia, where I can remain but two weeks, when our Assembly will meet again, when I propose to sue for a dismission from Congress; finding it too hard to attend there and at the Assembly, between both of which I could not expect to spend much of my time at home. Publick news I suppose you know as much of as I do, from my long confinement. The King's army are principally collected together between East-Chester and New-Rochelle, with the East River on their rear and General Lee in front. They landed yesterday a week past, when a party of our forces attacked them with success, and but little loss on our side; the killed of the enemy is variously reported: some say one thousand, and others reduce the number to between four and five hundred; since which we had a small skirmish, took about thirty-six, with sixty stand of arms and blankets. This party was commanded by Major Rogers, who, it is said, was the first that run off. Those taken were all Tories, but three deserters from our army. It is said they have at least four or five regiments of Tories embodied by themselves, which they have not thought fit to incorporate with the British troops. If those gentry are put upon the most dangerous posts, they will regret their choice. Our naval force upon the lake, we hear, hath met with a defeat. I wish it may not be attended with consequences fatal to our army at Ticonderoga. The advanced season of the year may perhaps stop the progress of the enemy. As for your station, it seems the enemy cannot find you or else disregard you. I wish you was removed to some place of greater notoriety. I suppose you have had Commissioners with you to know who will engage anew in the service.

You see my letter is from Elizabethtown; a place once well known to you, but now greatly altered from the time you left it. We have not had the enemy among us, but Staten-Island hath not suffered from the British troops scarcely the tenth part of the damage this town hath from the Militia—fences burnt, and corn-fields, in some parts, entirely destroyed. Besides the calamities of war, it hath been by far the most sickly season ever known, and a time of great mortality; from three to five funerals in a day, in town, among which our friend Major Wade is laid in the grave.

Many in town have moved back into the country, for fear of the enemy; and, though Mrs. Dayton hath sent back most of your family and goods, yet she will not consent to go herself. She intends to stay till they are at the Point, and then run off. She is fearful if she leaves the house, it will be used for a store or barracks; and her fears are likely well founded; many, for that reason, and finding the enemy removed so far from us, are returning into town. Our people are frequently on Staten-Island, and lately brought off seventeen prisoners they took at Cuckold's Town. The enemy keep a garrison at the watering place, though they have but few men at any of their outposts, and very few in New-York. Sixty-two vessels lately arrived, in which it is said came four thousand Hessians with some British forces.

I hear General Schuyler lately wrote to the Congress requesting to resign his commission, upon a supposition they meant to cast an oblique censure on him by approving General Wooster's conduct in Canada; concluding there must be a fault somewhere, and if not in General Wooster, it would naturally fall on him. His conclusion was ill founded. The Congress, when they cleared General Wooster of misconduct, never thought of laying it on General Schuyler, but imputed the miscarriage there to the short time the soldiers had inlisted for, the small-pox getting into the army, the want of hard money to purchase provisions in Canada, and the almost impossibility of transporting any quantity there in the winter.

Our friend Mr. Edwards left this town yesterday for Stockbridge.

I have nothing to add but that I remain most cordially yours,

ABRAM CLARK.

To Colonel Dayton.

NATHANAEL GREENE, Major-General.

COLONEL LASHER TO GENERAL HEATH.

Camp at King's Bridge, October 26, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: As I was left commanding officer at this post, I examined the situation of the fort with regard to artillerymen and ammunition; and finding them very insufficient in case of an attack properly to defend the same, I thought it would be proper to represent to you the state we are in. We have six artillerymen, about thirty rounds of ammunition, and the fort in very bad order.

It will also be proper to acquaint your Honour that out of the six hundred that were ordered to remain, I find by the returns, there are not above four hundred, and many of the detachments have not ten rounds a man; and as a number of the guards are at a distance from the fort, we have not above two hundred men together, on the day of relief, to defend the same. The enemy has drove off our guard at Mile-Square, and taken possession of the stores. A large body of Light-Horse and Light Infantry appeared on the Heights west of said place to-day, and we expect to have a visit from them to-morrow.

I was desired by Colonel Magaw to take up one or both of the bridges, which I did not think prudent in case we should have to retreat. I hope your Honour will give such orders as you think proper in our situation.

I am, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
JOHN LASHER, Colonel.

To Major-General Heath, at White-Plains.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL REED TO MRS. REED, DATED WHITE-PLAINS, OCTOBER 26, 1776.

I wrote you the day before yesterday. Our situation is not materially altered, except that the enemy advanced upon us yesterday about four miles. We have taken post here in such a manner that we hope they will not be able to execute their plan of surrounding us, and cutting off our communication. I can only conjecture that finding themselves baffled in this, they are now advancing to engage us. The business of this campaign, and possibly the next, may probably be determined this week. To the protection of that Being who blessed our early days and first connection, I must commend you and the dear children.

A Report of the Evidence taken at the Court of Inquiry, on the charge against Colonel TYLER, of cowardice and misbehaviour before the Enemy on the 15th last, which has been delayed for various causes, and cannot now be subscribed by all the Court, on account of the remote situation of some members from the others.

Captain Eldridge: Says their regiment was posted in the lines at Corlear's Hook, and that they received an order from General Parsons to march forward; that they accordingly marched up to an orchard to the southward of Mr. Stuivesant's house; that there they made a halt about half an hour; that then they were ordered to march, as he supposes, by General Parsons, and that Colonel Tyler was then at the head of his regiment, which was in the front of the brigade; that they proceeded on their march on the main road about two miles from the said orchard, and then struck across to the right towards the post-road, where they met General Washington, who ordered them to take a wall upon the right; that at that time the enemy appeared approaching from the southward, upon which the front of their regiment fired upon them; that at this time he did not see Colonel Tyler, and knows not where he was; that soon after a disorderly retreat began in the rear of the brigade, which was continued till it reached the front, when the whole retreated back to the road, from whence they had struck off to the right; that when they reached the road, this examinant observed Colonel Tyler crossing over on the north to join the regiment on the road; that after this the whole brigade retreated through the aforesaid road to Harlem Heights; that at the time of engaging the enemy the examinant's attention was so taken up that, though he does not recollect that he saw Colonel Tyler, yet he does not remember that he remarked at the time that he was not at the place where he should be; that the whole retreat was confused and precipitate; that a number of officers exerted themselves to prevent the retreat; that when he first discovered Colonel Tyler crossing the ground in the retreat, it appeared to him from the situation in which the Colonel was, that he was one of the last that retreated, and that he took a shorter cut than the course on which the brigade retreated, and joined his regiment.

Brigadier General Parsons: Says on the 15th, he ordered three regiments of his brigade, viz: Prescott's, Tyler's, and Huntington's, to march from the lines near Corlear's Hook to assist the troops in the middle division under General Spencer, where the enemy were attempting to land; that he soon rode on after these regiments by General Putnam's order, and found them in the main road; asked the reason why they were not near the river where the enemy were landing, as he then supposed; was told by the officers that the enemy's boats were gone farther eastward, and probably would land at or near Turtle's Bay, on which they pursued their march on the road to the barrier across the street; he, the examinant, being then near the rear of the three regiments, observed the front to advance on the road called Bloomingdale road, instead of going in the post-road; on which he rode forward to the front of the brigade, in order to march them into the other road, when he found Colonel Tyler with his regiment, and was there informed they marched that way by order of Generals Putnam and Spencer, who were just forward; this examinant then rode forward on that road some little distance, perhaps sixty or eighty rods, to a road which turned off eastward to the post road, and found General Fellows's brigade in that cross road, marching eastward, and also saw Generals Washington, Putnam, and others, at the top of the hill eastward, and rode up to them; General Washington directed that the examinant should attend to keep his brigade in order and march on into the cross road; he accordingly rode back and met the brigade as they came into the cross road; as he was riding back he saw Colonel Tyler in a lot on the south side the cross road coming from the Bloomingdale road to the cross road, and asked him why he was not with the regiment; he said he was very much fatigued, it being very hot, and was going across the lot to join the regiment, it being nearer than to keep the road; this examinant then rode by the side of the brigade to near the top of the hill, his attention being to keep the brigade in order, and then heard General Washington call out "Take the walls!" and immediately added, "Take the corn-field!" a corn-field being then on the right adjoining east on the main road, and north on the cross road; immediately from front to rear of the brigade the men ran to the walls, and some into the corn-field, in a most confused and disordered manner; this examinant then used his utmost endeavour to form the brigade into some order upon that ground, but the men were so dispersed he found it impossible; he then rode back into the Bloomingdale road, and there found a considerable part of the brigade, but in no order; General Washington was then forward in the Bloomingdale road, and sent for this examinant, and gave order to form the brigade as soon as could be done, and march on to Harlem Heights; as soon as the brigade could be reduced to any form, they marched on to Harlem Heights; when they had proceeded about a mile or two, a sudden panick again seized the rear of the brigade; they ran into the fields out of the road; the reason he knows not; in the fields he saw Colonel Tyler, which was the first time he recollects to have seen the Colonel after the time he saw him crossing the lot to the front of his regiment.

Lieutenant-Colonel Prentice: Says that he was upon detached service, until he joined the brigade after they had crossed from the Bloomingdale road to the post road; that he thinks when he joined the brigade, he saw Colonel Tyler at the head of it; that after this the examinant was so busily engaged in endeavouring to form the men and bring them to some order for opposing the enemy, that he had no opportunity to observe Colonel Tyler until the retreat took place and the brigade had returned to the Bloomingdale road, when he observed Colonel Tyler crossing the ground by a shorter way than that by which the brigade retreated; that when he first discovered the Colonel crossing the ground he appeared to him to be walking slowly, and from his situation and the shorter course which he had taken, he concludes that he was last in the retreat, and at very little distance from the brigade.

Captain Sill: Says that he was in the rear of the regiment all the time of the retreat, and in crossing from the Bloomingdale to the post road; that when they met the enemy he was at such a distance from the Colonel, and so busily engaged in bringing the men to their duty, that he had no opportunity of observing him, nor does he recollect that he saw him until the brigade had retreated to the Bloomingdale road through the cross road; that he then saw the Colonel join the brigade in the Bloomingdale road; that after they had marched about one mile and an half up the Bloomingdale road, a cry was raised towards the rear that the Light-Horse were approaching, upon which near an hundred men crossed with precipitation into a lot on the west side of the road, among whom (after they had been there a few minutes) he observed the Colonel; that when the Colonel joined the brigade on the Bloomingdale road, he appeared very cool and composed, and showed no signs of fear; that after crossing into the lot as above mentioned, the Colonel, after marching about forty rods, returned into the road and joined the brigade, and told the examinant that the men who crossed into the lot had behaved very ill, and that he had a mind to fire upon them.

The Court adjourned till three o'clock in the afternoon; then met according to adjournment.

Lieutenant Baldwin: Being examined, says nothing material.

Lieutenant Selden: Being examined, also says nothing material.

Lieutenant Reed: Says that he was about the centre of the regiment, and saw nothing of Colonel Tyler from the time they left Bloomingdale road until they returned there again.

Ensign Wait: Says that he was in the rear of the first company of Colonel Tyler's regiment; that after the brigade had crossed over from Bloomingdale road towards the post road, where they met the enemy, he saw Colonel Tyler at the head of the brigade; that when orders were given to man the stone wall, he saw the Colonel at the head of the regiment, who marched up to the fence and presented his piece, and supposes that he fired; that after that he understood that orders were given to go into the corn-field, that after they had got into the corn-field, and a principal part of the brigade were retreating, the examinant heard Colonel Tyler say to the men, "why do you run? this will never beat them;" that at that time he supposes the Colonel was nearly in the same place where he was when the fire first began, and that from his behaviour, he has no reason to believe that the Colonel was at all intimidated; that from the situation the Colonel was in at the time of firing, he has reason to believe that the Colonel was one of the last that retreated from the enemy; that the first time he noticed the Colonel after the retreat from the enemy, was when they had marched about a mile from the cross road up the Bloomington road, where they got into some order, and that after that the Colonel continued in the front till the brigade reached the Heights of Harlem.

Ensign Billings: Says that he was sent off with a small party of men, when the brigade halted at Stuivesant's, towards the East River, to discover where the boats of the enemy were landing; that he was not able to join the brigade again till he fell in with their rear as they were crossing over from the Bloomington road to the post road; that he had no opportunity of seeing Colonel Tyler until the brigade were retreating from the enemy to the Bloomington road; that he then saw Colonel Tyler retreating on a shorter course than that which the brigade took, and from his situation when he first discovered him, he conceives him to have been the last man that retreated.

Ensign Hill: He exactly confirms the testimony of Ensign Wait, with this addition, that he saw the Colonel fire, and that he appeared to retreat with great composure.

Paymaster Sill: Says that he had no opportunity of observing Colonel Tyler's conduct from the time that they crossed over from the Bloomington road towards the post road, and had returned back to the Bloomington road and marched up it one mile; that when the brigade had marched up that far, there was a cry from the rear that the Light-Horse were advancing, and that a great part of the battalion which Colonel Tyler commanded precipitately threw themselves into the lot on the west side of the road; that the Colonel went into the lot, and this examinant with him; that from the Colonel's conduct at this juncture, it appeared to this examinant that his design in going into the lot was to bring back the men to the brigade, for that in his presence and hearing the Colonel threatened to fire upon them if they did not join the brigade.

Sergeant Palmer: Says that when the brigade crossed over from the Bloomington road towards the post road, he was on the right of the front rank of the brigade which was led by Colonel Tyler, and that he had a full opportunity of observing the Colonel's conduct till the time of the retreat; that on notice that the enemy were approaching and orders given to take the wall, the Colonel advanced towards it, still keeping in the front, and was the first man in the brigade who fired; that this examinant discharged his piece twice at the enemy, and on looking round he saw the whole brigade were retreating, the Colonel still remaining on the ground with this examinant, and no person within several rods of them; that upon this the Colonel ordered them to stop, and asked them why they run, and commanded the officers to stop them; that this not being effected, the Colonel and he retreated, the two last men of the brigade, the Colonel along the cross road as far as he remained in sight, and this examinant along the corn-field; that when this examinant joined the brigade in the Bloomington road, he saw the Colonel at the head of it; that when the cry was raised that the Light-Horse were advancing, which occasioned a great part of the battalion in front to betake themselves to the lot on the west side of the road, he heard the Colonel order them back.

Corporals Brewster and Chapman: Confirm what Sergeant Palmer said, that the Colonel was the last man that retreated from the enemy, and that they saw the Colonel, after having marched some distance on the cross road, strike off to the right, with intent, as they conceived, to get to the head of the regiment.

I do hereby certify that the whole Court were of opinion that there is not sufficient evidence to warrant the charge of cowardice and misbehaviour against Colonel Tyler; and that this report would have been made immediately on taking the examinations, had not the Court apprehended that, the Colonel having been put under arrest by express order from Head-Quarters, some evidence against him might have been pointed out from thence.

Camp at White-Plains, October 26, 1776.

JOHN MORIN SCOTT, Brigadier-General,
President.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Camp at White-Plains, October 26, 1776.

DEAR MR. DUER: The hurry of our camp has prevented me giving you a timely answer to your several favours. Many deliberations have been devoted to your many essential propositions, and all I have been able to obtain from the General Officers is contained in the enclosed, signed by Lord Stirling, as the opinions of the rest. I will add that the barracks at each place proposed on the paper should be calculated for two thousand men. When the enemy, who have advanced to a height within three miles of the camp, afford time for the General to give his opinion fully on the subject, you shall receive ample instructions; at present form the magazines on such places as you conceive most likely to answer our wants. Mr. Livingston has recommended a Mr. Janur to purchase for me; but as I now depend on you for all my supplies of grain, hay, and straw, I cannot, nor do I think it right to apply to any other gentleman in this Colony for the same articles.

The Congress allows two and one half per cent. for purchase of grain, &c., which I expect you to charge in your account. If you see Mr. Livingston, give him my reason for not writing to Mr. Janur.

I have sent to Boston for three hundred casks of nails carried in there by a privateer; but as they will not be sent here in time for your wants, I beg you to purchase so many as you are like to want for the two sets of barracks, and in case we find necessary to erect more barracks, you may be supplied by me with nails for them in good season.

I have desired Mr. J. Wadsworth, of Connecticut, to purchase grain, hay, &c., in that Colony, and therefore beg you not to send any agents to that Colony, who may interfere with and affect the purchase. If your purchases are confined to this State, it will, I believe, answer a good purpose and prevent an increase of prices.

I enclose you an order on Mr. Cranch, for thirty thousand dollars. He is, I am informed, on his way to this place. You must therefore send a person to this place for the money. If I could find a person to carry the cash I would wait Mr. Cranch's arrival, and then send it to you. But this cannot be done.

I have ordered fifty carpenters to march from hence this day to Peekskill, and there wait your order.

I am, affectionately, your friend, &c.,

THOMAS MIFFLIN.

MEMORANDUM.

For the present (and until the other places can be fixed upon) I think it will be proper to erect Barracks at some place a mile or two eastward from the mouth of Peekskill, and another set of Barracks at some place about two or three miles eastern from Fishkill landing, or near Fishkill town. This will be sufficient employment until other places can be pointed out. The houses had best be about thirty-six feet long by nineteen feet broad, and about seven feet in the upright on each side.

STIRLING.

GEORGE CLINTON.

October 26, 1776.

COLONEL STOCKTON TO ROBERT BENSON.

Camp at White-Plains, October 26, 1776.

SIR: As many of our officers are willing to enter into the service of the States, we have taken the liberty to recommend the under-mentioned officers as proper persons to bear commissions, and hope they may be provided for.

We are, sir, your most humble servants,

ANDREW STOCKHOLM, Lieut. Colonel.

JAMES ABEEL, Major.

To Robert Benson, Esq.

Captain Theophilus Beekman, Captain Wright, Captain

John Bancker, Captain William Leonard, Lieutenant Thomas Beekman, Thomas Warner.

John Vriedenburgh, whose Captain and Lieutenant are gone to the Regulars, and has done the duty of the whole company since, and has acted as Captain.

John Hardbergh, if he gets a Captain's commission.

Joseph Fryleck, an Ensign.

Lieutenant Hicks and Lieutenant North.

Edward Dunscomb, Lieutenant, Jeronimus Hogland, Adjutant, now prisoners.

Christopher Codwise, whom we strongly recommend for a Captain's commission.

COLONEL TASH TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Peaskskill, in Cortland Manor, October 26, 1776.

This comes to acquaint your Honours that I arrived at Hartford, in Connecticut, the 2d instant, and one company the same day, which I sent forward next morning, and likewise I sent Colonel Welch off the same day, with a letter to General Washington acquainting him that I was at Hartford, and expected the whole of my regiment to be there in three or four days, and should send the companies off for New-York as fast as they got here, and should follow them after the last company had arrived. I likewise let him know we had no camp equipage, such as pots, kettles; neither was it in the power of the State of New-Hampshire to procure any, as there was no tin to be had. I also transmitted a copy of my orders to him. I set off from Hartford the 8th instant, and all the companies had gone forward excepting Captain Prescot, and I thought I would wait no longer for him, and left orders for him to follow as fast as possible. When I arrived at Stamford Colonel Welch was there, and brought me a letter from General Washington, directing me to procure quarters for my regiment and Colonel Baldwin's at Stamford and Horse-Neck, but to have the major part at Horse-Neck if quarters could be procured for them. He likewise directed me to furnish ourselves with camp utensils from the inhabitants if possible. I applied to the Committee to furnish me with pots, &c., but Colonel Baldwin had got there before me, and had got almost all to be had; they made out to get me three, and I sent round for several miles and procured a small number more, by advancing the cash in hand for them. The 13th instant, early in the morning, received orders by express from General Sullivan to march my regiment to King's Bridge, with all possible speed, and likewise to acquaint Colonel Baldwin that he must march likewise. Accordingly we got wagons to carry our baggage ready about two o'clock, p. m., and got the whole to Horse-Neck Sunday night, nine o'clock. Sunday night, the 13th instant, received a letter by express from General Washington, to march my regiment to Fishkill, as the Convention was there sitting, in such a difficult situation, with regard to the numbers of disaffected persons in many Counties in this State, that they could not trust their own Militia so well as ours; therefore ordered me to march with all possible speed to said Fishkill, which I did the next morning, and sent a letter to the General acquainting him of the same. Before I got to Fishkill received a letter by express from the Congress, that they did not want but two companies; but I had got them within two miles of the place, so that it was too late to go back that night; so I went forward and waited on the Congress, and let them know my orders; and the President, Mr. Livingston, said he was sorry we come so far, that is the whole regiment, but desired I would send back to stop the remainder, and turn them back to Peaskskill, where we must remain till further orders, to guard the shores, to stop the men-of-war's people landing to carry off cattle, and leave two companies there, which I did, under the command of Colonel Welch; and the remainder I have posted from this place, about eight miles down the river, to watch the motions of the enemy, and sent a letter to General Washington, acquainting him of my route, and the orders I had received of the Congress, and how I had posted my regiment. And he wrote back very friendly, and told me I must be under the immediate direction of the Convention of this State, with regard to marching the regiment, or any part, to any place till further orders. I have nothing further at present, as you know the news full as well as I; therefore would beg leave to subscribe myself your Honour's most obedient humble servant,

THOMAS TASH.

To the honourable the Committee of Safety for the State of New-Hampshire.

P. S. Colonel Baldwin is at the White-Plains with his regiment, and the main body of the army is there. The regiment I command is almost all in good health and high spirits.

PETER R. LIVINGSTON TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Esopus, October 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I came over here yesterday to inquire what flour might be had here, and find but little; however, have got all there is, and Captain Sleight is now loading. He will have, I judge, about three hundred barrels. I set all the wagons riding I could get. They are to ride all day to-morrow, so that he will be ready to sail on Monday for Albany. Have ordered all the mills to grind as fast as possible, to have another load ready by the time he returns. Shall send up another load of four hundred barrels by the middle of the week, as I find they are in the utmost want.

Shall send off a hand to purchase some teams at Sharon, and send them down, loaded with oats if I can procure them. Have no money. Shall send a hand down to you for some soon.

Beg you will excuse this scrawl, and your further directions by the return of this express.

Am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Vice President of the Convention, at Fishkill.

RICHARD STOCKTON AND GEORGE CLYMER TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 4, 1776, and referred to the Board of War.]

Saratoga, October 26, 1776.

SIR: In execution of the commission with which we were charged by Congress, we proceeded with as much expedition as the nature of the service would permit to Albany, having taken Head-Quarters in our way, and thereby obtained all the information which could be given us by Mr. Trumbull, your Commissary-General. At Albany, we spent two days with General Schuyler, and then proceeded, in company with him, to this place. On our way we received information by express of our fleet having been attacked on Lake Champlain, and the next day, of its total defeat. We were, nevertheless, about to proceed on to Ticonderoga, but were advised by General Schuyler that, in all probability, our army would be attacked by the enemy before we could possibly reach that place; or if otherwise, yet that General Gates his attention would be so totally taken up in preparing to receive the enemy, that we could do no business with him: we therefore concluded to suspend our journey to Ticonderoga for a few days, until we might have some further accounts from General Gates, and in the mean time we gave our attention to the barracks to be erected in this place, and in considering the application of two gentlemen respecting the contract for supplying the army. Happily, General Schuyler's precaution of diligence as to the barracks, had left us little more to do but to go with him and mark out the ground where they were to be erected. He had prepared the most of the timber before we arrived, and they are now raising, and will be ready in good time. Other barracks will be built at Fort Edward and elsewhere. Nails are exceedingly wanted, and if any could be procured at Philadelphia, they should be sent immediately. After having gotten through the business which had arisen at this place, and having sent on a letter to General Gates for speedy information from him, we set out for Fort George in order to inspect the state of the Hospital at that place. The chief of the sick from Ticonderoga are sent there, as being a much more healthy and convenient situation; and we are happy in being able to inform Congress that the building is convenient and comfortable; that the Director-General has lately received a large supply of the most capital medicines; and that they are now furnished with a sufficient quantity of fresh mutton and Indian meal. They yet want bedding, and some other matters which we shall state upon our return. We shall endeavour to procure some straw, a very scarce article here, which is much needed at the Hospital.

At the close of our business at Fort George we received a letter from General Gates advising us not to pursue our journey to Tyconderoga, but to remain at Saratoga until further advice from him. We are just returned here from Fort George, and shall wait a few days to hear further from General Gates. In the mean time we shall be pursuing the other part of our instructions, which can be executed here.

General Schuyler has taken every possible step, in order to keep open the communication from hence to Ticonderoga, that the army may not want supplies. Considerable bodies of the Militia are daily going up; yet we heard the last evening that the savages had appeared between the upper end of Lake George and Ticonderoga, and had, on the day we left Fort George, taken two and killed and scalped one of our people going to Ticonderoga. An express comes in this moment, who brings a letter from the commanding officer at Fort George, informing that a party of the enemy had made their appearance and fired on some of our people who were crossing Lake George. General Schuyler yet doubts of this fact.

We shall attend with all possible diligence to the remaining business committed to us by Congress, and, for our own sake as well as the publick interest, return as soon as may be.

With the greatest esteem and respect, we have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servants,
 RICH'D STOCKTON,
 GEO. CLYMER.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, October 26, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Harrison's letter of the 20th instant I received yesterday, and a few minutes afterwards I received a letter from General Gates, copy whereof I do myself the honour to enclose.

I am in great hopes that General Carleton will not be able to dislodge our army from Tyconderoga; but should such an event unfortunately take place, such measures will be taken as I think will certainly prevent them from penetrating into the country on this side of the lakes. The change of Commissaries has very considerably interrupted the supplies for the army. I have, however, got every thing again in such train that a very considerable quantity of flour is now on its way up, and I believe it impossible for the enemy to prevent its reaching the army even if they should make their utmost efforts to intercept it.

On the 28th September, the army had forty days' flour; on the 22d instant, it was reduced to sixteen; but on that and every succeeding day, I hope considerable quantities arrived. Be assured, my dear General, that I shall take every measure that has a probable tendency to promote the service and secure the country.

I congratulate your Excellency on the success of our troops at East-Chester. I hope it will soon be succeeded by a more decisive blow in our favour, so as to frustrate the enemy's intention of forming a line between you and us.

I am, dear sir, with every respectful sentiment, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Ticonderoga, October 24, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your letters of the 14th, 17th, and 18th instant, are received in course, and now before me. The ammunition arrived safe, and in as good order as could be wished; a most seasonable supply I assure you. Not any of the Militia are yet come in. I hear of numbers being upon their march, and I shall advise you as they arrive. Colonel Dayton's are not on this side the lake. I expect them every day. Our communications are free and unmolested, and the eastern post and travellers are continually coming to Mount Independence by Otter Creek and the roads that lead from thence, no scouts of the enemy appearing to disturb them. Cattle are pretty plenty upon the ground, as you will see by Mr. Jauncey's return enclosed. If you order cattle to be killed at Lake George, you had better direct them to be salted down in barrels and sent over the lake in that way, for it arrives in a wretched condition when sent in quarters fresh. I shall be careful to have batteaus and vessels enough at Skenesborough to bring all the provisions you send there.

Flour seems to be more in request than meat. You may be assured we are doing every thing our judgment can direct, or our industry accomplish, for receiving the enemy properly. Spades, which I have so long and so often sent for, are so much wanted that even one single hundred would be most welcome.

General Carleton keeps very close at Crown Point, his navy at anchor upon his flanks. I have scouts continually down both sides of the lake. I apprehend by this time his force is all collected, and expect the stillness will immediately be succeeded by a grand attack. Heaven grant he may be defeated! The army here are in good spirits, and think only of victory.

Tenpenny, eightpenny, and shingle nails are exceedingly wanted. And where are the one or two thousand bushels of turnips and potatoes you was to send here? They would be of the utmost benefit to this army. If you can send a good parcel of nail rods, our smiths will assist in making nails.

I am, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,
 HORATIO GATES.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

[The Return alluded to in this letter was not enclosed.
 J. LANSING, Jun.]

GEN. SCHUYLER TO THE COMMITTEE OF THE CONVENTION.

Saratoga, October 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am honoured with your favour of the 24th instant. The affidavits transmitted me would countenance the suppositions that the enemy intend an irruption on the Mohawk river, but I can hardly imagine they will attempt until they have met with success at Ticonderoga, which I both hope and believe they will not have. I did not, however, like to move Dayton's corps from the western quarter, but was pressed to do it in such terms by General Gates that I could not prudently refuse it. Lest, however, an accident should happen, I would advise that Colonel Van Ness, with his regiment, should, on his return from Coarsakie, march to Schenectady, or such place where he can be of most service in case of an attack. Our scouts from Johnstown, Fort George, and Fort Edward, all agree that there is not the least appearance of an enemy in the north-west quarters.

I enclose you copies of letters from General Gates and General Arnold. I have had a copious eruption since you was here; it is going off, and find myself in much better health.

I am, gentlemen, with every friendly wish, and with the greatest esteem, your most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Committee of Convention, at Albany.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO COMMITTEE OF BENNINGTON.

Saratoga, October 26, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You will please to signify to the Militia of the Eastern governments on their march, that I wish them to hasten as fast as possible to Skenesborough, where I have left orders for their future disposition. I should be happy if every man carried as much flour or bread as he conveniently can. I suppose the Militia from your and the adjacent towns are already marched.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the honourable Committee of Bennington.

COLONEL DE HART TO THEUNIS DEY AND JOHN C. SYMES.

Ticonderoga, October 26, 1776.

DEAR SIRs: We as yet have not seen our enemy: this night or in the morn we expect them. We have intelligence of the Grenadiers and Light Infantry being advanced as far as Putnam Point, about nine miles from this place.

If they do not come in three days, I shall give over expecting them. I hope and firmly believe they will be properly received. The two Jersey regiments will open the ball.

When you left us, you may remember it was strongly recommended to you from us to request the State of New-Jersey to postpone the regimental appointments until our return, or this affair is over. Many reasons may be given to support this request. If the attack should happen, it would save many unnecessary appointments, and the propriety of future appointments may be best known: if it should not happen, a small time will bring us home, where, if any information should be necessary from us, it can be easily obtained. This request, which is very general with the officers amongst us, we beg the State, if it will not be a matter of inconvenience, to comply with.

I must request of you, gentlemen, to communicate this to the members of the State. My compliments to the gentlemen of my acquaintance of that honourable body, and remain, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

WM. DE HART.

To Hon. Theunis Dey and John C. Symes.

MEMORIAL OF WILLIAM FORBES.

To the Honourable the Provincial Congress of the State of NEW-YORK:

The Memorial of WILLIAM FORBES, of GOSHEN, in ORANGE County, in said State, humbly sheweth:

That a little before your honourable Convention moved from New-York to White-Plains, your unhappy memorialist fell under the great misfortune of being misrepresented to your Honours as unfriendly to the American States; and, although he avouched his innocency, yet the perplexity of the times then intervening unfortunately prevented for that time a full examination of his case, and he was then transmitted into the State of Connecticut, and finally committed to the custody of the keeper of Litchfield County Gaol, in which prison he still remains. And whereas his peculiar misfortunes render his present close confinement very distressing, as he is by his poverty utterly unable to provide himself with either bedding or even present necessary clothing, which heavy calamities must be greatly aggravated by a much longer confinement under his present circumstances, as the severity of winter wears a very horrid aspect in the northwesterly part of a cold gaol. These glooms have still a keener edge set to them by the very great additional melancholy consideration, that his confinement not only deprives of the comfort of the very agreeable company of a beloved wife and four helpless babes, but totally deprives him of the possibility of affording any relief to their distresses. Whereupon your Honours' very unfortunate memorialist, taking encouragement from your Honours' impartiality and humanity, humbly recommends his greatly distressed case to as speedy a consideration as the variety of your important affairs will admit of. He really hopes he shall be so happy as to evince his innocency whenever he can be so happy as to appear before your Honours. Your Honours' memorialist craves your Honours' patience while he adds to his profession of innocency his honest declaration of an hearty desire for the prosperity of the American States, in favour of which he is ready to risk his life either by sea or land, under the tie of a sacred oath of fidelity to them in their glorious and righteous contest for independency and exemption from the tyranny of Britain and her despotick monarch.

The memorialist humbly hopes his dismissal or trial may be speedy; but if the present embarrassment of the times necessitates a delay thereof, he implores the honourable Congress to mitigate, in some measure, the pungent distresses of his present confinement, either by directing he may be returned from his present exile, and permitted to reside with his family as a prisoner of honour, under the inspection and direction of some Committee of Inspection, or such other person as your Honours shall please to appoint; or if that should be deemed inexpedient, that your unfortunate suppliant may be delivered from the horrors of a cold winter gaol, by being permitted to labour at his trade under such restrictions as your Honours may think fit mercifully to indulge him in, in Connecticut. And your unfortunate memorialist, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

WM. FORBES.

Litchfield County Gaol, October 26, A. D. 1776.

Providence, October 26, 1776.

On Monday next the honourable General Assembly of this State will meet at South-Kingstown.

A letter from Maryland to a gentleman in this town mentions that a Spanish vessel had arrived there from the Havannah, with ten thousand dollars to purchase flour, the captain of which confirmed the accounts of a war between Spain and Portugal; and further, advised, that a fleet of Spanish men-of-war and transports were daily expected to arrive at the Havannah with a large body of troops.

The brig Cabot, Elisha Hinman, Esq., commander, in the service of the United States, has taken two ships from Jamaica, bound to London, laden with sugar, rum, some indigo, &c.

Captain Stacey, in the privateer Diamond, has taken a ship bound from Quebeck to England, laden with coal, copper kettles, &c.

Captain Christopher Whipple, in the privateer brig Putnam, has taken a ship bound from Nova-Scotia to Jamaica, laden with fish, boards, spars, &c.

Captain Jauncy, in the privateer Washington, belonging to the State of New-York, has taken a large snow, laden with provisions, &c., bound from London to New-York.

All the above prizes have arrived in safe ports, and also two others lately mentioned to have been taken by the Providence sloop-of-war, in the service of the United States, John P. Jones, Esq., Commander.

WILLIAM CARMICHAEL TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Amsterdam, October 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: You owe to my forgetfulness what ought only to proceed from my respect, yet I will not quarrel with any thing that gives me an opportunity of writing to you.

I left the Memoir on Commerce in your hands, and it is necessary I should have it as soon as possible. I send you "Common Sense," but you must look on my presents as Indian ones, for I, like they, expect much larger in return; as much as you please; and I am sure you can spare a great deal of what I send you. My present is only the rough material of America; your returns will be elegant and superb manufactures of Europe.

The English mail is not arrived. I have a very angry letter from Mr. William Lee on the subject I mentioned to you, respecting Dr. B. I am happy to know that I acted for the publick good; and that, without partiality to any person, will, I hope, always be the rule of my conduct.

I am, &c.,

WILLIAM CARMICHAEL.

JOSHUA CLARKE TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

October 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received a line from the Committee for inquiring into the state of manufactories of this Province, requesting that I would furnish with a state of the saltpetre works under my care, as also the moneys expended thereon. Enclosed you have an account, and refer you to my letter of the 20th of March, since which I have done nothing at it, owing to my bad state of health, and still continue poorly, so that I should be glad you would have some other person appointed if you think it worth while, but am told there is very little done at any of the works on the Eastern-Shore.

I have received sixty-eight pounds ten shillings of the Treasurer of this Shore, which is always ready to be paid to your order. As I have rendered no services, the trouble and expense I have been at in the experiments I am willing to lose, and take upon myself the materials purchased for the publick, as per account rendered, or deliver them up as may be thought most advisable.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

JOSHUA CLARKE,
Supervisor of Saltpetre Works,
In Caroline County, Eastern-Shore of Maryland.
To the honourable Convention of Maryland.

CAPTAIN DEAMS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I take this opportunity to let you know that the most of my company is willing to enlist for during the war with me, provided that I might give them twenty dollars as bounty without deducting the sum of eight dollars which they have received of me, as bounty for their former enlistment.

My men says that they will serve their time out with me, according to contract, and then that they will enlist with another person, in order that they may receive the sum of twenty dollars without any deduction. My men that have not as yet received their month's advance, insists that I should pay them this week; therefore, I should be glad to know whether I must pay them out of what money I have now in my possession.

I find that by the resolutions of Congress the private men is allowed but six shillings per week for rations, which I think it would be impossible for any officer that draws rations for his men, to find them in provisions for that price.

I should be glad, gentlemen, that you would let me know what pay per month the private soldier and officers has, according to the resolutions of Congress.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, yours to serve,
FREDERICK DEAMS.

To the honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, October 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I congratulate you sincerely on the several advantages your troops have lately gained over the enemy, for though each has been but small, yet in the whole they are considerable, and will certainly have the effect of inspiring our army, while it wastes and discourages the other.

May the great Dispenser of justice to mankind put it in your power, before this campaign ends, to give these foes to human kind the stroke their wicked intentions entitles them to. 'Tis amazing with what force and infamous perseverance the devils of despotism, with their corrupt agents, pursue the purpose of enslaving this great continent! Their system of policy has been evident for some time past. They mean to keep their own people in Great Britain quiet, and the other Powers of Europe still, for this campaign, by an infinite number of falsehoods touching the progress of their arms, and the consequent probable submission of the Colonies; whilst they endeavour, by an extraordinary exertion of force, to put things really into such a situation this year as to terrify foreigners from interfering, and encourage with hope their own deluded people. Pursuing this idea, Europe will be made to ring with sounding accounts of their immense successes in Canada and at New-York, when in fact, considering the greatness of their force, both by sea and land, with the amazing expense these will create, what they have done is mere nothing. But should fortune favour us, so as that any considerable impression could be made on General Howe's army this campaign, the high hopes they have raised, and the numberless lies they have told, will disgrace and ruin them with the whole world.

I have the pleasure to assure you the train is so laid that we have the fairest prospect of being soon supplied, and copiously too, with military stores of all kinds, and with clothing fit for the soldiers. Immediately, to be sure, we are much pressed for want of the latter; but if we can brush through this crisis, we shall be secure.

The French Court has given us so many unequivocal proofs of their friendship, that I can entertain no doubt of their full exertions in our favour, and as little that a war between them and Great Britain is not far distant.

I sincerely wish you health, sir, and that you may be happy in the success you are so eminently entitled to.

I am, with perfect esteem, dear sir, your most affectionate and obedient servant,

RICHARD HENRY LEE.

ROBERT MORRIS TO GENERAL GATES.

Philadelphia, October 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I find by your letter of the 5th instant, you had not received one of my letters wrote in answer to one of yours. I kept no copy of it, which you'll say is unusual for a merchant. I acknowledge it, and only plead in excuse that I did not write to you in that character. The letter for Mrs. Gates is gone forward by post, as I could not meet any other conveyance, although I kept it here some days in expectation of one. Mr. Johnston, and indeed all the Maryland Delegates, are at home, forming a constitution. This seems to be the present business of all America, except the army. It is the fruits of a certain premature declaration, which, you know, I always opposed. My opposition was founded in the evil consequences I foresaw, or thought I foresaw, and the present state of several Colonies justifies my apprehensions. We are disputing about liberties, privileges, posts, and places, at the very time we ought to have nothing in view but the securing those objects and placing them on such a footing as to make them worth contending for amongst ourselves hereafter; but, instead of that, the vigour of this and several other States is lost in intestine division, and unless this spirit of contention is checked by some means or other, I fear it will have baneful influence on the general measures of America.

I am not one of those testy politicians that run resty when my own plans are not adopted; for I think it the duty of a good citizen to follow when he cannot lead; and happy would it be for America if all her inhabitants would adopt this maxim, and make it an invariable rule during this great contest for the minority on every question to submit to the majority. But alas! this cannot be; it is not to be expected from human nature. We must take men as we find them, and do the best we can. You tell me the Congress are bad correspondents, and I fear you have too much truth on your side. Was you here, I could explain this in a tête-à-tête, but I have neither time nor inclination to commit that explanation to paper. You may depend there is no intentional neglect or slight meant to you or the department you act in. It is deemed of the utmost importance, and all the members of Congress wish that and every other department was duly attended to. But the fact is, they have too many objects, and retain too much executive business in their own hands for their members to effect with that vigour and despatch that is necessary.

You say I must tell you good news. I will, if you will repay me in kind; for of late we have had nothing but very bad news from both our armies. We expect daily to hear of your being attacked, and have sanguine hopes of a vigorous and successful defence on your part; much depends on it. If you keep your ground, I think General Washington will keep his; and if both do this for the present fall and ensuing winter, the good news I mean to tell you will be verified. It is that the French are undoubtedly disposed to assist us in this contest, and I have little doubt but they will take part in the war next summer. Indeed it seems to me impossible but all Europe will be involved in war; and if so, Great Britain will have her hands full, and probably be glad to render justice and reparation to the country she has so much injured.

Nothing do I wish for more than a peace on terms honourable and beneficial to both countries; and I am convinced it is more consistent with the interest of Great Britain to acknowledge our independency and enter into commercial treaties with us, than to persist in attempting to reduce us to unconditional submission. I hope we shall never be reduced to that vile situation whilst a true friend to America and freedom exists. Life will not be worth having, and it will be better to perish by the sword than drag out the remaining days in misery and scorn. But I hope Heaven has better things in store for the votaries of so just a cause.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

ROBERT MORRIS.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

Fort Lee, October 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By Major Howell you will receive one hundred and nineteen thousand musket cartridges. Part arrived to-day and part last night. As soon as the remainder comes up from Amboy and Philadelphia, they shall be sent forward. I have been to view the roads again; and fixed upon Aquacanock, Springfield, Boundbrook, Princetown, and Trentown, to establish the magazines at. Trentown and Equacanack, to be the principal ones; the others only to serve to support the troops in passing from one to the other. They are all inland posts, and I hope the stores will be secure. I have ordered all the cannon from Amboy, except two eighteen-pounders and two fieldpieces. I have directed them to be sent to Springfield, Boundbrook, and Equacanock, to secure the stores.

The people have been employed on the other side in getting the boards together at Fort Washington and the ferry. Some have been brought from King's Bridge. To-day I sent up to Colonel Lasher to know what assistance he could give towards taking down the barracks, and bringing off the boards; and had for answer that he had orders to burn the barracks, quit the post, and join the army, by the way of the North River, at the White-Plains.

We have had a considerable skirmish on York-Island to-day. The cannonade began in the morning and held until evening, with very short intermissions. A ship moved up opposite Fort No. 1. Colonel Magaw got down an eighteen-pounder and fired sixty shot at her, twenty-six of which went into her. She slipped her cable and left her anchor, and was towed off by four boats. I think we must have killed a considerable number of their men, as the confusion and distress exceeded all description. Our Artillery behaved incomparably well. Colonel Magaw is charmed with their conduct in firing at the ship and in the field. I left the island at three o'clock this afternoon. We had lost but one man; he was killed by a shell that fell upon his head. We have brought off some of the enemy from the field of battle, and more are still lying on the ground dead.

I am anxious to know the state of the troops in the grand army: whether they are high or low spirited; whether well or ill posted; whether a battle is expected or not. We must govern our operations by yours. The troops here and on the other side are in good spirits; but I fear quitting Fort Independence will oblige Magaw to draw in his forces into the garrison, as the enemy will have a passage open upon his back. I fear it will damp the spirits of his troops. He did not expect it so soon. If the barracks are not burnt in the morning, and the enemy don't press too hard upon us, we will try to get away some of the boards.

I am, dear General, your obedient servant,

NATH'L GREENE.

Assistant Commissary Stores.

LETTER FROM ROBERT H. HARRISON.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

SIR: I have it in command from his Excellency General Washington to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this date, and to inform you that it is his request that the whole of the Light-Horse under your command should repair to this place, except one of the companies now with you, which he would have left at the Fishkills, under the direction of the Convention. To the five companies which you expect, he desires you will despatch one or two Light-Horsemen, and direct them to come here instead of going to the Fishkills.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROB. H. HARRISON, Secretary.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL LASHER.

White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

SIR: Immediately upon receipt hereof, you will, if possible, secure, and remove from your post to Mount Washington, the cannon and stores left with you, and, without delay, march your detachment to this place, by the road to Dobbs's Ferry. You will march with all possible despatch whenever you attempt it. If the road should be obstructed by the enemy, you must retreat to Mount Washington. There are wagons, I am told, at that place, and perhaps you may easily secure your baggage. The boats may take it at the bridge, and convey it either to Dobbs's Ferry or Mount Washington. The barracks are to be burnt when you leave them. You may either do it yourselves, or confer with Colonel Magaw, and desire him to send a small party to be present when you march off, and to fire the barracks when you get a few miles distant. Secrecy and despatch are essentially necessary. You will exercise your best discretion as to the practicability of getting off all the cannon. It is probable that Colonel Magaw will afford you some assistance should you apply to him; but your situation will not admit of much delay.

I am, dear sir, yours, affectionately,

W. HEATH.

To Colonel Lasher.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL PUTNAM.

General Heath's compliments to General Putnam, and acquaints him that the works at No. 2 are in a dangerous condition, and submits it to his superiour wisdom whether it be best to complete the new works or repair those which are not tenable.

Friday morning, October 27.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have your favour of yesterday. The General highly approves of your plan of having Rogers's prisoners sent up to your Convention, and will have it done out of hand. You will receive with them several persons taken about this part of the country. The one that appears to be deepest in their schemes is James Budd, whose examination you have enclosed. You may question him without letting him know you have the examination, and, from comparing the accounts given at different times, form a judgment of the truth.

Our scouting parties are very active and very successful. Yesterday they brought in five British prisoners, and this morning twelve Waldeckers. The latter are amazed at the kind treatment they receive. They say they were torn away from their own country, and will willingly remain among us. They say if their fellow-soldiers knew how kindly they would be treated, and how plentifully and happily they might live, they would lay down their arms and come among us. We shall contrive to make a good use of these fellows.

Our neighbours remain very quiet in this quarter; but we have heard a heavy cannonade about Fort Washington. We don't know the occasion yet, but have sent down for intelligence.

You are misinformed as to the quantity of provisions we have lost. When General Lee removed, he was obliged to leave eighty or ninety barrels of provisions, of all kinds, for want of wagons.

We already make a very respectable figure: our front lined and abutted, and some redoubts well forwarded on our rear, impassable for horse or foot but through passes of which we have possession.

Send us good news from the northward, and never fear us; we will play our part.

I am, dear sir, sincerely yours,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esquire, of the Committee of Correspondence, Fishkill.

JAMES BUDD's Examination, taken 25th October, 1776.

James Budd says he came to New-York from Quebeck about the 10th of September. He came in the ship Lord Sandwich, in company with three other transports, with the prisoners taken in Canada. He landed at Red-Hook the 26th of September. From thence he came to New-York, where he continued most of the time till the day after the enemy landed at Frog's Point, when he went from New-York to Frog's Point, where he was solicited to take a commission in the King's service, under Major Rogers, or in some other regiment. He had a recommendation to Rogers for that purpose, but has not had his commission, and was undetermined whether to accept it. He came home some time since, to see his family and know in what state things were here (as he had been absent since May, 1775) before he concluded whether to accept a commission or not. After this he went on to Long-Island and to New-York; concluded to return home, and not take a commission in the King's service; and accordingly, last night, came to Rye, on his way to his family, where he was made a prisoner by the guard.

The enemy had, on Frog's Point, in his opinion, about twenty thousand men the day after they landed. He thinks General Houe commanded there. Generals Lord Percy, Cleveland, and Prescott, were there. He was told they expected to stay but a few days, and then land further east, and were looking out for guides. The general talk was, they intended to surround the American army, to cut off their retreat. But very few men are left on York-Island; not more than one hundred in the city; none on Long-Island but sick and the Long-Island recruits and some few of the Light-Horse; about a regiment at Staten-Island, and two or three regiments at Powle's Hook. Last Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, arrived a reinforcement, said to be twelve thousand Hessians and Hanoverians, and one regiment of Dragoons without horses. These have not landed, but 'twas said were to land in North River, above our lines, and form a line across, to join the army on the East River. Expressed great fear lest we should land part of our army on Long-Island. Salt provisions are plenty; fresh provisions scarce, poor, and dear. The army, in general, is healthy. The Hessians are sickly. The enemy lost three hundred on Long-Island. On Sunday, the 15th, they lost very few; the 16th, their loss was considerable. He has not been in the camp since he left Frog's Neck; but the principal encampment appears to be at Scarsdale, between New-Rochelle and Marineck, on the northwardly of the road. Rogers, with six hundred men, is at Maroneck. Some Light-Infantry and a battalion of De Lancy's, commanded by Major Grant, lie there, or near there. Rogers has one battalion full; and a second now raising, in which he had an offer of a Captaincy. This is by information, as he has not been present since he left Frog's Point.

The army consists of about thirty thousand, besides the late reinforcement. Isaac Jerow, Isaac Hatfield, one Joseph Golden, of New-York State, one McGinnis, of New-Hampshire, and one Smith, one Sanford, of Salem, in Westchester County, are Captains; one Covert, of Cortlandt's Manor, one Hierlitry, from Middletown, in Connecticut, one William Gray, of Maroneck, are Lieutenants; and one Griffing, from New-England, is a Captain in Rogers's regiment. Elijah Purdy's son, of the White-Plains, and Joshua Barns, of Philipsborough, are Lieutenants in the enemy's service. They design to attack us shortly, if we don't retreat; but do not design to attack us in our works; and they said they would not march faster than the cannon cleared the way before them. They have some twelve-pound artillery and some field artillery with them. They have a good supply of horses and wagons. Their regiments generally consist of about five hundred men.

H. HUGHES TO CAPTAIN KIERSE.

White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

SIR: You will please to call on Mr. Duer, the President of the Convention, who will receive thirty thousand dollars by the hands of Mr. Quackenboss, (one of our assistants,) and acquaint him that it is General Mifflin's desire that you should be furnished with cash to purchase hay, corn, oats, rye, bran, and buckwheat, as well as to pay for what wood you may have already engaged agreeable to former instructions. But no more wood need be bought that side the river till further orders from here, unless Mr. Duer desires it.

Let all the other articles be sent to Peekskill, and put under the care of Mr. Joseph Travis, one of the Committee, informing what progress you make as often as possible.

I am, with great regard, sir, your very humble servant,

H. HUGHES.

To Captain Kierse.

P. S. You will from henceforward take directions from Mr. Duer altogether, as he has undertaken for our department; and let him see this scrawl.

JAMES ABEEL TO ROBERT HARPER.

Camp at White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have taken the liberty to recommend Mr. Christopher Codwise to you as a person properly qualified to bear the commission of Captain in the army of the States, he being a resolute, prudent officer, and has shown his willingness, before he was in the service of the States, to go as a volunteer on every expedition, and has always behaved himself well, and, since his having been an officer, has always discharged his duty in the station he was, to the satisfaction of his superiour officers. I should by no means recommend him, if I thought he did not deserve it. Therefore I hope you will consider of the matter, and if you find him deserving a commission, will honour him with it; in doing of which you will greatly oblige, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JAS. ABEEL.

To Messrs. Robert Harper, Graham, and De Witt.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM FORT LEE, DATED OCTOBER 27, 1776.

This morning, about seven o'clock, two frigates moved up the North River, and came to an anchor near Bourdet's Ferry, apparently with an intention to stop the ferry-way, and cut off the communication between this place and Fort Washington. The enemy at the same time appeared on Harlem Plain, and Colonel Magaw, who commands on York-Island, ordered the lines to be manned. The ships endeavoured to dislodge them by firing on their flanks, but they fired to very little purpose. The barbette battery on the high hill on the left of the ferry, opened on the frigates, and fired a considerable time without doing them any or but very little damage. Upon our ceasing to fire, a gun from Fort No. 1, on York-Island, began to play on them with great advantage, and hulled the one highest up about twenty times. At this time, two eighteen-pounders, which were ordered down this side the river, opposite the ships, gave them so warm a salute that they hoisted all sail; the foremost slipped her cable, and appeared to be in the greatest confusion. She could make no way, although towed by two boats, till the lower one, perceiving her distress, sent two more barges to her assistance, who at length dragged her out of the reach of our fire. It is very probable that many of her men were killed, and she herself extremely damaged; but the weather was so hazy that it was impossible to see any thing distinctly at a distance. The enemy by this time had begun a smart fire on the island with field-pieces and mortars. Our men returned the compliment. They were out of their lines great part of the day. There were but few discharges of small-arms. Our men killed about a dozen Hessians, and brought them off. We had one man killed with a shell. This was the account at five o'clock; it is now seven, and the firing has just ceased, but nothing extraordinary, I believe, has happened. We take this day's movement to be only a feint; at any rate it is little honourable to the red-coats.

Yesterday I informed you, that a party of the Light-Horse and Infantry had taken possession of Phillips's Manor, between King's Bridge and our main army. They continued there all night, but this morning they retired.

VOLKERT VEEDER TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON.

Caughnawaga, October 27, 1776.

SIR: I have made bold to send this to inform you that I am in a very low state of health, being tormented with a continual racking pain in my bowels and a great fever: confined to my bed since the 21st instant; but, sir, as soon as God pleases to bless me with health and strength to perform a journey, I shall come to Albany to you. I have received your letter.

From, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

VOLKERT VEEDER.

To Robert R. Livingston, Esq., one of the Delegates; to the care of Abm. Yates, Esq., in Albany.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM TICONDEROGA, DATED OCTOBER 27, 1776.

Last Monday, a party of the Indians came across two soldiers bringing, in a hammock, a wounded soldier who received his wound in the engagement of our fleet. The Indians surprised them within three miles of our camp, and took the two able men prisoners, tomahawked the wounded man, and left the tomahawk in his hand; since which the two prisoners have been sent back by Governour Carleton, who examined them concerning our army; but, as the men were very ignorant, I believe got but little satisfaction on that head. He swore them not to take up arms against his Majesty again, and supplied them four days' provisions, and sent them back, informing them, at the same time, that he should soon drive the Rebels from their lines, and should have done it before, but was waiting with an expectation that we should be wise enough to lay down our arms, and deliver ourselves to the mercy of his Majesty. Simple man! to think that such gasconade would have any effect to intimidate the minds of the brave Americans.

JOHN B. SCOTT TO GENERAL GATES.

Mount Independence, October 27, 1776.

SIR: As my trial before the Court-Martial will be a long and tedious one, and detain a number of officers from duty of more consequence; and as all the money that I am charged with having drawn more than I ought is in the Paymaster's hands, the time for which I am engaged in the Continental service expiring to-morrow:

For this reason I have taken the liberty to beg leave of your Honour to resign my commission as a Captain in the Second New-Jersey Regiment. Your granting this request will be greatly acknowledged by, sir, with the greatest respect, your humble servant,

JOHN B. SCOTT.

To Hon. General Gates.

JESSE ROOT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, October 27, 1776.

PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: The power of this Committee, by act of Assembly, extends only to prisoners of war, to provide for them, and to treat them with humanity, according to their rank, &c., and the Committee met with little difficulty in ordering the prisoners, except with Governour Skeen and Captain McKay, until the late successes of the British arms, which has elated the prisoners and Tories, and some of them, in consequence thereof, are grown saucy and troublesome. Not to punish this insolence will be imputed to timidity, and improved to dishearten our own people; and to make orders for their punishment without executing them is worse than nothing; and the Committee must execute their own orders themselves, unless they can persuade somebody to do it for them, or suffer the mortification of seeing them despised, for they are not invested with power to command any civil or military assistance. Martial law is almost the only law they are acquainted with, and a military force what they most dread. I am desired by the Committee to represent to your Honour, in their name, that some further regulations are necessary, and that the Committee have power to command assistance, to order a guard at the gaol, or over any of the prisoners when needed, and to punish such guard for neglect on duty, &c., &c., &c. There is now a guard kept at the gaol, but we are obliged to beg and plead to get them; and behave as they will, we have no power to punish them. The Tories of our own State are busy at the gaol with the prisoners, and of such we have no power more than other individuals, &c.

What further regulations and powers are necessary and safe to be made and given to this Committee is humbly submitted to the wisdom of your Honour to prescribe and grant, by your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JESSE ROOT,

In behalf of the Committee.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

JAMES CLARKE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 28, 1776.

HONoured SIR: When I was last at Annapolis, Melcher Keener and myself made the honourable Council of Safety an offer to serve them in the purchase of produce here, but since then we have not had the pleasure of hearing from the honourable Council; do suppose they are otherways engaged. I have a schooner on hand which, by a resolve of our Committee some time ago, I am not allowed to load on my own account; have resolved to sell her, and should you still be in want of vessels, may have her if you please. She will carry seven hundred barrels, or upwards. She will want some repairs. The price as she lies is four hundred and fifty pounds.

I remain, respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CLARKE.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., Annapolis.

JOSEPH WHAYLAND'S PETITION TO THE MARYLAND CONVENTION.

The petition of JOSEPH WHAYLAND, Jun., a languishing prisoner in the Gaol at ANNAPOLIS, humbly sheweth:

That at the time your petitioner was taken by Major Fallin's guard, he had all his clothes taken from him; that he is now naked, and has been so ever since his confinement, and has not wherewithal to purchase any clothes. He therefore humbly prays your Honours would be pleased to grant him an order on Mr. Fallin for the delivery of his clothes. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JOSEPH WHAYLAND.

October 28, 1776.

STEPHEN STEWARD TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

GENTLEMEN: Mr Gideon Adair waits on you for a commission as Captain of Marines on board of the largest Province schooner, which I hope to have rigged and fitted for sea in ten or twelve days. As sailors are very hard to be got, I should think it would be well for you to put from twenty to thirty landsmen on board. After being a cruise they will become half sailors, which will be of great use to this State. Mr. Adair, as I have said to you before, is as fitting a man for the service as any acquaintance. He has the offer of going out in that station in a small privateer in this neighbourhood, but now comes to you to give you the preference.

If you should think of giving him a commission, it's high time he was recruiting, as there is several recruiting parties about this place. And I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

STEPHEN STEWARD.

To the honourable Council of Safety.

If you should give Mr. Adair a commission, it will be well to tell him to get as many young country-born lads as he can.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
Philadelphia, Monday evening, eleven o'clock, }
October 28, 1776. }

SIR: This moment, Dodd, the express from the State of Massachusetts, who took your despatches to Congress on Saturday last, arrived at my house, and informs me that this day, about twelve o'clock, he put up at one Bissinett's, a publick house in Bristol, where he opened his bundle, to deliver a letter to be forwarded over the ferry to Mrs. Reed, and leaving his bundle in the bar-room, while he stepped out, on his return the whole of his letters were carried off, and no person could give any account of them; and after inquiring and getting all the assistance he could to endeavour the obtaining them, their searches were fruitless, and he is here without a single letter. As your letters may be of the utmost consequence, and the enemy may derive great advantage from the knowledge of their contents, (as I have no doubt but they will soon be in possession of them,) I have judged it proper, without waiting for the meeting of Congress in the morning, to despatch this express to you, to give you this intelligence, that you may, as far as possible, guard against the movements the enemy may make in consequence of the intelligence they may gain by the possession of those letters, and that you may take such steps as this accident may suggest to you from the particulars of your letters, as necessary to counteract the attempts of the enemy. I, however, hope that your letters, should they fall into their hands, will not afford them much comfort, nor give them any great prospects of advantages, though I shall be unhappy until I know the contents, and beg, by the return of this express, you will send me a copy of them, as it will be a great relief to Congress to receive the earliest accounts.

I shall, early in the morning, send to Bristol, and have a strict search made, and recover the letters if possible, and detect the person who robbed the mail.

You will excuse this hasty letter, written in great agitation and hurry, as I would not lose a moment in sending it off.

I am, with the utmost respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To His Excellency General Washington, Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces of the United States, at White-Plains.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO REV. JACOB DUCHÉ.
Philadelphia, October 28, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the pleasure, in the name of the Congress, and by their direction, to return you the thanks of that House for the devout and acceptable manner in which you discharged your duty during the time you officiated as Chaplain to it.

In obedience to their commands, I send you the enclosed one hundred and fifty dollars, which they have ordered me to present to you as an acknowledgment for your services.

With sincere wishes for your health and happiness, I am, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To the Rev. Jacob Duché.

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
[Read October 31, 1776.]
Fort Lee, New-Jersey, October 28, 1776.

SIR: This being a critical hour, when the hopes and fears of the country and city are continually alarmed, and yesterday there being a considerable heavy cannonade most part of the day, I have though it advisable to forward an express with the account of the action of the day. The communication between this and the grand division of the army is, in a great measure, cut off; therefore, it will be some time before you have any account from his Excellency General Washington.

A ship moved up the river early in the morning, above our lower lines, right opposite to Fort No. 1, near old Headquarters at Morris's; she began a brisk cannonade upon the shore. Colonel Magaw, who commands at Fort Washington, got down an eighteen pounder and fired sixty rounds at her; twenty-six went through her; the gun was mostly loaded with two balls. She was annoyed considerably by two eighteen-pounders from this shore. The confusion and distress that appeared on board the ship exceeds all description. Without doubt she lost a great number of men. She was towed off by four boats sent from the other ships to her assistance; she slipped her cable and left her anchor. Had the tide run flood one half-hour longer, we should have sunk her. At the same time the fire from the ships began, the enemy brought up their field-pieces, and made a disposition to attack the lines, but Colonel Magaw had so happily disposed and arranged his men as to put them out of conceit of that manœuvre. A cannonade and fire with small-arms continued almost all day, with very little intermission. We lost one man only. Several of the enemy were killed; two or three our people got and brought off the field, and several more were left there. The firing ceased last evening, and has not been renewed this morning.

General Washington and General Howe are very near neighbours. Some decisive stroke is hourly expected: God grant it may be a happy one! The troops are in good spirits; and in every engagement since the retreat from New-York, have given the enemy a drubbing.

I have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL HASLET TO GENERAL RODNEY, DATED OCTOBER 28, 1776.

On Monday night Lord Stirling ordered me, with seven hundred and fifty men, to attack the enemy's outposts, ten miles from this place, at the village of Mamaroneck; which was done, and their guards forced. We brought in thirty-six prisoners, a pair of colours, sixty stand of arms, and a variety of plunder besides. The party we fell in with was Colonel Rogers's, the late worthless Major. On the first fire, he skulked off in the dark. His Lieutenant and a number of others were left dead on the spot. Had not our guards deserted us on the first outset, he and his whole party must have been taken. On our side three or four were left dead, and about fifteen wounded; among the latter is Major Green, of the Second Virginia Regiment, wounded in the shoulder, and Captain Pope, who acted as Major, and behaved with great bravery, wounded in his leg; both likely to recover. As this was the first effort of the kind, and a plan of his Lordship's, he was so highly pleased with our success that he thanked us publicly on the parade.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM WHITE-PLAINS, DATED OCTOBER 28, 1776.

This morning information was received that the enemy appeared to be preparing for a general attack, and were advancing fast. Proper preparations were made to receive them, and very soon the ball was opened with field-pieces on both sides. The enemy attacked our right wing, who defended themselves nobly. At the same time, a party of Light-Horse filed off towards our centre; a shot from one of our cannon forced them to wheel to the right-about and retreat; it is said this shot unhorsed two of them. About one o'clock one of the horses was brought in; his rider was killed. Fighting still continues; it is now three o'clock, p. m. To-morrow I think will be the important day. No accounts can yet be given of the loss on either side. Our men are the most expert in the world at making breastworks; in an hour or two they made an amazingly long stone fence, and covered it properly with earth.

The skirmish you mention was on Monday. We then took thirty-six Tories, who had enlisted with Major Rogers.

Yesterday we took twenty Waldeckers and Regulars; seven of the latter. Yesterday, too, the enemy attacked our lines at Harlem and Mount Washington at the same time with two ships; they were repulsed in both places. This morning forty-five Tories, and some Regular prisoners passed through here on their way to Fishkill.

Colonel Smallwood, of Maryland, is this moment come wounded to the house where I am. He is wounded in the arm and hip, but rode here on horseback, and can walk tolerably well.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM WHITE-PLAINS, DATED OCTOBER 28, 1776, AT TWO O'CLOCK, P. M.

I have only time to acquaint you that since my arrival at the American camp, we have had several very successful skirmishes with the enemy, in which the latter have lost several hundred men, in killed and prisoners. Thirteen Waldeckers, seven Britons, and two Tories, were yesterday taken prisoners, and brought in to Head-Quarters.

This day, about ten o'clock, the enemy advanced towards our lines, in full view of Head-Quarters, while a large body approached to the right. The first were soon dispersed by our Artillery. The latter attacked several of our regiments on the right, when a warm engagement began, and now continues with great fury. To-morrow, it is probable, will produce a general battle.

Colonel Smallwood is just come in, wounded in the arm and hip, but not dangerously.

I must not omit mentioning that the enemy made an unsuccessful attempt against our lines at Harlem yesterday.

P. S. The post being detained by desire of the General, gives me an opportunity (with a wooden pen, on a drum head) to acquaint you that the part of our army which was engaged to-day was a brigade commanded by General McDougall, composed of Webb's, Ritzema's, Smallwood's, Haslet's, and Brooks's regiments. Ritzema's and Smallwood's suffered most on this occasion, sustaining with great patience and coolness a long and heavy fire, and finally retreated with great sullenness, being obliged to give way to a superiour force.

The British army and auxiliaries are now encamped about one mile off our lines, and make a formidable appearance; but, from the spirit and temper of our troops, I augur well of the event of another attack, which it is expected will commence to-morrow morning.*

* October 26, 1776.—General Lee's division joined the army. In ascending some of the hills on the road, this division, encumbered with many wagons, was obliged to halt and double the teams, in open view of the British, and at no considerable distance, who did not attempt to disturb them; which had they done, the loss of the cannon, wagons, &c., could not have been avoided. The troops would have bent their march, unencumbered, towards the Hudson; but the wagons, &c., must have been left. Two or three British soldiers and a Hessian were taken prisoners and sent in.

October 27, 1776.—In the forenoon, a heavy cannonade was heard towards Fort Washington. Thirteen Hessians and two or three British soldiers were sent in on this day.

From the American camp to the southwest there appeared to be a very commanding height, worthy of attention. The Commander-in-Chief ordered the General Officers who were off duty to attend him, to reconnoitre this ground, on this morning. When arrived at the ground, although very commanding, it did not appear so much so as other grounds to the north, and almost parallel with the left of the army as it was then formed. "Yonder," says Major-General Lee, pointing to the

DR. JOHN MORGAN TO JOHN JAY.

North-Castle, October 28, 1776.

SIR: I wrote a hasty letter some time ago, requesting from the State of New-York that they would allow me the remainder of the stock of medicines purchased for the use of the State, of which they were so good as to allow me one half early in the summer for the use of the army. The demand for medicines is very great, and we cannot procure a sufficiency at any rate. Not having received an answer to that letter, I fear it has miscarried. I should be much obliged to you, sir, if you would be pleased to make application in my favour for the medicines, if not disposed of; for which, as well as what I was before favoured with, I shall pay the amount on demand.

With great esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

To the Hon. John Jay.

COMMITTEE OF BEDFORD TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Bedford, October 28, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The names of the poor of the parish of New-York came to Bedford on the 28th day of August last, by order of the County Committee, and was supported by the Committee of Bedford. A house was hired for them, and kept together ever since:

Elisabeth Airs is dead since she came; and about a grounds just mentioned, "is the ground we ought to occupy." "Let us, then, go and view it," replied the Commander-in-Chief. When on the way, a Light-Horseman came up in full gallop, his horse almost out of breath, and addressed General Washington, "The British are on the camp, sir." The General observed, "Gentlemen, we have now other business than reconnoitring," putting his horse in full gallop for the camp, and followed by the other officers. When arrived at Head-Quarters, the Adjutant-General, (Reed), who had remained at camp, informed the Commander-in-Chief that the guards had been all beat in, and the whole American army were now at their respective posts, in order of battle. The Commander-in-Chief turned round to the officers, and only said, "Gentlemen, you will repair to your respective posts, and do the best you can." General Heath, on arriving at his own division, found them all in the lines; and, from the height of his post, found that the first attack was directed against the Americans on Chaderton's hill. The little river Brunz, which ran between the American right and this hill, after running round its north side, turned and ran down on the east and southeast. The British advanced in two columns. At this instant, the cannonade was brisk on both sides, directed by the British across the hollow and Brunz, against the Americans on the hill, and by them returned. Almost at the same instant, the right column, composed of British troops, preceded by about twenty Light-Horse, in full gallop, and brandishing their swords, appeared on the road leading to the Court-House, and now directly in front of General Heath's division. The Light-Horse leaped the fence of a wheat-field at the foot of the hill, on which Colonel Malcom's regiment was posted, of which the Light-Horse were not aware, until a shot from Lieutenant Fenno's field-piece gave them notice, by striking in the midst of them, and a horseman pitching from his horse. They then wheeled short about, galloped out of the field as fast as they came in, rode behind a little hill in the road, and faced about, the tops of their caps only being visible to General Heath where he stood. The column came no further up the road, but wheeled to the left by platoons, as they came up, and, passing through a bar or gateway, directed their head towards the troops on Chaderton's hill, now engaged. When the head of the column had got nearly across the lot, their front got out of sight; nor could the extent of their rear be now discovered. The sun shone bright, their arms glittered, and perhaps troops never were shown to more advantage than these now appeared. The whole now halted, and, for a few minutes, the men all sat down in the same order in which they stood, no one appearing to move out of his place. The cannonade continued brisk across the Brunz. A part of the left column, composed of British and Hessians, forded the river, and marched along, under the cover of the hill, until they had gained sufficient ground to the left of the Americans, when, by facing to the left, their column became a line parallel with the Americans. When they briskly ascended the hill, the first column resumed a quick march. As the troops which were advancing to the attack ascended the hill, the cannonade on the side of the British ceased, as their own men became exposed to their fire if continued. The fire of small-arms was now very heavy, and without any distinction of sounds. This led some American officers who were looking on to observe that the British were worsted, as their cannon had ceased firing; but a few minutes evinced that the Americans were giving way. They moved off the hill in a great body, neither running nor observing the best order. The British ascended the hill very slowly, and when arrived at its summit, formed and dressed their line, without the least attempt to pursue the Americans. The loss on the side of the Americans was inconsiderable; that of the British was not then known. The British having got possession of this hill, it gave them a vast advantage of the American lines, almost down to the centre.—Heath.

week ago, Walter McDonald is gone out of the poor-house to keep a school for small children.

There is men and women in the poor-house that is able to earn their living, and not to be chargeable to the publick. They do little jobs about, which they are paid for, and they buy rum with, and get drunk. They quarrel among themselves, and make their complaint to me, which I cannot do any thing with them. I hope you'll send written instructions, so that we may know how to deal with them.

The money due to the Committee of Bedford, which they engaged for, amounts to £23 8s. 1d. They want that money and more to be sent down to support them this winter. The funeral charges for Elisabeth Airs is not paid, and no account made of it in the above. The poor says she left a feather bed, and whether that ought to be sold to defray charges or not, we don't know. Now, considering the prisoners sent here, concerning the parole granted them by the Continental Congress for six miles each way from the places of their abode, was shortened by this Committee to a quarter of a mile, for the following reasons: they went about night and day amongst the Tories here, and made great disturbances concerning the times; they went off on a Sunday, and have not heard of them since; they are considerably in debt here, and left effects, which we collected together, and prized it, which amounts to £90 7s. 3d. Whether we are to sell it at vendue, and pay the debts due, or not, we cannot tell, and return the overplus of the sale of their effects to the Convention, or keep it for them, if ever they return. I hope the honourable Convention will take it all in consideration, and instruct us what our duty is to do, and we will endeavour to do it punctually, without delay.

By order of Bedford Committee, I subscribe myself
your most humble servant,

LEWIS McDONALD, Chairman.

To the President of the honourable Convention at Fishkill, Dutchess County.

SAMUEL TUDER TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Poughkeepsie, October 28, 1776.

SIR: Your favour of 19th instant with copy of a note from the Marine Committee at Philadelphia enclosed, wherein they express great anxiety for the frigates building here, came safe to hand, in consequence of which we have used our utmost exertions to get the ships ready to launch. The General-Montgomery will be launched on Monday, the 4th November next, at eight in the morning, at which time we should be glad of the company of such gentlemen of the Convention as can conveniently attend.

We are, with great respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servants,

AUGUSTIN LAWRENCE,
SAMUEL TUDER.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq.

P. S. If you have any news, should take it kind of you to let us know by the bearer hereof, Mr. Joseph Pierson. Please to forward the letter herewith sent to Marine Committee by first conveyance.

SETH CURTIS TO CAPTAIN E. HASBROUCK.

Kingston, October 28, 1776.

SIR: As soon as I had time to recollect myself, I found I had made a mistake in your pay-roll. The sergeants' wages I have drawn upon a par with the soldiers', occasioned by having too much business then upon hand. However, with a little trouble you will alter that; and, instead of their wages as they there stand, it ought to be thus:

John Graham , Sergeant, - - -	£8 6 4½
Isaac Davis , Jr., Sergeant, - - -	6 16 6
William Brodhead , Sergeant, - - -	8 14 11
	£23 17 9½

I thought it my duty to give you this timely notice, to prevent bad consequences, which please to accept from your humble servant,

SETH CURTIS.

To Captain E. Hasbrouck, at Fishkill.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 28, 1776, seven o'clock in the morning.

SIR: Your letter of the 26th is this moment come to hand. I have given orders and done every thing in my power to hasten up the Militia. If they are tardy in marching, if, upon their arrival at Skenesborough, they refuse to proceed to Tyonderoga, the fault is not and will not be mine.

Colonel Dayton received my orders in twenty-four hours after they left Albany: you have been advised when that was. He has not delayed in obeying them. The march from Fort Stanwix is longer, and encumbered with more difficulties than you imagine. His regiment arrived last evening at Stillwater. He is now here, but it is very doubtful whether he will proceed at all to Tyonderoga, as he halted there in consequence of the most alarming intelligence from Tryon County. If the Committee of the Convention of this State cannot procure a body of Militia to march into the western quarter, he must go back. Several of the principal Tories are gone to Sir John Johnson, who commands a body of troops and Indians destined for the Mohawk river; and the inhabitants threaten to lay down their arms unless they can be assisted with men.

A party of Militia, who arrived here last night, are this morning going in quest of a body of Tories, who are said to rendezvous to the westward of this place, with an intent to join General Carleton, or interrupt the communication.

In your letter of the 24th you mention the want of spades in such a manner as if there had been a neglect in procuring them. They are not to be had. All that the country afforded, all that I could get made, have been sent you. The turnips and potatoes cannot go unless the flour is stopped. A person is gone express to Boston for nails. Nail rods are not to be had here. I have determined to send the Militia from Fort Edward to Tryon County, if they will not march to Tyonderoga, and have ordered Dayton's to proceed with all despatch.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

Where is Colonel Lewis, for whom I have so long ago written to you? Yauncey's return, mentioned in yours of the 24th, was not enclosed.

RICHARD STOCKTON TO ABRAHAM CLARK.

Saratoga, October 28, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Before I left Philadelphia Congress appointed a committee, consisting of one member from each State, to devise ways and means for furnishing the army with clothing, &c. As the member appointed for New-Jersey, I laid the resolution before our Legislature, then sitting at Princeton, and recommended to them the great importance of their appointing persons in every County. They were pleased to take up the matter with that zeal which the nature of it required, and determined to take a recess that they might, in their own persons, the more effectually and speedily execute the business. I hope, therefore, that already a considerable quantity of shoes and stockings at least, may be provided, and that you will take immediate order for the sending a parcel to our regiments who are in this quarter. Colonel Dayton's regiment is ordered from Fort Stanwix to Tyonderoga. The Colonel and Major Barber came here last evening, and the regiment is now within a few miles of this place, marching with cheerfulness, but great part of the men barefooted and barelegged. My heart melts with compassion for my brave countrymen who are thus venturing their lives in the publick service, and yet are so distressed. There is not a single shoe or stocking to be had in this part of the world, or I would ride a hundred miles through the woods and purchase them with my own money; for you'll consider that the weather here must be very different from that in New-Jersey: it is very cold now I assure you. For God's sake, my dear sir, upon the receipt of this, collect all the shoes and stockings you can, and send them off for Albany in light wagons; a couple of two-horse wagons will bring a great many, which may be distributed among our several regiments who will be all together at Tyonderoga in a few days. If any breeches and waistcoats be ready, send them along; but do not wait for them if the shoes and stockings are ready and the others not.

We have despatches from General Gates this morning, informing that he hourly expects to be attacked by the enemy; but our works are very strong, and a boom thrown across the water from Tyconderoga to Mount Independence, to prevent the enemy's shipping from getting below us. Therefore, I trust, with the blessing of Almighty God, that we shall disappoint their wicked and sanguinary purposes. But shall the brave troops from New-Jersey stand in the lines half-leg deep in snow, without shoes or stockings? God forbid! I shall empty my portmanteau of the stockings I have for my own use on this journey, excepting a pair to take me home; but this is a drop of water in the ocean.

In the utmost haste, I am, with much esteem, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

RICH'D STOCKTON.

To Abraham Clark, Esq.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skeenesborough, October 28, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I send you one hundred boards and eighty barrels of flour by the Militia. It is Colonel Yates's orders from General Schuyler, that all the boats I send from this place to Fort Ann must be loaded with flour. I would be glad if the General would let me know, by the first opportunity, whether he would have the flour forwarded to Ticonderoga or have it left at this place, and which of the two must be brought from Fort Ann first, the boards or the flour.

I would be very glad if the General would please to send me up some musket-balls. As to powder, I have plenty.

This evening I expect that there will be one hundred and eighty men in of Colonel Robinson's regiment, from New-England.

Yesterday I sent off a number of boats to Fort Ann to bring down two regiments of Militia which are out of Albany County. I shall want some more boats to send off the Militia as fast as they arrive. General Schuyler has ordered, also, that all the cattle must be brought to this place and killed here, and forwarded to Ticonderoga in quarters; which we are doing as fast as possible.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
CORN'S WYNKOOP.

To Major-General Gates.

The General will see by my return that I am weak of men.

COLONEL WYNKOOP TO GENERAL GATES.

Skeenesborough, October 28, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I have sent twelve batteaus to Fort Ann in order to bring down two or three regiments of Militia from that place, with their baggage, and also a quantity of flour. I have been obliged to have the remainder of the batteaus that was here, dragged over and put into Wood Creek.

I would be very glad if the General would please to send me some more boats, as I have now but two boats left, that I might be able to forward the troops as fast as they arrive.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
CORN'S WYNKOOP.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 28, 1776.

SIR: After having with the greatest impatience waited the arrival of the whale-boats and vessels that were to have been employed in the Long-Island expedition, I find myself at length disappointed, Colonel McIntosh having marched two of the regiments that were allotted for the purpose to Head-Quarters; so that the original plan must of necessity fall through, as the force we have left is inadequate to the undertaking. Colonel Richmond's regiment has only three hundred men, and my detachment, together with part of Colonel Smith's regiment that have joined me, amount to about two hundred. The term of enlistment for Colonel Richmond's regiment will be elapsed in ten days. However, we will not be quite disappointed, but will make an attempt to disperse the recruits inlisting for General Howe, on Long-Island. If our orders extended to burning the hay, grain, and whatsoever we conceived might be of advantage to the enemy, I imagine we might distress them a little; but this Governour Trumbull will not authorize Colonel Richmond, to whom he has given the command, to execute. I had not the least idea of Colonel McIntosh's being recalled until my arrival at this place. If the weather permits, I fancy we shall be to-morrow night on Long-Island, though I don't think, under the restrictions laid on us, any thing of great consequence can be achieved. I should have waited your Excellency's orders at this place, had I not received express ones from Governour Trumbull to repair to Long-Island. Among the few of Colonel Smith's regiment that have joined me, there are almost as many officers as men, and about twenty volunteers; some of whom I have employed to collect men on the east end of Long-Island. Our success at landing will be communicated to your Excellency as soon as effected.

The enclosed is a copy of an order from Governour Tryon to the people of Suffolk County. I hope we shall be time enough to prevent its effects. The original I have not yet been able to lay my hands upon.

I have some reason to believe the Militia in general will join us on landing; they have been so much harassed and imposed upon by the enemy, that they now wish to throw off the yoke.

I remain your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Newport, October 28, 1776.

By a gentleman who was a passenger in a brig belonging to this place, from London to Barbadoes, commanded by one Daniel Cornell, we are informed that when he left Barbadoes, the brig was taking in a freight there for supplying the enemy at Quebeck; and that Captain Cornell had purchased six swivel-guns to prevent (as he expressed it) his being captured by an American Rebel. As he was born and has a family within this State, it is hoped he will fall into the hands of some of our cruisers, and meet a just reward.

The Tories on Long-Island and in New-York begin to be sick of their new lords and masters; one who made his escape out of the city a few days past, said the enemy called the friends to liberty only "Rebels;" but the Tories they called, "damned Traitors and scoundrels." The person who gave this account was one suspected of being a Tory.

REV. WILLIAM GORDON TO GENERAL GATES.

Copy of a Letter intended to have been forwarded the last Monday, (October 28,) but happened to be too late for the post:

Jamaica Plain, October 28, 1776.

FRIEND GATES AND DEAR GENERAL: Whether the enemy may attack you before the receipt of this, is uncertain; but should it happen, hope you will be helped to give them such a drubbing as will be an ample revenge on them for having destroyed our fleet. We got home safe the last Friday; stayed at King's Bridge only from Saturday to Monday morning, there being no enjoyment of friends. We are looking out for great and important news. God, of his infinite mercy, grant that it may be good! A vessel left Statia this day three weeks. The Captain says that the Governour helped him to get every thing he wanted, and just before he sailed sent for him and told him that he knew the movements of the French, and was certain that by that time they had declared war against Great Britain, with which he might acquaint his friends. Hope the Governour has not been out in his conjecture.

Adieu. In great haste, but willing to send you an early line. Respects to your suite. Your affectionate friend,

WM. GORDON.

Jamaica Plain, November 2, 1776.

MY DEAR FRIEND: You will see by the above how good I meant to have been. Having heard nothing certain from your quarter, conclude that you have had your full time to make all wonted preparations against the enemy. God give you an occasion of sending us most excellent news from Ty. What we have from the neighbourhood of King's Bridge has been good hitherto, and the success we have had in several skirmishes must tend to sicken the Howites. The Committee from our Court have informed you, I apprehend, that Providence has sent us nails for the barracks. The linens and woollens designed for Quebeck were the property of my particular friends. I rejoice in the capture, but wish the property had belonged to others. Our Court, I am in great hopes, will exert themselves nobly in supporting the common cause in this critical moment. They are choosing a Committee of War. To make you laugh, I must mention that there were several votes for your humble servant; but the mistake was not general. I should have used a harder word, would it not have seemed ungrateful. The universal opinion at Statia was, there was or would be soon a French war. A French vessel arrived this week at Boston. The Captain says that the English Ambassador had demanded of the French Minister for what they were making such great armaments, and required a categorical answer; which was returned in the following words, "For the King's pleasure." It merits confirmation. Should write more, but you may perhaps fail of receiving this. May Heaven prosper and bless you! Mrs. G. joins in respects. Remember to suite, General Sinclair (his brother-in-law, of Boston, inquired after him on the Thursday, and was glad to hear of his welfare,) Arnold, Brckett, Colonel Sullivan, Waine, De Hass, &c., (I may have spelt the names wrong, but you will guess my meaning.) My brethren Hitchcock and Tenent, (I was at Mr. Tenent's house on my return, and all were well,) are entitled to affectionate regards as fellow parsons.

Adieu once more. The next, I trust, will be a letter of congratulation from your humble servant and sincere friend,

WM. GORDON.

To General Gates.

MEMORIAL OF ADAM BABCOCK.

To the honourable the Governour and Council of Safety of the State of CONNECTICUT:

The Memorial of ADAM BABCOCK, of NEW-HAVEN, in said State, humbly sheweth:

That your Honours' memorialist hath suffered great and heavy losses by having a brigantine of upwards one of hundred and forty tons, and a sloop of upwards of one hundred tons burthen, both fine vessels, together with their cargoes of oil, captured by two British men-of-war, in the West-Indies, the summer past, as they were returning home from the coast of Brazil, being solely the property of your memorialist, whereby he is much injured in his fortune, and being abstracted from carrying on trade and business as heretofore, for reasons well known to your Honours, and no way left of retrieving those losses but by reprisals on the trade of those people who have thus despoiled him of a great part of his property; he therefore humbly prays your Honours to grant him leave to purchase at your Honours' furnace, in Salsbury, fourteen cannon, viz: eight six-pounders and six four-pounders, and also twelve swivel-guns, for the purpose of arming and equipping a private vessel of war, to cruise against the enemies of the United States of America. And your memorialist, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

ADAM BABCOCK.

Hew-Haven, October 28, 1776.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO J. PAUL JONES.

Providence, October 28, 1776.

SIR: I received your disagreeable letter, and you are hereby directed to go immediately to Newport with the Alfred; and, if you think the Hamden will not do for the cruise, Captain Hacker and the whole of the Hamden's crew are to take the Providence in her room, and follow the former directions. If I can, will be at Newport to-morrow.

I am your friend,

ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To John P. Jones, Commander of the Alfred.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED DUBLIN, OCTOBER 29, 1776.

His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant has informed the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, by letter of the 24th instant, that in consequence of his application to the Lords of the Admiralty, they have ordered three sloops of war and an armed cutter to cruise in the Channel, for the protection of the trade of this Kingdom, and to keep a look-out for the American privateers that of late made their appearance on these coasts.

AMOS GARRETT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Swan Creek, October 29, 1776.

SIR: Captain Holland's company marched last Wednesday. One of the gentlemen that assisted me was pretty fortunate in procuring blankets. The whole company was well equipped therewith, and have remaining now in store at Susquehannah Ferry fifty-three, with the remainder of the cartouch-boxes and knapsacks. They were all equipped with good guns, and all fixed with bayonets but two or three, though very few scabbards; but these were to be got in Philadelphia. All the exertion in my power was made, and by the assistance of some bayonets I had by me and my smith to fit them, believe the guns will answer, being mostly old, tried guns. I have near one hundred and fifty yards of linen. They took some of that article, on being informed they were to have barracks; but wish they may not want it. I paid the Captain near fifty pounds for their subsistence to Philadelphia, and have still a little left; the whole account I will render as soon as I can get in one of the gentlemen's accounts that assisted me. I shall wait your order what to do with the remaining stores and money in my hands; and am, sir, your humble servant,

AMOS GARRETT.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., President of the Council of Safety.

PETITION OF CASTLEHAVEN COMPANY.

To the Honourable Convention of MARYLAND:

The humble Petition of a majority of CASTLEHAVEN Company sheweth:

That your petitioners have laboured under repeated impositions from their Captain, Joseph Byers, which, in their opinion, render him unworthy of the office which his country has entrusted in his hands; and we knowing of no other justifiable method of redress than presenting our petition, we hope and trust that the honourable Convention will either remove him from his captaincy or oblige him to appear before you, that your petitioners may have an opportunity of proving their accusations against him, which, we doubt not, are of such a nature that the moment they are heard they will be judged sufficient cause for removal. To mention some of our accusations to your Honours which we charge him with, is, we were called on duty, when he, our said Captain, provided for us thirty-four pounds of pork, three bushels of Indian corn-meal, as also thirty-six pounds of bacon, thirty-three pounds of pork, and three gallons of rum, got from Captain John Tripp; and as some of the neighbouring gentlemen was so good as to bestow their charity upon us, by giving us sundry provisions, that out of the above provisions we made use of only thirty-six pounds of pork, twelve small loaves of bread, and three gallons of rum, the remainder of the provisions our Captain carried home and converted to his own use, and charged us with the whole, which charge was five pounds ten shillings, common money, so that he stopped out of our wages and rations four shillings from each officer, and two shillings from each private. When we found ourselves thus treated with, we complained to our Field officers, which caused him to repay to each officer three shillings and sixpence, and eighteen pence to each private. It was by mere chance that we got possession of a true account of the provisions found, made use of, and carried away; such a chance as we cannot expect to meet with every time we are thus used; which gives us great reason to believe that we shall never be honestly dealt with by a man that no trust can be reposed in, and that requires a constant overlooking in order to have justice done. He has also given orders to his non-commissioned officers that for the smallest offence to knock down any man belonging to his company, and he will support him in it, contrary, as we view it, to the military resolves of Convention. These, and sundry other threats and usages, gives uneasiness to your petitioners.

Till we have the determination of your honourable body, we shall continue to obey our Captain as we have hitherto done; but, as we are extremely unhappy in our present situation, we pray for a speedy decision. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray. Signed by Dorchester County, Cambridge, October 21, 1776.

I hereby certify that, some time last summer a certain Stanly Cook, with four or five others, complained to me, as one of their Field officers, against Captain Joseph Byers. They said that, being called out on duty with others of Captain Byers's company, that he, Captain Byers, purchased provisions from some of the neighbours for the use of the company, but being discharged in a short time, and receiving provisions from several of the inhabitants that were kind enough to make no charge against them, they made use of very little of that purchased by Captain Byers; and that, when he was going to pay them their wages, wanted to stop a shilling per day out of each man's pay for the provisions he alleged he had found them, great part of which Stanly Cook said he could prove Captain Byers put to his own private use. I told them I would speak to Captain Byers, and have the matter settled. Some time after, I saw Captain Byers and Stanly Cook together. I acquainted him of the charge made against him, upon which he said, if he had done wrong it was for want of knowing better, and that he was ready to settle in any manner that I, or any other of the Field officers, would advise him to. He said there was some Indian meal, and I think some pork, that his wife delivered out; the quantity he could not prove, therefore would make no account of it. There was likewise some bacon he had purchased of Captain John Trippe, which he said he had then by him, and desired to know what he should do with it. I told him to sell it, and apply the money towards paying off his men, which he promised to do. I then asked Stanly Cook, as he seemed to be the active person, if the company would be willing and satisfied to allow the remainder of Captain Byers's account, which was rum and some other article. He said he believed they would; upon which I thought the matter would be settled.

THOM. MUSE.

TO ALL PERSONS WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN: I, the subscriber, to the best of my knowledge and remembrance, on a Monday in March, 1776, in my way home called in at the house of Mr. William Bennetts, he being not present. His wife and self fell in discourse how the people called to Cook's Point, on account of the man-of-war, would get provisions. She says she had sent, or they had from them a certain quantity of meat, and, as near as possibly can remember, the quantity she mentioned was fifteen pounds. Whether she spoke of the quantity by imagination or trial of weights cannot tell, for do not remember either was mentioned. Before God and the world, to the best of my knowledge and remembrance give the above out for as true testimony, as if my hand was on the book, and mouth to kiss it.

REV. JACOB DUCHE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 30, 1776.]

Tuesday, October 29, 1776.

Mr. Duché presents his respectful compliments to Mr. Hancock, and begs him to acquaint the honourable Congress that he is much obliged to them for the kind manner in which they have expressed their approbation of his services. As he accepted their appointment from motives perfectly disinterested, he requests Mr. Hancock to put the one hundred and fifty dollars into the hands of the Board of War, or of any other Board he may think proper, to be applied by them to the relief of the widows and children of such of the Pennsylvania officers as have fallen in battle in the service of his country.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

DR. SHIPPEN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Newark, October 29, 1776.

MY DEAR AND HONOURABLE SIR: The winter approaches, the sick will suffer much, nay, will perish, unless timely care is paid to provide for them proper winter apartments. The Congress have desired me to attend to those sick that are on this side of Hudson's river; but Dr. Morgan has directed his officers to follow his directions till they receive written orders from him or your Excellency to the contrary. I pray you will relieve me from my present disagreeable suspense, and direct whether I am to superintend and provide for all the sick on this side, as I think the Congress intend, or only those of the Flying-Camp and Militia in Jersey, which I was first appointed for. Your speedy answer and orders will be thankfully received and punctually obeyed by your obedient servant, .

W. SHIPPEN.

To His Excellency General Washington, White-Plains.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Lee, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Colonel Lasher burnt the barracks yesterday morning, three o'clock; he left all the cannon in the fort. I went out to examine the ground, and found between two and three hundred stand of small-arms (that were out of repair) about two miles beyond King's Bridge, a great number of spears, shot, shells, &c., too numerous to mention. I directed all the wagons on the other side to be employed in getting the stores away; and expect to get it completed this morning. I forgot to mention five tons of bar-iron that was left. I am sorry the barracks were not left standing a few days longer; it would have given us an opportunity to have got off some of the boards.

I think Fort Independence might have kept the enemy at bay for several days, but the troops here and on the other side are so much fatigued that it must have been a work of time.

Colonel Magaw showed me a letter from Colonel Reed, ordering the Rangers to march and join the army. Major Coburn was wounded in the Sunday action. Colonel Magaw says the Rangers are the only security to his lines. By keeping out constant patroles, their acquaintance with the ground enables them to discover the enemy's motions in every quarter. The Colonel petitions very hard for their stay. I told him I would send an express to learn your Excellency's further pleasure. The Colonel thinks if the Rangers leave him, he must draw the garrison in from the lines. That would be a pity, as the redoubt is not yet in any great forwardness. From the Sunday affair I am more fully convinced that we can prevent any ships from stopping the communication.

I have forwarded eighty thousand musket-cartridges more, under the care of a subaltern's guard commanded by Lieutenant Pemberton, of Colonel Ralling's regiment.

This moment heard of the action of yesterday. Can learn no particulars. God grant you protection and success.

Colonel Crawford says he expects the action to be renewed this morning. I hope to be commanded wherever I can be the most useful.

I am, dear General, your most obedient and very humble servant,

N. GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, Esq., at White-Plains.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Lee, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclosed is an estimate made of the provisions and provender necessary to be laid in at the different posts between this and Philadelphia, to form a communication, and for the support of the troops passing and repassing from the different States.

Your Excellency will please to examine it, and signify your pleasure. Should the estimate be larger than is necessary for the consumption of the army, very little or no loss can arise, as the articles will be laid in at a season when the prices of things are at the lowest rates; and the situations will admit of an easy transportation to market by water.

The ships have fallen down the North River, and the troops which advanced upon Harlem Plains, and on the hill where the Monday action was, have drawn within their lines again.

I received the prisoners taken, and have forwarded them to Philadelphia. I enclose you a return of the troops at this post, who are chiefly raw and undisciplined.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, at White-Plains.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
[Read October 31, 1776.]

White-Plains, October 29, 1776.

SIR: The situation of our affairs not permitting his Excellency to write himself, I have it in charge to inform you that on yesterday morning, about ten o'clock, the enemy appeared in several large columns in our front, and, from their first movements, seemed as if they meant an attack there. However, halting for a little time, their main body filed off to our left, and presently began a most severe and incessant cannonade at a part of our troops who had taken post on a hill with a view of throwing up some lines. At the same time they advanced in two divisions, and, after a smart engagement for about a quarter of an hour, obliged our men to give way. Our loss is not certainly known, but from conjecture is between four and five hundred in killed, wounded, and missing. What theirs was we have not heard. After gaining the hill, (upon which they are intrenching,) and leaving a sufficient number of men and artillery to prevent our repossessing it, they proceeded to advance by our left, and, as far as I can discover, their posts or encampments now form nearly a semicircle. It is evident their design is to get in our rear, according to their original plan. Every measure is taking to prevent them; but the removal of our baggage, &c., is attended with infinite difficulty and delays. Our post, from its situation, is not so advantageous as could be wished, and was only intended as temporary and occasional, till the stores belonging to the army, which had been deposited here, could be removed. The enemy coming on so suddenly has distressed us much. They are now close at hand, and most probably will, in a little time, commence their second attack. We expect it every hour. Perhaps it is beginning: I have just heard the report of some cannon.*

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROB. H. HARRISON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 25, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

The guards are to be continued as settled the last evening, till further orders; and the Brigade-Majors to be very careful that the guards are properly relieved.

The General most earnestly recommends to all Commanding Officers of brigades and regiments to extend their care to the wagons which they have or may employ, and to dismiss them as soon as they have brought their baggage and have been refreshed.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 26, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

Captain Ebenezer Huntington is to assist the Adjutant-General in regulating the duties and details of General Heath's Division till further orders.

An Aid-de-Camp from each Major-General is to attend at Head-Quarters at twelve o'clock every day, to receive the general orders. He is to see that the Brigade-Majors execute them in the division.

An Orderly-Sergeant from each brigade of General Spencer's Division to attend at Head-Quarters every day; to bring his provision with him, and not to go away till regularly relieved.

Upon the due regulation and management of the wagons, the health and safety of the army entirely depends; and it will be impossible for the Quartermaster-General to have

* October 29, 1776.—The British began to throw up some small works on the hill, of which they had got possession. The Americans were drawing back; and a position was to be taken on the high strong grounds, before in the rear of a part of the army. The left of General Heath's division was not to move; but the remainder of his division, and all the other divisions of the army, were to fall back and form, nearly east and west. About this time, Colonel Lasher, who belonged to General Heath's division, and who had been left with his regiment to garrison Fort Independence near King's Bridge, sent an express, who passed the enemy in the night, to know what he should do, the regiment growing weak and sickly. General Heath applied to the Commander-in-Chief, to know his pleasure, who directed that the Colonel should give notice to Colonel Magaw, who commanded at Fort Washington, that he might take away the cannon, stores, &c., and that Colonel Lasher, after destroying the barracks, huts, &c., should join the army, which he soon effected. This day three prisoners were sent in, and the Americans were now throwing up some strong works on the high grounds.—Heath.

any regularity if officers of the army undertake to seize wagons, and compel them to go where they please. The General therefore absolutely forbids any officer or soldier taking a wagon by his own authority, and, more especially, stopping them when sent on other services, as it is easy to see that the greatest confusion must, in that case, ensue. When teams are wanted, application must be made to the Quartermaster-General or his Deputy; and every brigade or regiment must wait till the service admits their having them in that channel. The commanding officers of regiments are also required to appoint some spirited, resolute officer to attend the loading of the wagons, and prevent their being filled with lumber and improper articles. Tents and the proper baggage of the regiment are only to be put into the wagons. All others must be left behind; and the General calls upon the General Officers and commanding officers of regiments to set an example to the soldiers.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 27, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

Lieutenant Sickles, of General Scott's Brigade, tried by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Holman was President, and convicted of "disobeying general orders, by loading a wagon with goods not the proper baggage of the regiment, and also, when charged therewith, of behaving in a scandalous, infamous manner, unbecoming an officer and the gentleman," the Court sentenced him to be cashiered. The General approves the sentence, and orders him to be dismissed the service. He also directs that he leave the army immediately.

The General, observing that the army seems unacquainted with the enemy's Horse, and that when any parties meet with them, they do not oppose them with the same alacrity which they show in other cases, thinks it necessary to inform the officers and soldiers that in such a broken country, full of stone walls, there is no enemy more to be despised, as they cannot leave the road; so that any party attacking them may be always sure of doing it to advantage, by taking post in the woods by the roads, or along the stone walls, where they will not venture to follow them. And as an encouragement to any brave parties who will endeavour to surprise some of them, the General offers one hundred dollars for every Trooper, with his horse and accoutrements, which shall be brought in, and so in proportion for any part, to be divided according to the rank and pay of the party.

The Picket Guard to be reinforced this evening with a regiment from each division. They are to parade at five o'clock this evening, near Head-Quarters. The eldest Colonel to command the whole, and to come to Head-Quarters for orders before they march off.

The constant beating of drums on all occasions is very improper. There should be no drum but on the parade and main guard. All fatigue parties to march with the fife; and no drum to beat, on any account, after retreat beating, but by special order.

John Cawley and Michael McDaniel, of Colonel Hazlett's Regiment, tried by the Court-Martial whereof Colonel Holman was President, for "robbing Isaiah Rider," are both acquitted. The General approves the sentence, and orders them to be discharged.

James Daniel, of Captain Horton's Company, Colonel Ritzema's Regiment, convicted by the same Court-Martial, is ordered to receive thirty-nine lashes and forfeit two months' pay. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed at the usual time and place.

William Turner and Daniel Shute are appointed Aids-de-Camp to General Lincoln, and are to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

The Court of Inquiry on Colonel Tyler having reported that there is no sufficient reason for the appointment of a Court-Martial on his conduct, the General orders him to be released from his arrest.

Regimental Courts-Martial to be formed immediately, for the trial of prisoners charged with crimes under their cognizance.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 28, 1776.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 29, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

John Eustace, Esq., appointed Aid-de-Camp to General Lee; and Adjutant Bradford, of Colonel Hitchcock's Regiment, is appointed temporary Aid-de-Camp.

The representation made of Colonel Webb's Regiment, yesterday, by General McDougall, appearing to be a mistake, and that they kept the post assigned them, notwithstanding a severe cannonade, the General takes the first opportunity to make it known, to prevent any unfavourable impression.

Until the guards are otherwise fixed, every division is to mount guard opposite to their posts, according to the situation of the ground.

Alexander Scammell, Esq., appointed Assistant to the Adjutant-General for General Lee's Division.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN ANNAPOLIS, DATED WHITE-PLAINS, OCTOBER 29, 1776.

I now snatch an opportunity by the post of informing you that General McDougall's brigade, of which the Maryland Regulars is a part, having laid in the wood for three nights, two miles from this place, and to the right of the main body as a covering party, was ordered to advance along the road about a mile, near a place called the Mile-Stone, and there take post, which was accordingly done. The brigade was there joined by Hazlett's Delaware battalion and a small regiment of Militia from Connecticut. They were no sooner formed than the enemy began a heavy cannonade from a great number of field-pieces advantageously disposed on several rising grounds, which was answered by the only two cannon which attended our brigade, little or no execution being done on either side, till Colonel Smallwood, with the Marylanders, was ordered to march down the hill and attack the enemy, which they did; and a smart contest ensued, in which the enemy gave way, but rallying again, and attacking the right of the brigade, composed of the Militia aforesaid, they got the advantage, and their situation being such, and being drawn up in a heavy column, only our regiment and another (Ritzema's) could come in for any part of the action. Those two brave regiments stood a very heavy fire of their artillery and musketry for about half an hour, when the whole brigade, being vastly outnumbered, and cramped in respect of ground, was obliged to retreat, a reinforcement under General Putnam not being able to get up in time to give the necessary assistance. This reinforcement was General Beall's brigade. The enemy now occupy the ground where we took post yesterday, and are a mile from our lines at the White-Plains. Colonel Smallwood staid upon the place of action some time after the retreat had begun, and received two wounds, one a flesh wound on his hip, the other through his arm; he is, however, in good spirits, and I hope will soon be in a condition to take the field again. All our officers and men behaved with their usual bravery. We have lost of our regiment, Captain Bracco, killed in the retreat; Sergeants Belt and Westbay, killed. Captain Scott is mortally wounded; indeed I fear he is dead at this moment; Lieutenant Goldsmith badly wounded in the leg, and Lieutenant Waters's leg broke to pieces. As near as I can guess, our regiment has near forty killed, wounded, and missing.

The enemy form a considerable body near to our main body, and I expect every moment to see them attack.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your express did not call yesterday, or I overlooked him in the hurry of the day. If I had seen him I should have informed you that the cannonade you heard was at Mount Washington, and not at this place. Two frigates came up and anchored a little below the forts to stop the passage at Burdett's Ferry; but one of them soon got such a dose from a battery of two eighteen-pounders that she was obliged to cut and run, having received twenty-six shot through her hull. She was towed off by her own boats and those of her consort, with pumps constantly going. They at the same time attacked our lines at Harlem Heights, but were repulsed.

Yesterday morning we received information that the main body of the enemy were moving towards us. We made every suitable disposition to give them a suitable reception. They at first bent their course towards our centre, in the little village at the Plains, but finding our works stronger than they expected, they filed off towards our right, and made their attack upon a hill which overlooks the village, and on which we had posted a few regiments. As our men were without cover, they could not withstand a very heavy fire of Artillery followed by a large body of Infantry; they however made as good a defence as could be expected, and came off without much loss.

The enemy after this remained quiet, only extending themselves about a mile over towards the North River. It is a little extraordinary that this move should be made in our rear. Lord Stirling is detached ahead of them to get possession of the passes among the hills, and General Parsons has taken post near the head of Rye Pond, which secures the pass in our front. From the situation of the two armies, something of considerable import must turn up in a few days. Except we can get a vast superiority of ground, our raw troops are not a match for their disciplined soldiers, especially when backed by constant fire of artillery.

The General presents his compliments to Mr. Livingston and yourself. He begs you will say to him that he received a letter from him yesterday, which he would have answered, but he hopes the urgency of the time will be a sufficient excuse.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To William Duer, Esq., of the Committee of Correspondence, Fishkill.

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.
Fort Montgomery, October 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to a resolve of the Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, I send you Silvanus Scowfield, cooper in Captain Darling's company, and Sergeant Sickles with nineteen others belonging to this garrison, which is all the coopers we have at this place except three or four, which is drafted to do duty with the train of artillery. But if you are in want of any more coopers, I suppose I can supply you, as I have not got a return of the coopers at the fort near Peekskill and Fort Constitution; but I expect them soon, as I have ordered it to be made and sent to me. Therefore you'll be pleased to let me know if those I now send be sufficient; if not, I will send those at the other posts.

I think it my duty to inform you at this time, when you are about making out the arrangement of the four regiments to be raised in the State of New-York, that Lieutenant Hasbrouck, of Captain Bellknap's company, and Lieutenant Parsons, of Captain Swartwout's company, both of the Second New-York Regiment, were ordered under an arrest, and tried by a General Court-Martial. Lieutenant Hasbrouck was honourably acquitted, and Lieutenant Parsons, found guilty of the charge laid against him, was dismissed the service. In making out the new arrangement, I hope the rest of the officers of the Second New-York Regiment, whereof I was appointed Colonel, will not be forgot.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To the President of the honourable Convention of the State of New-York, Fishkill.

PETRUS VAN GAASBECK TO WILLIAM DUER.

Manor Livingston, October 29, 1776.

SIR: I herewith send you enclosed the muster-roll, agreeable to the resolve of Convention passed the 9th instant. Also enclose a letter from Colonel Peter R. Livingston, in which he makes mention that I have engaged cartouch-boxes for all my men. If convenient, beg you will send me so much money as to pay for them. Please to give me an answer to the Colonel's letter of what relates to the company.

I have been upon duty for some days, by order of our Committee. I now wait your orders. Here keeps a large number concealed in the woods in this district, and upon the borders of Dutchess.

I should be exceeding glad if you think proper to appoint the gentleman mentioned in the Colonel's letter as Second Lieutenant.

In haste, am, sir, your very humble servant,

PETRUS VAN GAASBECK.

To William Duer, Esq., Fishkill.

PETER R. LIVINGSTON TO WILLIAM DUER.

Manor Livingston, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Captain Gaasbeck has got his company full, and mustered the 19th instant. He has been upon duty by order of our Committee here since. He now waits your orders; but would be very glad if you would be pleased to get Lieutenant Samuel J. Ten Broeck appointed his Second Lieutenant, as he finds the want of another officer, having occasion often to divide his company into three parties. The Committee of this district will send you down a list of all our bad people in a little time. Captain Gaasbeck has engaged cartouch-boxes for all his men, at fourteen shillings apiece, which they are willing to pay for. If he should want a little money, please to help him to it, for the use of his company.

I have wrote to Convention concerning the flour I have sent to Albany. Captain Jansen is gone to Barington for the boards he bought, and to purchase grain and teams.

Am, sir, your very humble servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To William Duer, Esq., Fishkill.

PETER R. LIVINGSTON TO PIERRE VAN CORTLANDT.

Manor Livingston, October 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Finding, on my arrival here, the demand for flour for the Northern department still increasing, thought it most prudent to send up to Mr. Avery all the flour that was in the mills about this place, which, together with what goes from Esopus, will make about nine hundred barrels, two hundred of which was bought by Mr. Schenck of Captain Hoffman, and seventy odd of Mr. Matthew Cantine. The rest were purchased by a clerk of Mr. Avery and myself, and were intended for Peekskill, had not the pressing demand from Albany made it necessary to send it there. I purpose going to Albany this week to consult further with Mr. Avery, whether it will be most for the good of the service to send what will be ready by the return of the sloops to Peekskill or to Albany.

Have sent Captain Jansen into New-England to send down the boards he has bought there, and to purchase grain and teams, in order to forward the service all in my power. Shall do myself the honour to write you from Albany.

Am, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

PETER R. LIVINGSTON.

To Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., Vice-President, Fishkill.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saratoga, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your Excellency's obliging favour of the 22d instant I had the honour to receive yesterday. I read with sensible satisfaction your judicious remarks on the Militia. I assure you they are realized in this quarter; and if General Gates was not so very importunate to have them at Tyonderoga, I should certainly dismiss many of them, as they move with much reluctance, and will neither assist in fortifying or mounting guard. Those from New-England are ordered to Tyonderoga, by the way of Skenesborough. Those from this County I have distributed in such a manner at the different posts on the communication, as to prevent any interruption from the enemy in sending on supplies, excepting near one thousand, which I have sent into Tryon County. By advices from thence we learn that the enemy meditate an attack in that quarter, and this account is corroborated by the departure of several of the principal Tories, who are gone to join the enemy. It is very probable that General Carleton may have detached a party of Indians, Tories, and Canadians, to penetrate into that part of the country, in order to embarrass and draw off our attention from him.

Enclose you copy of General Gates's last letter to me.

Your Excellency will perceive that he believes General Carleton will make an attempt upon him. I really think he cannot do it at any time this campaign in which we shall be in a better condition to receive him; but if he defers it to another, I think our works may be so strengthened, and such precautions taken, as will render it utterly impossible for almost any army to penetrate by the way of Tyonderoga; and an army that shall attempt to march from Crown Point so as to leave Tyonderoga on the right, will find itself so involved in such a variety of difficulties as are inextricable, and must prove fatal.

Every precaution your Excellency has suggested shall be taken, and not a carriage or any sustenance left for the enemy, in case our troops should be obliged to retire from Tyonderoga.

Barracks are erecting at this place, and I hope will be finished in three weeks, capable of receiving a thousand men. I propose some others on the communication, if time and circumstances will permit.

Adieu, my dear General. I am, with every wish that esteem and affection suggests, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Endorsed: Answered 4th, 1776; Receipt of his letter; those for Congress transmitted; supplies of provisions for Tyonderoga of great importance; his Excellency happy that they cannot be intercepted; no important event since last.

Ticonderoga, Saturday evening, seven o'clock, }
October 26, 1776. }

SIR: Two men, taken prisoners by a scout of the enemy's Indians the night before last, are this moment returned by permission of General Carleton, upon the same terms as those sent with General Waterbury. By every information they give, an attack may hourly be expected here. The wind is now against the enemy's fleet, as it providentially has been for this week past, and it is to be wished it may continue so until those tardy succours arrive which I have been told so long ago to expect. Where is Dayton's regiment? If they received your orders in time, their behaviour is shameful.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

HO. GATES.

To Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 29, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Mr. Evans has been sent me by the Secretary at War, to be forwarded to Canada. I expressed my doubts on the propriety of sending a flag to General Carleton, after the orders he had issued when Major Bigelow formerly went with one. However, upon further deliberation, and advising with Messrs. Stockton and Clymer, we concluded that it would be best to send Mr. Evans on to you, to be forwarded if you shall think it advisable. I have given directions to Colonel Dayton, in whose charge he is, to prevent him from seeing any thing at the different posts as he passes.

On Tuesday last, our people had the advantage in a skirmish with Major Rogers, at Mamaroneck. We took sixty prisoners. Have no accounts of the killed.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To General Gates.

COLONEL GANSEVOORT TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, October 29, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Part of the Militia from the County of Albany has been ordered to this post, and I have received orders from General Schuyler to employ them in erecting a picket fort round the General Hospital. He informs me that he has sent to Albany for axes; but being apprehensive that a sufficient quantity of them cannot be procured there, he has been pleased to refer me to your Honour for a supply of what may be wanting. If any shovels and spades can be spared from your post, I beg they may be sent for the above-mentioned purpose.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

P. GANSEVOORT.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

BENJAMIN PAYNE TO THE COMMITTEE FOR WETHERSFIELD, CONNECTICUT.

Hartford, October 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This day, about noon, passed through this town three travellers, as I am informed, on their way, as they say, to Philadelphia. Two of them call themselves French Colonels, and the other is in character of interpreter to them. The extraordinary stories they tell, and never twice alike, upon the road, when they stop, gives the greatest reason to suspect that they are impostors, and on no good design, and ought, no doubt, to be taken up and examined strictly; for if they are what they pretend to be, they will be able to show good credentials. If otherwise, it will be doing a real service to detect them. When they left here, they said they intended to lodge at Mr. Deane's this night. Perhaps that was with a view to prevent their being pursued immediately. Since they were gone, (indeed I knew nothing of them until after they were gone, as I am confined to my room,) have received a messenger from Springfield, and another from Suffield, both of which confirm the same suspicion, and all concur in this, that they ought to be questioned who and what they are.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

BENJA. PAYNE.

To the Committee of Inspection, &c., Wethersfield.

ON MONOPOLIZERS.

'Tis a common saying, "every thing has two handles," the meaning of which is, every thing is capable of being improved to a good or bad purpose. Should we suppose any thing ever so well adapted in its nature to produce good, its tendency to this end may be prevented by misapplication, as to be productive of evil. Innumerable instances might be mentioned to confirm this truth; but I shall, at present, select only one: 'tis that of commerce.

The design of this, if grounded on the principles either of reason or religion, is the good of mankind; and if managed as it ought to be, the good of mankind would be the effect. But 'tis capable, through the influence of an unreasonably private spirit, of being as great a curse as it might have been a blessing if every one sought his own in union with the weal of others. Of this we have a most striking illustration in the management of commerce in this town and land. A self-seeking spirit appears to have taken a universal spread. Those who are employed in carrying on trade seem to have totally forgot that eternal rule of righteousness, "Do to others as you would they should do to you," and to have placed as unrighteous an one in its room, "Get what you can, no matter how nor who is oppressed and distressed thereby." 'Tis, without all doubt, reasonable and fit that merchants and traders should consult their own interest, and endeavour to promote it; but, at the same time, 'tis unreasonable and shameful in them to do this in opposition to the interest of others, taking occasion, from their necessities and sufferings, to turn oppressors and extortioners, that by this means they may enrich themselves.

If the traders in this town and land had managed their commercial business with any tolerable regard to the good of the publick, as they might have done, in consistency with seeking their own profit, so far as it was fit and proper they should, being members of one and the same political body, we should have been at this day in happy circumstances, compared with what we now are. Our traders, considered in general, are, in the view of all considerate persons, as grand oppressors, and as truly and extensively so, in proportion to the sphere in which they move, as our ministerial oppressors in England; and unless they are soon restrained, either from a virtuous principle within or from some extensive power, they will be the destroyers of the poor, the widow, the fatherless, and all others whose situation in life is such as renders it impossible for them to do justice to themselves. To what can it be attributed, but the excessive love traders have to their own precious selves, that they put such an extravagant price upon the commodities they have to sell? And what an unspeakable damage has this been to the publick! It has occasioned the undue rise of every thing we depend upon for the support and comfort of life. Farmers, manufacturers in their several occupations, and labourers in all their kinds, excuse their high demands for what is wanted in their way from the still higher demands of traders for what they have to sell. In very truth, our traders, both in town and country, are the real cause of the monstrously high price of every thing; and the love of their own interest, in opposition to the interest of all others, and to the subversion of it, if they may get by it, is that shameful principle by which they are governed in this whole affair.

Monopolizers, in this day of common calamity, are our worst oppressors. Those among them, in special, are so, who, not content with the thousands they are righteously entitled to, in consequence of the prizes the commissioned vessels they own have brought in, have been unduly influenced, from an avaricious disposition, to make a monopoly of as much of the effects of those prizes as their cunning would enable them to do, that, by an excessively enhanced price, they might by and by get that from others, however poor and destitute, which both reason and revelation unite in calling the gain of oppression. These extortioners are not only sordidly unjust, but basely wanting in gratitude to that Providence which has distinguished them from most others in this day of general distress; and they ought to be restrained by Government within the limits of what is right and fit; and unless some measures are soon authoritatively come into to effect so righteous and valuable an end, it may be feared whether undesirable consequences will not take place, as a general clamour begins to be loudly heard.

PETITION OF THE TOWN OF LYNDSBOROUGH.

Lyndsbrough, October 29, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Selectmen and Committee of Safety for the town of Lyndsbrough considering our unqualifiedness in making publick defence against the enemy, being destitute of a town stock of powder, and in order to obtain the same, a town meeting has been called, and Mr. Joseph Herrick is chose to provide the same, if it can be procured, which stock, if provided, will be kept as a town stock for the use of the town, in case of any sudden emergency or alarm.

JAMES BOATWELL,

Committee of Safety for said town.

To the General Court or Committee of Safety for the Colony of New-Hampshire.

A Proclamation for a General Fast in England and Wales.

GEORGE R.

We, taking into our most serious consideration the just and necessary measures of force which we are obliged to use against our rebellious subjects in our Colonies and Provinces in North America, and putting our trust in Almighty God, that He will vouchsafe a special blessing on our arms both by sea and land, have resolved, and do, by and with the advice of our Privy Council, hereby command, that a publick fast and humiliation be observed throughout that part of our kingdom of Great Britain called England, our dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, upon Friday, the 13th day of December next; that so both we and our people may humble ourselves before Almighty God, in order to obtain pardon of our sins, and may, in the most devout and solemn manner, send up our prayers and supplications to the Divine Majesty for averting those heavy judgments which our manifold sins and provocations have most justly deserved, and for imploring His intervention and blessing speedily to deliver our loyal subjects within our Colonies and Provinces in North America from the violence, injustice, and tyranny of those daring Rebels who have assumed to themselves the exercise of arbitrary power; to open the eyes of those who have been deluded by specious falsehoods into acts of treason and rebellion; to turn the hearts of the authors of these calamities; and, finally, to restore our people in those distracted Provinces and Colonies to the happy condition of being free subjects of a free State, under which heretofore they flourished so long and prospered so much. And we do strictly charge and command, that the said publick fast be reverently and devoutly observed by all our loving subjects in England, our dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, as they tender the favour of Almighty God, and would avoid his wrath and indignation, and upon pain of such punishment as we may justly inflict upon all such as contemn and neglect the performance of so religious a duty. And for the better and more orderly solemnizing the same, we have given directions to the most reverend the Archbishops and the right reverend the Bishops of England to compose a form of prayer suitable to this occasion, to be used in all churches, chapels, and places of publick worship, and to take care the same be timely dispersed throughout their respective dioceses.

Given at our Court of St. James's, the thirtieth day of October, one thousand seven hundred and seventy-six, in the seventeenth year of our reign.

God save the King!*

A Proclamation for a General Fast in Scotland.

GEORGE R.

Our will is, therefore, and we charge, that incontinent this our proclamation seen, ye pass to the Market Cross of Edinburgh, and all other places needful, and there, in our name and authority, make publication hereof, that none pretend ignorance. * Mr. BURKE's remarks on the foregoing Proclamation, of October 30, 1776.

Mr. Burke, in the House of Commons, speaking on the American contest, in which he was severe against the Ministry, said:

"That, after having been massacred, first by the Hessians, and then by the lawyers, they now talked of a revival of the acts that had been complained of seven years ago. After burning their towns, and ruining their commerce, the Minister cries out, 'Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' But what sort of rest? You shall have magistrates not of your own choosing; taxes without your assent; and laws made for you in England." He complained bitterly of some expressions in the proclamation for the general fast. He said the purposes of religion were to be inverted; for we were to go to church in a most impious manner, to accuse our American brethren of being deluded into acts of treason by specious falsehoods. This he condemned as blasphemous, and converting the house of God into the tabernacle of Satan. Here he was called to order, but afterwards proceeded, and justified the resistance of the Americans. He also made Administration accountable for all the blood that had been shed, and all the horrors of war: those were the sins we were to atone for, and to deprecate the wrath of Heaven by a general fast; and surely no people ever had more reason to humble themselves before God. He spoke with great vehemence above an hour.

bailiffs of regalities, and their clerks, whom we ordain to see the same published. And we appoint them to send doubles hereof to the several paroch kirks within their bounds, that, upon the Lord's Day immediately preceding the day above mentioned, the same may be published and read from the pulpits immediately after divine service.

CAPTAIN COOKE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At Sea, ship Defence, October 30, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: On the 4th of this instant, I wrote you by Captains Brown and Walker, who I sent in with a snow and sloop taken off St. Augustine, which I hope have got safe in. I flattered myself at that time that you would have heard from me sooner. I this day have taken a small schooner with forty hogsheads rum, three hogsheads sugar, one hundred weight coffee, a few barrels limes, &c., from Dominica by her clearance bound to Newfoundland, but have reason to believe the Captain of her intended to New-York, to supply the Ministerial army. He gives me information of two brigs and three schooners to sail from Dominica in a day or two with rum, sugar, and coffee, for New-York or Halifax. I shall endeavour to be in their way, and hope you'll be no way uneasy should I stay rather longer out than you might expect.

I have spoke a schooner from Charlestown for Cape Nichola, and yesterday spoke a French ship from Cape Nichola bound for France. We have spoke every thing we have seen but one schooner, which we did not attempt, being in chase of a French ship, which gives me great reason to think our ship sails fast.

Our ship's company keeps their health extremely well; and have the pleasure to inform you we are all well satisfied, and that the greatest harmony subsists between us. I hope you will pardon the freedom I here use, being a young officer in this service, in pointing out to you those officers under my command that is deserving of appointments; but I should in every degree think myself blameable to my country, should I not mention such to you: Mr. Auchenlick and Mr. Burnell, my two Lieutenants, from every circumstance since with me, I find them to be experienced and brave officers, have been a considerable time in the British navy, and from every thing I can observe, hath entered into our service entirely from principle. I have likewise occasion to mention Mr. Joseph Smith, Second Lieutenant of Marines on board, who has behaved extremely well. From those circumstances they hope for your favour at the time of appointments in the country service.

I am, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

GEO. COOKE.

To the honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

P. S. I have enclosed you a list of all the officers and men belonging to the ship. I would have transmitted sooner, but it was not in my power.

G. C.

At Sea, ship Defence, October 30, 1776.

HONoured SIR AND MOST WORTHY FRIEND: From some of your last expressions to me that you expected to hear from me often, and the pleasure it gives me to write to you, shall trouble you in reading my scrawls. I wrote you on the 4th instant by Captain Walker, in a prize sloop, and the same day sent away a snow, which I hope both have got safe into the port of Annapolis.

Yesterday, at 4 p. m., took a small schooner with forty hogsheads rum, and three hogsheads sugar, one hundred weight coffee, a few barrels limes, &c., from Dominica, cleared out for Newfoundland; but from what the Captain said, that he intended for America, I have great reason to believe he intended for New-York, to supply the Ministerial army. He says that there was at Dominica two brigs and three schooners, that will sail in a day or two. I shall endeavour to fall in with them, which may in some degree lengthen our cruise.

This minute spied a sail; a ship to leeward. I'm in hopes she'll prove a prize.

Since I wrote the above, have spoke the ship; she is a French ship from St. Dominica for Marseilles, which proves to be no prize. I have not the least doubt of doing something clever before I go in, although the time I can stay out is not a great while, with safety, on account of my water. I have forty-two days at half a gallon per man per day; but must return with enough, should I be forced from our Capes. I'm in a great hurry to get this schooner away, and hopes you'll make my excuses to my most worthy friends Colonel Fitzhugh and Colonel Barnes. I doubt not but they will blame me for not writing them, and must beg your favour to reconcile that, and am in hopes when I've the pleasure of your and their company on board, that I shall be able to clear it up to their satisfaction.

Please accept of my best wishes to your lady and self; and if not too much trouble, please offer my compliments to those of my friends.

We are all in high spirits and very healthy. We have seen nothing we chased but what we have come up with and spoke with.

I am, honoured sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
GEORGE COOKE.

P. S. I have desired Mr. Langrel, prize-master, to send you and the other gentlemen of the Council, a few limes, which I hope you'll please to accept.

G. C.

RICHARD BOND TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Cecil County, October 30, 1776.

SIR: This may inform you that I am setting up a gun factory, which I expect will be ready to go about Christmas, where work will be done in the best manner; where gun-barrels may be had ready for stocking, any quality. Relying upon the publick spirit of the Council, I never made application; but hope to meet with encouragement, as it will cost a considerable sum of money to set it agoing. I may be obliged to apply for money to carry it on, in which case, sir, I beg your influence, and also in contracting for work. I beg, sir, that you would signify your pleasure respecting it in a letter; and in doing you will much oblige, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

RICH'D BOND.

To Mr. Daniel of Saint Thomas Jenifer, Esq., these, per favour of Mr. James Disney.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO DANIEL TILLINGHAST.

October 30, 1776.

SIR: As heavy duck is wanted for the New-Hampshire frigate, which cannot be procured in that State, we desire you will without delay send forward to John Langdon, Esq., eighty bolts of heavy duck, if that quantity belonging to the Continent is in your possession, or in the possession of any other person in your State. You will also supply Mr. Langdon and Messrs. Silas & Barnabas Deane, with any Continental stores that they may apply to you for, for the use of the frigates Raleigh and Trumbull.

Lieutenant McDougall, of the brig Andrea Doria, has accounted for the expenditure of forty-five pounds you advanced him to defray his travelling expenses, together with seven of the people belonging to said brigantine from your State to this place; therefore we think proper to deduct that sum from the sales of the prize which they brought in, and put under your care.

We are, sir, your very humble servants.

To Daniel Tillinghast, Esq.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

October 30, 1776.

SIR: We have received such intelligence as satisfies us that the enemy's ships and vessels have all quitted Georgia and the Carolinas, which renders it unnecessary for you to pursue the expeditions formerly directed to these States. But as we have still reason to suppose that the Galatea and Nautilus are cruising off the capes of Virginia, we desire you will proceed thither with all possible despatch, and endeavour to fall in with these ships, and take, sink, or destroy them. If, when you are on that station, you shall be informed that any of the enemy's ships of war have returned to the Carolinas or Georgia, you are in that case to go in search of them, and effectually remove them. Having finished this business, you are to return and cruise for and endeavour to intercept the store and provision vessels coming from Europe to the enemy's army at New-York. We expect you will give this Committee information by every opportunity of your proceedings, and what success you may meet with in the above enterprises.

We wish you success; and are, sir, your most humble servants.

To Esek Hopkins, Esq.

JOHN WITHERSPOON TO GENERAL GATES.

Princeton, October 30, 1776.

SIR: It is not long since I heard from Mrs. Gates and your son who went home the beginning of the vacation. I expect her here with him in about ten days, when the College session begins. I have the pleasure of assuring you that he has in all respects behaved in the most unexceptionable manner, and acquitted himself well at examination for admission into College, so that I hope General will have much pleasure in him.

I send this by my son, who finds he can do nothing in the present situation of affairs upon his farm, and therefore is desirous of going into the army. It is his own particular desire to be with you. He can easily get a commission in the new levies of this Province, but if he could be appointed Aid-de-Camp to any of the Generals, I think it would be a happy introduction; and as he is young, vigorous, and active, I hope he would acquit himself with fidelity and credit in that service. I have given him a letter to Colonel Maxwell, just now appointed a Brigadier-General, but do chiefly depend on your friendship and advice to him, which he will certainly follow.

It gave me much concern that you had not an immediate and fully satisfactory answer to your letter to Congress relating to the dissolving the Court-Martial. There was a full and ample report brought in upon it by the Board of War, but it was postponed, after some debate, for a little; and many things being thrust in that seemed to require immediate despatch, it was some time before it was brought in again; and the second time, when it was just about to be almost unanimously agreed to, by the artful management of some who wanted a little alteration made, it was postponed again by the demand of a paper which was not at hand. Since that time, your friends thought it not worth while to resume it. I must, however, assure you that by far the greatest part of the Congress have a very high sense of your importance and services; in a particular manner for discouraging to the utmost of your power Colonial jealousies and distinctions.

I have written to General Maxwell that he is indebted to you for a very honourable mention of him in your letter to Congress, which was read at the last promotion of General Officers, when he could certainly have been promoted but for some of his friends here.

We have heard with concern the destruction of our fleet upon the lake, but it is satisfying to think that they behaved so well. I heartily pray that God Almighty may crown you with success in your present critical situation and most important charge. I have given all the attention in my power to the supply and interest of the Northern army, and shall continue to do so.

Wishing you all happiness, I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JNO. WITHERSPOON.

To General Gates.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER OF THE SIXTY-FOURTH REGIMENT, IN YORK-ISLAND, TO HIS FRIEND IN LONDON, DATED NEW-YORK, OCTOBER 30, 1776.

The Rebel army are in so wretched a condition as to clothing and accoutrements, that I believe no nation ever saw such a set of tattered malions. There are few coats among them but what are out at elbows, and in a whole regiment there is scarce a pair of breeches. Judge then how they must be pinched by a winter campaign. We, who are warmly clothed and well equipped, already feel it severely; for it is even now much colder than I ever felt it in England. As to provisions they have been pretty well supplied; more care has been taken of their bellies than their backs. But we have lately made a prize that must distress them exceedingly, no less than a church full of salt; so that the poor Yankees literally won't have salt to their porridge. When they retreated, they left fifteen hundred men in Fort Washington; and next day fifteen hundred more came into it from Fort Constitution; so that they have now a garrison of three thousand men under the command of General Lee, who I find is to be the scape-goat, and I fear will be destined to the cord.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Lee, October 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The enemy have possession of Fort Independence on the heights above King's Bridge. They made their appearance the night before last. We had got every thing of value away. The bridges are cut down, and I gave Colonel Magaw orders to stop the road between the mountains.

I should be glad to know your Excellency's mind about holding all the ground from King's Bridge to the lower lines. If we attempt to hold the ground, the garrison must still be reinforced, but if the garrison is to draw into Mount Washington and only keep that, the number of troops on the island is too large.

We are not able to determine with any certainty whether those troops that have taken post above King's Bridge are the same troops, or not, that were in and about Harlem several days past. They disappeared from below all at once; and some little time after, about fifty boats full of men, were seen going up towards Hunt's Point, and that evening the enemy were discovered at Fort Independence. We suspect them to be the same troops that were engaged in the Sunday skirmish.

Six officers belonging to privateers that were taken by the enemy, made their escape last night. They inform me that they were taken by the last fleet that came in. They had about six thousand foreign troops on board, one quarter of which had the black scurvy, and died very fast.

Seventy sail of transports and ships fell down to Red-Hook. They were bound for Rhode-Island; had on board about three thousand troops. They also inform that after the Sunday action, an officer of distinction was brought into the city badly wounded.

The ships have come up the river to their station again, a little below their lines. Several deserters from Powle's Hook have come over. They all report that General Howe is wounded, as did those from the fleet. It appears to be a prevailing opinion in the land and sea service.

I forwarded your Excellency a return of the troops at this post, and a copy of a plan for establishing magazines. I could wish to know your pleasure as to the magazines as soon as possible.

I shall reinforce Colonel Magaw with Colonel Ralling's regiment, until I hear from your Excellency respecting the matter.

The motions of the grand army will best determine the propriety of endeavouring to hold all the ground from King's Bridge to the lower lines. I shall be as much on the Island of York as possible so as not to neglect the duties of my own department.

I can learn no satisfactory accounts of the action of the other day.

I am, with great respect, your Excellency's obedient servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To His Excellency General Washington, at Camp at the White-Plains.

Captain Crooker ,	Captain Fenner .
Captain Knap ,

Captain Peters appointed Judge Advocate for the above Court.

Being three o'clock, P. M., the above Court adjourned till nine o'clock to-morrow morning, then to meet at the house of Mr. William Field.

October 31, 1776.—Said Court met according to adjournment, and proceeded to the trial of Captain Pool, of Colonel Cary's regiment, who was charged with shamefully abandoning his post when on guard, without orders; and, being asked whether he was guilty or not guilty of the charge, said Captain Poole plead "Not guilty."

Sergeant Hall, of Colonel Smith's regiment, being sworn, says: He was on guard with Captain Poole; that about three o'clock, P. M., on the 25th instant, the said Captain Pool marched his guard from their post; that he knew of no orders he had for it; that the enemy was then advancing towards White-Plains, but not towards the place where said guard was posted.

Lebeus Shilley, being sworn, says: That a little before night, on said 25th, Captain Poole marched his guard off, but he knew of no orders for it.

Corporal Rogers, being sworn, agrees with the last witness.

Three o'clock, P. M., the Court adjourned till to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

November 3.—The Court proceeded on the above trial.

Major Lyman, being sworn, says: That he can't remember any particular orders that Captain Poole had, only that he had two days' provision, and 'twas expected that he would stay where he was posted till relieved.

Adjutant Torrey, being sworn, says: That he had orders from Major Lyman to send a Captain and a party of men for guard, to go to a place called Tukkahoe, with two days' provisions; upon which he sent Captain Poole, and told him he must take two days' provisions with him.

Lieutenant Clark, being sworn, says: That he knew of no orders Captain Poole had respecting the time he was to continue on guard where he was posted, only that he took two days' provision; further says, that Captain Poole told him that, if he thought he should not be blamed, he would march the guard off to camp; and said, in case he should be blamed, they could come back to their post again; that they marched to camp, and came to the brigade parade just at night, but he knew of no orders said Captain Poole had for marching off his guard.

Lieutenant Hathaway, being sworn, says: That, after their guard was posted by the Brigade-Major, Captain Poole went out to view the ground, and when he returned, upon finding the Major was gone, he asked him, said Lieutenant, what orders the Major left for them; he told the Captain, none at all; he further says they sent a Sergeant to General Lee for orders respecting their conduct; the said Sergeant returned, and said that General Lee told him it was not supposed they should stand against any great numbers, but that they were to watch the motions of the enemy.

The Court determine that Captain Poole is guilty of the charge alleged against him, and that he be cashiered.

Captain Peters appointed Judge Advocate in the above Court.

Peter Buise, of Captain Caldwell's company, in Colonel Haslett's regiment, was brought before the Court, and charged with the crime of desertion; and, being asked whether he was guilty or not guilty of the charge alleged against him, the said prisoner plead "Guilty;" but said that his whole intentions were to go to his wife, who was left in York city when he marched from that place.

Sergeant Oldham, of Colonel Brewer's regiment, being solemnly sworn, says: That last night, about eleven of the clock, he saw the prisoner near the advanced lines of the enemy; that he went to him, thinking he had been one of our advanced sentinels, and that, after some conversation between them, the prisoner asked him what army he belonged to, whether to the King's army or not? The witness replied, "Be sure I do; what army do you belong to?" The prisoner replied, to the American army; but that he had set out to go to the King's army, hoping by that means he should have an opportunity to see his wife, who was in York, for he was very uneasy about her.

The Court, having maturely considered the cause before them, are of opinion that the prisoner is guilty of a breach of the first article of war, in the sixth section, and do therefore sentence him to suffer death.

DANIEL HITCHCOCK, President.

I do hereby certify that more than two-thirds of the members of the aforesaid Court were agreed in the aforesaid sentence.

Attest :

ANDREW PETERS, Judge Advocate.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read November 6: referred to the Board of War.]

Saratoga, October 30, 1776.

SIR: At two this morning I had the honour to receive your letter of the 23d instant, covering sundry resolutions of Congress. Permit me to assure you, that my best exertions shall not be wanting to carry every part of them into execution, as far as I am capable. Give me leave to observe, that the resolution inhibiting the payment of one and one third dollar for the reenlistment of soldiers in camp, I fear, will much retard the enlistment of the troops, as the recruiting officers will not be able to give their recruiting Sergeants any money to treat those whom they attempt to enlist. I am the more induced to draw this conclusion from the little success that the Commissioners from the different States have met with, in attempting to reengage the men, which will make it absolutely necessary to employ officers for that particular purpose, and which, with respect to this State, is done, by my advice, as Congress will perceive by the enclosed copy of the orders I have given. Having no view but that of promoting the service, I shall venture, in hopes of the pardon of Congress, to advise General Gates not to publish the resolution alluded to until I am honoured with the further orders of Congress on the subject.

I am happy to find that nails can be procured at Boston. Not knowing that there were any in the publick stores at that place, I sent a trusty officer, on the 13th instant, with five thousand dollars, to purchase a quantity there. Such other of the military stores as are there, and wanted in this department, I shall order to Westfield, in the Massachusetts-Bay, to be brought from thence in sleds, in winter.

General Gates having pressed me to send him Colonel Dayton's regiment, I accordingly withdrew it from Fort Stanwix, and garrisoned that place with Colonel Elmore's. Dayton's will reach Ticonderoga to-morrow. A few days ago I received information from Tryon County that they expected the enemy would penetrate into that quarter; and as a corroboration of the accounts they had received, they urged that some of the principal Tories were gone off, and so much were the inhabitants alarmed that they threatened to lay down their arms unless they were supported by troops. This has obliged me to draw about one thousand Militia from the northward, which I have sent, under the command of Colonel Van Schaick, to cover that County. I hope they will do better there than they have here. I have employed some of the Militia to assist in forwarding provisions and repairing the roads. About four hundred are at Fort Edward, covered by a breastwork, from whence scouts are daily sent to the westward; and some Tories on the way to join the enemy have been intercepted. Four hundred more are at Fort George, but absolutely refuse to give their aid in erecting a picket around the hospital. Two hundred at Fort Ann, assisting in forwarding the provisions. The remainder ordered on to Ticonderoga.

My last letter from General Gates was of the 27th instant. General Carleton still remained at Crown Point. Two prisoners, whom his scouts had taken and he sent back, report that he is preparing to attack us. If he does, I trust I shall have the pleasure of announcing his repulse; and if we keep our ground in that quarter during this campaign, it will be our own faults if we do not make Ticonderoga and Mount Independence impregnable before the enemy can attack it in another; and, consequently, any irruptions from the northward with such a body of troops as could effect any thing will be totally impossible. I am very happy that General Carleton has spent his force this way; for if he should even oblige us to retire from Ticonderoga, we shall confine him to the lakes. Had he attempted to come by another route, he would probably have penetrated, and been joined by the Six Nations. I mention this, as that quarter will claim the attention of Congress next campaign, and I do not know of any measure that would so effectually secure to our interest the Six Nations as a regiment or two of Frenchmen. I should hope, as we are now independent States, that the Court of France would at least wink at our inlisting a body of troops in their islands: probably they would privately order their officers and soldiers to engage in our service.

The anxiety I laboured under lest our army should suffer in the article of provisions, is happily vanished. Considerably more is now forwarding than the daily consumption.

The barracks I am erecting are advancing with great rapidity. Much is to be done in the course of the winter. I shall suggest my ideas to the gentlemen of Congress now with me.

I wish for leave to repair to Philadelphia as soon as I shall judge that I may be spared from hence without detriment to the publick service. Congress may be assured that I shall not abuse the license, if granted, by leaving this a moment before the proper time.

Congress will be so good as to let me hear from them on the subject of the Nanticoke Indians, mentioned in mine of the 16th or 18th of August last. I expect a number of the Oneidas at Albany very soon: they are such good friends that I wish to have it in my power to give them some clothing.

I have this moment received a letter from my Secretary, who is at Albany, advising me that one hundred and ninety or two hundred barrels of flour leave Albany every day, but that he fears the Commissary will not be able to furnish more than will suffice for four days' transportation. This intelligence will oblige me to hasten to Albany to prevent a stop in the transportation.

As Congress has been pleased to give rank to the Paymasters, would it not be well that the Deputy Mustermaster-General should have some respectable rank given him, and his commission sent up?

The proceedings of the Court-Martial on Colonel Campbell I have never had. As soon as General Gates sends them to me, I shall take them into consideration.

I am, sir, with every sentiment of respect and esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

Instructions to the Officers appointed to Recruit for the service of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Saratoga, October 22, 1776.

1st. The encouragement you are to offer is so great as will, it is hoped, give you a choice of men and ensure you success, to wit: A bounty of ten dollars in money to every non-commissioned officer and soldier already inlisted, and who has received the Continental bounty of ten dollars; and to every other recruit a bounty of twenty dollars; and also to each a suit of clothes yearly, to consist, for the present year, of two linen hunting-shirts, two pair of hose, two pair of overalls, a leather or woollen waistcoat with sleeves, one pair of breeches, one hat or leather cap, and two pair of shoes—amounting, in the whole, to the value of twenty dollars more; but each non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall procure those articles for himself, and produce to the Paymaster of the regiment a certificate thereof from the Captain of the company to which he shall belong, shall be entitled to receive the twenty dollars in money. Besides which, every non-commissioned officer and soldier so inlisted is to receive, at the end of the war, one hundred acres of land, as a further encouragement.

2dly. You are to be careful to inlist none but healthy, able-bodied men, who shall engage to serve in the army of the United States during the present war.

3dly. You shall take the age, size, complexion, colour of hair and eyes, and natural or accidental marks of every recruit, with an account of the place of his birth and occupation.

4thly. You shall embrace all opportunities to have the recruits drilled and disciplined; and for that purpose you shall despatch them, without delay, to such station or place of rendezvous as shall be appointed for that purpose.

5thly. To every recruit, at the time of inlistment, you shall administer the oath prescribed by the articles of war published by the Continental Congress.

6thly. You shall appoint four active and capable recruiting Sergeants to assist you in this service.

7thly. If you shall reinlist for the war any non-commissioned officer or soldier who is at present in actual service for a shorter time, you are to give in his name and description to the Captain to whose company he shall then belong, who is to take particular charge of him, that he be delivered over to his proper officer at the end of the service for which he may be so preëngaged, or sooner if required.

8thly. You are to have your men mustered by the Commissary of Musters the first opportunity after inlistment, in order that they may receive their full bounty, five dollars of which only you shall pay to each recruit, as an encouragement, at the time of inlistment.

9thly. For this purpose you shall receive from the Treasury of the State of New-York one hundred pounds in hand, of the expenditures of which you shall keep a regular account, and transmit it to the Treasurer at Fishkill, who will supply you with money in proportion to the recruits you shall raise.

PH. SCHUYLER, Major-General.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Saratoga, October 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am honoured with your favour of the 22d instant, enclosing the resolves of Congress and list of stores at Boston. The season is so far advanced that the intrenching tools cannot arrive in time to be of any service during this campaign. I shall, however, order them to the east side of the Green Mountains, that advantage may be taken of the first snows to transport them in sleds to this quarter.

The want of tents in this campaign has not only greatly distressed our troops, but occasioned an enormous expense in the article of boards. It is therefore a matter of the greatest importance that a sufficiency of them be prepared in the course of the winter, and sent to Albany. The poles and pins can be made there.

Whatever stores are to be sent to this quarter should, I think, be forwarded in light wagons, for the greater expedition. A month hence the roads will be almost impassable for heavy carriages.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To James Wilson, Edward Rutledge, and Francis Lightfoot Lee, Esqs.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF WAR.

Saratoga, October 30, 1776.

SIR: This morning I was honoured with your letter of the 9th instant. I am extremely happy to find that we have a prospect of being in some measure supplied with the articles you mention, and of which we stand in great need. I could wish that the goods had been sent directly to Albany, as it is probable they would have arrived before this. General Mifflin has such a variety of business to attend to, that it is a kind of cruelty to burthen him with any not immediately in his department. Pray let directions be given that every thing in future be sent directly to Philip Van Rensselaer, Esquire, Storekeeper at Albany.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To Richard Peters, Secretary at War.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 30, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: At two this morning I received sundry despatches from Congress. Copies of all the resolutions I do myself the honour to enclose you. You will observe, amongst others, a resolution inhibiting the paying one and one third dollars for any soldiers reinlisted in camp. I shall take the liberty to mention to Congress the bad consequences of it; and therefore beg you will not make it publick until you hear further from me on the subject.

A very considerable quantity of shoes, stockings, shirts, and other clothing has left Philadelphia for our army. They will not be detained a moment at Albany.

The Militia are deserting in great numbers. General Washington advises that if they are not absolutely wanted, to dismiss them, as he fears they will distress us as much as they have him, by eating our provisions and doing no service. Those at Fort George continue to refuse their aid in erecting the picket around the Hospital and in mounting guard. I am under the necessity of going to Albany, to give my assistance to Mr. Avery. I wish you, however, to be under no apprehensions on the score of provisions, as I dare say I shall be able to keep up a constant supply.

Please to let Mr. Yauncey send me an exact return.

Adieu! I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. General Gates.

P. S. I have not had the proceedings of the Court-Martial on Colonel Campbell. You will please to send them to me.

This will be delivered you by Major Livingston, my Aid-de-Camp, who intends to pass some days with you. Permit me to recommend him to your attention.

Please to accept of some cabbage and a few potatoes.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 30, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: A variety of reports and circumstances seem to confirm the account I gave you that the enemy may probably attempt to penetrate through the country to the Mohawk river. I have therefore thought it necessary to move some more of the Militia into Tryon County; but as very little dependence is to be made on the very best of them, and as the salvation of the army with you in a very great measure depends upon a successful repulse of the enemy, should they make such an attempt, it is incumbent on us to take every precaution possible. I have therefore ordered scouts from Tryon County to the northward of Hudson's river until they arrive to the meridian of Fort George, and to range between the most easterly and westerly branches thereof; and have directed others to be kept out from Fort Edward and Fort George. You will also please to send two or three scouts to go at least forty miles west of Tyonderoga; and should they discover that a body of the enemy have gone that way, you will then immediately detach three regiments or more, if you shall judge it necessary from the accounts you may receive of the enemy's force. I must repeat that the Militia are not to be depended upon; and therefore whatever troops you may send must march with the utmost despatch, without waiting for their baggage, which must follow.

This will be delivered to you by Messrs. Stockton and Clymer.

I am, dear General, very sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. General Gates.

J. TRUMBULL TO COMMITTEE OF BENNINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Tyconderoga, October 30, 1776.

SIR: The General has seen your letter to Mr. Yancey, and directs me to return you his most cordial thanks for the zeal you expressed for the service of our insulted country.

Agreeable to the request of the Committee, he has ordered one of the companies from your town to return for the purpose of assisting in a work so necessary for the good of this army.

The alertness of your people, and those of the neighbouring country, in marching with so much expedition to share our dangers, cannot be too much praised, or too gratefully acknowledged by their countrymen.

The situation of the army daily mends by the addition of troops from different parts. The enemy still remain at Crown Point.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

J. TRUMBULL, D. A. General.

To Chairman of the Committee of Bennington.

COLONEL BREWER TO GENERAL GATES.

Ty Mills, October 30, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The bearer, Lieutenant Laud, has just returned from his scout to Crown Point, and has given me some intelligence which I thought proper to communicate to you immediately, in prospect of which he waits upon your Honour.

I am, sir, with all obedience, your very humble servant,
SAM'L BREWER.

To General Gates.

CONVENTION OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE GRANTS.

In Convention of the Representatives from the several Counties and Towns of the NEW-HAMPSHIRE GRANTS, holden at WESTMINSTER, October 30, 1776.

When we view the almost insurmountable difficulties the inhabitants of our infant Plantations have been subjected to in bringing a desolate wilderness into fruitful fields, gardens, &c., together with the oppressions and insults received from New-York, since our annexation thereto, we cannot at the same time, but view some of the present conduct of that State towards us with some degree of concern. The publick, no doubt, have heretofore been in some measure led into the nature of the dispute which has for a number of years last past subsisted between the Colony of New-York and the inhabitants of said district of land, and the several disingenuous advantages made use of by the power of that Colony to rob those inhabitants of their interest: But, for present illustration, the following are here set down as matters of fact, viz:

1. That most of us hold our lands by virtue of grants from the several authorities of the former Provinces of the Massachusetts-Bay and New-Hampshire. In consequence of which grants we left our native places of abode to inhabit a desolate wood; and we have never yet learnt any blame has been laid on either of the authorities of the Massachusetts-Bay or New-Hampshire for granting those lands.

2. The jurisdiction line of New-York being extended to the west banks of Connecticut River, by a royal order in A. D. 1764. The several Governours of that Colony have presumed to regrant the lands from under our feet, which has created the greatest disorders and confusions.

3. Those inhabitants being unaccustomed to such disorders, were induced at a great expense to petition the Crown for redress in the premises, who was pleased, with advice of his Council, to pass an order in the following words, viz:

"At a Court at St. James's, the 24th day of July, 1767. Present:

The King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Archbishop of Canterbury ,	Earl of Shelburne ,
Lord Chancellor,	Viscount Falmouth ,
Duke of Queensborough ,	Viscount Barrington ,
Duke of Ancaster ,	Viscount Clarke ,
Lord Chamberlain,	Bishop of London ,
Earl of Litchfield ,	Mr. Secretary Conway ,
Earl of Bristol ,	Hans Stanly , Esq.

"His Majesty taking the said Report" (i. e. Report of the Board of Trade) "into consideration, was pleased, with the advice of his Privy Council, to approve thereof, and doth hereby strictly charge, require, and command, that the Governour or Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's Province of New-York for the time being, do not, upon pain of his Majesty's highest displeasure, presume to make any grants whatsoever, of any of the lands described in the said report, until his Majesty's further pleasure shall be known concerning the same."

"A true copy :

WILLIAM SHARP.

"Attest :

GEO. BANYAR, Dep. Sec."

Notwithstanding the above prohibition, the Governours respectively of New-York, continued their former practice of regranteeing the same lands.

4. To take the special advantage of the governing part of New-York, to secure the titles severally to the lands thus regranted, writs of ejectment were sent in large detachments with officers of their appointment at the head of them, with particular orders to execute them; and the result of such services on trial have produced writs of possession from the Supreme Courts of New-York, in consequence of which several persons have been dispossessed of valuable farms, houses, stocks, produce, &c. And by a continuance of writs of ejectments, possessions, &c., we have been under the disagreeable necessity to draw our swords, and for many years past to wield them, in defence of our possessions and properties, from the cruel and tyrannical usurpations of that Colony: And the principle which induced us at that time to take arms in defence of our possessions and properties, is that which now induces us to take arms and voluntarily join our friends and brethren in the several United States, for the defence of the liberties of the whole; and to oblige us to desist from such necessary measures, sundry of the leading and principal Green Mountain Boys were indicted as rioters, and proclamations issued by the legislative authority of New-York, wherein large sums of money were offered for the purpose of apprehending and taking into custody said riotous persons and bring them to condign punishment; and, as though this might not prove effectual to subdue the minor and most honest of this Government, that same legislative body did make and pass twelve acts of outlawry, which empowered the Judges, that in case any such offender, after notice had been published and posted seventy days, should not surrender himself for trial, that it should be lawful for the Judges to award sentence of death against him or them, the same as though he or they had been attainted or convicted, &c.—North.

5. The methods taken by the legislative power of New-York, in erecting the Counties of Cumberland and Gloucester, was not (by them) intended for the benefit of the inhabitants, as may appear by their appointment of foreign persons to the place of court officers in the County of Cumberland; and such persons who by their immediate influence were most likely to prove subservient in bringing the inhabitants of the said Counties into a disposition to apply to the power of New-York for a regent of the lands in said County; and it's to be observed the most of the civil magistrates and military officers were so appointed that they were great friends to the legislative body of New-York. Those persons thus appointed did not fail to use their influence with the inhabitants to get themselves appointed agents to transact a business of that kind at the court of New-York. The issue of which was, that regents over the great part of the lands were then obtained; and the extravagant patent fees, together with the fees of the agents, amounted to so much that many of us were obliged to have a considerable part of our lands disposed of (thus regranted) at a very moderate price, to defray the charges aforesaid, and on said subsequent patents was added more than threefold quit-rents.

The matter being brought thus far to a period, a Court-House must needs be erected in the County of Cumberland, and a tax laid on its inhabitants to defray the charges of the same; although it was not the minds of the inhabitants to have the same district erected into a County; in consequence whereof Courts of Common Pleas have been established contrary to the free voice of the people; which was the origin of the horrid and detestable massacre at the said Court-House on the 13th of March, A. D. 1774; in which several persons were actually murdered.

Sundry gentlemen of the State of New-York, own large tracts of lands, through and round which the present inhabitants are obliged to cut roads and build mills, for which said gentlemen pay nothing, however valuable their lands are made by it. The Governour and Council of New-York have laid a mandamus on the ancient town of Hinsdale, which was at first appropriated by a purchase from the Indians; secondly, by a grant from New-Hampshire; and third, by an uninterrupted possession and occupancy about seventy years. The custom of the former Government of New-York, to wit: breaking of Sabbaths, neglect of publick worship, &c., we principally emigrated from the New-England States; and could we have had as good regulations here as have been in the New-England States, no doubt but many honourable and wealthy gentlemen would have moved their families here that have not, which would have been to the mutual advantage of the present inhabitants. A resolve of the honourable the Provincial Congress of the State of New-York, in resolving, "that all quit-rents formerly due and payable to the King of Great Britain within this State, are now due and owing unto this Convention, or such future Government as may be hereafter established in this State." Those grants that derived from New-Hampshire, pay one shilling proclamation money; and those from New-York, half a crown sterling on each hundred acres. When in the ancient part of the Province of New-York, Livingston's Manor, a tract of land about twenty miles square, pay but one beaver skin annually as quit-rent. Bateman's Patent pays three pounds ten shillings sterling, a valuable tract of ninety thousand acres; in fine all the old settled part of the Province of New-York pay no more than a trifling acknowledgment. Our local circumstances are very troublesome and fatiguing to us; some of us are upwards of four hundred miles from the seat of Government at New-York.

The foundation of English liberties, and of all free Government, is a right in the people to participate in their Legislative Council. And these Counties to wit: Cumberland and Glocester, from their local and other circumstances, cannot properly be represented in the honourable the Provincial Congress for the State of New-York.

For the above cogent reasons, we choose not to connect with the State of New-York at present; would humbly submit to the candid reader, whether we had not better refer our situation to the honourable the grand Council of the United States of America, and see if they in their great wisdom could not retrieve us from our present fears, and put us in such a situation that we should be better enabled to do our proportion in this unhappy war.

Extract from the Minutes :

IRA ALLEN, Clerk.

MATHEW TALLCOTT TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Middletown, October 30, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: There came two gentlemen to this town last evening, who called themselves French officers, and, as I heard, gave some extraordinary accounts of publick affairs; and in the evening came in a gentleman of the Committee of Hartford and another of Suffield, and brought the two enclosed letters; upon which such of the Committee of this town as were near, with the two above, visited the Frenchmen, and they showed us several letters in French, which were open, and others that were sealed; namely, one to a gentleman in Dartmouth, one to General Washington, and one to Mr. Hancock; and although their accounts were not altogether satisfactory, we thought it most prudent, as the Assembly was sitting, to refer them to your Honour, and have sent Mr. Elijah Hobard with them to see that they do not escape; judging it more prudent than to break open letters to gentlemen in so high authority, not doubting but your Honour will make full inquiry and detect the impostor, if any there be, or send them under safe guard to General Washington, or otherwise dispose of them as in your Honour's wisdom, with that of the Assembly, you shall see fit, which is the present needful.

In behalf of the Committee, from your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

MATHEW TALLCOTT.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN HACKER.

Newport, October 30, 1776.

SIR: You are to take your officers and men and go on board the Providence, and so much of her stores as are absolutely necessary, and follow the orders which you received to go in the Hamden, and leave the Hamden under the command of Captain Joseph Olney, in order to be repaired; and deliver him an account of the stores that you leave in her, and also an account of what you take out of her for the Providence.

Yours, &c., ESEK HOPKINS, Commander-in-Chief.

To Hoysted Hacker, Esq., now Commander of the sloop Providence.

CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Alfred, Rhode-Island, October 30, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my arrival here in the Providence, the 7th current, I have, from a variety of events, been altogether unable to give you any satisfactory account, and for that reason have deferred writing.

I now enclose you copies of my letters down till the 30th ultimo. You have also enclosed a short account of my whole cruise. And I have now to inform you that on the 22d current, I was directed by the Commander-in-Chief to take command of an expedition with the Alfred and Hamden against the Cape Breton coal fleet and Newfoundland fishery. Had this expedition been begun a month sooner, great things might have been done. My greatest hope now is that of relieving a number of our fellow-citizens, who, being prisoners, are compelled to work in the coal-pits of Cape Breton. If I can succeed in this, I shall think my pains well bestowed. You may, however, rest assured that I will leave no part of my duty unattempted that may, at this advanced season and with my small force, appear practicable.

I have left with the Commander-in-Chief a complete muster-roll, comprehending every thing from the day I took command of the Providence till the day I left her. I was ready to sail the 27th, but unfortunately the Hamden ran aground on a sunken ledge, in the harbour, which knocked off her false keel, and she hath been so leaky since that we have concluded her unfit for sea, and have got the Providence ready to proceed in her room. I hope to sail to-morrow morning; and am, with great esteem and respect, gentlemen, your very obliged, very obedient, and most humble servant,

J. PAUL JONES.

To the honourable the Marine Committee.

Account of the PROVIDENCE's Cruise.

The American sloop-of-war the Providence, of twelve guns and seventy men, sailed from the Delaware the 21st of August, 1776. She cruised between the latitude of 39° and 33° north, and went to the eastward as far as the longitude of 50° west, having taken three prizes, a whaler and two West Indiamen, and having had a very narrow escape from an English frigate after a chase of six hours part of the time within pistol shot. On the 14th September, she bent her course for Nova-Scotia; and on the 20th had another affair with an English frigate, and in the course of an eight hours' chase, ridiculed the enemy and answered his broadside with only a single musket, although the Savage and Dawson's brig were within a few leagues distance. She next day went into Canso and took three English schooners with a Scotch Tory's flag, and the day following, she took five sail of Jerseymen in Narrowhook, and four more in Peter de Great: and it is remarkable, that though they were ten in number to one of the Providence's men, they were so panick-struck that they not only gave up their ships but even assisted to rig and carry them out of their harbours. The Providence then proceeded to the westward, took another whaler on St. George's Bank, and on the 7th of October arrived safe at Rhode-Island, having manned and sent in eight prizes, viz: six brigantines, one ship, and one sloop, and sunk, burnt, and destroyed eight more, viz: six schooners, one ship, and one brigantine; and finished her cruise in six weeks and five days.

Rhode-Island, October 8, 1776.

The soldiers of the different regiments in this State who have been indulged with furloughs for the recovery of their health, are ordered to repair to this place without loss of time. Those who abuse the indulgence given them, by not returning as soon as able to do duty, may expect to be treated as deserters.

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.

LONDON CARTER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Sabine Hall, October 31, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: By Lieutenant Beale, of our Fifth Regiment, I am endeavouring to lead my trembling pen to the duty of sincerity in friendship, and with a line of respect, to ask you, my dear George, the momentous question at these times, How do you do? This bearer, if report has not stationed the corps he belongs to at Philadelphia, will deliver this letter to you. You will find in him more resolution and modest prudence than generally falls to the share of youth; at least those of Virginia within my acquaintance. His seasoning, which I may call every kind of hardship in service, had like to have demolished him without a bullet; but Heaven seems to have preserved him for a further assistance to the great cause of liberty. I never mention that word but I think how unhappy I must have been in alarming so many dear as well as brave friends with the danger it was in, when I first, in America, attacked that Parliamentary vote "to tax the Colonies with certain stamp duties." I say unhappy, to think of the innumerable dangers that have been and still must be encountered, to support that freedom each man derives from God alone. But when the justice of the cause vibrates from my soul on every part of my body, I am greatly transported to see the arm of Heaven displaying the banners of protection, whilst every breast is inspired to write in action an epitaph on its possessor, should he fall in the struggle, more glorious than mortality alone can express; and every Christian hero can say, with the never-to-be-forgotten Cato, one moment of such a life, in the bosom of freedom, is worth an age of inactivity deserving of bondage.

When my own care is constantly engaged to ward off the danger and uneasy concomitants of almost extreme years, I often compose my momentary pains with the comforts which may be deduced to posterity from the manoeuvres of my dear Washington, whose happy success must treasure up the blessings, possibly of millions yet unborn; for without affecting to be enthusiastically religious, I never read of a divine instrument of human happiness but I carry the gratitude of ages back to record the remembrance of such a friend to mankind.

But let me not tire you with my own heart-felt expectations. Can you find time to be detained but one moment from the God of battle, to tell an old, sincere, though plain man how you and the brave retinue all around you do? I fear not. However, I can supply an answer to my question, founded on my ideas of justice, from an assurance that the same merciful Being who directs the sword of war must conduct the scale of natural right. I read of the par nobile fratrum, the Viscount and his brother, and see their proficiency in the arts of ministerialism. But I hope that even the two months extraordinary which the former took to become expert, from his own account, has not added the least particle of knowledge to the latter, whom you drove from Boston; and that the day is yet to come, perhaps not far off, in which they will be entrapped in their own wiliness.

Our news from New-York is generally such a compound of inconsistency, and every now and then so poisoned with a little Toryism in its way to us, that for my part, though it is sometimes very encouraging, I never admit of the least tittle of it but as domestick volatiles; for which I am sorry to say that there seems sometimes to be too much occasion. If I don't err in conjecture, I can't help thinking that the head of our Commonwealth has as great a palace of fear and apprehension as can possess the heart of any being; and if we compare rumour with actual movements, I believe it will prove itself to every sensible man.

As soon as the Congress sent for our First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Regiments to assist you in contest against the enemy where they really were, and not suffer them to be inactive, at a vast expense, where the enemy was, ridiculously enough, only expected to be, founded on some defeat they must receive in their first movements, I say there got a report among the soldiery that dignity had declared it would not reside in Williamsburgh without two thousand men under arms to guard him. This had like to have occasioned a mutiny. A desertion of many from the several companies did follow; boisterous fellows resisting, and swearing they would not leave their County; but being in Continental pay most of them were persuaded to embark up the Bay at last. What a finesse of popularity was this?—popularity, the only real enemy to freedom? and I shall be happily mistaken, if it will not at last be the "recovering sword" which the Viscount pledged himself at parting to make use of. For thus I reason: Whilst deception conducts the constituting powers, (the freeholders,) the hypocrites who make use of it will soon be bribed into contention, and then by a tide of corruption poor Liberty will be forgot and delivered into slavery, resuming its most humiliating form. But to go on, (for I have it from a brother to one who is in the army,) as soon as the regiments were gone, this great man found an interest with the Council of State, perhaps as timorous as himself, to issue orders for the Militia of twenty-six Counties, and five companies of a Minute battalion, to march to Williamsburgh, to protect him only against his own fears; and to make this the more popular, it was endeavoured that the House of Delegates should give it a countenance; but as good luck would have it, it was with difficulty refused, because a good purge, says Dr. Lee, would do full as well. I say good luck; and, faith, my friend George, that is now our only chance. Immediately then, though we do not know whence our taxes are to arise, payable some of them next June, a bill is brought in to remove the seat of Government; some say up to Hanover, to be called Henry-Town, but I believe it will split as usual on the rock ubi; for numbers, as it is now actually in motion, are for the back country.

I propose this shall be a sketch of my own observations, to entertain you. Therefore, I go on to show how busy Convention is to effect an edge for this recovering sword of the Viscount's. In legislation we affect one while, according to our fifth article of declaratory rights, to keep the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judiciary powers separate and distinct; but if we read the Journals, we see one day, though petitions set forth that the very matters complained of are actually before the Executive and Judiciary powers, yet popularity shows itself so ascendantly in the House (by the very means of which most of the Delegates get there) that now all three powers are crowding to form one tribunal, because Judges can only determine according to laws and usages in being, which do not aid such petitioners, but rather destroy their complaints, and therefore they are brought to Legislation for determination, according to some democratick, assumed retrospection; that is, a mode of punishing is to be resolved on by that arch fiend in all popularity, pro hac vice only. But when a matter in which no constituent can be engaged, is brought on, though immediately during the heat of such petitions as before, then you hear of the "impropriety in interfering in matters under distinct regulations already made without first repealing those regulations." By this 'tis plain it is not because they don't know better, but because they will not do better. And if you can't see the very farce of Contention in such iniquitous, occasional, and popular modes of pleasing, it must be because you are at present only engaged as a soldier, but not as a citizen, in a military constitution.

I am not done yet with entertaining my friend, to whom I would not hesitate an untruth. Nothing so noble as the jealousy of power with which we set out in this commonwealth form of Government. But now some of our popular adherents want to be paid for their serving in inspectors' places, and our back bawlers-out want publick warehouses and securities for their commodities, notwithstanding good rolling-houses would do, as they used before the inspection law took place; and the inspection money would reasonably be an insurance to the proprietors of the houses for the forthcomings of the commodity without the least expense to the country. Yet that cursed law must be revived, to give two men alone the power to say whether a man shall have any thing for his whole year's labour or not. Judges, by at least ten thousand instances since this law first took place, who have proved themselves capable of resentment and every villanous corruption notwithstanding their oaths; and according to the very nature of an oath they must be Judges from whom their can be no appeal; because no man can say that he who swears to do according to his judgment, did not think the commodity bad. Yet if you lose a dog, ox, or cow, and another has got possession of them, you must have twelve jurymen sworn, and all of them must be of one opinion. As to a merchantable commodity, cannot some sworn receiver, as it used to be, determine that between purchaser and seller, and let every man do as he pleases in the management of what he makes? But lest contention should not arise out of principles so inconsistent with the very ideas of property, these warehouses are all to be at the heads of the rivers; so that he that makes tobacco in the lower parts must inspect it up there. I knew the gallows employed from the hardships and inconveniences of the first inspection law; and I saw many thousands in full march to burn all the warehouses: and mark the end of this. Popularity has here been brought to a non-plus what to do; but I am persuaded it will not be long so. The low-land men can fight against laws that oblige them to be starved, as well as up-land men can fight for them because they are made to please them. I foretold this effect from the constant dividing back Counties long ago. He must be no artist in divisions in the several States, that can't see how easy one legislative power alone must destroy even a whole land of freedom. It is not the first time the evil one has sown tares among good grain.

Once more: to show you that contention must soon generate, notwithstanding we can talk of private views, and what not, in other men, &c.; can tell those we descended from that we have as much right to do as we please with our property as they have; and that we certainly have, and therefore say, right to them—yet I say we will not let those who are descending from us, say so in behalf of their fathers: that is, their fathers have entailed estates on them; but though we got them in the same conditional manner from our fathers, we will not let them do as they please with their property, so that the very basis of the American contest is quite forgotten, when we are to be aggressors, as Dr. Price and Lord Camden say; but when they, that is the British Parliament, are the aggressors, why then truly we cry aloud against the injustice of the conduct. It is so striking, that though I should be benefited much by such a law, and could not be in the least privately affected by it to my injury, yet from a soul that detests even the thoughts of so much injustice to others, I cannot help looking up to Heaven and crying out, O God of justice! Father omnipotent! let not this give the least wound to the Continental cause of freedom; peradventure there should be but ten found in the land to reprobate and detest an injustice so crying in its very nature, as this bill already in but seven days passed one House, and is in the Senate full of men loaded with private views. It is called docking all entail; but is it not entailing one they cannot dock? The curses of posterity on them who must in that very contest for liberty entail a load of debts upon those who are to come, after they have robbed them of their very estates to pay that debt from, by overturning the very principles of justice on which they built their very claim to freedom. This is what I call sowing the seeds of contention, which must spring up sooner or later, and all from the poisoned soil of popularity. It is very comical that the very men who left the Congress, who came with a very blackening report of midnight caballings among the members in Congress to project schemes to pursue, should as they travel disgorge such a scandalous conduct in others for private views, and yet themselves to be the introducers of such barefaced, interested, and iniquitous violations of justice. Was any man in your camp to say who is the greatest drunkard and most pernicious to society, he who only drinks in the night and is perhaps ashamed of it in the morning, or he who gets drunk (sub die) at mid-day, as old Bacchus used to say, I dare say the midnight drunkard would be the most to be respected. I make this observation from my knowledge in parliamentary forms. It is not usual for those who are against a bill, to be the bearers of it, and this bill (as cursed in its nature as the removal of a neighbour's landmark, his will and pleasure in giving his own property away) borne about by the famous *T. J*n!* Fronti nulla fides, indeed. If Lord Howe knew this, what would he not attempt to do with such men? But I hope according to Hudibras,

“Toledo, though true and trusty,
For want of use is now grown rusty.”

My friend, excuse my impertinence: I am old. Can you read me? It is all I ask. And if my colick is to continue my chum, I shall live but mentally to see the pain in Government which others I fear must feel. But wherever I go, the man “who would not forget the citizen in the soldier” shall have my eulogium.

My son, &c., most respectfully wish your health, success, and prosperity. I can say no more, but your most esteeming friend and acquaintance,

LONDON CARTER.

AMOS GARRETT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Swan Creek, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Since I wrote last, Captain Robert Harris, being on his march, and at Susquehanna, but in want of blankets, tents, and money, applied to me, and out of the stores in my hands I supplied him with forty blankets and ninety-one yards of linen, and for his ferriages and expenses paid his order to Captain John Rodgers for four pounds four shillings and ninepence. This I take care to mention to you, lest a call for these stores may cause a disappointment to some other company. I have now but thirteen blankets remaining, and about sixty yards of linen.

There could have been new kersey blankets bought for twenty-five shillings apiece, but being above my limitation none of them was had.

I have not yet met with the gentleman that assisted me, to enable me to render the account.

I am, sir, your humble servant, AMOS GARRETT.
To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., of the Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

JAMES CLARKE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, October 31, 1776.

SIR: I took the liberty to write a few days ago to acquaint the honourable Council of Safety that I had a vessel of seven hundred barrels burthen at their service, if they wanted to purchase. I find that she will carry about eight hundred barrels; is in want of some repairs. Am applied to by some people in this town for her, with whom I cannot treat till I know your determination. Please favour me with an answer per the bearer, Mr. Melcher Keener, and will much oblige your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES CLARKE.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., Annapolis.

P. S. I believe this vessel of mine is a very fast sailer. Her lowest price, as she lies, is four hundred and fifty pounds. Should you take her, I would be very thankful to be employed to command her.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War Office, October 31, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mons. le Chevalier Lantagniac, is a French gentleman, who says he asks no pay, as his fortune is sufficient to support him. He requests employment in the army of the States, and rank suitable to his merits. What these are, your Excellency will, on experience, be capable of forming a judgment. Mons. Lantagniac now waits on you, having desired a letter of introduction from the Board of War, who could not provide any station for him until they have received your Excellency's opinion on the subject of establishing a corps to be composed of such foreign gentlemen as are desirous of entering into the service of the States.

I have the honour to be your very obedient servant,
RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency General Washington.

JOHN GIBSON, JUN., TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Treasury Office, Philadelphia, October 31, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: As Commissioners have been appointed by Congress to liquidate and adjust the publick accounts in the Northern department, and are now assembled at Albany for that purpose, it is necessary they should be furnished by each State with an account of the several advances and payments to the officers and others who have been entrusted with publick money, to enable them to settle the accounts. We have, therefore, to request you would be pleased as soon as possible to order an account of such advances as your State may have made, the settlement of which may properly fall within the Northern department, to be drawn out, and forward them to the Commissioners by express, in order that, the proper stoppages being made, your State may be reimbursed by Congress.

The names of the Commissioners are James Milligan, John Carter, and John Wells, Esqrs.

I have the honour to be, in the name of the Superintendents of the Treasury, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN GIBSON, Jun., Auditor-General.

To the honourable the Assembly of the State of New-Hampshire.

PETER ADAMS TO THE MARYLAND DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed send you a line from Colonel Smallwood, requesting the favour of you, or any other of the Deputies from Maryland, to furnish me with such sum of money as I might require. Should be much obliged to you if you could send me by the next post forty pounds. I want to buy some necessaries to take to camp with me.

I am, sir, your humble servant, PETER ADAMS.

N. B. Please direct the post to call on me at Mrs. Ford's, at the corner of Walnut and Second street.

Philadelphia, October 31, 1776.

Last Tuesday was sent in here by the privateer Hancock, of this port, the brig Polly, Captain Denny, from Barbadoes for Liverpool, with sixty hogsheads of sugar and forty bales of cotton on board. This is the ninth prize taken by the Hancock since she sailed from this port.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, October 31, 1776.

Complaint having been made to this Council by Christopher Elliot, that John Baldwin, of this city, cordwainer, had refused to receive in payment the Continental bills of credit issued by order of Congress; thereupon the said John Baldwin was ordered to appear before this Board, and being informed of said complaint, did acknowledge that he had refused to receive the said bills of credit in payment. The Council urged the pernicious and destructive tendency of such conduct, and requested him to reconsider it, allowing him several days to form his judgment and fix his final resolution. This day, agreeable to notice given him, he again appeared before the Council, and declared that he was determined not to receive the said bills in payment, whereupon

Resolved, That the said John Baldwin is an "enemy to his country, and precluded from all trade and intercourse with the inhabitants of these States."

Resolved, That the said John Baldwin be committed to gaol, there to remain without bail or mainprise until he shall be released by order of this Council, or some other power lawfully authorized so to do.

Ordered, That the proceedings in John Baldwin's case be made publick.

Extract from the Minutes:

JACOB S. HOWELL, Secretary.

BERKS COUNTY (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the General Committee of Berks County, at the Court-House in Reading, October 31, 1776, Mark Bird, Esq., in the chair:

The Resolutions passed at a meeting of the inhabitants of the city of Philadelphia, on the 21st and 22d instant, respecting the conduct of the late Convention of this State, were read and considered, when the question being put, "Whether this Committee do approve of the resolutions of the said meeting, and whether they will concur with their brethren of the city of Philadelphia in the choice of an Assembly in the mode, and for the purposes pointed out by the said resolutions, without taking the oath prescribed by the Convention to the electors of this State?" the same was passed in the affirmative by a very great majority.

Resolved unanimously, That the Inspectors be authorized to administer to such persons as the Judges of election shall have just cause to suspect are inimical to the liberties of this State, the following oath or affirmation, viz: "I, A. B., do swear [or affirm] that I will bear true allegiance to the State of Pennsylvania, and support the independence of the same, and that I do not think myself bound to pay any allegiance to the King of Great Britain, or any acting under him;" without which their votes ought not to be received.

WILLIAM ATLEE, CHAIRMAN, TO RICHARD PETERS.

Lancaster, October 31, 1776.

SIR: At the particular request of Lieutenant Anstruther, I forward you the enclosed. He begs to refer you to Dr. Rush, who has a state of his case from Dr. Armstrong, of Carlisle, and requests a line from you to know whether he may be permitted to ride to Philadelphia to consult the physicians there for the recovery of his health.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM ATLEE.

To Richard Peters, Esq.

LIEUTENANT ANSTRUTHER (PRISONER) TO RICHARD PETERS.

Carlisle, October 29, 1776.

SIR: This I hope you will receive regularly, being but in some measure recovered of a very severe fit of sickness, which has so much weakened and reduced me, that it is recommended to me by Dr. Armstrong, who attends me at Carlisle, to go to Philadelphia, and there take the first advice, in order to have my health wishfully reinstated. Permit me, then, sir, to request your obtaining Mr. Church a leave, as I am confident it will be the most eligible method of accomplishing my wish for recovery.

I have the pleasure to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

P. ANSTRUTHER, Lieutenant Royal Fusileers.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Philadelphia.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

White-Plains, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you on the 29th instant, no event of importance has occurred. The enemy are throwing up some lines and redoubts in our front, with a view of cannonading as soon as they are ready, and at the same time are extending their wings further by our right and left. It is supposed that one of their objects is to advance a part of their troops, and seize on the bridge over Croton river, that the communication may be cut off with the upper country. To prevent this, a part of our force is detached with orders to proceed with the utmost expedition, and to secure the pass if possible. We are trying to remove, to guard against their designs, but are greatly impeded by reason of the scarcity of wagons in proportion to our baggage and stores. Every exertion has been employed to obtain a sufficiency, but they cannot be had in this part of the country. The Quartermaster has sent to Connecticut to get a supply if possible. Our army is decreasing fast: several gentlemen who have come to camp within a few days have observed large numbers of Militia returning home on the different roads; nor are any measures taken as yet to raise the new army, no committees having come from the States to appoint or signify the nominations of their officers. If this was done, perhaps many who are now here might be induced to engage, but at present there are none authorized to recruit.

His Excellency would have wrote himself by the person who carries this, to the care of General Greene, but his attention is totally engaged in ordering the affairs of the army and the best mode for its removal.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROB'T H. HARRISON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 30, 1776.

(Parole, .) (Countersign, .)

The frequent, indeed constant complaints of the men for want of provisions upon any move which is necessary for them to make, induces the General once more to desire the commanding officers of regiments and corps to see that they are never without three days' provisions ready dressed by them.

All detachments and parties are to parade wherever ordered with their packs and provisions, that they may be ready for any service they are ordered upon.

It is strictly enjoined upon all officers to disengage themselves of heavy and cumbrous baggage, as the difficulty of procuring teams for transportation for necessary baggage and stores, which necessarily occasions all heavy boxes, chests, &c., to be thrown away.

The General insists upon having the rolls regularly called, that the officers may account for, and know where the men are, who are always to be ready to turn out upon any alarm, when waiters are always to appear under arms. Upon any alarm the drums are to beat through the whole lines "To Arms" as quick as possible, and continue beating till the whole line is formed.

The Out-guard to examine all persons riding into camp without arms, and turn any back who are not known, or cannot give sufficient reasons for their coming into camp.

The Brigade-Majors immediately to settle a General Court-Martial; no member under the rank of Captain; a Brigadier to preside.

Head-Quarters, White-Plains, October 31, 1776.

(Parole, .)

(Countersign, .)

The General positively forbids any person going down to the lines, and firing upon the enemy without an order from a General officer. Proper scouting parties are to be kept out by each Major-General, for intelligence.

The General, in a ride he took yesterday, to reconnoitre the grounds about this, was surprised and shocked to find both officers and soldiers straggling all over the country, under one idle pretence or other, when they cannot tell the hour or minute the camp may be attacked, and their services indispensably necessary.

He once more positively orders that neither officer or soldier shall stir out of camp without leave: the first from the Brigadier under whom he serves, and the latter from the commanding officer of the corps they belong to.

The Provost Marshal is to take up all stragglers; and it is enjoined upon all officers to seize every man who fires his gun without leave, and to have him tied up immediately and receive twenty lashes.

The General desires that the commanding officers of corps will always report their killed and wounded to the Brigadier they belong to, who is to give an account thereof to the Commander-in-Chief.

The Court-Martial whereof General Beall was President having found Captain Weisner guilty of misbehaviour before the enemy in the "attack on Montresor's Island," and ordered him to be cashiered with infamy; the General approves the sentence, and orders him to be dismissed the army.

Ensign Joseph Chapman, having resigned his commission, is appointed Paymaster to Colonel Varnum's regiment.

It is with astonishment the General hears that some officers have taken horses between the enemy's camp and ours, and sent them into the country for their private use. Can it be possible that persons bearing commissions and fighting in such a cause, can degrade themselves into plunderers of horses? He hopes every officer will set his face against it in future; and does insist that the Colonels and commanding officers of regiments immediately inquire into the matter, and report to him who have been guilty of these practices; and that they take an account of the horses in their respective encampments, and send to the Quartermaster-General all that are not in some publick service.

Wounded men to be sent to Doctor Morgan, at the houses about a mile from the lines on the road to North-Castle.

Peter Buise, of Colonel Haslett's regiment, convicted by a General Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Hitchcock was President, of desertion from this camp, and found near the enemy's sentinels, is sentenced to suffer death. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed tomorrow at eleven o'clock, on the crutch of the road which leads to Young's and North-Castle.

Commanding officers of regiments are immediately to have the arms and ammunition of their regiments inspected, the guns that were loaded before the rain to be discharged in volleys; and they are acquainted that three wagons loaded with ammunition now wait about a mile on the nearest road to North-Castle, in order to serve such as are deficient.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO WILLIAM DUER.

White-Plains, October 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was from home yesterday when yours of the 29th came to hand. The German troops are kept so very ignorant of what would be their happy situation in this country that I do not expect much from desertion. Mine of the 29th would inform you that we keep a garrison in Fort Washington, and that we soon taught the ships that came up that they would not lay at anchor before our batteries. If the garrison is too strongly pushed, they can always effect a retreat to Jersey, under the guns of Fort Lee. The men that were left at Fort Independence have withdrawn themselves into Mount Washington. The enemy, from their late movements, seem inclined to cross over to the North River by our rear, and march up the Albany road to Croton's river. To hinder them from effecting this, if such should be their intention, General Beall, with three good regiments of Maryland troops, has marched to take possession of Croton Bridge, and Lord Stirling, who is keeping pace with the enemy's left flank, has orders to push up also to Croton's river, should he plainly perceive that the enemy's route lays that way. I think if we get possession of Croton river and the passes in the Highlands, our army will be safe from further pursuit, will have time to recruit themselves after their amazing fatigue, and will be fresh and able to harass the enemy if they should think fit to winter up the country. The campaign hitherto has been a fair trial of Generalship, in which I flatter myself, we have had the advantage. If we, with our motley army, can keep Mr. Howe and his grand appointment at bay, I think we shall make no contemptible military figure. It is impossible to form any judgment of the numbers of the enemy from deserters: they all magnify amazingly.

General Mifflin desires me to say to you that he has sent up a number of carpenters to Peekskill; but the conductors, not finding you there, have been at some loss, but he has ordered them to proceed to you at Fishkills, and begs you and your body will give them all possible assistance. Another band of one hundred carpenters will soon go up. We are impatient for, and yet dread to hear from Ticonderoga. As I said before, in a former letter, I am afraid of news from that quarter. My Lord Stirling being absent from this division of the army, I have not an opportunity of making your compliments to him, but will do it when I see him.

I am, with regard, your most obedient servant,
TENCH TILGHMAN.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Camp near White-Plains, October 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We are exactly in the same situation in which we were when I wrote you yesterday. The enemy seem still to be endeavouring to outflank us, especially our right wing. Our advanced guards, I hear, are a little south of Young's tavern, on the road leading to White-Plains. Where the main body is I can't say, as I am so closely confined to my post on the left of the whole as not to have been a quarter mile west from this for four days past. Near three thousand of the enemy yesterday and the evening before filed off to the left, and were seen advancing towards King's street and the Purchase road, from which it appears they intend to flank our left as well as right wing. We had reason to apprehend an attack last night or by day-break this morning, (as was said, what they were I know not.) Our lines were manned all night in consequence of this; and a most horrid night it was to lay in cold trenches. Uncovered as we are, daily on fatigue, making redoubts, flèches, abattis, and lines, and retreating from them and the little temporary huts made for our comfort before they are well finished, I fear will ultimately destroy our army without fighting. This I am sure of, that I am likely to lose more in my brigade by sickness occasioned by extra fatigue and want of covering than in the course of an active campaign is ordinarily lost in the most severe actions. However, I would not be understood to condemn measures. They may be right for aught I know. I do not understand much of the refined art of war: it is said to consist of stratagem and deception. This, nevertheless, is too obvious: the enemy are daily increasing their army by new recruits in those parts of the country which they have already acquired, whilst ours are daily decreasing by sickness, deaths, and desertions; add to this, one month more disbands a very considerable part of our army. How a new one will be recruited, God only knows. This I know, many are disgusted with the service. Those will not reënter; and what is worse, will prevent others, by representing, on their return home, the hardships they have endured. So much for military politicks. I write this in confidence. If what I have said be true, and the evils which I fear prevented in any degree by the honourable body in which you sit, it is devoutly to be wished.

When I wrote you a few days ago, I mentioned the situation in which Fort Washington was, and that three of the enemy's shipping had come up, with design to obstruct Beaurdet's Ferry, and, after a heavy cannonade, were drove back. This was the truth, but not the whole truth. I happened to be out of the way of news that day. Those ships came up, it seems, to enfilade our lines below that fort, whilst Lord Percy attacked them, which he did three different times, but was as often repulsed by the garrison of Fort Washington, who manned and defended them like heroes. The particulars I have not yet been happy enough to hear more fully.

Last night Captain Townsend, with a detachment of my brigade, consisting of about thirty, brought in prisoner a certain Mr. Wetworth, late of Boston, and now a Commissary in the regular service, which they took prisoner near Rye.

I have only time to add that I am with usual health, though in no better lodging than a soldier's tent, with our old friend General Scott.

Your most affectionate, humble servant,

GEO. CLINTON.

To John McKesson, Esq.

Since writing the above, I am favoured with yours of the 29th. I find you have not received my two last as yet, the first of which I must beg you will answer, and attend to the prisoner brought in by my boys since writing the above.

AUGUSTIN LAWRENCE AND SAMUEL TUDER TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Poughkeepsie, October 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed we send you an extract from a letter we have just received from the Marine Committee at Philadelphia. You will see by it we are referred to your honourable House for directions and advice respecting the launching and securing of the frigates and their stores, which we desire to have as soon as possible, as, unless you direct to the contrary, we shall launch the ship Montgomery on Monday and the other as soon as possible afterwards. The custom of giving the carpenters a treat at launching we suppose you would not mean to break through. The master carpenters judge one hundred dollars for each ship on that occasion will be reasonable to allow, as we are directed to advise with you by your opinion in that matter.

We are, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servants,

AUGUSTIN LAWRENCE,
SAMUEL TUDER.

To the Hon. Pierre Van Cortlandt, Esq., President of the Convention at Fishkill.

COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO AUGUSTIN LAWRENCE AND SAMUEL TUDER.

Fishkill, November 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of yesterday, with copy of that to you from the Marine Committee at Philadelphia enclosed, came to hand. We advise you to proceed, by all means, to launch the frigates as soon as you can, and then to proceed with the vessels to the place most safe in Roundout Kill, near Esopus Landing. We are sensible of the custom to give a treat to the workmen after launching; nor do we know that the sum of one hundred dollars for each is too much. We would recommend to you to have it properly considered, that you may not be blamed of extravagance and we of giving a sanction thereto. We are obliged to you for your invitation to see the launching; but whether any of the members will be able to attend, we know not. There are so few members present that few, if any, can be spared.

To Messrs. Augustin Lawrence and Samuel Tudor, Poughkeepsie.

COLONEL WELCH TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Fishkill, State of New-York, October 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Colonel Tash, agreeable to your directions, marched on for Head-Quarters, till he received the General's orders to pass on with his regiment to the Highlands, and post his men from Peakskill to Fishkill, about twenty miles along the post road and from fifty to seventy miles north of New-York, to assist the State of New-York against their Tories, and be ready, in case the British ships should come so far up the river, to prevent their landing men and doing damage.

I am stationed at the Fishkill, with Captain Calif's and Captain Robinson's companies, under the direction of a committee appointed by the Convention of the State of New-York "for inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies which may be formed in the said State against the liberties of America." Numbers of disaffected persons have been taken up and sent to the States of Pennsylvania, Connecticut, and Massachusetts-Bay; but as their numbers are still great, and the committee, at a loss where to send them to prevent their mischievous designs from hurting the common cause, applied to me to know whether I thought they might venture to send any to the State of New-Hampshire, I informed them that our State was well disposed to the cause of America, and it was my opinion would readily give their assistance in that affair; and if they did send any, to order them to the honourable Court, to be disposed of by them in such manner as they should judge best; which opinion of your goodness and judgment in this matter I hope will be kindly accepted from, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

JOSEPH WELCH.

To the honourable the Council and Representatives of the State of New-Hampshire.

N. B. The companies under my command are very healthy.

JOHN JAY TO THE GENERAL COURT OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Fishkill, October 31, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The Committee appointed by the Convention of this State for the purpose of inquiring into, detecting, and defeating all conspiracies which may be formed therein against the liberties of America, find it indispensably necessary to remove a number of dangerous and disaffected persons, some of whom have been taken in arms against America, to one of the neighbouring States.

On conferring with Lieutenant-Colonel Welch relative to sending them to New-Hampshire, he was of opinion that the zeal which your honourable body have uniformly manifested for the American cause, would induce you cheerfully to receive and dispose of them, in such manner as to prevent the further execution of their wicked and malicious designs.

The Committee desire that all such of the prisoners as are not directed to be confined, and not in circumstances to maintain themselves, be put to labour and compelled to earn their subsistence. And they have directed the bearer, Egbert Benson, Esquire, chairman of the Committee of this County, to pay you two hundred dollars on account of the expenses you may be put to by complying with their request.

The Committee beg leave to recommend this gentleman to your notice and confidence. He will communicate to you the instructions given him by the Committee, and readily give you any information that may be necessary to enable you to form a judgment of the characters of the several prisoners and the degrees of restrictions proper to enjoin.

By order of the Committee, I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN JAY, Chairman.

To the honourable the General Court of the State of New-Hampshire.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Saratoga, October 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Enclose you a paper containing a resolve of Congress respecting the Canadian prisoners, in consequence of which you will, if you think proper, detain or send back Lieutenant Evans.

I am, dear sir, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Monday morning, between eight and nine o'clock, our advanced guard boat down the lake made a signal for the approach of the enemy's fleet. In about one hour, five of their largest boats, or gondolas, appeared in sight; and a number of troops, Indians and Canadians were seen landing upon Three-Mile Point. Soon after, two of the armed boats stood over to the east side of the lake, inclining upwards, as if sent to reconnoitre. When they came considerably within shot, they were fired upon from the redoubts very near the shore, and by a row-galley which is stationed to cover the boom. They thereupon retired. In the mean time, the enemy's troops were distinctly seen to land upon the back of the point; and presently after, thirteen small batteaus and birch canoes crossed from the west to the east side of the lake into a bay about four miles below our redoubts. Upon these threatenings of an attack, our lines, redoubts and posts were all manned, and as the motions of the enemy seemed to indicate they were gathering their main force upon the west side of the lake, as if intending to make their push there, I ordered three regiments (Poor's, Reed's, and Greaton's) from Mount Independence to reinforce this side. The orders were instantly obeyed; and nothing could exceed the spirit and alertness which was shown by all officers and soldiers in executing every order that was given. About four in the evening, the boats and canoes that had passed to the west side of the lake returned; and the enemy were seen plainly to embark at the Three-Mile Point. I immediately ordered the guard boat to resume her station, and by sunset it was observed the body of the enemy had retired. By the information I receive daily, I find that General Carleton continues in his post, and that three large vessels are anchored near Putnam's Point, a little below which all the Light-Infantry, Grenadiers and a large body of Indians and Canadians are encamped. Chimney-Point and Crown-Point are also occupied by the enemy.

Yesterday I received the enclosed intelligence from Newbury, Co's. If Sir John Johnson did actually march at the time he is said to have done it, he must be upon the Mohock river now, or if he arrives at Fort George, Dayton's regiment cannot be better fixed than there. Surely your Oneidas will give you all the necessary information upon this head. But how could Sir John get back, should he meet with a check? I have seen the Mohock river fast frozen the 10th of November.

Colonel Lewis set off yesterday morning by Skeen. He has memorandums of our wants, and will be with you as soon as this letter. Colonel Gansevoort writes to me for spades. You must answer his demand, for I cannot.

We received the good news you sent us from New-York with joyful hearts. It was immediately made publick to the army in the manner you advised.

To General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-Haven, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Am to acquaint you that this State, considering the near approach of the enemy, and the critical situation of the Continental army, and the danger of having the communication cut off, have thought proper to send a reinforcement from our Militia, including all the able-bodied effective men that can be raised out of four of our Militia regiments, which probably will amount to about four hundred, exclusive of a part of the Ninth Regiment of this State, ordered to be stationed at Norwalk, Stamford, and Greenwich, together with about one hundred and fifty of our Troops-of-Horse, to be under the command of Major-General Wooster, especially appointed for that purpose, who is ordered and directed to repair with said forces, to coöperate with you, and to obey such orders as you shall give therein.

Am likewise desired by the Assembly of this State, to request your Excellency to discharge, as soon as may be, all the sick in the Militia now in service who shall be judged incapable of further service, and that some way might be devised to provide blankets and clothing for those of the Militia who have been so unfortunate as to lose them in retreating from the enemy; or that some suitable persons might be permitted, on furlough, to repair to the various parts of this State as may be convenient to procure those articles of the friends of those soldiers who are thus deprived of them; and would also observe that we are in hopes, upon the arrival of our troop of Horse, that those now in service may be relieved, and they supply their place.

We have been amused for several days with various accounts of your situation and the movements of our enemies, but have had no direct intelligence, which makes us very anxious to hear from you.

And am, with esteem and regard, sir, your humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

New-Haven, October 31, 1776.

SIR: Saturday last, at noon, I received your favour of the 22d instant. Rejoice to find that a supply of medicine is arrived. Wish your Surgeons may do well. Orders will be sent out directly to procure and forward to Skeensboro' ten tons of flour, to Tyconderoga two hundred iron spades and shovels. Shingle-nails are not to be purchased. Workmen shall be employed immediately to make them; please to inform, by return of this post, the quantity necessary.

No general engagement hath taken place between the two armies near New-York; some skirmishing, wherein the enemy have not been gainers.

I fancy the General Officers will, if possible without giving the enemy advantage, avoid a general action this season, which will be almost equal to a defeat. However, I am not in the secret of their counsels. None of their ships were able to pass Fort Washington at their attempt on Sunday last. One tender was sunk, two ships of war damaged and towed back.

The attack the enemy made at the same time by land was repulsed. We are put to difficulty to gain any clear intelligence, not having any late letters from the army. I hope for full intelligence from you; and wishing you Divine protection and blessing, I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Hon. General Gates.

We hear from the eastward that on Friday, the 20th of September last, a number of persons belonging to the private armed schooner Hannah-and-Molly, Agreen Crabtree master, went into the port of Liverpool, in Nova-Scotia Government, and crossed by land till they came within call of a large ship of five hundred tons, mounting four carriage-guns, four cohorns, and four swivels. The leader of the party hailed the ship, and desired them to send the boat on shore. Accordingly, the mate came with the boat. The privateer's men got into her, went on board the ship, and took her. They brought the guns to bear upon a brig loaded for England, and ordered the master of the brig to come alongside the ship with the brig. They then stripped the ship of every thing valuable, and put the effects on board the brig, and let the ship go on shore, and came off with the brig. The same crew also, at the same time, took two schooners and a sloop. The schooners and sloop have arrived; but the brig had not arrived in port the 6th of October, so that we fear she is retaken. The Captain of the privateer was so careful as to put all the guns and cannon, with a quantity of powder, on board his own privateer, so that they have arrived safe. The schooners and sloop had nails, fish, and a number of valuable articles on board.

Last Sunday se'nnight, arrived at Saco a small prize schooner sent in by the Putnam privateer, John Harman commander, having on board three hundred bushels of salt and some oil. Next day arrived another schooner, taken by the same privateer, having on board three hundred and seventy-five quintals of green fish, and some oil; she brings an account of another small vessel taken that is not yet arrived, and one that they took which was afterwards drove on shore by a frigate, the vessel lost, but the people got on board the privateer again; the frigate drove the privateer into a harbour, and came to anchor with intention to keep her in; but Captain Harman got one of his guns ashore on a point of land, and fired on the frigate, when she returned whole broadsides into the woods at them, but did no damage. Captain Harman, after a few shot, was so lucky as to cut away her fore-stay, which obliged her to come to sail and put to sea.

Captain Simmons, who arrived at Dartmouth on Friday last, in twenty days from St. Eustatia, informs that the Governour of that place assured him that a war would soon be declared by the King of France against Great Britain; that one of the British pirate ships, being in that port in pursuit of American property, had actually been fired upon by their forts; and that great encouragement was given to all American vessels throughout the French dominions.

Last week arrived in town, from Philadelphia, the Hon. John Adams, Esq., member of the Grand Council of America.

We learn from Ticonderoga that eight American prisoners, taken in one of our gondolas at the late engagement on the lakes, were last week permitted by the humane General Burgoyne to return to their several States, after extorting an oath from them that they would not again presume to take up arms in opposition to his Britannick Majesty's forces.

SAMUEL CURWEN TO JUDGE SEWALL.

Exeter, October 31, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By a letter from Mr. Danforth, I was informed some of my countrymen were about to apply to Administration for relief. As my residence has been much longer than the most, and the suddenness of my departure from home rendering it morally impossible for me to become possessed of much money, and my pretensions, for aught I know, being as good as any and better than many, I presume I shall not be the only exile left in a forlorn condition if any provision be made; and if never made, forlorn I shall truly be, my finances every day very sensibly lessening. Had I received Mr. Deberdt's letter in time, I should have returned to London, but it was otherwise; and if my presence now can be dispensed with, it will be more agreeable, as I live pleasantly enough among a few acquaintances, at the rate of twenty guineas a year, in a state of rigid economy that I never before was reduced to the necessity of putting in practice.

In my answer to Mr. Deberdt I referred him to you, whose friendship on this occasion I doubted not; nor need I now repeat my request of your assistance if that shall be necessary.

With great regard, etc.,
To the Hon. Judge Sewall, Brompton-Row, London.

TO THE INDEPENDENT SONS OF AMERICA.

By the favour of Providence, we have reached that political point which the wise have long seen to be the only foundation of safety—independence. Our work is now plain before us: to persevere to the end in supporting the declaration we have made to the world. To do this, every consideration urges us; to retreat is death, is slavery, calamities of every name, and all the gloomy horrors of the most odious and execrable tyranny; before us is all the glory of freedom, pregnant with every felicity our wishes can grasp or human nature enjoy. If we continue our exertions with that wisdom and magnanimity with which we began, liberty will soon triumph, wealth flow in through ten thousand channels, and America become the glory of all lands. Tyranny is now exerting her utmost power; and if resisted a little longer, George and all his murderers must bid adieu to America forever. Then we shall have the double honour and happiness of subduing the tyrants and enjoying liberty. The expense and dangers it has cost us will sweeten the blessing. If we have not suffered enough to make us duly prize the inestimable jewel, let us patiently bear what is yet to come. But if we continue in the ways of well-doing, we shall certainly succeed; for unerring Wisdom has told us "if we trust in the Lord and do good, we shall dwell in the land and be fed;" therefore, we have nothing to do but be faithful to God and our country, and the blessings we contend for will be the portion of us and our children. The prize of liberty is not to be gained in a day, nor bought with a small price, but is the reward of long labour and unremitted exertions; and a people are commonly made to realize their dependence on Heaven for so great a favour before they are crowned with complete success. The poor Dutch Provinces were oppressed by a Spanish tyrant, much like George of Britain, and they, although poor and small in number compared with the States of America, resisted the tyrant, who had at his command a great and rich nation, and, after a bloody contest of many years, gloriously triumphed in the complete freedom of their country. During the conflict, they were at some times reduced to such extreme difficulties as would have sunk any but free minds into absolute despair; but they were blessed with a succession of heroes and statesmen who wisely preferred liberty to every thing else, and persevered, through a long series of the severest calamities of every kind, with undiminished fervour in the glorious cause, until they arrived at the blissful period of independent States; and remain to this day a glorious monument of the supereminent virtue and valour of freemen. Let us imitate this bright example, and with them we shall shine in the history of mankind until the heavens are no more. The blood and treasure it may cost will heighten the value of liberty, and brighten the future days of peace and glory, when we or posterity shall recount the noble exertions and amazing intrepidity of those who were honoured by Heaven as the instruments of saving this great people from infernal tyranny. It will add to the joys of prosperity and sweeten the sacred triumph of freemen, when encircled with the charms of peace, to look back upon the trying scenes of the present time, and review the difficulties surmounted through a series of conflicts, while each moment was big with importance, and the fate of thousands hung upon every hour.

CONTINENTAL CONGRESS.

Philadelphia, Tuesday, September 3, 1776.

A Memorial from Colonel Moses Hazen was read and referred to the Committee appointed to inquire into the causes of the miscarriages in Canada.

General Sullivan having reduced to writing the verbal message from Lord Howe, the same was read, as follows:

"The following is the purport of the message sent from Lord Howe to Congress, by General Sullivan :

"That, though he could not at present treat with Congress as such, yet he was very desirous of having a conference with some of the members, whom he would consider for the present only as private gentlemen, and meet them himself, as such, at such place as they should appoint :

"That he, in conjunction with General Howe, had full powers to compromise the dispute between Great Britain and America upon terms advantageous to both ; the obtaining of which delayed him near two months in England, and prevented his arrival at this place before the declaration of independency took place :

"That he wished a compact might be settled at this time, when no decisive blow was struck, and neither party could say, that they were compelled to enter into such agreement :

"That, in case Congress were disposed to treat, many things which they had not as yet asked might and ought to be granted them ; and that if, upon the conference, they found any probable ground of accommodation, the authority of Congress must be afterwards acknowledged, otherwise the compact would not be complete."

Copy of General SULLIVAN'S Letter to Lord HOWE.

"New-York, 30th of August, 1776.

"MY LORD: Agreeable to your Lordship's request I have conversed with General Washington, who says that he has no power to treat upon the subject your Lordship mentioned, but has no objection to my going to Philadelphia to inform Congress of what your Lordship has been pleased to communicate to me upon the subject. I shall wait your Lordship's further direction ; and am, with much esteem, your Lordship's most obedient servant,

"JNO. SULLIVAN.

"Right Hon. Lord Viscount Howe."

His Lordship's Answer.

"Eagle, 30th August, 1776.

"SIR: Understanding by your letter that the only doubt of the propriety of going to Philadelphia is by your conversation with General Washington removed, I do not see occasion to give you further trouble, but to recommend the prosecuting of your journey as you were pleased on that condition to propose.

"I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

"HOWE.

"General Sullivan."

Mr. James Dean says that on his passage from Albany to New-York, on board Captain Legrange's vessel, he heard one Leach, a merchant from Schenectady, say that he sold some provision to Mr. Walter Livingston, Commissary in the Northern Department, for the use of the army; that Mr. Livingston produced a receipt for him to sign for twenty-four pounds more than the sum he was to receive; that he refused to sign it, alleging that it would be unjust; that Mr. Livingston replied that if he had his due it would be no damage to him; and that he would not pay him unless he signed the receipt. Mr. Leach said he still refused to sign it, and told the Commissary that he would complain to Congress; but after some further altercation he told Mr. Livingston that for one half of the extra sum he would sign the receipt, which was complied with, and the articles of his account altered to correspond with the receipt. Flour was altered from sixteen shillings and six pence to eighteen shillings per cwt.; the price of peas increased nine pence per bushel, and three pence added to the price of each flour barrel. Mr. Leach mentioned at the same time another instance wherein Mr. Livingston demanded and took a receipt for eight pounds more than he paid for some service done for the publick, that amounted to about fifty pounds. Mr. Leach's due was about two hundred pounds. He signed a receipt for two hundred and twenty-four pounds. Captain Legrange and his wife, and Mr. James Dean, Indian Interpreter, were present on board the vessel, and heard the discourse aforesaid.

The Committee appointed to confer with Lord Howe, agreeable to the order of Congress, brought in a Report in writing, which was read, as follows:

"In obedience to the orders of Congress, we have had a meeting with Lord Howe. It was on Wednesday last, upon Staten-Island, opposite to Amboy, where his Lordship received and entertained us with the utmost politeness.

"His Lordship opened the conversation, by acquainting us, that, though he could not treat with us as a Committee of Congress, yet, as his powers enabled him to confer and consult with any private gentlemen of influence in the Colonies, on the means of restoring peace between the two countries, he was glad of this opportunity of conferring with us on that subject, if we thought ourselves at liberty to enter into a conference with him in that character. We observed to his Lordship, that, as our business was to hear, he might consider us in what light he pleased, and communicate to us any propositions he might be authorized to make for the purpose mentioned; but that we could consider ourselves in no other character than that in which we were placed, by order of Congress. His Lordship then entered into a discourse of a considerable length, which contained no explicit proposition of peace, except one, namely, that the Colonies should return to their allegiance and obedience to the government of Great Britain. The rest consisted principally of assurances, that there was an exceeding good disposition in the King and his Ministers to make that government easy to us, with intimations, that, in case of our submission, they would cause the offensive acts of Parliament to be revised, and the instructions to Governors to be reconsidered: that so, if any just causes of complaint were found in the acts, or any errors in government were perceived to have crept into the instructions, they might be amended or withdrawn.

"We gave it as our opinion to his Lordship, that a return to the domination of Great Britain was not now to be expected. We mentioned the repeated humble petitions of the Colonies to the King and Parliament, which had been treated with contempt, and answered only by additional injuries; the unexampled patience we had shown under their tyrannical Government, and that it was not till the last act of Parliament which denounced war against us, and put us out of the King's protection, that we declared our independence; that this declaration had been called for by the people of the Colonies in general; that every Colony had approved of it, when made, and all now considered themselves as independent States, and were settling, or had settled, their Governments accordingly; so, that it was not in the power of Congress to agree for them, that they should return to their former dependent state; that there was no doubt of their inclination to peace, and their willingness to enter into a treaty with Great Britain that might be advantageous to both countries; that though his Lordship had, at present, no power to treat with them as independent States, he might, if there was the same good disposition in Britain, much sooner obtain fresh powers from thence, for that purpose, than powers could be obtained by Congress, from the several Colonies, to consent to a submission.

"His Lordship then saying, that he was sorry to find that no accommodation was like to take place, put an end to the conference.

"Upon the whole, it did not appear to your Committee, that his Lordship's commission contained any other authority than that expressed in the act of Parliament, namely, that of granting pardons, with such exceptions as the Commissioners shall think proper to make, and of declaring America, or any part of it, to be in the King's peace, upon submission; for, as to the power of inquiring into the state of America, which his Lordship mentioned to us, and of conferring and consulting with any persons the Commissioners might think proper, and representing the result of such conversations to the Ministry, who, provided the Colonies would subject themselves, might, after all, or might not, at their pleasure make any alterations in the former instructions to Governors, or propose in Parliament any amendment of the acts complained of, we apprehended any expectation from the effect of such a power would have been too uncertain and precarious to be relied on by America, had she still continued in her state of dependence."

Ordered, That the foregoing Report, and also the Message from Lord Howe, as delivered by General Sullivan, and the Resolution of Congress in consequence thereof, be published by the Committee who brought in the foregoing Report.

Ordered, That the said Committee publish Lord Drummond's Letters to General Washington, and the General's Answers.

XIII. The subjects or people of B. being merchants and residing in B., and their property and effects, shall be exempt from A.

XIV. The merchant ship of either of the parties, which shall be making into a port belonging to the enemy of the other ally, and concerning whose voyage, and the species of goods on board her, there shall be just grounds of suspicion, shall be obliged to exhibit, as well upon the high seas as in the ports and havens, not only her passports, but likewise certificates expressly showing that her goods are not of the number of those which have been prohibited as contraband.

XV. If, by the exhibiting of the abovesaid certificates, the other party discover there are any of those sorts of goods which are prohibited and declared contraband, and consigned for a port under the obedience of his enemies, it shall not be lawful to break up the hatches of such ship, or to open any chest, coffers, packs, casks, or any other vessels found therein, or to remove the smallest parcels of her goods, whether such belong to the subjects or people of A. or B., unless the lading be brought on shore in the presence of the officers of the Court of Admiralty, and an inventory thereof made, but there shall be no allowance made to sell, exchange, or alienate the same in any manner, until after that due and lawful process shall have been had against such prohibited goods, and the Court of Admiralty shall, by a sentence pronounced, have confiscated the same, saving always as well the ship itself as any other goods found therein, which by this treaty are to be esteemed free; neither may they be detained on pretence of their being, as it were, infected by the prohibited goods, much less shall they be confiscated as lawful prize; but if not the whole cargo, but only part thereof, shall consist of prohibited or contraband goods, and the commander of the ship shall be ready and willing to deliver them to the captor who has discovered them, in such case the captor, having received those goods, to recover and restore them, if taken within the jurisdiction of the said United States, or any of them.

ARTICLE VI. The Most Christian King and the said United States, shall not receive nor suffer to be received, into any of their ports, havens, roads, countries, islands, cities, or towns, any pirates or sea-robbers, or afford or suffer any entertainment, assistance, or provision, to be afforded to them; but shall endeavour by all means, that all pirates and sea-robbers, and their partners, sharers, and abettors, be found out, apprehended, and suffer condign punishment; and all the vessels and effects piratically taken, and brought into the ports and havens of the Most Christian King, or the said United States, which can be found, although they be sold, shall be restored, or satisfaction given therefor: the right owners, their agents, or attorneys, demanding the same, and making the right of property to appear by due proof.

ARTICLE VII. The Most Christian King shall protect, defend, and secure, as far as in his power, the subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United States, and every of them, and their vessels and effects of every kind, against all attacks, assaults, violences, injuries, depredations, or plunderings, by or from the King or Emperor of Morocco or Fez, and the States of Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, and any of them, and every other Prince, State, and Power on the coast of Barbary, in Africa, and the subjects of the said King, Emperor, States, and Powers, and every of them, in the same manner, and as effectually and fully, and as much to the benefit, advantage, ease, and safety of the said United States, and every of them, and of the subjects, people, and inhabitants thereof, to all intents and purposes, as the King and Kingdom of Great Britain, before the commencement of the present war, protected, defended, and shall forthwith discharge the ship, and not hinder her by any means freely to prosecute the voyage on which she was bound.

XVI. On the contrary it is agreed, that whatever shall be found to be laden by the subjects or people of either party, on any ship belonging to the enemy of the other, or to his subjects, although it be not of the sort of prohibited goods, may be confiscated in the same manner as if it belonged to the enemy himself, except such goods and merchandises as were put on board such ship before the declaration of war, or even after such declaration, if so be it were done without the knowledge of such declaration. So that the goods of the subjects and people of either party, whether they be of the nature of such as are prohibited or otherwise, which, as is aforesaid, were put on board any ship belonging to an enemy before the war, or after the declaration of it without knowledge of it, shall nowise be liable to confiscation, but shall well and truly be restored without delay to the proprietors demanding the same, but so as that if the said merchandises be contraband, it shall not be any ways lawful to carry them afterwards to any ports belonging to the enemy.

XVII. And that the more effectual care may be taken for the security of the subjects and people of both parties, that they suffer no injury by the men-of-war or privateers of the other party, all the commanders of the ships of A. and of B., and all their subjects and people, shall be forbid doing any injury or damage to the other side; and if they act to the contrary they shall be punished, and moreover shall be bound to make satisfaction for all matter of damage and the interest thereof, by reparation, under the pain and obligation of their person and goods.

XVIII. All ships and merchandises, of what nature soever, which shall be rescued out of the hands of any pirates or robbers on the high seas, shall be brought into some port of either State, and shall be delivered to the custody of the officers of that port, in order to be restored entire to the true proprietor as soon as due and sufficient proof shall be made concerning the property thereof.

XIX. It shall be lawful for the ships of war of either party, and privateers, freely to carry whithersoever they please, the ships and goods taken from their enemies, without being obliged to pay any duty to the officers of the Admiralty or any other judges: nor shall such prizes be arrested or seized where they come to and enter the ports of either party; nor shall the searchers or other officers of those places search the same, or make examination concerning the lawfulness of such prizes; but they may hoist sail at any time, and depart and carry their prizes to the place expressed in their commissions, which the commanders of such ships of war shall be obliged to show. On the contrary, no shelter or refuge shall be given in their ports to such as shall have made prizes of the subjects, people, or property of either parties; but if such should come in, being forced by stress of weather or the danger of the sea, all proper means shall be vigorously used, that they go out and retire from thence as soon as possible.

XX. If any ships belonging to either of the parties, their subjects or people, shall, within the coasts or dominions of the other, stick upon the sands or be wrecked, or suffer any other damage, all friendly assistance and relief shall be given to the persons shipwrecked, or such as shall be in danger thereof; and letters of safe conduct shall likewise be given to them for their free and quiet passage from thence, and the return of every one to his own country.

XXI. In case the subjects and people of either party, with their shipping, whether publick and of war, or private and of merchants, be forced, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or any other urgent necessity, for seeking of shelter and harbour, to retreat and enter into any of the rivers, creeks, bays, havens, roads, ports, or shores belonging to the other party, they shall be received and treated with all humanity and kindness, and enjoy all friendly protection and help; and they shall be permitted to refresh and provide themselves at reasonable rates with victuals and all things needful for the sustenance of their persons or reparation of their ships and conveniency of their voyage; and they shall no ways be detained or hindered from returning.

secured the people and inhabitants of the said United States, then called British Colonies in America, their vessels and effects, against all such attacks, assaults, violences, injuries, depredations, and plunderings.

ARTICLE VIII. If, in consequence of this treaty, the King of Great Britain should declare war against the Most Christian King, the said United States shall not assist Great Britain in such war with men, money, ships, or any the articles in this treaty denominated "contraband goods."

ARTICLE IX. The Most Christian King shall never invade, nor, under any pretence, attempt to possess himself of Labrador, New-Britain, Nova-Scotia, Acadia, Canada, Florida, nor any of the countries, cities, or towns on the Continent of North America, nor of the Islands of Newfoundland, Cape Breton, St. John's, Anticosti, nor of any other island lying near to the said continent in the seas, or in any gulph, bay, or river, it being the true intent and meaning of this treaty, that the said United States shall have the sole, exclusive, undivided, and perpetual possession of the countries, cities, and towns on the said continent, and of all islands near to it, which now are, or lately were under the jurisdiction of, or subject to the King or Crown of Great Britain, whenever they shall be united or confederated with the said United States.

ARTICLE X. The subjects, inhabitants, merchants, commanders of ships, masters and mariners of the States, Provinces, and dominions of each party respectively, shall abstain and forbear to fish in all places possessed, or which shall be possessed by the other party. The Most Christian King's subjects shall not fish in the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which the said United States hold, or shall hereafter hold; and, in like manner, the subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United States shall not fish in out of the said ports or roads, but may remove and depart when and whither they please, without any let or hindrance.

XXII. The subjects, inhabitants, merchants, commanders of ships, masters and mariners of the States, Provinces, and dominions of each party respectively, shall abstain and forbear to fish in all places possessed, or which shall be possessed, by the other party. A.'s subjects shall not fish in the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which B. holds, or shall hereafter hold; and, in the like manner, the subjects and people of B. shall not fish in the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which A. possesses, or shall hereafter possess; and if any ship or vessel shall be found fishing contrary to the tenour of this treaty, the said ship or vessel, with its lading, proof being made thereof, shall be confiscated.

XXIII. For the better promoting of commerce on both sides, it is agreed, that if a war shall break out between the said two nations, six months after the proclamation of war shall be allowed to the merchants in the cities and towns where they live, for settling and transporting their goods and merchandises; and if any thing be taken from them, or any injury be done them within that term by either party, or the people or subjects of either, full satisfaction shall be made for the same.

XXIV. No subjects of A. shall apply for or take any commission or letters of marque for arming any ship or ships to act as privateers against B., or the subjects or people of B., or any of them, or the property of any of them, from any Prince or State with which B. shall be at war; nor shall any citizen or subject of B. apply for or take any commission or letters of marque for arming any ship or ships to act as privateers against the subjects or people of A., or any of them, or the property of any of them, from any Prince or State with which A. shall be at war; and if any person of either nation shall take such commission or letters of marque, he shall be punished as a pirate.

XXV. It shall not be lawful for any foreign privateers not belonging to the subjects or people of A. or of B., who have commissions from any other Prince or State in enmity with either nation, to fit their ships in the ports of either the one or the other of the aforesaid parties, to sell what they have taken, or in any other manner whatsoever to exchange either ships, merchandises, or any other lading; neither shall they be allowed even to purchase victuals, except such as shall be necessary for their going to the next port of that Prince or State from which they have commissions.

XXVI. It shall be lawful for all and singular the subjects and people of A. and B. to sail with their ships, with all manner of liberty and security, no distinction being made who are the proprietors of the merchandises laden thereon from any port to the places of those who now are, or hereafter shall be, at enmity with A. or B. It shall likewise be lawful for the subjects and people aforesaid to sail with the ships and merchandises aforementioned, and to trade with the same liberty and security from the places, ports, and havens of those who are enemies of both or either party, without any opposition or disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the places of the enemy aforementioned to neutral places, but also from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy, whether they be under the jurisdiction of the same Prince or under several: and it is hereby stipulated that free ships shall also give a freedom to goods, and that every thing shall be deemed to be free and exempt which shall be found on board the ships belonging to the subjects of either of the confederates, although the whole lading or any part thereof should appertain to the enemies of either, contraband goods being always excepted. It is also agreed, in like manner, that the same liberty be extended to persons who are on board a free ship with this effect, that, although they be enemies to both or either party, they are not to be taken out of that free ship, unless they are soldiers and in actual service of the enemies.

XXVII. This liberty of navigation and commerce shall extend to all kinds of merchandises, excepting those only which are distinguished by the name of contraband; and under the name of contraband or prohibited goods shall be comprehended arms, great guns, bombs, with their the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which the Most Christian King possesses, or shall hereafter possess. And if any ship or vessel shall be found fishing contrary to the tenour of this treaty, the said ship or vessel, with its lading, proof being made thereof, shall be confiscated.

ARTICLE XI. If in any war the Most Christian King shall conquer, or get possession of the islands in the West-Indies, now under the jurisdiction of the King or Crown of Great Britain, or any of them, or any dominions of the said King or Crown in any other parts of the world, the subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United States, and every of them, shall enjoy the same rights, liberties, privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in trade, commerce, and navigation, to and from the said islands and dominions, that are mentioned in the second article of this treaty.

ARTICLE XII. It is the true intent and meaning of this treaty, that no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the exportation of any thing of the growth, production, or manufacture of the islands in the West-Indies now belonging, or which may hereafter belong to the Most Christian King, to the said United States, or any of them, than the lowest that are or shall be imposed on the exportation thereof to France, or to any other part of the world.

ARTICLE XIII. It is agreed by and between the said parties, that no duties whatever shall ever hereafter be imposed on the exportation of molasses from any of the islands and dominions of the Most Christian King in the West-Indies, to any of these United States.

ARTICLE XIV. The subjects, people, and inhabitants of the United States, or any of them, being merchants, and residing in France, and their property and effects of every kind, shall be exempt from the droit d'aubaine.

ARTICLE XV. The merchant ship of either of the parfusees and other things belonging to them, fire-balls, gunpowder, match, cannon-balls, pikes, swords, lances, spears, halberds, mortars, petards, granadoes, saltpetre, muskets, musket-balls, helmets, head-pieces, breast-plates, coats of mail, and like kinds of arms proper for arming soldiers, musket-rests, belts, horses with their furniture, and all other warlike instruments whatever. These merchandises which follow shall not be reckoned among contraband or prohibited goods, that is to say, all sorts of cloths, and all other manufactures woven of any wool, flax, silk, cotton, or any other materials whatever; all kinds of wearing apparel, together with the species whereof they are used to be made; gold and silver as well coined as uncoined, tin, iron, lead, copper, brass, coals; as also wheat and barley, and any other kind of corn or pulse; tobacco, and likewise all manner of spices; salted and smoked flesh, salted fish, cheese and butter, beer, oils, wines, sugars, and all sorts of salt; and in general all provisions which serve for the nourishment of mankind and the sustenance of life; furthermore, all kinds of cotton, hemp, flax, tar, pitch, ropes, cables, sails, sailcloth, anchors, and any parts of anchors; also ship masts, planks, boards and beams of what trees soever, and all things proper either for building or repairing ships, and all other goods whatever, which have not been worked into the form of any instrument or thing prepared for war by land or sea, shall not be reputed contraband, much less such as has been already wrought and made up for any other use, all which shall wholly be reckoned among free goods, as likewise all other merchandises and things which are not comprehended and particularly mentioned in the foregoing enumeration of contraband goods, so that they may be transported and carried in the freest manner by the subjects of both confederates, even to places belonging to an enemy, such towns and places being only excepted as are at that time besieged, blocked up, or invested.

XXVIII. To the end that all manner of dissensions and quarrels may be avoided and prevented on one side and the other, it is agreed, that in case either of the parties hereto shall be engaged in war, the ships and vessels belonging to the subjects and people of the other ally must be furnished with sea letters or passports expressing the name, property, and bulk of the ship, as also the name and place of habitation of the master or commander of the said ship, that it may appear thereby that the ship really and truly belongs to the subjects of one of the parties, which passport shall be made out and granted according to the form annexed to this treaty: they shall likewise be recalled every year, that is, if the ship happens to return home within the space of the year. It is likewise agreed, that such ships being laden are to be provided not only with passports as above mentioned, but also with certificates containing the several particulars of the cargo, the place whence the ship sailed and whither she is bound, that so it may be known whether any forbidden or contraband goods be on board the same, which certificates shall be made out by the officers of the place whence the ship set sail, in the accustomed form; and if any one shall think it fit or advisable to express in the said certificates the person to whom the goods on board belong, they may freely do so.

XXIX. The ships of the subjects or people of either of the parties coming upon any coasts belonging to either of the said allies, but not willing to enter into port, or being entered into port, and not willing to unload their cargoes or break bulk, shall not be obliged to give an account of their lading, unless they should be suspected, upon some manifest tokens, of carrying to the enemy of the other ally any prohibited goods called contraband; and in case of such manifest suspicion, the said subjects or people of either of the parties, shall be obliged to exhibit in the ports their passports and certificates, in the manner before specified.

XXX. If the ships of the said subjects or people of either of the parties, shall be met with either sailing along the coasts, or on the high seas, by any ship of war of the other, or by any privateers, the said ships of war or privateers, for the avoiding of any disorder, shall remain out of cannon-shot, and may send their boats aboard the merchant ship which they shall so meet with, and may enter her to the num-ties which shall be making into a port belonging to the enemy of the other ally, and concerning whose voyage, and the species of goods on board her, there shall be just grounds of suspicion, shall be obliged to exhibit, as well upon the high seas as in the ports and havens, not only her passports, but likewise certificates expressly showing that her goods are not of the number of those which have been prohibited as contraband.

ARTICLE XVI. If, by exhibiting the above certificates, the other party discover there are any of those sorts of goods which are prohibited and declared contraband, and consigned for a port under the obedience of his enemies, it shall not be lawful to break up the hatches of such ship, or to open any chest, coffers, packs, casks, or any other vessels found therein, or to remove the smallest parcels of her goods, whether such ship belong to the subjects of France or the inhabitants of the said United States, unless the lading be brought on shore, in the presence of the officer of the Court of Admiralty, and an inventory thereof made; but there shall be no allowance to sell, exchange, or alienate the same in any manner, until after that due and lawful process shall have been had against such prohibited goods, and the Courts of Admiralty shall, by a sentence pronounced, have confiscated the same; saving always as well the ship itself as any other goods found therein, which by this treaty are to be esteemed free; neither may they be detained on pretence of their being, as it were, infected by the prohibited goods, much less shall they be confiscated as lawful prize. But if not the whole cargo, but only part thereof, shall consist of prohibited or contraband goods, and the commander of the ship shall be ready and willing to deliver them to the captor who has discovered them, in such case the captor, having received those goods, shall forthwith discharge the ship, and ber of two or three men only, to whom the master or commander of such ship or vessel shall exhibit his passport concerning the property of the ship, made out according to the form inserted in this present treaty; and the ship, when she shall have showed such passport, shall be free and at liberty to pursue her voyage, so as it shall not be lawful to molest or search her in any manner, or to give her chase, or force her to quit her intended course.

It is also agreed that all goods, when once put on board the ships or vessels of either party, shall be subject to no further visitation; but all visitation or search shall be made beforehand, and all prohibited goods shall be stopped on the spot, before the same be put on board the ships or vessels of the respective States; nor shall either the persons or goods of the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty, or the United States, be put under any arrest or molested by any other kind of embargo for that cause; and only the subjects of that State to whom the said goods have been or shall be prohibited, and shall presume to sell or alienate such sort of goods, shall be duly punished for the offence.

ARTICLE 7. If in consequence of this treaty the King of Great Britain should declare war against the Most Christian King, the said United States shall not assist Great Britain in such war with men, money, ships, or any of the articles in this treaty denominated contraband goods.

ARTICLE 8. In case of any war between the Most Christian King and the King of Great Britain, the Most Christian King shall never invade, nor under any pretence attempt to possess himself of Labrador, New Britain, Nova Scotia, Acadia, Canada, Florida, nor any of the countries, cities, or towns, on the Continent of North America, nor of the islands of Newfoundland, Cape Breton, St. John's, Anticosti, nor of any other island lying near to the said Continent, in the seas, or in any gulf, bay, or river, it being the true intent and meaning of this treaty, that the said United States shall have the sole, exclusive, undivided, and perpetual possession of all the countries, cities, and towns, on the said Continent, and of all islands near to it, which now are, or lately were, under the jurisdiction of, or subject to, the King or Crown of Great Britain, whenever they shall be united or confederated with said United States.

ARTICLE 9. Nor shall the Most Christian King at any time make any claim or demand to the said countries, islands, cities, and towns, mentioned in the next preceding article, or any of them, or to any part thereof, for or on account of any assistance afforded to the said United States in attacking or conquering the same, or in obtaining such a submission, or confederation, as has been mentioned in the said preceding articles, nor on any other account whatever.

ARTICLE 10. If in any war, the Most Christian King shall conquer, or get possession of the islands in the West Indies now under the jurisdiction of the King or Crown of Great Britain, or any of them, or any dominions of the said King or Crown in any other parts of the world, the subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United States, and every of them, shall enjoy the same rights, liberties, privileges, immunities, and exemptions, in trade, commerce, and navigation, to and from the said islands and dominions, that are mentioned in the second article of this treaty.

ARTICLE 11. It is the true intent and meaning of this treaty, that no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the exportation of any thing of the growth, production, or manufacture of the islands in the West-Indies now belonging, or which may hereafter belong, to the Most Christian King, to the said United States, or any of them, than the lowest that are or shall be imposed on the exportation thereof to France, or to any other part of the world.

ARTICLE 12. It is agreed by and between the said parties, that no duties whatever shall ever hereafter be imposed on the exportation of molasses from any of the islands and dominions of the Most Christian King in the West-Indies to any of these United States.

ARTICLE 13. The subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United either party, with their shipping, whether publick and of war, or private and of merchants, be forced, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or any other urgent necessity for seeking of shelter and harbour, to retreat and enter into any of the rivers, creeks, bays, havens, roads, ports, or shores, belonging to the other party, they shall be received and treated with all humanity and kindness, and enjoy all friendly protection and help; and they shall be permitted to refresh and provide themselves at reasonable rates with victuals and all things needful for the sustenance of their persons, or reparation of their ships, and conveniency of their voyage; and they shall no ways be detained or hindered from returning out of the said ports or roads, but may remove and depart when and whither they please, without any let or hindrance.

ARTICLE XXIII. For the better promoting of commerce on both sides, it is agreed, that if a war shall break out between the said two nations, six months after the proclamation of war shall be allowed to the merchants in the cities and towns where they live, for settling and transporting their goods and merchandises; and if any thing be taken from them, or any injury be done them, within that time, by either party, or the people or subjects of either, full satisfaction shall be made for the same.

ARTICLE XXIV. No subjects of the Most Christian King shall apply for or take any commission, or letters of marque for arming any ship, or ships, to act as privateers against the said United States, or any of them, or against the subjects, people, or inhabitants of the said United States, or any of them, or against the property of any of the inhabitants of any of them, from any Prince or State with which the said United States shall be at war. Nor shall any citizen, subject, or inhabitant of the said United States, or States, or any of them, being merchants and residing in France, and their property, and effects of every kind, shall be exempt from the droit d'aubaine.

ARTICLE 14. The merchant ship of either of the parties which shall be making into a port belonging to the enemy of the other ally, and concerning whose voyage, and the species of goods on board her, there shall be just grounds of suspicion, shall be obliged to exhibit, as well upon the high seas as in the ports and havens, not only her passports, but likewise certificates expressly showing that her goods are not of the number of those which have been prohibited as contraband.

ARTICLE 15. If, by exhibiting of the above-said certificates, the other party discover there are any of those sorts of goods which are prohibited and declared contraband, and consigned for a port under the obedience of his enemies, it shall not be lawful to break up the hatches of such ship, or to open any chest, coffers, packs, casks, or any other vessels found therein, or to remove the smallest parcels of her goods, whether such ship belong to the subjects of France or the inhabitants of the said United States, unless the lading be brought on shore in the presence of the officers of the Court of Admiralty, and an inventory thereof made; but there shall be no allowance to sell, exchange, or alienate the same in any manner, until after that due and lawful process shall have been had against such prohibited goods, and the Courts of Admiralty shall, by a sentence pronounced, have confiscated the same, saving always as well the ship itself as any other goods found therein which by this treaty are to be esteemed free; neither may they be detained on pretence of their being, as it were, infected by the prohibited goods, much less shall they be confiscated as lawful prize: But if not the whole cargo, but only part thereof shall consist of prohibited or contraband goods, and the commander of the ship shall be ready and willing to deliver them to the captor who has discovered them, in such case the captor, having received those goods, shall forthwith discharge the ship, and not hinder her by any means freely to prosecute the voyage on which she was bound.

ARTICLE 16. On the contrary it is agreed, that whatever shall be found to be laden by the subjects and inhabitants of either party on any ship belonging to the enemy of the other, or to his subjects, the whole, although it be not of the sort of prohibited goods, may be confiscated in the same manner as if it belonged to the enemy himself, except such goods and merchandise as were put on board such ship before the declaration of war, or even after such declaration, if so be it were done without knowledge of such declaration. So that the goods of the subjects and people of either party, whether they be of the nature of such as were prohibited or otherwise, which, as is aforesaid, were put on board any ship belonging to an enemy before the war, or after the declaration of the same, without knowledge of it, shall noways be liable to confiscation, but shall well and truly be restored without delay to the proprietors demanding the same; but so as that if the said merchandises be contraband, it shall not be any ways lawful to carry them afterwards to any ports belonging to the enemy.

ARTICLE 17. And that more effectual care may be taken for the security of the subjects and inhabitants of both parties, that they suffer no injury by the men-of-war or privateers of the other party, all the commanders of the ships of the Most Christian King and of the said United States, and all their subjects and inhabitants, shall be forbid doing any injury or damage to the other side, and if they act to the contrary, they shall be punished, and shall moreover be bound to make satisfaction for all matter of damage, and the interest thereof, by reparation, under the pain and obligation of their person and goods.

ARTICLE 18. All ships and merchandises of what nature soever, which shall be rescued out of the hands of any pirates or robbers on the high seas, shall be brought into some port of either State, and shall be delivered to the custody of the officers of that port, in order to be restored entire to the true proprietor, as soon as due and sufficient proof shall be made concerning the property thereof.

ARTICLE 19. It shall be lawful for the ships of war of either party, any of them, apply for, or take any commission or letters of marque for arming any ship or ships to act as privateers against the subjects of the Most Christian King, or any of them, or the property of any of them, from any Prince or State with which the said King shall be at war; and if any person of either nation shall take such commissions or letters of marque, he shall be punished as a pirate.

ARTICLE XXV. It shall not be lawful for any foreign privateer, not belonging to the subjects of the Most Christian King, nor citizens of the said United States, who have commissions from any other Prince, or State, in enmity with either nation, to fit their ships in the ports of either the one or the other of the aforesaid parties, to sell what they have taken, or in any other manner whatsoever to exchange either ships, merchandises, or any other lading; neither shall they be allowed even to purchase victuals, except such as shall be necessary for their going to the next port of that Prince or State from which they have commissions.

ARTICLE XXVI. It shall be lawful for all and singular the subjects of the Most Christian King, and the citizens, people, and inhabitants of the said States, to sail with their ships with all manner of liberty and security, no distinction being made, who are the proprietors of the merchandises laden thereon, from any port to the places of those who now are, or hereafter shall be, at enmity with the Most Christian King, or the United States. It shall likewise be lawful for the subjects and inhabitants aforesaid to sail with the ships and merchandises aforementioned, and to trade with the same liberty and security from the places, ports, and havens of those who are enemies of both, or either party, without any opposition or disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the places of the enemy aforementioned to neutral places, but also from one place belonging to an enemy and privateers, freely to carry whithersoever they please the ships and goods taken from their enemies, without being obliged to pay any duty to the officers of the Admiralty or any other judges; nor shall such prizes be arrested or seized, when they come to and enter the ports of either party; nor shall the searchers, or other officers of those places, search the same, or make examination concerning the lawfulness of such prizes, but they may hoist sail at any time and depart, and carry their prizes to the place expressed in their commissions, which the commanders of such ships of war shall be obliged to show: on the contrary, no shelter or refuge shall be given in their ports to such as shall have made prize of the subjects, people, or property of either of the parties; but if such should come in, being forced by stress of weather or the dangers of the sea, all proper means shall be vigorously used, that they go out and retire from thence as soon as possible.

ARTICLE 20. If any ships belonging to either of the parties, their people, or subjects, shall, within the coasts or dominions of the other, stick upon the sands or be wrecked, or suffer any other damage, all friendly assistance and relief shall be given to the persons shipwrecked, or such as shall be in danger thereof; and letters of safe conduct shall likewise be given to them for their free and quiet passage from thence, and the return of every one to his own country.

ARTICLE 21. That in case the subjects and inhabitants of either party, with their shipping, whether publick, and of war, or private, and of merchants, be forced through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or any other urgent necessity for seeking of shelter and harbour, to retreat and enter into any of the rivers, creeks, bays, havens, roads, posts, or shores, belonging to the other party, they shall be received and treated with all humanity and kindness, and enjoy all friendly protection and help; and they shall be permitted to refresh and provide themselves, at reasonable rates with victuals and all things needful for the sustenance of their persons or reparation of their ships and conveniency of their voyage; and they shall noways be detained or hindered from returning out of the said ports or roads, but may remove and depart when and whither they please, without any let or hindrance.

ARTICLE 22. The subjects, inhabitants, merchants, commanders of ships, masters and marines of the States, Provinces, and dominions of each party respectively, shall abstain and forbear to fish in all places possessed, or which shall be possessed by the other party. The Most Christian King's subjects shall not fish in the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which the said United States hold, or shall hereafter hold, and in like manner, the subjects, people, and inhabitants of the said United States shall not fish in the havens, bays, creeks, roads, coasts, or places which the Most Christian King possesses or shall hereafter possess; and if any ship or vessel shall be found fishing contrary to the tenour of this treaty, the said ship or vessel, with its lading, proof being made thereof, shall be confiscated.

ARTICLE 23. For the better promoting of commerce on both sides, it is agreed, that if a war should break out between the said two nations, six months after the proclamation of war shall be allowed to the merchants in the cities and towns where they live, for selling and transporting their goods and merchandises; and if any thing be taken from them, or any injury be done them within that term by either party, or the people or subjects of either, full satisfaction shall be made for the same.

ARTICLE 24. No subject of the Most Christian King shall apply for, or take any commission or letters of marque for arming any ship or ships to act as privateers against the said United States, or any of them, or against the subjects, people, or inhabitants of the said United States or any of them, or against the property of any of the inhabitants of any of them, from any Prince or State with which the said United States shall be at war; nor shall any citizen, subject, or inhabitant of the said United States, or any of them, apply for or take any commission or letters of marque for arming any ship or ships to act as privateers against the subjects of the Most Christian King or any of them, or the property of any of them, from any Prince or State with which the said King

And it is hereby stipulated, that free ships shall also give a freedom to goods; and that every thing shall be deemed to be free and exempt, which shall be found on board the ships belonging to the subjects of either of the confederates, although the whole lading, or any part thereof, should appertain to the enemies of either; contraband goods being always excepted. It is also agreed, in like manner, that the same liberty be extended to persons who are on board a free ship, with this effect, that although they be enemies to both, or either party, they are not to be taken out of that free ship, unless they are soldiers and in actual service of the enemies.

ARTICLE XXVII. It shall likewise be lawful for the subjects and inhabitants aforesaid, to sail with the ships and merchandises aforementioned, and to trade with the same liberty and security, from the places, ports, and havens of those who are enemies of both or either party, without any opposition or disturbance whatsoever, not only directly from the places of the enemy aforementioned to neutral, but also from one place belonging to an enemy to another place belonging to an enemy, whether they be under the jurisdiction of the same Prince or under several. It is also agreed in like manner, that the same liberty be extended to persons who are on board a free ship, with this effect, that although they be enemies to both or either party, they are not to be taken out of that free ship unless they are soldiers and in actual service of the enemies.

Report of the Committee on Instructions, brought in SEPTEMBER 10, 1776.

Instructions to

There is delivered to you herewith a plan of a treaty with His Most Christian Majesty of France, approved of in Congress on the part of the United States of America.

It is the wish of Congress that the treaty should be concluded; and you are hereby instructed to use every means in your power for concluding it conformable to the plan you have received.

If you shall find that to be impracticable, you are hereby authorized to relax the demands of the United States, and to enlarge their offers agreeably to the following directions:

If A. shall not consent that the subjects of B. shall have the privileges proposed in the second article, then B. ought not to give the subjects of A. the privileges proposed in the first article; but, that B. shall give to A. the same privileges, liberties, and immunities, at least, and the like favour in all things, which any foreign nation the most favoured shall have, provided A. shall give to B. the same benefits, privileges, and immunities, which any the most favoured foreign nation now has, uses, vessel shall exhibit his passport concerning the property of the ship, made out according to the form inserted in this present treaty; and the ship, when she shall have showed such passport, shall be free and at liberty to pursue her voyage, so as it shall not be lawful to molest or search her in any manner, or to give her chase, or force her to quit her intended course. It is also agreed, that all goods, when once put on board the ships or vessels of either parties, shall be subject to no further visitation; but all visitation or search shall be made beforehand, and all prohibited goods shall be stopped on the spot, before the same be put on board the ships or vessels of the respective States; nor shall either the persons or goods of the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty or the United States, be put under any arrest, or molested by any other kind of embargo for that cause; and only the subject of that State to whom the said goods have been or shall be prohibited, and shall presume to sell or alienate such sort of goods, shall be duly punished for the offence.

The form of the Sea-Letters and Passports to be given to Ships and Vessels according to the 28th Article.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

It is hereby made known that leave and permission has been given to _____, master and commander of the ship called _____, of the town of _____, burthen _____ tons, or thereabouts, lying at present in the port and haven of _____, and bound for _____, and laden with _____, after that his ship has been visited, and before sailing, he shall make oath before the officers who have the jurisdiction of maritime affairs, that the said ship belongs to one or more of the subjects of _____, the act whereof shall be put at the end of these presents; as likewise that he will keep and cause to be kept, by his crew on board, the marine ordinances and regulations, and enter in the proper office a list signed and witnessed of the crew of his ship, and of all who shall embark on board her, whom he shall not or enjoys. And in case neither of these propositions of equal advantages are agreed to, then the whole of the said articles are to be rejected, rather than obstruct the further progress of the treaty.

The third article must be insisted upon.

The sixth article ought to be obtained if possible; but should be waived, rather than that the treaty should be interrupted by insisting upon it. A. agreeing, nevertheless, to use his interest and influence to procure passes from the States mentioned in this article for the vessels of B. upon the Mediterranean.

The seventh article will probably be attended with some difficulty. If you find A. determined not to agree to it, you are empowered to add to it any of the following proposals, offers, or two of them, or all of them, if one or two of them should be discovered to be unsatisfactory:

1. If A. should undertake an expedition to recover what she lost in the West-Indies during the last war with Great Britain, the United States will in that expedition supply France with provisions, if required, and will not supply Great Britain with any.

2. The United States will agree to an exclusive contract in favour of A. during the term of _____ years, for masts and naval stores, as far as they can spare them.

3. The United States will not, upon a peace with Great Britain, grant to her terms of commerce more advantageous than those they will grant to A.

The eleventh and twelfth articles are to be waived, if you find that the treaty will be interrupted by insisting on them.

You will press the thirteenth article; but let not the fate of the treaty depend upon obtaining it.

If A. should be unwilling to agree to the fifteenth and twenty-sixth articles, you are directed to consent that the goods and effects of enemies on board the ships and vessels of either party shall be liable to seizure and confiscation.

The twenty-fifth article is not to be insisted upon. As the scarcity of arms, artillery, and other military stores, is so considerable in the United States, you will solicit the Court of France for an immediate supply of twenty or thirty thousand muskets and bayonets, and a large supply of ammunition and brass field-pieces, to be sent under convoy by France. The United States engage for the payment of the arms, artillery, and ammunition, and to indemnify France for the expense of the convoy.

Engage a few good Engineers in the service of the United States.

It is highly probable that France means not to let the United States sink in the present contest. But as the difficulty of obtaining true accounts of our condition may cause an opinion to be entertained that we are able to support the war on our own strength and resources longer than in fact we can do, it will be proper for you to press for the immediate and explicit declaration of France in our favour, upon a suggestion that a reunion with Great Britain may be the consequence of a delay.

Should Spain be disinclined to our cause, from an apprehension of danger to her dominions in South America, you are empowered to give the strongest assurances that that Crown will receive no molestation from the United States, in the possession of those territories.

You will transmit to us the most speedy and full intelligence of your progress in this business, and of any other European transaction that it may import us to know.

In conducting this important business, the Congress have the greatest confidence in your address, abilities, vigilance, and attachment to the interests of the United States, and wish you every success.

Instructions to

There is delivered to you herewith a plan of a treaty with His Most Christian Majesty of France, approved of in Congress, on the part of the United States; and you are hereby instructed to use every means in your power for concluding it, conformably to the plan you have received.

If you shall find that to be impracticable, you are hereby authorized to relax the demands of the United States, and to enlarge their offers agreeably to the following directions:

If His Most Christian Majesty shall not consent that the inhabitants of the United States shall have the privileges proposed in the second article, then the United States ought not to give the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty the privileges proposed in the first article; but that the United States shall give to His Most Christian Majesty the same privileges, liberties, and immunities at least, and the like favour in all things which any foreign nation the most favoured shall have, provided His Most Christian Majesty shall give to the United States the same benefits, privileges, and immunities which the most favoured nation now has, uses, or enjoys. And, in case neither of these propositions of equal advantages is agreed to, then the whole of the said articles are to be rejected, rather than obstruct the further progress of the treaty.

The fourth article must be insisted on.

The seventh article ought to be obtained, if possible; but should be waived, rather than that the treaty should be interrupted by insisting upon it. His Most Christian Majesty agreeing, nevertheless, to use his interest and influence to procure passes from the States mentioned in this article for the vessels of the United States upon the Mediterranean.

The eighth article will probably be attended with some difficulty. If you find His Most Christian Majesty determined not to agree to it, you are empowered to add to it, as follows: That the United States will never be subject, or acknowledge allegiance, or obedience, to the King, Crown, or Parliament of Great Britain; nor grant to that nation any exclusive trade, or any advantages, or privileges in trade, more than to His Most Christian Majesty; neither shall any treaty for terminating the present war between the King of Great Britain and the United States, or any war which may be declared by the King of Great Britain against His Most Christian Majesty in consequence of this treaty, take effect until the expiration of six calendar months after the negotiation for that purpose shall have been duly notified, in the former instance by the United States to His Most Christian Majesty, and in the other instance by His Most Christian Majesty to the United States; to the end that both these parties may be included in the peace, if they think proper.

The twelfth and thirteenth articles are to be waived, if you find that the treaty will be interrupted by insisting on them.

You will press the fourteenth article; but let not the fate of the treaty depend upon obtaining it.

If His Most Christian Majesty should be unwilling to agree to the sixteenth and twenty-sixth articles, you are directed to consent that the goods and effects of enemies, on board the ships and vessels of either party, shall be liable to seizure and confiscation.

The twenty-fifth article is not to be insisted on.

You will solicit the Court of France for an immediate supply of twenty or thirty thousand muskets and bayonets, and a large supply of ammunition and brass field-pieces, to be sent under convoy by France. The United States engage for the payment of the arms, artillery, and ammunition, and to indemnify France for the expense of the convoy.

Engage a few good engineers in the service of the United States.

It is highly probable that France means not to let the United States sink in the present contest. But as the difficulty of obtaining true accounts of our condition may cause an opinion to be entertained that we are able to support the war on our own strength and resources longer than in fact we can do, it will be proper for you to press for the immediate and explicit declaration by France in our favour, upon a suggestion that a reunion with Great Britain may be the consequence of a delay.

Should Spain be disinclined to our cause, from an apprehension of danger to his dominions in South America, you are empowered to give the strongest assurances that that Crown will receive no molestation from the United States, in the possession of these territories.

You will transmit to us the most speedy and full intelligence of your progress in this business, and of any other transactions that it may import us to know.

You are desired to get the best and earliest information that you possibly can of any negotiations that the Court of London may be carrying on for obtaining foreign mercenaries to be sent against these States the next campaign; and if any such design is in agitation, you will endeavour to prevail with the Court of France to exert its influence in the most effectual manner to prevent the execution of such designs.

You are desired to obtain, as early as possible, a public acknowledgment of the independency of these States on the Crown and Parliament of Great Britain, by the Court of France.

In conducting this important business, the Congress have the greatest confidence in your address, abilities, vigilance, and attachment to the interests of the United States, and wish you every success.

That although this Congress cannot approve of the behaviour of Brigadier-General Arnold towards the Court-Martial of which Colonel Poor was the President, held at Tyconderoga in July last, and although the resolution of the Court-Martial in support of their dignity deserves applause, yet the conduct of General Gates, in putting an end to so dangerous an altercation, which appears to have been too warm on both sides, at a critical time, by dissolving the Court-Martial, was prudent, and highly deserves the approbation of Congress: (Postponed.)

That the prudence, vigilance, and activity of General Gates since he had the command of the Northern Army, in general, and especially in composing differences, removing jealousies and animosities, and exterminating the small-pox from that army, deserves the thanks of Congress, and that the thanks of Congress be accordingly transmitted him by the President: (Postponed.)

ART. 5. Whatsoever officer or soldier shall upbraid another for refusing a challenge, shall himself be punished as a challenger; and all officers and soldiers are hereby discharged of any disgrace, or opinion of disadvantage, which might arise from their having refused to accept of challenges, as they will only have acted in obedience to the orders of Congress, and done their duty as good soldiers, who subject themselves to discipline.

ART. 16. All officers and soldiers are to behave themselves orderly in quarters, and on their march; and whosoever shall commit any waste or spoil, either in walks of trees, parks, warrens, fish-ponds, houses or gardens, corn-fields, enclosures or meadows, or shall maliciously destroy any property whatsoever belonging to the good people of the United States, unless by order of the then Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the said States, to annoy rebels or other enemies in arms against said States: he or they that shall be found guilty of offending herein, shall (besides such penalties as they are liable to by law) be punished according to the nature and degree of the offence, by the judgment of a regimental or general court-martial.

ART. 22. If any commander of any garrison, fortress, or post, shall be compelled by the officers or soldiers under his command to give up to the enemy, or to abandon it, the commissioned officers, non-commissioned officers, or soldiers, who shall be convicted of having so offended, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall be inflicted upon them by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 23. All sutlers and retainers to a camp, and all persons whatsoever serving with the armies of the United States in the field, though no enlisted soldier, are to be subject to orders, according to the rules and discipline of war.

ART. 24. ART. 25. If upon marches, guards, or in quarters, different corps shall happen to join or do duty together, the eldest officer by commission there, on duty, or in quarters, shall command the whole, and give out orders for what is needful to the service: regard being always had to the several ranks of those corps, and the posts they usually occupy.

ART. 26. And in like manner also, if any regiments, troops, or detachments of horse or foot shall happen to march with, or be encamped or quartered with any bodies or detachments of other troops in the service of the United States, the eldest officer, without respect to corps, shall take upon him the command of the whole, and give the necessary orders to the service.

SECTION XIV.

ART. 1. A general court-martial in the United States shall not consist of less than thirteen commissioned officers, and the President of such court-martial shall not be the commander-in-chief or commandant of the garrison where the offender shall be tried, nor be under the degree of a field-officer.

ART. 2. The members both of general and regimental courts-martial shall, when belonging to different corps, take the same rank which they hold in the army; but when courts-martial shall be composed of officers of one corps, they shall take their ranks according to the dates of the commissions, by which they are mustered in the said corps.

ART. 3. The Judge-Advocate General, or some person deputed by him, shall prosecute in the name of the United States of America; and in trials of offenders by general courts-martial, administer to each member the following oaths:

"You shall well and truly try and determine, according to your evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoners to be tried. So help you God."

"You A. B. do swear, that you will duly administer justice according to the rules and articles for the better government of the forces of the United States of America, without partiality, favour, or affection; and if any doubt shall arise which is not explained by the said articles, according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in the like cases. And you do further swear, that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be approved of by the General, or commander-in-chief; neither will you upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof as a witness by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

And as soon as the said oath shall have been administered to the respective members, the President of the court shall administer to the Judge-Advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following words:

"You A. B. do swear, that you will not, upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

ART. 4. All the members of a court-martial are to behave with calmness and decency; and in the giving of their votes, are to begin with the youngest in commission.

ART. 6. All persons called to give evidence, in any cause, before a court-martial, who shall refuse to give evidence, shall be punished for such refusal, at the discretion of such court-martial: the oath to be administered in the following form, viz:

"You swear the evidence you shall give in the cause now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

ART. 7. No field-officer shall be tried by any person under the degree of a captain; nor shall any proceedings or trials be carried on excepting between the hours of eight in the morning and of three in the afternoon, except in cases which require an immediate example.

ART. 8. No sentence of a general court-martial shall be put in execution, till after a report shall be made of the whole proceedings to Congress, or to the General or Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the United States, and their or his directions be signified thereupon.

ART. 9. For the more equitable decision of disputes which may arise between officers and soldiers belonging to different corps, it is hereby directed, that the courts-martial shall be equally composed of officers belonging to the corps in which the parties in question do then serve; and that the Presidents shall be taken by turns, beginning with that corps which shall be eldest in rank.

ART. 10. The commissioned officers of every regiment may, by the appointment of their Colonel or commanding officer, hold regimental courts-martial for the inquiring into such disputes or criminal matters, as may come before them, and for the inflicting corporeal punishments for small offences, and shall give judgment by the majority of voices; but no sentence shall be executed till the commanding officer (not being a member of the court-martial) or the commandant of the garrison shall have confirmed the same.

ART. 11. No regimental court-martial shall consist of less than five officers, excepting in cases where that number cannot conveniently be assembled, when three may be sufficient; who are likewise to determine upon the sentence by the majority of voices; which sentence is to be confirmed by the commanding officer of the regiment, not being a member of the court-martial.

ART. 12. Every officer commanding in any of the forts, barracks, or elsewhere, where the corps under his command consists of detachments from different regiments, or of independent companies, may assemble courts-martial for the trial of offenders in the same manner as if they were regimental, whose sentence is not to be executed until it shall be confirmed by the said commanding officer.

ART. 13. No commissioned officer shall be cashiered or dismissed from the service, excepting by an order from the Congress, or by the sentence of a general court-martial; but non-commissioned officers may be discharged as private soldiers, and, by the order of the Colonel of the regiment, or by the sentence of a regimental court-martial, be reduced to private sentinels.

ART. 14. No person whatever shall use menacing words, signs, or gestures, in the presence of a court-martial then sitting, or shall cause any disorder or riot so as to disturb their proceedings, on the penalty of being punished at the discretion of the said court-martial.

ART. 15. To the end that offenders may be brought to justice, it is hereby directed, that whenever any officer or soldier shall commit a crime deserving punishment, he shall, by his commanding officer, if an officer, be put in arrest: if a non-commissioned officer or soldier, be imprisoned till he shall be either tried by a court-martial, or shall be lawfully discharged by a proper authority.

ART. 16. No officer or soldier who shall be put in arrest or imprisonment, shall continue in his confinement more than eight days, or till such time as a court-martial can be conveniently assembled.

ART. 17. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-martial, shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge, by any officer belonging to the forces of the United States: which officer shall, at the same time, deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime with which the said prisoner is charged.

ART. 18. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-martial, shall presume to release any prisoner committed to his charge without proper authority for so doing; nor shall he suffer any prisoner to escape, on the penalty of being punished for it by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 19. Every officer or provost-martial to whose charge prisoners shall be committed, is hereby required, within twenty-four hours after such commitment, or as soon as he shall be relieved from his guard, to give in writing to the Colonel of the regiment to whom the prisoner belongs, (where the prisoner is confined upon the guard belonging to the said regiment, and that his offence only relates to the neglect of duty in his own corps,) or to the commander-in-chief, their names, their crimes, and the names of the officers who committed them, on the penalty of his being punished for his disobedience or neglect, at the discretion of a court-martial.

ART. 20. And if any officer under arrest shall leave his confinement before he is set at liberty by the officer who confined him, or by a superiour power, he shall be cashiered for it.

ART. 21. Whatsoever commissioned officer shall be convicted, before a general court-martial, of behaving in a scandalous, infamous manner, such as is unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, shall be discharged from the service.

ART. 22. In all cases where a commissioned officer is cashiered for cowardice, or fraud, it shall be added in the punishment that the crime, name, place of abode, and punishment of the delinquent, be published in the newspapers in and about the camp, and of that particular State from which the offender came, or usually resides; after which, it shall be deemed scandalous for any officer to associate with him.

SECTION XV.

ART. 1. When any commissioned officer shall happen to die, or be killed, in the service of the United States, the Major of the regiment, or the officer doing the Major's duty in his absence, shall immediately secure all his effects or equipage then in camp or quarters; and shall, before the next regimental court-martial, make an inventory thereof, and forthwith transmit the same to the office of the Board of War, to the end that his executors may, after payment of his debts in quarters, and interment, receive the overplus, if any be, to his or their use.

ART. 2. When any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall happen to die, or to be killed, in the service of the United States, the then commanding officer of the troop or company shall, in the presence of two other commissioned officers, take an account of whatever effects he dies possessed of above his regimental clothing, arms, and accoutrements, and transmit the same to the office of the Board at War; which said effects are to be accounted for, and paid to the representative of such deceased non-commissioned officer or soldier. And in case any of the officers so authorized to take care of the effects of dead officers and soldiers, should, before they shall have accounted to their representatives for the same, have occasion to leave the regiment, by preferment or otherwise, they shall, before they be permitted to quit the same, deposite in the hands of the commanding officer, or of the agent of the regiment, all the effects of such deceased non-commissioned officers and soldiers, in order that the same may be secured for and paid to their respective representatives.

SECTION XVI.

ART. 1. All officers, conductors, gunners, matrosses, drivers, or any other persons whatsoever, receiving pay or hire in the service of the Artillery of the United States, shall be governed by the aforesaid rules and articles, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial in like manner with the officers and soldiers of the other troops in the service of the United States.

ART. 2. For differences arising amongst themselves, or in matters relating solely to their own corps, the courts-martial may be composed of their own officers; but where a number sufficient of such officers cannot be assembled, or in matters wherein other corps are interested, the officers of Artillery shall sit in courts-martial with the officers of the other corps, taking their rank according to the dates of their respective commissions, and no otherwise.

SECTION XVII.

ART. 1. The officers and soldiers of any troops, whether Minute-men, Militia, or others, being mustered and in Continental pay, shall, at all times and in all places, when joined, or acting in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, be governed by these rules or articles of war, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial in like manner with the officers and soldiers in the regular forces, save only that such courts-martial shall be composed entirely of Militia officers of the same Provincial corps with the offender.

That such Militia and Minute-men as are now in service, and have, by particular contract with the respective States, engaged to be governed by particular regulations while in Continental service, shall not be subject to the above articles of war.

ART. 2. For the future, all General officers and Colonels, serving by commission from the authority of any particular State, shall, on all detachments, courts-martial, or other duty wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, take rank next after all Generals and Colonels serving by commissions from Congress, though the commissions of such particular Generals and Colonels should be of elder date; and in like manner Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors, Captains, and other inferior officers, serving by commission from any particular State, shall, on all detachments, courts-martial, or other duty wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, have rank next after all officers of the like rank serving by commissions from Congress, though the commissions of such Lieutenant-Colonels, Majors, Captains, and other inferior officers, should be of elder date to those of the like rank from Congress.

SECTION XVIII.

ART. 1. The foregoing articles are to be read and published once in every two months at the head of every regiment, troop, or company, mustered, or to be mustered, in the service of the United States; and are to be duly observed and exactly obeyed by all officers and soldiers who are or shall be in the said service.

ART. 2. The General, or Commander-in-Chief for the time being, shall have full power of pardoning or mitigating any of the punishments ordered to be inflicted, for any of the offences mentioned in the foregoing articles; and every offender convicted as aforesaid, by any regimental court-martial, may be pardoned, or have his punishment mitigated by the Colonel, or officer commanding the regiment.

ART. 3. No person shall be sentenced to suffer death, except in the cases expressly mentioned in the foregoing articles; nor shall more than one hundred lashes be inflicted on any offender, at the discretion of a court-martial.

That every Judge-Advocate, or person officiating as such, at any general court-martial, do, and he is hereby required to transmit, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place can admit, the original proceedings and sentence of such court-martial to the Secretary at War, which said original proceedings and sentence shall be carefully kept and preserved in the office of said Secretary, to the end that persons entitled thereto may be enabled, upon application to the said office, to obtain copies thereof.

That the party tried by any general court-martial, shall be entitled to a copy of the sentence and proceedings of such court-martial, upon demand thereof, made by himself, or by any other person or persons on his behalf, whether such sentence be approved or not.

ART. 4. The field-officers of each and every regiment are to appoint some suitable person belonging to such regiment, to receive all such fines as may arise within the same, for any breach of any of the foregoing articles, and shall direct the same to be carefully and properly applied to the relief of such sick, wounded, or necessitous soldiers as belong to such regiments; and such person shall account with such officer for all fines received, and the application thereof.

ART. 5. All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the above articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general or regimental court-martial, according to the nature and degree of the offence, and be punished at their discretion.

The Committee appointed to repair to the camp, having executed that service, and returned, brought in a Report,* which was read:

Ordered, To lie on the table.

* Report of the Committee sent to the Camp near NEW-YORK.

[October 3, 1776: Read and ordered to lie upon the table.]

The Committee appointed to inquire into the state of the Army at New-York, and the best means of supplying its wants, beg leave to report: that having left this city the 21st ultimo they arrived at the camp the 24th, and after three days' conference with the General Officers and an interview with many of the Staff, they found the following to be a state of facts:

That the number of men of which the Army then consisted, including non-commissioned officers and 3,649 men taken from the Flying-Camp, was 25,375; of which 16,905 were fit for duty, 1,543 on command, and the residue sick or absent. That of the effective troops about 4,500 were at different posts on the Jersey shore at and between Fort Constitution and Bergen, and the others on the Heights of Harlem and King's Bridge.

That it was necessary in the opinion of the General Officers to reinforce the Army aforesaid with 15,000 men, and to complete the levies for the Flying-Camp, agreeable to the former orders of Congress, by which means it would consist of about 11,500 men; that as part of 15,000 men, it was found that the Militia on their march from the Massachusetts-Bay and Connecticut, and Continental Troops from Rhode-Island, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and North-Carolina, with Colonel Durkee's Regiment, then at Bergen and not included in the return, would amount to upwards of 11,000 men.

That some of the troops in camp were badly officered, and not subject to that command which good troops ought ever to be. That articles of war and general orders were frequently transgressed, and the Commander-in-Chief had the mortification to see that some of his officers, on whom he ought to have depended for suppressing disorderly behaviour, encouraged the soldiers by their examples to plunder and commit other offences, or studiously endeavoured to excuse them from just punishment by partial trials.

That the Army was well supplied with provisions, excepting vegetables, which were not then to be procured, and that the Commissary-General was in want of salt.

That the sick have been greatly neglected, and numbers, to the prejudice of the service, have died from want of necessities and attendance: each Regiment has been hitherto furnished with an hospital under the care of the Regimental Surgeon, in consequence of which on a removal of the Army, the numerous sick of all the said hospitals have been suddenly delivered to the Director-General, who, not being provided with a general hospital or Surgeons and nurses sufficient for the purpose, has not been able to prevent the evils complained of; added to this the Adjutants have frequently neglected to make returns to the Director and Commissary-General of the sick in their respective Regiments, without which they could not receive the amount of their rations, agreeable to order of Congress, in necessities provided by the Director.

That in the department of the Colonel of Artillery and Commissary of Military Stores ten tons of musket and rifle powder, twenty tons of buckshot, two hundred thousand flints, eighteen brass field-pieces, six-pounders, and eighteen three-pounders, one thousand yards of fine white flannel, and a quantity of tin, were wanted. The number of conductors now employed are insufficient, and the Army is found to be in improper place for the principal laboratory of the Continent.

Resolved, That Charles Startin be permitted to return to England with his wife and family, from any of the United States he thinks proper, except New-York.

The Committee of Treasury reported, that there is due, To Martin Housman, for the hire of his Wagon and ferriages, with Generals Prescot and McDonald's Baggage to Newark, 43 Dollars.

To George Campbell, for his own and Mr. Caldwell's and Mr. Tod's expenses, as an escort to money from Philadelphia to Albany, 189 67-90ths Dollars:

To John Sparhawk, for Quills, &c., for the use of the Treasury-Office, 27 84-90ths Dollars:

To Ludwick Karcher, a balance of 3,150 36-90ths Dollars; the whole of his Account amounting to 8,483 66-90ths Dollars, of which he has received 5,333 30-90ths Dollars; the balance is 3,150 36-90ths:

Ordered, The the said Accounts be paid.

Congress took into consideration the Report of the Board of Treasury, on the ways and means for raising a further sum of Money: Whereupon,

Resolved, That five millions of Continental Dollars be immediately borrowed for the use of the United States, at the annual interest of four per cent. per annum:

That the faith of the United States be pledged to the lenders for the payment of the sums to be borrowed, and the interest arising thereon, and that certificates be given to the lenders in the form following, viz:

"The United States of America acknowledge the receipt of _____ Dollars from _____, which they promise to pay to the said _____, or bearer, on the _____ day of _____, with interest annually, at the rate of four per cent. per annum, agreeable to a resolution of the United States, passed the third day of October, 1776. Witness the hand of the Treasurer, this _____ day of _____, A. D. _____.

"Countersigned" by the Commissioners of one of the Loan-Offices hereafter mentioned.

That for the convenience of the lenders, a Loan-Office be established in each of the United States, and a Commissioner, to superintend such office, be appointed by the said

That the military chest has been too frequently unsupplied with money, which ought to be remedied in future; but that at present the Paymaster has a sum fully equal to the General's wishes.

That clothing and blankets are greatly wanted, and a supply has been neglected as well from the want of a proper officer to superintend the business as from the scarcity of the articles.

That military discipline has been omitted in consequence of the unskillfulness of many of the regimental officers, and the want of a proper officer detached from other services to instruct them therein.

To remedy these inconveniences the Committee beg leave to report the following Resolutions:

Resolved, as the opinion of the Committee, That it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the respective States from Virginia to New-Hampshire inclusively, to take the most effectual measures for completing, by the 10th November, their respective proportions of the levies to be raised during the war.

Resolved, That the Army having greatly suffered through the defect of some of its Regimental Officers, it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the respective States to use their utmost endeavours that all the officers to be hereafter appointed be men of honour and known abilities, without a particular regard to their having before been in service.

Resolved, That for the further encouragement of the non-commissioned officers and soldiers who shall engage in the service during the war, a suit of Clothes be annually given to each of said officers and soldiers: to consist, for the present, of two linen hunting-shirts, two pair of overalls, a leather or woollen waistcoat with sleeves, one pair of breeches, a hat or leather cap, two shirts, two pair of hose, and two pair of shoes.

Resolved, That no Regimental Hospitals be in future allowed in the neighbourhood of a General Hospital.

That John Morgan, Esq., provide and superintend a Hospital at a proper distance from the camp for the Army posted on the east side of Hudson's river.

That William Shippen, Esq., provide and superintend a Hospital for the Army in the State of New-Jersey.

That each of the Hospitals be supplied by the respective Directors with such a number of Surgeons, Apothecaries, Surgeons' Mates, and other assistants, and also with such quantities of Medicine, Bedding, and other necessities as they shall judge expedient.

That they make weekly returns to Congress, and to the Commander-in-Chief, of the officers and assistants of each denomination, and also the number of sick and deceased, in their respective Hospitals.

That the Regimental Surgeons be directed to send to the General Hospitals such officers and soldiers of their respective Regiments as, confined by wounds or other disorders, shall require nurses or constant attendance, and from time to time to apply to the Quartermaster-General or his Deputy for convenient wagons for this purpose, and also that they apply to the Directors in their respective departments for medicine and other necessities.

That the wages of Nurses be augmented to one Dollar per week.

That the Commanding Officer of each Regiment be directed once a week to send a commission officer to visit the sick of his respective Regiment in the General Hospital, and report their state to him.

Resolved, That a Commissary of Clothing be appointed for each of States respectively, which are to be responsible for the faithful discharge of their duty in the said offices :

That the business of the said Commissioners shall be to deliver certificates for all such sums of money as shall be brought into their respective offices, agreeable to these resolutions, which certificates shall be indented and the checks kept in the said office ; to keep books, in which regular entries shall be made of the sums borrowed, and of the time when, and the names of the persons by whom, the said sums were lent ; to transmit to the Continental Treasurer once a month an account of the cash in their respective offices, and to answer all drafts of the Treasurer to the amount of the cash which they shall, at any time, have in their hands, as aforesaid :

That the Treasurer of the United States shall send to the respective Loan-Offices, such a number of certificates and of such denominations as shall be ordered by the Commissioners of the Treasury :

That no certificate be issued for a less sum than 300 Dollars :

That the several sums of money to be borrowed shall be repaid at the office where the same was lent, at the expiration of three years, and that the annual interest shall be likewise paid at the said office :

That the said Commissioners of the respective Loan-Offices be entitled to receive of the United States one-eighth per cent. on all moneys which shall be brought into their respective Loan-Offices, in lieu of all claims and demands that they may have for transacting the business of the said office.

Resolved, That the Secret Committee be empowered to take such measures as they shall judge necessary for purchasing, arming, and equipping a Frigate and two Cutters, in Europe, and to give proper orders for the said Frigate making a cruise in the British Channel against our enemies, and for the said Cutters to be employed in transporting to these States such articles as the said Committee have been ordered to import.

The several matters to this day referred being postponed,

Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow.

the Armies of the United States, whose duty shall be to make constant returns to the Assemblies or Conventions of the respective States of the Clothing wanted for their several Regiments ; to receive and pay for the same, to deliver it to the Paymasters of the respective Regiments, to be by them distributed to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers, and deducted from their wages respectively, unless allowed as a bounty by order of Congress.

Resolved, That the Commissary-General be empowered to employ suitable persons to import such quantities of Salt as he shall judge necessary, on account and risk of the United States.

Resolved, That for promoting health in the Army, the Commissary-General be directed to cause the same to be well supplied with Indian Meal and Vegetables.

Resolved, That there be a Deputy Commissary of Stores for the Army at New-York, with the pay of thirty Dollars per month.

Resolved, That the Board of War be directed to send to a Commissary of Stores at New-York ten tons Musket and Rifle Powder, twenty tons Buck-shot, a quantity of Tin, as many brass Field-pieces, six and three-pounders, as they can procure ; and that they employ the Overseer of the Foundry in this place to cast eighteen brass Field-pieces, six-pounders, and eighteen three-pounders, as soon as may be, and order Carriages to be completed for the same.

Resolved, That Mr. Mease be directed forthwith to send to the Colonel of Artillery at New-York one thousand yards of fine white Flannel.

Resolved, That the Board of War be directed to prepare a plan for establishing a Continental Laboratory and a Military Academy, and provide the same with proper officers ; also for establishing a suitable number of Artillery Regiments, and a Corps of Artificers for said Regiments.

Report of the Committee appointed to go to the Camp, brought in OCTOBER, 1776, respecting the Artillery.

HEAD-QUARTERS, HARLEM HEIGHTS, September 27, 1776.

The following hints for the improvement of the Artillery of the United States is humbly submitted to the Committee of the honourable Congress now in camp :

That there be one or more capital Laboratories erected at a distance from the seat of war, in which shall be prepared large quantities of ordnance stores of every species and denomination.

That at the same place a sufficient number of able artificers be employed to make carriages for cannon of all sorts and sizes, ammunition wagons, tumbrils, harness, &c., &c.

That as contiguous as possible to this same place, a Foundry for casting brass cannon, mortars, and howitzers, be established upon a large scale.

And as officers can never act with confidence until they are masters of their profession, an academy established on a liberal plan would be

A Petition from the Officers and Men of the Brig Andrew Doria was presented and read : Whereupon,

Resolved, That the Continental Agents in Philadelphia be directed, with all despatch, to make an estimate of the prizes taken by the Andrew Doria, and lay the same before the Marine Committee for their approbation ; and that the said Agents be directed to pay to the officers and men of the Andrew Doria, one-half of what may be estimated to be due to them :

That the said Agents be further directed to make an estimate of the stores and prizes taken by the fleet, commanded by Commodore Hopkins, and brought from Providence, and lay the same before the Marine Committee for approbation, as aforesaid, and pay to the officers and men entitled thereto, one-half of what may be estimated to be due to them.

A Letter of the 2d and 3d, from General Washington, and two, of the 25th and 26th September, from General Schuyler, being received, were read.

Congress took into consideration the Report of the Committee sent to Head-Quarters ; and, after debate, the further consideration thereof was postponed.

The several matters to this day referred being postponed,

Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow.

Saturday, October 5, 1776.

A Letter, of the 23d of September, from James Bowdoin, with a copy of Resolutions passed by the General Assembly of Massachusetts-Bay ; one, of the 24th of the same month, from the Committee of Safety of New-Hampshire ; and one, of the 3d instant, from Governour Livingston, were read.

Ordered, That the Letters from General Washington and General Schuyler, with the Papers enclosed, which were read yesterday, be referred to the Board of War :

That the Letter from Mr. Bowdoin be referred to the Marine Committee :

That the Letter from Governour Livingston be referred to a Committee of three, and that the said Committee be of the utmost service to the Continent, where the whole theory and practice of fortification and gunnery should be taught ; to be nearly on the same plan as that at Woolwich, making allowances for the difference of circumstances, a place to which our enemies are indebted for the superiority of their Artillery to all who have opposed them.

That these and all other matters respecting the Artillery and Artillery stores be under the direction of a Board of Ordnance, whose business shall be the regulation and management of the affairs of this department, and to whom returns shall be made.

The corps of Artillery now in the service of the United States is exceedingly insufficient for the operations of an extensive service. It consists of a little more than six hundred, officers included : of these nearly one hundred are in the Northern Army, where their numbers are very unequal to the service.

His Excellency General Washington has, to supply the deficiency of this corps, drafted from the different Regiments six hundred men, and General Gates a proportionate number. This is a temporary remedy, attended with a variety of inconveniences.

There ought to be a respectable body of Artillery established, which shall be equal to all the services of the war. In proportion to every thousand men in the marching regiments there ought to be one company of Artillery of sixty men, including officers. This number will be found to be small when the various contingencies of the Artillery shall be considered. Supposing, then, the Army to consist of eighty battalions of seven hundred and twenty-six men each, which will make nearly sixty thousand, the number of Artillery requisite will be 3,360. These may be thrown into two or three battalions, as shall be thought best.

If any circumstance shall happen to render the movement of this Army necessary, one hundred covered wagons will be wanting to transport the stores, reckoning one ton and a half to each wagon and six horses.

Three hundred strong horses to draw the travelling artillery.

All the heavy artillery on garrison carriages and the heaviest stores are not included in the above estimate. Wagons and drivers for the above ; a Wagonmaster to be established for the Artillery ; also a Quartermaster for the horses and wagons, whose business shall be to purchase hay, horses, &c., as may be wanted.

Exclusive of the artificers at the fixed laboratories, there must be an hundred, of different branches, attached to the Artillery, to repair carriages when broken, make platforms, and a thousand other matters belonging to the Artillery.

Besides the Commissary of Stores it will be necessary to have a Deputy Commissary, who shall be a capable, active man. The number of conductors and clerks to be twelve ; if the service should require more, they to be added during the pleasure of the Commander-in-Chief.

The commanding officer of Artillery to have a clerk attached to him, for the purpose of collecting, arranging, and disposing the various returns of cannon and stores.

The following brass field-pieces are wanting ; and, as there is a considerable quantity of copper collected, it is to be wished that the founder might be employed to cast some of them immediately, viz : 18 six-pounders, 18 three-pounders.

HENRY KNOX, Colonel Artillery.

assistance in their power, in manning and despatching the said Ship.

Resolved, That General Lee be directed to repair to the camp at Haerlem, with leave, if he thinks proper, to visit the posts in New-Jersey.

The Committee appointed to take into consideration the application from the President of South-Carolina, in behalf of General Lee, reported:

That this Congress, having a just opinion of the abilities of General Lee, applied to him to accept a command in their service, which he readily agreed to, provided the Congress would indemnify him against any loss which he might sustain in consequence thereof, he having, at that time, a considerable sum of money due to him by persons in the Kingdom of Great Britain, which he was resolved to draw from thence as soon as possible. That the Congress unanimously concurred in his proposal: that he accordingly entered into their service; that he has since drawn bills upon his agent in England, which bills have been returned protested. That General Lee, having purchased an estate in Virginia, the purchase money for which has been long due, is likely to sustain, by means of the protested bills, many injuries, unless this House prevent the same by an advance of thirty thousand Dollars: Whereupon,

Resolved, That the sum of 30,000 Dollars be advanced to General Lee, upon his giving Bond to the Treasurer to account for the same, and taking such steps, in conjunction with Robert Morris, Esq., on behalf of the Congress, as will secure the most effectual transfer of his estate in England, to reimburse the Congress for the advance now made to him.

Ordered, That the Committee who brought in the foregoing Report prepare a suitable Bond.

Resolved, That the further consideration of the Report be postponed.

The Committee appointed to hear and determine upon the appeal brought against the sentence passed on the libel, Joshua Wentworth vs. the Ship Elizabeth, reports as follows:

"Joshua Wentworth, Esq., for and in behalf as well of the United States of America, as of John Manly, Daniel Waters, and John Ayres, commanders; and the officers, marines, and mariners of the three armed vessels Hancock, Lee, and Lynch, in the service of the said States, having exhibited a libel before Joshua Brackett, Esq., Judge of the Court Maritime of the State of New-Hampshire, against the brigantine Elizabeth, commanded by Peter Ramsay, and her cargo, and Richard Hart, of Portsmouth, in New-Hampshire, owner of the said brigantine, and William Jackson and others, of Boston, in the State of Massachusetts-Bay, owners of sundry goods and merchandise on board of her, having put in their several claims thereto, and the said Judge of the Court aforesaid having, on the 21st day of August, in the year of our Lord 1776, decreed and ordered the said brigantine, and so much of her cargo as was claimed, to be restored to the respective claimants, and that the claimants recover their legal costs of court, from which decree and sentence the said Joshua Wentworth appealed to Congress."

The Committee of Congress, to whom it was referred to hear and determine the said appeal, have diligently inspected the proceedings, and heard the parties by their counsels, and it appearing, that on the 1st day of October, in the year of our Lord 1775, General Gage, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces, then in Boston, in the State of Massachusetts-Bay, by his commission to Creon Brush, Esq., directed him to receive into his care all such goods, chattels, and effects of the inhabitants of that town, some of whom had departed from it, as might be voluntarily delivered into his charge by the owners, or by other persons with whom they were left, giving his receipt for them, and to deliver them to the owners when he should be required; that, on the 10th

* At the Board of War, October 12, 1776:

The Board of War, to whom were referred General Washington's Letters of the 7th and 8th instant, beg leave to report as their opinion, that General Washington be informed the Congress approve of his appointing P. Penett his Aid-de-Camp by brevet, and that a commission of Aid-de-Camp be accordingly transmitted.

That the several States in which Prisoners have been lodged be desired to furnish Congress with an account of expenses as have been incurred by the said States respectively.

That all Prisoners captivated by any of the United States, whether mechanics or not, be included in the exchange to be made between General Washington and the enemy.

That the sum of five hundred thousand dollars be immediately sent to the Paymaster-General, that he may be enabled to pay the bounty to such of the troops as shall reenlist to serve during the war.

day of March then following, General Howe, who had succeeded General Gage in the command of the British forces, by his commission to the said Crean Brush, reciting, that as he was informed there were large quantities of goods in Boston, which, if in the possession of the Rebels, (as he termed the Americans,) might enable them to carry on war, and that he had given notice to all loyal inhabitants to remove such goods from thence, and that those who would not remove them, or deliver them to the care of the said Crean Brush, would be considered as abettors of Rebels, required him to take into his possession all such goods as answered that description, and give certificates to the owners that he had received them for their use, and would deliver them to the owners' orders, unavoidable accidents excepted, and to seize any such goods as, upon inquiry, should be found secreted, or left in stores, and put them on board of the Minerva ship, or brigantine Elizabeth. That thereupon, the said Crean Brush, assisted by other persons, took into his possession the goods of the claimants, amongst others, and put them into the said brigantine Elizabeth, and other vessels in the harbour of Boston, without the knowledge of some of the owners, and without the consent of all the others, unless it be William Jackson and James Jackson, of whose consent, however, there are no other proofs than that one of them went with his goods, and watched there on the wharf from whence they were shipped, and that the other was a passenger in the said brigantine Elizabeth, in her voyage towards Halifax. That the said Crean Brush, by certificates under his hand, acknowledged several parcels of the said goods to be in his custody, and engaged to preserve them safely, to make up exact invoices thereof, and, with the approbation of the Commander-in-Chief, to return them to the owners. That, on the 29th day of March afterwards, the said Peter Ramsay, by orders from Admiral Shuldham, of the British fleet, given about eight days before, went on board the said brigantine Elizabeth, into which some of the claimants' goods had been shifted from the other vessels; and the same day, between the hours of three and four in the afternoon, sailed with her, under convoy of the British ship of war Niger, for Halifax, in Nova-Scotia; and that, on the Tuesday following, the said John Manly, in the Hancock, coming up with the said brigantine Elizabeth, which had, in the mean time, parted from her convoy, fired a broadside at her, which was returned by a volley of small arms; when the said Daniel Waters, in the Lee, and the said John Ayres, in the Lynch, joining the said John Manly, the said Peter Ramsay struck, it being about four or five of the clock in the afternoon, and the said brigantine was seized and carried into Piscataqua river, in New-Hampshire; whereupon, the Committee, after mature deliberation, are of opinion, that the said brigantine Elizabeth is not comprehended in the description of vessels which, with their cargoes, by the resolutions of Congress of the 25th day of November last, may be forfeited, not being an armed or a transport vessel employed in the present war against the United States, nor carrying provisions, or other necessities, to the British Army or Navy, within any of the United Colonies; and that the cases of recaptures, mentioned in the resolution of Congress of the 5th day of December last, adjusting the proportions of salvage, those cases only were intended, in which the vessels and their cargoes remaining in possession of the enemy, might, by the law of nations, be condemned as prize, which is conceived not to be the case with the said brigantine Elizabeth and her cargo; but that, notwithstanding, it was the duty of the recaptors to recover the said brigantine and her cargo, and that the owners, who otherwise might, and probably would, have lost their whole property, ought to make a reasonable satisfaction; and that, therefore, the said sentence is erroneous, and ought to be reversed and annulled: That the said brigantine Elizabeth, and such parts of her cargo as were claimed in the said Court Maritime, be restored to the respective claimants, upon their paying to the United States and the recaptors one-twelfth part of the value thereof, to be determined by the appraisement of appraisers on oath, appointed by the Judge of the said Court: That the residue of the cargo be sold, and the proceeds, after deducting the like proportion and for the same uses, retained for the persons who shall hereafter prove their right to the same; that William Burk, commander, and the marines and mariners, of the Warren, an armed vessel in the service of the United States, who claimed a part of the said brigantine Elizabeth and her cargo, as being joint captors, are not entitled to a share of the salvage, it not appearing that they were present, or in sight, at the time of the recapture: And that the appellants recover against the claimants their costs as well in the said Court Maritime, as in the prosecution of their appeal here; and that the cause be sent back to the said Court Maritime, for that Court to proceed in carrying this sentence into execution.

And the said Report being read, was agreed to.

Resolved, That such part of the twelfth, adjudged in the foregoing Report to be paid in lieu of salvage, as belongs to the United States, be released, and given up to the owners of the goods.

That one penny a mile be allowed, in lieu of rations, to such men as have paid their expenses while on their march to and from the camp, from and to their respective homes.

[Referred to Mr. Wilson, Mr. Paine, and Mr. Rutledge.]

ANNAPOLIS, October 9, 1776.

Resolved, That the eight Battalions required by Congress to be raised by this State, exceeds its just quota, being, as they presume, founded on a calculation of white and black inhabitants, of both sexes and of all ages; whereas the quotas of men to be raised by the several States ought to be in proportion to the number of white inhabitants only in each State respectively:

That this State ought not to comply with the proposed terms of granting Lands to the officers and soldiers, because there are no Lands belonging solely and exclusively to this State. The purchases of land might eventually involve this State in an expense exceeding its abilities. An engagement by this State to defray the expense of purchasing Lands, according to its number of souls, would be unequal and unjust:

That this State, desirous of exerting the most strenuous efforts to support the liberties and independence of the United States, will therefore use its utmost endeavours to raise the eight Battalions required (including the troops already raised and in the service of the United States) as soon as possible:

That for this purpose the State will give a bounty of ten dollars to each non-commissioned officer and soldier who will enlist in the service of the United States for the war, in lieu of the hundred acres of Land offered to them by Congress:

That four Commissioners be appointed to repair to the camps in the Jerseys and New-York, and there obtain a list of such of the officers in the Regular troops and Flying-Camp from this State now in the service of the United States, as are willing to engage in the service during the war, and also enlist, or cause to be enlisted, all or every of the said Regular troops or Flying-Camp Militia in the service of the United States during the war, continuing the regular battalions, and forming the independent companies into a battalion, and filling both up according to the Continental establishment, and also forming such of the Flying-Camp Militia as shall enlist as aforesaid into battalions; and the commissioners, or any three of them, may also fill up such of the blank commissions sent to this Convention by Congress as may be immediately necessary for the officering of the said corps; but in filling up the said commissions, they are required not to introduce into the corps of the new Regulars any officer other than such as are of those Regulars, nor into the corps which may be formed of the Flying-Camp Militia any officer not now an officer in the said Regulars or Flying-Camp sum of 23 30-90 Dollars, for the hire of a four-horse Team of William Allen, deducted for want of a voucher, and 2 Dollars paid by Captain Casdorp, 94 Dollars:

That they have examined the Account of Elihu Spencer, for his salary, as a Missionary to North-Carolina, from the 14th of December, 1775, to the 4th of May, 1776, being 4 months and 21 days, at 40 Dollars per month, - 186 45

That the said Missioner ought to be allowed an addition of 16 Dollars per month to his salary for the above time, - - - - - 75 18

That he received a warrant of the 20th December last, for - - - - - 120 00

Leaves a balance in his favour, - - - - - 141 ⁶³/₉₀

That there is due to Alexander McWhorter, for his salary as a Missioner to North-Carolina, from 14th December, 1775, to the 4th May, 1776, being 4 months and 21 days, at 40 Dollars, - - - - - 186 45

That the said Missioner be allowed an addition of 16 Dollars per month to his salary for the above time, - - - - - 75 18
261 63

That he received a warrant of the 20th December last, for - - - - - 120 00

For two months' ditto to Steel as Lieutenant, at 18 Dollars, - - - - - 36 0

For 9 months, 22 days, to ditto as Adjutant, from the 9th of November to the 1st of August, 1776, at 18 Dollars and 1-3d, - - - - - 160 10-90ths,

That there is due to John Dunlap, for 97 reams of Cartridge Paper sent to Ticonderoga, 323 Dollars and 30-90ths:

Militia; and the Commissioners are also required to leave some of the offices vacant, that cadets of merit may be provided for; which list of the officers so to be obtained, as well as a list of the appointments which shall be made as aforesaid, the said Commissioners shall return to this Convention, or, in its recess, to the Council of Safety:

That the Commissioners exert their utmost endeavours to procure the enlistment of the Regular troops and Militia from this State in the Continental service; and make report of the state and condition of the forces from this State now in camp:

That the Commissioners be furnished with money sufficient to advance the bounty of ten dollars aforesaid:

That the Council of Safety, in the recess of the Convention, be empowered to issue warrants for the enlistment of such number of non-commissioned officers and privates, and also to appoint and commission such field and commissioned officers, as may be necessary to make up the said eight Battalions:

That the said Commissioners, or any three or two of them, be empowered to receive of Congress any sum not exceeding thirty-six thousand one hundred and twenty pounds, in dollars, at seven shillings and sixpence per dollar, on the account of this State, to be applied in the said bounties:

That the officers to whom warrants issued for the enrolment of non-commissioned officers and privates for the two last battalions directed by the Convention to be raised for the Flying-Camp, immediately return the list of the men by them enrolled, in pursuance of those warrants, to the Council of Safety, and forbear any further enrolment:

That such of the companies as are full, or nearly full, be equipped and marched as soon as may be; and such of the companies as are not nearly full be discharged, and that the bounty money not expended be returned:

The Committee to whom were referred the Resolutions of the Convention of Maryland, brought in a Report, which was taken into consideration : Whereupon,

Resolved, That the President write to the Convention of Maryland, and inform them, that their Resolutions relative to their paying ten Dollars in lieu of the 100 acres of Land, determined by Congress to be given to such non-commissioned officers and soldiers as shall enlist to serve during the war, will, in the opinion of this House, if carried into execution, prove extremely detrimental to these States, as it will, in all probability, induce such soldiers as are to compose the remainder of the levies, to require an equal sum from the United States, and, by refusing to enlist until their demands shall be complied with, compel the Congress to the immediate payment of an additional bounty, far beyond what is reasonable :

That this House, being satisfied with the propriety of offering Land to the soldiery, as an inducement to enlist in the service, cannot rescind the said Resolution, and are of opinion, that the faith which this House, by virtue of the power with which they were vested, has plighted, must be obligatory upon their constituents ; that no one State can, by its own act, be released therefrom, and that the interest of the United States would be deeply and injuriously affected, should the Congress, at this time, consent to a compromise between any State and the forces to be by them raised :

That the said Convention, by their said Resolutions, seem to apprehend, that their State would be obliged, in their individual capacity, to make good the bounty of Land hereafter to be given to the soldiery ; whereas, it was the intention of Congress to provide the said Land at the expense of the United States :

That the said Convention be requested to reconsider the said Resolutions, and to give to their Commissioners, appointed to repair to the camp, such instructions as will enable them to carry into execution the views of Congress: That the said Convention be informed, that the Paymaster-General has been furnished with a sum of money for the purpose of paying the bounty of 20 Dollars ordered by Congress to such soldiers as shall enlist to serve the United States during the war.

Congress resumed the consideration of the Report of the Marine Committee: Whereupon,

Resolved, That the rank of Officers of Marines be the same as Officers of similar commissions in the land service:

That the Commanders, Officers, Seamen, and Marines, in the Continental Navy, be entitled to one half of merchantmen, transports, and storeships, by them taken, from and after the first day of November, 1776, to be divided amongst them in the shares and proportions fixed by former resolutions of Congress:

That the Commanders, Officers, Seamen, and Marines, in the Continental Navy, be entitled to the whole value of all ships and vessels of war belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, by them made prize of, and all privateers authorized by his Britannick Majesty to war against these States, to be divided as aforesaid.

Resolved, That the part of the Report relative to the rank and pay of Naval Officers, be referred to a Committee of three:

The Members chosen, Mr. Morris, Mr. Whipple, and Mr. R. H. Lee.

Resolved, That the remainder of the Report be recommended.

The several matters to this day referred being postponed, Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow.

Thursday, October 31, 1776.

A Letter, of the 28th, from General Greene, was read:

Ordered, That it be referred to the Committee of Intelligence.

Resolved, That 2,000 Dollars be advanced to Colonel Zebulon Butler, for the use of the two Companies raised in the town of Westmoreland, he to be accountable:

That leave be granted to Zebulon Butler, Esq., or his agent, to purchase, of the Salt belonging to the Continent, 50 bushels for the use of the Continental Troops raised in Westmoreland.

A Letter, of the 29th, from Robert H. Harrison, the General's Secretary, was read.

The Committee appointed to make strict inquiry respecting some late Despatches from Head-Quarters, said to have been lost on Monday last at Bristol, reported,

That they have pursued every probable method that might lead to a discovery of the said despatches, without effect; that they have strictly and carefully examined every person who could be supposed to have any knowledge of the circumstances related by the express, charged with the said despatches, respecting his loss, but can discover no traces of the robbery or stealth; that the said express does not give so clear and satisfactory an account of this matter as fully to exculpate himself in the opinion of this Committee, and that they have therefore brought him back in order to submit him to the further examination of Congress: Whereupon,

Resolved, That Timothy Dod, who had charge of the Despatches from General Washington, and alleges he lost them at Bristol, be committed to the custody of R. Jewell, Keeper of the publick Prison, to be safely kept till further orders of Congress:

That Mr. Jewell be directed to keep Timothy Dod in his own apartments and family, and not to permit any of the prisoners, nor any person, except those of his own family, to converse with him, till further orders of Congress.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to prepare an effectual plan for suppressing the internal enemies of America, and preventing a communication of intelligence to our other enemies:

The Members chosen, Mr. S. Adams, Mr. Wythe, Mr. R. H. Lee, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Ross.

Ordered, That the Board of War remove the Prisoners from Bristol, and the publick post-roads, to some convenient places back in the country:

That they have a sufficient guard kept at the publick Prison, and over the Continental stores in and near Philadelphia.

Whereas it has been represented to Congress, that sundry inhabitants of these United States, to keep supplies from the Army, or promote their own interest, have purchased considerable quantities of Clothing, and refuse to dispose of the same, unless upon extravagant or unreasonable terms:

Resolved, That it be recommended to the Assemblies, Conventions, Councils, or Committees of Safety of the several States, forthwith to take suitable measures for obtaining, for the use of the Army, such necessary articles as, being thus engrossed in their respective States, cannot be otherwise immediately procured, allowing to the owners reasonable prices for the same; and that laws be provided in each of the States, for effectually preventing monopolies of necessities for the Army, or inhabitants of the same.

Ordered, That the Committee to whom Mr. Bache's Letter was referred report, as soon as possible, ways and means of establishing Expresses, and conveying intelligence to and from the Army with safety and despatch.

The several matters to this day referred being postponed, Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow.
