raised by Captain Faucett to maintain his post at Jerico, on Onion river, - - - - - 111

1, Letter from General St. Clair to Lieutenant-Colonel Allen : There were two points on which they had perfectly agreed: first, that Independence was not the interest of America if the liberties of America could be otherwise secured ; secondly, that if foreign troops were employed to reduce America to absolute submission, that Independence or any mode was justifiable. There is no doubt now about the employment of foreign troops. Ticonderoga has been made a very strong post, - - - - - 111

1, Letter from William Gilliland to General Arnold: Complains of the troops and sailors having wantonly committed great destruction on several of his plantations, - - - - - 112

Petition of Captain Townsend's Company to the Convention of New-York, for an increase of the pay for their subsistence, - - -	123
2, Halifax, Cumberland County, (New-York,) Town meeting: Voted not to choose a Delegate to meet the Green-Mountain Boys, - - -	124
2, Letter from General Schuyler to the President of Congress: Recommends that provision be made for two Indian boys from Dartmouth College, - - -	125
2, Letter from General Schuyler to General Washington: Has it amply in his power to justify every part of his conduct, and hopes the inquiry which he has entreated will evince to the world how hardly he has been dealt by, - - -	125

1776. Sept. 2, Letter from General Schuyler to Governour Trumbull: If many gentlemen in high offices were influenced by candour and ingenuousness, they would not have given ear to the variety of calumny to which he has been exposed, - - -	126
2, Letter from General Gates to Governour Trumbull: The Congress have, in some instances, forgot us; but they are excusable. All things conspire to make him believe that America will be free, - - -	127
2, Letter from General Gates to General Waterbury: Every thing necessary for the equipment of the row-galleys arrived last night, - - -	127
2, Letter from John Trumbull to the Board of War: Transmitting returns of the Northern army, - - -	127
2, Letter from John Trumbull to Governour Trumbull: Pleased that the tents and clothing are coming. Finds there is so much ceremony in the Congress that he is not to be appointed without a particular recommendation, - - -	128
2, Letter from General St. Clair to the President of Congress: Acknowledging receipt of his commission as Brigadier-General, - - -	128
2, Letter from Colonel Hartley to General Gates: What is very strange, General Arnold was within ten miles of this yesterday afternoon, - - -	128

8, Letter from General Schuyler to General Washington: Are threatened with an enemy from the westward. His mills, that used to cut from forty to fifty thousand boards, have not cut one this year, as he was under a necessity of sending his oxen to the Army. That has been the case with several others, -	249

1776.
Sept. 8, Letter from General Schuyler to General Gates: Is sorry Mr. Avery cannot see the propriety of complying with his request. If Courts-Martial would severely punish officers for illiberal abuse against their superiours, such virulent and ill-founded complaints as those of Lieutenant-Colonel Brown against General Arnold would soon cease, -	249
8, Letter from Richard Varick to General Gates: Shoes and stockings, shirts, cartridge paper, iron pots and kettles, musket balls, and swivels, will be sent as fast as possible, -	250
8, Letter from H. Glen, Assistant Deputy Commissary, to Captain Eisenford, -	250

1776.
Oct. 11,	Letter from General Washington to General Schuyler: Is not able to supply him with a single nail, nor are they to be procured in Philadelphia; for want of them he is building huts of sods, logs, &c.,	994
11,	Letter from Colonel Reed to Mrs. Reed,	994
11,	Letter from General Wadsworth to Governour Trumbull: Great number of sick in his brigade, and has but one Surgeon's mate present. If any hospital stores are procured, begs that Doctor Morgan may not have the least concern with or about them,	995
11,	Letter from Joseph Trumbull to General Gates: The Tory interest is for General Schuyler; Walter Livingston is to be nominal contractor, and Philip Schuyler, Major-General, real contractor,	995
11,	Letter from Ebenezer Hazard to General Gates: The enemy appear rather shy since a drubbing they got some weeks ago; the Hessians and British troops disagree, and are kept entirely separate,	995
11,	Letter from General Greene to Governour Cooke: Without more attention is paid by the different States in the appointment of the officers, the troops never will answer their expectation; there has been some shameful conduct in the Army, owing in a great measure to the bad conduct of the officers,	996
11,	Letter from General James Clinton to New-York Convention: For commissions for the officers in the Second New-York Regiment,	997
11,	Letter from Peter R. Livingston to the New-York Delegates in Congress: Severely disappointed in not receiving the hundred thousand dollars applied for,	998
11,	Letter from Comfort Sands to the President of the New-York Convention,	998
11,	Letter from John Jay to Edward Rutledge: Is clear for indemnifying General Lee; hopes no consideration may excuse General Mifflin from the office of Quartermaster-General; Moylan acted wisely and honestly in resigning,	998
11,	Letter from General Schuyler to Governour Trumbull: Finds by private letters from gentlemen in Congress to their friends that they approve of the step he has taken in resigning,	999
11,	Letter from General Schuyler to General Gates: Dayton has been ordered from the Mohawk to Fort George. Promises that if he is in Congress the commander in the Northern Department shall have more attention than he has himself had,	999
11,	Letter from General Gates to General Schuyler: The fleet under Arnold were well on the 7th instant,	1000
11,	Letter from Colonel Hartley to General Gates: Hopes the works at Crown-Point will not be weakened by taking away the guns they have, or by replacing them with guns which perhaps they might as well do without,	1000
11,	Letter from Governour Trumbull to General Washington: Naval expedition against the ships of the enemy in the Sound is still in contemplation, and preparations making for it as fast as they can,	1001
11,	Connecticut Council of Safety: Consultation concerning the expedition of Colonels Richmond and Livingston to Long-Island,	1002

A Letter from the Honourable John Hancock, Esquire, President of the Congress of the United States of America, directed to this Convention, was read, recommending to them to take such measures as may be judged proper and necessary for procuring as much Lead within this State as can be obtained: Whereupon it was

Resolved, That the said recommendation of Congress be immediately complied with; and therefore that it be recommended to the Committee of Safety immediately to take the most vigorous and effectual measures to procure all the Lead which can be obtained, and which may at present be used in spouts, window-weights, clock-weights, ornaments of houses, or in any other form; and that they make reasonable compensation for the same to all persons from whom it may be had or received, having regard also to any particular inconveniences which individuals may sustain by affording the publick this necessary supply.

And it is likewise recommended to the inhabitants of this State to part willingly with such Lead as they have in their possession for the publick service.

A Letter was read from General Roberdeau respecting the Guard recommended by Congress to be kept in this City; and the same being considered, it was Resolved, That it be recommended to the Committee of Safety to take the necessary steps thereupon, as being within their department.

A Letter was read from the Delegates of the State of Virginia, now in the Congress, proposing that a temporary line between Pennsylvania and Virginia may be agreed upon, until a final determination may be had, and declaring their readiness to confer on this subject with any gentlemen this House may be pleased to appoint for that purpose. The same being considered, it was Ordered, That the further consideration thereof be deferred to Thursday morning next.

On motion, Resolved, That application be made to General Roberdeau, requesting him to issue an order for permitting John Morris, Esq., and Jacob Garrigues to return to this City, they being appointed to the offices of Secretary and Assistant Clerk to this Convention.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Wednesday, July 17, 1776.

The Convention met according to adjournment.

Upon motion, Resolved, That the Rev. Mr. William White be requested to perform divine service to-morrow morning, before this Convention, that we may jointly offer up our prayers to Almighty God to afford us his divine grace and assistance in the important and arduous task committed to us; and to offer up our praises and thanksgivings for the manifold mercies and the peculiar interposition of his special providence in behalf of these injured, oppressed, and insulted United States.

Colonel Matlack and Mr. Clymer are appointed to wait on the Rev. Mr. White, and furnish him with a copy of the foregoing Resolve.

Moved, That Colonel Miles be appointed Brigadier-General and Commander-in-Chief of the forces of Pennsylvania.

Referred for further consideration.

Mr. Matthew Brown, John Flemming, Philip Marsteller, and Robert Whitehill, appeared in the House for the first time, took the oaths, and made and signed the profession of faith required.

Moved, That effectual measures be taken to obtain the Arms from all Non-Associators, as they are absolutely necessary for the defence of the country. And as the Associators in this State are not all completely armed, and the Resolve of the honourable Congress for disarming disaffected persons and Non-Associators has not yet been effectually executed, therefore,

Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Bull, Mr. Kirkbride, Mr. Flemming, Mr. Marsteller, Mr. Edgar, Mr. Harris, Mr. Coulter, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Gray, and Mr. Crawford, be a Committee for bringing in an ordinance for the purpose of carrying fully into execution the said Resolve of Congress.

A Petition from divers debtors now confined in the Jail of Philadelphia, praying releasement from their confinement, was read; and

Ordered to lie on the table.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

Thursday, July 18, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met according to adjournment.

Mr. Morris, the Secretary, now attending, it was ordered, upon motion, that he should take the following Affirmation, viz:

"I, John Morris, do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain; and that I will steadily and firmly, at all times, promote the most effectual means, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, to oppose the tyrannical proceedings of the King and Parliament of Great Britain against the American Colonies, and support a government in this State on the authority of the people only; and that as Secretary of this Convention, I will be faithful, and make fair and just minutes of all their proceedings, according to the best of my abilities, and keep all such secrets as shall be directed to be kept by the Convention;" which he did accordingly.

Ordered, also, That the Clerk, when he shall come, shall make a declaration to the like import.

The Rev. Mr. White attending, agreeable to the request of yesterday; and having performed divine service, and being withdrawn, it was Ordered, on motion, That Mr. Matlack and Mr. Clymer wait upon that gentleman with the thanks of the Convention for his services.

On motion, That a Committee be appointed to draw up Rules and Regulations for the government of this Convention in their proceedings, Ordered, That Mr. Ross, Mr. Matlack, and Mr. Jacobs, be a Committee for that purpose.

On motion, Resolved, That the Secretary call upon the Clerk of the Assembly, from time to time, for such of the publick Records, Papers and Documents belonging to this Government, as the Convention shall think necessary; and the said Clerk is hereby directed to deliver the same.

Resolved, That the members of this Convention have, at all seasonable times, free access to the publick Library of this State.

A Report from the Committee appointed yesterday to bring in an ordinance respecting the Arms of Non-Associators, was read, and ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

The gentlemen appointed to draw up Rules and Regulations for the government of this Convention in their proceedings, withdrew; and, after some time, brought in an essay for that purpose; which, being read, was agreed to, and is as followeth, viz:

First. That the Members, when speaking, address themselves to the Chair.

Second. That no Member interrupt a Member when speaking.

Third. That no Member use indecent or reflecting language, or wilfully pervert the sense of what another Member has said.

Fourth. That the Members are not to use each other's names, but in their answers, to take notice of their time of speaking, or their situation as to the right or left of the Chair, &c.

Fifth. That no Member cross between the Chair and a speaking Member.

Sixth. That the President have a right to call to order, where a Member may wander from the matter in debate.

Seventh. That no Member speak above twice on the same subject, without obtaining leave from the Convention.

Eighth. That where any debate proves very tedious, and any four Members rise and call for the question, the President shall put the same.

Ninth. That where the President shall enjoin secrecy, it is expected that every Member is bound by his honour to observe the same.

Tenth. That where the House is equally divided, the President shall have the casting vote.

Upon motion, Resolved, That two-thirds of the persons chosen as Members of this Convention be a quorum.

Upon motion, Resolved, That no Member of this Convention absent himself without leave.

Upon motion to resume the consideration of the Letter from the Virginia Delegates, it was agreed to postpone the same for some time, as the members for Westmoreland are not yet arrived.

Upon motion, and after debate, Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to make an essay for a Declaration of Rights for this State.

Resolved, also, That the said Committee consist of eleven persons, viz: Mr. Biddle, Colonel Bull, the Rev. Mr. Van-horn, Mr. Jacobs, Colonel Ross, Colonel James Smith, Mr. Hoge, Mr. Morgan, Colonel Stroud, Colonel Thomas Smith and Mr. Martin.

Mr. Abraham Van Middleswart, Mr. Robert Martin, Mr. John Weitzel, and Mr. John Jacobs, appeared in the House for the first time, took the oath or affirmation, and made and signed the profession of faith required.

Adjourned to four o'clock, P. M.

— Thursday, July 18, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment, when a Letter to this House from the honourable the President of the Congress was read, desiring them to recommend Field-Officers for a Battalion to be raised in the Counties of Bedford and Westmoreland, in this State, for the defence of its western frontier.

After some deliberation thereon, the further consideration thereof was postponed till to-morrow morning.

It was proposed by the President that the Convention should now proceed to the choice of Delegates to serve in the Continental Congress; whereupon, a debate arising, it was previously moved, and Resolved, unanimously, That the said Delegates, to serve this State in Congress, shall be chosen by ballot.

Also, Resolved, That the number of the said Delegates be nine.

It was then considered, whether this House will proceed to the election of the said Delegates, or postpone it till to-morrow afternoon?

And it was thereupon agreed to postpone the same till to-morrow afternoon.

It was moved and Resolved, That a majority of the Delegates for this State, who are at any time present in Congress at the determination of any question, shall be a quorum to give the vote of this State.

Moved and Resolved, That the Council of Safety for this State shall consist of fifteen members, residing in or near the City of Philadelphia, and of one for each of the Counties; and that seven be a quorum for the transaction of business.

Moved and Resolved, That the whole Council of Safety be voted for together by one general ballot.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

— Friday, July 19, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met according to adjournment.

Colonel James Potter, one of the Members for Northumbreland, appeared in the House for the first time, took the oaths, and made and subscribed the profession of faith required.

The Ordinance brought in yesterday respecting the Arms of Non-Associators, was read a second time, and then read by paragraphs. During the debates on which, a letter was handed to the President from the honourable the President of the Congress, informing that a false report had been spread through the country, which, it was apprehended, had retarded the march of the Pennsylvania Associators, and that therefore it had been resolved by the Congress, that it should be recommended to this Convention to hasten their march with all expedition.

Whereupon, it was moved and unanimously Resolved, That Circular Letters be written to the several Committees of Inspection and Observation of this State, to send orders immediately to the several Colonels or Commanding Officers to march their Troops with the utmost expedition to New-Jersey, agreeable to a former request of Congress.

Also, moved and unanimously Resolved, That Letters be forthwith written to the several Colonels and Commanding Officers in the several Counties, and printed copies thereof also sent to the several Committees, to be by them forwarded to the Officers:

And that the Resolve of Congress of this day and the Letter of the honourable President to this Convention, be also printed, and the copies thereof sent with the other Letters.

And also, that Colonel Mailack, Colonel Hill, and Mr. Cannon be a Committee to write the said Letters, and to print and forward them.

Adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

— Friday, July 19, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to write the Letters to the Committees of Inspection and Commanding Officers, reported drafts of them, which being read, and some small amendments made at the table, were approved of, and ordered to be printed and expedited as quickly as possible.

Mr. William Rankin, one of the Members for York County, appeared in the House for the first time, took the oaths, and made and subscribed the profession of faith.

The House resumed the consideration of the Ordinance respecting the Arms of Non-Associators; and after a considerable time employed in debating thereon and amending the same, it was ordained in the following words, viz:

Whereas the Non-Associators in this State have either refused or neglected to deliver up their Arms according to the Resolves of the honourable Continental Congress and the Assembly of Pennsylvania, and effectual measures have not been taken to carry the said Resolves into execution:

Be it therefore Ordained, by the authority of this Convention, That the Colonel or next officer in command of every Battalion of Militia in this State, is hereby authorized, empowered and required to collect, receive, and take all the Arms in his district or township nearest to such officer, which are in the hands of Non-Associators, in the most expeditious and effectual manner in his power, and shall give to the owners receipts for such Arms, specifying the amount of the appraisement; and such as can be repaired shall with all possible despatch be rendered fit for service, and the value according to the appraisement of all such Arms, together with the repairs and transportation, shall be paid to the officers by the Treasurer, on the order of the Council of Safety, for the use of the owners, and defraying the charges.

And be it further Ordained, That the same Arms shall be appraised by any three reputable freeholders appointed by the Commanding Officer. But if the owner of any Arms shall neglect or refuse to apply for such money within six months, the same shall be applied towards the repairs of the Arms: and the Colonels are hereby authorized to draw for the necessary sums of money, for the purposes aforesaid, on the Council of Safety.

And it is further Ordained, That the Colonels aforesaid shall arm the Associators with the said Arms, and keep an account to whom they are delivered, and return the same to the Council of Safety; and every Associator shall be answerable for such Arms or the value, unless lost or destroyed by some unavoidable accident, or in actual service.

And be it further Ordained, That in case any Arms so collected shall not be worth repairing, the same shall be laid by until such time as may be thought proper by the Committee of the County to return them to the owners.

Moved and Resolved, That the salary of each of the Delegates to be chosen to serve this State in Congress shall be twenty shillings per diem.

The election of Delegates is adjourned to eight o'clock to-morrow morning.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, eight o'clock.

— Saturday, July 20, 1776.

The House met according to adjournment.

When, according to the Order of the Day, they immediately proceeded, by ballot, to the election of Delegates to serve in the Continental Congress, and chose for that service Doctor Benjamin Franklin, Colonel George Ross, George Clymer, Esquire, Robert Morris, Esquire, Colonel James Wilson, John Morton, Esquire, Doctor Benjamin Rush, Colonel James Smith, and George Taylor, Esquire.

Moved and Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to draw up Instructions for the Delegates in Congress; and that Colonel Matlack, Colonel Thomas Smith, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Rittenhouse, and Colonel Bull, be that Committee.

Moved and Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel Thomas Smith, Mr. Lowrey, Mr. Biddle, and Colonel Potter, be a Committee to confer with the Virginia Delegates on the subject of a temporary line between the two States of Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Colonel Ross informed the House, at the request of the Secret Committee of Congress, that the Congress, for certain pressing and important reasons, desired that this Convention would direct that the common Prisoners be removed from the new Jail to the old Jail in this City, and would give up the said new Jail to the Congress for the use of the State Prisoners; for which they would willingly pay any reasonable rent or compensation.

Whereupon it was moved, and unanimously Resolved, That the said request of Congress be complied with, and that the said common Prisoners be forthwith (that is, this day) removed from the said new Jail, and that the same be immediately delivered up to Congress for the use aforesaid: and the Sheriff of the City and County of Philadelphia is commanded to keep his civil Prisoners safely in the old Jail until they may be properly discharged: and of this Resolve, all persons whom it may concern are required to take notice, and give prompt obedience thereto.

The House then resumed the consideration of the Field-Officers for the Battalion intended for the defence of the western frontier, and agreed to recommend Aneas M^c Coy, Esquire, as Colonel, George Wilson, Esquire, as Lieutenant-Colonel, and Richard Butler, Esquire, as Major.

Adjourned to Monday morning, eight o'clock.

Monday, July 22, 1776, A. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The following Members for Westmoreland, viz: James Barr, Edward Cook, John Moor, John Carmichael, John M^cClellan, Christopher Lavinger, and James Smith now appeared in the House, took the oaths, and made and subscribed the profession of faith, as did also Hugh Alexander, of Cumberland, at the same time.

Moved and Resolved, That the Committee of Safety of this State lay their Accounts and Proceedings before this Convention; and that Mr. Clymer communicate this Resolution to the said Committee.

On motion, Ordered, That Mr. John Moor be added to the Declaration of Rights Committee, and that the said Committee have leave of absence.

A Letter from the President of the Congress, requesting this Convention to increase the quota of this State for the Flying-Camp with four Battalions of Militia, was presented and read; but so many of the Members had gone upon the Committee of the Declaration of Rights, that a quorum was not then in the House. The consideration of it was therefore postponed to the afternoon.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Monday, July 22, 1776, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Valentine Eckart appeared in the House for the first time, and took the oaths, and made and subscribed the profession of faith.

A Petition from William Dewees, Esquire, as High Sheriff of the City and County of Philadelphia, was read, praying that before he obeyed the Resolve of this House of the 20th instant, respecting the removal of the Prisoners from the new to the old Jail, he and his sureties might be indemnified.

Upon consideration thereof, it was moved and Resolved, That the said William Dewees be ordered to pay immediate obedience to the said Resolve of the 20th instant; and that if he thinks necessary, he may apply to the Commanding Officer of the City Guard for a Guard to the old Jail, till it be put in a state of security: and the said officer is hereby required and ordered to grant the same.

Upon motion, Ordered, That Colonel Matlack and Mr. Clymer be a Committee to go immediately and examine the state of the old Jail.

They went, and returning, report that they had viewed the same, and find it sufficiently secure to receive and keep safe the Prisoners.

The said William Dewees attending, requested as a favour that he might be indulged till the morning before he removed the Prisoners. His request was granted, the evening being too far advanced to remove them conveniently.

The House then resumed the consideration of Mr. President Hancock's Letter respecting the increase of the quota for the Flying-Camp; and after some debate thereon, agreed to refer it for further consideration till to-morrow morning.

Adjourned till to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Tuesday, July 23, 1776, A. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The consideration of Mr. President Hancock's Letter was resumed; and after some debate thereon, it was, upon motion, Resolved, That Mr. Cannon, Colonel Kirkbride, Major Loller, Mr. Mackay, Colonel Lowrey, Colonel M^cPherson, Mr. Harris, Mr. Ralston, and Mr. Eckart be a Committee to fix the proportions of the City and the several Counties of this State, towards composing the four additional Battalions required by Congress for the Flying-Camp.

Whereas the Associators in this State, on the requisition of the honourable the Continental Congress, have freely and bravely gone into the field for the defence of the common liberties of America, while the Non-Associators remain at home in peace and security, without affording, by personal service or otherwise, that just and necessary assistance they owe to the State for their protection: Therefore,

Resolved, That this Convention will take the most effectual measures to render the burthen and expense of the inhabitants of this State just and equal.

Ordered, That this Resolve be published in the Newspapers of this City.

On motion, that as the safety and security of the State should at all times call the attention of its members for its preservation: Therefore,

Resolved, That Colonel Ross, Colonel James Smith, Mr. Biddle, Mr. Hoge, Mr. Clymer, Mr. Rittenhouse, and Colonel Thomas Smith, be a Committee to bring in an ordinance declaring what shall be high treason and misprision of treason against this State, and what punishment shall be inflicted for those offences.

On motion, Resolved, That the same gentlemen mentioned in the preceding Resolve be a Committee to bring in an ordinance declaring what shall be the punishment for the counterfeiting the paper Bills of Credit issued by the honourable Continental Congress, or by the late Assembly of Pennsylvania, or by any other of the United States of America; and which of them, and how far, and in what cases, they shall be a legal tender.

A Petition from Colonel James Easton, a prisoner now confined in the Jail of Philadelphia, was read, setting forth the very great and peculiar hardships of his case: Whereupon it was,

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Jacobs, Colonel Matlack, and Mr. Hubley, be a Committee to inquire into the truth of the facts set forth in his Petition.

Adjourned to three o'clock, P. M.

Tuesday, July 23, 1776, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Benjamin Bartholomew and Mr. James Perry appeared in the House for the first time, and took the oaths, and made and subscribed the profession of faith.

On motion, Resolved, That eight shillings shall be the salary of each Member of the Council of Safety for every day in which he shall be engaged in the publick service.

The House then proceeded to the election, by ballot, of the Council of Safety for this State. The following gentlemen were chosen, viz:

David Rittenhouse, Jonathan B. Smith, Owen Biddle, James Cannon, Timothy Matlack, Nathaniel Falconer, Samuel Morris, junior, Samuel Howell, Frederick Kuhl, Samuel Morris, senior, Thomas Wharton, junior, Henry Keppeler, junior, Joseph Blewer, Samuel Mifflin, George Gray, and John Bull, for Philadelphia County.

Henry Wynkoop for Bucks County; Benjamin Bartholomew for Chester County; John Hubley for Lancaster County; Michael Swoope for York County; William Lyon for Cumberland County; Daniel Hunter for Berks County; Peter Rhoads for Northampton County; David Espey for Bedford County; John Weitzel for Northumberland County; and John Moor for Westmoreland County.

Who being declared elected, the House adjourned to to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Wednesday, July 24, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met according to adjournment.

Colonel Henry Slagle appeared in the House for the first time, and took the oath, and made and subscribed the profession of faith.

On motion, Resolved, That the Members of the Council of Safety, before they enter upon the execution of their office, shall take and subscribe the following Oath or Affirmation, viz :

"I, do declare that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to George the Third, King of Great Britain; and that I will steadily and firmly, at all times, promote the most effectual means, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, to oppose the tyrannical proceedings of the King and Parliament of Great Britain against the American States; and that I will, according to the best of my judgment, execute with fidelity the trust reposed in me, as a member of the Council of Safety."

And that the Vice President of this Convention administer the said Oath or Affirmation to such a number of the said Council of Safety as may be sufficient to make a quorum, and then that the President of the said Board, for the time being, qualify the rest.

Resolved, upon motion, That it be recommended to the Council of Safety to provide a sufficient number of Pikes for the use of the Militia of this State.

A Letter from the Chairman of the Committee for Berks County, was read; and, on motion, it was Ordered, That the same be referred to the Council of Safety.

On motion, Resolved, That the same gentlemen who are on the Declaration of Rights Committee, be appointed to draw up an Essay for a frame or system of Government for this State.

The Committee for bringing in Ordinances respecting the counterfeiting the paper Bills of Credit, and respecting treason and misprision of treason, reported that they had made essays for those purposes; which were both read and ordered for a second reading.

On motion, Resolved, That the two Companies, of fifty men each, now raising by the Committee of Westmoreland, for the defence of the frontier, be considered as Militia in actual service, from the time of their inlistment to the fifth day of August next.

And also, that it be referred to the Council of Safety to consider whether they will keep the same in pay till the 15th day of September next, provided the officers, or any of them, should not be sooner appointed in, or any of the men before that time enter into the Continental Battalion now to be raised in Bedford and Westmoreland Counties.

The Committee for Instructions to the Delegates in Congress, reported a draft for that purpose, which was left on the table for consideration.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Wednesday, July 24, 1776, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. John Leshar be one of the Committee for essaying a frame of Government, in the room of Mr. Jacob Morgan, who is absent with leave.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Cannon, Mr. Benjamin Bartholomew, and Mr. Hubley, be a Committee to prepare and bring in an Ordinance for delivering from imprisonment all persons confined in the several Jails in this State, except those who are imprisoned for practices against the State, or for capital offences.

The House took into consideration Colonel Easton's

Petition, and the report of the Committee thereupon, which Report is as follows, viz :

That your Committee have heard Colonel Easton and his evidences, after notice being sent to the attorneys for the plaintiffs to attend, if they should think proper: it appears that Colonel Easton had given to his principal creditors such security for their debts as at the time was satisfactory to them; that he has since offered to surrender into the hands of his creditors all his effects, upon condition that the same should be sold to the best advantage, and the surplusage, after the payment of his just debts, should be returned to him; and that his creditors have not paid that attention to so reasonable an offer that was justly due to it. It therefore appears to your Committee that there is no equitable cause for continuing the said Colonel Easton in confinement.

TIMOTHY MATLACK,
JOHN JACOBS,
JOHN HUBLEY.

Philadelphia, July 24, 1776.

Whereupon, on motion, it was Resolved, That this House will give relief to Colonel Easton, and that Colonel Matlack, Mr. Jacobs, and Mr. Hubley, be a Committee to bring in an Ordinance for his release from the Jail of Philadelphia, upon the particular circumstances of his case.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning, ten o'clock.

Thursday, July 25, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Thomas Porter appeared in the House for the first time, and took the oath, and made and subscribed the profession of faith.

It was moved and Resolved, That this Convention do agree to the following Resolution and Declaration, viz :

We, the Representatives of the freemen of the State of Pennsylvania, in General Convention assembled, taking into our most serious consideration the clear, strong, and cogent reasons given by the honourable Continental Congress for the declaring this, as well as the other United States of America, free and independent, do thereupon resolve, and be it hereby resolved and declared, that we, in behalf of ourselves and our constituents, do unanimously approve of the said Resolution and Declaration of Congress of the 4th instant; and we do declare before God and the world, that we will support and maintain the freedom and independence of this and the other United States of America at the utmost risk of our lives and fortunes.

The Committee for essaying a Declaration of Rights, reported a draft for that purpose; which, being read, was ordered to lie on the table for further consideration.

A Letter was read from Captain Falconer, one of the new elected Council of Safety, informing the House that he cannot, consistent with his other publick engagements, possibly serve in that station, and praying that another member might be elected in his room.

On motion, Ordered, That the Ordinance reported yesterday by the Committee for declaring what is Treason, &c., be recommitted to the same gentlemen for amendment.

The Committee appointed to fix quotas for the four additional Battalions, made a Report; which was read, and ordered to lie on the table for further consideration.

The Report of the Committee for Instructions to the Delegates in Congress, was read the first time, and ordered to lie on the table for further consideration.

The Committee appointed to draw an Ordinance respecting the release of Colonel Easton, reported a draft for that purpose; which was read the first time, and ordered for a second reading to-morrow.

On motion, Ordered, That Colonel Matlack, Mr. Cannon, Colonel Potter, Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Whitehill, and Colonel Galbreath, be added to the Committee for bringing in an essay for a frame of Government.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning, nine o'clock.

Friday, July 26, 1776, A. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Letter was read from General Roberdeau, dated July 24, 1776, at Amboy, complaining of the slowness with which the Militia of this State come in; and desiring that some gun-screws be sent for the use of the troops. The Convention apprehends that they have done everything at present in their power to expedite the march of the forces of this State. With respect to the gun-screws, that matter is referred to the Council of Safety.

Upon motion, Ordered, That Colonel Hill, Colonel Lowrey, and Mr. John Hart, be a Committee to examine the situation of the funds of this State, and make report of what sums are in the hands of the Treasurer and late Committee of Safety, and also what debts are yet due and unpaid by the State.

The Report of the Committee for the Declaration of Rights, was again read, and a motion was made and seconded, that the same be recommitted; but the previous question being called for, it was thereupon

Resolved, That the question be not now put on the said motion.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Friday, July 26, 1776, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The Ordinance for the release of Colonel James Easton was read, and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.

Upon motion, Resolved, That the Minutes of this Convention be published weekly in English and German, and that this House will appoint a Committee to superintend the publication.

The House resumed the consideration of the Report of the Declaration of Rights; and after some considerable time spent therein, it was,

Upon motion, Resolved, That the said Report be recommitted to the same Committee who were originally appointed thereon.

The Committee appointed to bring in an Ordinance for delivering the Jails of this State, now presented an essay for that purpose; which, being read, was ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

The draft of Instructions for the Delegates in Congress was read, and unanimously approved, and is as follows, viz:

"In Convention, Philadelphia, July , 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: This Convention, confiding in your wisdom and virtue, has, by the authority of the people, chosen and appointed you to represent the free State of Pennsylvania in the Congress of the United States of America, and authorized you, or a majority of such of you as shall at any time be present, to vote for and in the name of this State, in all and every question there to be decided; and this Convention apprehend it to be a duty which they owe the publick to give you the following general directions for your conduct, confident that you will at all times pay the utmost attention to the instructions of your constituents.

"The immense and irreparable injury which a free country may sustain by, and the very great inconveniences which always arise from a delay of its councils, induce us, in the first place, strictly to enjoin and require you to give not only a constant, but a punctual attendance in Congress.

"The present necessity of a vigorous exertion of the united force of the free States of America, against our British enemies, is the most important object of your immediate regard, and points out the necessity of cultivating and strengthening, by every means in your power, the present happy union of these States, until such a just, equal and perpetual Confederation can be agreed upon and finally effected as will be the most likely to secure to each other the perfect direction of its own internal police. In the forming of which Confederation, you are to give your utmost assistance.

"We recommend to you to use your utmost power and influence in Congress, to have a due attention paid to the establishing and maintaining a respectable naval force; as such a force is absolutely necessary to every trading nation, and is the least expensive or dangerous to the liberties of mankind.

"With respect to the forming of treaties with foreign Powers, it is necessary only to say, that we strictly charge and enjoin you, not to agree to, or enter into any treaty of commerce or alliance with Great Britain, or any other foreign Power, but (on the part of America) as free and independent States.

"And that whenever Great Britain shall acknowledge these States free and independent, you are hereby authorized, in conjunction with the Delegates of the other United States, to treat with her concerning peace, amity, and commerce, on just and equal terms."

Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

Saturday, July 27, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

On motion, Ordered, That Mr. Edward Cook be added to the Committee appointed to confer with the Virginia Delegates.

Two several Petitions, the one from John Williams, the other from James Forbes and William Patton, prisoners in the Jail of Lancaster County, praying relief, were read; and the Convention, being of opinion that their cases will be provided for in the ordinance brought in for the relief of Prisoners in general, they were Ordered to lie on the table.

A Letter from the Committee of Lancaster County being read, was ordered to be referred to the Council of Safety.

On motion, Ordered, That Colonel Hill and Mr. Hubley be a Committee to revise the Minutes of this House, and superintend the printing them in English and German.

The House resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee for the quotas for the additional Battalions; and, after some debate thereon, agreed to postpone the same till another day.

The Ordinance for the release of Colonel James Easton being engrossed, was read a third time, and ordained in the following words, viz:

"An Ordinance for the release of Colonel JAMES EASTON.

"Whereas it appears to the Convention, upon the report of their Committee upon the case of Colonel James Easton, a prisoner confined in the Jail of the City and County of Philadelphia, on actions for debt, that there is no equitable cause for continuing the said Colonel Easton in confinement: Therefore,

"Be it ordained, and it is hereby ordained by the Convention of the State of PENNSYLVANIA, That William Dewees, heretofore appointed High Sheriff of the said City and County of Philadelphia, (under the late Constitution of Pennsylvania,) do forthwith discharge the said Colonel James Easton out of custody."

The Committee appointed to bring in an essay of the Declaration of Rights, and to whom the same was recommended, reported a new draft thereof, which, being in part read by paragraphs, and debated upon for some time, was postponed for further consideration.

Adjourned to nine o'clock Monday morning.

Monday, July 29, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The House resumed the consideration of the draft of the Declaration of Rights, and went through the same by paragraphs: Whereupon it was

The consideration of the draft of an Ordinance brought in for punishing the Counterfeiting the Paper Currency of America was resumed; and the same being read by paragraphs, debated upon, and amended, was ordered to be transcribed for a third reading.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Wednesday, July 31, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Petition of William Nichols was read, and ordered to be referred to the Overseers of the Poor, to take care of the Petitioner.

The Petitions of Matthew Knorr and William Caldwell were read; and the House apprehending that the cases of the petitioners will be provided for in the General Ordinance for the relief of Prisoners, they were Ordered to lie on the table.

The House resumed the consideration of the Petition and Memorial from Northumberland, and it was Moved and Ordered, That Colonel Kirkbride, Colonel Lowrey, Mr. Arndt, Colonel Potter, and Major James Smith, of Westmoreland, be a Committee to inquire into the facts set forth in the Memorial and Petition from Northumberland, and report thereon to this House.

The Ordinance respecting Treason was read by paragraphs, and after some time spent thereon, the further consideration of it was postponed.

Adjourned to to-morrow morning nine o'clock.

Thursday, August 1, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The engrossed copies of the drafts of the two proposed Ordinances, the one intituled "An Ordinance for the relief of the Prisoners in the several Jails in the State of Pennsylvania;" the other intituled "An Ordinance to prevent the Counterfeiting the Paper Money issued by the honourable the Continental Congress, or by this or any other of the United American States;" were read and compared at the table, and passed into Ordinances, and ordered to be signed by the Vice President.

These Ordinances are in the following words, viz:

"An Ordinance for the relief of the Prisoners in the several Jails in the State of PENNSYLVANIA.

"Whereas at this time the Courts of Justice within this State are surceased, and all process and proceedings, by which suits can be legally commenced, proceeded in, or determined, are by the authority of the people justly and totally suppressed: And whereas the detaining in custody debtors under execution, who are willing to deliver up their estates for the use of their creditors, or debtors confined under mesne process, who have no legal mode of entering bail in order to free their persons from imprisonment, is not only oppressive, but can be of no real benefit or advantage to the creditors: And whereas a total change of government by the assistance of Divine Providence has been effected within the United States, and acts of grace to criminals sometimes are granted on events of such importance:

"Be it ordained and declared by the Representatives of the Freemen of the State of Pennsylvania, in General Convention met, That all and every person and persons imprisoned or detained in any Jail within this State by reason of any process, writ, or commitment for debt, or any criminal offence whatsoever, (except for capital offences, or practices against the present virtuous measures of the American States, or prisoners of war,) be forthwith released and discharged.

"Provided always, That all and every person and persons who shall take or claim the benefit of this ordinance shall, before his, her, or their discharge, exhibit a petition in the respective Counties where such person or persons are confined, to the persons hereinafter named, setting forth the reasons of such their imprisonment; and if he, she, or they so petitioning shall be charged in execution, such prisoner or prisoners shall, with his, her, or their petition, annex the name of his, her, or their creditors, and the debts due, as near as can be, and certify an account of his, her, or their whole real and personal estate, with the securities wherein any part of it consists, and the deeds, books of accounts, notes or bonds relating thereunto; and upon such petitions and certificates delivered, the persons hereinafter named in the respective Counties, or any two of them, may, and they are hereby required to order such prisoners to be brought before them, and administer or tender to such prisoners the oath or affirmation heretofore required and taken in cases of insolvent debtors, by act of Assembly of Pennsylvania made in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and twenty-nine; and upon having taken such oath or affirmation, such prisoner or prisoners shall make an assignment of such his, her, or their estate, in the same manner as required by the said act of Assembly, and to and for the purposes therein mentioned, and subject to the pains and penalties declared in the said act; and thereupon he, she, or they shall be discharged out from custody: From and after which discharge he, she, or they shall not at any time hereafter be imprisoned for the same debt or debts for which he, she, or they have made such assignment. And in case it shall appear that the person or persons confined, is or are in custody upon mesne process only, the persons hereinafter named, or any two of them, in the respective Counties, shall and are hereby required, by order in writing under their hands, to discharge such prisoner or prisoners from his, her, or their confinement: Provided nevertheless, That such suit or action shall not cease until finally determined by due course of law.

"And be it further ordained, That George Bryan, James Young, Jacob Schryner, John Bull, Henry Hill, and Peter Knight, of the City and County of Philadelphia, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the City and County of Philadelphia; and John Wilkinson, Henry Wynkoop, and James Wallace, of the County of Bucks, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Bucks; and David Cowpland, John Crosby, and John Sellers, of the County of Chester, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Chester; and William Henry, William Bowman, and John Hopson, of the County of Lancaster, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Lancaster; and Samuel Johnston, Martin Eychelberger, and William Leas, of the County of York, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of York; and Robert Miller, John Homes, and Stephen Duncan, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Cumberland; and James Read, William Raser, and Daniel Hiester, of the County of Berks, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Berks; and Robert Trail, Abraham Birlain, and Henry Barnet, of the County of Northampton, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Northampton; and William Todd, Charles Cissna, and Robert Elliot, of the County of Bedford, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Bedford; and Samuel Hunter, Laughlin M'Cartney, and John Boyd, of the County of Northumberland, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Northumberland; and Edward Cook, Robert Hanna, and David Semple, of the County of Westmoreland, or any two of them, be, and are hereby nominated, empowered, and required to hear and discharge the prisoners in the Jail of the County of Westmoreland: And that all Sheriffs and Jailers heretofore elected and appointed, and all other persons within this State, give due obedience to the said persons, or any two of them, within their several Counties, who have been hereby authorized and appointed to hear and discharge the prisoners aforesaid.

"And be it further ordained, That the several Sheriffs and Jailers, of the several and respective Counties, heretofore elected and appointed, shall, and they are hereby authorized, directed, and commanded, to keep in safe custody all such persons that now are, or shall hereafter be, committed to them for capital offences, practices against the present virtuous measures of the American States, and prisoners of war, until they shall be discharged by due course of law, or by the authority of the honourable the Congress of the United States.

"By order of the Convention:

"GEORGE ROSS, Vice President.

"Passed 1st day of August, 1776.

"Attest: JOHN MORRIS, JUN., Secretary."

"An Ordinance to prevent the Counterfeiting the Paper Money issued by the Honourable the Continental Congress, or by any other of the UNITED AMERICAN STATES.

"Whereas great mischiefs may arise to the United States of America, and the property of the good people, inhabitants thereof, rendered precarious and insecure, by wicked and designing persons counterfeiting the paper Bills of Credit, issued by the honourable the Continental Congress, or by any of the United States of America: For remedy whereof,

"Be it ordained and declared, and it is hereby ordained and declared by the Representatives of the Freemen of the State of PENNSYLVANIA, in General Convention met, That if any person or persons shall presume to counterfeit any of the Bills of Credit issued, or hereafter to be issued by the honourable the Continental Congress, or by and under any laws or resolves of the Assembly of Pennsylvania, or by the Legislatures, or Assemblies, or Conventions, of this or any other of the United States, by printing or procuring the same to be printed, in the likeness of the said genuine Bills of Credit; and also, if any person or persons shall forge the name or names of the signers of the true Bills of Credit to such counterfeit bills, whether the counterfeiting of the bills or names be done within this State or elsewhere, or shall utter such bills knowing them to be so counterfeited as aforesaid, and being thereof legally convicted by confession, standing mute, or by verdict of twelve men in any Court of Oyer and Terminer hereafter to be erected within this State, he, she, or they shall suffer death, and the discoverer or informer shall have, as an encouragement for his or her discovery, the sum of £50, to be levied out of the goods and chattels, lands and tenements of the person convicted; and if no such goods or chattels, lands or tenements can be found, a reward of £20 shall be paid out of the publick Treasury: And if any person or persons shall counterfeit any of the said Bills of Credit, by altering the denomination of the said Bills, with design to increase the value of such Bills, or shall utter such Bills knowing them to be so counterfeited or altered as aforesaid, and shall be thereof legally convicted in any court of record hereafter to be established in this State, such person or persons shall be sentenced to the pillory, and have both his or her ears cut off and nailed to the pillory, and be publicly whipped on his or her bare back with thirty-one lashes well laid on.

"And moreover, every such offender shall forfeit the sum of £100, to be levied on his lands and tenements, goods and chattels, the one-half to the use of the State and the other half to the discoverer; and the offender shall pay the party double the value of the damages thereby sustained, together with the costs and charges of the prosecution; and in case the offender hath not sufficient to satisfy the discoverer for his or her damages and charges, and pay the forfeiture aforesaid, in such case the offender shall, by order of the Court where he or she shall be convicted, be sold, for any term not exceeding seven years, for satisfaction; and in such case, the Treasurer of this State shall reward the discoverer of such insolvent offender to the value of £5, out of the publick moneys in his hands; and every such counterfeit bill shall be delivered to the said Treasurer, to be burnt and destroyed.

"And be it further ordained and declared, That the paper Bills of Credit issued by the honourable the Continental Congress, or under the late laws, or by the resolves of the late Assembly of Pennsylvania, shall be legal tender in all cases whatsoever within this State.

"By order of Convention.

"GEORGE ROSS, Vice President.

"Passed the 1st day of August, 1776.

"Attest: JOHN MORRIS, JUN., Secretary."

On motion, Resolved, That this Convention will, to-morrow morning, resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole House, in order to take into consideration some important matters relative to the proposed new frame of Government.

Also, Ordered, That every Member of this Convention be punctual in his attendance at the House to-morrow morning.

The Committee appointed to consider the Petition and Memorial from Northumberland County, reported that the facts therein set forth are well supported by evidence, and therefore recommend the immediate consideration thereof to this Convention.

And the House having deliberated thereon, it was Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Convention, that the inhabitants of the said County, and County of Northampton, are greatly exposed to Indian incursions, without being able to make a proper defence, on account of the scattered situation of the inhabitants, they being settled in such manner as to be unable to afford each other necessary assistance.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Convention that it will be proper to raise and keep up a body of Troops for the defence of the frontiers, not only of the County of Northumberland, but also of the County of Northampton, the latter County being equally exposed to Indian incursions.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Convention, that the defenceless situation of those parts of our frontiers be made known to the Congress, by the Delegates of this State, and that they further inform them that the Battalion ordered to be raised for the defence of the western frontiers, can afford no assistance to those two Counties, and that the quota of the Militia of Northampton, first required for the Flying-Camp, is already marched, and the residue of the Militia is about to march, agreeable to the late request of Congress, by which means they will be without the least defence, and request Congress to take these matters into their consideration.

The draft of an Ordinance for punishing High Treason was read a second time by paragraphs.

Ordered to be transcribed for a third reading.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Thursday, August 1, 1776, P. M.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Friday, August 2, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

A Memorial from the inhabitants of Turkey Foot Township, in Bedford County, setting forth their opinion respecting the intended new frame of Government, was read, and Ordered to lie on the table.

The Order of the Day was then read; and the Convention, in consequence thereof, resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole House.

Colonel Joseph Kirkbride was called to and assumed the Chair.

After a very considerable time spent in deliberation, the President resumed the chair, and then Colonel Kirkbride, the Chairman of the Committee, reported that it was the opinion of the said Committee that the future Legislature of this State shall consist of one branch only, under proper restrictions.

Whereupon, it was moved and Resolved, That the future

Legislature of this State shall consist of one branch only, under proper restrictions.

Adjourned to Monday morning, nine o'clock.

— Monday, August 5, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

On motion, Resolved, That when any Member shall be absent above half an hour after the time of adjournment, or shall leave the House without permission first obtained, he shall be fined seven shillings and six pence, if there shall be a quorum then met; and if there shall not, within another half hour, appear a quorum, then each absent Member shall be fined ten shillings, as soon as a quorum appears. The said fines to be given to the Hospital.

And also, that Mr. James M. Clain collect the said fines.

The Report of the Committee for inquiring into the state of the publick funds, was read.

Ordered to lie on the table for the consideration of the Members.

The House resumed the consideration of the application made to this Convention by the Council of Safety, to determine the matter respecting the command of the Fleet of this State:

Whereupon, it was moved and seconded, that the said determination be referred wholly to the said Council of Safety; and that the officers and others in the naval and land service of this State, ought not, in all cases, to rise in command according to seniority, although proper regard should be had to that circumstance in promotions where there are equal merit and equal military abilities. And that the Council of Safety of this State shall have full authority to use their best discretion so as most effectually to promote the service. And all officers and others are hereby required and strictly enjoined to give and pay full and implicit obedience to their regulations and orders.

But the previous question being called for and seconded, it was thereupon

Resolved, That the question be not now put on the said motion.

Jacob Garrigues, the Assistant Clerk, now appearing, took the affirmation required by a former Minute.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel Antis, Mr. Samuel Smith, Mr. John Hart, Major Marsteller, Mr. Edgan, Mr. Duffield, Mr. Shoemaker, Mr. Gray, Mr. Wilkins, Mr. Kelley, and Major James Smith, be a Committee to bring in an Ordinance for regulating the Militia of this State, so as to render the burthens and expenses of the Associators and Non-Associators as nearly equal as possible.

On motion, Ordered, That Colonel Jacob Morgan be reappointed one of the Committee for bringing in an essay for a frame of Government, in the room of Mr. Leshner, who is absent.

Moved and Resolved, That Mr. Biddle, Colonel Hill, and Mr. Hubley be a Committee to bring in an Ordinance to regulate the sale of Tea and Salt in this State.

Moved and Resolved, That Mr. Biddle, Colonel Hill, and Mr. Hubley, be a Committee to bring in an Ordinance respecting the Salt imported by Joshua Fisher and Sons.

Adjourned to three o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

— Tuesday, August 6, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met according to adjournment.

On motion, Resolved, That Colonel Potter, Colonel Galbreath and Mr. Hubley be a Committee to consider the granting of Commissions for the Officers of the Flying-Camp.

A Petition from Thomas Wigton, now a prisoner in the Jail of Northampton County, was read, complaining of his arbitrary imprisonment by Mr. Gordon and Mr. Berlin; and thereupon it was Resolved, That Colonel Lowrey, Mr. Arndt, and Mr. Rabson be a Committee to inquire into the truths of the facts therein set forth.

Moved, That a Committee be appointed to bring in an Ordinance for regulating the Militia of this State; but the previous question being called for, it was thereupon Resolved, That the question on that motion be not now put.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

Application being made to this House by the Deputy Quartermaster General in this City, for directions with respect to quartering the Troops marching through the same, the consideration thereof is referred to the Council of Safety.

Resolved, That he have the leave desired, but that this House expects his attendance at the time appointed.

A Letter was read from Colonel Dickinson, at the Camp, complaining of the desertion of some of the Associators, and praying that this Convention would provide some remedy in that case; whereupon, the House agreed to the following Resolutions, viz:

Whereas this Convention hath received information that several Associators of this State have deserted the Camp, in the face of the enemy, and returned home before the formation of the Flying-Camp, and without the leave of their Commanding Officers, to the great danger of the publick, and evil example to others: It is therefore Resolved, 1st. That all such Associators as shall join their respective corps at the Camp from whence they came, in eight days from this date, with such arms and accoutrements as they may have brought away with them, shall be exempted from any punishment; and those who neglect so to do, shall be apprehended and sent under a guard to the Camp, there to be tried; and in case of absconding or concealing their arms, that they be advertised in the publick newspapers, and the reward of three pounds offered for apprehending every such person; and every Associator who shall hereafter desert his colours shall be treated as those who have already deserted and neglect to join their respective corps, agreeable to this resolve.

Resolved, 2d. That the Commanding Officers of the Companies or Battalions of the Militia of this State, who are now on their march to New-Jersey, do apprehend all deserters they may meet on the road, and convey them, under a guard, to the Camp.

Resolved, 3d. That, notwithstanding the foregoing Resolutions, it is not the intention of this Convention to detain the Militia unnecessarily from home: the Associators are therefore assured, that as soon as the Flying-Camp is formed, and the publick safety will admit, they shall be permitted to return home.

On motion, the Petition from Chester County was read again, and rejected.

The House then resumed the consideration of the Report of the Committee respecting the Declaration of Rights, which, being read by paragraphs, received the final assent of this Convention, and is as follows, viz:

A Declaration of the Rights of the Inhabitants of the State of PENNSYLVANIA.

1st. That all men are born equally free and independent, and have certain natural, inherent, and unalienable rights, amongst which are, the enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety.

2d. That all men have a natural and unalienable right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences and understanding; and that no man ought, or of right can, be compelled to attend any religious worship, or erect or support any place of worship, or maintain any ministry, contrary to or against his own free will and consent; nor can any man who acknowledges the being of a God, be justly deprived or abridged of any civil right as a citizen, on account of his religious sentiments, or peculiar mode of religious worship; and that no authority can or ought to be vested in, or assumed by, any power whatever, that shall in any case interfere with, or in any manner control the right of conscience, in the free exercise of religious worship.

3d. That the people of this State have the sole, exclusive, and inherent right of governing and regulating the internal police of the same.

4th. That all power being originally inherent in, and consequently derived from, the people, therefore all officers of Government, whether legislative or executive, are their trustees and servants, and at all times accountable to them.

5th. That Government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community, and not for the particular emolument or advantage of any single man, family, or set of men who are a part only of that community; and that the community hath an indubitable, unalienable, and indefeasible right to reform, alter, or abolish Government in such manner as shall be by that community judged most conducive to the publick weal.

6th. That those who are employed in the legislative and executive business of the State may be restrained from oppression, the people have a right, at such periods as they may think proper, to reduce their publick officers to a private station, and supply the vacancies by certain and regular elections.

7th. That all elections ought to be free; and that all free men, having a sufficient evident common interest with, and attachment to, the community, have a right to elect officers, or be elected into office.

8th. That every member of society hath a right to be protected in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property, and therefore is bound to contribute his proportion towards the expense of that protection, and yield his personal service, when necessary, or an equivalent thereto; but no part of a man's property can be justly taken from him, or applied to publick uses, without his own consent, or that of his legal representatives: nor can any man who is conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms, be justly compelled thereto, if he will pay such equivalent: nor are the people bound by any laws, but such as they have in like manner assented to, for their common good.

9th. That in all prosecutions for criminal offences, a man hath a right to be heard by himself and his counsel, to demand the cause and nature of his accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses, to call for evidence in his favour, and a speedy publick trial, by an impartial jury of the country, without the unanimous consent of which jury he cannot be found guilty: nor can he be compelled to give evidence against himself: nor can any man be justly deprived of liberty, except by the laws of the land, or the judgment of his peers.

10th. That the people have a right to hold themselves, their houses, papers, and possessions, free from search or seizure; and therefore warrants without oaths or affirmations first made, affording a sufficient foundation for them, and whereby any officer or messenger may be commanded or required to search suspected places, or to seize any person or persons, his or their property, not particularly described, are contrary to that right, and ought not to be granted.

11th. That in controversies respecting property, and in suits between man and man, the parties have a right to trial by jury, which ought to be held sacred.

12th. That the people have a right to freedom of speech, and of writing and publishing their sentiments; therefore the freedom of the press ought not to be restrained.

13th. That the people have a right to bear arms for the defence of themselves and the State; and as standing armies, in the time of peace, are dangerous to liberty, they ought not to be kept up: and that the military should be kept under strict subordination to, and governed by, the civil power.

14th. That a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles, and a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, industry, and frugality, are absolutely necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty, and keep a government free: The people ought, therefore, to pay particular attention to these points in the choice of officers and representatives, and have a right to exact a due and constant regard to them from their Legislatures and Magistrates in the making and executing such laws as are necessary for the good government of the State.

15th. That all men have a natural inherent right to emigrate from one State to another that will receive them, or to form a new State in vacant countries, or in such countries as they can purchase, whenever they think that thereby they may promote their own happiness.

16th. That the people have a right to assemble together, to consult for their common good, to instruct their Representatives, and to apply to the Legislature for redress of grievances, by address, petition, or remonstrance.

Adjourned to ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

— Saturday, August 17, 1776.

Upon application made by the Committee of Inspection and Observation for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, the House came to the following Resolution, viz:

Whereas it appears to this Convention, upon due inquiry and information of the circumstances, that the Salt now in this city has been imported at low prices, and under moderate insurance: And whereas divers persons, in contempt of the just and wholesome regulations of the Committee, &c., of Philadelphia, under directions of Congress, have continued to dispose of their Salt at most exorbitant prices, to the great grievance and distress of their fellow-subjects of this State:

It is therefore Resolved, That the said regulations be hereby confirmed, and all persons whatever are hereby strictly enjoined to pay due obedience thereto; and the said Committee are authorized and directed to seize and take into their possession the Salt belonging to such persons as have refused or shall refuse conformity to the regulations so established, or shall altogether withhold or refuse to sell their Salt during the continuance of such regulations, allowing to the said persons, upon the sale thereof, the fixed and settled prices, first deducting the expenses incurred upon the sale.

And whereas it is but reasonable that every part of this extensive State should be accommodated, as nearly as may be, with their proportion of this article, so justly esteemed a necessary of life:

Be it Resolved, That the Committee of Philadelphia, are hereby further directed to distribute the Salt that may, as aforesaid, come into their possession, in equal quantities in the several Counties, having regard to the respective numbers of inhabitants contained in the said Counties.

The gentlemen appointed to examine into the cases of John Smyth and Benjamin Lewis, report that they are proper objects of the relief and commiseration of this House, and that they are Gunlock makers, and willing to engage to work in the Factory in this City: It is thereupon

Resolved, That the Sheriff or Jailer of the City and County of Philadelphia do release and discharge the said John Smyth and Benjamin Lewis out of their or either of their custody, upon their signing a written agreement, by which they and each of them engage to work at the Gunlock Factory in this City.

Adjourned to eight o'clock on Monday morning.

On motion, Ordered, That Major Coats and Mr. Jacobs be a Committee to inquire into the number of copies of the Laws of Pennsylvania that was printed by order of the late Government; how many of them have been disposed of, and in what manner; and what number of them remain in the hands of the printer; and make report to this House.

The House resumed the consideration of the Resolves of Congress of the 23d of August respecting the Companies to be raised in the Counties of Northampton and Northumberland:

And upon motion, it was Ordered, That the Delegates in Congress for Pennsylvania represent to that honourable Board the difficulties which this House apprehends will obstruct the raising the men in the manner proposed by those Resolves.

An Ordinance respecting advisedly writing and speaking against the American cause, was read the first time, and Ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Friday, September 6, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment, and adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Saturday, September 7, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

Application was made to this Convention, by the Captain of a vessel who arrived here this morning with a cargo of Salt, to know whether he was at liberty to dispose of it, without any regard to the regulations made respecting that commodity: Whereupon, after debate, it was Resolved unanimously, That this House will not, in any manner, interfere with the said Salt; but that the owner has a right to sell or dispose of it, at such rates and to such persons, as he may think proper.

The House then proceeded to the second reading of the Ordinance respecting Associators and Non-Associators, and after a considerable time spent in debating thereon by paragraphs,

Adjourned to nine o'clock on Monday morning.

Monday, September 9, 1776.

A number of the Members met, but not being a quorum, adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Monday, September 9, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

After the clause in the Ordinance respecting Associators and Non-Associators, wherein it is ordained, that Non-Associators shall pay at the rate of 20s. per month, was carried in the affirmative, it was moved, that the yeas and nays might be taken on that clause; and thereupon, it was Resolved, That the yeas and nays be not taken.

On motion, Ordered, That the President pro tem. draw an Order on the Treasurer for the sum of twelve pounds, in favour of William Sheed, Doorkeeper to this Convention, for his wages till this time, being forty-eight days, at 5s. per diem.

The House proceeded in the further consideration of the bill respecting Associators and Non-Associators; and after some time spent therein,

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Tuesday, September 10, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

A Letter, dated the 5th instant, at King's Bridge, from Lieutenant-Colonel Broadhead, of the Pennsylvania Forces, was read, giving a relation of the battle on Long-Island, and a particular account of the behaviour of the Pennsylvanians on that occasion; and of the wants of the soldiers, who had most of them lost their blankets, which they had thrown away in the engagement. This letter also contained the returns of the three Regiments under his command, and some inquiries respecting the rank, &c., of the officers.

A Letter dated the 5th instant, at Amboy, from Colonel Slagle, was read, complaining of his ill state of health, and desiring that another Commissioner may be appointed in his stead.

A Letter of the 31st of August, from the Indian Commissioners at Fort Pitt, was read, communicating the information they had received respecting the danger of an Indian war: Whereupon it was Resolved, That Colonel Thomas Smith, Colonel Potter, and Major James Smith, be a Committee to confer with the Committee of Congress for Indian Affairs on that subject, and on the most proper mode of defending the frontiers.

Resolved, That Colonel Matlack, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Whitehill, and Mr. Edward Cook, be a Committee to take into consideration all the Military affairs of this State respecting the Flying-Camp and the operations of war to the eastward; and that they make an essay of such temporary regulations for the Militia as may render it more effectual for the immediate publick defence.

Colonel Matlack, one of the Commissioners for forming the Flying-Camp, being now returned, informed the Convention, among other things, of the difficulties that had occurred with respect to the two Companies of Artillery of the Militia of this State, now at Amboy; and that, in order to relieve them as expeditiously as possible, (after they had cheerfully staid considerably beyond the usual time,) the Commissioners had agreed to advance a month's pay, in addition to the bounty, to such as would enlist in that service: Whereupon the House expressed their approbation of their conduct therein.

A Member informed the House of some inconveniences and discouragements which he had observed arising from the small number of General Officers belonging to this State, and desired that the Convention would take that matter into consideration.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Wednesday, September 11, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

Some gentlemen of the Committee of Inspection for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, waited on the Convention with an application from that Board, setting forth, that they had continued acting, by the direction of this House, now above four weeks beyond the time for which they were originally chosen, and that they proposed to dissolve themselves on Tuesday evening next; but that, previous thereto, they submitted to this House, whether a new Committee should be chosen, and if so, that then a new line of conduct should be drawn for them.

The House resumed the consideration of the Ordinance respecting the burthens of Associators and Non-Associators, and, after considerable time spent therein, it was recommitted to Mr. Cannon, Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel James Smith, and Colonel Matlack.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Wednesday, September 11, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The House proceeded to the second reading of an Ordinance respecting the advisedly speaking and writing against the American cause, which, being read and debated by paragraphs, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading.

The Committee appointed to bring in an Ordinance respecting Debtors giving security in certain cases, reported a draft for that purpose, which, being read, was ordered to lie on the table for a second reading.

The House then proceeded to the election of four Members of the Council of Safety, in the room of Nathaniel Falconer, Jonathan B. Smith, Samuel Mifflin, and Samuel Morris, Jun.; when John Bayard, John Cox, Francis Gurney, and Samuel Cad. Morris, were chosen by ballot Members of the said Council of Safety for this State.

A Memorial of William Wild to the Congress, and by them referred to this House, is by this Convention referred to the Council of Safety.

A Petition of Lawrence Feagan, relating to the damage he sustained by reason of a riot among the soldiers at the Barracks, was read, and ordered that the same be referred to the Council of Safety.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Thursday, September 12, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Ordinance for obliging Debtors to give security in certain cases, was read a second time; and, after being debated by paragraphs, was ordered to be transcribed for a third reading.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Thursday, September 12, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Ordinance respecting advisedly speaking and writing against the American cause, was read the third time, and passed into an Ordinance in the following words, viz:

"An Ordinance for punishing persons guilty of certain offences therein mentioned against the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

"Whereas evil disposed persons may, by speaking or writing, endeavour to influence the minds of weak or unwary persons, and thereby impede the present virtuous opposition made by the free, independent, and united States of America * against the wicked and tyrannick measures pursued by the King and Parliament of Great Britain: For the prevention thereof,

"Be it ordained and declared by the Representatives of the freemen of the State of PENNSYLVANIA in General Convention met, That if any person or persons within this State shall, by advisedly speaking or writing, obstruct or oppose, or endeavour so to do, the measures carrying on by the United States of America, for the defence and support of the freedom and independence of the said States, such person or persons, on complaint and proof made on oath or affirmation before any Justice of the Peace of the City or County where the offence shall be committed, shall be held to give security for his or their good behaviour, in such sum or sums of money as the said Justice may think necessary; and, in default of giving such security, shall be committed to the common jail of the said City or County respectively, by the said Justice, there to remain until he or they shall give such security, or be otherwise legally discharged; and if the said Justice shall, on the evidence given, judge that such offender is too dangerous, unfriendly, or inimical to the American cause to be admitted to bail, then, and in such case, he may and shall associate to himself two other Justices of the Peace of the said City or County respectively; and if they, or any two of them, shall judge in like manner, they may, by warrant under their hands and seals, commit such persons to the common jail of the City or County respectively, for such time as they shall deem proper, not exceeding the duration of the present war with Great Britain.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That if any person or persons shall think him or themselves aggrieved by the judgment of the said Justice or Justices, he or they may appeal to the Council of Safety for this State, who shall, without delay, determine the same; and may confirm, nullify, suspend, alter, or mitigate the judgment of the said Justice or Justices.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That this Ordinance shall continue in force until the end of the first session of the future Legislature of this State, or until altered or repealed by the same, or by this Convention.

"Passed in Convention September 12, 1776, and signed by their order. GEORGE ROSS, Vice President.

"Attest: JOHN MORRIS, JUN., Secretary."

Information being given to this Convention that the Battalion, or a part of the same, under the command of Colonel Peter Grubb, of Lancaster County, after having received one month's pay advance, and having also been supplied with a number of arms in this City, have returned home without marching into New-Jersey, and without being discharged, and have taken the said arms with them,

Resolved, That the Council of Safety do forthwith make diligent and strict inquiry into this matter; and that they have power to call before them the Colonel and such other officers of the said Battalion as they shall judge necessary.

A Petition from six Captains of Companies of Colonel Montgomery's Battalion of Chester County, Pennsylvania Militia, complaining that they had not received their pay, and desiring the interference of this House, was read, and Ordered to lie on the table.

The House resumed the consideration of the Bill respecting Associators and Non-Associators, and, after some time spent therein,

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Friday, September 13, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The House proceeded to the second reading of the Ordinance respecting Associators and Non-Associators; and the same being debated by paragraphs, was ordered to be transcribed for a third reading.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Friday, September 13, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider of the Military affairs of this State made their report in writing; which, being read, was Ordered to lie on the table for consideration.

The Ordinance compelling Debtors to give security, being compared at the table, was read a third time, and ordered to pass into an Ordinance, in the following words:

"An Ordinance to compel Debtors, in certain cases, to give Security to their Creditors."

"Whereas at this time, when the Courts of Justice in this State are shut, it is absolutely necessary that honest creditors should be made secure, when it shall appear that otherwise they might, by dishonest debtors taking advantage of the times, run the risk of losing their just debts:

"Be it therefore ordained and declared by the Representatives of the freemen of the State of PENNSYLVANIA in General Convention met," That where complaint, by oath or affirmation by the complainant, or some person for him, shall be made to any one Justice of the Peace for this State, that any person or persons residing within the City or County where such Justice hath jurisdiction, is justly indebted to the complainant in any sum not exceeding five pounds, and that such debtor is about to depart this State, with design to defraud his creditors, as is believed; and that such debtor, being of sufficient ability, in the judgment of the said Justice, on full examination had, refuses to pay or give reasonable security in the nature of special bail for the same, to abide the judgment of such person or persons as shall hereafter be empowered to judge and determine the matter in controversy, it shall and may be lawful for such Justice to issue either a summons or capias, as the case may require, directed to the proper Constable, requiring him to cause the defendant to come before such Justice, and the said Justice shall order the said defendant to give such reasonable bail as the nature of the case may require; and if such defendant shall neglect or refuse to give such bail, then the said Justice is hereby empowered to commit such defendant to the Jail of the said City or County, and the keeper thereof is hereby required there to keep him safely until he shall give such bail, or be otherwise lawfully discharged: And if any such person or persons shall be indebted to any one or more person or persons in a sum exceeding five pounds, then on the like complaint, on oath or affirmation being made to two Justices of the City or proper County, they shall proceed in manner as before mentioned and directed in cases not exceeding five pounds.

"Passed in Convention, September 13, 1776, and signed by their order.

"JAMES POTTER, Vice President pro tem."

"Attest: JOHN MORRIS, Jun., Secretary."

Two Petitions from the Townships of Upper and Lower Smithfield, Delaware and Hamilton, in the County of Northampton, praying a supply of Ammunition, &c., were read, and referred to the Council of Safety.

The House being informed that Mr. Swoope, the gentleman chosen the Member of the Council of Safety for the County of York, had accepted the command of a Battalion in the Flying-Camp, now proceeded to the choice of another Member for that County, when Colonel Joseph Donaldson was chosen by ballot to that office.

On motion, Resolved, That the Members of the Council of Safety for this State, who have not hitherto made and subscribed the Oath or Affirmation directed in the Ordinance for appointing Justices of the Peace, or the Oath or Affirmation of office, may take and subscribe the same before any Justice of the Peace for the County wherein they respectively reside.

Resolved, That, on Monday next, this House will resume the consideration of the frame of Government.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

— Saturday, September 14, 1776.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

A Return of such Men of Colonel Montgomery's Battalion of Chester County Militia, who left the Camp in New-Jersey without regular discharges, was made to the House, and referred to the Council of Safety.

Whereas from the Letters received from the Commissioners for Indian Affairs for the Middle Department, with the affidavit therein enclosed, there is too much reason to apprehend that the Indians have been encouraged, by the agents of his Britannick Majesty, to fall on the frontiers of these States; therefore it behooves this Convention to take every prudent precaution for the safety of our western frontiers: And as, by the resolves of the late Assembly of this State, the Council of Safety have the sole power of calling out the Associators within the same; but, by reason of the great distance of the frontier Counties, and by reason that it may be absolutely necessary, at a very short warning, to order out the Associators of the said Counties, or such part of them, from time to time, as persons on the spot can only judge thereof:

Resolved, That the Member of the Council of Safety for the County of Bedford, and Bernard Dougherty, William M'Coomb, James Anderson, and Robert Elliot, of the said County; that the Member of the Council of Safety for the County of Northampton, and Nicholas Dupui, David Deshler, Herman Schneyder, and Arthur Lattimore, of the said County; and that the Member of the Council of Safety for the County of Northumberland, and William M'Clay, Michael Troy, Walter Clark, and Laughlin M'Cartney, of the said County; and that the Member of the Council of Safety for the County of Westmoreland, and Samuel Sloane, William Lockray, John Giffen, and Christopher Trubey, of the said County, respectively, or a majority of them in each County respectively, be, and they are hereby empowered to order or approve of the going out of such part of the Associators as they may think necessary, in case of an actual invasion, to march to the protection of such part of the said Counties as may be exposed to the depredations of the Indians, or to repel any attack which may be made by them, in the most effectual manner: And in case of any sudden invasions made by the Indians, and not otherwise, the Captain or Commanding Officer of any Company in the said County, is hereby empowered to order out such part of his Company as he may judge necessary for the purpose aforesaid: And in case any of the said Counties should be invaded, the said Members of the Council of Safety, and Commissioners of the said other Counties respectively, are hereby empowered, as often as they shall judge necessary, to order out the Associators, or a part of them, for the assistance of such County which may be so invaded: And the Member of the Council of Safety and his associates for the respective Counties aforesaid, are hereby directed to make out the accounts of the pay, subsistence, and necessary expenses of such Associators as shall be called out as aforesaid, and lay the same before the Council of Safety or future Assembly of this State, in order that the same, appearing to them just and reasonable, may be paid.

The Committee who were appointed to confer with the honourable Delegates in Congress from the State of Virginia, on the settlement of a temporary Boundary between the State of Virginia and this State, reported to the Convention that they met the said Delegates, who delivered to them the following resolve of the Convention of Virginia and the following letter from the Committee of Safety of that State to their Delegates, as their proposal on this subject. In answer to which the Committee delivered the letter and proposal (which answer and proposal the Committee approve of) in reply; to which they received the letter hereinafter last mentioned, by which it appears that the power of the honourable Delegates on this subject is at an end; but, as they therein inform the Committee, that they will, without delay, transmit their proposal to the Governor and Council of Virginia, in order to be laid before the General Assembly of that State; this Convention having the utmost confidence that that honourable body will readily agree to any proposal that will settle the disputes in question on the principles of justice and equity, do therefore warmly recommend the settlement of the said line, on these principles, to the future Assembly of this State. And, in the mean time, it is earnestly recommended to the inhabitants of that part of the country to forget their former heats and animosities, which were fomented by those who were equal enemies to both States, and to promote peace and harmony, and to cultivate a good understanding with one another, as they tender the liberty and happiness of both States, as well as of America in general, which can only be preserved by the union of all her sons.

"Virginia, in Convention, June 15, 1776."

"Whereas disputes have for some time subsisted between the people settled under the Government of this Colony and others settled under the Proprietors of Pennsylvania, which cannot be determined for want of having the boundary between the two countries settled and ascertained; and as the people are uncertain which Government they ought to submit to, consequences of the most alarming nature are justly to be apprehended from a contention and clashing of jurisdictions between the Magistrates and officers of the respective countries: For prevention whereof, and in order to restore peace and harmony to all those people:

"Resolved, That it be proposed to the General Assembly or Representatives of the people of the Province of Pennsylvania to agree to the following temporary boundary between the two countries, that is to say: From that part of the meridian of the head fountain of Potomack, where it is intersected by Braddock's Road, along the said road to the great crossing of Youghagany; thence down the meadows of that river to the Chestnut ridge; thence along that ridge to the easterly branch of Jacob's Creek, otherwise called Greenlick run; thence down the said run to Braddock's old road; thence along the same and the new road leading to Pittsburgh, to a place called the Bullock Pens, now in the tenure of William Elliot; and from thence a direct course to the mouth of Plumb run, on the Alleghancy River, above Colonel Croghan's: Which lines, this Convention are of opinion, will give most general satisfaction to the inhabitants, as it will nearly leave them in the respective country under which they settled; that the present inhabitants on either side the line ought quietly to enjoy their possessions, and be subject to the regulations of the Government they will remain in, without considering under which they derive their title, until a final and ultimate boundary can be settled, when nothing which may be done in consequence of this agreement shall tend to prejudice the titles of individuals, or the claim of either country to a fair and equal boundary.

"EDMUND PENDLETON, President.

"JOHN TAZEWELL, C. C."

"Ordered, That the Committee of Safety be desired immediately to transmit the foregoing Resolution to the Delegates appointed to represent this Colony in General Congress, requesting them to negotiate the same on the part of this Colony.

"EDMUND PENDLETON, President.

"JOHN TAZEWELL, C. C."

"Williamsburgh, June 17, 1776.

"GENTLEMEN: The confusion which hath for some time happened amongst the people in the disputed lands between Pennsylvania and this Colony, and a representation to the Convention that a civil war was like to be the consequence if something was not done to prevent it, induced that body to take the subject into consideration, who were sorry to discover that a jealousy seemed to prevail in the governing powers of Pennsylvania, of our intending the garrisons on the Ohio to influence that dispute and to overawe their people. Whereas we only mean by them to protect our people and those in the contested settlement from the danger they are exposed to of Indian ravages, without the most distant view to offer any injury to our friends and neighbours, with whom it is our inclination as well as interest to unite, a temporary boundary appeared to the Convention the only means of quieting the people until we have leisure to refer the final decision to some arbitrating power between us; and in fixing that, they judged that to point a line which would most nearly leave the inhabitants in the country they respectively settled under would be most likely to give general satisfaction; and having examined several gentlemen well acquainted with that country, who were of opinion that end would be answered by the line described in the enclosed resolution, they have resolved to propose that line to the Pennsylvania Assembly, and have commanded us to transmit it to you, requesting that you would negotiate the matter in such manner as you shall think most effectual.

"We are, with great regard, gentlemen, your obedient humble servants,

"EDMUND PENDLETON, THOMAS LUD. LEE,

"DUDLEY DIGGES, WILLIAM CABELL,

"P. CARRINGTON, JOS. JONES.

"To the Hon. the Virginia Delegates in Congress."

"The Committee of the honourable Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, appointed to confer with the honourable Delegates in Congress from the State of Virginia, on the settlement of a temporary boundary between the said

States, are of opinion, that the line proposed by the honourable Delegates will be very wide from the true limits of Pennsylvania, according to the Charter; and as the State of Virginia, in one of their most solemn acts, published as the future form of Government for that State, and intending thereby to lay the most solid basis for union and confederation with the neighbouring States, has 'ceded, released, and forever confirmed to the people of this State all the territories contained within the Charter erecting this Colony, with all the rights of property, jurisdiction, and government, and all other rights whatever,' the proposing a temporary boundary, which would cut off so large a part from this State, seems inconsistent with the said full, free, and absolute release, and instead of being the basis of union, would certainly be the occasion of much confusion; and as the minds of the inhabitants of that part of the country are greatly agitated by the disputes between the two Governments, we have reason to apprehend fatal consequences, should a temporary boundary so apparently partial be agreed to, even upon the principle mentioned by the honourable Convention of Virginia in their resolve, empowering their Delegates to confer on this subject, (supposing it equitable, which may be liable to dispute,) the line proposed, we apprehend, cannot be admitted; and we are convinced that honourable body must have been misinformed as to the settlement of that part of the country which lies between the temporary boundary proposed and the true line. We can assure the honourable Delegates that it is far from the wish of the people of this State to extend the same beyond its due bounds; it is equally far from their wish to establish a temporary jurisdiction confessed far within those bounds, as such a temporary boundary would, on many accounts, be productive of more confusion and greater inconveniences than if it was permanent and final:

"Therefore, as the only means of restoring peace and unity amongst the inhabitants of the frontiers of each State, it is our earnest desire that a temporary boundary as nearly correspondent to the true one as possible, and such as will 'do no injury to either party,' should be run, which may be done in a very short time, and at a trifling expense, with no considerable error, by one or more Commissioners appointed on the part of each State.

"It will give us great pleasure should this proposal meet with the approbation of the honourable Delegates, as such a settlement will enable the inhabitants to join heart and hand in the great cause wherein we are all equally interested.

"DAVID RITTENHOUSE, OWEN BIDDLE,
"THOMAS SMITH, JAMES POTTER,
"ALEXANDER LOWREY, EDWARD COOK."

"The Virginia Delegates have received the proposal for establishing a temporary boundary between the State of Virginia and Pennsylvania, from the Committee of the honourable Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, and for answer say: That their power is ended, having been expressly limited to the line already proposed to the honourable Convention of the State of Pennsylvania, as a temporary boundary; that they will, without delay, transmit the proposal of the honourable Committee to the Governor and Council of the Commonwealth of Virginia, in order to its being laid before the General Assembly which meets early in October next; and in the mean time they wish the influence of both Governments may be exerted to preserve friendship and peace between the people of both States on the controverted boundary.

"FRANCIS LIGHTFOOT LEE.

"Philadelphia, September 12, 1776."

The House proceeded to the third reading of the Bill respecting the burthen of Associators; and the same being compared at the table, was passed into an Ordinance, in the following words, viz:

"An Ordinance for rendering the burthen of Associators and Non-Associators in the defence of this State as nearly equal as may be.

"Whereas the Associators of this State have bestowed much of their time, and been at a considerable expense in qualifying themselves for the defence of their country, and are now gone forth into actual service, to the great prejudice of their private concerns, while others, by not associating, have exempted themselves from those difficulties, and pursued their business to advantage; and whereas no effectual measures have hitherto been taken to render the burthen of the defence, which is a common benefit, as nearly equal as possible: Therefore,

"Be it ordained and declared, and it is hereby ordained and declared, by the Representatives of the freemen of the State of PENNSYLVANIA in General Convention met, That every Non-Associator, between the ages of sixteen and fifty years, shall pay for and during the time of his continuing a Non-Associator, at the rate of twenty shillings for each and every month, to commence from the publication of this Ordinance, and to continue until the end of the first session of the future Assembly of this State, unless the said Assembly shall, before that time, alter or repeal the same.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That every Non-Associator, above the age of twenty-one years, shall pay, in addition to the aforesaid fine, at the rate of four shillings in the pound on the annual value of his estate, as rated under the late laws of this State for raising provincial taxes.

"And be it further ordained by the authority aforesaid, That all the moneys which shall be raised by the aforesaid assessments and fines, after discharging the necessary expenses attending collecting the same, shall be paid into the hands of John Bayard, Esquire, for the relief and support of the families of poor Associators of this State, while out in the service, and to afford assistance to those poor Associators who are by the service rendered incapable of supporting themselves and their families, and also to afford such assistance to the widows and children of such poor Associators as lose their lives in the service of their country.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That when any of the said Associators, or their widows and children, shall be so entitled to a share of the moneys arising from the aforesaid assessments and fines, the Field-Officers of the Battalion, or any three of them, and a private of the company to which such Associator, at the time when he or his widow and children became so entitled, did belong, shall certify the particular circumstances of the said Associator or his wife, (or of his widow and children, if he should be killed,) to the future Assembly of this State, in order to enable them to fulfil the intent of this Ordinance.

And to the end that the said four shillings in the pound, and the said monthly fines of twenty shillings, may be duly assessed, levied, collected, and paid, for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned:

"Be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That Jacob Morgan, Joseph Moulder, and Jacob Bright, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Isaac Snowden, James Milligan, Michael Shubart, Benjamin Harbeson, William Will, and William Hollingshead, Assessors for the City of Philadelphia; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the City of Philadelphia.

"That Thomas Potts, Samuel Erwin, and John Williams, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and John Brown, William Robinson, Samuel Ingle, Andrew Knox, Henry Derringer, and Isaac Hughes, Assessors for the County of Philadelphia; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Philadelphia.

"And that James Benezet, Captain William Roberts, and Abraham Middleswarts, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Gilliam Cornet, Abraham Britton, James Wallace, Thomas Armstrong, Benjamin Segal, and George M'Iroy, Assessors for the County of Bucks; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Bucks.

"And that Thomas Levis, William Evans, and Thomas Taylor, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Caleb Davis, Richard Thomas, David Cloyd, Benjamin Brannon, Thomas Evans, and Joseph Gardner, Assessors for the County of Chester; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Chester.

"And that Alexander Martin, Christian Wirtz, and Caspar Snevely, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and John Bokenstose, John Rowland, Philip Greenwalt,

Thomas Clark of Dromore, Caspar Shaffner, and John Jemminson the younger, Assessors for the County of Lancaster; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Lancaster.

"And that Peter Wolfe, John Nesbit, and Archibald M'Lean, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Patrick Scott, Benjamin Pidon, Frederick Wolfe, John Agnew, Christopher Lowman, and James Dill, Assessors for the County of York; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of York.

"And that Patrick Maxwell, Samuel Leard, and James Pollock, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Henry Polling, John Davis, James Lyon, Alexander Morrow, John Carson, and William Rippey, Assessors for the County of Cumberland; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Cumberland.

"And that Henry Reitmeyer, Christian Lower, and Mordecai Lincoln, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Conrad Hershner the elder, Nicholas Jones, Frederick Mayerle, George Kelchner, Warner Stam, and John Robinson, Assessors for the County of Berks; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Berks.

"And that Peter Burkhalter, Jacob Opp, and Henry Lewald, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Peter Koler, Abraham Arndt, Benjamin Dupui, Peter Haas, Peter Beisel, and John Van Camp, Assessors for the County of Northampton; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Northampton.

"And that Charles Cissna, Edward Coomb, and John Cissna, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Matthew Patton, Harman Husbands, William Todd, William Parker, William Phillips, and Benjamin Elliot, Assessors for the County of Bedford; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Bedford.

"And that Thomas Hewit, William Gray, and John Weizel, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and Jonathan Loudge, Walter Clark, Peter Holsterman, James Harrison, Nicholas Miller, and Jacob Heverlan, Assessors for the County of Northumberland; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Northumberland.

"And that Robert Hanna, James Cavat, and James Pollock, be, and are hereby appointed Commissioners; and William Elliot, John Shields, Samuel Moorhead, James M'Lean, James Beard, and Christopher Truby, Assessors of the County of Westmoreland; who, or a majority of them, shall be a Board of Commissioners and Assessors for the County of Westmoreland: Who shall meet at the Court Houses of their several and respective Counties, on Monday, the fourteenth day of October next ensuing, or as soon after as they can conveniently meet, and appoint proper persons to make returns to them of all the Non-Associators in their respective districts, on or before the second Monday of November next ensuing.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That the said Commissioners and Assessors shall have all the powers, authorities, and jurisdictions which any Commissioners and Assessors heretofore enjoyed under the late laws of the Province of Pennsylvania, and shall proceed in raising, levying, and collecting the said sum of four shillings in the pound and twenty shillings per month in the same manner and under the same appeals, rates, directions, penalties, and forfeitures, in all respects, as in and by the several late laws of the late Government of Pennsylvania, which were in force on the first day of July last, for raising, levying, collecting, and paying the assessments and taxes of said Government, saving and excepting only such parts of the same laws as are hereby altered or supplied.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That the direction in the said laws shall be effectual to all intents and purposes for raising, levying, collecting, securing, and accounting for the said rates and sums of money, and for levying and recovering the penalties and forfeitures, and all other matters and things thereunto belonging, as fully and effectually as if the same were particularly and at large repeated and inserted in this ordinance, except in such cases as are herein ascertained, provided for, or altered.

"And be it further ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That the Commissioners, on any appeal from the rate or assessment of twenty shillings per month, may remit the whole or any part thereof, in case of the poverty, sickness, or bodily inability to labour, of the Non-Associator, or other such case as would exempt an Associator from mustering or marching when duly called thereto, but in no other case whatever.

"And whereas persons above fifty years of age are exempted from personal service, by reason of their inability to bear the fatigue of military duty, yet it is but just and reasonable that they should contribute towards the security of their property:

"Be it therefore ordained and declared by the authority aforesaid, That all and every such person above the age of fifty years shall pay the like sum of four shillings in the pound on the annual value of their estates.

"Provided always, That this tax shall not be levied on, or paid by, any such person above fifty years of age who shall have one or more sons, who are Associators, unmarried, and residing with his or their father.

"And provided also, That if any person above fifty years of age, who shall be judged by the commanding officer of the Battalion fit for military duty, shall voluntarily enter into the Association, then and in such case such person shall be exempted from paying the said tax.

"And provided also, That nothing herein contained shall prevent or obstruct the levying, collecting, and paying the fines heretofore set on Non-Associators by the late Assembly, but the same shall be collected under the same penalties, in the same manner and by the same persons as are mentioned and appointed to levy and collect the moneys to be raised by virtue of this Ordinance.

"Passed in Convention, September 14, 1776, and signed by their order. B. FRANKLIN, President.

"Attest: JOHN MORRIS, Jun., Secretary."

The two Indians now attending, the President read to them the Message to their Nation; which, being translated by Colonel Lowrey, was delivered to them in writing, and is as follows:

"The State of PENNSYLVANIA, by their Representatives in Convention at PHILADELPHIA, to their Brethren the SHAWANESE INDIANS:

"BRETHREN: Listen to us! We have been much pleased to see our brothers the Shawanese among us, and we hope they are well satisfied with their visit to our towns. They can tell you that we keep our roads open and clear from all bad weeds, briars, and thorns. A String.

"Brothers, we hope you will also be careful of your roads, and not suffer the evil spirit to interrupt our ancient friendship. A String.

"Brothers, listen to us! The great Council of the Thirteen United States have appointed Commissioners to speak to you, at Pittsburgh, about our ancient friendship. We desire you will listen to them, and you may depend that your white brethren, who have grown out of this same big island with you, will hold fast the ancient covenant-chain of friendship entered into by our ancestors. And we desire, brethren, that you will not let our friendship go; but that you will be strong in the good work of peace, which you are invited to meet about at Pittsburgh, and not listen to the evil spirit which you know has been striving to make mischief between us; for we, on our parts, are resolved to preserve our ancient friendship with you. And we desire you will assist your white brethren of the United American States to live in peace with all nations. To confirm our words, we send, by our brothers Wenthissica and Pellawa, this belt, which we desire you will show in Council to all our Indian brethren of every nation." A Belt.

After which the present of twenty Dollars to each was made, and thankfully received by them.

It was also, on motion, Ordered, That it be recommended to the inhabitants of this State in general, and particularly to the Committees of the several Counties, to treat with respect the bearers Wenthissica and Pellawa, two Shawanese Indians; and, if occasion should require, to afford them protection as they travel on their journey home, they being the bearers of a message from this Convention to their nation.

Some Letters from the Commissioners for Indian affairs, at Fort Pitt, to the Committee of Westmoreland County, and from the said Committee to their Members in this Convention, dated the 31st of August, and the 1st and 8th of September instant, relative to the danger of an Indian war, and requesting a supply of arms and ammunition, were read, and ordered to be referred to the Council of Safety.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to draw up the resolve respecting the Elections for the present year, reported a draft for that purpose; which, being read and amended, was agreed to in the following words:

In Convention for the State of PENNSYLVANIA.

Whereas it is not convenient to hold the next election throughout this State for choosing the elective officers thereof, on the day on which it will be most convenient to the people to hold their elections for the future; and this Convention being desirous that the freemen of this State may, as soon as possible, enjoy the advantages of a free and established Government: It is therefore

Resolved, That the next election of Representatives in General Assembly, and of all other elective officers heretofore usually chosen on the first day of October, shall be held for the City of Philadelphia, and for the County of Philadelphia, and for every other County of this State, on Tuesday, the fifth day of November next; and, except in the Counties of Bedford, Northumberland, and Westmoreland, at the places where the elections for Representatives in this Convention were held. The election for Inspectors is to be held in the City of Philadelphia, and in each of the Counties of this State, on Saturday, the second day of November next. The Judges of the said elections shall be chosen and appointed by the Inspectors on the day of election; and shall be subject to the like forfeitures and penalties for fraud or wilful neglect as the Sheriff would have been in the like case by the late laws of this State. The Constables of the wards in the City of Philadelphia, and of the Townships of the several Counties of this State, shall give six days' notice of the election for Inspectors. The Judges, or one or more of them, shall, within two days following the election, meet at the Court-House of the respective Counties in which elections shall be held in Districts, and returns shall be made to them from the Districts, of the names of the candidates, and number of votes for each: And the Judges shall cast up the votes, and shall certify those who are highest in votes, to be duly elected to the respective offices: And the elections shall, in all other matters, be held and carried on, as nearly as may be, according to the directions of an act of Assembly of the late Government of Pennsylvania, made in the year one thousand seven hundred and sixty-six, intituled, "An Act directing the choice of Inspectors, and for holding the general elections in this Province:" And in case any Township or Townships neglect to choose an Inspector or Inspectors, the other Inspectors and the Judges present at the election, shall appoint an Inspector or Inspectors for such Township or Townships.

The freemen of the County of Bedford shall vote in four Districts for this present year, as follows, viz:

The freemen of the First District, containing the Townships of Bedford, Colerain, and Cumberland Valley, at the Court-House in the Town of Bedford; of the Second, containing the Townships of Bethel, Air, and Dublin, at the house of John Burd, at Fort Lyttleton; of the Third, containing the Townships of Barré, Hopewell, and Frankstown, at Standing-Stone; and of the Fourth, containing the Townships of Brothers Valley, Turkeyfoot, and Quemachoning, at the house of John Kemberlin, near the junction of the said three Townships.

The County of Northumberland shall be divided into four Districts, to wit: the freemen of Augusta, Penns, and Mahoney Townships, shall meet at the Town of Sunbury; of Turbutt, Mahoning, and Wiomung, shall meet at the Town of Northumberland; of Buffaloe, White Deer, and Potter, shall meet at Foutz's Mill, in Buffaloe Township; and of Munsey and Bald-Eagle, shall meet at the house of Amariah Sutton, in Munsey Township.

The electors of the County of Westmoreland shall hold their election in manner following, that is to say: the electors on the north side of Kiskemenetas and Cannemach, shall hold their election at Captain Samuel Morehead's Mill; the Second District shall be bounded by the Laurel Hill, Cannemach, the Chestnut Ridge, and Youghagany, and shall hold their election at Ligonier; the other electors in the said County, not comprehended in the foregoing Districts, shall hold their elections at the two places directed by the conference of Committees for electing Members of this Convention.

Every elector, before his vote is received, shall take the following Oath or Affirmation, instead of that heretofore required, viz: "I, do swear, (or affirm,) that I will be faithful and true to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and that I will not, directly or indirectly, do any act or thing prejudicial or injurious to the Constitution or Government thereof, as established by the Convention."

And the Judges and Inspectors of the said elections shall, besides the oaths prescribed in the law directing the choice of Inspectors above-mentioned, take the oath of allegiance above recited. And

Resolved, That the said General Assembly, chosen in consequence of the foregoing resolves, shall meet at Philadelphia, on Tuesday, the nineteenth day of November next.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Thursday, September 26, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The Committee appointed to consider of the matter contained in Colonel Hancock's Letter, made their report in writing; which, being read, was agreed to by the House, and is as follows:

That three persons be commissioned immediately to repair to the several stations where any of the forces of this State now are, and obtain a full account of the strength and condition of the Battalions raised in this State, except in the County of Westmoreland.

That the officers of these Battalions, who shall appear to be qualified for their stations, be continued, if they shall enter to serve during the war.

That the vacancies occasioned by officers declining to serve, or which have happened, or may happen by other means, be filled by the Council of Safety, where it is necessary to be done before the sitting of the General Assembly.

That as many as possible of the soldiers, who are now in the service, be induced to enlist to serve during the war; and that persons be appointed to recruit the several Battalions as soon as may be, and that the Commanding Officers of each Battalion be directed forthwith to order out recruiting parties to complete their Battalions.

That the Commissioners be authorized to apply to Congress for money, from time to time, to pay the bounty as fast as the men may enlist in the service, to be accountable to the State.

That the Commissioners be authorized to inquire into the conduct of the Commissaries and Quartermasters, if they shall think it necessary.

That persons be immediately appointed to purchase woollens for clothing, blankets, and other necessities, and particularly arms.

On motion, Ordered, That this House will to-morrow morning proceed to the election, by ballot, of the three Commissioners recommended, by the above report, to inquire, &c., into the condition of the Troops raised in this State.

On motion, Resolved, That the Commissioners for raising the Flying-Camp account with the Council of Safety, or future Assembly, for such Moneys as have been or shall be put into their hands for that purpose.

The House resumed the consideration of the draft of the preamble offered to them yesterday, and the same was agreed to.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Friday, September 27, 1776, A. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

The House, according to the Order of the Day, proceeded to the election, by ballot, of the Commissioners recommended to be chosen by the report of yesterday; when Major Lollar, Major Coates, and John Morris, Jun., Esquire, were elected.

On information, that a number of soldiers, belonging to Colonel Miles's Battalion, had mutinied and returned to this city, it was Resolved, That Colonel Kirkbride, Mr. Cannon, Mr. Whitehill, and Colonel James Smith, be a Committee to inquire into the affair, and make report to this House.

Adjourned to three o'clock in the afternoon.

Friday, September 27, 1776, P. M.

The Convention met pursuant to adjournment.

On motion, Resolved, That Captain Farmer and the other Officers of the three Battalions belonging to this State, be directed to march the soldiers, who have returned from the Camp, to the Barracks; that the Commissary be directed to supply them with provisions, and that they be kept there until the Convention, or Council of Safety, shall have considered their case, and shall give further directions.

On motion, Resolved, That it be recommended to the first General Assembly of this State, to make a law similar to the habeas corpus act of England, for the security of the personal liberty of the inhabitants.

The Committee appointed to inquire into the affair of the returned soldiers, made their report in writing; which, being read, was referred for further consideration.

Adjourned to nine o'clock to-morrow morning.

Saturday, September 28, 1776.

The House met pursuant to adjournment.

The frame or plan of Government, and preamble agreed to yesterday, being now fairly engrossed, were deliberately read and compared at the table; and, being bound up with the Declaration of Rights, were passed and confirmed unanimously, in the words following, viz:

The Constitution of PENNSYLVANIA.

Whereas all government ought to be instituted and supported for the security and protection of the community as such, and to enable the individuals who compose it to enjoy their natural rights and the other blessings which the Author of existence has bestowed upon man; and, whenever these great ends of government are not obtained, the people have a right, by common consent, to change it, and take such measures as to them may appear necessary to promote their safety and happiness: And whereas the inhabitants of this Commonwealth have, in consideration of protection only, heretofore acknowledged allegiance to the King of Great Britain; and the said King has not only withdrawn that protection, but commenced and still continues to carry on with unabated vengeance a most cruel and unjust war against them, employing therein not only the troops of Great Britain, but foreign mercenaries, savages and slaves, for the avowed purpose of reducing them to a total and abject submission to the despotick domination of the British Parliament, with many other acts of tyranny, (more fully set forth in the declaration of Congress,) whereby all allegiance and fealty to the said King and his successors are dissolved and at an end, and all power and authority derived from him ceased in these Colonies: And whereas it is absolutely necessary for the welfare and safety of the inhabitants of said Colonies that they be henceforth free and independent States, and that just, permanent, and proper forms of government exist in every part of them, derived from, and founded on the authority of, the people only, agreeable to the directions of the honourable American Congress:

We, the Representatives of the freemen of Pennsylvania, in General Convention met, for the express purpose of framing such a government, confessing the goodness of the Great Governour of the Universe, (who alone knows to what degree of earthly happiness mankind may attain, by perfecting the arts of government,) in permitting the people of this State, by common consent, and without violence, deliberately to form for themselves such just rules as they shall think best for governing their future society; and being fully convinced that it is our indispensable duty to establish such original principles of government as will best promote the general happiness of the people of this State and their posterity, and provide for future improvements, without partiality for or prejudice against any particular class, sect, or denomination of men whatsoever, Do, by virtue of the authority vested in us by our constituents, ordain, declare, and establish the following Declaration of Rights and frame of Government, to be the Constitution of this Commonwealth, and to remain in force therein forever, unaltered, except in such articles as shall hereafter, on experience, be found to require improvement, and which shall, by the same authority of the people fairly delegated, as this frame of Government directs, be amended or improved for the more effectual obtaining and securing the great end and design of all government hereinbefore mentioned:

CHAPTER I.

A Declaration of the Rights of the Inhabitants of the Commonwealth or State of PENNSYLVANIA.

1st. That all men are born equally free and independent, and have certain natural, inherent, and unalienable rights, amongst which are the enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and pursuing and obtaining happiness and safety.

2d. That all men have a natural and unalienable right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences and understanding; and that no man ought, or of right can, be compelled to attend any religious worship, or erect or support any place of worship, or maintain any ministry, contrary to, or against his own free will and consent; nor can any man who acknowledges the being of a God, be justly deprived or abridged of any civil right as a citizen, on account of his religious sentiments, or peculiar mode of religious worship; and that no authority can or ought to be vested in, or assumed by any power whatever that shall in any case interfere with, or in any manner control the right of conscience, in the free exercise of religious worship.

3d. That the people of this State have the sole, exclusive, and inherent right of governing and regulating the internal police of the same.

4th. That all power being originally inherent in, and consequently derived from the people, therefore all officers of government, whether legislative or executive, are their trustees and servants, and at all times accountable to them.

5th. That government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community; and not for the particular emolument or advantage of any single man, family, or set of men, who are a part only of that community; and that the community hath an indubitable, unalienable and indefeasible right to reform, alter, or abolish government, in such manner as shall be by that community judged most conducive to the publick weal.

6th. That those who are employed in the legislative and executive business of the State may be restrained from oppression, the people have a right, at such periods as they may think proper, to reduce their publick officers to a private station, and supply the vacancies by certain and regular elections.

7th. That all elections ought to be free; and that all free men having a sufficient evident common interest with, and attachment to the community, have a right to elect officers or be elected into office.

8th. That every member of society hath a right to be protected in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property, and therefore is bound to contribute his proportion towards the expense of that protection, and yield his personal service when necessary, or an equivalent thereto; but no part of a man's property can be justly taken from him, or applied to publick uses, without his own consent, or that of his legal representatives; nor can any man who is conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms, be justly compelled thereto, if he will pay such equivalent; nor are the people bound by any laws but such as they have in like manner assented to for their common good.

9th. That in all prosecutions for criminal offences a man hath a right to be heard by himself and his counsel, to demand the cause and nature of his accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses, to call for evidence in his favour, and a speedy publick trial, by an impartial jury of the country, without the unanimous consent of which jury he cannot be found guilty; nor can he be compelled to give evidence against himself; nor can any man be justly deprived of his liberty, except by the laws of the land or the judgment of his peers.

10th. That the people have a right to hold themselves, their houses, papers and possessions free from search or seizure; and therefore, warrants without oaths or affirmations first made, affording a sufficient foundation for them, and whereby any officer or messenger may be commanded or required to search suspected places, or to seize any person or persons, his or their property, not particularly described, are contrary to that right, and ought not to be granted.

11th. That in controversies respecting property, and in suits between man and man, the parties have a right to trial by jury, which ought to be held sacred.

12th. That the people have a right to freedom of speech, and of writing and publishing their sentiments; therefore, the freedom of the press ought not to be restrained.

13th. That the people have a right to bear arms for the defence of themselves and the State; and, as standing armies in the time of peace are dangerous to liberty, they ought not to be kept up; and that the military should be kept under strict subordination to and governed by the civil power.

14th. That a frequent recurrence to fundamental principles, and a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, industry, and frugality, are absolutely necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty and keep a government free: The people ought therefore to pay particular attention to these points in the choice of officers and representatives, and have a right to exact a due and constant regard to them from their legislatures and magistrates in the making and executing such laws as are necessary for the good government of the State.

15th. That all men have a natural inherent right to emigrate from one State to another that will receive them, or to form a new State in vacant countries, or in such countries as they can purchase, whenever they think that thereby they may promote their own happiness.

16th. That the people have a right to assemble together, to consult for their common good, to instruct their representatives, and to apply to the Legislature for redress of grievances, by address, petition, or remonstrance.

CHAPTER II.

Plan or Frame of Government for the Commonwealth or State of PENNSYLVANIA.

SECTION 1st. The Commonwealth or State of Pennsylvania shall be governed hereafter by an Assembly of the Representatives of the freemen of the same, and a President and Council, in manner and form following:

SECT. 2d. The supreme legislative power shall be vested in a House of Representatives of the freemen of the Commonwealth or State of Pennsylvania.

SECT. 3d. The supreme executive power shall be vested in a President and Council.

SECT. 4th. Courts of Justice shall be established in the City of Philadelphia, and in every County of this State.

SECT. 5th. The freemen of this Commonwealth and their sons shall be trained and armed for its defence, under such regulations, restrictions, and exceptions, as the General Assembly shall by law direct; preserving always to the people the right of choosing their Colonels, and all commissioned officers under that rank, in such manner, and as often as by the said laws shall be directed.

SECT. 6th. Every freeman of the full age of twenty-one years, having resided in this State for the space of one whole year next before the day of election for Representatives, and paid publick taxes during that time, shall enjoy the right of an elector: Provided always, That sons of freeholders of the age of twenty-one years be entitled to vote, although they have not paid taxes.

SECT. 7th. The House of Representatives of the freemen of this Commonwealth shall consist of persons most noted for wisdom and virtue, to be chosen by the freemen of every City and County of this Commonwealth respectively: And no person shall be elected, unless he has resided in the City or County for which he shall be chosen, two years immediately before the said election; nor shall any member, while he continues such, hold any other office, except in the Militia.

SECT. 8th. No person shall be capable of being elected a member to serve in the House of Representatives of the freemen of this Commonwealth more than four years in seven.

SECT. 9th. The members of the House of Representatives shall be chosen annually by ballot, by the freemen of the Commonwealth, on the second Tuesday in October for ever, (except this present year,) and shall meet on the fourth Monday of the same month; and shall be styled The General Assembly of the Representatives of the freemen of PENNSYLVANIA, and shall have power to choose their Speaker, the Treasurer of the State, and their other officers—sit on their own adjournments, prepare bills and enact them into laws, judge of the elections and qualifications of their own members; they may expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause; they may administer oaths or affirmations on examinations of witnesses, redress grievances, impeach State criminals, grant charters of incorporation, constitute towns, boroughs, cities, and counties, and shall have all other powers necessary for the Legislature of a free State or Commonwealth; but they shall have no power to add to, alter, abolish, or infringe any part of this Constitution.

SECT. 10th. A quorum of the House of Representatives shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of members elected; and, having met and chosen their Speaker, shall each of them, before they proceed to business, take and subscribe, as well the oath or affirmation of fidelity and allegiance hereinafter directed, as the following oath or affirmation, viz:

“I , do swear (or affirm) that, as a member of this Assembly, I will not propose or assent to any bill, vote, or resolution, which shall appear to me injurious to the people, nor do or consent to any act or thing whatever that shall have a tendency to lessen or abridge their rights and privileges, as declared in the Constitution of this State; but will, in all things, conduct myself as a faithful, honest representative and guardian of the people, according to the best of my judgment and abilities.”

And each Member, before he takes his seat, shall make and subscribe the following Declaration, viz:

“I do believe in one God, the Creator and Governour of the universe, the rewarder of the good and punisher of the wicked; and I do acknowledge the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be given by Divine Inspiration.”

And no further or other religious test shall ever hereafter be required of any civil officer or magistrate in this State.

SECT. 11th. Delegates to represent this State in Congress shall be chosen by ballot, by the future General Assembly, at their first meeting, and annually forever afterwards, as long as such representation shall be necessary. Any Delegate may be superseded at any time by the General Assembly appointing another in his stead. No man shall sit in Congress longer than two years successively; nor be capable of reelection for three years afterwards. And no person who holds any office in the gift of the Congress shall hereafter be elected to represent this Commonwealth in Congress.

SECT. 12th. If any City or Cities, County or Counties, shall neglect or refuse to elect and send Representatives to the General Assembly, two-thirds of the members from the Cities or Counties that do elect and send Representatives, provided they be a majority of the Cities and Counties of the whole State when met, shall have all the powers of the General Assembly as fully and amply as if the whole were present.

SECT. 13th. The doors of the House in which the Representatives of the freemen of this State shall sit in General Assembly, shall be and remain open for the admission of all persons who behave decently, except only when the welfare of this State may require the doors to be shut.

SECT. 14th. The votes and proceedings of the General Assembly shall be printed weekly during their sitting, with the yeas and nays on any question, vote or resolution, where any two members require it, except when the vote is taken by ballot; and when the yeas and nays are so taken, every member shall have a right to insert the reasons of his vote upon the Minutes, if he desires it.

SECT. 15th. To the end that laws, before they are enacted, may be more maturely considered, and the inconvenience of hasty determinations as much as possible prevented, all bills of a publick nature shall be printed, for the consideration of the people, before they are read in General Assembly the last time for debate and amendment; and, except on occasions of sudden necessity, shall not be passed into laws until the next session of Assembly; and for the more perfect satisfaction of the publick, the reasons and motives for making such laws shall be fully and clearly expressed in the preambles.

SECT. 16th. The style of the laws of this Commonwealth shall be, “Be it enacted, and it is hereby enacted by the Representatives of the freemen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, and by the authority of the same.” And the General Assembly shall affix their seal to every bill as soon as it is enacted into a law; which seal shall be kept by the Assembly, and shall be called "The Seal of the Laws of Pennsylvania," and shall not be used for any other purpose.

SECT. 17th. The City of Philadelphia, and each County in this Commonwealth respectively, shall, on the first Tuesday of November, in this present year, and on the second Tuesday in October annually for the two next succeeding years, to wit, the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-seven and the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, choose six persons to represent them in General Assembly; but as representation, in proportion to the number of taxable inhabitants, is the only principle which can at all times secure liberty and make the voice of a majority of the people the law of the land, therefore the General Assembly shall cause complete lists of the taxable inhabitants in the City and each County in the Commonwealth respectively to be taken and returned to them on or before the last meeting of the Assembly elected in the year one thousand seven hundred and seventy-eight, who shall appoint a representation to each in proportion to the number of taxables in such returns; which representation shall continue for the next seven years afterwards; at the end of which a new return of the taxable inhabitants shall be made and a representation agreeable thereto appointed by the said Assembly, and so on septennially forever. The wages of the Representatives in General Assembly, and all other State charges, shall be paid out of the State treasury.

SECT. 18th. In order that the freemen of this Commonwealth may enjoy the benefit of election as equally, as may be until the representation shall commence as directed in the foregoing section, each County at its own choice may be divided into districts, hold elections therein, and elect their Representatives in the County and their other elective officers, as shall be hereafter regulated by the General Assembly of this State. And no inhabitant of this State shall have more than one annual vote at the general election for Representatives in Assembly.

SECT. 19th. For the present the supreme Executive Council of this State shall consist of twelve persons, chosen in the following manner: The freemen of the City of Philadelphia, and of the Counties of Philadelphia, Chester, and Bucks, respectively, shall choose by ballot one person for the City and one for each County aforesaid, to serve for three years and no longer, at the time and place for electing representatives in General Assembly. The freemen of the Counties of Lancaster, York, Cumberland, and Berks, shall in like manner elect one person for each County respectively, to serve as Counsellors for two years and no longer; and the Counties of Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland, and Westmoreland respectively, shall in like manner elect one person for each County, to serve as Counsellors for one year and no longer. And at the expiration of the time for which each Counsellor was chosen to serve, the freemen of the City of Philadelphia, and of the several Counties in this State respectively, shall elect one person to serve as Counsellor for three years and no longer; and so on every third year forever. By this mode of election and continual rotation, more men will be trained to publick business; there will in every subsequent year be found in the Council a number of persons acquainted with the proceedings of the foregoing years, whereby the business will be more consistently conducted, and moreover the danger of establishing an inconvenient aristocracy will be effectually prevented. All vacancies in the Council that may happen by death, resignation, or otherwise, shall be filled at the next general election for Representatives in General Assembly, unless a particular election for that purpose shall be sooner appointed by the President and Council. No Member of the General Assembly or Delegate in Congress shall be chosen a member of the Council. The President and Vice President shall be chosen annually by the joint ballot of the General Assembly and Council, of the members of the Council. Any person having served as a Counsellor for three successive years, shall be incapable of holding that office for four years afterwards. Every member of the Council shall be a Justice of the Peace for the whole Commonwealth by virtue of his office.

In case new additional Counties shall hereafter be erected in this State, such County or Counties shall elect a Counsellor, and such County or Counties shall be annexed to the next neighbouring Counties, and shall take rotation with such Counties.

The Council shall meet annually, at the same time and place with the General Assembly.

The Treasurer of the State, Trustees of the Loan Office, Naval Officers, Collectors of Customs or Excise, Judge of the Admiralty, Attorneys General, Sheriffs, and Prothonotaries, shall not be capable of a seat in the General Assembly, Executive Council, or Continental Congress.

SECT. 20th. The President, and in his absence the Vice President, with the Council, five of whom shall be a quorum, shall have power to appoint and commissionate Judges, Naval Officers, Judge of the Admiralty, Attorney General, and all other officers, civil and military, except such as are chosen by the General Assembly or the people, agreeable to this frame of Government and the laws that may be made hereafter; and shall supply every vacancy in any office occasioned by death, resignation, removal, or disqualification, until the office can be filled in the time and manner directed by law or this Constitution. They are to correspond with other States, and transact business with the officers of Government, civil and military, and to prepare such business as may appear to them necessary to lay before the General Assembly. They shall sit as judges to hear and determine on impeachments, taking to their assistance, for advice only, the Justices of the Supreme Court, and shall have power to grant pardons and remit fines in all cases whatsoever, except in cases of impeachment; and in cases of treason and murder shall have power to grant reprieves, but not to pardon, until the end of the next sessions of Assembly; but there shall be no remission or mitigation of punishment on impeachments, except by act of the Legislature. They are also to take care that the laws be faithfully executed; they are to expedite the execution of such measures as may be resolved upon by the General Assembly; and they may draw upon the Treasury for such sums as shall be appropriated by the House. They may also lay embargoes, or prohibit the exportation of any commodity, for any time not exceeding thirty days, in the recess of the House only. They may grant such licenses as shall be directed by law, and shall have power to call together the General Assembly when necessary before the day to which they shall stand adjourned. The President shall be Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the State, but shall not command in person, except advised thereto by the Council, and then only so long as they shall approve thereof. The President and Council shall have a Secretary, and keep fair books of their proceedings, wherein any Counsellor may enter his dissent with his reasons in support of it.

SECT. 21st. All commissions shall be in the name and by the authority of the freemen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, sealed with the State seal, signed by the President or Vice President, and attested by the Secretary; which seal shall be kept by the Council.

SECT. 22d. Every officer of State, whether judicial or executive, shall be liable to be impeached by the General Assembly, either when in office or after his resignation or removal for mal-administration: all impeachments shall be before the President or Vice President and Council, who shall hear and determine the same.

SECT. 23d. The Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature shall have fixed salaries, be commissioned for seven years only, though capable of reappointment at the end of that term, but removable for misbehaviour at any time by the General Assembly: they shall not be allowed to sit as members in the Continental Congress, Executive Council, or General Assembly, nor to hold any other office, civil or military, nor to take or receive fees or perquisites of any kind.

SECT. 24th. The Supreme Court and the several Courts of Common Pleas of this Commonwealth shall, besides the powers usually exercised by such Courts, have the powers of a Court of Chancery, so far as relates to the perpetuating testimony, obtaining evidence from places not within this State, and the care of the persons and estates of those who are non compotes mentis, and such other powers as may be found necessary by future General Assemblies, not inconsistent with this Constitution.

SECT. 25th. Trials shall be by Jury as heretofore: and it is recommended to the Legislature of this State to provide by law against every corruption or partiality in the choice, return, or appointment of Juries.

SECT. 26th. Courts of Sessions, Common Pleas, and Orphans' Courts shall be held quarterly in each City and County; and the Legislature shall have power to establish all such other Courts as they may judge for the good of the inhabitants of the State. All Courts shall be open, and justice shall be impartially administered, without corruption or unnecessary delay: all their officers shall be paid an adequate but moderate compensation for their services: and if any officer shall take greater or other fees than the laws allow him, either directly or indirectly, it shall ever after disqualify him from holding any office in this State.

SECT. 27th. All prosecutions shall commence in the name and by the authority of the freemen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and all indictments shall conclude with these words: "against the peace and dignity of the same." The style of all process hereafter in this State shall be, The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

SECT. 28th. The person of a debtor, where there is not a strong presumption of fraud, shall not be continued in prison after delivering up, bona fide, all his estate, real and personal, for the use of his creditors, in such manner as shall be hereafter regulated by law: all prisoners shall be bailable by sufficient sureties, unless for capital offences, when the proof is evident or presumption great.

SECT. 29th. Excessive bail shall not be exacted for bailable offences; and all fines shall be moderate.

SECT. 30th. Justices of the Peace shall be elected by the freeholders of each City and County respectively, that is to say, two or more persons may be chosen for each Ward, Township, or District, as the law shall hereafter direct; and their names shall be returned to the President in Council, who shall commission one or more of them for each Ward, Township, or District so returning, for seven years, removable for misconduct by the General Assembly. But if any City or County, Ward, Township, or District in this Commonwealth, shall hereafter incline to change the manner of appointing their Justices of the Peace as settled in this article, the General Assembly may make laws to regulate the same, agreeable to the desire of a majority of the freeholders of the City or County, Ward, Township, or District so applying. No Justice of the Peace shall sit in the General Assembly unless he first resign his commission; nor shall he be allowed to take any fees; nor any salary or allowance except such as the future Legislature may grant.

SECT. 31st. Sheriffs and Coroners shall be elected annually in each City and County by the freemen; that is to say, two persons for each office, one of whom for each is to be commissioned by the President in Council. No person shall continue in the office of Sheriff more than three successive years, or be capable of being again elected during four years afterwards. The election shall be held at the same time and place appointed for the election of Representatives; and the Commissioners and Assessors, and other officers chosen by the people, shall also be then and there elected, as has been usual heretofore, until altered or otherwise regulated by the future Legislature of this State.

SECT. 32d. All elections, whether by the people or in General Assembly, shall be by ballot, free and voluntary; and any elector who shall receive any gift or reward for his vote, in meat, drink, moneys, or otherwise, shall forfeit his right to elect for that time; and suffer such other penalty as future laws shall direct. And any person who shall directly or indirectly give, promise, or bestow any such rewards to be elected, shall be thereby rendered incapable to serve for the ensuing year.

SECT. 33d. All fees, license money, fines and forfeitures heretofore granted, or paid to the Governour or his Deputies, for the support of Government, shall hereafter be paid into the publick treasury, unless altered or abolished by the future Legislature.

SECT. 34th. A Register's Office for the probate of wills and granting letters of administration, and an office for the recording of deeds, shall be kept in each City and County: the officers to be appointed by the General Assembly, removable at their pleasure, and to be commissioned by the President in Council.

SECT. 35th. The printing presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the Legislature, or any part of Government.

SECT. 36th. As every freeman, to preserve his independence, (if without a sufficient estate,) ought to have some profession, calling, trade, or farm, whereby he may honestly subsist, there can be no necessity for nor use in establishing offices of profit, the usual effects of which are dependence and servility, unbecoming freemen, in the possessors and expectants; faction, contention, corruption, and disorder, among the people. But if any man is called into publick service to the prejudice of his private affairs, he has a right to a reasonable compensation; and whenever an office, through increase of fees, or otherwise, becomes so profitable as to occasion many to apply for it, the profits ought to be lessened by the Legislature.

SECT. 37th. The future Legislature of this State shall regulate entails, in such a manner as to prevent perpetuities.

SECT. 38th. The penal laws as heretofore used, shall be reformed by the future Legislature of this State, as soon as may be, and punishments made in some cases less sanguinary and in general more proportionate to the crimes.

SECT. 39th. To deter more effectually from the commission of crimes, by continued visible punishment of long duration, and to make sanguinary punishments less necessary, houses ought to be provided for punishing by hard labour those who shall be convicted of crimes not capital; wherein the criminals shall be employed for the benefit of the publick, or for reparation of injuries done to private persons; and all persons at proper times shall be admitted to see the prisoners at their labour.

SECT. 40th. Every officer, whether judicial, executive or military, in authority under this Commonwealth, shall take the following oath or affirmation of allegiance, and general oath of office, before he enter on the execution of his office:

The Oath or Affirmation of Allegiance.

"I, do swear (or affirm) that I will be true and faithful to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; and that I will not, directly or indirectly, do any act or thing prejudicial or injurious to the Constitution or Government thereof, as established by the Convention."

The Oath or Affirmation of office.

"I, do swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of — for the — of —, and I will do equal right and justice to all men, to the best of my judgment and abilities, according to law."

SECT. 41st. No publick tax, custom, or contribution, shall be imposed upon or paid by the people of this State, except by a law for that purpose; and before any law be made for raising it, the purpose for which any tax is to be raised ought to appear clearly to the Legislature to be of more service to the community than the money would be, if not collected, which, being well observed, taxes can never be burthens.

SECT. 42d. Every foreigner of good character, who comes to settle in this State, having first taken an oath or affirmation of allegiance to the same, may purchase, or by other just means acquire, hold, and transfer land or other real estate; and after one year's residence, shall be deemed a free denizen thereof, and entitled to all the rights of a natural born subject of this State, except that he shall not be capable of being elected a Representative until after two years' residence.

SECT. 43d. The inhabitants of this State shall have liberty to fowl and hunt in seasonable times on the lands they hold, and on all other lands therein not enclosed; and in like manner to fish in all boatable waters and others not private property.

SECT. 44th. A school or schools shall be established in each County by the Legislature, for the convenient instruction of youth, with such salaries to the masters paid by the publick as may enable them to instruct youth at low prices: And all useful learning shall be duly encouraged and promoted in one or more Universities.

SECT. 45th. Laws for the encouragement of virtue, and prevention of vice and immorality, shall be made and constantly kept in force, and provision shall be made for their due execution: And all religious societies or bodies of men heretofore united or incorporated for the advancement of religion and learning, or for other pious and charitable purposes, shall be encouraged and protected in the enjoyment of the privileges, immunities, and estates, which they were accustomed to enjoy, or could of right have enjoyed under the laws and former Constitution of this State.

SECT. 46th. The Declaration of Rights is hereby declared to be a part of the Constitution of this Commonwealth, and ought never to be violated on any pretence whatever.

SECT. 47th. In order that the freedom of this Commonwealth may be preserved inviolate for ever, there shall be chosen by ballot by the freemen in each City and County respectively, on the second Tuesday in October, in the year one thousand seven hundred and eighty-three, and on the second Tuesday in October in every seventh year thereafter, two persons in each City and County of this State, to be called the Council of Censors; who shall meet together on the second Monday of November next ensuing their election; the majority of whom shall be a quorum in every case, except as to calling a Convention, in which two-thirds of the whole number elected shall agree; and whose duty it shall be to inquire whether the Constitution has been preserved inviolate in every part; and whether the legislative and executive branches of Government have performed their duty as guardians of the people, or assumed to themselves, or exercised other or greater powers than they are entitled to by the Constitution; they are also to inquire whether the publick taxes have been justly laid and collected in all parts of this Commonwealth, in what manner the publick moneys have been disposed of, and whether the laws have been duly executed: For these purposes they shall have power to send for persons, papers, and records; they shall have authority to pass publick censures, to order impeachments, and to recommend to the Legislature the repealing such laws as appear to them to have been enacted contrary to the principles of the Constitution: These powers they shall continue to have for and during the space of one year from the day of their election, and no longer: The said Council of Censors shall also have power to call a Convention, to meet within two years after their sitting, if there appear to them an absolute necessity of amending any article of the Constitution which may be defective, explaining such as may be thought not clearly expressed, and of adding such as are necessary for the preservation of the rights and happiness of the people: But the articles to be amended, and the amendments proposed, and such articles as are proposed to be added or abolished, shall be promulgated at least six months before the day appointed for the election of such Convention, for the previous consideration of the people, that they may have an opportunity of instructing their Delegates on the subject.

On motion, Ordered, That the President and every Member of this Convention present do sign the same;

Which being accordingly done, it was thereupon

Ordered, That the Constitution of this Commonwealth, as now agreed to and signed by the Members of this Convention, be committed to the charge of the Council of Safety, with directions to deliver the same to the General Assembly of this State, at their first meeting, immediately after they shall have chosen their Speaker.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Cannon, and Mr. Matlack, be a Committee to settle the incidental expenses of this Convention.

On motion, Resolved, That the President of this Convention be allowed the same wages as the Speaker of the late House of Assembly, and that the Vice President draw an order on the State Treasurer for the amount thereof.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Mr. Jacobs, and Mr. Clymer, be a Committee to prepare the Seals for the future Legislature and Executive Council of this State.

Resolved, That immediate publick notice be given by the Secretary, that the freemen of this State are empowered, by the frame of Government this day passed, to choose at their next election for Representatives, in the City of Philadelphia and each County, one person as a Counsellor of State.

Resolved, That the Council of Safety be directed to prepare materials necessary for printing Paper Currency for this State, to be ready at the time of the first meeting of the General Assembly.

Resolved, That Mr. Cannon, Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel Matlack, and Colonel Bull, be a Committee to revise the Minutes of this Convention, and print two hundred and fifty copies of the same, together with the Constitution, Ordinances, &c., (one hundred of which to be bound,) for the use of the Members of this House.

On motion, Resolved, That the President of this Convention fill up and sign a commission for General Roberdeau, as first Brigadier-General of this State; and that he also fill up and sign a commission for General Ewing, as second Brigadier-General of this State.

On motion, Resolved, That Mr. Cannon, Mr. Rittenhouse, and Colonel Matlack, be a Committee to draw up an address to the publick, setting forth the reasons which induced this Convention to make the several Ordinances and Resolves which they have passed in the course of the sitting of this Convention.

The Report of the Committee appointed to inquire into the complaints of the mutinous soldiers was again read, and Ordered to be referred to the Council of Safety.

Major Coates and Major Loller, two of the gentlemen elected yesterday to visit the Troops raised in this State, at New-York Island and Ticonderoga, informed the Convention that the state of their domestick affairs was such that they could not possibly serve on that duty: Whereupon the House proceeded to the election of two other gentlemen in their stead, when Colonel Potter and Colonel Clark were chosen by ballot for that service.

The Petition of Peter Withington for a Captaincy, was again read, and referred to the Council of Safety.

The draft of a Commission and Instructions to the gentlemen chosen to visit the Troops of this State was read and approved of, and is as follows:

“PENNSYLVANIA, ss.

“The Honourable the Convention of the Commonwealth of PENNSYLVANIA, to E. T., Esquire.

“SIR: You are hereby commissioned and instructed (in conjunction with A B and C D) immediately to repair to the army near New-York and at Ticonderoga, and make a particular inquiry into the condition and state of the troops raised in or by this State; whether they are properly supplied with necessaries, and whether the quartermasters, commissaries, paymasters, and other officers for the supplying of clothing, provisions, &c., have done their duty, and therein particularly to attend to the information which you shall receive from intelligent privates as well as officers. You are to engage all officers and privates, who are willing to serve during the war, on the terms offered by the honourable Congress. You are to inquire into the merits of such officers, that proper promotions may take place when necessary. You are to inquire into the condition and state of the arms and accoutrements of the troops, and to make true returns of all such and other matters as you may find necessary, with all convenient dispatch, to the Council of Safety or future House of Assembly. This commission and instruction to continue until altered or annulled by this Convention, the Council of Safety, or the future House of Assembly.

The Report made on the 13th instant, by the Committee on Military Affairs, was again read, and ordered to be referred to the Council of Safety, except as to that part which relates to the Brigadier-Generals.

Colonel Potter informed the House that he had been desired, by the Delegates in Congress for this State, to acquaint the House that they were desired to appoint and nominate the officers for the Battalion to be raised in the Counties of Northampton and Northumberland. Whereupon the House proceeded to the election by ballot of Field-Officers for the said Battalion, when William Cook, Esquire, was chosen to be recommended as Colonel; Neigle Gray, Esquire, as Lieutenant-Colonel; and James Crawford, Esq., as Major.

The appointment of the other officers is referred to the Council of Safety.

On motion, Resolved, That those Associators who have neglected or refused to march into Jersey and serve agreeable to the resolution of the honourable Congress and this Convention, or who have returned without having served six weeks, or having a regular discharge, be considered as Non-Associators, and fined and assessed as such by the Commissioners and Assessors appointed by an Ordinance of this Convention respecting Non-Associators.

The Memorial from Northumberland was read again, and Ordered to be referred to the Council of Safety.

The House resumed the consideration of Colonel Slagle's

Letter, desiring to be excused from his office of Commissioner for the Flying-Camp; and it was Resolved, That his request be granted, and that Major Coates be appointed in his stead.

On motion, Ordered, That the President sign orders on the State Treasurer for the wages and mileage of each member of this Convention.

On motion, Ordered, That the Secretary of this Convention have the same wages as have been usually paid to the Clerk of the Assembly. But, as the Secretary has not kept any account of particulars, the President is to ascertain the same, according to the rate and in proportion to the account settled for Charles Moore, Esq., in September last, and to draw an order on the State Treasurer for that sum.

Resolved, unanimously, That the thanks of this Convention be given to the President for the honour he has done it by filling the chair during the debates on the most important parts of the Bill of Rights and frame of Government, and for his able and disinterested advice thereon.

Then the Convention rose.

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Council of Safety, September 2, 1776.

Present: David Rittenhouse, Vice President, John Hubley, Joseph Blewer, Frederick Kuhl, Henry Keppeler, Samuel Morris, Sen., Chairman, Owen Biddle, James Cannon.

Resolved, That the Members of this Board, or as many as conveniently can, go down to Fort Island, to-morrow morning, to accompany Commodore Seymour to the Fleet; that Instructions be drawn up to deliver the Commodore with his Commission.

The following are the Instructions delivered to the Commodore, viz:

"In Council of Safety, September 26, 1776.

"The Council having thought proper to appoint you Commodore and Commander-in-Chief of all the Naval Armaments of this State in the River Delaware, which you are to notify to the Officers of the Fleet, by publishing to them your Commission, it becomes necessary to give you some Instructions.

"Instructions to regulate your conduct in some points of this important trust:

"And first, you are by all possible means to establish such a proper sense of subordination in the Fleet, that all the orders you think necessary to issue be punctually and implicitly obeyed; a loose and relaxed discipline utterly enfeebling every military establishment, however respectable it may otherwise be in the circumstance of number and force.

"Secondly. As it is the duty and inclination of this Council to maintain the Fleet in a constant preparation to receive the enemy, you must immediately take an exact survey of its present condition, and whatever may be wanting in its equipments to make report to Captain William Richards, who is appointed and directed to supply all its deficiencies.

"Thirdly. An attack from the enemy being highly probable, though the time uncertain, it is necessary that every part of the Fleet should have its proper station assigned, in such way as to afford mutual support, and that the whole may act to the best effect.

"Fourthly. You must particularly attend not only to the situation of the Fleet, but take great care that the officers and men are not absent from their respective vessels any length of time, and at any great distance; but as it is probable that some of the officers of the boats may be desirous of coming up to this City, you may give leave of absence to them in such number and for so long a time as the service may admit, so that not more than one-third be absent at any one time, or longer than forty-eight hours from their respective vessels.

"Lastly. Should any accident or circumstance happen in the Fleet, that has the least tendency to affect the service, you are to give the earliest information to the Council of Safety, that they, if they have the means of remedy, may apply such as the nature of the case may require.

"These being the principal matters that have occurred to the Council, they earnestly recommend to you, however, that you endeavour to promote the utmost harmony between you and the officers of the Fleet, and between one another, on which depends so much the success of every undertaking where men are to act in concert and mutual assistance required."

Resolved, That the Officers of the Fleet belonging to this State be allowed the same pay that the Officers in the Continental service have, from the 1st of October next.

In Council of Safety, September 27, 1776.

Present: Thomas Wharton, Jun., President, David Rittenhouse, Samuel Morris, Sen., John Bayard, Fred. Kuhl, Henry Keppeler, Jun., John Bull, John Moore, Timothy Matlack, Samuel Cad. Morris, Joseph Blewer, Francis Gurney.

A Commission granted for William Connell, commander of Schooner General Thompson, six carriage-guns, twelve men, forty tons, owned by Edmund Beach & Co.

Resolved, That the three Pennsylvania Battalions, now in the Continental service, at New-York, be arranged as follows: two of them to be on the new Continental establishment, and to serve during the war; the other to be retained in the service of this State, until the first of January, 1778, unless sooner discharged, and to consist of ten Companies of one hundred men each, officers included; the privates of the three Battalions to continue in the service of this State; the officers according to seniority to have the choice of entering into either; the two Battalions to be recruited to their full complement of men, as speedily as possible; nothing in this resolve to affect the rank of the officers who are prisoners with General Howe.

SIR: The Council of Safety having entered into the enclosed arrangement of the three Battalions, belonging to this State, are desirous of having a return of the officers who choose to enter into the Continental service on the new establishment, that the Council may give them such rank as they conceive them entitled to. They mean to order and retain at home the troops which are to continue in the service of the State, as soon as the condition of the Continental Army will admit of it. As they are hereafter, by the said arrangement, to keep twelve complete Battalions in the Continental service, Colonel Brodhead is therefore requested to consult the officers as speedily as possible on the subject, and make return to the Council of such as are desirous to enter into the Continental service, and who are willing to continue in the service of the State; that they may proceed in the affair, as it is of immediate necessity and very great importance.

To Colonel BRODHEAD.

A letter was wrote to General McKinley, at Wilmington, New-Castle County, requesting him to purchase all the coarse cloths, blankets, and stockings, he can procure, for the use of the troops of this State, and his drafts shall be answered.

Resolved, That a detachment be made from the Artillery Companies of this State of fifty men, to be sent to Fort Montgomery, under the command of Captain Strohboagh, subject to the direction of the Commander-in-Chief; and that two of the commissioned officers in his Company, and Lieutenant Proctor, of Captain Forrest's Company, proceed with the said detachment, that they may have an opportunity of seeing service; to be relieved at such a time as the Board may think proper, and that they shall march as soon as they are furnished with necessary camp equipage. Major Proctor is to see this resolve carried into execution.

Sixth Company: George Obermiar, Captain; James McCauley, First Lieutenant; Peter Wirach, Second Lieutenant; Michael Schnider, Ensign.

The Board then adjourned to five o'clock afternoon, when the following Members met:

Thomas Wharton, Jun., President, John Bull, Frederick Kuhl, Samuel Morris, Sen., David Rittenhouse, Owen Biddle, Samuel C. Morris, John Bayard.

Whereas the honourable Congress have resolved that the Accounts of the Militia of this State shall be paid as soon as certificates can be produced to the Committee appointed to settle the same, of their having returned all the publick stores in their possession; and as many poor people who cheerfully turned out in the service of their country may be deprived of their pay for a considerable space of time, to the prejudice of their families and affairs, in consequence of the officers of the several Companies not being acquainted with the before-mentioned resolutions in time: Therefore Resolved, 1st, That the State of Pennsylvania will be accountable to the Congress for all the Continental stores not delivered to the Deputy Quartermaster-General, that the payment of accounts of the Associators may meet with as little delay as possible.

2d. That the Officers of the several Battalions do forthwith apply to the Committee appointed by Congress for payment of their accounts, and when received, that they immediately pay off their men.

3d. That the Commanding Officer of every Battalion of Associators which has been in the service, do return to Robert Towers, Esq., Commissary, as speedily as possible, all such Continental or State stores, arms excepted, as were delivered to his Battalion, in order that such as belong to Congress may be restored.

As it is not improbable that General Howe may detach part of his Army by water from New-York, to invade this State, and as we should be unable to make any defence against them by land in our present unarmed condition; and as not only the safety of this State but the preservation and security of a great part of the military stores belonging to Congress is thereby endangered:

Resolved, That Mr. Rittenhouse, Colonel Bayard, and Mr. Biddle, be appointed to confer with a Committee of Congress on the expediency of having a body of Troops stationed near the City of Philadelphia, for the defence of this State, and that a General Officer of some experience be appointed to have the command of said force.

In Council of Safety, October 9, 1776.

An Order was drawn on Mr. Nesbitt, in favour of Jacob Rittenhouse, for £24 19s. 2d., for Cartridge Paper delivered to Mr. Towers.

The Council being informed that several people have purchased a cargo of Salt from the importer at 12s. per bushel, and that they have since advanced the price of that necessary article on the consumer to 22s. 6d.:

Resolved, That this Council highly disapprove the conduct of those mercenary men, who, regardless of the publick good and the interests of their country, in this unreasonable and avaricious manner, monopolize those articles, so necessary to the community, and lay on such enormous profits as puts it out of the power of the industrious poor to procure a necessary supply for their families; and therefore this Board do further

Resolve, That the aforesaid purchase is, and shall be, void, and the cargo of Salt shall be purchased from the captain at the price aforesaid, and sold out to the inhabitants in such quantities as may be necessary for their families, at the prime cost, adding thereto so much only as will defray the necessary expense of unloading and measuring it; and that in future no person be admitted to make purchase of any goods or merchandise coming from sea to this port until the vessels arrive and regularly enter at the custom-house, and until report of the cargo on said vessels to made to this Board.

Whereas it has been represented to this Council that some persons in this State, preferring their own private emolument to the duties of humanity and the publick good, have monopolized and engrossed whole cargoes or large quantities of Salt; and as it is the practice in every well-regulated State, not only to discourage, but even to punish all monopolizers of the necessities of life; and as such evil practices at this time are pernicious and very unjustifiable, as, for the want of an established Government, provision cannot be made against them; and being desirous to give every reasonable encouragement to the importers of such article, this Council do

Resolve, That they will allow the generous price of 15s. per bushel for every bushel of Salt that may be imported into this State, and delivered to them, until the 15th day of November next; the same to be sold out to the publick in small parcels at the first cost, by such person or persons as they may hereafter appoint, in order that the necessities of the good people may be supplied at as reasonable a rate as possible, and the rapacious practices of avaricious men defeated; it is therefore earnestly recommended to said importers not to demand a higher price than is here offered; and to make report to this Council of the quantities they have or may import, that they may be treated with for the purchase of the same.

Resolved, That Colonel Brodhead be allowed $30 per month from the time of Colonel Miles's captivity, while he continues commander of the Pennsylvania Troops, for the support of his table, agreeable to the resolve of Assembly; and that all the officers of the said Troops be allowed twenty-five per cent. on their pay, as established by the late Assembly, from the time of their march into New-Jersey until the new Continental allowance has taken place, in consideration of the extraordinary expense attending their services in the neighbouring States.

Second Lieutenants: John Boyd, Samuel Quin, Edward McCabe, John Hays, William Burd, John Carithers.

Ensigns: Benjamin Lodge, Jun., John Stone, William Boyd, Thomas Hamilton, Blackall William Ball, Stewart Herbert, Andrew Engle, Henry Stricker.

Adjutant: Thomas Hanson.

Resolved, That the following representation be made to the honourable Board of War:

The Council of Safety for the State of Pennsylvania propose to the honourable the Board of War that the following force be continued in the State, or at Trenton or Billingsport, in New-Jersey, as a necessary defence for this city, not only against the British Troops, but the growing party of disaffected persons which unhappily exists at this time; also for the protection of the vast quantity of stores belonging to Congress that are now in the publick Magazine, and at the same time to carry on such works of defence as have been or may be thought necessary, viz: The two Virginia Battalions, the German Battalion, and four Companies of Marines.

And it is proposed to raise four Battalions of Militia, to be taken into pay for the immediate defence of this State, to be furnished by the following Counties, viz: One from York County, of five hundred men; one from Cumberland County, of five hundred men; one from Lancaster County, of five hundred men; one from Berks County, of five hundred men.

It is apprehended that the above force, with the assistance of our Militia, might obstruct the progress of any body of troops that General Howe might detach from his army, until reinforcements could arrive from the Flying-Camp, or General Washington's Army; and it is presumed that a less force than the above-mentioned will by no means be adequate to the support of the present Government in this State against the opposite party, should General Washington's Army be defeated; and they would beg leave earnestly to urge the necessity of retaining for that purpose the Continental Troops now in this State.

As there are no persons of military experience amongst us, it is proposed that General Stephens be appointed to the command of this force.

In Council of Safety, October 17, 1776.

Present: John Bayard, Chairman, Owen Biddle, Samuel Morris, Sen., Timothy Matlack, George Gray, Francis Gurney, Joseph Blewer, Samuel C. Morris, Frederick Kuhl, William Lyons.

4th. That the men lately commanded by Captain Richard Brown be commanded by Captain James Francis More.

5th. That eight Companies of the Battalion of this State be armed with muskets, and that their rifles be exchanged as soon as convenient.

6th. That two Companies be armed with rifles, and that the Colonel or Commanding Officer is to select the best men for that purpose out of the whole corps; the Captains to have the choice of said Companies according to seniority.

7th. That after the two Rifle Companies are formed, the men lately belonging to the Companies under Captains Andrew Long, William Peebles, Casper Weitzel, Joseph Irvine, Peter Grub, Jun., Peter Z. Lloyd, Thomas Herbert, John Nice, Joseph Howell, Jun., and Joseph McClelland, be united to Captains Farmer's, Murray's, Anderson's, Marshall's, Albright's, Dehuff's, Crist's, McGowen's, Garret's, and Moore's Companies, equal in number of effective men, and that the Commanding Officer of the Battalion allow the said men the liberty of choosing what Companies they will enter into, so far as he can consistent with the foregoing arrangement.

8th. That the Subaltern Officers be allowed to arrange themselves under such Captains as they, by mutual agreement, may think proper; but upon the Commanding Officer's representing to them any impropriety in the said arrangement, they are to rectify it.

9th. That all Non-Commissioned Officers be appointed by the Commanding Officer of the Battalion; which appointments are to be made known in Regimental Orders, which shall be sufficient authority for their acting in said stations.

Mr. Nesbitt was directed to pay Jacob Tusten £18 4s., for thirteen cords of Wood, delivered at Fort-Island.

Resolved, That, in forming a new Battalion, this Board will appoint such persons for Officers as, in their opinion, are suitable, without being confined to those in service. That all Captains and Subalterns in the Army shall rise regimentally. That all Field Officers shall be promoted according to the line. That the Board will make the foregoing a rule for their conduct, except in such instances where the good of the publick may require a deviation, of which the Board will at all times reserve the right of judging.

Resolved, That Lieutenant-Colonel James Irvine be promoted to the rank of Colonel, and appointed to the Ninth Battalion of Continental Troops of this State:

That Lieutenant-Colonel Lambert Cadwalader be promoted to the rank of Colonel, and appointed to the Fourth Battalion (late Shee's) of ditto:

The Nurse at Hospital, at Province-Island, Account for attending sick belonging to the Fleet, £153 16s. 4d.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, August 31, 1776.

SIR: Adjutant General Reed's letter of the 24th instt. came to hand Tuesday morning, the 27th; yours of the same date, yesterday. On receiving the former, I advised with my Council. We concluded to send Benjamin Huntington, Esq., one of my Council, with direction to take with him Major Ely, at New-London, an officer there well acquainted with the people on Long-Island, to proceed there, and consult and agree with some of the sure friends of our cause, with secrecy as far as the circumstances would admit, for a number of their men, assured friends, and well acquainted on the Island, to join with a body from this State, if possible, to accomplish your wishes to cause a diversion to the enemy, to harass them on their rear, and to prevent their excursions in pursuit of the provision the Island affords. I hear they sailed for the Island yesterday. His return is expected the beginning of next week. If he succeeds according to our hopes, shall proceed with vigour to put the same in execution.

No exertions of this State, I trust, will be wanting at this critical conjuncture to harass and to keep the enemy at bay—to gain time and every advantage the case may admit.

I shall give the earliest intelligence of our proceedings, that you may coöperate with our designs. The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. It is nothing with God to help, whether with many, or with those that have no power. He hath so ordered things in the administration of the affairs of the world as to encourage the use of means; and yet so as to keep men in continual dependence upon him for the efficacy and success of them: to make Kings and all men to know the reins of the world are not in their hands, but that there is One above who sways and governs all things here below.

I am just closing; a post comes in, and brings the letters, copies of which are enclosed. Now expect Mr. Huntington's speedy return. Have sent for my Council. My own thoughts and such of my Council as come to me, are to send forward four or five of the companies now stationed at New-

London, with four field-pieces, (I hope six pieces to join those men which may be ready for the service on Long-Island;) four or five companies to follow from New-London, as soon as they can be marched down; and also to order on other companies to take the places of such as are removed from thence.

I am inclined to think we shall fall upon some measure similar to what is mentioned. No delay can be admitted at this critical moment. Please to give me the earliest intelligence how we may best serve agreeable to your desires. Shall send in the morning this intelligence to Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, and ask his assistance in the best way he shall think the circumstances of that State will admit.

September 1st.—Enclosed is a copy of another letter, dated yesterday, from Southhold, that you may observe the contents. I hope to pursue our measures so as to stop the enemy getting into Suffolk County.

I am, with esteem and regard, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
JONTH. TRUMBULL.
His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL REED TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, New-York, August 24, 1776.

SIR: There can be no doubt but that before this reaches you, you will have heard that the enemy have landed a considerable body of men on Long-Island, within seven miles of our lines. We cannot yet determine whether the main body of the army is landed with a view to make a general attack on that side, or whether it is a large detachment sent to draw off our attention from this place, while they proceed up with their fleet and principal force. The success has been various in the little skirmishes we have had, but our troops have generally drove them back. Before his Excellency rode out this morning, he directed me to acquaint you with our situation, and to submit to your consideration, whether it would be possible to transport a body of men, say one thousand, to Long-Island, below the enemy, with a view to divide their force and make a diversion. His Excellency is not insensible that great part of the Western Militia are now in this Camp, but he supposes it might be possible that the Eastern Militia might be employed in such a service. I should illy express the General's intentions, if what I have said should be construed into an order, or even a request, unless in your judgment, and those with whom you think proper to consult, it should stand fully approved: nor will our operations be governed in the least by a dependence on such a measure. But at the same time, the great advantages arising from it are so extremely obvious that I need not enlarge upon them.

I have the honour to present you with the General's respects, and to assure you that I am your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

JOSEPH REED, Adjutant General.

CHARLES W. F. DUMAS TO COMMITTEE OF SECRET CORRESPONDENCE.*

1er 7bre, 1776.

MONSIEUR: Après avoir envoyé à votre correspondant à St. Eustache, dont vous m'avez donné l'adresse dans votre lettre du 12^e Xbr, 1775, ma troisième lettre cotée C, dont vous trouverez ci-joint un ample extrait, qu'il vous plaira de relire, du moins la fin, où j'ai ajouté quelque chose. Je commence ma quatrième dépêche D.

En supposant qu'il ne vous soit parvenu qu'une seule de mes trois précédentes dépêches, vous ne devez pas être embarrassé de lire ce qui sera chiffré ici, et à l'avenir.

680 606 613 652 672 677 678 663 673 414, dont M. A. L., votre ami, m'a parlé dans deux de ses lettres comme chargé d'affaires du Congrès, qui viendrait me voir, et à qui il avait donné mon adresse, n'a pas encore paru devant moi.

Je n'ai pas reçu non plus la lettre que vous m'avez écrite après celle du 12^e Decembre, 1775, et avant celle du 2^e Mars, 1776, comme vous me l'apprenez dans cette dernière.

La non-apparition de cet homme et de cette lettre m'inquiète et m'afflige, non seulement parce que tout ce qui me vient de vous, Monsieur, et de vos amis, m'est cher et précieux plus que je ne saurois le dire, mais aussi et surtout, parce que je crains que le service du Congrès Général n'en souffre.

[* TRANSLATION.]

1st September, 1776.

SIR: After having sent to your correspondent at St. Eustatia, whose address you gave me in your letter of the 12th December, 1775, my third letter, marked C, of which you will find enclosed an ample extract, which you will please read again, at least the latter part, where I have added something. I commence my fourth despatch, D.

Even supposing that only one of my three preceding despatches may have reached you, you ought not to be embarrassed in reading what will be in cypher here, and in future.

This Hortalez, of whom Mr. A. L., your friend, has spoken to me in two of his letters as entrusted with the business of Congress, who was to come to see me, and to whom he had given my address, has not yet presented himself to me.

I have not either received the letter which you wrote me after the one of the 12th December, 1775, and before the one of the 2d March, 1776, as you inform me in this latter.

The non-appearance of this man and of this letter disturbs and afflicts me, not only because everything which comes to me from you, sir, and from your friends, is more dear and precious to me than I can express, but also and especially because I fear that the service of the General Congress may suffer in consequence of it.

The respectable bearer of the one of the 2d March, arrived at Paris on the 7th July, whence he sent it to me with one of his own dated 26th July. I have another from him of the 18th August, in which he tells me that he has a certain prospect of succeeding in his business. He also therein makes me a promise which renders me happy in advance, that he will lodge at my house. My wife has already prepared his apartment, and we shall verify the fable of Philemon and Baucis: for a virtuous man is for me a Jupiter; and I shall think myself more honoured with such a guest, than with a dozen of those princes who have sold their subjects to your enemies. If nothing occurs to alter his intentions, I shall have this pleasure in the month of October next.

30th September.—I have stated to you, sir, in my preceding [despatch,] that the letters of Mr. A. L. have greatly contributed to render my visits, my letters, and my memoirs, agreeable in a certain house. Here is one which I have lately received from him, which will prove it to you.

26th August, 1776.—After having told me of a service which he consented to render me in his country, where I have some business to arrange, which we agreed to make use of as a pretext to mask our interviews, he continues as follows: "Madame — has taken the trouble to send me your letters, and I beg you to send me by her the continuation of so many interesting matters, together with the account of the person you were waiting for [the bearer of your letter from Philadelphia of the 2d March.] I beg you to send me all that has reached you since the last letter you had the goodness to write me. I am in the habit of receiving packets from every hand; it is the duty of my post; hence I shall receive with gratitude, but of a distinguished character, what you

Le respectable porteur de celle du 2^e Mars est arrivé à Paris le 7^e Juillet, d'où il me l'a envoyée avec une des siennes datée du 26^e Juillet. J'en ai une autre de lui du 18^e Août, où il me marque that he has a certain prospect of succeeding in his business. Il m'y fait aussi une promesse qui me rend heureux d'avance, c'est de vouloir bien loger chez moi. Ma femme a déjà préparé son appartement; et nous vérifierons la fable de Philemon & Baucis: car un homme vertueux est pour moi un Jupiter; & je me trouverai plus honoré d'un tel hôte, que d'une douzaine de ces princes qui ont vendu leurs sujets à vos ennemis. S'il n'arrive rien qui altère ses desseins, j'aurai ce bonheur au mois d'Octobre prochain.

Du 30^e 7br. Je vous ai dit, Monsieur, dans ma précédente, que les lettres de M. A. L. ont beaucoup contribué à rendre mes visites, mes lettres et mes mémoires, agréables dans une certaine maison. En voici une que j'en ai reçue depuis peu, qui vous le prouvera.

Du 26^e Août, 1776. Après m'avoir parlé d'un service qu'il veut bien me rendre en son pays, où j'ai quelques affaires à démêler, dont nous sommes convenus de nous servir comme de prétexte pour masquer nos entrevues, voici comme il poursuit: "Madame * * * a pris la peine de me remettre vos lettres, et je vous prie de m'envoyer par elle la suite de tant de choses intéressantes, y compris le récit de la personne que vous attendiez [du porteur de votre lettre de Philadelphie du 2^e Mars.] Je vous prie de me mander tout ce qui vous est parvenu depuis la dernière lettre que vous avez eu la bonté de m'écrire. Je suis dans l'usage de recevoir des paquets de toutes les mains; c'est le devoir de mon poste. Ainsi je recevrai avec reconnaissance, mais d'une manière distinguée, ce que vous aurez la bonté de me faire passer, comme ce qu'il y aura sûrement de mieux en faits, en portraits, en situations. Puis toutes les plumes n'ont pas le talent de la vôtre.

"Dans tout ce que je demande à votre amitié, Monsieur, vous aurez bien du nouveau souvent à exposer."

L'éloge donné à ma plume, doit retourner à M. A. L., car je n'ai fait que le traduire.

Du 1^{er} 7br. "Je vous prie de continuer à me donner de vos nouvelles. Je vous remercie bien sincèrement du dernier envoi. [Je lui découvris ce qui concernait M. * * * porteur de votre lettre du 2^e Mars, après en avoir eu la permission de ce dernier.] Rien n'est plus intéressant, et n'éclaire peut-être davantage les matières."

shall have the kindness to send to me, as it will surely be of the best in facts, in portraits, in circumstances. For all pens have not the talent of yours.

"In all that I ask of your friendship, sir, you will often have a great deal new to communicate."

The praise given to my pen, should revert to Mr. A. L., for I have done nothing but translate it.

1st September.—"I beg you to continue to give me your news. I thank you very sincerely for the last sent. [I informed him about Mr. —, the bearer of your letter of the 2d March, after having had the permission of the latter.] Nothing is more interesting, nor perhaps elucidates affairs more fully."

16th September.—"You had flattered me with having the honour to see you in the course of the week which has just closed. It is that expectation which has prevented my answering you, intending to tell you the remainder verbally, as I shall do the first visit you shall make to the Hague."

"All that you have recommended to me has been done and put in train according to your desires. Mine shall always be to merit your confidence and to serve you."

I had sent to him open, with a flying seal, the letter which I wrote you by St. Domingo. We had agreed to this verbally, and he had promised me to send it to Bordeaux well recommended. I have reason to believe that this letter has been sent, and read to certain persons, for whom I had put expressly at the close of the letter, that when by a wise legislation and constitution you shall have, gentlemen, crowned the work of your liberty, I shall die contented with having seen a great [King] and a great Rep[ublic] sincerely desire the good of nations.

I received some days ago another letter from Mr. S. D. at Paris, 14th September. All those which I receive from him, as from you, gentlemen, are precious to me; and this one is doubly so, because, besides the most kind expressions with which it is filled, my zeal for your cause, gentlemen, is therein recompensed by the acknowledgment of having well served it. I cannot resist the temptation to transcribe here what he said to me on that point:

"The measures you took before my arrival here are perfectly right. You are entirely in the right, in saying that the H. of B. are the allies we should first and principally court; that F. is at the head of this H. and therefore what is done here, is sure to be done by the whole. This, therefore, requires my whole attention; and I can only say to you, my prospects are no way discouraging. I hope in person soon to tell you how very much I am yours and your lady's."

I cannot add anything more analogous to what you have just read, than the assurances of my perfect attachment to the United States of North America, and to their worthy Representatives in the General Congress. Deign to receive, sir, those of my profound respect for all the members in general, and for you and Messrs. Dickinson and Jay in particular.

Du 16^e 7br. "Vous m'aviez flatté que j'aurais l'honneur de vous voir dans le courant de la semaine qui vient de finir. C'est cette attente qui m'a empêché de vous répondre, comptant vous dire de vive voix le reste, comme je vous le dirai au premier voyage que vous ferez à La Haie.

"Tout ce que vous m'avez recommandé, a été fait et acheminé suivant vos désirs. Les miens seront toujours de mériter votre confiance et de vous servir."

Je lui avois envoyé ouverte, avec un cachet volant, la lettre que je vous ai écrite par St. Domingue. Nous étions convenus de cela de bouche, et il m'avoit promis de l'envoyer à Bordeaux bien recommandée. J'ai lieu de croire que cette lettre a été envoyée et lue à de certaines personnes pour qui j'avois mis exprès à la fin de la lettre, que lorsque par une législation et constitution sage vous aurez couronné, Messieurs, l'ouvrage de votre liberté, je mourrai content d'avoir vu un grand r. et une grande rép. vouloir sincèrement le bien des peuples.

J'ai reçu il y a quelques jours une autre lettre de M. S. D. de Paris 14^e 7br. Toutes celles que je reçois de lui, comme de vous, Messieurs, me sont précieuses; & celle-ci l'est doublement, puisque, outre les expressions les plus affectueuses dont elle est remplie, mon zèle pour votre cause, Messieurs, y est récompensé par le témoignage de l'avoir bien servie. Je ne puis résister à la tentation de transcrire ici ce qu'il me dit là-dessus:

"The measures you took before my arrival here are perfectly right. You are entirely in the right in saying that the H. of B. are the allies we should first and principally court; that F. is at the head of this H., and therefore what is done here is sure to be done by the whole. This, therefore, requires my whole attention; and I can only say to you, my prospects are no way discouraging. I hope in person soon to tell you how very much I am yours and your lady's."

Je ne saurois rien ajouter de plus analogue à ce que vous venez de lire, que les assurances de mon parfait attachement pour les Etats-Unis de l'Amérique Septentrionale, et pour leurs dignes Représentants au Congrès Général. Daignez recevoir, Monsieur, celles de mon profond respect pour tous les membres en général, et pour vous et Messrs. Dickinson et Jay en particulier.

Vous pouvez, Monsieur, mettre à l'avenir mon vrai nom sur vos lettres, comme vous avez fait ci-devant, et les adresser, sous couvert, soit à M. Marc Michel Rey, libraire

You can, sir, in future, put my real name upon your letters, as you have heretofore done, and address them, under cover, either to Mr. Marc Michel Rey, bookseller, Amsterdam, or to Mr. A. Stuckey, merchant, Rotterdam, according to the destination of the vessel which will carry them.

In order to be able to finish this letter at my ease, I have made my two pupils walk out with a lady, I promising to amuse her little boy; this little fellow has amused himself so well, that he has overturned my inkstand upon a sheet of this despatch. I have recopied only what he has spoiled, so as to be able to send my packet without delay.

If I continue to not sign my name, it is not from pusillanimity, but because I believe that your service requires that I should remain still for some time unknown; at least until Mr. D. comes to lodge at my house: for then I shall be known everywhere as the most zealous American in the whole Republic, and I shall glory in it. All that could happen to me, would be the loss of my present post; but in that case I am sure that Congress would indemnify me with an equivalent subsistence for me and mine, because I shall be able to continue to be useful to it, as much, and even more than heretofore, since I shall no longer be pressed by other duties, and my whole person shall be at all times and in all places, in the service of America. I have been mortified (and I have noticed it in my last letter to Mr. D.) at not being free in the last instance. I would have flown to P. in order to assist him, at least with the knowledge I have of several European languages.

I have another letter from Mr. S. D., from Paris, 3d October. Here is an extract from it: "Since my last, in which I mentioned the King of Prussia, I have attained a method of sounding that Monarch's sentiments more directly through another channel, which voluntarily offering I have accepted, and therefore waive writing on the subject, for the present, anything, [he was speaking to me about a memoir, upon which I would have composed a letter for that Monarch,] save that you may undoubtedly serve the United States of America most essentially in this affair, in a few weeks from this. The attention to my business here, the critical situation of affairs at this Court, and the anxious suspense* for the events at New-York and Canada, have actually fixed me here, and having received no intelligence for some time past, has well-nigh distracted me. I have, however, favourable prospects, and the most confirmed hopes of effecting my views in Europe."

I have another letter from Mr. A. L. from London, 23d September, in which he tells me, among other things, "we may every day expect to hear of a decisive action at New-York—decisive, I mean, as to the fate of New-York and of General Howe,—but not of America, which depends very little upon the event of New-York being taken or saved. I have been apprised by Hortales that the business for which I recommended him to you is to be transacted through France, which is the reason of your not seeing him.

* Ah, how much I share this anxiety with this worthy man! God grant that both he and I may very soon have some good news.

à Amsterdam, soit à M. A. Stuckey, merch't, Rotterdam, selon la destination du vaisseau qui les portera.

Pour pouvoir finir cette lettre à mon aise, j'ai fait promener mes deux élèves avec une dame, en m'engageant à amuser son nourrisson; ce marmouset s'est si bien amusé, qu'il m'a jetté l'écritoire sur une feuille de cette dépêche. Je n'ai recopié que ce qu'il a barbouillé, afin de pouvoir envoyer mon paquet sans retard.

Si je continue de ne pas signer mon nom, ce n'est point par pusillanimité, mais parce que je crois que votre service exige que je reste encore quelque temps inconnu; au moins jusqu'à ce que M. D. vienne loger chez moi: car alors je serai connu partout pour le plus zélé Américain de toute la république, et je m'en ferai une gloire. Tout ce qui pourroit m'en arriver, seroit la perte de mon poste actuel: mais en ce cas je suis sûr que le Congrès me dédommageroit par une subsistance équivalente pour moi et les miens, vu que je pourrai continuer de lui être utile, autant et plus encore que par le passé, parce que je ne serai plus gêné par d'autres devoirs, et que toute ma personne pourra être en tout temps, et en tout lieu, au service de l'Amérique. J'ai été bien mortifié (et je l'ai marqué dans ma dernière lettre à M. D.) de ne pas être libre en dernier lieu. J'aurais volé à P., pour lui aider, au moins par la connoissance que j'ai de plusieurs langues Européennes.

J'ai une autre lettre de M. S. D. de Paris 3^e 8bre en voici l'extrait: "Since my last, in which I mentioned the King of Prussia, I have attained a method of sounding that Monarch's sentiments more directly through another channel, which, voluntarily offering, I have accepted, and therefore waive writing on the subject for the present, anything, (il m'avoit parlé d'un mémoire, sur le-quel j'aurais composé une lettre pour the United States of America most essentially in this affair in a few weeks from this. The attention to my business here, the critical situation of affairs at this Court, and the anxious suspense* for the events at New-York and Canada, have actually fixed me here, and having received no intelligence for some time past, has well-nigh distracted me. I have, however, favourable prospects, and the most confirmed hopes of effecting my views in Europe."

I shall close this despatch by telling you, sir, that in the last interview which I have had with a certain personage, he has testified to me that they are well satisfied with me. "Continue," he told me, "to give us copies, extracts, translations, of the interesting letters which you receive from your friends beyond and on this side of the sea; extend your correspondence still more and more; multiply your correspondents as much as you can; become the channel, the centre, of what your friends will have to say to their friends in England, and the latter to their friends in America; the confidant, in a word, on each side, and take me for yours always, and you will finish by entering at last into a correspondence with the Minister himself. I shall see him frequently this winter, and I shall labour to bring that to bear."

Finally, sir, permit me to recommend to your attention, and to that of the General Congress the memoir enclosed, marked by a N. B. For abundant precaution, I will enclose in my next despatch a copy of this memoir, and I shall then be able also to inform you, gentlemen, of the success that it will have had in Hamburgh, for the young man who took charge of it has already sent it.

Enclosed is an Exposition of the Rights of the Colonies to Independence. I do not know the name of the well-wisher, who is the author of it; but the manuscript was sent to me by the printer, to know if it was good, that is to say, in booksellers' language, if it would be worth publishing. I have replied to him that it had all the requisites to merit it.

I recommend you, gentlemen, with your brave armies, and all your brave people, to the care and protection of the Being, sovereignly good and wise, with my whole heart, which is entirely yours.

I close, and despatch this packet to day, the 10th October.

10th October, 1776.

Continuation of Despatch D: At the moment, sir, when I was going to close this packet, a letter came to me with this address: à Monsieur, Monsieur Dean, Envoy of the Congress of the Americans, now at the Hague, in Holland.

To-morrow I shall send this letter to its address. I see by certain marks, that it comes from England. The same personage through whom I am in relations with a certain Court, sent it to me with a letter, which says as follows: "The letter which I have the honour to send to you enclosed, has been addressed from Cambray, in France, under cover to me by the last post. You will know better than I where it ought to be sent to. Hence, from my interest for you and for your friends, I think I ought not to delay a moment to confide it to Madam Uloder. Have the goodness to remember, I pray you, that you have promised me a participation in all that shall come into your hands and to your knowledge, from more than one place; I rely upon it, with a real eagerness to serve you."

You will doubtless understand, sir, that it is in the packet of a Power which is a very good friend to the United States of America, that this letter has reached me.

events at New York and Canada,* have actually fixed me here, and having received no intelligence for some time past, has well nigh distracted me. I have, however, favorable prospects, and the most confirmed hopes of effecting my views in Europe."

J'ai une autre lettre de M. A. L. de Londres 23^e Septembre, où il me dit entr'autres, "we may every day expect to hear of a decisive action at New York—decisive I mean as to the fate of New York and of General Howe, but not of America, which depends very little upon the event of New York being taken or saved. Je terminerai cette dépêche par vous dire, Monsieur, que dans la dernière entrevue que j'ai eue avec un certain personnage, il m'a témoigné qu'on est fort content de moi. "Continuez," m'a-t-il dit, "de nous donner des copies, extraits, traductions, des intéressantes lettres que vous recevez de vos amis delà et deçà la mer; étendez même de plus en plus votre correspondance; multipliez vos correspondants tant que vous pourrez; devenez le canal, le centre, de ce que vos amis auront à dire à leurs amis en Angleterre et ceux-ci à leurs amis en Amérique, le confident, en un mot, de part et d'autre et prenez moi pour le vôtre toujours, et vous finirez par entrer enfin en correspondance avec Enfin, Monsieur, souffrez que je recommande à votre attention, et à celle du Congrès Général le mémoire ci-joint marqué par un N. B. Pour surcroît de précaution, je mettrai dans ma suivante dépêche une copie de ce mémoire, et je pourrai alors vous apprendre aussi, Messieurs, le succès qu'il aura eu à Hambourg, car le jeune homme qui s'en est chargé l'a déjà envoyé.

Voici un Exposé des Droits des Colonies à l'Indépendance. J'ignore le nom du brave homme qui en est l'auteur; mais le manuscrit m'a été envoyé par l'imprimeur, pour savoir si cela étoit bon, c'est-à-dire, en langue de libraire, s'il se débiteroit bien. Je lui ai répondu, qu'il avoit tout ce qu'il faut pour le mériter.

Je vous recommande, Messieurs, avec vos braves armées, et tous vos braves peuples, à la garde et protection de l'Etre souverainement bon et sage, de tout mon cœur, qui est tout à vous.

Je ferme et dépêche ce paquet aujourd'hui, 10^e Octobre.

Du 10^e Octobre, 1776.

Suite de la dépêche D. Au moment, Monsieur, où j'allois expédier ce paquet, il m'est parvenu une lettre avec cette adresse: à Monsieur, Monsieur Dean, envoyé par le Congrès des Américains actuellement à La Haie en Hollande.

Demain j'enverrai cette lettre à son adresse. Je vois à de certaines marques, qu'elle vient d'Angleterre. Le même personnage par lequel je suis en relation avec une certaine Cour, me l'a envoyée avec une lettre, qui dit ce qui suit: "On m'a adressé de Cambray en France, sous mon couvert, par la poste dernière, la lettre que j'ai l'honneur de vous envoyer ci-jointe. Vous saurez mieux que moi où il faut la faire passer. Ainsi, par égard pour vous et pour vos amis, je crois ne pas devoir différer un moment de la

Vous comprendrez sans doute, Monsieur, que c'est dans le paquet d'une Puissance qui est bien bonne amie des Etats-Unis de l'Amérique, que cette lettre est venue jusqu'à moi.

*Ah que je partage bien cette anxiété avec ce digne homme! Dieu veuille que nous ayions bientôt, lui et moi, de bonnes nouvelles.

CAROLINE COUNTY, VIRGINIA, COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Caroline, September, 1776.

Having cause to doubt the fidelity of the following persons to the United States, the Sub-Committee was directed to tender them the test oath, as prescribed by Convention, which was accordingly tendered, and refused by James Miller, at Roy's warehouse, James Dunlop, Andrew Leckie, John Gray, James Coates, John Thompson, James Gordon, James Craigy, James Stark, John Wallace, and Archibald McLean, of Port Royal.

There is no doubt but these monsters of ingratitude will be pleased with this notification of their attachment to the jurisdiction of Great Britain, serving to recommend them as fit instruments to enslave their American benefactors, and consequently proper objects of Royal munificence, a large portion of which, perhaps, will fall to the man whose name stands foremost in this black list, as a reward for his disapprobation of and opposition to publick measures, sufficiently manifest, we think, in his refusing to accept the High Sheriff's commission, in refusing to qualify as a Justice of the Peace, in not complying with a requisition of Convention to contribute to the purchase of arms and ammunition, and in not voting at elections of Delegates and Committees.

Ordered, That a copy of this be transmitted to Mr. Purdy, to be published in his Gazette.

SAMUEL TEMPLE, Clerk.

COLONEL RICHARDSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Gilpin's Point, September 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Upon Dr. Potter's resigning his warrant for the enlistment of men to compose a company for the Flying Camp, my brother, Joe Richardson, undertook to enlist them, and having in three days made up the number, he now waits upon you for a commission, and I hope he will meet your approbation and appointment. The Ensign appointed for Captain Potter's company declines to act, therefore it is necessary to have a new appointment: my brother will mention a young man to your honourable Board, which I believe will answer the purpose very well; he is a sprightly, active, stout young man, and has engaged part of his men already. I have no doubt but the company will be filled up in the course of this week, and ready to begin their march, if your Board can assist him with some of the arms brought up by the Defence, which I hope will be done. He has picked up some arms already and will want cash to pay for them, the money lodged in the Committee's hands being expended on Captain Fiddiman's company.

All the companies are, I believe, now on their march to the camp, except Captain Goldsborough's and the above. Captain Goldsborough's, I expect, will set off in a few days, and I hope he will soon be followed by the Caroline company. I set out to-day on my way to camp.

I am, with due respect, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

WM. RICHARDSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

CAPTAIN NICHOLSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, September 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The bearer, Mr. Morris, waits on you with an application to have Mr. Middleton's privateer stopped and examined for four deserters from the frigate. Circumstances are very strong that they are or will be on board her, for the particulars of which refer to him. This I hope you'll think necessary, for should there not be an example made of these, if to be found, thirty-odd (likewise from the Eastern Shore) I expect will leave her in the same manner.

I have sent three craft from this to wait your orders to get a load of coal. The first two went before I expected or should have wrote by them, and the last was out of the way. The Resolution returned here yesterday, the officer says by your direction. The Defence has required so much caulking that I do not expect she can be down before the last of the week. I am fitting and victualling her sufficient to go to sea should you think proper to order her. I have found great difficulties in getting her about two months' salt provisions, and as I did not use your order in Philadelphia for that purpose, (for the reason refer to Messrs. Chase and Paca,) you'll please to send by Mr. Turnbull £514, one month's pay, which I shall apply to pay the ship's necessary disbursements.

I am, gentlemen, your most obliged humble servant,
JAMES NICHOLSON.

To the Honourable the Council of Safety of Maryland.

COL. HOLLINGSWORTH TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Head of Elk, September 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Some time since I wrote you how necessary it would be to have cash lodged in the County in some person's hands that I could occasionally call on as the service required it. As I have heard nothing since from your Honours, it induces me to suppose in the multiplicity of your business I have been forgot. Your Honours are too well acquainted with the nature of this business to think of its being done without money and much perplexity and trouble. I have laid out about £200 for beef, bread, wagons, &c., and have assumed for how much more I can't say, as the accounts from Wilmington and Chestertown have not come in yet, though doubtless they are in want of cash, as they have only my word for all they have done in forwarding the Maryland troops. 'Tis impossible for me to furnish the account with all the necessary probates till the troops have gone forward, as the forwarding them takes up all of my time; to see them delayed here would give me as much uneasiness as it would your Honours to hear of it. Necessity, therefore, now emboldens me to draw on you for one hundred and fifty pounds, and also to request that at least some more be sent to me at Elk, that I may be enabled to fulfil my contracts and forward the remaining part of the troops. There has no part of the troops sent on been delayed one hour for wagons, shallops or provisions. If Mr. Joseph Gilpin, whom I have drawn for, has the money lodged with him, there's no doubt but he can get a safe conveyance of it to Elk.

I am, gentlemen, your Honours' most obedient and most humble servant.
H. HOLLINGSWORTH.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

P. S. Since writing the above, as an opportunity offers, I have thought it most convenient and least complicated to draw in favour of Mr. Gilpin for £300 in one draft, which I have enclosed to him. And am
H. H.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, September 1, 1776.

MY FRIEND: I am now to acknowledge thy favours of the 7th and 19th ult., which are come to hand, and ere this, you have received by Colonel Whipple, every necessary both for fitting out the ship and for your conduct as agent. Pray send her to sea as soon as possible, that she may be doing something to distress our enemies and assist our friends.

By the enclosed papers, you will see what is the news current here. The affairs at New-York seem at present to engross our chief attention. We have not had the particulars of the engagement last week on Long-Island, but believe it was very sharp and bloody. Generals Sullivan and Lord Sterling are prisoners to the enemy. I believe the enemy out-generalled our people, by decoying them out of their intrenchments, and then surrounding them; but before this reaches you, you will have later accounts from our Army, and more particulars than I can inform you.

September 2d.—This morning General Sullivan arrived here on his parole. He says he has a verbal message from Lord Howe to propose his being exchanged for General Prescott; and Lord Sterling for General McDonald. He also says that Lord Howe is desirous to converse with some of the members of Congress, not as such, (because he cannot acknowledge any such body,) but as private gentlemen, to see if they can't agree on some proposals for accommodation, and that he will meet them in any convenient place. These are verbal messages, and we have besides every reason to believe that Lord Howe has not, and cannot in the nature of things, have power to grant any terms that we can possibly accept; yet, as these reports are spread among the people by half Tories and those called moderate men, who (if it should be refused) would represent it that the Congress refused to hear his proposals, and would add ten thousand lies of their own, on purpose to disaffect the common people, especially at this very critical time. When I consider these things, I am at a loss what is best to be done; however, I hope we shall be directed to those measures that are best for the United States.

I am, sir, your most obedient,
JOSIAH BARTLETT.

P. S. Wm. Barrell is dead and buried.

COMMITTEE OF LANCASTER, (PENN.) TO THE COMMITTEE OF CARLISLE.

In Committee, Lancaster, September 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: You will receive this by Captain John Witmer, who conducts to your town Lieutenant William Barrington, of the Royal Fusileers, ordered by the Council of Safety to be sent from hence (where he hath been some time confined) to the town of Carlisle, to join the other officers of that corps at that place. He was released from his confinement here on his engaging, by letter to the Council of Safety, to sign his parole agreeable to the directions of Congress, which he is to do on his arrival with you, or be confined. As he is one of the gentlemen who were stationed at Lebanon, we thought it best to take his temporary parole, binding him till his arrival with you, which we have entrusted with Captain Witmer for your perusal, and request you to return it by him. He takes with him a soldier of the Seventh Regiment, named William Croft, from among the prisoners here, as his servant, who we likewise beg leave to place under your direction, and for him he is to engage to be amenable.

We are, gentlemen, your very humble servants,
URI ATLEE, Chairman.

To the Committee of Inspection of Carlisle.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW YORK CONVENTION.

New York, September 1, 1776.

SIR: I was yesterday honoured with your favour of that date, and should have answered it by the return of the person who brought it, had I not been engaged then in a multiplicity of business, which occasioned me to forget it till he was gone.

In respect to the cattle on this Island, I shall desire the Commissary to purchase as many of them from the inhabitants as he can conveniently, and will afford every assistance the situation of affairs will admit of, to have the remainder secured; but as to those on Long-Island, it is impossible for me to take any measures, or give any assistance, to prevent their falling into the enemy's hands. I am persuaded the number of rangers you mention, were they to exert themselves, might be of service, and annoy the foraging parties of the enemy not a little; but, sir, I cannot spare any men for that purpose. Though our force is called in from the outposts and collected on this Island, yet it will not be more than competent to the defence of the several lines necessary to be maintained; nor is it, perhaps, by any means so great as common estimation and report make it.

I am extremely obliged by your opinion on the defensible state of the grounds above King's Bridge, though they had not escaped my observation. Their importance I am fully sensible of; and as far as the critical situation of things will allow, their defence shall be attended to, to prevent, if possible, the enemy from possessing them.

I have the honour to be, &c.,
GO. WASHINGTON.

The Hon. Abm. Yates, Junr., Esq., President, &c.

P. S. As the posts at King's Bridge are of such great importance, I think it will be well, and extremely necessary, to be favoured with your friendly exertions in affording every aid in your power for their defence. Cannot some more Militia be prevailed on to give their assistance, and in whom you can confide? I will not enlarge, being fully assured you will do all you can.

DR. MORGAN TO GENERAL GATES.

New-York, September 1, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: The first chest for ten regiments I sent by Dr. Potts, and saw it on board the vessel myself. The other was put on board the vessel with Dr. Kennedy, Surgeon of Colonel Wayne's regiment, and committed to his particular care, with a card directed to Dr. Stringer, who,

I thought, was at the Lakes. Dr. Kennedy ought certainly to be accountable what has become of that chest. If it has miscarried, it must be owing to his neglect.

I now send you a large assortment of medicines, all capital articles. If you knew that I had already supplied fifty or sixty regiments, you would think this no small exertion of mine; but it is in favour of a General and friend I love. That you may have the better chance of getting it, I have ordered a mate with it, who will tell you we have got it through fire and water for you. The invoice is enclosed. I have directed it to you on purpose that it may not be stopped at Albany. But the bearer is to return to Dr. Stringer, unless Dr. Stringer should order him to stay.

Your Aid-de-Camp, Major Pierce, will be up with you, before this can possibly come to hand. Wherefore, being in the greatest hurry, I omit news, as he can give you information of the present state of our army better than I can.

I must tell you that by the resolves of Congress, July 17, which I sent to Dr. Potts, and which he received, and which he can show to you, the Director in each Department is to provide his own medicines, and not depend on me. However, if I can further oblige you, my dear friend, I will with the greatest pleasure. Mrs. Morgan writes me word she had a letter lately from Mrs. Gates, who (and your son Bob) is well. Wishing you success, I remain, my dear sir, your affectionate friend and most humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

Hon. Major General Gates.

P. S. My compliments to Major Stewart, Colonel Trumbull, Mr. Avery, Dr. Potts, and all friends. I understood Dr. Stringer took medicines with him from Philadelphia. It is his business, therefore, to supply you further.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM NEW-YORK, DATED SEPTEMBER 1, 1776.

Last Monday morning we went over to Long-Island, and about midnight we were alarmed by the return of some of our scouting parties, who advised us that the English were in motion, and coming up the Island with several field-pieces; it was generally thought not to be the main body, but only a detachment, with a view to possess themselves of some advantageous heights. Upon which near three thousand men were ordered out, consisting chiefly of the Pennsylvania and Maryland troops, to attack them on their march. About sunrise we came up with a very large body of them. The Delaware and Maryland battalions made one party. Colonel Atlee, with his battalion a little before us, had taken post in an orchard and behind a barn, and on the approach of the enemy he gave them a very severe fire, which he bravely kept up for a considerable time, until they were near surrounding him, when he retreated to the woods. The enemy then advanced towards us, upon which Lord Sterling, who commanded, immediately drew us up in a line, and offered them battle in the true English taste. The British army then advanced within about three hundred yards of us, and began a very heavy fire from their cannon and mortars, for both the balls and shells flew very fast, now and then taking off a head. Our men stood it amazingly well; not even one of them showed a disposition to shrink.

Our orders were not to fire until the enemy came within fifty yards of us; but when they perceived we stood their fire so coolly and resolutely, they declined coming any nearer, although treble our number. In this situation we stood from sunrise to twelve o'clock, the enemy firing upon us the chief part of the time, when the main body of their army, by a route we never dreamed of, had entirely surrounded us, and drove within the lines, or scattered in the woods, all our men, except the Delaware and Maryland battalions, who were standing at bay with double their number. Thus situated, we were ordered to attempt a retreat, by fighting our way through the enemy, who had posted themselves, and nearly filled every field and road between us and our lines. We had not retreated a quarter of a mile before we were fired upon by an advanced party of the enemy, and those upon our rear were playing upon us with their artillery. Our men fought with more than Roman courage, and I am convinced would have stood until they were shot down to a man. We forced the advanced party, which first attacked us, to give way, through which opening we got a passage down to the side of a marsh, seldom before waded over, which we passed, and then swam a narrow river, all the time exposed to the fire of the enemy. The companies commanded by Captains Ramsey and Scott were in the front, and sustained the first fire of the enemy, when hardly a man fell.

The whole of the right wing of our battalion, thinking it impossible to pass through the marsh, attempted to force their way through the woods, where they were almost to a man killed or taken. The Maryland battalion has lost two hundred and fifty-nine men, amongst whom are twelve officers: Captains Veazey and Bowie, the first certainly killed; Lieuts. Butler, Sterrett, Dent, Coursey, Muse, Prawl; Ensigns Coats and Fernandes; who of them are killed, or who prisoners, is yet uncertain. Many of the officers lost their swords and guns. We have since entirely abandoned Long-Island, bringing off all our military stores.

Generals Sullivan and Sterling are both prisoners. Colonels Atlee, Miles and Piper, are also taken. There are about one thousand men missing in all. We took a few prisoners. By a Lieutenant we took, we understand they had about twenty-three thousand men on the Island that morning. Most of our Generals were upon a high hill in our lines, viewing us with glasses. When we began our retreat, they could see the enemy we had to pass through, though we could not. Many of them thought we would surrender in a body, without firing. When we began the attack, General Washington wrung his hands, and cried out, Good God! What brave fellows I must this day lose! Major Guest commanded the Maryland battalion, the Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel being both at York. Captains Adams and Lucas were sick. The Major, Captain Ramsey, and Lieutenant Plunkett, were foremost, and within forty yards of the enemy's muzzles, when they were fired upon by the enemy, who were chiefly under cover of an orchard, save a few that showed themselves and pretended to give up, clubbing their firelocks until we came within that distance, when they immediately presented and blazed in our faces; they entirely overshot us, and killed some men away behind in our rear. I had the satisfaction of dropping one of them the first fire I made. I was so near I could not miss. I discharged my rifle seven times that day as deliberately as I ever did at a mark, and with as little perturbation.

COLONEL CARY TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, September 1, 1776.

SIR: I am instructed by his Excellency to acknowledge the receipt of your favour yesterday, and to acquaint you he has directed the Quartermaster-General to furnish you with the horses wanted. He has also desired Colonel Moylan to place an Assistant Quartermaster up at King's Bridge, to supply such articles as are necessary, which would thereby save much trouble to all parties, and particularly to the General, as a considerable part of his time is taken up in reading letters from different quarters upon such subjects, which at this time is far from being agreeable to him.

Should such an Assistant Quartermaster be placed at King's Bridge, it is presumed care will be taken that no applications be made to him for any articles but only such as cannot be dispensed with.

I am, with due respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

RICH'D. CARY, JUN., A. D. C.

Major General Heath, King's Bridge.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Dobb's Ferry, September 1, 1776.

SIR: Your express found me at the door and delivered me your letter. As I was only one of the persons concerned in the privateer I could do nothing in the matter, but sent the express to town with the letter, that the other persons concerned might be consulted and do what was necessary. The express has returned to this place and informed me he could not find either of the persons to whom I directed my letter, so that nothing yet can be done. But I intend sending the letter to town again to-morrow, and you may depend upon the earliest information respecting the sale of the privateer. I am willing for my own part to accept the offer of prime cost, and I imagine the rest of the partners will have no objection; but I think as only prime cost is offered, it is hardly fair to expect us to run the risk of getting the sloop to Poughkeepsie; however, I will consent to whatever the rest agree to. I am, sir, your very humble servant,

EBEN'R HAZARD.

P. S. Will it not be proper for the Convention to have a rider daily to and from New-York, and to call on me both going and coming? I may be found at Major Abraham Storms's. Shall pay proper attention to the Committee's resolve about the post's riding on this side the river, but I fear people on the west side will be dissatisfied. Will you send word over the river, so that the post may be prevented going on the west side to New-York this trip?

OFFICERS COMMISSIONED IN KING'S COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

A Return of the Officers chosen by the different Companies in KING's County, who have signed the Declaration and taken their Commissions.

Light Horse: Adolph Waldron, Captain; Wm. Boerum, 1st Lieutenant; Thomas Everet, 2d Lieutenant; Jacob Sebring, Jr., Ensign; Isaac Sebring, Quartermaster.

Troop of Horse: Lambert Suydam, Captain; Daniel Rapelje, 1st Lieutenant; Jacob Bloom, 2d Lieutenant; Peter Van De Voort, Ensign; Peter Wykoff, Quartermaster.

Flatlands: Jeremiah V. D. Bilt, Captain; Albert Stotthoff, 1st Lieutenant; Thomas Elsworth, 2d Lieutenant; Peter V. D. Bilt, Ensign.

Gravesend: Rem Williamson, Captain; Samuel Hubbard, 1st Lieutenant; Garret Williamson, 2d Lieutenant; John Lane, Ensign.

Half of Brooklyn: Barent Johnson, Captain; Barent Lefferts, 1st Lieutenant; Joost D. B. Vooise, 2d Lieutenant; Martin Schenck, Ensign.

Flatbush: Corn's V. D. Veer, Captain; Peter Lefferts, 1st Lieutenant; John Van Duyn, 2d Lieutenant; John Benham, Ensign.

Half of Brooklyn: Ferd's Suydam, Captain; Simon Bergen, 1st Lieutenant; Wm. Brower, 2d Lieutenant; Jacob Stellenwert, Ensign.

JOSEPH BULL TO GENERAL WOODHULL.

SIR: I was last Friday evening taken in custody by order of General Scott, since which time I have been kept a prisoner (though humanely treated) at New-Rochelle, and by letter from General Scott, am acquainted I must go on board a sloop for Norwich, in Connecticut; this, without a hearing is hard; but what renders such a voyage truly distressing is my wife's being near her time of lying in, a woman of feeble constitution, without father or mother. I am very fearful it may end her days. All these evils, if justly deserved, I could the more cheerfully endure. As early as the first forming a Committee in New-York, I was one of the promoters, in which Committee I served about two years, as I thought with the approbation of my fellow-citizens at large, as I was, on a dissolution of the committee always nominated by the Committee and the people outdoors, who used often to correct our nomination, and was finally dismissed on account of my business often calling me abroad, so that I could not give due attendance. Between the dissolution of the first and the choice of a second Congress, I was informed a number of people had assembled to counteract, and if possible frustrate a second choice. I attended, and, with the assistance of a few others, they were prevailed on to drop that opposition, but would and did oppose a convention. When there was an answer appeared to the paper called Philips, I carried them through Westchester and Dutchess County, and so on through the borders of New-England as far as the first had reached, and if I had time, I could produce witnesses who would acknowledge I have proselyted them from toryism. One matter is within the compass of your knowledge, which doth not speak a wish the country might be subdued; and if I can before this goes from me, I shall furnish you with some circumstances more, all of which, if it should appear to you, sir, are small, still they will, I think, evince that my wish is that way. I could further add, all my friends are, if the country is conquered, ruined, ties which, if nothing else, would induce me to be friendly to the American cause; but other motives alone would influence me.

If you can, sir, be of service to me in this case, you may be the instrument of saving life, and I am conscious will not lessen the strength of the cause. If the matter, sir, should lie with the General, I don't know but it is asking too much, but I should be much obliged if you could wait on him, and if you think proper, show him this letter, all which favours I shall thankfully acknowledge, and no one will more cheerfully retaliate them.

Your most obedient, very humble servant,

JOSEPH BULL.

To General Woodhull, at Harlem.

N. B. If Colonel Philips, Colonel Corsa and myself must proceed, we should be glad to give security and proceed by land; a boat will be exceedingly disagreeable at this hot season, and most of us subject to be sea-sick. We are the only prisoners here except Mr. Jauncey.

LIEUTENANT EDGET TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

GENTLEMEN: As I was nominated as Lieutenant in Johannes Van Steenberg's company, and in Colonel Graham's regiment, and as I was, while in the service, but unhealthy, very unfit for duty, and particularly at my departure from the army, and so I continue incapable of being in any ways serviceable to my country: therefore I humbly request your honourable body to please to grant my dismissal from the service; and in so doing you shall very much oblige, gentlemen, him who is yours, with respect.

Your devoted friend and very humble servant,

STEPHEN EDGET.

To the Honourable Congress of the State of New-York and Territories therein depending for the time being.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 1, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I received your favour of the 26th, continued to the 27th, and about four o'clock an express went off to General Washington, with copy of your letter and the several enclosures.

Not a sheet of musket cartridge paper is to be had here, or anywhere in this part of the country. A quantity sent from New-York on the 19th ultimo is not yet arrived. The grindstones and the other articles mentioned in the list sent me by Mr. Lewis, you will receive the soonest possible, excepting the wire, emery, and screw-plates, which must come from New-York, and the bar iron, which is sent for to Mr. Livingston's forge.

If you cannot procure a sufficiency of carpenters out of the troops to replace the sick and lame, let me know it, and I will try to send some from hence.

Not a man is stopped on the route to the army by my order, except such as have lately had the small-pox; and that was in consequence of information given me immediately before my order of the 20th ultimo to General Waterbury, which information is since corroborated by a letter of the 22d ultimo, yesterday received, from Governour Trumbull, who says: "Inoculation for the small-pox I find has been practised by the troops on their way to join the army. I hope a practice so pernicious in every respect will be discouraged. I have taken the liberty to suggest my fears and sentiments to General Gates on this subject. Indeed, sir, if it is not timely restrained, it appears to me it must prove fatal to all our operations, and may ruin the country."

You are perfectly right in taking it for granted that I send all your letters that contain anything that Congress or General Washington ought to know, to them, as also all papers of the least importance.

September 2.—Last night three Philadelphia gentlemen who passed through New-York on their way to this place, informed us that on Tuesday last there were several smart rencountres between our troops and the enemy on Long-Island, with alternate success; that considerable numbers fell on both sides; that on Wednesday they attacked our lines, but were repulsed with loss. It is supposed they lost three thousand, we two thousand. General Grant, of theirs, killed. General Sullivan and Lord Stirling missing. Two of the Pennsylvania battalions suffered most. We wait with impatience for more particulars. One of the gentlemen, who left New-York on Thursday morning, heard a smart cannonade when at King's Bridge. Some of the Hessians. The enemy's ships of war, on Thursday morning, were still near Staten-Island, and no appearance of their moving.

The gentlemen above mentioned have brought half a million of dollars to our military chest. Let us know what part of it you will want. The troops can now be regularly paid off.

I send this by express, and hope it will soon be followed by another, announcing the total rout of the enemy.

Mr. Avery has not complied with my orders. Whether he is subordinate to Mr. Livingston or not, it was his business to obey, and if he thought himself injured, to have complained. I have wrote Mr. Trumbull the Commissary General, and have declared, that whilst Mr. Livingston is in this department, the returns shall be made as I have directed, and that I would have sent Mr. Avery down under arrest, but as I did not know what orders he had given him, I should waive the matter till I heard from him, that no damage might accrue to the service. Two heads to the same branch, and in the same department of the army, involves such an absurdity that I will never suffer it whilst I command.

Adieu, my dear General. I am your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates, &c.

Tyconderoga, September 1, 1776.

This may certify the most advantageous post on Onion River for the posting of six companies of men, raised for the defence of the frontier, is at Jericho, at Baker's block-house, and at Colchester Point.

Certified: JOSEPH WAIT, Lieutenant Colonel.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, September 1, 1776.

SIR: You are directed to maintain your post at Jerico on Onion River, with the company under your command, sending out scouts and following the directions you may from time to time receive from the Committee of the County and Town, and the advice of Deacon Rood. You will remain till you receive orders from the commanding officers here. Any intelligence, or deserters of the enemy, are to be sent to Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, immediately.

I am, sir, your obedient servant, JOHN TRUMBULL,

Dep. Adj. Gen'l Northern Army.

Commanding Officer of the Company raised by Captain Fauceit.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL ALLEN.

Ticonderoga, September 1, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This is my third to you since yours of the 25th of July. Whether the former have reached you or not is doubtful, as our communication seems not to be much more open than heretofore. How that happens God knows, but certain it is, few letters to or from this army get on.

I wish to God you had returned to the regiment, though I well know your sentiments. I really expected you would have come back. The osier keeps its footing when the oak is torn up by the roots. You know my way of thinking, and you know likewise the obligations I have to your family—obligations which no change of circumstances can ever cancel. But you will excuse me, my dear sir; I believe it would have been true policy to have given some way to the temper of the times.

If I remember right, there were two points on which we were perfectly agreed: First, that independence was not the interest of America if the liberties of America could be otherwise secured; secondly, that if foreign troops were employed to reduce America to absolute submission, that independence or any other mode was justifiable. There is now no doubt about the employment of foreign troops, which I own I think was the watchword to every man of property in America, for I doubt very much whether, if

Great Britain should succeed by force, much odds would be made by the lordly conquerors between friends or foes, or if native and foreign avarice and rapacity would not be glutted with the indiscriminate spoil of both. I am persuaded many worthy men would not have wished things to go as they have done, because they thought it not consistent with the true interest of America, which might have long been happy in a regulated (not unwarlike) subordination to Great Britain—but that fatal proceeding, amongst whom I think I may reckon your venerable father, has cast the die.

Do not, my dear sir, imagine my late promotion has altered my sentiments. I will own to you I am pleased, not flattered with it. I am come to that time of life, and some how or other have always had a way of thinking, what some people call philosophy, but it is nothing but constitution, that puts me out of danger of that flutter and emotion that sudden and unexpected elation gives some people. I assure you I would rather experience the heartfelt satisfaction of discharging one social duty, one debt of gratitude, than have as many Honour's and Excellency's stuck to my name as would fill a quire of paper. To your father and brother, and Mr. Penn, I have obligations that I must ever feel, that I will never forget. You know I am a bad politician, but if you have not already taken too decisive a post—I cannot say one word more about the matter, and when I reflect on your own good sense and the superior understanding and experience of many of your friends, it would be insolence to offer you any advice.

We have made this a very strong post. The old French lines are repaired, and redoubts upon redoubts constructed, and men enough to defend them. If they come we shall certainly give a good account of them. General Arnold is down the Lake with the fleet—three schooners and a sloop, and ten gondolas, mounting in all about one hundred guns. The time is certainly near now. I wish you was here to share the honours, for we shall certainly bear them. We shall make up for the Three Rivers—but wherever you are, my best wishes shall ever attend you. Your baggage Major Scull takes to Albany, all but your bedding. Your mattress and blanket I let Mr. Clajon have, his having been stolen one day out of the General's house. The rest I will keep. Let me know the price, and the money shall be remitted for the whole. I thank you for the marqué. I will take all the care I can of it, and bring it with me when I return. If I return not, you do not want friends here who will do me the kindness to send it. Next time I will tell you all about the money, and am, &c.

WILLIAM GILLILAND TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

September 1, 1776.

SIR: The troops and sailors accompanying you on your cruise this day week, have wantonly and wickedly committed great destruction on several of my plantations on this settlement. They have forcibly raised two fields of potatoes that, if full grown, would have filled two hundred bushels; an acre of peas are entirely destroyed, which would have yielded sixteen to twenty bushels; five or six acres of corn are ruined; about ten dollars worth of smith's tools, and a multitude of other irons; two pleasure sleighs, five new sash windows, a new bedstead and bed-cord, several chairs, and many other articles, they have carried off, tearing houses, breaking doors, and committing every villany in the most insolent and licentious manner, even before my servants' face, whom I sent to guard these things, telling them it was by order of the officers they came for the vegetables, and have them they would, were I present myself. This was a bad return for seventy-five salmon given to them and Captain Alexander's people on that and the preceding day. As I am convinced you would not by any means countenance such proceedings, I rely and request you will have immediate justice done me, by ordering a survey or inquiry to be made to ascertain the amount of my damage. You may easily remember how General Gates served Captain Romans for suffering some of his men to pull up a few potato hills near Ticonderoga. It grieves me to see my crops destroyed, for whose preservation I came here and remain here at the risk of my life, and those crops on the deserted lots are all the pay I shall probably ever get from those by whom they were formerly occupied, who owed me very considerable sums of money, and many of whom have died since their removal, the others gone down the country. I shall hope for your ready compliance, and that you will believe me to be, very respectfully, sir, your most obedient humble servant, WILL. GILLILAND.

To General Arnold.

P. S. My salmon crib and all its apparatus were carried off last Monday night by the violence of a very great flood. If your carpenters could be spared to assist me one day or two, I should very soon be able to send you some salmon.

W. G.

If the men belonging to the vessels are suffered to come ashore where there are settlements, 'twill be impossible to prevent their doing mischief. Besides what I have mentioned above, the people belonging to one of the gondolas went ashore last Sunday afternoon to Point Pleasant Bay, three and a half miles south of my river, and not finding any of my people there, carried off five of my blankets, which my people left in a barn there where they lodged whilst reaping near that place. These things could not possibly have all been taken on board without the knowledge of the officers.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, September 1, 1776.

HONOURED GENERAL: The sentry informs me that he heard a morning gun from the fleet to-day. I presume they remained near Gilliland's yesterday; this seems a little strange as there was so good a wind. The General will doubtless proceed on to-day. He may get to the Isle Motte if he pleases.

I have just despatched two boats, one to Gilliland's, the other to Major Grier to the fleet, really to see what they are doing on board, and to be able to give some account of their dispositions. He will go on till he meets with them. He is to return as soon as possible.

The galley and gondola came here this morning. I have procured a pilot, directed some biscuits to be put on board. The other apparatus he promises to send as soon as possible. The few artillery men I mentioned are not yet come. I would detain them but a very short time.

We endeavoured to take the large cannon out of a broken boat and put it into a sound one, but could not effect it, for want of a gin. We will make another trial, and if possible, send it up.

The party to cover the oar cutters is not yet arrived, though the one sent to bring the saw-mill gears is gone past.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

THO. HARTLEY.

To Major General Gates.

Twenty minutes past twelve o'clock, P. M.

P. S. If the post is arrived, I would be glad if a newspaper could be sent me. Yours, &c.

T. H.

INSTRUCTIONS TO THEIR REPRESENTATIVES, VOTED BY THE FREEMEN OF A TOWN IN CONNECTICUT, AT THEIR ANNUAL MEETING IN SEPTEMBER, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Although we repose the highest confidence in your zeal for the publick weal and particular attention to the true interests of your constituents; yet we think it our duty to manifest to you our sentiments respecting a matter which we hope may come under the consideration of the honourable General Assembly of the State of Connecticut the ensuing session, and in our apprehension, is of the utmost importance to the people of this State, viz: The mode of electing Delegates to represent this State in the General Congress of America.

The exigency of publick affairs have heretofore seemed to require that they should be nominated and appointed by the General Assembly, which has been done to general satisfaction. America is now declared independent, and is forming into an empire unconnected with any other part of the globe. We think it a duty we owe ourselves and posterity to guard our rights and privileges on every quarter, lest a precedent founded at first in necessity or accident, should in time be construed to deprive us of one privilege which we deem essential to the preservation of all the rest. The power of electing Representatives, who, with others, are entrusted with power to declare war and make peace, to form alliances with foreign nations, and to make laws for an extensive empire, (we conceive,) can be lodged nowhere in so safe hands as that of the whole body of freeholders in a State. Bribery and corruption, intrigue and undue influence, is much more easily practised upon a few than many; although we have the highest value for our own General Assembly, whose members have heretofore been governed and directed by the most laudable of principles, the love of their country's welfare, yet we are not sure that in all future times, the same attention will be paid to the true interest of their constituents, or the same principle be the ruling motive of action; and we must declare to you that we think it a right which unalienably belongs to the freeholders of this State to elect members to represent them in the General Congress of America, and a right and power which posterity cannot be deprived of by any previous or present obligation to others. We do, therefore, as part of the freeholders of this State enjoin it upon you as our Representatives in General Assembly, to use your utmost influence that the Assembly do order and direct that such election of Delegates to represent this State in General Congress, be annually made by the freeholders, or freemen at large, and not by their Representatives in General Assembly.

COLONEL H. B. LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Camp, River Head, September 1, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I wrote to you the day before yesterday an account of the prevailing reports, since which, I have seen a Mr. Hobart, whose accounts are not more encouraging. But I am informed from undoubted authority that he has brought letters from the lower class of people in Huntington directed to the people at large in this County, tending to discourage them from making any further attempts against the enemy. I can't as yet find any certainty of their being very formidable; however, if they are, I am still determined as soon as the whole of my detachment arrives, to harass and distress them all in my power, until I can have your or General Washington's advice, which I wait with impatience for. Yours, &c.,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency Governour Trumbull, (to be forwarded by all Committees,) Lebanon.

P. S. Mr. Hobart is a member of the New-York Convention. If a retreat is determined upon, a number of boats will be necessary to carry off the troops and the inhabitants; which I hope your Excellency will take into consideration.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO NATHANIEL SHAW, JUN.

Lebanon, September 1, 1776.

SIR: There being necessity of sending a number of troops from New-London to the east end of Long-Island, you are desired to provide necessary transports, and immediately provide for the carrying over Colonel Erastus Wolcott's regiment with their baggage and the six field-pieces at New-London, and you are directed to forward with them sufficient quantity of powder and ball. And as Captain John Deshon is directed to forward sufficient quantity of provision for the forces, would have you confer with him, and so cooperate that the provisions may be forwarded as the troops go over. Mr. Andrew Huntington, of Norwich, per order engaged of Captain Jabez Perkins one suitable vessel for said service, which must be improved as a transport or to carry stores; and there is more to be had at Norwich if wanted, and quite likely a further number will soon be wanted besides those immediately for Colonel Wolcott's regiment.

Resting satisfied that nothing will be wanting on your part to forward this important expedition, remain yours to serve.

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Mr. Nath. Shaw Jun., in New-London.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 1st, 1776:

Present: his Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Jed'h Elderkin, Wm. Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

His Honour the Governour gave an order on Captain

Sam'l Squire, to send two hundred pounds saltpetre to New-York, to the care of General Wolcott, dated this day, and delivered to Dr. Turner to carry.

His Honour the Governour, with advice of this Council, gave orders to the Commanding officers of the 3d, 5th, 8th, 11th, 12th, 20th, 21st and 25th Regiments of Militia in this State, forthwith to call out their said regiments, and see them equipped and marched to New-London, and have in readiness both officers and men to embark for Long-Island, and there to land in the most convenient place, to march from thence to the assistance of our army, against the troops and mercenaries of the King of Great Britain on that Island, or to be stationed at New-London, as occasion may require; all due pay and wages to be made by the Assembly of this State, and by the United States of America, in a just and equitable manner, as others of the Militia, lately sent from this State, are treated.

His Honour the Governour, by advice of this Council, gave orders to Colonel Erastus Wolcott, of the regiment at the forts at New-London, Groton, &c., without delay to put his officers and soldiers stationed at New-London and Groton, in readiness, well equipped, to embark for Long-Island, and to see the Sound is so clear that they may with safety pass the same, and forthwith to embark with them, and go upon the Island, and there coöperate with the forces on the Island, and from our army to command them in such manner as to secure and defend the inhabitants, assist to dispose of the stock in such manner as shall be agreed upon, and to annoy the enemy in such sort as he shall be able, and to take with him six of the field-pieces now at New-London, and order such as he may have to follow, to bring the residue to the number of six field-pieces; to use his prudence in engaging men, and take with him one of the Captains, and a suitable number of officers, and twenty-five matrosses for the service; all due pay and wages are and will be made by the Assembly of this State, or of the United States of America, in a just and equitable manner, as others of the Militia, lately sent from this State, are treated.

Gave orders to Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., to supply the troops going to Long-Island with stores of powder and transports for their use, and in particular that he employ a sloop belonging to Captain Jabez Perkins, which has already been engaged for that service.

Gave an order to Captain John Deshon to provide bread, flour, and other provisions necessary for the troops going from this State on to Long-Island.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Providence, September 1, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I stopped at New-Haven on Wednesday, and found the Hampden near ready for sea as Mr. Lawrence informed me, all but men and officers, which she had none; Captain Hacker had not got there. I left orders for him, when he came, to get as many men as would be sufficient, and come with the brig to New-London.

I came to New-London Thursday morning; did not find Mr. Shaw at home, but learned that the schooner and bomb brig were both sold, with all their stores, so that at present I do not know of any vessel that can be had that will answer; how Mr. Shaw came to sell them and their stores, or by whose orders, I can't tell. I likewise found the Cabot was gone out on a cruise; she had been gone out about a week, and have no knowledge how long she is to cruise, nor by what authority Captain Hinman could undertake to go out, as he had my orders, when I left New-London for Philadelphia, not to go to sea without he received orders from the Marine Committee or from me.

I came here yesterday; have not seen Captain Saltonstall, but hear the Alfred is about five miles below, with about forty men, including officers, on board, having spared some to Captain Biddle, and a number to Captain Whipple, who sailed on a cruise in four days after he got home, with one hundred and seventy-eight men on board. As soon as I get a little over the fatigue of my journey, shall set myself about manning the Alfred. Should be glad to know when I get her ready whether I may send her out under the command of Lieutenant Mr. Jonathan Pitcher, whom I believe to be a prudent, capable man. Should be glad of your sentiments, to know whether you approve of Captain Hinman's sailing with the Cabot, as I believe he has gone without orders from any person. Mr. House, whom you appointed Lieutenant of the Brig Hampden, is gone out in the Columbus. If you think proper to appoint Mr. Walter Spooner as second Lieutenant, that he may act as first until House gets on board, I believe it will be best for the service.

I am, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

E. HOPKINS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Marine Committee, at Philadelphia.

P. S. I hear a sloop of Dunmore's is carried into the eastward by one of their privateers, loaded with tobacco.

COLONEL JOSEPH WARD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, September 1, 1776.

SIR: Your Excellency's letter of the 26th of August came by the last post. General Ward being out of town, I have transmitted the letter, with the enclosed resolve of Congress, to him.

I am sorry to inform your Excellency that Captain Burke, in the armed schooner Warren, on the 26th of August, was taken by a British frigate about ten leagues without this bay. Captain Ayers, in the armed schooner Lynch, was in company with the Warren, but made his escape, and brought this intelligence.

We hear with inexpressible pleasure of the repulse which our troops, under your Excellency's command, gave the enemy, and most ardently pray that it may be a prelude to the total defeat of those infamous tools of the most infamous tyrant.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant, JOSEPH WARD, A. D. C.

To His Excellency General Washington.

WINTHROP SARGENT TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Gloucester, September 1, 1776.

SIR: This is to inform you that Captain Daniel Waters, of the schooner Lee, retook and brought into this harbour an old coasting sloop, which was taken last Sunday by the Milford frigate of thirty-two guns; on board of the sloop were Mr. Richey and Captain Alexander Lumsdale, late Captain of the powder ship True Runaway, for Salem; for further particulars the prisoners can inform your Honours. The Milford is now off the Cape with one brig, one schooner, and a sloop, which are prizes; they have burnt and sunk four—two in sight of this place. Enclosed you have all the papers found on board the sloop, which please to return, as it is all we have to show the sloop was taken. Captain Waters has left the sloop here, and shall wait your directions in regard to her, and am, with due respect, your obedient, humble servant,

WINTHROP SARGENT, Agent.

State of Massachusetts Bay, in Council, Sept. 4, 1776.

The foregoing having been laid before this Board and read,

Resolved, That the Sheriff of the County of Suffolk be, and he is hereby directed to take the said Richey, and Alexander Lumsdale, and keep them in close custody till further order.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Secretary.

Council Chamber, September 4, 1776.

Whereas application is made that Mr. Francis Curtice, now a prisoner of war at New-Salem, in this State, under the care and custody of the Committee of Correspondence, Safety, and Inspection, of said place, may be exchanged for Philip Stevens, lately taken on board a coasting vessel at or near New-York, and now a prisoner on board some of the men-of-war of the enemy on that station; said Stevens being an inhabitant of, and belonging unto Killingsworth, in the State of Connecticut:

Whereupon, Ordered, That the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, of New-Salem aforesaid, be, and hereby are directed to deliver the said Francis Curtice unto Samuel Redfield, of Killingsworth aforesaid, to be exchanged for said Philip Stevens: Provided he, the said Samuel Redfield, shall give the said Committee a receipt, promising to return the said Francis Curtice into their custody, in case the proposed exchange shall not take effect.

[Mr. Robert Basden, mate of His Majesty's ship Niger,

who was taken in a sloop belonging to Perth-Amboy, and carried into Beverly, loaded with wine. We suppose them to be at Northampton. Mr. Curtis, belonging to the said ship, who was taken in a brig loaded with salt, and carried into Plymouth, near Boston. Supposed to be at the same place.]

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN DEANS.

Annapolis, September 2, 1776.

SIR: Sergeant Barnes of your company having suggested to this Board that his private concerns will suffer very considerably by his continuing in your company, more especially as the company is now on their march to the northward, we therefore think that the publick service will not suffer by Sergeant Barnes's leaving your company; therefore you are directed to give him a discharge. We are, &c.
To Captain Deans.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND CONVENTION.

In Committee, Baltimore, September 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This Committee having heard that your honourable House are about to raise a battalion or two in this Province, we beg leave to recommend the bearer, Mr. Robert Wilmott, a native of this County, and attached to the liberties of America, as a Lieutenant or Ensign in the service.

We are, with all due respect, your most obedient, humble servants,

SAML. PURVIANCE, Jun., Chairman.

WILLIAM LUX, Vice Chairman.

ANDREW BUCHANAN,

EDWARD TALBOTT,

JNO. BOYD,

BENJAMIN GRIFFITH,

WILLIAM WILKINSON,

THOMAS RUTTER.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Convention of Maryland.

WILLIAM DEAKINS, JUN., TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Lower District of Frederick County, September 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Yours of the 17th last month to my brother Leonard, came to hand a few days after he had marched for Philadelphia; he waited several days after his letter to you of the 12th, but receiving no orders, he consulted Colonel Griffith, who ordered him to march, and recruit on the way four or five men to complete his company, after which his return was made from Philadelphia. I hope my brother will stand excused for this step, for both the Colonel and himself thought it for the good of the Province; his would have been one of the first companies full, had he not been unlucky in some of his officers. He has himself recruited most of his men. Bruce, who solicited you for the Ensign's commission, has not recruited one man, notwithstanding he engaged to go with the company till the day they marched, and even then promised the Captain to follow him in a day or two, but has since declined.

I know my brother will wish to have his first Sergeant, Mr. Dennis Griffith, appointed his Ensign, and when he makes his return, I expect he will solicit you in his favour. He is a very deserving young man, and I think merits the commission. The cash you sent by Mr. Nicholls for my brother, is delivered to the Committee of this District, who will account for it.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,

WILL. DEAKINS, Jun.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland.

JOHN BURRELL TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, September 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I was first shipped as master's mate of the ship Defence, at her first setting out in the Provincial service. At the time Lieutenant Boucher left the ship I was advanced to master, by the Council of Safety. I hope your Honours will continue to advance me in rotation, or as Commodore Nicholson shall think right; as imagine him to be the best judge what I may deserve. Lieutenant Nicholson I hear is going to leave the ship, likewise Lieutenant Johns. If so, think I should be first Lieutenant, as I was master of the ship before Lieutenant Auchenbact had his commission. From, gentlemen, your most obedient humble servant,

JOHN BURRELL.

To the Hon. Council of Safety, now sitting at Annapolis.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, September 2, 1776, Present: S. Purviance, Chairman; W. Lux, Vice-Chairman; W. Buchanan, W. Wilkinson, J. Standefort, W. Tolley, Jun., G. Vaughan, B. Griffith, J. Calhoun, T. Sollers, E. Talbot, D. Shaw, J. Smith, J. Boyd.

Mr. Edmund Stansbury is appointed to take an account of the number of inhabitants in Gunpowder Upper Hundred, in the room of Captain James Bosley, who resigned.

Upon motion, Resolved, That Messrs. Walter Tolley, Jun., William Buchanan, and James Calhoun be, and they are hereby appointed a committee to examine the accounts of Messrs. Lux and Bowly, relating to the schooner Resolution, who are to make their reports on Wednesday next.

Colonel Walter Tolley is unanimously appointed one of the committee for licensing suits, vice Captain John Egar Howard, who is marched with his company, to New-York.

Isaac Wigley having enrolled in Captain Garritson's company, and Isaac Dew in Captain Thomas Rutter's, the fines assessed on them as non-enrollers are remitted.

The Sheriff is directed to allow three shillings and nine pence per bushel, for good, clean, merchantable wheat, in discharge of an execution against John Riley, William Reily, and Zebulon Bosley, at the suit of John Barrow.

Attest: GEO. LUX, Secretary.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO GENERAL FOLSOM.

Philadelphia, September 2, 1776.

MY DEAR SIR: I have received yours of the 14th ultimo, with the acts of our Legislature enclosed, for which I thank you, as it gives me particular satisfaction to be informed of the situation of affairs in our own State. I am fully sensible of the great difficulties we labour under by the soldiers being enlisted for such short periods, and that it would have been much better had they at first received a good bounty, and been enlisted to serve during the war. But you may recollect the many, and, to appearance, almost insuperable difficulties that then lay in our way. No money, no magazines of provisions, no military stores, no government; in short, when I look back, and consider our situation about fifteen months ago, instead of wondering that we are in no better situation than at present, I am surprised we are in so good. Who of us at that time expected that the infatuation of Britain would have forced us to the state we are now in? As circumstances now are, I think we ought, by all means, to be provided with a well-disciplined army, to serve during the war, and that they ought to be raised as soon as possible.

I am glad to hear that our powder mill is ready to be set going. Pray take particular care that the powder is good. A considerable quantity made by one of the mills of this State appears not to have above half the force of good powder, and does not catch quick. The danger from bad powder in an engagement is so great that the Congress have ordered that no powder be sent to the army but such as has been well tried and approved by inspectors appointed for that purpose, and have recommended it to the several Legislatures to appoint inspectors to prove all the powder that is made or imported into their respective States. A copy I will enclose if I can procure one before the post sets off. I will also enclose the orders of Congress concerning wounded and maimed soldiers and seamen.

The affairs at New-York seem at present almost wholly to engross our attention. We have not had the full of the particulars of the action of the 27th ultimo on Long-Island from the General; but by the best accounts we have obtained it appears that our people were decoyed and surrounded by the main body of the enemy, and obliged to fight their way through, or surrender prisoners. It appears there must have been some very great neglect, either in not sending out proper guards and parties to gain intelligence, or they not doing their duty. General Sullivan and Lord Sterling are prisoners, and I believe six hundred or seven hundred others. The consequence has been the evacuation of Long-Island and Governour's Island, of both which the enemy are now in possession—a very unfortunate beginning of the campaign there. However, it is not irreparable, and I hope it will make both officers and soldiers more careful to keep proper guards, and not suffer themselves to be taken by surprise any more.

After writing the above, General Sullivan came to my lodgings in this city, and, by his account, the affair at Long-Island was much as I had heard. He says he has two verbal messages from Lord Howe, which he is on his parole to come to Congress to propose. One is, the exchange of himself and Lord Sterling for Generals Prescott and McDonald; the other is, to propose a meeting of some of the members of Congress, (as private gentlemen, for he can't acknowledge any such body as Congress,) to see if they can't agree on some propositions for an accommodation without further bloodshed; and says he will meet at almost any place for the purpose. These are only verbal messages, and I can easily foresee great difficulties that may arise, let the Congress accept or refuse the proposed conference. What the Congress will do is at present uncertain; but hope they will be directed by the Supreme Disposer of all events to do in this, and every other affair before them, what will be most conducive to the safety and happiness of these American States.

So wishes your friend and most obedient and humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To General Folsom.

MARINE COMMITTEE TO DANIEL TILLINGHAST.

Philadelphia, September 2, 1776.

SIR: The Secret Committee of Congress have directed Mr. Thomas Green, of Providence, in your State, to put into your hands the following articles belonging to the Continent, now in his possession, for which you will please to give him a receipt: 330 bolts of best Holland and Russia duck; 26½ casks of powder; 2 pair four-pound cannon; 3 pair three-pound do.; 4 pair swivels; 3 casks leaden ball; 21 casks twine; 598 pounds saltpetre; 60 pounds brimstone; 470 bushels salt; 50 half-johannes; 1 drum.

You have underneath a copy of a resolve of Congress, of the 30th ult., ordering such part of the above duck as is suitable for tents to be made up and forwarded with all possible expedition to his Excellency General Washington, which we request you will immediately execute; you will hold the rest of the articles ready for the future orders of this Committee, who are, sir, your humble servants.

"In Congress, August 30, 1776.

"Resolved, That the duck in the hands of Mr. Green, at Rhode-Island, be made up into Tents, and forwarded with all possible expedition to General Washington."

Extract from the minutes:

CHAS. THOMSON, Secretary.

PETITION OF MICHAEL FITZGERALD.

[Read September 2, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Congress for the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

The humble address of Michael Fitzgerald humbly sheweth: That your petitioner, from the Kingdom of Ireland, and last from Havre-de-Grace, having been cruelly and unjustly persecuted in his native country by the present enemies of these States, is heartily willing to bear a part in the present glorious struggle against oppression and tyranny; and having served seven years in a military capacity in a foreign kingdom, would request this honourable Board to place him in such a situation as to have it in his power to merit a character among them, and show his talents in the military line, as he did not think it necessary to bring recommendations from his friends, nor would they have countenanced his coming over at such a juncture. Your petitioner, for reasons which most strangers after expensive travelling may readily adduce, would beg to be taken notice of as soon as possible; and he promises, by a strict attention to the duties of his station, to endeavour to merit the esteem of his superiors, and to look for advancement only as his character and conduct may appear to deserve it.

With humility and deference, the petitioner is buoyed with hopes this honourable Board will take his case into their serious consideration, with that expedition that can be allowed an humble volunteer waiting for orders.

COMMITTEE OF READING TO THE COMMITTEE OF LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA.

Reading, September 2, 1776.

SIR: The Committee at Lancaster are requested to permit one Hamilton Hannon, a prisoner there, to come over with Mr. Rose and company to Reading, where his master, Captain Swan, is stationed, as it was by mere accident he happened to be separated from the Captain, who has since been without a servant.

Enclosed there is also a passport for a servant of Captain Anstruther, and his engagement for his good behaviour, agreeable to the order of the War Office. We hope they may both be sent by this opportunity, as their masters are in great want of them. By order of the Committee.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

C. READ, Secretary.

To Mr. William Attlee.

War Office, August 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Please to permit Captain Anstruther's servant, William Brown, a prisoner at Lancaster, to reside with his master at Reading, on his said master sending you an agreement that he will, by every means in his power, prevent the misbehaviour of his servant, either in corresponding with the enemy, or other misconduct as a prisoner, and as soon as he discovers any such misbehaviour, that he will give information thereof to the Committee of the town or place where he resides, that the said servant may be properly secured. Your obedient servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To the Committee of the Borough of Lancaster.

I do hereby promise to endeavour to prevent William Brown, soldier in the Twenty-sixth Regiment, from doing anything unbecoming the station he is in as a prisoner, (while he is in my service,) and to report to the Committee of the town of Reading any impropriety in his conduct that may come within my knowledge. As witness my hand, at Reading, the 13th August,

WM. ANSTRUTHER, Capt., 26th Regiment.

To the Chairman of the Committee of the Borough of Lancaster.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, September 2, 1776.

SIR: As my intelligence of late has been rather unfavourable and would be viewed with anxiety and concern, peculiarly happy should I esteem myself were it in my power at this time to transmit such information to Congress as would be more pleasing and agreeable to their wishes; but unfortunately for me—unfortunately for them, it is not.

Our situation is truly distressing. The check our detachment sustained on the 27th ultimo has dispirited too great a proportion of our troops, and filled their minds with apprehension and despair. The Militia, instead of calling forth their utmost efforts to a brave and manly opposition in order to repair our losses, &c., are dismayed, intractable, and impatient to return. Great numbers of them have gone off, in some instances almost by whole regiments, by half ones, and by companies at a time. This circumstance itself, independent of others, when fronted by a well-appointed enemy, superior in number to our whole collected force, would be sufficiently disagreeable; but when their example has infected another part of the army—when their want of discipline and refusal of almost every kind of restraint and government have produced a like conduct but too common to the whole, and an entire disregard of that order and subordination necessary to the well-doing of an army, and which had been inculcated before as well as the nature of our military establishment would admit of, our condition is still more alarming, and with the deepest concern I am obliged to confess my want of confidence with the generality of the troops. All these circumstances fully confirm the opinion I ever entertained, and which I more than once in my letters took the liberty of mentioning to Congress, that no dependence can be put in a Militia or other troops than those enlisted and embodied for a longer period than our regulations heretofore have prescribed. I am persuaded, and as fully convinced as I am of any one fact that has happened, that our liberties must of necessity be greatly hazarded, if not entirely lost, if their defence is left to any but a permanent standing army. I mean one to exist during the war. Nor would the expense incident to the support of such a body of troops as would be competent almost to every exigency, far exceed that which is daily incurred by calling in succour and new enlistments, and which, when effected, is not attended with any good consequences. Men who have been free, and subject to no control, cannot be reduced to order in an instant, and the privileges and exemptions they claim, and will have, influence the conduct of others, and the aid derived from them is nearly counterbalanced by the disorder, irregularity and confusion they occasion. I cannot find that the bounty of ten dollars is likely to produce the desired effect; when men can get double that sum to engage for a month or two in the Militia, and that Militia frequently called out, it is hardly to be expected. The addition of land might have a considerable influence on a permanent enlistment. Our number of men at present fit for duty, are under twenty thousand. They were so by the last returns and best accounts I could get after the engagement on Long-Island, since which numbers have deserted. I have ordered General Mercer to send the men intended for the Flying Camp to this place, about one thousand in number, and to try with the Militia, if practicable, to make a diversion upon Staten-Island. Till of late, I had no doubt in my own mind of defending this place, nor should I have yet if the men would do their duty; but this I despair of. It is painful and extremely grating to me to give such unfavourable accounts, but it would be criminal to conceal the truth at so critical a juncture. Every power I possess shall be exerted to serve the cause, and my first wish is, that whatever may be the event, the Congress will do me the justice to think so.

If we should be obliged to abandon the town, ought it to stand as winter quarters for the enemy? They would derive great conveniences from it on the one hand, and much property would be destroyed on the other. It is an important question, but will admit of but little time for deliberation. At present I dare say the enemy mean to preserve it if they can. If Congress, therefore, should resolve upon the destruction of it, the resolution should be a profound secret, as the knowledge of it will make a capital change in their plans.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 1, 1776.

(Parole, Hartford.)

(Countersign, Boston.)

It being necessary there should be an arrangement of the troops, in order that they may act with union and firmness, the Army, as brigaded yesterday, is now arranged in three grand divisions, under the following Officers, viz: Major-General Putnam to command the following brigades: Parson's, Scott's, Clinton's, Fellows's, and Silliman's.

The centre divisions, under General Spencer and General Greene, the former to command the whole until General Greene's recovery, viz: Nixon's, Heard's, McDougall's, Wadsworth's, Douglass's, and Chester's.

General Heath's to consist of General Mifflin's brigade and General George Clinton's.

The centre divisions to hold themselves in readiness to march immediately to Harlem, to prevent the enemy's landing on this Island.

Samuel Augustus Barker to act as Major to the brigades under Colonel Douglass, Benjamin Tilmadge Brigade-Major to Colonel Chester.

Colonel Haslett's regiment to march to join General Mifflin, to whose brigade he is to belong.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 2, 1776.

(Parole, Effingham.)

(Countersign, Putnam.)

The General hopes, after the inconveniences that have been complained of, and felt, that the Commanding officers of corps will never in future suffer their men to have less than two days' provisions always upon hand ready for any emergency. If hard bread cannot be had, flour must be drawn, and the men must bake it into bread, or use it otherwise in the most agreeable manner they can. They are to consider that all the last war in America, no soldiers (except those in garrison) were ever furnished with bread ready baked, nor could they get ovens on their march. The same must be done now.

The brigades under General Spencer are still to keep themselves in readiness to march at the shortest notice, but in the mean time are to have regimental and brigade parades assigned them in case of an alarm before they move—these parades not to interfere with any of those in General Putnam's division; to avoid which the officers commanding them are to consult him, and each other, that they may be disposed of to the best advantage.

When regiments march away in future, the officers are to see that the men take their tent-poles in their hands, all their tin camp-kettles, and see the tents tied up carefully and a sufficient guard left to take care of them.

The brigades of General Putnam's division are to furnish fifty men to attend at the Hospital upon Dr. Morgan, to whom their names are to be returned.

COLONEL LEWIS TO GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

New-York, September 2, 1776.

SIR, YOUR HONOUR: I herewith present you with the state of the Militia ordered out under my command to this place, which at present is not so happy as I could wish, by reason of the discipline exercised upon them by the General officers of the Continental establishment.

When I arrived here I went to see his Excellency General Washington, to inform him of my circumstances, how that I had no field officers to assist me in the command of the regiment, &c.; to which he replied, it was hard to take the charge alone, and that I ought to have some assistance. I told his Excellency that I believed I could make it do with a Major, and that if it might be his pleasure I would appoint my oldest Captain, Jonathan Dimon. His Excellency replied, to be sure, I ought to have some assistance; from which I inferred that he acquiesced in it, and I accordingly appointed him. And most of the officers who have command of companies were subalterns in Connecticut, but were obliged to take upon themselves the duty of Captains on account of such officers refusing to come, and being in Continental service. Wherefore they respectively acted in that character, and distinguished themselves as such by cockades; but here it is general orders, that no officer or officers of Militia assume distinctions superior to his or their commissions from their respective Governours. And two gentlemen from Connecticut—one a General, the other a Colonel, in Continental service—recommended it to those officers who had infringed, to pull off their cockades, and not appear on guard in a character above their commissions. So they accordingly have observed this injunction, and requested me to write your Honour to obtain your Honour's opinion, and be governed and determined thereby. I would signify to your Honour these restrictions have caused no small uneasiness, as I am informed, in the Militia in general, but particularly so in the regiment under my command—as at Fairfield, when the regiment was embodied I proceeded to dignify it, and recommended it to officers commanding companies to appoint subalterns to vacancies, and encouraged them that they should retain their offices and reap the advantages thereof; but now their prospects wear other features, and those honours now no more exist. In these circumstances your Honour can view their discontent without my displaying it; indeed they are much dissatisfied with their situation. They reflect upon the encouragement they had before they came away; they represent their circumstances at home; how they left their land unsowed and their harvest ungathered cheerfully for the sake of liberty—but with their liberty they would preserve their honour, which they now think is already degraded; all which I have endeavoured very much to soothe, and they now act in obedience to command without badge or distinction, and wait your Honour's pleasure, which shall be their direction.

In the interim I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
ICHABOD LEWIS.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut, at Lebanon.

P. S. I am at present very unwell and many of the regiment are out of health. We have at present no Doctor, and if I should not recover soon, and should procure a surgeon to come home, I hope your Honour would make no imputation to my disparagement.
I. L.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO
MRS. REED, DATED, NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

I have only time to say I am alive and well; as to spirits, but middling. The justice of our cause, the hope of success, and every other circumstance that can enliven us, must be put into the scale against those of a contrary kind, which I allow to be serious. I hope you will endeavour cheerfully to submit to the dispensations of Providence, whatever they may be. My honour, duty, and every other tie held sacred among men, call upon me to proceed with firmness and resolution; and I trust that neither you nor my children will have reason to be ashamed of my conduct. Walking in this path, I am sure I am right; and having done this, the event must be left to the great Disposer of events. My country will I trust yet be free, whatever may be our fate who are cooped up, or are in danger of being so, on this tongue of land, where we ought never to have been.

GENERAL HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Head-Quarters, Long-Island, September 2, 1776.

MY LORD: As there may probably be another campaign before this rebellion is quelled, I would humbly propose an augmentation of eight hundred men to Colonel Donop's Chasseurs, to be sent from Germany in the Spring. A corps of these troops, consisting of one thousand, would be of infinite service in covering the march of the army, and would prevent much loss and fatigue to the main body, particularly in the present low state of our establishment; and if one hundred dismounted Hussars were sent over from Hesse, with proper accoutrements, to be added to this corps, horses might be procured here, and they would prove very serviceable in all our movements.

I am, &c.,

WM. HOWE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN ENGLISH FIELD-OFFICER,
DATED, CAMP, IN LONG-ISLAND, SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

I have just heard there has been a most dreadful fray in the town of New-York. The New-Englanders insisted upon setting the town on fire and retreating. This was opposed by the New-Yorkers, who were joined by the Pennsylvanians, and a battle has been the consequence, in which many have lost their lives. By the steps the General is taking, I imagine he will effectually cut off their retreat at King's Bridge, by which the Island of New-York is joined to the Continent.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN ENGLISH OFFICER OF THE GUARDS, DATED LONG-ISLAND, SEPTEMBER 2, 1776.

It is very certain that the Rebels do not agree among themselves: That three nights ago there was a good deal of firing in the town of New-York: that the New-Englanders and Pennsylvanians wanted to set fire to the town: that the New-Yorkers opposed it, and that a battle ensued, in consequence of which the New-England and Pennsylvania people had withdrawn themselves; and that this, with other favourable circumstances, gave hopes that this distressful business would be soon brought to a happy issue.

PETITION OF CAPTAIN TOWNSEND'S COMPANY TO THE CON-VENTION OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK.

The Petition of the Lieutenant, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Privates, belonging to Captain Micah Townsend's Company, raised to be under the direction of the Committee of Westchester County, humbly sheweth:

That the honourable the Provincial Congress of this Colony, when they gave instructions for raising Captain Townsend's company, allowed the Lieutenant twelve shillings per week, and the Non-Commissioned Officers and Privates eight shillings each per week, in lieu of rations and subsistence.

That at and near the White-Plains (which is the headquarters of the company) the allowance for their subsistence does not amount to near enough to support them, they being unable to get victuals for less than one shilling per meal, or to hire their board at any tolerable rate but by the week.

That your petitioners entered the company and did duty in the most busy season of the year, before and during harvest time, and have had a harder share of duty than the troops who were allowed by your honourable House twenty dollars bounty and who have generally received near forty dollars.

Your petitioners therefore humbly pray that your honourable House will be pleased to increase the pay for their subsistence so far as to enable them, when they live with frugality, to support themselves by it in the part of the County where they may reside or be ordered. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray, &c.

Resolved, That this Committee recommend to the honourable the Convention of this State, the reasonableness of increasing the subsistence money for Captain Townsend's company, as they are of opinion that eight shillings per week per man is not a sufficient provision for them.

ROCKINGHAM, CUMBERLAND COUNTY, TOWN MEETING.

At a legal and full meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Rockingham, met and assembled at our meeting-house, on the 26th day of August, 1776, and passed the following votes, viz:

First, Voted and chose Major Oliver Lovell Moderator, to govern said meeting.

2dly, Voted, When Dr. Reuben Jones had exhibited the papers in his hand which contained the substance of a petition sent to the honourable Continental Congress, by a number of Delegates of a General Convention, assembled at Dorsett, on the 16th and 17th days of January, 1776;

Also, the extracts of the votes and proceedings of a General Convention, held at Dorsett, on the 24th day of July, 1776, together with an association published by said Convention: The same was taken into consideration, and after deliberation, 3dly, Voted, To associate with the inhabitants of that District of land, commonly called and known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants. Dissentients only two.

4thly, Voted, To send two Delegates to the Convention at Dorsett.

5thly, Voted, And chose Dr. Reuben Jones, and Lieutenant Moses Wright, members to join the Convention at Dorsett, on the 25th day of September next.

6thly, Voted, And chose a committee to make a draught for instructions for the Delegates, and to make report to the town of their instruction.

7thly, Voted, And chose Major Oliver Lovell, Lieutenant Peter Evans, Jun., and Mr. Colborn Preston, to be the committee.

8thly, Voted, And accepted the report of the above committee, which is as follows: The Delegates are to use their best influence in said Convention, that proper measures be taken to get that district of land commonly called and known by the name of the New-Hampshire Grants, formed and incorporated into a separate district or State, and to act on any other thing that shall be thought proper by said Convention met.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
[Read Sept. 16, 1776. Referred to the Committee for Indian Affairs.]
Albany, September 2, 1776.

SIR: The bearers, two gentlemen from Dartmouth College, were referred to me by General Gates; they put into my hands copy of a memorial to Congress from the Rev. Dr. Wheelock, which has not yet been delivered, and requested of me to know if I could take any steps with respect to the Indian boys mentioned in it; if not, they begged my opinion on the subject. I did not hesitate to declare that I thought provision ought to be made for them, but that I did not conceive myself authorized to do it.

I have observed that all the youths of the Six Nations who have been at Mr. Wheelock's school, except one or two under the immediate influence of the Johnson family, are much attached to us in this contest, and I believe that an attention to those now there will be followed by like salutary consequences. In this sentiment it is my duty to recommend to Congress some allowance for those boys.

I have the honour to be, with great respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
Albany, September 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have received a requisition from General Gates for two pounds binding and two pounds large wire, six pounds of emery, and six screw plates, none of which can be procured here or anywhere in this part of the country. Your Excellency will please to order these articles to be sent by the first conveyance.

Yesterday a gentleman from the Committee of this City, waited on me, and advised me that a person who was sent up to purchase boards by the Assistant Quartermaster General, had procured a quantity from a master of a sloop, and had engaged that he should have the advantage of carrying them down in his own vessel, and represented further, that a very considerable time would elapse before they could reach New-York in that way, as there are several sloop loads, and requesting my advice on the occasion. Conceiving that you are in immediate want of the boards, I advised that they should be sent down in any vessels they could procure to carry them. I mention this, lest it should be thought that I had interfered in the Quartermaster General's Department.

I am sorry that Dr. Morgan has put me under the necessity of writing him the enclosed; but as I am resolved not to be insulted by any person worthy of my notice, I could not pass over the false and scandalous assertion in silence. I have met with the most unjust, cruel, and ungenerous treatment.

I have it amply in my power to justify every part of my conduct, and I hope the inquiry which I have entreated Congress to be made into it, will evince to the world how hardly I have been dealt by.

Some of the Captains in Colonel Nicholson's regiment have enlisted so very few men, that I durst not venture to sign warrants for their pay. The excuse they make is, that with the bounty allowed by Congress they could not engage any men, as it was so greatly inferior to what was given to the Militia.

I am, with sentiments of the greatest regard and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Monday, September 2, 1776.

SIR: On Saturday I had the honour to receive your favour of the 22d ultimo, by Mr. Williams; and yesterday, by Mr. Brown, that of the 28th—both of which claim my best thanks. I shall immediately order copies of the transactions of the last treaty to be made out, and if Mr. Williams does not return to-day, I shall beg the favour of him to take charge of them. Mr. Williams will carry with him the money still due to the troops raised in your State, as also the amount of the several accounts enclosed in your letter. The invoices of clothing mentioned in your favour of the 28th, I did not receive: I suppose they were forgot to be enclosed. I shall immediately advise Congress that you have sent the clothing and tents, &c. Some of the swivels at Salisbury are finished, and batteaus go down to-day to bring them from Red-Hook, where they are to be to-morrow. I am happy that your Honour has suggested your fears and sentiments on that ill-timed measure of inoculation, by the troops destined for our army. On the 20th ultimo I despatched the orders to General Waterbury, pointing out what measures he was to take to prevent the infection reaching the army. I have long since written to Congress, begging them to point out the line of duty to be observed by the regimental Paymasters, but have not yet been honoured with an answer. As soon as I am, shall give those their instructions whom you have been pleased to appoint.

If many gentlemen in high offices, who have it not only in their power to be well informed of every part of my conduct, but who are so, and on whom I think it was incumbent to have justified me, were influenced by that candour and ingenuousness, which, whilst it distinguishes you for the goodness of your heart, reflects lustre on your every action, they would not have given ear to the variety of calumny to which I have been exposed, much less would they have countenanced it; in which case I should have looked down with silent contempt on my envious accusers, and bore with patience the unjust animadversions on my conduct, well knowing that the character of every man sustaining a publick office is exposed to them. Last evening we received an account that the enemy had made an attack on our lines on Long-Island, and were repulsed with loss. We wait anxiously for a confirmation of this favourable account. As our cause is just, as we have made use of and are still exerting that power which it has pleased God to afford us, we may have a humble hope that Providence will smile on our endeavours. If it does, may Heaven inspire us with grateful hearts for its mercies, and may no unbecoming, unjust and ungenerous jealousies ever divide the United States. You, sir, and every one that profits by your example, will heartily join in the wish.

I am, sir, with every friendly wish and every respectful sentiment, your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Honourable Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

GENERAL GATES TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ticonderoga, September 2, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have a thousand obligations to you for your attention and care of the army in this department. The Congress have in some instances forgot us; but they are excusable in the vast demand that has been made upon them nearer home. Medicines, which with clothing you are forwarding to us, are articles in the utmost request. How much we are obliged to you for your regard to us, I think my masters will tell you also, they acknowledge that. You make me happy in acquainting me that camp equipage is coming for your regiments. All things conspire to make me believe that America will be free. If it is not, you will have the honour to reflect it is not your fault. The sickness of the carpenters at Skenesborough has delayed our row-galleys, and the misfortune General Waterbury met with in wounding his leg, contributed not a little thereto. All will be well at last. That is all you and I care for, as our boys will reap the fruits of our labour, and we shall die happy in the consolation of having done our utmost for them and for human kind.

I am your much obliged and most obedient humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Governour Trumbull.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL WATERBURY.

Ticonderoga, September 2, 1776.

SIR: This minute the Conductor of Stores waited upon me, to inform me that the rigging, cables, blocks, and everything necessary for the equipment of the row-galleys had arrived last night. I should therefore be glad to have your opinion whether you think (as Skenesborough proves so very sickly) they had not better come down here as they are launched, in order to be rigged; but if, on the contrary, you think you can do it more conveniently and expeditiously with you, you must send the Captains of each boat down for what may be necessary in order to fit them out. Captain Titcomb, when he was last here, recommended himself for the galley he is now building. I acquainted General Arnold therewith, who approves of his being appointed if his health will permit and he is willing to undertake it. I would have him come down with his galley as soon as she is launched and fit to be sent forward.

As it is not my intention to leave more than five hundred men, artificers included, at Skenesborough, after the galleys are finished, I desire you will keep sending forward such as you think useless at that post.

Wynkoop's regiment are all to remain at Skenesborough. If there are any detachments from any other of the New-York regiments, you will order them forthwith to march to Albany to join General Schuyler.

HORATIO GATES.

To General Waterbury.

JOHN TRUMBULL TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, September 2, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I have it in command from the Honourable Major General Gates to transmit you the enclosed returns of the Northern Army. They are nearly correct, except that from Skenesborough, which is too imperfect in the original to be inspected by you. I have, in the general return, collected nearly the true state of the troops at that post.

The returns of the names, rank, &c., of the officers of the corps at this post are likewise enclosed. Irvine's, Dayton's, and the York regiments being at a distance, prevents my sending them.

The artificers at this post, the people on board the fleet, and the two additional companies of Artillery, are returned on command by their respective regiments.

I am, gentlemen, with the highest respect, your most obedient humble servant,

J. TRUMBULL,

D. A. G. Northern Army.

To the Honourable Board of Ordnance and War.

P. S. Since the returns were made up, one regiment from Boston (Whitcomb's) and part of a regiment of Militia have arrived.

JOHN TRUMBULL, D. A. G., TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Ty., September 2, 1776.

HONoured SIR: Last night Brown arrived with yours to the General and me. We are pleased that the tents and clothing are coming.

One Colonel Brown arrived from York to-day with letters from our friends there, giving the same accounts.

The General has just now dispatched an express to Congress. The necessary work, &c., in my department has employed my time so fully that I can only write a line. The General has.

I find there is so much ceremony in the Congress, that I am not to be appointed in this place without a particular recommendation. As my name has been mentioned by General Gates, I have informed my brother at York that I shall ask no further recommendation. I am very willing to retire the moment that my country is desirous of it, or that Congress think that they can better the army by appointing an officer in my place.

You will not be surprised, sir, if you should hear me displaced. An inferior post I shall by no means accept, but either enter in the fleet as a privateer or return home.

I am, honoured sir, your dutiful

JOHN TRUMBULL, D. A. G.

To the Hon. Jonth. Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the Colony of Connecticut.

GENERAL ST. CLAIR TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Camp at Ticonderoga, September 2, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 10th of August, enclosing my commission as Brigadier-General, and return you thanks for the trouble you took to transmit it.

I am extremely sensible of the honour conferred upon me by the appointment, and it shall be my study to convince Congress they have not misplaced their confidence.

My most respectful compliments wait upon Mrs. Hancock; and I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,

AR. ST. CLAIR.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the most honourable the Continental Congress, and Major-General of the Forces in the service of the United States of America.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown Point, Monday evening, September 2, 1776.

HONoured SIR: I have just now got a good saddle of venison, and send it you by the bearer. I hope it will afford you an agreeable dinner to-morrow. I have taken the advantage of the night to forward it to you.

The party you said you would send to cover the oar-cutters are not yet arrived. The men who went there are only to bring away some irons, &c., by direction of Major Hay.

By sending the party down the Lake with Major Grier, in order to go on with our works, I have all my healthy men on guard and fatigue. I wish the party were sent to Raymond's Mill immediately. What is very strange, General Arnold was within ten miles of this, yesterday afternoon. He then proceeded down the Lake. My men, with Major Grier, will go further, in order, if possible, to bring some more material account from the fleet. I am, sir, your most obedient humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, September 2, 1776.

SIR: Since my last of the 31st ultimo, have resolved to throw over upon Long-Island a thousand or fifteen hundred troops, and the necessary orders are accordingly gone forth, and expect the same will be immediately effected. Have likewise wrote to Governour Cooke to afford what assistance in his power for the same purpose. Thought it expedient to give your Excellency the earliest intimation of this movement, that you might be able to direct in what manner they may best coöperate with the other troops in serving the general cause, and frustrating the intentions of our enemies upon that Island.

As we have various accounts, but no certain intelligence, respecting the situation of our armies, we are anxious to learn the particulars.

We remain, sir, with the highest esteem and regard, your most obedient humble servant,
JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To his Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States of America, New-York.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO THE COUNCIL OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Lebanon, September 2, 1776.

SIR: Beg leave to recommend to your notice and attention the purport of the within application, and would wish and desire that the exchange might be effected; and doubt not, if can be consistently done, you'll give the bearer, Mr. Samuel Redfield, all the assistance and direction that may be needful for said purpose.

I am, with great truth and regard, sir, your obedient humble servant,
JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. President of the State of Massachusetts Bay.

Killingsworth, September 1, 1776.

These wait on your Honours, by Mr. Samuel Redfield, to inform that Messrs. Daniel Redfield and Philip Stevens, joint-owners of a small coasting vessel, on their return from New-York, (where they had been in order for the transportation of some of our troops,) early on Monday morning last fell in with, and were taken by, the men of war in the Sound of Branford, who took them on board, and burnt their vessel. After detaining Mr. Redfield until Wednesday evening, five o'clock, he was suffered to come on shore, and is arrived home, and says that Mr. Stevens is still detained on board, and that he had the promise he should be exchanged for either of the men mentioned in the enclosed paper.

Mr. Redfield now waits on you for your direction and influence to procure one of the within-named persons for that purpose.

We need not add on this head, to induce your Honour to effect so benevolent a purpose, but only to say he is descended from one of the first families in this town—that he is a son of one of the deacons of this church, and has an aged father and several small children, whose support depends on his industry.

We are, may it please your Honour, with great esteem, your most obedient and most humble servants,

ELNATHAN STEVENS, Justice of the Peace.

AARON ELIOT, Justice of the Peace.

THEOPS. MORGAN.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 2, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Jedh. Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benj. Huntington, Esquires.

On intelligence received by Colonel Marsh, from New-York, that our troops have withdrawn from the Islands near New-York, and are about to make a stand at some more convenient place, his Honour the Governour sent orders to Colonel Erastus Wolcott, at New-London, not to embark for Long-Island until further orders.

Colonel Jedediah Elderkin exhibited his account of several journeys to New-London and Salisbury, on service of this State, on which a balance appears to be due to him of £12 19s. 5d.; which is allowed, and voted to draw on the Pay-Table for the said sum of £12 19s. 5d., in favour of said Colonel Elderkin, in balance of the above sum. Order delivered Colonel Elderkin, September 2, 1776.

Colonel Jedediah Elderkin exhibited an account of his son, Mr. Bela Elderkin, of £6 12s. 8d., for service done in setting the furnace at Salisbury to work; which is allowed, and voted to draw on the Pay-Table for the above sum of £6 12s. 8d., in favour of Bela Elderkin, in full of said account. Order delivered Colonel Elderkin, September 2, 1776.

Copy of the above votes given Colonel Elderkin, September 4, 1776.

PETITION OF JOSEPH HUTCHINSON AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Governour and Council of the State of CONNECTICUT:

The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the County of Windham, to your Honours, beg leave humbly to show and represent, that in your petitioners' opinion the office of High-Sheriff of a County is at all times an office of importance to the State and to individuals in the respective Counties, and ought at all times to be lodged in the hands of men of responsibility, and such as are known and approved friends to the State, whereby conspiracies against the State will be suppressed, the publick tranquillity preserved, and justice duly administered in the execution of wholesome, approved laws of the land, and fraud prevented. Being possessed of such principles, we cannot consistent with our duty sit still at this alarming crisis, when every right, liberty, privilege, and immunity of the people of this and the rest of the United States of America are invaded, without remonstrating to your Honours against your Honours' any longer continuing in office the present High-Sheriff of the said County of Windham. We would, therefore, inform and make known to your Honours that Eleazer Fitch, Jun., Esq., of Windham, the present High-Sheriff of the County of Windham, is really unfriendly and inimical to the liberties and privileges belonging to, and claimed by, the American United States, and the measures they are pursuing in order to secure themselves in their just rights and privileges, and that he is really friendly to our enemies, in that the said Fitch hath and doth frequently associate with the Continental prisoners now in Windham County Jail, to their great encouragement, and also with other persons inimical to this and the United States, and with such persons only, and also treats with derision, and endeavours to discourage every preparation of the good people of this State for their own preservation, and by the whole of his conduct hath shown himself averse to the success of the American arms. We therefore beg leave to say to your Honours, that we look upon the said Fitch totally unfit any longer to sustain the office of High-Sheriff of said Windham County. We beg leave, further, to observe to your Honours, that for some years last past the said Sheriff Fitch has greatly neglected the duties of his said office, whereby many creditors have been, and now are, delayed in recovering their just dues. Executions against him, the said Fitch, issued on judgments obtained for his, or his Deputies', default in said office, have been frequently returned (non est inventus) by proper returning officers—his body being exempted from imprisonment in said County on account of his being Sheriff of said County. Whereupon your petitioners most humbly pray your Honours to take the matters aforesaid into your wise consideration, and remove the said Fitch from said office of Sheriff of said County, and appoint some suitable person of responsibility who is a known friend to this and the other American States, and a friend to the publick peace of this County, whereby the great and important purposes of said office may be accomplished, and the minds of the people of this County and State be quieted. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Dated at Windham, in Windham County, September 3, A. D. 1776.

The evidences to support the first part of the foregoing complaint, are: Nathan Hebard and Mary, his wife; Asahel Sawyer, John Dingley, Richard Howard, Lydia Phillips, Resolved Wheeler, all of Windham aforesaid; and Jerusha Frink.

With respect to the last part, Mr. Elkanah Tisdale, of Lebanon, in said County; Captain Jabez Huntington, of said Windham; the records of the Supreme and County Courts for Windham County; Sam'l Gray, Nath'l Wales,

Jun., and Hezekiah Bissell, all of Windham; and Nathan Frink, Esq., of Pomfret, in said County.

PETITION OF WILLIAM DURKEE AND OTHERS.

To the Honourable the Governour and Council of the State of CONNECTICUT:

The petition of the subscribers, inhabitants of the County of Windham, to your Honours, beg leave humbly to show and represent, that in your petitioners' opinion the office of High-Sheriff of a County is at all times an office of importance to the State and to individuals in the respective Counties, and ought at all times to be lodged in the hands of men of responsibility and such as are known and approved friends to the State, whereby conspiracies against the State will be suppressed, the publick tranquillity preserved, and justice duly administered in the execution of the wholesome, approved laws of the land, and frauds prevented. Being possessed of such principles, we cannot, consistent with our duty, sit still at this alarming crisis, when every right, liberty, privilege, and immunity of the people of this and the rest of the United States of America are invaded, without remonstrating to your Honours against your Honours' any longer continuing in office the present High-Sheriff of the said County of Windham. We would, therefore, inform and make known to your Honours, that Eleazer Fitch, Jun., Esq., of Windham, the present High-Sheriff of the County of Windham, is really unfriendly and inimical to the liberties and privileges belonging to, and claimed by, the American United States, and the measures they are pursuing in order to secure themselves in their just rights and privileges, and that he is really friendly to our enemies, in that the said Fitch hath and doth frequently associate with the Continental prisoners now in Windham County Jail, to their great encouragement, and also with other persons inimical to this and the United States, and with such persons only, and also treats with derision, and endeavours to discourage, every preparation of the good people of this State for their own preservation, and by the whole of his conduct hath shown himself averse to the success of the American arms. We therefore beg leave to say to your Honours, that we look upon said Fitch totally unfit any longer to sustain the office of High-Sheriff of said Windham County. We beg leave, further, to observe to your Honours, that for some years last past the said Sheriff Fitch has greatly neglected the duties of his said office, whereby many creditors have been, and now are, delayed in recovering their just dues. Executions against him, said Fitch, issued on judgments obtained for his, and his Deputies', default in said office, have been frequently returned (non est inventus) by proper returning officers—his body being exempted from imprisonment in said County on account of his being Sheriff of said County. Whereupon your petitioners most humbly pray your Honours to take the matters aforesaid into your wise consideration, and remove the said Fitch from said office of Sheriff of said County, and appoint some suitable person of responsibility who is a known friend to this and the other American States, and a friend to the publick peace of this County, whereby the great and important purposes of said office may be accomplished, and the minds of the people of this County and State quieted. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

Dated at Windham, in Windham County, September 3, A. D. 1776.

The evidences to support the first part of the foregoing complaint are: Nathaniel Hebbard and Mary, his wife; Asael Sawyer, John Dingley, Richard Howard, Lydia Phillips, Resolved Wheeler, all of Windham aforesaid; and Jerusha Frink.

With respect to the last part, Mr. Elkanah Tisdale, of Lebanon, in said County; Captain Jabez Huntington, of said Windham; the records of the Supreme and County Courts for Windham County; Sam'l Gray, Nath'l Wales, and Hezekiah Bissell, all of Windham; and Nathan Frink, Esq., of Pomfret, in said County.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, September 2, 1776.

SIR: I am ordered by the Marine Committee to get the valuation of the stores that I brought from New-Providance, and as part of them was sent to New-York by your order, should be glad you would order Mr. Knox or some other of your officers to put a value on them, and order them to transmit such valuation to me as soon as convenient.

Sir, should be extremely obliged to you, if you have settled a cartel with Admiral or General Howe, if you would endeavour to get one Mr. Henry Hawkins, who was taken out of the sloop L'Aimable Marie, Peter Donville master, the 20th May last, off Shrewsbury Inlet, near Sandy Hook, and I believe is now on board the Phoenix, and I hear acts as a common hand. He is a young man and a near kinsman of mine, and his father and mother are very anxious to get him exchanged. I can send a prisoner of almost any rank that may be required for him.

Your assistance in this matter will very much oblige, sir, your most humble servant,

E. HOPKINS.

To his Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the American Army, at New-York.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO CAPTAIN JOSIAH.

Providence, September 2, 1776.

SIR: I received your letter yesterday; have inquired, and find Mr. Charles Elder is now at North-Hampton—make no doubt but shall be able to procure him as soon as Captain Symonds has leave to exchange you. Please to let me know by a line, and I will send immediately for him, and send him to Block-Island, if Captain Symonds gives his word a boat may come safe. There is a number of officers prisoners now in this Government. If there are any more men on board than belonged to the Continental fleet, should be glad to exchange them.

I have applied to Congress, and they have given General Washington directions to get you exchanged, if in his power, with Admiral Howe.

I am your friend,

E. HOPKINS.

To Mr. James Josiah, on board the ship Cerberus, off Block-Island.

ISAAC LATHROP TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Plymouth, September 2, 1776.

SIR: I am interested in a furnace which is now preparing for a blast and will be soon ready to go, and should be glad to furnish the Colony with shot or anything else in that way. You may remember I mentioned it to you some time since. As I don't expect to be at Watertown soon, I should be obliged to you to let me know by the way of Colonel Warren what quantity you may want, the sizes, &c., and you may depend on being as well served as at any works in the Colony. As I have never had an opportunity of supplying the Colony with any kind of warlike or other stores, and have spent my time and almost everything else in the common cause, I think I have an undoubted right to be favoured in this instance in preference to many others.

Your answer as above, by the first opportunity, will much oblige your friend and humble servant,

ISAAC LATHROP.

To Richard Devens, Esq.

ELNATHAN BATES TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Weymouth, September 2, 1776.

SIR: I received £47 by Mr. Cotton Tuffts, the 23d of August, and I would be glad if you would send the remainder of the account I sent relating to the nine-pounders; the further sum of £11 2d. I wrote for under the account, I expected to be part towards paying for the forty-two pounders. The iron I have sent for, and expect the cannon will be conveyed to Hull. The small-pox prevents my coming to Boston myself, but Dr. Tuffts can give you an account of the affair relating to the guns I have stocked, and those stocks I have prepared for the forty-two-pounders.

I have not been to the Castle yet, but desired Colonel Lovett to inquire of Colonel Burbeck with respect to what guns had no stocks prepared.

I am your humble servant,
To Commissary-General, Mr. Richard Devens, Boston.

P. S. SIR: Send what money you can by Cotton Tuffts, Esq., and make me accountable for the same.

ELNATHAN BATES.

Received £15 by virtue of the above order, for which I have given a receipt of September 10, 1776, for the same.

COTTON TUFFTS.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

In Council, September 2, 1776.

Whereas, by a resolve passed by the General Court the 29th April last, the officers of vessels in the Colony sea service were allowed to enlist men out of the companies raised for the defence of the sea-coasts, and the officers of the said companies were thereby directed to permit any of their men to enlist into the Colony and Continental sea service only, and to enlist others to supply vacancies occasioned thereby as soon as may be:

And whereas such liberty or allowance, which was then given to the officers of vessels in the Colonial and Continental service, has been found to be very detrimental, having weakened and very much exposed to the enemy many of our harbours and towns on the sea-coast; and many of the officers of the sea-coast companies, after much expense of time and money to raise their companies, have had their men taken from them, to their great loss and damage, and thereby been discouraged from further recruiting; and some parts of the sea-coasts may, if this practice is allowed, be left destitute of all defence, and thereby become a harbour for our enemies, which would not only further distress our trade, but involve us in many other difficulties:

Therefore, Resolved, That the aforesaid resolve of the 29th of April be, and is hereby discontinued, and made null and void.

Sent down for concurrence.

COMMITTEE OF THE TOWN OF PITTSFIELD.

MR. WATSON: The cause of justice obliges us the Committee of the Town of Pittsfield, in conjunction with said Town, to desire you to give the following Declaration and Resolves a place in your publick paper, in order that the publick may not be misled by an enemy.

As every man's principles are best known by their conduct, so it appears that Captain Charles Goodrich, who was advertised by the Committee of Safety in September 2, 1776, in order to exculpate himself from the charge of being an enemy to his country, has endeavoured to turn the charge of inimical conduct on the Committee, and has carried his unlimited satire even against the Council of the State of the Massachusetts Bay. He tells the publick in September 16, 1776, that the Council had judged him to be a friend to his country, and condemned the Committee as being entirely ignorant of the line of their duty, and guilty of great indecency towards the constitutional authority of this State. If there was any such resolve, it must be judging ex parte; for the Committee were neither cited nor called upon by the Council, nor anybody else, to answer for their conduct; so that it appears said Goodrich has represented the Council to be the most partial, arbitrary body of men that ever existed, not giving the Committee the privilege of a hearing or any trial in the case. In this light said Goodrich has set forth the constitutional authority of this State, as he calls it. But that there is no such constitutional authority in this State, is evident, for in September, 1776, the House of Representatives have sent out their handbills to each Town in this State, to see if they would give leave to the present House to form the model of a new Constitution, and whether they, the people, choose to have it sent abroad to the people at large to be inspected before its ratification; by all which it appears said Goodrich has set the honourable Council in the most odious and contemptible light possible. If any should be so bold as to say we have a Constitution, we ask what is it? We never had but one Constitution, which was that of our charter, which we have some time ago rejected, and now we are to seek for another.

The Committee being thus injuriously treated, referred the matter to the Town, to whom they are responsible, who have taken the matter into hand, and passed the following resolves:

First, The question being put whether the Town will adopt the above Declaration? Voted in the affirmative.

Second, The question being put whether the Town is satisfied respecting the facts charged against Captain Charles Goodrich in an advertisement bearing date September 2, 1776, and whether the Town will justify the Committee in publishing said Goodrich? Voted in the affirmative.

Third, The question being put whether Captain Charles Goodrich has acted as an enemy to the union of the people and the cause of justice, in publishing the Committee in an advertisement bearing date September 16, 1776? Voted in the affirmative.

Fourth, The question being put whether the Town will order the above Declaration and Resolves to be published in the Connecticut Courant, for the restoration of the character of their Committee? Voted in the affirmative.

By order of the Town of Pittsfield.ELI ROOT, Moderator.A true copy: ISRAEL DICKENSON, Town-Clerk.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAPTAIN DENNISON, OF THE EXPEDITION TRANSPORT, DATED HALIFAX, SEPT. 2, 1776.

Being commissioned by Lord Howe, after our arrival at Sandy-Hook with the fleet under his command, to return to Halifax with instructions for Governour Arbuthnot, and with directions for all those vessels that should arrive at Halifax to proceed immediately to the northward, I sailed on the voyage without interruption until we arrived in latitude 44°, when two American privateers bore down upon us, leaving a large brig astern of them, which we afterwards found was a prize they had taken the day before, being a transport from Cork, called the James, Captain O'Reilly, laden with provisions for the British troops. As we mounted eight guns, I ordered the vessel to be laid to, and everything prepared for the engagement, which continued for about one glass, when the smallest privateer struck to us, and the other sheered off with her prize. The vessel we took carried eight guns, and was called the Adventurer, Captain Bronson; the other was called the Defiance, of eight guns, Captain Morris, of the same port. We brought our prize safe into this port, where she has been condemned and sold, the men sharing near twelve pounds sterling each.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON, BY THE NEW-YORK MAIL, DATED SEPTEMBER 2, 1776,

As the General's letter will doubtless be made publick at full length, I shall not trouble you with any account of the action, but only with my opinion of things at present, which indeed wear a very favourable aspect. I must inform you then, that half the number the Provincials were would have put them to the rout. I was with the Light Infantry, and therefore can give a tolerable account of their behaviour. Many of them fired their pieces and run, and numberless others, I believe, never saw which way they did fire, for when they discharged, both eyes were shut. Could we have trusted our spies' accounts, a terrible slaughter might have been made; but the General appears throughout his whole conduct to have been very wary, and perhaps to that wariness we owe our present conquest. By the prisoners and some deserters, we learn that there are near four thousand now sick in New-York, and the people of that city heartily tired of the war. The inhabitants of Long-Island and the Provinces of Jersey, are indeed a good sort of people, and appear to be very industrious, and I am apt to believe have no great stomach to the present war. An attack is certainly intended against New-York, and the east end, the place thought the weakest and least defensible. I suppose the General will not give them time to breathe, but push his successes like a winning gamester. I saw poor Captain Logan interred, who commanded in the Marines: he was a brave man and a good officer—the corps will miss him. The troops we left behind on Staten-Isle have been reinforced, in case any attempt should be made from the Jerseys. Provisions are plenty, except fresh meat, which, however, we have now and then, as often as it can possibly be procured for us. We are a noble fleet and army, able to attack almost any thing, and have very few sick.

JAMES LLOYD CHAMBERLAINE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Talbot County, September 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your order I have this day engaged Sergeant Bannen with a guard of eight men to take charge of the publick magazine in this County, and hope for your order on our Paymaster to furnish him with one shilling per man for each day's sustenance, and with such pay as is due to the Militia, when in actual service, at the expiration of each month.

I am very respectfully, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servant,

JAMES LLOYD CHAMBERLAINE.

To the Hon. the President of the Council of Safety.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, September 3, 1776.

SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose you sundry resolves, by which you will perceive that Congress having taken your letter of the 2d instant into consideration, came to a resolution in a Committee of the whole House, that no damage should be done to the City of New-York.

I have sent expresses to order the battalions up to Head-Quarters agreeably to the resolves herewith transmitted; and likewise to the several States to the northward of Virginia, to send all the aid in their power to the army.

I have the honour to be with perfect esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To his Excellency General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL LEWIS.

Philadelphia, September 3, 1776.

SIR: The Congress having just received information from General Washington of the very great and superior strength of the enemy, and being convinced that they are determined to bend all their force against New-York, in order if possible to penetrate into that and the neighbouring States, have judged it absolutely necessary to augment our troops in that quarter. I have it in command, therefore, to direct that immediately on receipt hereof, you order three more Continental battalions to march from Virginia to reinforce the army at New-York.

The critical state of our affairs will not admit the least delay in executing this order. Suffer me, therefore, to press you to the greatest expedition, with that earnestness so naturally suggested by the importance of the cause, although I doubt not your own ardour would be a sufficient stimulus, when called on by the voice of Liberty and your Country.

I am, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Lewis, Virginia, three battalions.

[General Moore, North-Carolina, two battalions; Commanding Officer of Continental Troops in Rhode-Island, one battalion.]

In Congress, September 3, 1776.

Resolved, That three more Battalions be ordered from Virginia to reinforce the Army at New-York.

That two of the North-Carolina Battalions be ordered to march with all possible expedition under the command of Brigadier General Moore, to reinforce the Army at New-York.

That it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of the several States to the northward of Virginia, immediately to send all the aid in their power to the Army at New-York.

That one of the Continental battalions in Rhode-Island be ordered immediately to march to reinforce the Army in New-York.

That it be recommended to the Assembly of Massachusetts to send to Rhode-Island a battalion of their Militia to supply the place of the Continental Battalion ordered from thence.

By order of Congress: JOHN HANCOCK, President.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO THE ASSEMBLY OF NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Philadelphia, September 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Our enemies being determined to make a powerful attack on New-York and the States adjoining thereto, and having for this purpose collected their whole force from every part of the continent, it is incumbent on the United States of America to take the most effectual measures to defeat this deep laid scheme against their country.

The Congress have just received information from General Washington of the very great and superiour strength of the enemy, and if we consider the recent change in the situation of our affairs at New-York, we shall soon be convinced that nothing will prove an adequate remedy in our present circumstances but the most vigorous exertions on our part. I am, therefore, by order of Congress, to request you will immediately send all the aid in your power to our army at New-York.

The state of our affairs is so extremely critical that delay may be attended with fatal consequences. Suffer me, therefore, to press you, in the name and by the authority of your country, to an immediate compliance, and with all the earnestness so naturally suggested by the importance of the cause; although I doubt not your own ardor would be a sufficient stimulus when called on by the voice of Liberty, yet my anxiety is so great I cannot refrain on the present occasion from beseeching you to exert yourselves. Everything is at stake. Our religion, our liberty, the peace and happiness of posterity, are the grand objects in dispute, which, that we may be able to preserve and transmit to future generations, is the constant and uninterrupted wish of,

Gentlemen, your most obedient and very humble servant,

J. HANCOCK, President.

To Assembly of New-Hampshire.

[Same to Assembly of Massachusetts Bay, Assembly of Connecticut, Assembly of Rhode-Island, Convention of Pennsylvania, Convention of Delaware Government, Convention of Maryland.]

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

Philadelphia, September 3, 1776.

DEAR SIR: By that time this reaches you I expect you will be near ready to set out on your return to this city. Make all convenient haste. The Congress is, at this time, very thin. Colonel Lee is arrived here, but several others have taken leave of absence, among them Mr. Jefferson and Mr. Haywood. The unhappy affair of the 27th, on Long-Island, has occasioned the evacuation of our works there and on Governour's Island. Our people were ensnared, and, what vexes me, in a very careless manner.

Yesterday General Sullivan arrived at my lodgings, being on his parole. He says he has a verbal message to Congress, to propose himself and Lord Sterling in exchange for Generals Prescott and McDonald. He also says that Lord Howe expressed himself very desirous of an accommodation with America, without any more bloodshed—that he was very willing to meet, at almost any place, a number of the members of Congress, (as private gentlemen, for he could not own any such body as Congress,) to try if they could make any proposals for an accommodation; that he said he had waited near two months longer in England than he should have otherwise done, to procure proper powers for a final accommodation, with which he said he was now vested, &c., and he allowed General Sullivan to come here to propose the aforesaid conference to Congress. What will be done in the affair by Congress I know not, but think there are difficulties on both sides. If the Congress should accept of the proposed conference, only on a verbal message, when at the same time Lord Howe declares he can consider them only as private gentlemen, especially when we are certain he can have no power to grant any terms we can possibly accept, this, I fear, will lessen the Congress in the eye of the publick, and perhaps at this time intimidate people when they see us catching hold of so slender a thread to bring about a settlement. On the other hand, General Sullivan's arrival from Lord Howe with proposals of an accommodation, with thirty falsehoods in addition, are now spread over this city, and will soon be over the Continent; and if we should refuse the conference, I fear the Tories, and moderate men, so called, will try to represent the Congress as obstinate, and so desirous of war and bloodshed that we would not so much as hear the proposals Lord Howe had to make, which they will represent (as they already do) to be highly advantageous for America,—even that he would consent that we should be independent provided we would grant some advantages as to trade. Such an idea, spread among the people, especially the soldiers, at this time, might be of the most fatal consequence. Whatever is done by Congress in the affair will, I hope, be ordered for the benefit of America.

William Barrell died on Sunday morning and was buried last evening.

I am, sir, your friend and most obedient,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

PETITION OF JEREMIAH HALSEY.

[Read September 5, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Continental Congress:

The Petition of Jeremiah Halsey humbly sheweth: That in the month of May, A. D. 1775, your petitioner was by the honourable General Assembly of the Colony of Connecticut legally appointed and commissioned a Lieutenant in Captain Edward Mott's company, in Colonel Parsons' regiment, and said company being ordered to join the army in the Northern Department, your petitioner joined said army and faithfully served through the tedious campaign at the siege of St. John's as an assistant engineer, and faithfully served through the whole siege until after the taking of that important fortress, when soon after your petitioner was taken sick of the camp disorder and a bad cough and a slow fever, and thereby not able to perform his duty and business, and the commander of St. John's being ordered by the General (who was then at Montreal) to send all the sick from St. John's to Ticonderoga, under the care of proper officers, and in pursuance of said orders Captain Cooke, the commander at St. Johns, ordered your petitioner to take a batteau and a number of sick and prisoners, and transport them across Lake Champlain to Ticonderoga, and there to make report to his Honour Major-General Schuyler, which your petitioner did, and delivered the prisoners to the proper guards, according to General Schuyler's orders—the time your petitioner left St. John's being but two days before General Montgomery discharged the whole of the Connecticut troops; and when your petitioner arrived at Ticonderoga he was then sent by General Schuyler express to his Honour Governor Trumbull, on his return home; before his arrival the time for which your petitioner was engaged expired, and after your petitioner came away some evil-minded person falsely and wickedly informed General Montgomery, being then at Montreal, that your petitioner had deserted said service and returned without orders, and thereupon the General, very justly as matters were represented to him, desired that the scandalous and atrocious crime might be punished with severity for a publick example; and upon which information being transmitted by General Schuyler this honourable Congress on the 9th day of January last resolved that said conduct of your petitioner should be inquired into by a Court-Martial, and thereupon ordered General Schuyler to appoint a Court-Martial for that purpose, of which complaint and resolution your petitioner to his surprise had been informed by a letter wrote by General Schuyler, so that your petitioner by the false representation made to General Montgomery, is wholly deprived of seven months' wages as a Lieutenant, and also of his wages as an assistant engineer from the 22d September to the 14th November, being £11 4s. lawful money, and also injured in his publick character as an officer, and thereby prevented of doing that publick service for his country in this critical day, and in the defence of all that is dear to mankind, which your petitioner being determined to defend his injured country until all tyranny shall be subdued or perish in its ruins: He therefore humbly prays your Honours that as said charge is founded wholly upon mistake, as your petitioner is clearly able to evince by the orders given him, which he religiously observed, as will appear, and as General Schuyler hath not ordered a Court-Martial your petitioner is very loth to have a publick censure appear against him in the records of this honourable Congress founded wholly upon mistake, and thereupon prays that your Honours would appoint a committee to examine and inspect his papers and orders, which may be done in a few minutes and clearly show the mistake, and that the aforesaid resolution of Congress of the 9th of January last may be revoked or countermanded, as no Court-Martial has been called; and order the wages of your petitioner to be paid, or in some other way grant proper relief to your petitioner as your Honours in your great wisdom shall think just. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

Dated at Philadelphia the 3d day of September, 1776.

JEREMIAH HALSEY.

COLONEL JOSEPH WOOD TO BRIGADIER GENERAL ARTHUR ST. CLAIR.

Philadelphia, September 3, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I this moment received yours of the 3d instant, and return you many thanks for your kind concern for my health, which I am sorry to say is not so well as I could wish or expect, considering the length of time, from so small a wound; but one reason is, I can't get quit of the fever. Two or three days I seem perfectly well—after that comes on an inflammation in my leg, which spreads all over it—then I am forced to keep my bed five or six days, and bathe and poultice; and so I go on. God knows when I shall have the pleasure of seeing you. I long to be with you. I intend setting off next week, sick or well, making all the haste my health will permit. I am more easy that I have two such field officers as Craig and Butler; their commissions I have got, and shall bring them with me. I hope they will do all—hope did I say?—I am certain they will do everything possible for the good of the regiment. I have not seen my little favourite, so have heard no melody; nor have I seen your lovely partner—the two dear nymphs are out of town. At Ticonderoga how agreeable would they be. I am in doubt about our army at New-York. A letter from an officer of rank, this day, says they are in want of ten thousand men—if so, the Lord have mercy on them. All the Militia going and returning with such speed smells strong of cowardice, and dispirits the troops. I dined yesterday with five or six of the Congress. They think a few days will decide the matter one way or the other. It may for us, but not for the enemy; they can retreat to their lines. You must know before this we have given up New-York, and must do what they wish for—fight them in the open field. You know, sir, how we are provided for that. Some of our men are brave—must be—to make a stand against double their numbers, and six times better armed. We can only hope that God will fight our battles as in old times—but I'll say no more.

Mr. Willson, with his lady, went for Carlisle to-day. He desired me to give his best compliments to you, and when he returns will send you a letter a mile long to make up for the short ones or the very few he has wrote you.

God bless you. All the family join in their good wishes for your prosperity in every shape, but none more so than, dear sir, your affectionate friend and very humble servant,

JOS. WOOD.

My compliments to Colonel Craig and Major Butler and all friends.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

New-York, September 3, 1776.

DEAR SIR: From the present complexion of our affairs, it appears to me of the utmost importance, and that the most salutary consequences may result from our having a strong encampment at the post on the Jersey side of the North River, opposite to Mount Washington, on this Island. I therefore think it advisable and highly necessary that you detach such a force from Amboy and its dependencies, under the command of an officer of note, authority, and influence, with a skilful engineer, to lay out such additional works as may be judged essential and proper, and the situation of the ground will admit of. They should be begun and carried on with all possible diligence and despatch.

It will be proper that a considerable quantity of provision should be collected for the maintenance and support of the camp; and for this purpose I wish you to have proper measures adopted to procure it, and have it deposited there, and at places of security not far distant.

As the Continental officers now at this post will take rank, and the command probably, of any you may send, unless he should be a general officer, I think and wish, if you have one that possibly can be spared, and in whose judgment, activity, and fortitude you can rely, that he may be appointed to the command, rather than an officer of inferior rank.

I am, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Mercer, New-Jersey.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL MOYLAN.

New-York, September 3, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you will receive an extract of a letter of the 29th ultimo, from General Schuyler to his Excellency, which he directed me to transmit you, that you may be informed of what the Committee at Albany say and have done respecting the boards Mr. Hughes wrote to them for. His Excellency desires that you will take measures, not only for getting those they have sent to Peekskill down to King's Bridge, or some place near it, but also that you will exert yourself to have a pretty considerable quantity provided, as many will be wanted, in all probability, to shelter the troops that may be stationed there and at the posts about it.

I am, &c.,

R. H. HARRISON.

To Colonel Stephen Moylan, Quartermaster-General.

WILLIAM PALFREY TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, September 3, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: As the books, papers, &c., belonging to my office are of importance to the publick, as well as to myself, I have taken the freedom to send them to your quarters, requesting the favour of you to give them house-room for a little while. As I expect a large sum of money, by the way of Dobbs's Ferry, soon, the General has directed me to deposit it somewhere in your neighbourhood. If it is agreeable to you, and you have room to spare, I should be extremely happy that we may mess together.

I am most respectfully, sir, your obedient humble servant,

WM. PALFREY.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath, near King's Bridge.

COLONEL MOYLAN TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-York, September 3, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Major Bacon, the superintendent of the smiths, will deliver you this. The General has ordered the tools and necessities belonging to his department to some place of security from the enemy, and at some time, as convenient as the nature of our situation will admit of, to your encampment. He is to consult with you, and take your orders hereon. Give him every assistance you can. It will oblige, dear General, your assured friend and very humble servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To Major-General Heath, King's Bridge.

REPORT OF COL. RUFUS PUTNAM TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Bloomington, September 3, 1776.

SIR: According to your Excellency's order, I have reconnoitered every part about the Island of New-York and the main, as far as Frog's Point, and, on a full view, find the enemy have such a variety of places to choose out of, that it's impossible to prevent their landing when they please. They have such guides and intelligence of our movements that they can always avoid or surprise any parties that are posted to oppose their landing. Their army is so numerous that they can attack any division of our army with a superior force; and yet, while our army is extended from New-York to King's Bridge, 'tis necessary to have a body of reserve at this place. But I cannot think it would be best, nor have we time, to make fortifications; since the moment any quarter is attacked, the whole body of reserve, I conclude, will be ordered to support it. I should advise the throwing obstructions in the way of landing. That they have one week's provisions always with them, and teams ready to carry their baggage wherever the service requires.

I mentioned to your Excellency that I thought your army should be collected together in some advantageous place, where supplies might be had, and a camp fortified in such a manner as the enemy dare not attack, or, if they did, must be repulsed; and I think so still, if it be possible to effect it. And to defend the passage of the North River, which I take to be the capital object, and at the same time keep open a communication with the Eastern and Southern Colonies, is to press the army from Bundet landing, on the Jersey shore—Mount Washington and the Heights, south as far as Colonel Thompson's house, on Harlem River—the Heights we now possess at King's Bridge, and as far south as the Three Trees. The batteries on the Jersey side to be filled with guns; the battery on the rocks below Mount Washington completed; a new one built below the hill opposite the sunken vessels. These, well filled with guns and ammunition, if the galleys also afforded their assistance, would render it very difficult for ships to pass. If they attempted to force this post, I think they must be beaten. If they detached into the country on either hand, it must scatter their army in such a manner that your Excellency must drub them. But if supplies cannot be had at this place, at the Highlands they may, both by land and water. I think there has been some proof the ships dare not attempt that passage; but they are not prepared to defend against a landing. This is surely worth attention; for if they possess themselves of this passage, we shall be in a bad box. For my sentiments about that place, I refer your Excellency to Lord Stirling's report last May. I know that this doctrine gives up York to destruction, and exposes many other towns to be ravaged by them. But what are ten or twenty towns to the grand object? If they once pass the Highlands, I see no way to prevent the junction of their armies. Burgoyne need never come from Canada. If Howe gets to Albany, our Northern Army must quit Ticonderoga, or fall a sacrifice.

I am your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

RUFUS PUTNAM.

To his Excellency G. Washington, Esq., General, &c., &c.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, September 3, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to a resolve of the Committee of Safety of this State, I now send you the examination taken against John Wooly, together with the prisoner under care of Sergeant Mills. The other person who was taken with Wooly escaped our guards, as will appear by the enclosed letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Hopkins, dated 31st August. The enemy's shipping lay opposite Hunt's Point, and a considerable number of their troops are encamped on the opposite shore. We are very considerably reinforced at this post, Horn's Hook, &c., so that should they attempt paying us a visit in this quarter, I have not the least doubt but we shall be able to give a very good account of them. No movements have been made, except that of the enemy's possessing themselves of the different works evacuated by our troops on Long-Island and Nutton-Island, and some of their shipping moving up near the city, one of which was yesterday washing up under cover of Nutton-Island into the East River, as I am just now informed.

I am, with the utmost respect, your most obedient servant,
GEO. CLINTON.

To the President of the Convention of State of New-York.

KING'S BRIDGE, ss:

The Examination of John Wooly, prisoner, confined on suspicion of going on board the enemy's shipping, and supplying the enemy with provisions.

And upon examination of the said John Wooly, he being asked how often he had been on board the said shipping, answer was made by the examinant, only once; observing that a boat, the property of this examinant's father, lay exposed to being taken by the enemy, whereupon this examinant with his brother Philip, went in order to remove said boat out of the aforesaid danger, in accomplishing which they were met by a barge from the shipping (fairly exposed to their view) and taken, and thereupon carried on board the shipping, and upon the enemy's receiving intelligence from persons, as he thinks, who fled aboard upon principles of toryism. The examinant being asked whether or no he was a brother to Thomas Wooly, who this examinant says fled aboard and absolutely refused to take up arms against the Ministerial army, whereupon he answered, he was; whose conduct this examinant says he conjectures was a means of his and his brother's being treated with the lenity and usage they received; at the same time asserts and says that offers being made to him, this examinant, in case he would supply and fetch them provisions he should be set at liberty, whereupon this examinant answered he had none; nevertheless, together with his brother, was dismissed. This examinant being further asked in regard to the shipping, what number of shipping—also, what number of men he took to be on board the ship he was taken; in answer to which says, he saw two thirty-two gun ships and one twelve gun brig, and as for the number of men on board the vessel he was on board of, he says he imagines to be about two hundred and twenty or about that number, which being all the information he can give relative to the state of said shipping.

The above examination taken by us this 2d of September, 1776.

THOMAS MOFFAT, Major.

ALBERT PAWLING, Major of Brigade.

PETITION OF JOSHUA FERRIS.

To the Honourable the President and Members of the State of NEW-YORK, in Congress met:

The Petition of JOSHUA FERRIS, a prisoner confined in the Gaol of the WHITE-PLAINS, in WESTCHESTER County, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner was enlisted in his Majesty's service the fifteenth of April last, and received his bounty money in the said service, not having the least suspicion of an alteration of the form of Government, and as your petitioner, on coming on shore, was apprehended and immediately loaded with irons, in which state he hath continued almost ever since, and as he humbly conceives himself to be under the limitation of a prisoner of war, he begs of this honourable House that his irons may be taken off, as he cannot possibly shift himself, or get clear of the vermin with which he is greatly infested, to the great disturbance of his unfortunate fellow-prisoners; and he further relies on your Honours' well-known humanity to treat him as an unfortunate prisoner of war, and allow him the same liberty as other prisoners belonging to his Majesty, as your petitioner declares that he will not interfere in any matters concerning the present unhappy troubles, but behave himself as becomes a faithful prisoner of war.

Your petitioner therefore humbly submits his case to your Honours, and begs for such relief as to your Honours shall seem meet. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

JOSHUA FERRIS.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 3, 1776—6 o'clock, A. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday's post did not bring me a line from General Washington, and I deferred writing to you in hopes of an express by this time.

By a letter which Mr. Trumbull, the Paymaster, has received from his brother, and another from a Delegate in the Provincial Congress, we have the disagreeable intelligence that our troops have been obliged to retreat from Long-Island, and that it is probable the whole army will move, if it is not already, to this side of King's Bridge. Another letter says the enemy buried fourteen hundred and sixty-one, killed in the engagements on Tuesday and Wednesday, and we six hundred and ten of ours.

General Sullivan and Lord Stirling are prisoners. The former was in New-York on his parole when the post came away on Friday morning, who confirms the above account, and adds that the enemy's ships were in motion when he left the town. If so, I apprehend we shall sustain some loss in our military stores, should not a previous movement of part have taken place.

I cannot learn that we left any cannon on Long-Island, although the enemy were already firing on our works on the Governour's Island.

They have two frigates, an armed brig, and a tender, in the Sound, about twenty miles from New-York.

The traitor Zedwitz, who held a correspondence with Tryon, is only broke for his treason.

General Lee not yet arrived at New-York. The Provincial Congress moved up to Fishkill.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To General Gates, &c.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, September 3, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I find by three companies of batteau-men I have employed between this and Fort Stanwix in carrying provisions, &c., that I can spare the one company, that is, Van Epp's in particular; they are but twenty-one men. Should you think proper, I would discharge them, unless the General thinks there will be occasion for them this Fall. Should there be no more troops ordered for Fort Stanwix this Fall, I can supply that garrison with the two companies, Lansing's and Wolcott's, and will have a good deal of cash by discharging Van Epp's company, as they are very indifferent hands, and should there be any occasion for any hands, I can get in one day as many hands as I want, in town.

Yours, &c.

H. GLEN.

To Major General Ph. Schuyler, Albany.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 3, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of yesterday, per Mr. Avery, which advised me of the arrival of the rigging and other necessities for the galleys. I am fully of your Honour's opinion, that it is best for the galleys immediately after they are launched, to be sent and rigged at Ticonderoga, and for the troops to come forward with them, as it is very sickly at this post. I shall send the Philadelphia galley to-morrow or next day to Ticonderoga.

I have received a considerable quantity of clothing which was sent by his Honour Governour Trumbull, for the use of the troops, and I should be glad to know whether I must send them forward to Ticonderoga. If it is your Honour's orders, I will send them forward forthwith. The Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General is taken sick at this place and has petitioned for liberty to go home for a short space of time till he can gain his health better, and I don't choose to give him liberty till I can have your Honour's opinion in the affair.

I am your Honour's most obedient humble servant,
DAVID WATERBURY, JR.

I shall send forward Colonel Swift with part of his regiment in the first galley, and as the galleys are finished I shall continue sending the Connecticut troops forward, and come myself in the third. I shall send the boards they have hutted themselves with here, that they may do the same there, as they have no tents.

I would acquaint your Honour of a complaint from Colonel Phinney against Ensign William Garwood. The complaint is as follows:

SIR: Please to order under an arrest Ensign William Garwood, of Captain Casdorp's company of carpenters, for insulting language, and damning and threatening of me when endeavouring to suppress a riot, and desire that he may be brought to trial immediately.

EDMUND PHINNEY, Colonel.

To His Honour General Waterbury.

The above is a true copy of the complaint and desire, and I put him under arrest according to his desire.

D. W., JR.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL BROWN'S COMPLAINT AGAINST GENERAL ARNOLD.
To the Hon. Horatio Gates, Esquire, Major-General in the the Northern Department:

The complaint of John Brown, Lieutenant-Colonel in the regiment whereof Samuel Elmer, Esquire, is Colonel, humbly sheweth:

That at the Camp before Quebeck, on the 22d of February last, Brigadier-General Arnold, then Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army at that place, did then and there in the presence and hearing of Colonel Jeremiah Duggan and others, declare and affirm that your complainant was guilty of the worst and blackest of crimes, viz: of plundering the baggage of officers taken prisoners, (contrary to articles of capitulation,) and other publick stores.

Your complainant further sheweth that the same General Arnold, at the camp aforesaid, on the 1st of February last, by his letter to Congress of that date, declared "that your complainant had been publicly accused of plundering the baggage of officers taken prisoners at Sorel, contrary to articles of capitulation, and to the great scandal of the American arms, and that it was his opinion that the promotion of your complainant would give great disgust to the army in general, till this matter should be cleared up."

Your complainant further sheweth that the same General Arnold, at or near the Sorel, in Canada, on or about the middle of May last, did, in the presence and hearing of General Thomas and Major Sedgwick, (then Secretary to General Thomas,) declare and affirm that your complainant was guilty of plundering officers' baggage taken prisoners, contrary to articles of capitulation, and that your complainant was a dangerous man and ought not to be continued in the army.

All which declarations and affirmations of General Arnold, made as aforesaid, were false, scandalous, and malicious, made and calculated with an avowed design to injure and ruin the character of your complainant, who flatters himself that his character as an officer and gentleman is equal to any of his rank in the Continental Army, without exception. And as the false and malicious charges made against your complainant by General Arnold are of such a high nature, and so essentially affect his character, fame, and reputation, as well as the character of every officer in the Continental Army, your complainant requests that General Arnold be immediately arrested and brought to trial, that your complainant may have justice done him in this particular.

Your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

JNO. BROWN.

Tyconderoga, September 3, 1776.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 3, 1776:

Present: His Honour the Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Jedediah Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., and Benjamin Huntington, Esqrs.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £300, in favour of Captain Uriah Hayden, towards building the ship Oliver Cromwell, and to be in account. (Order drawn September 3, 1776, delivered Captain Hayden.)

Voted, That Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Jedediah Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., and Benjamin Huntington, Esquires, be appointed, desired, and empowered to repair immediately to New-London, as a committee to observe the circumstances of our troops there, the state of the Sound, whether infested with the enemy or not, and to consider and direct what measures are best to be taken with regard to the inhabitants and stock on Long-Island, how to preserve them from the hands of the enemy, and to determine with regard to throwing troops upon said Island.

They are also empowered to take care that suitable stores of ammunition, provisions, and every necessary, be made thereon, according to the determination they shall make and the orders they shall give to Colonel Wolcott and others concerned therein. They are also to take into consideration, and give directions concerning the vessel belonging to the Colony, wherein Captain Hardin lately sailed—to order, if they see fit, that she be fitted for a guard vessel at the harbour of New-London, and on the Sound; and report what they find, and the directions and orders they shall give, to the Governour and Committee of Safety on Thursday next.

JAMES M'COBB TO HENRY GARDNER.

Georgetown, Massachusetts, September 3, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I send enclosed the subscription of a few of the inhabitants of this poor town. I believe we are all to a man hearty in the common cause, but our poverty restrains us. The resolve of the honourable Court never came to hand until the 1st of August, which was the reason of our being so far behindhand. Our not having a post established any farther than Falmouth, which is fifty miles from here, is a very great damage to us. We ha'nt an opportunity to know our duty. The money will be ready as soon as the bills are sent down, and I suppose mostly in dollars. The honourable Court will be pleased to order how it will be transported.

I am, honoured sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

JAMES MCCOBB, Chairman.

To Henry Gardner, Esq., Province Treasurer, at his office, in Watertown.

Georgetown, August 3, 1776.

Whereas, application has been made to the several Towns in this Colony, to procure a sum of Hard Money to carry on the Canada expedition with success, to be exchanged for Continental Bills; We, the subscribers, do hereby promise that we will pay to the Committee of Georgetown aforesaid, the sum set to our names, on the conditions above, in hard money.

Witness our hands.

COLONEL BAYLEY TO COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Newbury, September 3, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I find that Doctor Porter has been very busy collecting testimony in order to invalidate Daniel Hall's evidence; but I know of no authority for what he has been doing. However, the evidence relating to Hall's character must be looked upon as inimical to our common cause, as well as all those who assist a man so inimical as Esquire Porter, and think that should any man appear from hence endeavouring to do it before you, they ought not to have their liberty to return. Thomas Chamberlaine, who swears something against Hall, has been very friendly to Hall till their plot was found out, and, by his conduct, must be of Porter's party.

As to any further trial of either of those we condemned as inimical, except they petition for it, I know of no authority they have for it; but what I thought was for them to be kept out of mischief, which I still think they and all such as espouse their cause, should be secured. You will doubtless see the need of it when you hear the evidence and trial. Certainly they that are not for us are against us. I shall be glad to know whether you will, if needed, receive from our State the unfriendly, &c.

I only mention things as I hear that have been done by Doctor Porter without any authority as I supposed. I took no notice of it, so as to attend his courts.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JACOB BAYLEY.

CERTIFICATE IN FAVOUR OF ASA PORTER.

We, the subscribers, being a part of the Committee who sat on examination of Asa Porter, Esquire, hereby certify, that the said Porter was kept under guard with orders for no person to speak with him privately, and the cause of his arrest was not made known to him till he was brought before the Committee aforesaid, which was then made known to him. He was also informed by the Chairman of the Committee, to this effect, that he was not then to be tried, but only to be examined whether there were sufficient grounds of suspicion to bring him over for trial. After the vote of the Committee of said Porter's case was read to him, he told the Committee to this effect, that he did expect they would have given judgment on his case without giving him opportunity to defend himself, or to bring his evidence. We further certify, that the said Porter afterwards petitioned the said Committee for a hearing and for time to get his evidences, but he not being able to get all the Committee together which sat on the examination, part of them being at a distance and gone from home, those who came together, though they were a major part, and all gave it as their opinion that said Porter ought to have time to get his evidences or to be heard, yet as the whole were not together, did not think themselves at liberty to countermand the orders which had been given to Colonel Bayley, Colonel Hurd and Thomas Johnson, to send him to Exeter. Two of said last Committee being formerly at variance with said Porter, seemed to discover prejudice against him, and forced him out of town without giving him time to get the whole Committee together to hear his evidence or to make his defence; and said Porter hath been kept under guard with orders to suffer no person to speak with him in private from the time of his arrest to the time he was sent off to Exeter, excepting one night and part of a day.

As we think he, the said Porter, has not had that privilege allowed him which every freeman hath a right to demand, we will engage, if the honourable Committee to which he is consigned will give him liberty to be tried in his County, when he may have advantage of getting his evidences, and by persons who know the character of the persons who informed against him, to give sufficient surety for his good behaviour till the time of his trial.

NICHOLAS LOWELL,
JAMES BAYLEY.

COLONEL PORTER'S OBJECTIONS.

Plea to the jurisdiction of the Honourable Assembly of NEW-HAMPSHIRE in the case STATE versus PORTER.

1st. Because it is the Legislative body, and it doth not consist with the liberties of the people that the same body which hath the power of making laws, should have the power of executing the laws, or determining the causes of individuals.

2d. All jurisdiction implies superiority of power, and therefore it would be absurd to suppose that this body of men, constituted for the purpose of legislation, would thereby become vested with authority to arraign before them for trial or punishment the persons of their constituents, whose servants they are, and to whom they are accountable for their conduct.

3d. Because Courts are now open in this State for the trial both of criminal and civil causes. In which case, if the Assembly should single out the present accused, and contrary to his inclination confine him to a trial before them, it would confirm the suggestion of Colonel Hurd, a member of the Assembly, by whose order he was brought before them, that it was done out of personal prejudice.

4th. Because in accusations of a criminal nature, especially where the State is concerned, the party accused ought to have some share in the choice of his judges, or to have liberty to except against so many appointed by the law, that those who remain may be deemed his own choice, as is the case in trial by jury.

5th. If the Assembly should take cognizance of this case, it would carry the person accused to a distance from home, or from his County, for trial; by which means he would be deprived of the benefit of evidence, and the credit of the witnesses (which ought to be tried as well as the facts) would not be known to the triers, and would be replete with those very inconveniences, and equally oppressive and burthensome with that adopted by the British Parliament, so much complained of in the late Admiralty Courts.

6th. Because the Assembly hath already heard the evidence against the accused, professedly in the quality of a grand jury.

7th. Because the accused would be thereby deprived of the privilege of trial by jury, which he hath repeatedly claimed, and which hath not only been held by the greatest authorities to be the best and only mode of trial consistent with the safety of the people, especially in cases of treason, but hath by this Assembly been acknowledged to be a right inherent in the people, which they ought not to be deprived of.

8th. Because the Representatives of the people (as such) can have no powers but what are delegated to them by the people whom they represent, and the people of New-Hampshire have not delegated to their Assembly or Representatives, the executive or judicial powers of government.

9th. In case the Assembly should assume a jurisdiction in this case, a precedent would be thereby formed for future trials of treason, in which the will of that court shall be the law, as well to determine the crime and penalty as to try the truth of the facts, by which manner the lives, liberties, and property of the people, would be made to depend solely on the will of the Legislative body, which would be an establishment of the most despotick tyranny.

As it hath been suggested that I am only endeavouring to evade a trial by claiming a trial by jury, when there is no law in this State to determine the crime and punishment of treason, which is a bar to that mode of trial, I would observe, that much less can be objected to a trial by jury without law, than to a trial by the Legislative body without law, especially when the former mode hath the consent of the party to be tried, and in favour of which there is a precedent in this State in a capital case. And should the Assembly deprive a man of his right because they have not provided a mode of trial consistent with that right, it would be making an advantage of their own wrong. But notwithstanding, it is not through my laches that there is no law made to determine the crime of treason, (upon which the safety of the State and the liberties of the people so essentially depend,) I have no inclination to make an advantage of it, and am willing to be tried by the County, and if found by the judgment of my peers to have done any act against this State, which having been done against the former Government, would have been determined treason by the municipal laws thereof, I am content to incur the like penalty.

LETTER FROM COLONEL HURD.

Haverhill, (Cohos,) July 15, 1776.

SIR: I have heard nothing from Exeter since I wrote per Colonel Bayley, from Concord. Upon my coming into this town last Tuesday, I found the people had been in great consternation about the Indians, as I before advised; that most of the women and children had come down from Upper Cohos, through fear, and got into garrison, the Haverhill folks having collected together in different parts of the town and built several picketed forts, with good breastworks of pine logs, and in Bath or Gunthwaite, above us, they have done the same, otherwise the upper towns had been wholly deserted. I endeavoured to quiet them all in my power, by assuring them that besides the force raising to go into Canada, we should have a sufficient number to protect us on our frontier, which would soon be along; but it is with difficulty they can be persuaded to think so: and some ill-minded persons, before Mr. John Hale came up with the powder and fire-arms, took pains to propagate that we should be neglected, and seriously proposed that if neither our Assembly nor the Massachusetts would send us speedy assistance, the best way to preserve ourselves from the insults of the savages, was to send over to General Burgoyne, acquaint him of our weak condition, and ask his protection. And this might verily easily be done, did the enemy know our circumstances, and had forces to spare. Nothing but their ignorance of the geographical part of the country, or want of strength, does prevent it. This was Brush's plan, and I am really surprised, when I reflect on the danger, that our Assembly are not more attentive to it; it is certainly our weakest side.

The Haverhill and Newbury Committees have kept constant scouts going for some time past between Lake Champlain and this river, and by the last that came in, we have letters (copies of which I herewith transmit) that give us some encouragement. By a scout that went out yesterday to Onion River, and another to Crown-Point, I took the liberty to write to General Sullivan and Colonel Waite, informing them what our General Court had done lately, and how I imagined ourselves most exposed to the enemy, which I hope may be some way serviceable. There have been many reports spread here, of Indians being seen and scouts fired at, but upon further search have proved groundless, and the people in general appear more composed. Some are returning to work on their plantations, but leave their wives and children here as the surest place. What has already happened has been considerable damage to the new settlements.

The bearer, Mr. Atkinson, of Boscawin, can inform of further particulars that you may please to inquire respecting our circumstances here, as he, with a number of others from the towns below, came up volunteers for our assistance on the first alarm. He has been good enough to send us two swivel guns, or small field-pieces, that have laid some years at Boscawin, perhaps since last war, (belonging, as they suppose, to the Province,) for the use of our forts, and he tells us there are two more at Canterbury, under Esquire Clough's care, which may be very useful to us. I beg the favour he may have the direction of the Committee of Safety to forward them also. They are of no service where they lie, and can be easily transported here.

I wish to hear that some part of the detachment designed for our protection were upon their march. If we had but a small company to guard the settlements at Upper Cohos for the present, it would be a great satisfaction to the people, and some among us talk of going on that duty for a fortnight or three weeks as volunteers, to chance their pay.

[The remainder of this letter is wanting. It was addressed to the Committee of Safety.]

COLONEL HURD TO PRESIDENT WEARE.

August 7, 1776.

SIR: In my last I hinted to you that we had our eyes on those persons who were propagating the notion of the expediency of sending into Canada for protection from the Indians, and should keep a strict watch upon their conduct. Colonel Asa Porter we knew was the principal promoter of it, and Colonel Taplin, of Newbury, who have both openly declared their opinion. Some few of us here and at Newbury were secretly informed that there was a plan propagating, by those very persons, to send into Canada, and that soon. We thought best to let it run on till their scheme was nearly ripe; but Sunday morning an accident took place that alarmed us, and obliged us to stir in the matter a little sooner than intended—an Indian young hunter, that knew the road, and was tried upon the matter, happening to blab it out. We expected the others would take the alarm, when some of the gentlemen on the Newbury side sent over to us of this town that they thought it absolutely necessary the Committee here should immediately secure Colonel Porter, while they were apprehending others on their side; which was soon done, together with one person in his house and another at Bath, who had been employed under him. They were all put under guard. And on Monday morning the Committees of these two towns met to consult on the business, and formed themselves into a Court of Inquiry, at which I assisted, in consequence of your orders in your last to take up such persons; and after two days' close attention to this business of examination of the several persons taken up, it appeared to them, by the evidence and circumstances attending, that Colonel Porter, Colonel Taplin, with two others, David Weeks, of Bath, and Jacob Fowler, of Newbury, had been practising things very inimical to their country—judged them accordingly, and doomed them to be sent to Exeter, to the care of the Committee of Safety there; for we must look upon them as dangerous persons in this quarter of the country, and more so at this critical time.

With this shall be transmitted copies of the two principal evidences, and when I come down to Exeter, which I intend next week, will bring the minutes of the whole trial, and inform the Committee more particularly.

August 8.—We had before written to Captain Woodward to be here with a party of his men at the time we intended taking them up, and he readily attended accordingly; and being desirous of seeing the Committee on the business of this company, we have entrusted him with the care of Colonel Porter, to see him safe down to Exeter, and to wait on you. The other persons now under guard we thought best to let remain a few days longer.

Colonel Porter was very averse to the orders for his going to Exeter, and would fain have had a final decision here, pretending there is not nor ought to be, any higher power than our town Committees; for he has all along denied the jurisdiction of our General Court, and must be conscious to himself that he has used us ill by frequent denial of our authority, and misrepresentation. The people here in general are much exasperated against him, so that we have been obliged to keep him under strict guard since the trial, at his own house, not suffering him to go out on his parole. It being now a very busy time with us in the midst of harvesting, and Colonel Porter pretending he wanted time to collect some evidences in his own favour, the committee (chosen for the purpose of sending him off) agreed to allow him five days.

We refer to Captain Woodward for further particulars on this matter; also of what news we have by another scout just come in from Missisquo Bay, where he was informed by Mr. Metcalf, that resides there, that the Ministerial Army was now fifteen thousand strong—British and German troops; that the Canadians, all except those who took commissions under Congress, are forgiven, and join them in multitudes; and that they can have, besides, what Indians they want. The Caynawaga, Canausadaga, and St. Francis tribes have determined to take up on their side; but that no Indians will come into this part of the country without Regulars at the same time; that the farmers need not be concerned; they will not be molested unless they are found in arms; and any person unarmed may travel into Canada. But this we look upon as a scheme only to lull us asleep, that we may fall an easy prey to them whenever they may think proper to push through this way. They have also propagated in Canada reports that our army at New-York is all cut up—fifteen thousand killed, and the rest dispersed; and that the regular army can easily march through the whole country. They keep but few troops at St. John's, being chiefly at Montreal, and are fortifying at Isle de Noix. No account now of a French fleet in the river St. Lawrence. I rather think they are reinforced, but do not give much credit to Metcalf's story, as he has all along favoured that side, though he professes to be friendly to us.

10th.—We have now another party come in from Ticon- deroga with Mr. Atkinson, of Boscawen, (who was sent over as a guard to the four last Frenchmen,) by whom we have a letter from General Gates, a copy of which I shall enclose. The General is so much encouraged by the Frenchmen's account of things in Canada, he thinks of making a push there again, and would have Colonel Bayley go on with the road.

I am sorry to mention that the General makes great complaint of our men deserting the service. It is said there is not less than three thousand men lately gone off from the army, that are scattering through the country, whom the Committees of the several towns ought to take up and send back. It is a most shameful, wicked thing that men should take such large bounties, and then desert their country's cause.

Should Colonel Bayley receive orders, as now expected, to set his men to work again on the road, the Committee will immediately set about raising the fifty men, as directed by the honourable Committee of Safety, which appears to us absolutely necessary.

Pray excuse my lengthy epistle and small paper; my stock of it being almost exhausted, obliges me to write in 12mo., sermon-wise. Mr. Secretary I fear will lose his patience before he gets through; but I'll read as much for him another time, or for either of the Committee that will take the task off his honour's hands.

Being very respectfully, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
J. HURD.

DANIEL HALL'S DEPOSITION AGAINST COLONEL PORTER.

The Deposition of DANIEL HALL, of NEWBURY, husbandman, relating to a plan forming by sundry persons at COHOS, to send over into CANADA for protection from the BRITISH Troops.

I, the said Daniel Hall, testify and declare, that, being in company with David Weeks some time in the beginning of July, and discoursing on our present distress and our army's leaving Canada, Weeks, seeming to hang in favour of the Ministerial troops, said he wished he knew my mind, that he would tell me something. I replied that he need not be afraid. "Then," said he, "I will tell you," but swore if ever I told he would kill me. "There is," says he, "a parcel of men joining to send to Canada, to General Burgoyne, for protection, and you are to be one of them; and they are to go with flags on their guns;" when I agreed to join them, and assist all that lay in my power. Says Weeks, "You must wait on Colonel Taplin for further instructions." After that I waited on Colonel Taplin, and requested to know of him what we should do, for I was afraid we should be all cut off. Taplin replied, "By God! if you will be regulated by me, we will do well enough," and that we must send to Canada for protection, and immediately, and he was afraid 'twas now too late. "But," says he, "I want to see Colonel Porter before I do anything; but, by God! I dare not be seen with him. I want to see Willard Stevens." I said, "You may see him at any time." Taplin then desired I would go and call him to his house. Calling again on Taplin, I inquired how he made out with Stevens. He said well enough, but they could do nothing till they sent down the river; that they should have word by Solomon Stevens in eight days. Taplin desired that I would come by two or three times a day; that he would be walking out, so as to speak with me often. He said further that he had seen Porter, but could not do anything till they had a return up the river. "We will, however, do well enough yet; we will own all Cohos yet."

July 10.—Soon after this I went to Colonel Porter's to buy rum, and when he gave me the bottle, said I had better come and see it put up myself. When we were in the cellar he said he supposed I was not ignorant of the plan they had laid. I answered I knew of one by Taplin. He said it was a matter of great consequence, and they must be as expeditious as possible, but not drive matters too fast. We must have news from New-York. I answered that we must not mind all that was in the papers. He said, "I do not take much notice of them;" but they should have letters from private gentlemen; and that it depended, in a great measure, on the news they should hear from New-York. "Can't you," says he, "lay a plan to go catching moose; for the Continent will stand in need of meat. We won't say much now, but call on me once in a day or two, and I will let you know how we proceed."

July 24.—I then waited on Colonel Porter, as before agreed. He said that things worked well; but still we must wait a few days for news from New-York; that he then should be ready to furnish me with a writing to carry to Canada; and he would have me carry the writing ten or fifteen miles in the woods, till I got one or two more to go with me, under pretence of going a moose hunting, and then to proceed into Canada to General Burgoyne; that he should do the letters up in such manner that if we were to be taken they should not be discovered; for the writing should be on the outside—the wrapper to be some old account.

July 27.—Saw Colonel Porter again, when he said he had thoughts of altering the plan; for, as Byal Chamberlain was going with a scout to St. John's, that they would get all their party to go with Chamberlain, so that when they were arrived at St. John's they should take care of him as they pleased; then to go and see Colonel Peters, who, we hear, has deserted into Canada, and to let him know their plan.

July 29.—This day was in company with Colonel Taplin, and with Willard Stevens and Solomon Stevens—each of them by themselves. They say it was best to rest sending over to Canada till Colonel Porter comes up the river, expecting something of consequence by him—(he was then gone down to Number-Four, on a journey after his negro man Neptune)—and Mr. Abiel Chamberlain comes back from Canada, as the news seems to be against them at present. But they said as soon as Chamberlain returns they would have me go right off, and take Tim Omsted with me. Willard Stevens said he was afraid to send writings, but could send a token that should do. Taplin said they would have some writings for him to carry to Colonel Porter's; that I need not stay more than half an hour in Canada, under pretence to catch moose.

August 2.—I waited again on Colonel Porter, when he told me that he had been down the river; that he had seen Lawyer Olcott, who liked the plan well, and would assist us as far as he could. Says Colonel Porter, "Indians are seen down the river frequently. They have been seen in reality. There has been one regular officer and an Indian to Claremont, to see Mr. Cossit. They waited two or three days before they durst venture in, but very luckily came into one of our friends' houses, and there stayed till they had done their business—having seen several friends, but could not see Mr. Cossit. Their business was principally to see how many friends there are here to the Ministerial troops, and to see if they would help to conduct them to this part of the country." Colonel Porter further said that it would be best for Solomon Stevens to go soon to Mr. Metcalf's, and let him know the plan; "and there," says he, "he can be protected a few days, till he can be sent into Canada to find Colonel Peters, to let him know you are coming, and in a few days. I would have you go over with Tim Omsted, but I want to hear more of that fleet that they say is in the mouth of Canada River, and whether the regular army is drawing back from St. John's or not, or whether they be coming this way or not. I have just thought that I would write to Colonel Peters, by you, to this purpose, by way of cloak, that I hear paper money is of no value there, and that if he would send me over a quantity of it, I would spare him my negro boy; and under that I shall write further to this purpose, that he would remember his friends here. When he sees my name he will know the plan, for I dare not write further. You may tell him the rest by tokens." Colonel Porter also engaged that whatever provisions and money I wanted to carry me there, I should have from him.

The above was sworn to before the Committee of Newbury and Haverhill, and in a publick hearing.

JOHN BAYLEY'S DEPOSITION.

The Deposition of John Bayley, of Newbury, husbandman, relating to a plan forming by sundry persons between here and Cohos, to send over into Canada for protection from the British Troops.

I, the said John Bayley, declare that on Saturday, the 20th July, happening to fall in conversation with Colonel John Taplin, of whom I had been a little jealous, with sundry other persons, having had some hints from Mr. Nath'l Merrill that there was a plan on foot of sending into Canada for protection; observing also a good deal of uneasiness about him, and concern in his countenance, I asked the question by way of leading on, What we should do? He answered, if anything was done we must ask protection from General Carleton or Burgoyne, if he should come with his army; he would let us enjoy our privileges as before. After this I saw Colonel Porter; falling into company with him, we walked along towards the Court-house, and going up into the Chamber, sat down and talked considerable of publick matters. I asked him what we should do in these troubles? He said, "Though we are called Rebels, we might be forgiven. If we can't protect ourselves, I don't see why we may not send into Canada for protection. We can send a flag of truce to St. John's, to secure our interests and be protected." One Mr. Morse, being in hearing, said he should be afraid to go on such business; said Porter replied "He should not be concerned about sending the nearest friend he had on earth on such an errand: he thought it was a good plan, and that numbers of our people would join in it. He knew the Scotch people would readily come into the same, or were all on our side;" and much more to this purpose. And then upon hearing Colonel Taplin again Monday, 22d July, I told him what Colonel Porter had said, and asked, Have you thought further about what I said to you on Saturday? With great concern on his countenance, he replied, "If I dared, I could say something to you; but nothing could be done except we have something drawn up and sent to Canada, and then we shall have protection, I warrant you." I said, further, What shall we send, and whom shall we get to write? He said, "Colonel Porter will write what we think best." Then, says I to him, Whom shall we send? He answered, "Daniel Hall will go, and all the Scot people will sign what we shall draw up. I have talked with several of them, and I want to see one more." Who is that? said I. "Mr. Harvey." You had better go, says I, to see and feel of him. He says, "I shan't see him—can't you see him?" I replied, I am going to Oxboro'; I will see him. The same evening about sunset, I saw Colonel Taplin again. He says to me, "How does Harvey stand?" I answered, He will fight against Indians to the last extremity; but as to the Ministerial troops, they had not been invited, nor did he mean to do it. Taplin says, "By God, that's right." On the 23d day Colonel Taplin came to me and says, that he believed it was best to let all rest a few days, while we hear something from York; for 'twas a damn nice point, and we shall be hanged if we are found out. But through the whole of our conversation he all along said he did not want to injure any man, not knowing what may be the event; fearing the Ministerial troops might get the better of us, or let the Indians in upon us, 'twould be best to send over in time to St. John's. As to Colonel Porter, by my conversation with him I judged he meant to get help from Canada.

The substance of the above deposition was sworn to before the Committees of Newbury and Haverhill in a publick hearing.

JOSEPH HAYNES'S DEPOSITION.

I, Joseph Haynes, of Gunthwaite, husbandman, declare and say that being at the house of Captain John Young, in said Gunthwaite, some time about the latter end of June, while Colonel Asa Porter was there also, I heard him, said Porter, saying that we were not likely to have any assistance from below; and after some considerable conversation on the subject, he said he thought it would be proper to send over to General Burgoyne to see what he intended to do with us. Captain Young replied, that he thought it would not be proper to do that until we could choose a committee to send to the Congress and know the truth of it, whether we were to have help or not; upon which Colonel Porter added, "Perhaps it might then be too late." Mrs. Young then said, she thought it would not be safe to go over to Canada. Colonel Porter replied again, there was no danger, he should not be afraid to go—there were enough that would go. This was the purport of what he said, though there was considerable more talk, all tending to discourage us: such as, there were seventeen thousand Regulars now in Canada, and if there should be twenty thousand they would be sufficient to defend the Lake against all the force of the Americans.

EBENEZER RICE'S DEPOSITION.

I, Ebenezer Rice, of Haverhill, husbandman, do declare that on or about the 24th of July last, when my brother, Captain Edward Buckman, of Lancaster, came up the river from his journey to Athol, and along through Number-Four, while he was in my house telling us some news, Colonel Asa Porter called in, and Buckman said it was reported in several places he had been at that General Burgoyne did not intend to do the people on Connecticut River any harm, or molest them, unless it should be those who were found in arms. Upon which Colonel Porter replied, he should be glad to know the truth of that; if he thought so, should be fond of sending over to Canada, as in that case it would be best not to build any forts here—they would be more damage to us than do us good; and by his conversation, Porter appeared very earnest to send a party over to Canada, and would fain have had Captain Buckman joined with him; but he, Buckman, declined, saying he thought the best thing he could do was to make all the preparation possible against them. This was the substance of their discourse, to the best of my remembrance.

THOMAS MINOR'S DEPOSITION.

I, Thomas Minor, of Guildhall, at Upper Cohos, lately residing in Haverhill, husbandman, declare that being at the house of Mr. Maxi Hazleton, in said Haverhill, about the time of the alarm there, when Colonel Asa Porter came in, and several other persons present, said Porter told them all that our Assembly at Exeter had treated the petition or request of the people here sent down by Mr. Jonathan Hale, for assistance, with neglect and contempt, so that we were not likely to have any assistance from below, and he imagined the best way for us to do was to send over to Canada to General Burgoyne for protection, and he would be bound we should have protection from that quarter; with a good deal of other conversation to this purpose.

EDWARD BUCKMAN'S DEPOSITION.

I, Edward Buckman, of Lancaster, in the County of Grafton, husbandman, declare that on or about the 24th July last, on my return from a journey down country, while at the house of my brother, Ebenezer Rice, in Haverhill, Colonel Asa Porter came in to inquire about the news, when I told him the report that I had heard in several places, that General Burgoyne did not intend to do the people on Connecticut River any harm, or molest them, unless it should be those who were found in arms; upon which, Colonel Porter replied, he should be glad to know the truth of that; if he thought it was really so, it would be better for us to send over to Canada, and not to build any Forts here; they might do us more hurt than good; or words to that purpose. To which I answered, I thought rather we had best build Forts, and be in readiness for them. It might be more likely to discourage the Indians from coming against us, if they see we had Forts. Upon the whole, Colonel Porter said he thought it best, and appeared earnest to send a party over to Canada, to know the truth of the above report. I also recollect, that about a fortnight before this, being at his house, and talking about Mr. Johnston's returning from the Massachusetts Assembly, and not likely to get any help from them, as 'twas said they did not look upon us as in any danger, Colonel Porter said we had best send over to General Burgoyne for protection, and he would be bound he (meaning Burgoyne) would protect us. This, Colonel Porter spoke in a laughing or sneering way, though from the tenour of his conversation I thought it was his real sentiment. Yet I think he said, too, he should have thought that they (meaning the Massachusetts people) would not have scrupled to send us help, but when demanded only asked how many men were necessary. This conversation was before Mr. Hale returned from Exeter. I recollect nothing further at present, the above being the substance of what passed between us to the best of my remembrance.

ROBERT HASELTINE'S DEPOSITION.

I, Robert Haseltine, of Haverhill, blacksmith, declare that about a fortnight before Colonel Asa Porter was taken up here by the Committees, he called at my shop to have a little work done, when in our conversation he said, that as the Indians were a merciless set of people, "it would be better to send over to Canada, to Burgoyne, for protection than to suffer ourselves to be cut to pieces by them, for we were not likely to get help from below. They'll do nothing for us." To which I answered him, Why, do you think we should have more mercy shown us from the Regulars? "Oh, yes," says he, "the English are remarkable for their lenity. There was an instance of this sort, the last war, in Lord Fraser, a Scotch Rebel, who, though executed as such and forfeited his estate, yet his son, Colonel Fraser, was like to come in possession of the estate again;" "and I question," added he, "if they would put Hancock himself to death if they were to catch him." I told him, I believed if they were to catch him, they would hang him right off hand without judge or jury. This conversation we had after Mr. Jonathan Hale came home from Exeter, to the best of my remembrance.

JOHN SANBORN'S DEPOSITION.

I, John Sanborn, of Haverhill, husbandman, declare that some time about the middle of July last, being at the house of Lieutenant Hutchins, inn-holder in said Haverhill, with a number of other persons who were assisting to build the fortification about the house, when Colonel Asa Porter came to the door on horseback, and gave the people a dollar to treat them with liquor, he then took the opportunity to tell us that Mr. Hale was not likely to get any help at Exeter; it was so resolved, (as he heard;) but perhaps he might get a little help if he waited awhile, though for his part, if he was Hale, he would not wait a minute, but come right off home. Then he said it would not do to keep that petty Congress in much longer. He looked upon it, if we kept them, 'twas worse than to have none, as they would not help us. It would be like jumping out of the frying-pan into the fire. This was the purport of what he said, to the best of my remembrance.

JOSHUA HOWARD'S DEPOSITION.

I, Joshua Howard, of Haverhill, in the County of Grafton, husbandman, declare that about the time of our alarm and apprehension of Indians coming upon us when we were raising a stockade fort about Mr. Barron's house, I went to Colonel Asa Porter and asked him if he would let a gallon of rum go towards building the fort. He said he had supplied one gallon already. Well, says I, so have I too. He said, "I shall not let my rum go till somebody is security for it." I again said I am not going to be security for the rum—you'll get your money as soon as I shall, and you are as able to wait for it or to lose it as I am. He said further, "I am willing to do my part with the rest of the neighbours," and asked what Mr. Hale had done, or Colonel Hurd. I told him Mr. Hale's people had been at work on the fort, and I did not doubt he'd do his part, but he was not at home, being gone down country—nor was Colonel Hurd at home, but we had his oxen and some help from his hands. Upon the whole, Colonel Porter did not incline to let his rum go, and I went off without it.

BENAJAH HALL'S DEPOSITION.

I, Benajah Hall, of lawful age, testify and say that on Wednesday last, being at Colonel Porter's house in Haverhill, I heard Joshua Howard say, "Neptune, Colonel Porter's servant has 'listed twice and took his money." Then says Colonel Hurd to said Neptune, "make yourself easy—when I go down I will inquire and know whether you can go or not, and write to you that you may know." And the deponent further saith that he heard John Bayley say on oath before the Committee of Safety, on the day Colonel Porter was brought before said Committee, that in his conversation with said Porter, which happened a little before, he (said Bayley) carried matters as far or farther than Colonel Porter, in order to find him (said Porter) out, and that said Bayley further said that Colonel Porter said to him, at said Court-House, it is best to send to General Burgoyne if we can't get help elsewhere.

Then the above named Benajah Hall, personally appearing, made solemn oath to the truth of the foregoing Deposition.

EPHRAIM WESSON'S DEPOSITION.

I, Ephraim Wesson, of lawful age, testify and say, that some time after General Sullivan's retreat from St. John's to Crown-Point, being in company with Colonel Porter, he, the said Porter, asked me whether I did not think it would answer a good end to send to the Commander-in-Chief in Canada to have a line of protection drawn, over which the Savages should not come? He thought it would be no better than murder to suffer them to scalp men, women, and children, unarmed and about their business, and answered no end on their side or on ours to do the like. I asked him whether he meant that we (at Cohos) should send over. He (the said Porter) said, "no, I mean the Congress or General Washington;" and I had no reason from said Porter's conversation to think him an enemy to his country, but rather thought him a friend to the late declaration of the Continental Congress for independence; and being at Colonel Porter's the day before he set out for Exeter, where was a number of the Committee of Safety for Newbury, and a major part of the Committee for Haverhill, of which I was a member, I heard said Porter request said committees that he might be tried at Haverhill, or somewhere in the County of Grafton, by a Committee of the County of Gloucester and Grafton, or by a Committee taken from the several Committees of said Counties, or if they would send to the Upper Cohos or Number-Four, he would be at the whole expense and abide their judgment, as he thought it a hardship to be sent to Exeter, which would not only enhance the expense of trial but prevent his getting such evidence as he could get at or near home. The question was accordingly put to the Committee there together, and the answer was, we are willing that the Committee chosen to send Colonel Porter to Exeter should defer sending him till the whole Committees who ordered him to be sent may be called together. And we, the said Committees, afterwards, the same day, moved to two of the Committees for sending said Porter to Exeter, that said Porter might not be sent till the Committees who ordered him to be sent could be called together, as they were not all there; but the said Committee for sending said Porter to Exeter said, we will send him if we are not ordered to the contrary, and passed along and sent said Porter off the next day, without giving us time to notify the said Committees who ordered him sent.

Question. What is Daniel Hall's general character?

Answer. According to what I have heard people say of him, he is not a man of truth, or so industrious as he ought to be.

Question. What did you hear Colonel Hurd say about sending Colonel Porter to Exeter?

Answer. I heard Colonel Hurd say, Colonel Porter shall leave this town or I will. And further, Colonel Hurd said, I choose he should be sent to Exeter, for the Court there will be glad to see him, as they have heard he, the said Porter, has spoke against their proceedings.

EPHRAIM WESSON.

THOMAS CHAMBERLAIN'S DEPOSITION.

I, Thomas Chamberlain, of lawful age, testify and say that Daniel Hall's general character is that he is a lying fellow.

Question. Is Daniel Hall's general character that he is a lazy fellow?

Answer. Yes.

Question. Do you think from what you have heard people say of him that he is a drinking fellow?

Answer. Yes. I think from what I hear people say of him he drinks more than is for his profit.

Question. Did you ever hear any person say that Daniel Hall was a thief?

Answer. I heard a man say that he had stole from him about three hundred feet of boards.

THOS. CHAMBERLAIN.

Then the above named Thomas Chamberlain, Esquire, personally appearing, made solemn oath to the truth of the foregoing Deposition.

EZEKIEL LADD'S DEPOSITION.

I, Ezekiel Ladd, of lawful age, testify and say that I saw Colonel Porter about the 1st of July in Haverhill. I asked said Porter whether he was going off. He said, "no, I am only going to the height of land on Baker's River, and as soon as I can I shall return." I said to said Porter, we are determined to take the goods of such people as go off and leave us, and use them if we want them. Said Porter says, "if I don't come back again you are welcome to use them—but I mean to come right back again."

Grafton, Haverhill, August 30, 1776:

Then personally appeared Ezekiel Ladd, and made solemn oath to the truth of the foregoing Deposition.

NOAH MOULTON'S DEPOSITION.

I, Noah Moulton, of lawful age, testify and say that on Monday, the day before Colonel Porter was sent to Exeter, I heard Colonel Porter say to Colonel Hurd as follows: Colonel Hurd, before this affair happened, you would not have trusted Daniel Hall for one copper. Colonel Hurd answers, It is true, I would not.

Asked by Colonel Johnson; 1st Question. Have you often heard people speak of Daniel Hall?

Answer by said Moulton. Yes.

2d Question. What do people in general say of him?

Answer. They say he is a lying fellow, and not to be believed, and a lazy, good-for-nothing fellow.

3d Question. Do you think that those people you have heard speak so of him were acquainted with him?

Answer. Yes.

NOAH MOULTON.

Grafton, Haverhill, August 31, 1776:

Then personally appeared Noah Moulton, and made solemn oath to the truth of the above Deposition.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM A HOUSE IN LISBON TO THEIR CORRESPONDENT IN LONDON, DATED SEPTEMBER 4, 1776.

Yesterday we received advice from Setuval of an English commander having arrived there with part of his crew in a boat, who met an armed American privateering sloop, which took his vessel and cargo about fourteen leagues off Cape St. Vincent. She belongs to Mr. Moore, of Falmouth, and was richly laden, bound from London to Salerno and Messina. The same privateer had taken several vessels, and would send them all to the first port in America they could make. There is a report of several American privateers cruising in the track of the Straits' mouth and to the eastward of the Western Islands.

THOMAS STONE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, September 4, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed I send you part of an Indian speech which respects Maryland. I have only to inform the Convention that assistance is extremely wanted at New-York, and to express my hope that the exertions of that honourable body will be in proportion to the exigency of our affairs.

I am, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

T. STONE.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Convention of Maryland, Annapolis.

LETTERS RECOMMENDING LIEUTENANT VON HEDERICK.

St. Croix, September 4, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: My attachment to your Continent by the tenderest and most endearing connections of affinity and friendship; the great zeal and ardour I feel for the glorious cause of liberty and justice in which you are embarked, and my ardent wishes for your prosperity and success in your present laudable struggle against tyranny and oppression, and that your happy country—happy, indeed, if it can, under your sage and prudent counsels, inspired and directed by unerring Providence, vindicate and ascertain the sacred rights which it claims, and hand them down to a remote posterity—may be, in all future ages, an asylum and sanctuary for the sons of want and oppression of all nations, incline me to render you every assistance within the narrow sphere of my ability and influence. It is with this view that I have taken the liberty to recommend to your attention and friendship the bearer, Lieutenant Von Hederick, by birth a German, who has from his infancy been trained up in the military life, and is esteemed an experienced, well-disciplined officer, and to be endued with every accomplishment which can adorn the character of a good soldier. Hearing that you were raising and embodying four battalions of his countrymen, who were to be commanded only by German officers, although in much honour and actual service on this Island, where during eight years' residence he has supported a very unexceptionable good character, he immediately proposed himself for the Continental service, provided he could be properly recommended to your honourable body, and might expect promotion adequate to his merits.

And, although I have the honour of being personally acquainted but with few gentlemen of your very respectable body, I gladly undertook this office, and it gives me particular pleasure in assuring you that it is highly probable that several other very respectable officers in this Island may be inclinable to follow his example, provided they could meet with due encouragement.

You well know the nature of our Government; Lieutenant Hederick's ostensible motive, therefore, for going to your Continent, is the recovery of his health, and if he is well received I make no doubt others of our best officers will in a short time find themselves indisposed also—for I have the honour to assure you that most of the Danes of this Island, and the Germans almost to a man, are warmly attached to your glorious cause.

I can only add, that, if in anything I can serve you while here, you may lay your commands on him who is, with the most perfect esteem, honourable gentlemen, your most obedient and devoted servant,

JOHN HEYLIGER.

To the Honourable Continental Congress of the free and independent States of America.

— St. Croix, September 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am doubly happy in this opportunity, as it not only affords me an occasion of paying my respects to a gentleman for whom I have a most particular esteem, but also flatters me with the pleasing thought of being in some degree serviceable to a country to which I am riveted by the tenderest and dearest of ties, and also sincerely attached to the good people of it. The bearer, Lieutenant Von Hederick, observing by the resolve of Congress their directions for raising four companies of Germans, was desirous of a letter to some gentlemen of weight and consequence in your Province, and knowing of none more so than yourself, induced me to be thus troublesome. He is a gentleman who has from his infancy been constantly in the military service, and is esteemed an experienced, well-disciplined officer, who, during eight years' residence with us, has supported a very unexceptionable good character, and is possessed of every virtue that constitutes the good officer, and nothing doubt, under your auspices, of his being approved of and acceptable to your truly worthy and honourable Congress.

Mrs. Heyliger joins me in best respects to your truly amiable lady and every particular branch of your worthy family, and hope you will pardon this liberty when I assure you that I am, at all times and on all occasions, with the most perfect esteem, dear sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HEYLIGER.

To Thomas Willing, Esq.

— St. Croix, September 3, 1776.

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: I take the liberty to recommend Lieutenant Hederick to you, being a gentleman in the King of Denmark's service. His two brothers are Captains of the Fort in this Island. He has been in the army since a child, and he comes to serve you and America in general. With a good heart he gives up his commission here, on purpose to serve in America in the grand struggle for liberty. He has many letters of recommendation, and I hope he will meet with encouragement from the honourable Congress.

I have the honour to be, with respect, your humble servant,

CORNELIUS HAIGHT.

PETITION OF JOHN PAUL SCHOTT.

[Petition read September 5, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Continental Congress: The Petition of JOHN PAUL SCHOTT most humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner having served as a Lieutenant with the German troops commanded by Prince Ferdinand during the last war, and having acquired a considerable share of military skill in the profession of soldier, most humbly begs the honourable Congress (as he has ample testimonials with him of his good character) to grant him a Captain's commission in the Continental Army. And he, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

JOHN P. SCHOTT.

Philadelphia, September 4, 1776.

— Philadelphia, September 4, 1776.

Since our last, arrived here between thirty and forty inhabitants of this State, who have been taken at different times by the English Pirates on our coast. They were brought from the fleet at New-York on board the Orpheus, and landed at Lewestown, on Cape Henlopen.

GENERAL MERCER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 6th September.]

Perth-Amboy, September 4, 1776.

SIR: I returned to this post yesterday, from New-York, where I was ordered, by instructions of 25th and 27th August, to march as many of the troops under my command as could be spared from guarding this part of the country. In obedience to those orders from General Washington, between three and four thousand of the Militia of Pennsylvania and New-Jersey assembled at Bergen, ready to pass on to New-York, but were countermanded on the retreat of the army from Long-Island. We have, however, strengthened the posts of Powles's Hook and Bergen Neck to the complement of twenty-five hundred men.

By orders received last night, a body of troops are immediately to proceed to take post under General Ewing, opposite to Mount Washington.

The movements of the enemy seem to indicate their design of enclosing the army on New-York Island, for effecting which a powerful navy affords many advantages.

On a general view of our force, compared with that of the enemy, the event of this campaign is, in my opinion, greatly to be dreaded. General Washington has not, so far as I have seen, five thousand men to be depended on for the service of a campaign, and I have not one thousand. Both our armies are composed of raw Militia, perpetually fluctuating between the camp and their farms. Poorly armed and still worse disciplined, these, sir, are not a match, even were their numbers equal, which they are not, for veteran troops, well fitted, and urged on by able officers. Numbers and discipline must prevail at last. We may have both, if proper measures are speedily adopted and invariably prosecuted. Inlistments for a short period is the bane of military service, as well as doubly expensive; and giving soldiers, or even the lower orders of mankind, the choice of officers, will forever mar the discipline of your armies.

Should any disaster befall General Washington's army, either by another sweep of his best troops, or his being cut off from the necessary supplies, a body of men in reserve becomes absolutely necessary. It cannot be provided too soon; nor can any expense too great be held out to induce the first men in the country to engage in the service, till a period is put to the efforts of the enemies of America.

I beg the honourable Congress will not take amiss the freedom with which my sentiments on this most interesting subject are offered. The confidence you have honoured me with would be justly forfeited were I to suppress such observations as appear to me essential in support of the cause of American freedom.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

HUGH MERCER.

To the Honourable John Hancock, Esq.

LORD DUNMORE TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

[No. 5]

Ship Dunmore, off New-York, }
September 4, 1776. }

MY LORD: Since my arrival here, I have received your Lordship's letter of the 21st of May, and am sorry to find that the Duke of Cumberland packet-boat, with the despatches, were lost, though I am afraid your Lordship would have found but little information that would have been agreeable to you. One reason why I am sorry that they did not get safe is, that mine contained originals of intercepted letters, that would have gone far to have warranted the securing the bearers of them. These were chiefly French, which it was not in my power, from the shortness of the time from their being intercepted and the sailing of the packet, to have copied. Of the others I have already sent you duplicates, and now triplicates.

It becomes necessary now that I should give your Lordship my reasons for being here. They are few, but I hope your Lordship will think them conclusive. First, the impracticability of watering, our numbers being reduced to one hundred and eight men capable of doing duty, and those decreasing every day. The last time we were on shore (as your Lordship will have seen by No. 4) we were opposed by above three times our number; and that we were sure to meet with, wherever we went. Secondly, our sickly state; yet I cannot say our sick list increased much in numbers, as there were as many died almost as there were added to it; in short, there was not a ship in the fleet that did not throw one, two, three, or more dead overboard every night. The Roebuck, I will venture to say as well regulated and as clean a ship as any in the navy, had seventy-five on her sick list; and so in proportion had every other ship. Captain Hamond and myself finding it absolutely requisite to go to sea immediately, as the only chance of recovering the sick and saving those that were well; and being at sea, and knowing this to be the place of rendezvous for both fleet and army, we both thought it best to run in here, where we would have an opportunity of giving the General and Admiral every information that came within our knowledge relative to the state of the Southern Colonies and our own situation, and at the same time to procure some aid. Though both General and Admiral approve very much of our conduct, yet they seem very unwilling to part with any of their force at present. Indeed it is hardly to be wished till the fate of New-York is determined; when I hope, if they are able to spare us any assistance, they will. Sure I am, returning to Virginia without can answer no good end to his Majesty's service, but, on the contrary, would be giving fresh vigour and spirits to the Rebels, who would have it in their power to drive us from every spot where we might endeavour to land for water; and if we run up any of the rivers for water, they are there so narrow that the Rebels may annoy a ship from either side, with cannon, with impunity.

I have offered my services here, in the mean time, to General Howe, and shall be happy if I can be of use.

I have now only to congratulate your Lordship on the success of his Majesty's arms on the 26th ultimo. I was with the Highlanders and Hessians the whole day, and it is with the utmost pleasure I can assure your Lordship that the ardour of both these corps on that day must have exceeded his Majesty's most sanguine wish; and I am well convinced, from everything I have heard, that the fervour of the rest of the army was in no ways inferior to those I have just now mentioned, but of which I was not an eyewitness.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

DUNMORE.

To Lord George Germaine.

LORD DUNMORE TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

30th March, 1776. }

MY LORD: It gives me great comfort, in the very unhappy situation in which I am left, to think that my conduct meets with his Majesty's approbation. I can assure your Lordship, were it not for that, and the earnest desire I have to serve him, no earthly consideration could induce me to continue in this wretched State, where there is not a hope of gaining either honour, credit, pleasure, or profit. No! my sole comfort is that I am doing my utmost to serve the best of sovereigns.

What your Lordship observes in my despatches of the 22d of October, of the disposition of many of the people here to take an open part against the Rebels, is exactly as I had the honour to inform your Lordship; and I really believe now, had the Liverpool arrived (as your Lordship had reason to expect) about that time, I am well satisfied it would have made a wonderful change on the face of affairs in this country. But, my Lord, she did not arrive here till the 19th of December, two months after that, as your Lordship will have seen by my subsequent despatches.

Common fame has long since informed me that an armament was preparing for the southern part of this Continent; and many a pleasing idea it gave me, in the midst of my distress, the hopes that I should soon have relief. And your Lordship, however sensible your feelings may be, will not easily conceive what I felt on the receipt of yours, which informs me that, notwithstanding all my applications, representations, sufferings, and the efforts I had made with two incomplete companies of the Fourteenth Regiment—that notwithstanding all I had said or done—no attention was paid to it, but am left, in the first Colony on the Continent for riches, power, and extent, without the smallest assistance, and the preference given to a poor, insignificant Province, which has not a safe harbour with depth of water that will admit half the fleet that is sent there; and, as I am informed, should the army land, they must wade through a sandy pine-barren for many miles, before they reach the inhabited part of the country.

General Clinton, in his way to North-Carolina, called here, and stayed with me two or three days, when I gave him every information in my power, relative to the situation of this Colony; and his Majesty may be assured, should the General return here, he shall have every assistance that one most zealously devoted to his Majesty's service can give him.

Your Lordship will observe, by my letter No. 34, that I have been endeavouring to raise two regiments here—one of white people, the other of black. The former goes on very slowly, but the latter very well, and would have been in great forwardness had not a fever crept in amongst them, which carried off a great many very fine fellows. The medical people here thought, and I believe with reason, that it proceeded from their being much crowded on board the ships, and want of clothing—both of which we have now provided against: the first, by landing, and taking possession of a small neck of land, which I have fortified in the best manner our abilities and circumstances would admit of; and I think, though we have now several thousands of the Rebel army in our neighbourhood, who frequently come and take a few shots at us, and retire, yet I am satisfied they will not willingly give us any disturbance there, though they threaten it much. We have in this little fort four ovens, and pretty good barracks for our Ethiopian corps. I have bought a large quantity of oznaburghs, of which I am making summer clothing for our garrison.

My Lord, in my despatch No. 34, I had frequent occasion to mention a family of the name of Goodrich, natives of this Colony. This is a spirited, active, industrious family, and it has cost me much trouble and pains (knowing the service they would be of to whichever party they joined) to secure them in his Majesty's service. The male part consists of a father and seven sons, five of which are arrived to the age of manhood, who are now most zealously engaged in his Majesty's service. Four of them are perfectly well acquainted with every river, creek, or branch within this Bay. I have now five of their vessels employed constantly running up the rivers, where they have orders to seize, burn, or destroy everything that is water-borne that they can get at. They often land, and take off what provisions they can get, which keeps the Rebels in constant motion; and I generally send a few of the Fourteenth Regiment with them. They land only where they are not likely to meet with opposition, and have orders to retire on board so soon as they see any force coming against them. I mention this family to your Lordship for two reasons: the first is, lest any of their vessels, of which they have many in various parts of the world, should fall into the hands of any of our ships of war, that they may have that attention shown to them that I think them so well entitled to. My second reason is, that, should we ever see better times in this quarter, (which I pray God we may soon!) his Majesty may show them such marks of his favour as he thinks their services are deserving of. They have all left their houses, negroes, plantations, stock, and every thing else, at the mercy of the Rebels, and are now, with their whole families, water-borne in this fleet.

I have received the late act of Parliament, with your Lordship's despatches, which I have hardly yet been able to look into, but should be glad to have your Lordship's opinion whether the word "not," in the 217th page and 18th line, standing between the words "Provinces" and "herein," is meant to be part of the bill, or is only an error in the press. If it is part of the act, it then restrains every Governour, Lieutenant-Governour, or Commander-in-Chief of any of his Majesty's Colonies or Provinces now in rebellion, from sending vessels to supply themselves, or those under their protection, with the necessaries of life; which I hope could never be meant.

Enclosed* I send your Lordship a letter of Mr. John Norton, dated the 22d of November, 1775, to Mr. Robert Carter Nicholas, Treasurer of this Colony, wherein Mr. Norton informs him that about £3,000 of the bills he drew in favour of Mr. N. had been presented and accepted. This Mr. N. most certainly means Mr. Thomas Newton, Junior, the endorser of the bills sent your Lordship in my letter No. 34.

My long residence in this quarter of the globe, in the publick capacity in which his Majesty has been pleased to employ me, has given me an opportunity of making many observations on the policy of this Continent, that I should be happy to have an opportunity of communicating to your Lordship before matters are finally settled on this Continent.

* Received no enclosure with this duplicate.

Since writing the above, I have been reading the Act with more attention than I had leisure to do before, and I must observe to your Lordship, if my construction of it is right, it will be impossible to be complied with, for the Act says, in the 22d page, that "the prizes are not to be carried into any of the Colonies herein particularly mentioned." Now, all come under that predicament, Nova Scotia and the Floridas excepted; so that every vessel so soon as taken must be sent to one or other of these places, which would take them near three months to go and return, in which vessel they must send an officer and a number of men, according to the size of the vessel. Was this to be the case, there is not a man-of-war on this station, that would have either officer or man left in her in a month; were they even to detain them in the fleet, where such capture was made, they must leave so many men in them that in a very short time their ships would be so weak that they would not be fit to go to sea, which was the case here for some time, and having no Judge of the Admiralty here to try them, I was obliged to find a remedy for this inconveniency, which was this: I appointed five gentlemen in the fleet to act as Commissioners, who are empowered to take depositions and inquire fully into the circumstances of any captures made by the men-of-war, or the tenders; if in their opinion the vessel and cargo were seizable, they then appointed sworn appraisers to put a value on the vessel and cargo, and the vessel and cargo were sold to the highest bidder at publick auction, and the moneys arising from such sales are deposited in the hands of responsible people, either till his Majesty's pleasure should be known, or if a Judge of the Admiralty should afterwards be appointed, and the owners of the vessels were not satisfied with the judgment of the Commissioners, the cause might be tried by the Judge of the Admiralty from the depositions, etc., taken by the Commissioners, of which they are required to keep regular books, properly authenticated. This was the mode I thought requisite to adopt, rather than his Majesty's service should suffer by employing the sailors in taking care of prizes, and to prevent the goods from perishing and being totally lost, and probably the vessel also; indeed, most of these prizes have been loaded with provisions, which we should ere this have been in the greatest want of, had we not been so fortunate as to have taken them.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

DUNMORE.

To Lord George Germaine.

April 2, 1776. }

MY LORD: The packet not yet being sailed on account of the wind, and Lieutenant Ordd, of his Majesty's ship the Roebuck, having brought in two small vessels, one of which is from Saint Nicola Mole, bound to Philadelphia, in which were three Frenchmen. Two of the three were officers in the French army; one of them, Monsieur De la Bussière, says his only reason for wishing to go to Philadelphia was on account of his health, which may be true; he had, however, about him the letters (No. 1) to Mr. Hancock, and his discharge, (No. 2.)* The other officer acknowledged to me his intention was to go into the service of the Rebels, of which, were it requisite, the enclosed No. 3 is a very sufficient proof, as it is wrote by his own hand. The other was supercargo in the vessel, and had a large quantity of molasses and coffee on board. I have sent the three by the packet for your Lordship to dispose of as you shall think proper. I beg leave to inform your Lordship, that either two or three vessels (one of which was a French one, and navigated by Frenchmen,) loaded with powder, had sailed a short time before the schooner left the Mole, all bound to Philadelphia, but I make no doubt Captain Hamond, who is now in the river Delaware, will give a good account of them; sure I am he won't fail of zeal.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

DUNMORE.

To Lord George Germaine.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

[No. 3.]

Ship Dunmore, in Gwin's Island Harbour, }
Virginia, June 26, 1776. }

MY LORD: Since writing your Lordship of the 2d of April, nothing very material has happened, except our change of harbour, which I found absolutely necessary, as we were constantly exposed to the fire of the musketry of the enemy, (Elizabeth River not being above musket-shot over,) and in daily expectation of their bringing heavier metal down against us, and that we lay in a tide's way, and exposed to be burnt by fire-rafts, or boats, which they might have sent down amongst us, which indeed they did attempt, as your Lordship may see by the enclosed, (No. 1) which is authentick, as I had it from a spy I had amongst them who may be relied on; added to this, our salt provisions were quite expended, and we had no fresh. It therefore became requisite to move to a place where we could have an immediate supply of the latter, and there was no place (known to me) that appeared so eligible as the one we now occupy, and indeed so it has proved, for a finer harbour never was seen. We found on this Island (which contains two or three and twenty hundred acres of land) a considerable quantity of stock of different kinds, with great abundance of fish on all sides of it. The only fault that I can find to it, that it lies too near the main, which the Rebels occupy, all around us, as the haven between it and the main in some places don't exceed two hundred yards wide. On the west end of this Island, where it is narrowest, I have thrown up a small work, in which I have five cannon, with another on the east end with two, and two smaller ones, towards the centre, which I would willingly flatter myself will secure us from any insult from our enemy, who, however, seem to neglect no opportunity of annoying us.

I am extremely sorry to inform your Lordship that that fever, of which I informed you in my letter No. 1, has proved a very malignant one, and has carried off an incredible number of our people, especially the blacks. Had it not been for this horrid disorder, I am satisfied I should have had two thousand blacks, with whom I should have had no doubt of penetrating into the heart of this Colony. I have done everything in my power to get the better of it, but am sorry to inform your Lordship that all our efforts have hitherto proved ineffectual; but every other means shall be tried to put a stop to it. I have now separated the sick from the well, by the breadth of the Island, and mean if possible to keep them from each other.

I am sorry also to inform your Lordship that old Mr. Goodrich, whom I mentioned in my last to your Lordship, he having taken two prizes in one of the Rebel harbours, and not being able by contrary winds to get out, was in the night boarded with a number of boats by the Rebels, and taken, and is now confined in the gaol at Williamsburg, loaded with very heavy irons, and I really fear their inhuman treatment of him will put an end to his life; soon after this, two of his sons were unfortunate enough to fall likewise into their hands, who I doubt will not fare much better than the father.

Enclosed I send your Lordship (No. 2) the printed paper wherein the Convention of this Colony declare themselves independent of Great Britain, and I am well pleased they have declared themselves, for notwithstanding that they have by every artifice prepared the minds of the people for this event, yet I am well convinced it is quite repugnant to the wish of most. Their having ordered the prayers for the preservation of his Majesty, and those of his family, etc., to be erased, and substituted others for their Congress, Conventions, etc., in their place, I am well convinced (though this Colony is by no means remarkably over-religious) that this change will have a wonderful effect on the minds of the lower class of people, who, I am satisfied, even now only wait for an army able to protect them, which army, I doubt not, were they landed, they would immediately join; even many of those, I am satisfied, that now appear in arms against us would willingly change sides.

Finding the expense of hiring small vessels for tenders considerable, and that the prizes they were daily bringing in were selling for a song, I thought it best for his Majesty's service to purchase a few of the fittest for that purpose. I have therefore bought five small vessels which are all now employed in that service.

Hearing a few days ago, that there were a number of well-affected subjects to his Majesty on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, I sent immediately three of the tenders there to bring off as many as were willing to come. They last night brought me between fifty and sixty, and would have brought many more had they had room for them; directly on hearing this I sent off five small tenders and a ship to bring as many more as wished to serve his Majesty; I have enlisted those that came in the Queen's Own Loyal Virginia Regiment.

By the Virginia Gazette, which I have just now received, I am sorry to see that the Oxford transport from Glasgow, having on board two hundred and seventeen Highlanders, was taken by two of the Rebel armed vessels on their way here; they had been taken before to the northward, by one of the Rebel vessels, who disarmed them and took the officers from on board, and put eight of their own people on board to carry her into port, but the carpenter of the vessel formed a party and retook her from these eight, and was bringing her in here to me, when they were again most unfortunately retaken; of what service would they not have been to me here!

Since I wrote your Lordship last, Mr. John Grymes is the only person of any consequence in this Colony, that has joined me, (who is a great acquisition.) He is of the first family in this country, of good fortune, but what is more valuable than either, he is a most amiable character, being a man of the strictest honour, of an excellent disposition, and good parts; brave, active and enterprising. The Island being between four and five miles in length, and our numbers fit to do duty very few, and finding horses on the Island, I advised Mr. Grymes to form a little troop, and take the command of it, which he has done, by which he (being posted in the middle of the Island) is able to give assistance to either end that should be attacked. Mr. Ralph Wormeley, one of the Council, and Mr. Philip Grymes, brother to John, are made prisoners by the Rebels, and sent to the back country.

I am, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient, humble servant,

DUNMORE.

To Lord George Germaine.

[Enclosure in No. 3.]

INFORMATION OF A SPY, GIVEN TO LORD DUNMORE THE 3D DAY OF MAY, 1776.

Saturday, in the evening, as I was lying on the floor of Neal's house, as if asleep, I heard Major Thomas Parker, Josiah Parker, and — Lawson, speak freely that that night or before morning, that Dunmore and the fleet would be destroyed; and that on Major Parker's being ordered out with a company to join Hoffler at the mouth of the Western Branch, he asked Josiah Parker what should be done with the Tories he found on board the vessels, he answered, "Damn them, tomahawk them all and throw them overboard, and give yourself no further trouble about them;" that on firing signal guns at four o'clock on Sunday morning (which was done) the ship Dunmore if possible, if not her, that any other vessel should be boarded and set on fire, at the same time they should attack the lines on the Mill Point, and burn Portsmouth; that on Sunday morning about seven o'clock the party returned to Neal's, when Parker reported to the other officers that just before daylight they were under the stern of the Dunmore, heard a noise in the cabin, went close by the accommodation ladder, and thought to have boarded her, but daylight approaching too fast prevented the attempt; that they shot a negro going ashore in a canoe with a bottle of rum, which they drank to his health as he was expiring.

INFORMATION OF ANOTHER SPY, GIVEN 11TH OF MAY, 1776.

MY LORD: Since I had the honour of waiting on your Excellency on Friday evening last, I have received the following interesting intelligence: That the Shirtmen are and have been busy some time past in constructing boats, every way fit and proper to attack and destroy the fleet lying off Norfolk, that the whole or greatest part of said boats are ready, and only wait for favourable weather to be conducted to the shipping; that they are to be fully manned with desperadoes, and have a proper proportion of combustibles for burning the vessels; that their horrid plan is to operate in various ways, and conducted with the greatest secrecy at dead of night; that some of the ships they are to board, some they are to burn, and cut the cables of the rest, so as they may drive on shore; that the landings on each side of the shipping are to be covered with their infernal demons, who are to put to death all that attempt to put their feet on shore; and lastly, that a very strong party are destined to your Excellency's ship in order that she may be with certainty destroyed. Such, my Lord, is the bloody plan intended to be perpetrated by those sons of murder and devastation, and your Excellency has had sufficient and repeated proofs of their barbarous inhumanity to convince you that no crime is too black and dismal for them to perform, and that they are well provided with desperate villains who will undertake to execute the most dreadful and horrid butchery. When I deliver my weak sentiments upon this very interesting and momentous affair, it proceeds from no presumption, but a real and great solicitude for the safety and preservation of your Excellency's person, which, believe me, my Lord, in the present situation of affairs, cannot be out of danger; your Lordship ought to have a much greater number of hands on board your ship, and their characters, if possible, well known; for be assured, my Lord, the fleet have too many villains on board, who give intelligence to the Shirtmen of everything that passes in the fleet, and they have the information almost as soon as it reaches your own ears; and I sincerely wish that your ship may be clear of such vermin. The most strict watch and outlook is necessary, and every implement of defence and destruction ready and prepared to repel those bloodhounds of murder and rapine. Upon a subject of such consequence, I do think I cannot, especially if I omit any that ought to be mentioned, exceed. Your Excellency will please to know that the three fellows that came lately on board your ship, had no meaning in their application, but were intended as spies under the protection of a flag of truce, and to observe the situation, condition, and strength of your Excellency's ship; and I think the names of two of the three were Campbell and Fleming.

[No. 4.] Ship Dunmore, in Potowmack River, Virginia, }
July 31, 1776. }

MY LORD: Since writing your Lordship of the 26th of June, at Gwin's Island, we have again been obliged to shift our quarters. The enemy brought down ten pieces of ordnance, and on the 9th instant began to play on my ship from two batteries; she was laid very near the shore in order to prevent the Rebels from landing on the Island; we were so near one of their batteries (which consisted of an eighteen and a twenty-four-pounder) that they struck the ship every shot. I got our raw and weak crew to fire a few shot at them, but I soon perceived that our six-pounders made no impression on their batteries. Our boatswain being killed, and several of the people wounded, I found it impracticable to make them stand any longer to their guns; we were therefore obliged to cut our cable, though there was not a breath of air stirring; but the little tide there was drifted us from the shore. When the Rebels found their guns had no further effect on us, they next day turned them on two small tenders that we found it requisite to place in the haven between the Island and the main, which soon obliged our people to quit them and get on the Island. One of them was set on fire; Mr. Thomas, midshipman of the Fowey, who commanded the other, was obliged to abandon her before he could effect it, being almost surrounded by the boats of the enemy; in making his escape he received two slight wounds, so near had they got to him; they made only one boy a prisoner. On the 11th we left the Island, and on the night of that day came to anchor in the Bay, at the mouth of the river Potowmack; there sprung up a fresh of wind, which parted the cables of many of the small crafts of our ill-provided fleet, some few of which were lost, but the people of all were saved except of one sloop, which drifted on shore and fell into the hands of the Rebels. We next morning put into the river Potowmack, where we are wooding and watering on an Island.

I have taken this opportunity of advising all those who have put themselves under the protection of his Majesty's ships, to proceed to such place of safety as they shall think proper; some go immediately to Great Britain, others to the West Indies, and others to St. Augustine, by which means we shall be disincumbered of everything but the transports, which I hope will enable us to harass and distress these inveterate foes to the best of Sovereigns, and a most indulgent parent State.

Not finding water in that abundance we could wish on St. George's Island, I ordered all the empty water casks of the fleet to be put on board two of the transports, with which Captain Hamond, in the Roebuck, and this ship went up the river about a hundred miles, into fresh water, where we soon filled our casks; during our stay here about three hundred of the Rebels assembled themselves at the house of a Mr. Brent, who is one of their Colonels; we were, with the assistance of the Roebuck's Marines, volunteers, blacks and whites, able to muster one hundred and eight men; with these we landed under cover of two small tenders and a small row galley, which I had fitted up at Gwin's Island, in which Captain Hamond has put a six-pounder, and occasionally an officer and twenty men. She is proof against musket-shot and draws but eighteen inches of water. We were no sooner landed than the Rebels fled on all quarters from the house and offices, all of which we burned, and having done all the mischief in our power, we reembarked without the loss of a man killed, and only four or five wounded, of which number is Lieutenant Wallace of the Fourteenth Regiment; it is only a flesh wound, which I am satisfied will be well in a few days; every praise is due to the spirit of this young gentleman. We found only three of the bodies of the Rebels, but we flatter ourselves there were several more, that the rest had carried off; in Mr. Brent's house we found the enclosed newspaper, (No. 1,) by which your Lordship will see that the Virginians have altered their Constitution into a strange motley, which they call a Commonwealth; they therein set forth their reasons for so doing.

I have also the honour to transmit to your Lordship five letters which were intercepted by Captain Hamond. I need not comment upon them to your Lordship, whose judgment will much better direct you what is proper to be done with them and their authors than I can possibly do; sorry I am, however, to find that the letters of Mr. Lee, which I transmitted home in No. 34 were not found sufficient to secure him from giving further information to his countrymen here; the letters Nos. 2 and 3 are from the Whartons, who seem to me to have good intelligence, and very willing to communicate it to their friends here; I wish I was able to inform your Lordship where they had it from. I hope your Lordship will make them discover it. I am really sorry to inform your Lordship that Cox, the bearer of these letters, together with Mr. Jennings, his Majesty's Attorney General for Maryland, and the master of the sloop in which they came from the West Indies, made their escape from the sloop on the night before they were to have been delivered over to me; had I been so fortunate as to have got them into my possession I should most certainly have sent them home to your Lordship, as I most believe they are both freighted with every information their friends in London could communicate to them. It is by the West Indies that the Rebels receive all their information; it is first sent to the British West-India Islands, and from thence conveyed to St. Eustatia, with which place the Rebels have a constant intercourse, and are supplied by the Dutch with powder and ammunition of every kind, as well as all sorts of dry goods, rum, and sugar. I had certain information a few days ago of the safe arrival of a brig from that port with thirty tons of powder besides small arms and ammunition of all sorts to one of our outposts; in short, it is impossible for Captain Hamond (who does all in his power) without more assistance, to prevent them from running small craft, and sometimes larger, into the numerous ports of these two Colonies; they are now become so formidable, even by water, in this Bay, that they have actually drove all our tenders up to the fleet, and Captain Hamond does not think it safe to trust one of his Majesty's sloops alone in the Bay; nay, they had the impudence a few days ago, with one of their ships of eighteen guns and two of her tenders, to run up within a few miles of the fleet. We were then just turning down this river from watering; the Roebuck and Fowey both gave them chase, but they were so far windward, that they could not come up with them; at the same time the Rebels on shore opened a battery on the Fowey, whilst she was getting under way.

We are now anchored in the river, and I hope to-morrow will clear us of everything but the ships-of-war and the transports; but where we are to go, or what we can do next, to render service to his Majesty, I own I am puzzled to know, and I find there is now not even a chance of our receiving any assistance. I really am at a loss what to determine on, for next month it will become very unsafe for the ships to keep the Bay, and I do declare I know not where we can go with our present force to make a harbour of any tolerable safety; for we no sooner appear off the land, than signals are made from it, when the coast is covered with men, and if we come to anchor within cannon-shot of either shore, guns are immediately brought to bear upon us, which it is not in the power of the ships to dislodge, as the shoals will not permit them to get near enough.

Enclosed is another paper (No. 4) that was found whilst we were last on shore, but I hope most sincerely that matters may be greatly exaggerated in it. We have had no other account of the matter either by land or water, but what I enclose your Lordship. Lest your Lordship should not have seen the resolutions of the Congress relative to Independence, I have sent it your Lordship, marked No. 5.

August 4.

Seeing a tender of Captain Hamond's (that he had sent to Sir Peter Parker) coming up, I would not close my letter till I saw Mr. Whitworth, who commands her; and I am extremely sorry to find that No. 4 contains but too true an account of our loss before Charlestown. I have letters from Sir Peter and General Clinton, both informing me that it is perfectly out of their power to give me any sort of assistance; which will render my situation, if possible, more intolerable than it has been for these fourteen months past that I have been constantly penned up in a ship, hardly with the common necessities of life; but what makes it now a thousand times worse, is, that I am left without even the hopes of being able to render his Majesty the smallest service; this, I must say, is truly discouraging, and leaves me in the utmost difficulty to determine what to do; my utmost desire is (when I do resolve) that I may do what may be most agreeable to his Majesty's wishes, and the best for his service. Mr. Simonton, the bearer of this, or Governour Eden, who accompanies him, will be able to inform your Lordship particularly of the forlorn state in which they have left us.

And I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

DUNMORE.

To Lord George Germaine.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL GAY.

New-York, September 4, 1776.

SIR: Whether you do not get the General Orders with that regularity which is to be wished, or whether (which is hard to suppose) you do not attend to them, I will not undertake to determine; but it is a melancholy truth that returns essentially necessary for the Commanding officer to govern himself by, and which might be made in an hour after they are called for, where care and order are observed, are obtained with so much difficulty. Nor can I help regretting, that not only regular returns, but that orders, in instances equally important, should be so little attended to. I therefore address myself to you in this manner, requesting in express and peremptory terms, that you do without delay make out and return to the Adjutant-General's office immediately, an exact state of the regiment or corps under your command, and that the like return be given in every Saturday, at orderly time, without fail.

I also desire, in terms equally express, that you do not suffer the men of your corps to straggle from their quarters, or be absent from camp without leave, and even then but few at a time. Your own reputation, the safety of the army, and the good of the cause, depend, under God, upon our vigilance and readiness to oppose a crafty and enterprising enemy, who are always upon the watch to take advantages. To prevent straggling, let your rolls be called over three times a day, and the delinquents punished. I have one thing more to urge, and that is, that every attempt of the men to plunder houses, orchards, gardens, &c., be discouraged, not only for the preservation of property and sake of good order, but for the prevention of those fatal consequences which usually follow such diabolical practices. In short, sir, at a time when everything is at stake, it behooves every man to exert himself. It will not do for the commanding officer of a regiment to content himself with barely giving orders; he should see (at least know) they are executed. He should call his men out frequently, and endeavour to impress them with a just and true sense of their duty, and how much depends upon subordination and discipline.

Let me, therefore, not only command, but exhort you and your officers, as you regard your reputation, your country, and the sacred cause of freedom in which you are engaged, to manly and vigorous exertions at this time, each striving to excel the other in the respective duties of his department. I trust it is unnecessary for me to add further, and that these and all other articles of your duty you will execute with a spirit and punctuality becoming your station.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Colonel Fisher Gay.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

September 4, 1776.

SIR: In answer to both your favours, just received by Lieutenant Smith, I can only say, that circumstanced as we both are at present, it is not in my power to give you other instructions for your conduct than that you pursue every step which shall appear to you necessary and judicious for annoying and harassing the enemy and to prevent their foraging; and while those measures are in any degree effectual, I would wish to have you continue on the Island; but as soon as you find that you can be of no longer service, I would have you make your retreat to the main without further delay. You will take care to have the boats so provided as to secure your retreat in the best manner possible.

I am, with due regard, sir, your very humble servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Henry B. Livingston.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

New-York, September 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Your favours of the 29th and 31st ultimo, with their several enclosures, have been duly received.

I sincerely wish the event of the skirmish on Long-Island had been as favourable to us as reported to you. Hurried and involved in a multiplicity of business, I cannot give you a particular detail of it. I shall only add, that we lost in killed and wounded and prisoners, from seven hundred to one thousand men; among the prisoners are General Sullivan and Lord Stirling. The enemy's loss has not been ascertained yet, but there is reason to believe, from the continuance of the action and the heavy firing between them and Lord Stirling's detachment, that it was considerable. We have been informed so by deserters. They overpowered our people by their numbers and constant reinforcements.

When I have an opportunity, and circumstances will admit, I will inquire after Lieutenant Johnson, and order him to Albany.

I am extremely obliged by your interposing to have the boards sent down. I have informed the Quartermaster-General, and directed him to take measures for obtaining a large supply, as I have grounds to apprehend many will be wanted.

The short inlistment of our troops has been the source of some of our misfortunes, and of infinite trouble and difficulty already, and I am not without apprehension that, sooner or later, must prove of fatal consequence. I have wrote my sentiments very fully to Congress upon this subject two or three times. In a late letter I have urged the expediency of a permanent army during the war. The necessity is too obvious to require arguments to prove it. I think it will be advisable to recruit out of the present army as fast as possible; but I fear the progress will be but small. The bounties given by the different States, to raise their quotas of men for so short a time, must have a pernicious tendency. Many will refuse to enlist, as that allowed by Congress is so low, in hopes of exacting more.

The letters from our officers in Canada, transmitted by General Gates, I have sent to Congress with the return you enclosed. I have also perused and delivered your letter to the Commissary, having sealed it first, and wish matters to be so ordered as best to promote the service.

Observing that General Gates, in his letter to you, mentions his want of cartridge paper for muskets, I have wrote to Congress and requested them to supply it if possible, having none here or but very little, and have also directed the Quartermaster-General to send up some grindstones, not knowing whether they can be had at Albany.

I am, dear sir, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, N. Department.

P. S. Your letter preceding the two last came to hand when I was sending away my papers, and being put up with them after a cursory reading, I don't recollect it sufficiently to answer.

Being certain that we shall have occasion for a large quantity of boards for barracks and shelter for the troops which will be posted at King's Bridge, in its vicinity, and over the river, opposite the works erected at the upper end of this Island, I wish to be informed if they can be supplied, and shall be glad those who undertake it will begin to hurry 'em down with all expedition to the nearest landing place to the bridge.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED LONG-ISLAND, (NEW-YORK,) SEPTEMBER 4, 1776.

Mr. Washington has issued a recommendation that all the women, children, and infirm persons, leave the city of New-York, as a bombardment and attack may be hourly expected, adding the following words: "Trusting that with the blessing of Heaven upon the American arms, they may soon return to it in perfect security." From which, added to certain accounts that there are six thousand of their soldiers sick in the place, it may be hoped that loyal city may not be sacrificed to the inexorable fury of fanatical and Congressional proscription. Our prospects of its safety are strengthened by the following circumstance: In the night of the 2d instant three persons escaped from the city in a canoe, and informed our General that Mr. Washington had ordered three battalions of New-York Provincials to leave New-York, and that they should be replaced by an equal number of Connecticut troops; but the former, assured that the Connecticutians would burn and destroy all the houses, peremptorily refused to give up their city, declaring that no cause of exigence whatsoever should induce them to entrust the defence of it to any other than her own inhabitants. This spirited and stubborn resolution prevailed over the orders of their Commander, and the New-Yorkers continue snugly in possession of the place. We have just been informed that the two battalions from Cumberland County, in Pennsylvania are sick of the contest, and dreading the Light Infantry, Hessians, Chasseurs, and Dragoons of the Royal Army, have very prudently bid adieu to military achievements, and in a body returned to their own farms, there to cultivate the arts of peace and reconciliation.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM LORD PERCY TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON, DATED CAMP AT NEWTOWN, SEPTEMBER 4, 1776.

It was the General's orders that the troops should receive the Rebels' first fire, and then rush on them before they had recovered their arms, with their bayonets, which threw them into the utmost disorder and confusion, they being unacquainted with such a manœuvre. A light dragoon discovering three riflemen in a wood, who had secreted themselves in order to pick out the officers as they appeared, attacked them, shot one, took the other two prisoners, and brought them to Lord Percy, who rewarded him for his gallant behaviour. A great many of the horses belonging to Preston's regiment, that were left in Boston at the evacuation, were found on Long-Island.

CAPTAIN THOMAS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Harlem, September 4, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOURS: The unhappy situation of the Maryland troops now here, makes it absolutely necessary that you should be acquainted with it, and also you might have received information from others, yet I think it my duty also (though low in office) to make you acquainted with it, and I have not the least doubt but you will immediately apply a remedy.

We have now, and have had for some time, a number of our men sick, a number very ill. I have had from fifteen to twenty of my men extremely ill, and have not yet been able to procure them the least assistance. The Province have but two Surgeons here—one of them very ill—and none can be procured here. From the best authority I can assure you we have, at this time, near two hundred men unfit for duty, and most of them without any assistance from the doctor. The neglect of the troops when sick discourages them more than any other circumstance, and I am convinced, if it was generally known, would have the worst of consequences, both as to recruiting for the troops already raised or in raising new levies. I hope the freedom I have taken will be readily excused, especially when 'tis considered, and I hope believed, that I have no other motive than the publick service. With this hope, I conclude myself your most obedient humble servant,

J. A. THOMAS.

To the Hon. the Convention of Maryland, or in their recess the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland.

COLONEL NICOLL TO GENERAL HEATH.

Mount-Washington, September 4, 1776.

SIR: Last night, about ten o'clock, there came two regiments to this post of Brigadier-General Heard's brigade; and as Colonel Hutchinson is gone to New-York, who I understood was to give me orders, I send my Orderly-Sergeant to your Honour for orders. I have nothing particular to acquaint you of.

I remain with sincere affection, your obedient and humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL, Colonel.

To General Heath.

GENERAL HEATH TO COLONEL NICOLL.

King's Bridge, September 4, 1776.

DEAR SIR: As Colonel Hutchinson is absent, I think you had better remain at Mount-Washington until he returns, (which will be soon,) and acquaint the Commanding officer who is come to that post with as many particulars respecting the post as you can; and after Colonel Hutchinson's return you will march back your detachment to this post.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

W. HEATH.

To Colonel Nicoll.

CAPTAIN WILLIAMS TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 4, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The blacksmiths that I have here to work are very uneasy; they want to know what they are to have per day, besides their wages. I beg that your Honour would let me know what they shall have.

I remain your very obedient, humble servant,

EDWARD WILLIAMS, Captain.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

PASS FOR NEHEMIAH CARPENTER.

Westchester County, New-Rochelle, New-York, }
September 4, 1776. }

Permit the bearer hereof, Nehemiah Carpenter, Sen., to pass as far as Norwalk, he being a friend to the American liberty. ABRAM GUION, Chairman of Sub-Committee.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED CAMP MOUNT-INDEPENDENCE, OPPOSITE TICONDEROGA, SEPTEMBER 4, 1776.

On the 31st ultimo departed this life, of a bilious disorder, Colonel William Bond. He met the last enemy with the greatest calmness and intrepidity. In his death our country has lost a true patriot and most vigilant officer of tried bravery. The first of this instant his remains were escorted with military parade to the place of burial, in the front of the regiment, where the Rev. Ebenezer David delivered a funeral oration, and made a prayer; after which the corpse was interred and the Colonel's character honoured by the discharge of three twenty-four-pounders from the Fort, and the usual volleys from the musketry. The whole was conducted in a manner suitable to the occasion.

New-Haven, Wednesday, September 4, 1776.

By advice of a Council of War, last Thursday night and Friday morning the whole of our army then on Long-Island returned to New-York, and brought off, it is said, all their camp equipage, cannon, stores, &c. Their return was conducted with such secrecy that it was not discovered by the enemy till all our army and baggage were got over, and only three persons, who left the Island last in a batteau, fell into their hands. Saturday and Sunday our troops on Governour's Island and Red-Hook, evacuated our fortifications there, and brought off their cannon, &c., notwithstanding a very heavy fire from the enemy on Long-Island, in which we lost some men.

We hear that the main body of the enemy's army are now encamped near Hell-Gate. They have transported a number of boats over land, and it is supposed they intend to cross and land a little above their encampment, and attack our army near King's Bridge, where we are making great preparations to receive them, and our army in high spirits.

General Sullivan and Lord Stirling, who were both missing after the battle on the 27th ultimo, are both alive and well. The former having, on his parole, obtained leave to go to Congress, last Saturday passed New-York on his way to Philadelphia. It is said his business is to obtain an exchange for himself and Lord Stirling, for General Prescott, a prisoner in Pennsylvania, and General McDonald, a prisoner in North-Carolina.

Since our troops have evacuated Long-Island, the Tories and Regulars treat the friends to their country with the greatest severity. Colonel Woodhull, late President of New-York Congress, for refusing to give up his side-arms, was wounded on the head with a cutlass, and had a bayonet thrust through his arm.

By some people who left Huntington last Monday, we hear that the inhabitants of Suffolk County were to resign up their arms yesterday.

Our loss in the battle on the 27th ultimo remains yet uncertain, the calculations being from six hundred to one thousand. Colonel Huntington's regiment is said to have suffered much, there being missing 6 Captains, 6 Lieutenants, 21 Sergeants, 2 Drummers, and 126 Rank and File.

Yesterday sixty-four women landed at Milford from Long-Island, and we hear numbers are coming off daily to the Continent.

Captain Redfield, of Killingworth, on his return from New-York, was taken by one of the frigates, who burnt his vessel, and after detaining him a few days he was dismissed. There was another person in the vessel, whom they detained.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO THE COUNCIL OF WAR OF CONNECTICUT.

Seabrook, September 4, 1776.

SIR: Being informed that you are appointed by Governour Trumbull to preside at the Council of War, to be held at New-London, in order to determine whether it is proper to send a body of troops to the east end of the Island—Long-Island—in order to encourage and assist the inhabitants to repel our enemies: I have been stationed in that part of the Island with a detachment of two hundred men in order to protect the inhabitants from insult, also to do all in my power to distress the enemy whenever they should make any attempts in those parts. On Saturday last I received an account of the approach of the enemy; accordingly endeavoured to raise the Militia of the County, and marched my men to River-Head, within about five miles of a body of the enemy's Light-Horse. While I continued, there came an account to the officers commanding the Militia that our troops had abandoned and given up the Island. This so discouraged them that they dismissed their men and proposed to submit to the enemy. In this disposition I left them and effected a retreat, disarmed about seventy of the inhabitants, and brought off four pieces of ordnance, with our baggage and a quantity of provisions. The detachment are now with me at Seabrook, and are ready to acquiesce in any determination you shall make, and to proceed in conjunction with you to oppose our enemies stationed on that Island.

Your advice in this matter would oblige your most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON, Lieutenant-Colonel.

To the President of the Council of War held this day by order of Governour Trumbull.

CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Providence, at Sea, in N. Lat. 37° 40', and W. Long. 54°, }
September 4, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: I had the honour of writing to you the 27th August, per the brigantine Britannia, which I sent under the care of Lieutenant William Grinnell. Since that I have been to the southward, near the parallel of Bermuda, and brought to four sail of French, Spanish, and Danish ships, homeward bound, but without gaining any useful information. On the 1st current, I fell in with a fleet of five sail. One of them being very large, it was the general opinion on board here that she was either an old Indiaman, outward bound, with stores, or a Jamaica three-decker, bound homeward. We found her to be an English frigate, mounting twenty-six guns upon one deck. She sailed fast, and pursued us by the wind, till, after four hours' chase, the sea running very cross, she got within musket shot of our lee quarter. As they had continued firing at us from the first, without showing colours, I now ordered ours to be hoisted, and began to fire at them. Upon this they also hoisted American colours, and fired guns to leeward. But the bait would not take; for, having everything prepared, I bore away before the wind, and set all our light sail at once, so that before her sails could be trimmed and steering sails set, I was almost out of reach of grape, and soon after out of reach of cannon shot. Our "hair-breadth 'scape," and the saucy manner of making it, must have mortified him not a little. Had he foreseen this motion, and been prepared to counteract it, he might have fired several broadsides of double-headed and grape shot, which would have done us very material damage. But he was a bad marksman, and, though within pistol shot, did not touch the Providence with one of the many shot which he fired. I met with no other adventure till last night, when I took the Bermuda-built brigantine Sea-Nymph, bound from Barbadoes for London, with a cargo of two hundred and twenty-seven hogsheads and eight barrels of rum, five hogsheads, two tierces, and ten barrels of sugar, six bags of ginger, fourteen casks of oil, and twelve pipes "best particular London market Madeira wine." The brig is new, and sails very fast, so that she is a pretty good prize. By the master of the brig and a passenger, I hear that the Andrew Doria was off Bermuda a few days since; also, that Captain Weeks had an action with an English sloop-of-war off Martinico, and that our side was victorious, and drove the Englishman into Martinico.

I am now convinced that I am too late in the season. I will, however, try my utmost. 'Tis not impossible that I may yet fall in with another prize. I did not expect to have found a frigate conveying two ships, a brig, and a sloop. If the storeships come out all under convoy, my hopes of success from that quarter must fall short.

I have the honour to be, with much esteem and respect, gentlemen, your most obliged and very obedient, humble servant,

JNO. P. JONES.

To the Hon. Marine Committee, at Philadelphia.

1, Francis Trimmingham, master; 2, William Lovie, mate; 3, William Johnson, sailor; 4, John Hardy, sailor; 5, Jamie, 6 Anthony, 7 Peter, 8 Will, 9 Davie, negro sailors; and Mr. Samuel Scott, merchant, of London, passenger

CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES TO COMMODORE HOPKINS.

Providence, at Sea, in N. Lat. 37° 40', and W. Long. 54°, }
September 4, 1776. }

HONOURED SIR: I know you will not suspect me of flattery when I affirm that I have not experienced a more sincere pleasure, for a long time past, than the account I have had of your having gained your cause at Philadelphia, in spite of party. Your late trouble will tend to your future advantage, by pointing out your friends and enemies. You will thereby be enabled to retain the one part, while you guard against the other. You will be thrice welcome to your native land, and to your nearest concerns. After your late shock, they will see you, as gold from the fire, of more worth and value; and slander will learn to keep silence when Admiral Hopkins is mentioned. But enough of this.

And now for my success. I sent in a Nantucket whaler by Captain Grinnell, 27th ultimo. She appeared, by the voluntary testimony of the master, mate, &c., to be the property of rank Tories, who had ordered their oil to be carried to the London market, and the amount of it to be shipped out in English goods to Nantucket. Since that time I have been further to the southward, where I brought to a number of French, Spanish, and Danish ships, but saw no Englishmen till the 1st current, when I fell in with five sail. One of them being very large, we took her to be either an old East-Indiaman, or a Jamaica three-decker; but she proved to be an English frigate, mounting twenty-six guns upon one deck. She sailed fast, and pursued us by the wind, till, after four hours' chase, the sea running very cross, she got within musket shot of our lee quarter. As they had continued firing at us from the first, without showing colours, I was angry at this low piece of conduct; therefore, ordered ours to be hoisted, and began to fire at them. They then hoisted American colours, and fired guns to the leeward. But the bait would not take. Having everything prepared, I bore away across his forefoot, and set all our light sails at once, so that before her sails were trimmed and steering sails set, I was almost out of reach of grape, and soon after out of reach of cannon shot. Our "hair-breadth 'scape," and the saucy manner of making it, must have mortified him not a little. Had he foreseen this motion, and been prepared to counteract it, he might have fired several broadsides while we were within pistol shot. He was a bad marksman, and did not hit the Providence with one of the many shot which he fired. I met with no other adventure till last night, when I took the brigantine Sea-Nymph, bound from Barbadoes for London, with a cargo of two hundred and twenty-seven hogsheads of rum, besides oil, sugar, ginger, and Madeira wine. I understand by this brig that the Andrew Doria is off Bermuda, and that Captain Weeks hath given a trimming to an English sloop-of-war off Martinico. I am too late for West-Indiamen, but will not yet give up hopes. I am much afraid that the storeships come out under convoy; for who would have expected to find a frigate with no more than two ships, a brig, and a sloop?

If I meet with further success, I will write you in course. In the meantime, I rest assured that your good offices will not be wanting in my favour when the Navy rank and seniority come to be settled. If I was worthy of the rank of eldest Lieutenant of the fleet, I deserve not to be superseded in favour of any person who then bore an inferior or junior commission. It will be good policy if the Congress or the Marine Committee fix the parity of rank between land and sea officers, as it is in the English establishment, viz: An Admiral ranks with a General, a Vice-Admiral with a Lieutenant-General, a Rear-Admiral with a Major-General, a Commodore with a Brigadier-General, a Captain with a Colonel, a Master and Commander with a Lieutenant-Colonel, a Lieutenant-Commanding with a Major, and a Lieutenant in the Navy with a Captain of Foot or Marines. This would prevent numberless disputes and duellings, which otherwise will be unavoidable. But I remember that this agrees with your own opinion, and therefore I need use no arguments to enforce it.

My best wishes and respects await yourself and family; and I am, with much esteem and grateful respect, honoured sir, your very obliged and most humble servant,

JNO. P. JONES.

To the Hon. E. Hopkins, Esq., Admiral of the American Fleet, Rhode-Island; per the Brig Sea-Nymph, Captain W. Hopkins.

CAPTAIN JONES TO ROBERT MORRIS.

Providence, at Sea, September 4, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I herewith enclose, for your inspection, all the letters and papers which I found in the brigantine Sea-Nymph. For the particulars of my cruise hitherto, I must beg leave to refer you to the within open letter to the Marine Board, which please to lay before them. I purpose to stand to the southward, in hopes of falling in with some ships, which, I understand, are now on their passage from Barbadoes. But at this late season my success is very uncertain. I will, however, ply about in this meridian as long as I think I have any chance, and if I fail at last, I can run to the northward, and try for better success among the fishermen, which may answer no bad purpose, by increasing the number of our seamen. However my cruise may terminate, I forget not the singular obligation I owe to Mr. Morris, who promoted it for my honour and advantage; and I esteem the honour done me by his accepting my correspondence as the greatest favour I could have aspired to. I conclude that Mr. Hewes hath acquainted you with a very great misfortune which befell me some years ago, and which brought me into North America. I am under no concern, however, that this or any past circumstance will sink me in your opinion. Since human wisdom cannot secure us from accident, it is the greatest effort of reason to bear them well.

I will, from time to time, carefully communicate to you every intelligence in my power; and as the regulations of the Navy are of the utmost consequence, you will not think it presumption if, with the utmost diffidence, I venture to communicate to you such hints as, in my judgment, will promote its honour and good government. I could heartily wish that every commission officer were to be previously examined; for, to my certain knowledge, there are persons who have already crept into commission without abilities or fit qualification. I am myself far from desiring to be excused. From experience in ours, as well as from my former intimacy with many officers of note in the British Navy, I am convinced that the parity of rank between sea and land or marine officers is of more consequence to the harmony of the service than hath generally been imagined. In the British establishment, an Admiral ranks with a General, a Vice-Admiral with a Lieutenant-General, a Rear-Admiral with a Major-General, a Commodore with a Brigadier-General, a Captain with a Colonel, a Master and Commander with a Lieutenant-Colonel, a Lieutenant-Commanding with a Major, and a Lieutenant in the Navy ranks with a Captain of Horse, Foot, or Marines. I propose not our enemies as an example for our general imitation; yet, as their Navy is the best regulated of any in the world, we must, in some degree, imitate them, and aim at such further improvement as may one day make ours vie with, and exceed, theirs. Were this regulation to take place in our Navy, it would prevent numberless disputes and duellings which otherwise will be unavoidable. Besides, sir, you know very well that Marine officers, being utterly unacquainted with maritime affairs, are, in those cases, unfit persons to preside at, or compose half the number of a Court-Martial.

I beg pardon for this liberty. I thought that such hints might escape your memory in the multiplicity of business.

I have always understood that the sentence of a Court-Martial, when confirmed by a Commander-in-Chief, was definitive, and admitted of no appeal. To prove this, I must again recur to English authority, in the case of Lord George G. Sackville, who, for disobeying the orders of Prince Ferdinand at the battle of Mindon, was, by a Court-Martial held at the Horse Guards, rendered incapable of serving afterwards in any military capacity, although his great abilities were then well known, and are generally acknowledged at this day. I am led into this subject by hearing, with astonishment, the application and complaint of the late Captain Hazard to the Marine Board, after he had been found "unworthy of bearing his commission in the Navy," by the undivided voice of a Court-Martial, where I had the honour to sit as a member. If he was then unworthy of bearing his commission, I cannot see what new merit he can have acquired. And even if he had merit, it would not be sound policy to reverse the sentence. It would make officers stand less in awe, and attend less punctually to their duty; and it is not impossible it might induce future Courts-Martial, in some cases, to inflict personal punishment, from whence there is no appeal.

There was a mistake made in the date of my commission, which, unless you stand my friend, will make a material difference when the Navy rank is settled. I took command here the 10th day of May, as appears by the order and appointment of the Commander-in-Chief on the back of my commission, as eldest Lieutenant of the fleet; and my commission is not dated till the 8th day of August, which, you know, is not fair, as it would subject me to be superseded by Captain Robeson, who was at first my junior officer by six. Perhaps it might subject me to be superseded by others. If I have deserved so ill as to be superseded, I am unworthy of bearing my commission. I esteem it a greater disgrace and severer punishment than to be fairly broke and dismissed the service.

I have ordered Mr. Hopkins, the prize-master, to deliver you a turtle, which please to accept.

I have the honour to be, with grateful esteem and much respect, honoured sir, your very obliged and very obedient, humble servant,
JNO. PAUL JONES.

DECREE OF A COURT-MARTIAL ON LIEUTENANT MARSHALL.

New-Castle, September 4, 1776.

At a General Court-Martial, ordered to be held this day, to try all Prisoners that shall be brought before them.

Major MOONEY, President.

MEMBERS:

Captain Dearing ,	Lieutenant Cooper ,
Captain Hodgdon ,	Lieutenant White ,
Captain Brown ,	Lieutenant Tanverin ,
Lieutenant Worthen ,	Ensign Leighton ,
Lieutenant Perkins ,	Ensign Bell ,
Lieutenant Aikens ,	Ensign Peavy .

THOS. BOWLER, Judge Advocate.

Lieutenant Andrew Marshall, belonging to Captain Daniel's Company, confined by Capt. Daniel for disobedience of orders, for not going to Great-Island with a party of men ordered this duty on the Grand Parade at New-Castle, he, the said Marshall, said he would not go without his Captain went with his company. Furthermore, he said, on Saturday last, 31st August, that he, the said Marshall, had done the Captain's duty in exercising the men for some months past.

September 2, 1776.

The Prisoner, being brought into Court, pleaded Not Guilty. The evidences being duly sworn:

Evidences: William Simpson, Benjamin Dam, Sergeant Langley, Samuel Banfield.

Sergeant Langley testified that Lieutenant Marshall told his Captain he would not go with the company, without he, said Captain Daniel, went with him, but he was willing to go his proper turn. The other evidences agree to the same purport.

The Prisoner's Defence: Lieutenant Marshall says he thought he had no right to go or obey in that point out of his turn.

The Court having duly considered of the offence, are of opinion that the Prisoner is guilty of a breach of the 18th Article of the Rules and Orders of the Continental Army, and sentenced that the Prisoner be discharged from service.

HERCULES MOONEY, President.

September 4, 1776.

The Commanding Officer having considered the nature of the within crime and evidence produced, as well as the result of the Court, fully agree with the same, and ordered the within named Andrew Marshall to be immediately discharged from the service.

DAVID GILMAN, Colonel.

The Court having no further Prisoners laid before them, is dissolved.

And accordingly is dissolved.

HERCULES MOONEY, President.

LIEUTENANT MARSHALL'S PETITION.

To the Honourable Council and House of Representatives of the State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, in General Court assembled:

The Remonstrance and Petition of Andrew Marshall, First Lieutenant of the Second Matross Company, in the service of said State, humbly sheweth, that when he had the honour of receiving his commission, he accepted of the same with a firm and steadfast resolution to exert himself to the utmost, that he might with honour to himself and faithfulness to his country, discharge the trust reposed in him. That he had spared no pains in exercising and disciplining the men in the company, and this without the least assistance or encouragement from his Captain, who never directly or indirectly conformed with the company in this respect—imposing the arduous and difficult task wholly on his officers, all which he is ready to verify; that he cheerfully complied with every order and command of duty, both within Fort Sulli- van and elsewhere, until Monday, the 2d instant. When he had for a long time daily attended the company from Fort Sullivan to New-Castle, to exercise with Colonel Gilman's Regiment, that he remonstrated to Colonel Gilman that his duty was hard and unequal in being obliged to take the command of Captain Daniel's company every day, and that he, the said Captain, should be wholly excused; and that he informed Colonel Gilman that he was heartily willing to attend the company every day if his Captain would take the command thereof, or that he would equally divide the tour of duty with the officers of the company. That Colonel Gilman paid no attention to his complaints, but still persisted with Captain Daniel in overcharging your petitioner with unreasonable duty and fatigue. That your petitioner refusing to lead the company to New-Castle, when he humbly conceived that the Captain ought to have attended, he was arrested, a Court-Martial appointed, and your petitioner tried and most disgracefully discharged from the service. That as your petitioner has never been behindhand with any officer in his duty, and is ever ready and willing to sacrifice the last drop of blood for the defence of his country, he therefore humbly prays that the honourable Court would take the matter into consideration, and grant him a re-hearing before your Honours, that he may have that justice done him which he now thinks himself unreasonably deprived of.

Your humble servant,

ANDREW MARSHALL.

State of New-Hampshire, }
In the House of Representatives, Sept. 6, 1776. }

The above Petition being read, Voted, That the Petitioner be heard thereon, Tuesday next, at three o'clock, afternoon, and that the said Marshall serve Colonel David Gilman, Captain Eliphalet Daniel, and Major Hercules Mooney, with the substance of the petition and this order thereon, by reading the same to the said Captain Daniel and Major Mooney, and delivering a copy thereof to the said Colonel Gilman, that they or any of them may appear on said day before this House, to answer to the said petition, and to show cause why the said officers have dismissed him from his post.

VOTE FOR DISMISSING LIEUTENANT MARSHALL.

In the House of Representatives, September 10, 1776.

The House taking into consideration the Petition and Remonstrance of Andrew Marshall, respecting his having unreasonable duty and fatigue imposed upon him by Colonel David Gilman and Captain Eliphalet Daniel, and respecting his being disgracefully discharged from the service as First Lieutenant of the Second Matross Company, by the judgment of a Court-Martial, being read, and the matter fully debated, and duly considered, Voted, That this House approve of the judgment and decree of the said Court-Martial, and of Colonel Gilman's order thereon, for discharging the said Andrew Marshall from the said service.

Sent up for concurrence.

SAMUEL CUTTS, Speaker pro tem.

In Council, eodem die, read and concurred.

E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

LIEUTENANT MARSHALL'S PETITION.

To the Honourable the Council and House of Representatives of the Colony of NEW-HAMPSHIRE, in General Assembly convened, humbly shows:

Andrew Marshall, late First Lieutenant of the company of Matrosses, of which Eliphalet Daniel is Captain, in the service of said Colony, that he was by the said Captain lately accused of a breach of orders, for which he was tried by a General Court-Martial and sentenced to be broke. That at the time of disobeying the said orders he thought his conduct therein justifiable, but is now fully convinced to the contrary. That he is heartily sorry for his misbehaviour and bad conduct, and as it was his first transgression of the rules of military discipline, he humbly prays your Honours to take his case under your mild consideration, and that you will pardon his crime and restore him to his said station in the said company.

And, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

ANDREW MARSHALL.

SIR JOHN HART, CONSUL-GENERAL AT LISBON, TO THE MAYOR OF BRISTOL.

Lisbon, September 5, 1776.

SIR: I think it proper to acquaint you that a North American privateer sloop is now cruising on the coasts of this Kingdom. She has already taken on the 1st instant, at a few leagues N. W. of Cape St. Vincent's, the brigantine Mary and James, of London, last from Falmouth, with a rich cargo, and sent away the Captain, with six of his men, who landed at Setuval, and bring this account. They learned, further, from the privateer's people, that four other American privateers were now at sea between the Western Islands and Portugal; that she had already made on these coasts five other prizes, and proposed, with a rashness that will not, I trust, go unpunished, to try a cruise on the Mediterranean coasts of Spain.

I send you this advice to the end you may take the best precautions in your power for the security of the British trade within your jurisdiction; and am, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

JOHN HART.

To the Right-Worshipful Thomas Farr, Esq., Mayor of Bristol.

P. S. It appears by express just received from Algarve, that of the masters of the vessels taken, three of them put on shore at Algarve prove to be as follows: Gregory Potbury, of the brig Sarah Anna, from Exeter, for Gibraltar and Malaga; William Carter, of the snow Lively, from Chester, for Genoa; William Davis, of the brig Good Intent, from Newcastle, for Gibraltar. The Guinea vessel blown up was the Africa, of Bristol, Captain Baker.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO CAPTAIN FIDDEMAN.
[No. 168.] Annapolis, September 5, 1776.

SIR: As your Lieutenant, Mr. Downes, informs the Council that the arms of your company want a good many repairs, we would have you halt at Chestertown until you can get them done. Mr. Winters and Mr. Robert Read are employed to repair guns for the Province.

We are, &c.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COL. HOLLINGSWORTH.
[No. 169.] Annapolis, September 5, 1776.

SIR: This will be handed you by Captain Watkins, whom we desire you will supply with what blankets he wants for his company. We request you will, if possible, get enough for him.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THOMAS STONE.
[No. 170.] Annapolis, September 5, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered to you by Captain Watkins, whose company is in a very bad situation for clothes, which cannot be procured on any terms in this Province. We must, therefore, beg that you will use your utmost endeavours to procure them for them at Philadelphia; but if the making of them up will take up too much time, they may be made up and sent to camp.

We are, &c.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

COLONEL EWING TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Baltimore, September 5, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: As I am just going for Philadelphia, have thought proper to advise you that I have ordered my clerk, Mr. Robert Porteous, to settle my accounts with the Province, and to pay to Mr. Jared Hopkins the balance of what money is in my hands, all but £25, which I will reserve of the Province money in my hands for small contingent expenses I may incur. As Mr. Porteous is my cash-keeper and knows the amount, he can with propriety prove the account since the last settlement.

I am, with due respect, honoured sirs, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOS. EWING.

To the Hon. Council of Safety, of Maryland.

MR. WITHERSPOON'S SPEECH IN CONGRESS, ON THE CONFERENCE PROPOSED BY LORD HOWE.

MR. PRESIDENT: The subject we are now upon is felt and confessed by us all to be of the utmost consequence, and perhaps I may also say, of delicacy and difficulty. I have not been accustomed in such cases to make solemn professions of impartiality, and shall not do it now, because I will not suppose that there are any suspicions to the contrary in the minds of those who hear me. Besides, the variety of opinions that have been formed and delivered upon it, seem to prove that we are giving our own proper judgment without prejudice or influence, which I hope will lead to the discovery of what is most wise and expedient upon the whole.

As the deliberation arises from a message sent to us by Lord Howe, at least by his permission, I think it is of importance to attend with greater exactness to all the circumstances of that message than has been done by any gentleman who has yet spoken on the subject. It comes from the Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the King of Great Britain, and one who is said to carry a commission to give peace to America.

From the conduct of the Ministry at home, from the acts of Parliament, and from Lord Howe's proclamation in conformity to both, it is plain that absolute, unconditional submission is what they require us to agree to, or mean to force us to. And from the most authentick private intelligence, the King has not laid aside his personal rancour; it is rather increasing every day. In these circumstances Lord Howe has evidently a great desire to engage us in a treaty; and yet he has constantly avoided giving up the least punctilio on his side. He could never be induced to give General Washington his title. He plainly tells us he cannot treat with Congress as such; but he has allowed a prisoner of war to come and tell us he would be glad to see us as private gentlemen.

It has been said that this is no insult or disgrace to the Congress; that the point of honour is hard to be got over in making the first advances. This, sir, is mistaking the matter wholly. He has got over this point of honour; he has made the first overtures; he has told General Washington, by Colonel Putnam, that he wished that message to be considered as making the first step. His renewed attempts by Lord Drummond, and now by General Sullivan, point out to all the world that he has made the first step. It will, doubtless, be related at home; and I am of opinion it is already written and boasted of to the Ministry at home that he has taken such a part. Therefore any evil or condescension that can attend seeking peace first, has been submitted to by him. Yet has he uniformly avoided any circumstance that can imply that we are anything else but subjects of the King of Great Britain in rebellion. Such a message as this, if in any degree intended as respectful to us, ought to have been secret; yet has it been open as the day. In short, such a message was unnecessary; for if he meant only to communicate his mind to the Congress by private gentlemen, he might have done that many ways, and it needed not to have been known either to the publick or the Congress till these private gentlemen came here on purpose to reveal it. These, then, are the circumstances which attend this message as it is now before us: and the question is, shall we comply with it in any degree or not? Let us ask what benefit shall be derived from it? There is none yet shown to be possible. It has been admitted by every person without exception who has spoke, that we are not to admit a thought of giving up the independence we have so lately declared; and by the greatest part, if not the whole, that there is not the least reason to expect that any correspondence we can have with him will tend to peace. Yet I think in the beginning of the debate such reasonings were used as seemed to me only to conclude that we should grasp at it as a means of peace. We were told that it was easy for us to boast or be valiant here, but that our armies were running away before their enemies. I never loved boasting, neither here nor anywhere else. I look upon it as almost a certain forerunner of disgrace. I found my hope of success in this cause, not in the valour of Americans or the cowardice of Britons, but upon the justice of the cause, and still more upon the nature of things. Britain has first injured and inflamed America to the highest degree, and now attempts, at the distance of three thousand miles, to carry on war with this whole country, and force it to absolute submission. If we take the whole events of the war since it commenced, we shall rather wonder at the uniformity of our success than be surprised at some cross events. We have seen bravery as well as cowardice in this country, and there are no consequences of either that are probable, that can be worth mentioning as ascertaining the event of the contest.

Lord Howe speaks of a decisive blow not being yet struck, as if this cause depended upon one battle, which could not be avoided. Sir, this is a prodigious mistake. We may fight no battle at all for a long time, or we may lose some battles, as was the case with the British themselves in the Scotch rebellion of 1745, and the cause notwithstanding be the same. I wish it were considered, that neither loss nor disgrace worth mentioning has befallen us in the late engagement, nor comparable to what the British troops have often suffered. At the battle of Preston, sir, they broke to pieces and ran away like sheep, before a few Highlanders. I myself saw them do the same thing at Falkirk, with very little difference—a small part only of the army making a stand, and in a few hours the whole retreating with precipitation before their enemies. Did that make any difference in the cause? Not in the least—so long as the body of the nation were determined, on principle, against the rebels. Nor would it have made any other difference, but in time, though they had got possession of London, which they might have easily done if they had understood their business; for the Militia in England there gathered together, behaved fifty times worse than that of America has done lately. They generally disbanded and run off as soon as the rebels came within ten or twenty miles of them. In short, sir, from anything that has happened, I see not the least reason for our attending to this delusive message. On the contrary, I think it is the very worst time that could be chosen for us, as it will be looked upon as the effect of fear, and diffuse the same spirit in some degree through different ranks of men.

The improbability of anything arising from this conference, leading to a just and honourable peace, might be shown by arguments too numerous to be even so much as named. But what I shall mention only is, that we are absolutely certain, from every circumstance, from all the proceedings at home, and Lord Howe's own explicit declaration in his letter to Dr. Franklin, that he never will acknowledge the independence of the American States.

I observed that one or two members said, in objection to the report of the Board of War, that it was like a begging of a question, and making a preliminary of the whole subject in debate. Alas, sir, this is a prodigious mistake. It was not only not the whole, but it was properly no subject of debate at all, till within these three months. We were contending for the restoration of certain privileges under the Government of Great Britain, and we were praying for re-union with her. But in the beginning of July, with the universal approbation of all the States now united, we renounced this connection, and declared ourselves free and independent. Shall we bring this into question again? Is it not a preliminary? has it not been declared a preliminary by many gentlemen, who have yet given their opinion for a conference, while they have said they were determined on no account and on no condition to give up our independence? It is then a necessary preliminary—and it is quite a different thing from any punctilios of ceremony. If France and England were at war, and they were both desirous of peace, there might be some little difficulty as to who should make the first proposals; but if one of them should claim the other as they did long ago as a vassal or dependent subject, and should signify a desire to converse with the other, or some deputed by him, and propose him many privileges, so as to make him even better than before, I desire to know how such a proposal would be received? If we had been for ages an independent Republic, we should feel this argument with all its force. That we do not feel it, shows that we have not yet acquired the whole ideas and habits of independence: from which I only infer, that every step taken in a correspondence as now proposed, will be a virtual or partial renunciation of that dignity so lately acquired.

I beg you would observe, sir, that Lord Howe himself was fully sensible that the Declaration of Independence precluded any treaty, in the character in which he appeared; as he is said to have lamented that he had not arrived ten days sooner—before that declaration was made. Hence it appears, that entering into any correspondence with him in the manner now proposed, is actually giving up, or at least subjecting to a new consideration, the independence which we have declared. If I may be allowed to say it without offence, it seems to me that some members have unawares admitted this, though they are not sensible of it; for when they say that it is refusing to treat, unless the whole be granted us, they must mean that some part of that whole must be left to be discussed and obtained, or yielded, by the treaty.

But, sir, many members of this House have either yielded, or at least supposed, that no desirable peace, or no real good, could be finally expected from this correspondence, which is wished to be set on foot; but they have considered it as necessary in the eye of the publick, to satisfy them that we are always ready to hear anything that will restore peace to the country. In this view it is considered as a sort of trial of skill between Lord Howe and us, in the political art. As I do truly believe, that many members of this House are determined by this circumstance, I shall consider it with some attention. With this view it will be necessary to distinguish the publick in America into three great classes: 1. The Tories, our secret enemies. 2. The Whigs, the friends of independence, our sincere and hearty supporters. 3. The Army, who must fight for us.

As to the first of them, I readily admit that they are earnest for our treating. They are exulting in the prospect of it; they are spreading innumerable lies to forward it. They are treating the Whigs already with insult and insolence upon it. It has brought them from their lurking holes; they have taken liberty to say things in consequence of it, which they durst not have said before. In one word, if we set this negotiation on foot, it will give new force and vigour to all their seditious machinations. But, sir, shall their devices have any influence upon us at all? If they have at all, it should be to make us suspect that side of the question which they embrace. In cases where the expediency of a measure is doubtful, if I had an opportunity of knowing what my enemies wished me to do, I would not be easily induced to follow their advice.

As to the Whigs and friends of independence, I am well persuaded that multitudes of them are already clear in their minds, that the conference should be utterly rejected; and to those who are in doubt about its nature, nothing more will be requisite than a clear and full information of the state of the case, which I hope will be granted them.

As to the Army, I cannot help being of opinion, that nothing will more effectually deaden the operations of war, than what is proposed. We do not ourselves expect any benefit from it, but they will. And they will possibly impute our conduct to fear and jealousy as to the issue of the cause; which will add to their present little discouragement, and produce a timorous and despondent spirit.

War Office, Philadelphia, September 5, 1776.

Congress having directed the Board of War "to call in the several recruiting parties of the German Battalion, and that they have them formed and armed with all possible expedition and forwarded to New-York, taking measures and giving proper directions to have the battalion recruited to the full complement as soon as the same can be done," the officers of the said battalion are hereby enjoined immediately to repair with their men to the City of Philadelphia, that the Board may take the necessary steps to fulfill the directions of Congress.

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN BROWN, Secretary.

CAPTAIN GORDON (PRISONER) TO THE COMMITTEE OF LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA.

Yorktown, September 5, 1776.

SIR: The Committee of this place having been pleased to grant permission for Thomas Deaken, of the Twenty-sixth Regiment, to come over here as my servant, your procuring him a pass for that purpose as soon as convenient, will oblige,

Sir, your very humble servant,

A. GORDON, Captain, 26th Regiment.

In Committee of Inspection for the County of York, }
September 4, 1776. }

On motion of Captain Gordon, prisoner of war here, that a boy named Thomas Deaken, of the Twenty-sixth Regiment, a prisoner in the Borough of Lancaster, be permitted to move here and reside with the Captain:

Granted, by order of the Committee:

THOS. ARMOR, Chairman.

DISCHARGE OF PHILADELPHIA ASSOCIATORS.

Amboy, September 5, 1776.

The first and third divisions of Artillery of the Philadelphia Associators having served with cheerfulness and alacrity at this post, and otherwise discharged their duty as good soldiers, from the time of the first march of the troops from Philadelphia, are hereby regularly discharged from their present station at Amboy, and to return to their families, with my hearty thanks in behalf of the publick.

DANIEL ROBERDEAU, Brigadier-General.

To Samuel Mifflin, Esq., Colonel of the train of Artillery at Philadelphia.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

New-York, September 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have been favoured with your two letters of the 3d instant, and observe what you have done in consequence of my instructions. When I wrote for troops to be sent to the post opposite Mount-Washington, I did not imagine you would have so many to spare. About a thousand under General Ewing, in addition to those already at the post, I think will be fully competent to its defence and such works as may be necessary to erect, and will also be sufficient to carry them on. More, I conceive, will be unnecessary, and may be better employed elsewhere.

I am, dear sir, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.
To Brigadier-General Mercer, New-Jersey.

P. S. You will be pleased to keep in view the matter I mentioned to you about Staten-Island; esteeming a diversion there, if it can be effected, will be of great service.

GENERAL GREENE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York Island, September 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The critical situation which the army is in, will, I hope, sufficiently apologize for my troubling your Excellency with this letter. The sentiments are dictated, I am sure, by an honest mind—a mind which feels deeply interested in the salvation of this country, and for the honour and reputation of the General under whom he serves.

The object under consideration is, whether a general and speedy retreat from this Island is necessary or not. To me it appears the only eligible plan to oppose the enemy successfully, and secure ourselves from disgrace. I think we have no object on this side of King's Bridge. Our troops are now so scattered, that one part may be cut off before the others can come to their support. In this situation, suppose the enemy should run up the North River several ships of force and a number of transports at the same time, and effect a landing between the town and middle division of the army; another party from Long-Island should land right opposite; these two parties form a line across the Island, and entrench themselves. The two flanks of this line could be easily supported by the shipping; the centre fortified with the redoubts, would render it very difficult if not impossible to cut our way through.

At the time the enemy are executing this movement or manœuvre, they will be able to make sufficient diversions, if not real lodgments, to render it impossible for the centre and upper divisions of the army to afford any assistance here. Should this event take place (and by the by, I don't think it very improbable,) your Excellency will be reduced to that situation which every prudent General would wish to avoid—that is, of being obliged to fight the enemy to a disadvantage, or submit.

It has been agreed that the city of New-York would not be tenable if the enemy got possession of Long-Island and Governour's Island. They are now in possession of both these places. Notwithstanding, I think we might hold it for some time, but the annoyance must be so great as to render it an unfit place to quarter troops in. If we should hold it, we must hold it to a great disadvantage.

The City and Island of New-York are no objects for us; we are not to bring them into competition with the general interests of America. Part of the army already has met with a defeat; the country is struck with a panick; any capital loss at this time may ruin the cause. 'Tis our business to study to avoid any considerable misfortune, and to take post where the enemy will be obliged to fight us, and not we them. The sacrifice of the vast property of New-York and the suburbs, I hope has no influence upon your Excellency's measures. Remember the King of France. When Charles the Fifth, Emperor of Germany, invaded his Kingdom, he laid whole Provinces waste; and by that policy he starved and ruined Charles's army, and defeated him without fighting a battle. Two-thirds of the property of the city of New-York and the suburbs belongs to the Tories. We have no very great reason to run any considerable risk for its defence. If we attempt to hold the city and Island, and should not be able finally, we shall be wasting time unnecessarily and betray a defect of judgment, if no worse misfortune attend it.

I give it as my opinion, that a general and speedy retreat is absolutely necessary, and that the honour and interest of America require it. I would burn the city and suburbs, and that for the following reasons: If the enemy gets possession of the city, we never can recover the possession without a superiour naval force to theirs; it will deprive the enemy of an opportunity of barracking their whole army together, which, if they could do, would be a very great security. It will deprive them of a general market; the price of things would prove a temptation to our people to supply them for the sake of the gain, in direct violation of the laws of their country.

All these advantages would result from the destruction of the city, and not one benefit can arise to us from its preservation, that I can conceive of. If the city once gets into the enemy's hands, it will be at their mercy either to save or destroy it, after they have made what use of it they think proper.

At the retreat, I would order the army to take post at King's Bridge, and post along Westchester shore, where barracks may be procured for that part of the army that are without tents. I must confess I am too ignorant of the ground to form much judgment about posting the troops. Your Excellency's superiour judgment, formed from your own observation upon the ground, will enable you to make a much better disposition than I can conceive of.

If my zeal has led me to say more than I ought, I hope my good intentions may atone for the offence.

I shall only add that these sentiments are not dictated from fear, nor from any apprehensions of personal danger; but are the result of a cool and deliberate survey of our situation and the necessary measures to extricate us from our present difficulties. I have said nothing at all about the temper and disposition of the troops, and their apprehensions about being sold. This is a strong intimation that it will be difficult to get such troops to behave with proper spirit in time of action, if we should be attacked.

Should your Excellency agree with me with respect to the two first points, that is, that a speedy and general retreat is necessary, and also, that the city and suburbs should be burned, I would advise to call a general council upon that question, and take every general officer's opinion upon it.

I am, with due respect, your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,

N. GREENE.

To His Excellency Gen. Washington, King's Bridge.

CLEMENT BIDDLE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Fort Washington, September 5, 1776.

SIR: Having received orders from Brigadier-General Mercer to provide a considerable number of wagons in the State of New-Jersey, to be sent to Burdell's Ferry, opposite this place, I had pressed near three hundred wagons, about one half of which had arrived at the Ferry last night. His Excellency General Washington ordered a number of them to be discharged, and a part to be sent over to this place. I have tried to procure craft on the Jersey shore, but find none suitable for the purpose of passing them, but imagine some may be had on this side the river; and as I am under a necessity of repairing to Amboy I beg you will be pleased to give such orders therein as you may think necessary.

I have wrote to Colonel Moylan and Colonel Reed, and expect answers from them before I leave this.

I have the honour to be, very respectfully, your most obedient, humble servant,

CLEMENT BIDDLE,

D. Q. M. General Flying-Camp, &c.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath, King's Bridge.

GENERAL PARSONS TO GENERAL HEATH.

September 5, 1776.

SIR: As the machine designed to attempt blowing up the enemy's ships, is to be transported from the East to the North River, where a small vessel will be wanted to receive it, I wish you to order one for that purpose. As all things are now ready to make the experiment, I wish it may not be delayed. Though the event is uncertain, the experiment under our present circumstances is certainly worth trying.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

SAM'L H. PARSONS.

To Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge.

ABRAHAM YATES, JUN., TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, }
Fish-Kill, September 5, 1776. }

SIR: I am directed by the Convention of this State to transmit to your Excellency a copy of a resolution which they entreat may be carried into execution with all possible despatch.

It is with extreme concern that we find ourselves under the disagreeable necessity of having recourse to this unhappy but necessary expedient, or of troubling your Excellency with a commission of this nature. But the critical situation of this State, the total want of brass field-pieces, and our inability to have this resolve executed by the Committee of the city of New-York, on account of their absence from the city, reduces us to the present dilemma, either of adopting this measure, or of neglecting the publick safety.

They therefore trust that your Excellency's zeal for the publick service will induce you to pardon the liberty they take of troubling you on this occasion.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

By order: ABM. YATES, JUN., President.

To His Excellency General Washington.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, }
Fish-Kill, September 5, 1776. }

Whereas the King of Great Britain is studiously endeavouring by every means which artifice and lawless power can devise, to deprive the inhabitants of the United States of America of Ammunition, Cannon, and every warlike store, in order that they may fall a more easy prey to his tyrannical purposes, which cowardly designs have unhappily so far succeeded that this State is now distressed for the want of sufficient Arms to resist the powerful and unnatural enemy by whom they are now invaded:

And whereas the duty which the Representatives of a free people owe both to God and their country obliges them to make every possible exertion to procure Arms and Ammunition, in order to defend their rights and liberties, which are derived from the Supreme Being, and which posterity have right to claim as an unencumbered inheritance:

Resolved unanimously, therefore, That his Excellency General Washington, be requested and authorized to cause all the Bells in the different Churches and public edifices, in the City of New-York to be taken down, and removed to New-Ark, in New-Jersey, with all possible despatch, that the fortune of war may not throw the same into the hands of our enemy, and deprive this State, at this critical period, of that necessary though unfortunate resource for supplying our want of Cannon.

Extract from the Minutes:

JOHN MCKESSON, Secretary.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, September 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I this day received a letter from Mr. Lansing, wherein I find the General is desirous to know if I have advanced any money on account to the batteau-men. This acquaints you I have given none to any of the batteau-men on any account whatever. Mr. Van Epps showed me a roll of his company, and I saw he had credit for £100 received from the General. I would be glad to know if the smiths must continue any longer than this week to make spikes.

I am, your most obedient, humble servant,

H. GLEN.

To Major-General Schuyler, Albany.

H. GLEN TO CAPTAIN DICKERSON.

Schenectady, September 5, 1776.

SIR: I yesterday saw a letter you wrote to Captain Ernst Van Epps of the batteau-men, wherein I find your company is intended for Fort Schuyler, formerly Fort Stanwix, and that you had five loads of baggage. General Schuyler has this day thought proper to discharge Van Epps's company, as there was no more occasion for three companies of batteau-men. I now send two empty batteaus to Major Fonda on purpose to take in your baggage: the two boats will take six loads. I must therefore request of Captain Dickerson to have his baggage at Major Fonda's on Sunday evening, or Monday morning. After the wagoners have delivered their loading at Major Fonda's, Captain Dickerson will give them a certificate for the time employed, on me for payment.

I am your most humble servant,

H. GLEN.

To Captain Dickerson, Johnstown.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Schenectady, September 5, 1776.

SIR: Mr. Abraham Fonda has seventy barrels of flour, but will not let me have it at the present price of 16s., but insists as the price shall be the 5th of October next; as such, would be glad to have your sentiments. I would like to take Fonda at his word, as the batteaus are here lying idle, and the batteau-men are already victualled for the trip. I shall expect your answer by the bearer this evening.

I am, sir, yours, &c.,

H. GLEN.

To Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General, Albany.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 5, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I would acquaint you the carpenters are going off, and they are all desirous to sell their tools, and I have no proper person here to receive them; and I don't imagine we shall want them, as there is a great part of them already discharged. The Rhode-Island carpenters are all discharged, but two, that ever arrived, and the whole of the tools belonging to the company are here, and I think it would be proper that some care should be taken of them, as no officer never came forward; but shall wait for your directions.

I remain, dear sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, JR.

To Major-General GATES.

P. S. I have received one hundred and eighty-one more felling-axes, and the reason of my not sending them forward is by reason of the carmen's leaving the helves fifteen miles back. I have sent for the helves, and as soon as they arrive, I will immediately forward the axes.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, September 5, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 1st and 2d I had the pleasure to receive yesterday morning by express. The great and awful event which you mention to have happened last Wednesday se'n-night at New-York, fills our minds with anxious expectation to have the particulars confirmed by authority. I am confident when those arrive, you will not lose a minute in forwarding them to Ty.

All the carpenters I could procure out of the troops to assist the shipbuilders at Skenesborough, have been sent there above a week ago. By one of the master carpenters who came here Monday night, I am informed it will not be possible for them to finish more than one galley, after those now on the stocks are launched; and to do this, they must put all the healthy men they have into one gang, and discharge the rest. If you think you can immediately despatch as many ship carpenters from Albany as will enable those at Skenesborough to do more, you will send directions accordingly to General Waterbury.

Yesterday I received a letter from General Arnold, dated from Willsborough, 2d September. He acquaints me he left Button-Mould Bay, and arrived at Willsborough the 1st September, at night. Before he passed the Split-Rock, he saw the Lee and a gondola heave in sight—they left Ty on Monday. The General further adds, "we are now under sail with a fresh southerly breeze, and expect to be at Isle-aux-Têtes before night."

I am pleased to find so much attention is beginning to be paid to the Northern army. I have ordered Mr. Winslow to write to Mr. Trumbull for half of the half-million of dollars you mention to have arrived from Congress.

I have acquainted Mr. Avery with the paragraph in your letter relative to him. He has my order to answer it. I wish the precise line Mr. Livingston and Mr. Avery are to walk, was once settled. In the state things are in, there will be eternal contention. If the army is well served, I am well satisfied, let who will serve it.

As the fleet is large and mounts a great number of cannon, and the body of troops here very considerable, it is immediately necessary that fifteen tons of powder, ten of lead, with flints and cartridge paper in proportion, should be sent to this post.

You mention nothing in your two last letters of the enemy's attempting to penetrate by the Mohawk River. I therefore conclude your Indian news was false. I, however, ordered General Waterbury to send all the detachments of the New-York regiments (Wynkoop's excepted) to Albany; you can put them to mend the roads, if you do not think their services immediately wanted upon the Mohawk River.

The seamen you mention in a former letter to be inlisting at New-York for the Northern Department, will, I dare say, be pushed forward the instant they arrive at Albany.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gansevoort is very earnest for a reinforcement to be sent to Fort George. If the service does not immediately require the New-York troops to be all sent up the Mohawk River, you will, if you think proper, send Colonel Gansevoort the reinforcement he desires.

I am, &c.,

H. GATES.

To Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Tyonderoga, September 5, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I received the following intelligence from General Schuyler, by express:

Extract from General Schuyler's letter dated at Albany, September 2, 1776:

"Last night three Philadelphia gentlemen who passed through New-York on their way to this place, inform us that on Tuesday last there were several smart rencountres between our troops and the enemy on Long-Island, with alternate success; that considerable numbers fell on both sides; that on Wednesday they attacked our lines, but were repulsed with loss. It is supposed they lost three thousand, we two thousand. General Sullivan and Lord Stirling missing. Two of the Pennsylvania battalions suffered most. We wait with impatience for more particulars. One of the gentlemen who left New-York on Thursday morning heard a smart cannonade when he was at King's Bridge; some of the Hessians were engaged. The enemy's ships of war on Thursday morning were still near Staten-Island, and no appearance of their moving. I send this by express, and hope it will soon be followed by another announcing the total rout of the enemy."

The instant any further news or intelligence of this great event arrives, you may be assured I shall despatch it immediately to you. I am attentive to what you mention with regard to an officer being appointed to the command of the Royal Savage, and have accordingly fixed my eye upon Colonel Wigglesworth, who has, upon my recommending it to him, most readily undertaken to serve as the third officer on board the fleet: yourself first, and General Waterbury second. He will sail to-morrow morning in the gondola now here. The Colonel is a good seaman; appears to be much of a gentleman; and has, as far as I can learn, an unimpeached good character.

Lieutenant Calderwood delivers you this letter, and carries down with him the seventy men you have demanded. I understand two hundred seamen are inlisted at New-York for this service. They shall be put on board the row-galleys the moment they arrive. The first row-galley will be to-day, the other two, General Waterbury assures me, will be launched this week. No time shall be lost in rigging them and despatching them to the fleet. As soon as you get the reinforcement I now send you, you will not, perhaps, think it necessary to detain Colonel Hartley's detachment. He seems exceeding anxious for them to return, as he hopes to engage his whole regiment for another year.

I send you by the bearer, Lieutenant Calderwood, the draught of the Lake, as you desire. Colonel Trumbull writes to you by this conveyance.

When General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth join the fleet you will be able to dispose of it in three divisions: yourself in the centre, General Waterbury on the right, and Colonel Wigglesworth on the left. This disposition will teach the Captains of the vessels to know their commanding officers, and prevent any confusion or dispute about command in case an unlucky shot or other accident should take off the General.

Enclosed I send the declaration of a German deserter, brought here yesterday from Metcalf's. As you have seen and examined every part of the Lake in your way down, I should be glad to know your opinion what is the properest and most defensible station for the fleet to take. Gales of wind will probably be heavy about the equinox; you are too good a seaman not to take a secure place for anchorage against that season. I am very much pleased to find the gondolas are such good sea boats.

I fancy you will think it is immediately necessary you should send hither your most experienced pilot to conduct the row-galleys with safety to the fleet. Let him have your positive and particular instructions how you think proper he should proceed. It will be proper you should communicate the orders you from time to time receive, to General Waterbury and Colonel Wigglesworth, that they may know how to act upon any emergency.

That the blessing of the Almighty may prosper all your undertakings, is the sincere prayer of, dear General, your affectionate, humble servant,

H. GATES.

To General Arnold.

CAPTAIN FASSETT TO LIEUTENANT LEE.

Head-Quarters, Pittsford, September 5, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby commanded forthwith to repair to this place with all the men now under your command, and bring with you all the families and their effects (such as you can bring) north of Monkton. Hereof you will not fail.

From yours, &c.,

JOHN FASSETT, Captain.

To Lieutenant Thomas Lee.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, September 5, 1776.

SIR: Since my last to you, I have received intelligence that since our troops retreated from the west end of Long-Island, the Militia have disbanded themselves, laid down their arms, and are making their submission to General Howe, and that all ideas of opposition there are at an end. Two companies of Continental troops that were stationed there are arrived at Saybrook. In this situation we cannot hope to make a diversion there to any purpose with what force we can throw over. We can only assist such as choose to retire from the Island in getting off their persons and effects, which to the utmost of our power will be done.

I have now ordered such of the remaining regiments of Militia in this State as can be spared from the immediate defence of the sea-coast, to march towards New-York with all expedition, that they may be ready, if wanted, to join and support the army under your command, make a diversion either on the main or on Long-Island, or cover the country; and if not necessary for any of these purposes, that they, or such part of them as shall be thought proper, may relieve and take the places of an equal number of the Militia of this State now in service, whose interest greatly suffers by their absence, as well as the general interest of the country.

I have also ordered the two regiments of Light Horse which did not before march with Colonel Seymour, to march towards New-York, and rendezvous at or near Westchester, where they are to attend your orders, and perform such duty as you shall prescribe, either by scouring the country and preventing or suppressing any risings of our internal enemies, in which service it is apprehended they may be particularly useful, or any other duty they are capable of, or to join the army, and act with them, if you shall judge it necessary and expedient.

The critical situation of affairs at this juncture, and the information in your favour of the 24th ultimo, that your numbers were yet outdone by the enemy, has induced me to order these regiments on this service, that nothing may be wanting on our part to the support and defence of the rights and liberties of the rising States of America.

I have likewise taken the liberty to propose to the General Assembly of the Massachusetts-Bay, and Governour Cooke, of Rhode-Island, to send forward a part of their Militia, as may be most convenient for them, to join and assist the army under your command. I am informed by Governour Cooke that they have a regiment there nearly raised, and that the State of Rhode-Island is ready to co-operate to the extent of their power in every measure necessary for our common defence.

I have it likewise in contemplation, if practicable, to procure a sufficient naval force to clear the Sound of the enemy's ships now in it, and have proposed the matter to Governour Cooke, and requested of him to join their force with ours, and ask the concurrence of Commodore Hopkins with such part of the Continental fleet as are ready and capable to act.

I beg leave to ask your opinion whether a plan of this nature be practicable and useful, and, in case it should be attempted, whether a number of seamen may not be drafted from the army to assist in the enterprise?

I am, sir, with every sentiment of respect and esteem, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of all the Forces of the United States of America, at New-York.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 5, 1776, Present: His Honour the Governour, Honourable Matthew Griswold, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, William Hillhouse, Titus Hosmer, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Esq's.

Voted, That all the Troops of Horse, in this Colony, that are east of Connecticut River, be ordered forthwith to march to New-York, as far as West-Chester, there to await further orders, in order to coöperate with the Continental troops in defending against our common enemies.

Voted, That the persons at New-London that were directed by this Board to reside at East-Haddam, have liberty to go and reside at Middletown, upon their already given parole, and said Sherbrook to reside at Wethersfield, upon his parole aforesaid, until further orders.

New-London, September 4, 1776.—This Committee finding Long-Islanders in great distress, removing themselves and effects, on consideration, advise the Committees of Inspection of New-London and Groton, to pursue the advice and answer the requisitions of the Congress of New-York, with regard to assisting the inhabitants of Long-Island to come off with their effects to the main; and in order to this, the Committee further advise and recommend to Colonel Wolcott to put as many of his men on board the transports as may be thought sufficient to assist and guard them in prosecuting this design; and further advise the armed vessels now in this harbour to go as convoys to the transports, and that the same be done without delay.

Attest: BENJ. HUNTINGTON, Committee's Clerk.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, September 6, 1776, Present: His Honour the Governour, His Honour the Deputy Governour, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, Eliphalet Dyer, Jedediah Elderkin, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esq's.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £80 0s. 0d., in favour of William Lux, to enable him to carry on the work of making Carriages for Cannon for this State, and to be in account. (Order drawn September 6, delivered Colonel Jabez Huntington.)

Voted, To appoint Thursday, the 19th day September, 1776, to be kept and observed as a day of Publick Fasting and Prayer throughout this State.

His Honour the Governour, with advice of this Council, gave orders to the 3d, 5th, 8th, 11th, 12th, 20th, 21st, 25th, and 7th Regiments of Militia, and to the 2d and 4th Regiments of Horse, in this State, forthwith, without delay, to call out their regiments, and see them well equipped, both officers and men, and march towards New-York, and rendezvous at or near West-Chester, and there wait till further orders, in order to be ready to coöperate with the Continental Army in the best manner to defeat the purposes of enemies, who appear to be endeavouring to throw over a force upon the main, to cut off our communication with New-York, both by land and water; 20s. per man to be paid before or on their march.

Whereas the Militia of this State, upon the east side of Connecticut River, is ordered to march towards New-York, to rendezvous at or near West-Chester, which troops will want to be provided for with Provisions and all necessary Camp Utensils, Tents, &c.,

Voted, therefore, That Jonathan Fitch and Samuel Squire, Esq's., be, and they are hereby ordered and directed to make all the necessary provisions and preparations aforesaid. (Copy delivered Mr. Law, September 6, 1776.)

Voted and Resolved, That two Companies of the Regiments at New-London and Groton, under command of Colonel Erastus Wolcott, be detached by said Colonel Wolcott, and marched towards New-York with the Militia now ordered out into actual service there; and that they join themselves to the regiment of Militia under command of Gurdon Saltonstall, Esquire, Colonel; and that John Ely, Esquire, Major of Colonel Wolcott's Regiment, do proceed with said two companies, and take command in the regiment to which they are ordered to join as aforesaid, in his proper rank as Major and second in command of the same; and that the place of said two companies in Colonel Wolcott's Regiment be supplied by such men from Colonels Coit's and Saltonstall's regiments of Militia as are not and cannot at present be armed and equipped for immediate service against our enemy.

Voted, That a Guard, consisting of fifteen men, be stationed at the mouth of Connecticut River, on the Lyme side; that Ensign John Griswold, of said Lyme, be and he is hereby appointed the officer of said guard, and that he do immediately proceed to enlist said guard out of the Militia or other able-bodied men; and that said guard, when in actual service, shall be allowed the same wages other troops of this Colony have and receive, and shall also be allowed and paid nine pence per day for their billeting and subsistence.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for the sum of £44 1s. 3d., in favour of Captain William Tyler, for a cask of Jamaica Spirits by him bought of Captain John Chenevard, for the Colony use. (Order drawn September 9, 1776; delivered to Mr. Hosmer.)

DAVID GELSTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Saybrook, September 5, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: After delivering your despatches to the several Committees from Horse-Neck eastward to this place, I thought best to proceed to Lebanon with the despatches to Governour Trumbull, where I reached Sunday morning, and sent forward copies to the other Committees, agreeable to your order.

Upon the Governour's reading your despatches, and making some inquiries, he advised me to proceed without delay to Providence and wait on Governour Cooke, whom I saw next day. After delivering the despatches to Governour Cooke, returned to Governour Trumbull, and from thence to this place, and last night went to New-London, to see the Council of War there held respecting the distressed situation of Long-Island, and returned to this place this morning. When at Lebanon, was informed by Governour Trumbull he had written to Convention upon the subjects mentioned in your letter. Can only tell you the distresses which I hourly see and hear from Long-Island are beyond my power to describe. Expect to return to Convention soon.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID GELSTON.

To the Honourable the Convention of the State of New-York.

Boston, September 5, 1776.

The Governour of Halifax received the Declaration of Independence about four weeks since, but would not permit the poor dupe of a printer (had he ever so good a mind) to publish any more of it than barely the last clause, where it says, "We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, do," &c., &c.; and his reason (as we are credibly informed) was, "Because it may gain over to them (the Rebels) many converts, and inflame the minds of his Majesty's loyal and faithful subjects of the Province of Nova Scotia."

Our last accounts from Halifax say they left there forty sail of vessels, prizes, &c.; that they were in a great fright, expecting an attack from our troops every day. Three expresses arrived, successively, with an account of their being at Cumberland, and having five hundred Indians with them, and, it was supposed there, about two thousand Americans. They had, it was said, cut a road of ninety miles, in three weeks, through the woods, from Shepperday to Cumberland; that the above news came from the mouth of an express from Colonel Gorham, who every moment expected to be besieged, and wrote to Halifax for succours; and that an Indian (of the St. John tribe) was executed for damning his Excellency General Washington; that General Massey commanded there, and had with him near one thousand troops, chiefly Marines; that they were under apprehension of an attack from the Indians; that the refugee Tories were so alarmed they were preparing to go off for London in the ship Princess Royal, that was retaken—such as Doctor Gardner and family; Foster Hutchinson and tribe; Robert Hollowell and family; Mr. Mills, printer; and Lady Draper, &c., &c.; that in addition to those ingrates formerly mentioned as joining General Howe's army, are the following: Henry Liddle, John Burroughs, sailmaker, Archibald McNeil, Junior, William Hill, baker, Francis Skinner, Hugh Gordon, Doctor Sullivan, Anti Gallop, Cambridge, young Jones, who broke out of Concord jail, Sharwin, saddler, and Roberts, jeweller, John Patin, blacksmith, Andrew Cazneau, Francis Johonnet, Leveret Saltonstall, Haws Hatch, John Mansfield, breeches-maker, Charles Low, Parker and Philips, painters to the Artillery, and Campbell, of Worcester; and the following prisoners are still confined in one room, among felons, thieves, robbers, negroes, soldiers, &c., which we here publish for the satisfaction of their anxious friends:

James Lovell and Richard Carpenter, of Boston.

Consider Howland, master, and Jacob Taylor, mate, of the privateer brig Washington.

Bigelow, Kemp, Peak, and Sessions, Bunker's Hill.

Corporal Cruise and Cornelius Turner, Riflemen.

David Wells, Dorchester Neck.

Captain Francis Proctor, of Philadelphia.

Corporal Jeremiah Low, of Fredericksburg.

Colonel Ethan Allen, Bennington.

Sergeant Levi Munson, Wallingsford.

Sergeant Zechariah Brillmade, Woodbury.

Corporal Charles Steward, Stanford.

Corporal Roger Moore, Salisbury.

Corporal Samuel Lewis, William Gray, David Goss, and Adonijah Maxum, Sharon.

Ebenezer Mac and Levi Barnum, Norfolk.

John Gray, Arlington.

Ishural Flower, New-Hartford.

Barnabas Cane, Saratoga.

Preston Denton, Stillwater.

In the Hospital.

Amos Green, Norwich.

Jonathan Mayhew, Goshen.

William Drinkwater, New-Milford.

In the King's Yard.

John James Burkie, (a Swiss,) New-York.

Twelve Canadians.

Not one of Colonel Allen's men died until after their return from England; then Anthony Belisle, a Canadian, died, off Cape Fear.

All in the jail, but Sessions, are well, and in good spirits, but wishing for an exchange.

CLAUDE CRESPIGNY TO RALPH IZARD.

Tingmouth, Devonshire, September 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I return you many thanks for your favour of the 31st, and must beg that your next may be directed to me in the Crescent, at Bath. I propose to be there on this day se'n-night.

Mrs. C., who desires me to thank you for the plan you was so kind as to send her, is entirely recovered. Not so with me; but the Bath waters are to do wonders for me.

I sincerely congratulate you on the Carolina business. It seems to me to have been as ill conducted as it was unsuccessful. Was General Lee there? I hope he was. I believe him to be very able, and I want him to give proofs of his being to be trusted.

To see a King a tyrant, and his Ministers tools and rogues, is not very surprising; but to see a whole nation mad, is rather more extraordinary. Even now I can scarcely meet with one man in twenty who does not wish to see the nation and himself bankrupt, rather than not bring America to the feet of Lord George Germaine. This, indeed, is an addressing country, and a blessed stock of Tories overrun it.

I am called away, and if I were not I have neither news or entertainment to send you. We unite most heartily in regards and best wishes to yourself and Mrs. Izard and family.

I am, very heartily, yours,
To Ralph Izard.
CLAUDE CRESPIGNY.

COLONEL BULLITT TO COLONEL JOSEPH REED.

Charlestown, September 6, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have the returns of the battalions that have acted in South-Carolina this campaign. The extensiveness of the department, and our being hurried on the campaign before there was time to properly regulate the troops of this department, renders it something difficult to get the returns in that order I could wish; yet everything in my power I will do to accomplish the desirable end. I could wish some general regulation was established by the War Office. An order for the different returns of the different States to be made to the Deputy Adjutant-General, would enable him to be regular in his. As matters stand, there are orders from the Board to make the returns to them from the different States, by the Generals commanding in them. Such regulation will interfere with my ever being able to make up a proper return of the department. At least, the Generals of each State should let me have monthly returns, to enable me to discharge my duty. This, as also to have a statement of the number of battalions taken into the service of the Continent, in this department, sent to me, that I may be enabled to regulate their ranks, I should be obliged to you to procure from the War Office, that I may be able to regulate the ranks of the battalions. At present, I am uncertain what troops are Continentals or Provincials. You will greatly oblige me in having the above regulations adopted, and letting me hear from you as soon as possible on the subject, that I may be enabled to proceed, in this interval of real action in the campaign, to regulating and forming the battalions.

I am, with respect, yours,
To Colonel Joseph Reed, Adjutant-General.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO WILLIAM HINDMAN.

[No. 171.]

Annapolis, September 6, 1776.

SIR: As the state of our Treasury on the Western Shore is at present very low, and demands are daily increasing, we request you will send to Annapolis by the first safe opportunity what money you can conveniently spare, not exceeding £10,000. We request you to send it in unsigned bills, if you have that quantity by you. We are, &c.

To Mr. William Hindman.

GENERAL M'DONALD (PRISONER) TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

[Read September 7, 1776.]

Philadelphia Gaol, September 6, 1776.

To the SECRETARY OF WAR:

General McDonald's compliments to the Secretary of War. He is obliged to him for his polite information, that the Congress have been pleased to agree that Generals Prescott and McDonald shall be exchanged for the Generals Sullivan and Stirling. General McDonald is obliged to the Congress for the reference to the Board of War for his departure. The indulgence of eight or ten days will, he hopes, be sufficient to prepare him for his journey. His baggage will require a cart to carry it. He is not provided with horses—submits it to the Congress and the Board how he may be conducted with safety to his place of destination, not doubting his servant will be permitted to go along with him, and that his sword may be returned to him, which he is informed the Commissary received from his servant on the 25th of May last.

General McDonald begs leave to acquaint the Secretary and the Board of War, for the information of Congress, that when he was brought prisoner from sick quarters to General Moore's camp, at Moore's Creek, upon the 28th of February last, General Moore treated him with great politeness, and told him that he should be treated with respect to his rank and commission in the King of Great Britain's service. He would have given him a parole to return to his sick quarters, as his low state of health required it much at that time, but Colonel Caswell objected thereto, and had him conducted prisoner to Newbern, but gently treated all the way by Colonel Caswell and his officers.

From Newbern he was conducted by a guard of Horse to Halifax, and committed on his arrival, after forty-five miles journey the last day, in a sickly state of health, and immediately ushered into a common gaol, without bed or bedding, fire or candles, in a cold, long night, by Colonel Long, who did not appear to me to behave like a gentleman. That notwithstanding the promised protection for person and property he had from General Moore, a man called Longfield Cox, a wagon-master to Colonel Caswell's army, seized upon his horse, saddle, pistols, and other arms, and violently detained the same by refusing to deliver them up to Colonel Bryan, who conducted him to Newbern. Colonel Long was pleased to detain his mare at Halifax when sent prisoner from thence to here. Sorry to dwell so long upon so disagreeable a subject.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, Friday, September 6, 1776.

This day, I think, has been the most remarkable of all. Sullivan came here from Lord Howe, five days ago, with a message that his Lordship desired a half an hour's conversation with some of the members of Congress in their private capacities. We have spent three or four days in debating whether we should take any notice of it. I have, to the utmost of my abilities, during the whole time, opposed our taking any notice of it. But, at last, it was determined by a majority, "that the Congress being the Representatives of the free and independent States of America, it was improper to appoint any of their members to confer in their private characters with his Lordship. But they would appoint a Committee of their body to wait on him, to know whether he had power to treat with Congress upon terms of peace, and to hear any propositions that his Lordship may think proper to make."

When the Committee came to be balloted for, Doctor Franklin and your humble servant were unanimously chosen. Colonel R. H. Lee and Mr. Rutledge had an equal number; but, upon a second vote, Mr. Rutledge was chosen. I requested to be excused, but was desired to consider of it until to-morrow. My friends here advise me to go. All the staunch and intrepid are very earnest with me to go, and the timid and wavering, if any such there are, agree in the request. So I believe I shall undertake the journey. I doubt whether his Lordship will see us, but the same Committee will be directed to inquire into the state of the army at New-York, so that there will be business enough, if his Lordship makes none. It would fill this letter-book to give you all the arguments for and against this measure, if I had liberty to attempt it. His Lordship seems to have been playing off a number of Machiavellian manoeuvres, in order to throw upon us the odium of continuing this war. Those who have been advocates for the appointment of this Committee, are for opposing manoeuvre to manoeuvre, and are confident that the consequence will be, that the odium will fall upon him. However this may be, my lesson is plain—to ask a few questions and take his answers.

I can think of but one reason for their putting me upon this embassy, and that is this: An idea has crept into many minds here that his Lordship is such another as Mr. Hutchinson, and they may possibly think that a man who has been accustomed to penetrate into the mazy windings of Hutchinson's heart, and the serpentine wiles of his head, may be tolerably qualified to converse with his Lordship.

RICHARD DALLAM TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

State of New-Jersey, Brunswick, September 6, 1776.

SIR: James May, who is concerned with me in the Gun Factory, will, in my absence, want a sum of money to go on therewith, and as he is unknown to your Board, I have thought it necessary to advise you thereof, and to request your Board to furnish him with what sum Mr. James Harris may draw on you for on my account, to be paid in guns, part of which, I expect, are already finished. The Council of Safety's compliance herewith, I expect, will be to the publick advantage; and oblige, sir, your Honour's very humble servant,

 RICHARD DALLAM.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq., President Council of Safety.

RICHARD DALLAM TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

State of New-Jersey, New-Brunswick, September 6, 1776

SIR: I have drawn a bill in favour of Colonel Charles Reed, Esq., for the sum of £440, Continental currency, (being balance due his battalion,) on the Continental Treasurer, to whom you will please to give an order for the payment thereof.

I shall be to-morrow entirely without money, and large demands are making for the payment of troops who have staid out their time. The Congress will please to order me a further sum as soon as possible.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD DALLAM, Deputy Paymaster-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

RICHARD DALLAM TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

State of New-Jersey, Brunswick, September 6, 1776.

SIR: The return of the Pennsylvania and Jersey Militia has occasioned such large draughts on me this week, that I have not more than two thousand dollars left. The honourable Congress will therefore order me a further sum as soon as possible.

I have this day drawn in favour of Colonel Charles Reed, for the balance due his battalion Jersey Militia, (being £440,) which you will please to order payment of, and charge to my debt.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD DALLAM, Deputy Paymaster-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 9th. Referred to the Board of War.]

New-York, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I was last night honoured with your favour of the 3d, with sundry resolutions of Congress; and perceiving it to be their opinion and determination that no damage shall be done the city in case we are obliged to abandon it, I shall take every measure in my power to prevent it.

Since my letter of the 4th nothing very material has occurred, unless it is that the fleet seem to be drawing more together and all getting close in with Governour's Island. Their designs we cannot learn, nor have we been able to procure the least information of late of any of their plans or intended operations.

As the enemy's movements are very different from what we expected, and from their large encampments a considerable distance up the Sound, there is reason to believe they intend to make a landing above or below King's Bridge, and thereby to hem in our army and cut off the communication with the country, I mean to call a Council of General Officers to-day or to-morrow, and endeavour to digest and fix upon some regular and certain system of conduct to be pursued, in order to baffle their efforts and counteract their schemes, and also to determine on the expediency of evacuating or attempting to maintain the city and the several posts on this Island. The result of their opinion and deliberations I shall advise Congress of by the earliest opportunity, which will be by express, having it not in my power to communicate any intelligence by post, as the office is removed to so great a distance and entirely out of the way.

I have enclosed a list of the officers who are prisoners, and from whom letters have been received by a flag. We know there are others not included in the list.

General Sullivan having informed me that General Howe was willing that an exchange of him for General Prescott should take place, it will be proper to send General Prescott immediately, that it may be effected.

As the Militia regiments in all probability will be impatient to return and become pressing for their pay, I shall be glad of the direction of Congress, whether they are to receive it here or from the Conventions or Assemblies of the respective States to which they belong. On the one hand, the settlement of their abstracts will be attended with trouble and difficulty; on the other, they will go away much better satisfied, and be more ready to give their aid in future, if they are paid before their departure.

Before I conclude I must take the liberty of mentioning to Congress the great distress we are in for want of money. Two months' pay, and more to some battalions, is now due the troops here, without anything in the military chest to satisfy it. This occasions much dissatisfaction and almost a general uneasiness. Not a day passes without complaints and the most importunate and urgent demands on this head. As it may injure the service greatly, and the want of a regular supply of cash produce consequences of the most fatal tendency, I entreat the attention of Congress to this subject, and that we may be provided as soon as can be with a sum equal to every present claim.

I have wrote to General Howe proposing an exchange of General McDonald for Lord Stirling, and shall be extremely happy to obtain it, as well as that of General Sullivan for General Prescott, being greatly in want of them and under the necessity of appointing, pro tempore, some of the Colonels to command brigades.

I have the honour to be with the highest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. As two regiments from North-Carolina, and three regiments more from Virginia, are ordered here, if they could embark at Norfolk and come up the bay with security, it would expedite their arrival and prevent the men from a long, fatiguing march. This, however, should not be attempted if the enemy have vessels in the bay, and which might probably intercept them.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 3, 1776.

(Parole, Vernon.)

(Countersign, Mifflin.)

The General most earnestly requests that the several Brigadiers and Commandants of Brigades get their respective corps in the best order as soon as possible, and for this purpose they should join in brigades as soon as can be, on a parade appointed for that purpose.

The Brigade-Majors, according to the new arrangement, are to attend every day for orders while they stay in town; if they should march to reinforce General Mifflin's and McDougall's brigades, they will fix upon one to come to Head-Quarters every day for orders.

General Fellows's Brigade to furnish a Captain, two substitutes, and fifty men, for boat duty, till further orders, to parade at Head-Quarters, and receive orders at eight o'clock every morning.

Some instances of infamous cowardice, and some of scandalous plunder and riot, having lately appeared, the General is resolved to bring the offenders to exemplary punishment; the notion that seems too much to prevail of laying hold of property not under immediate care or guard, is utterly destructive of all honesty and good order, and will prove the ruin of any army when it prevails. It is therefore hoped the officers will exert themselves to put a stop to it on all future occasions. If they do not, ere long death will be the portion of some of the offenders.

The state of the ammunition and arms should be a subject of constant attention to every officer.

The General hopes the justice of the great cause in which they are engaged, the necessity and importance of defending this country, preserving its liberties, and warding off the destruction meditated against it, will inspire every man with firmness and resolution in time of action, which is now approaching—ever remembering that upon the blessing of Heaven, and the bravery of the men, our country only can be saved.

The General orders a return of every Regiment to be made immediately, and delivered to the Brigadier, or Commandant of the brigade, so that the Brigade Returns may be made at twelve o'clock to-morrow.

The near approach of the enemy obliges the guard to be doubled. The several Brigade-Majors are immediately to settle the duty of their brigades, according to their strength. This is confined to General Putnam's division.

After Orders.—Captain Hezekiah Holdrige, of Colonel Wyly's regiment, appointed to act as Major of said regiment for the present.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 4, 1776.

(Parole, America.)

(Countersign, Shelburne.)

It is with amazement and concern the General finds that the men of every regiment are suffered to be constantly rambling about, and at such distances from their respective quarters and encampments, as not to be able to oppose the enemy in any sudden approach. He therefore not only commands, but most earnestly exhorts, the Colonels and commanding officers of corps, as they value their own reputation, the safety of the army, and the good of the cause, to put an immediate and effectual stop to such an unsoldierlike and dangerous practice; as one step towards the accomplishment of which, he orders and directs that all those who shall be absent without leave be immediately punished.

The sick of the several regiments of Militia are to be discharged, if they are well enough to get home, and choose to be discharged. All the other sick are to be provided for in such a manner, and in such places as the Director-General of the Hospitals and the several Regimental Surgeons shall think best for them. In giving these discharges, particular care is to be taken by the Colonels and General Wolcott to see that none but those who are really sick be dismissed, and that the discharges be given in writing by General Wolcott.

The General does in express and peremptory terms insist upon exact returns of the several regiments and other corps; and the Brigadiers and officers commanding brigades, are to see that this order is complied with without delay, as it is essentially necessary for the General to be acquainted with the exact state of the army.

Colonel Glover, during the absence of General Clinton, is to be considered as Commandant of his brigade, and to be obeyed accordingly.

The increased number of wagons, will, in future, admit of more regularity in marching the regiments than has yet prevailed. Whenever, therefore, a regiment is ordered to march, they should get their baggage in readiness; but not move it till conveniences are provided. The Quartermaster of the regiment should then overlook it, and stop all heavy, useless lumber; and the Commanders of regiments would do well to take particular care in this matter. No Colonel is to seize any boat or wagon by his own authority, on penalty of having his baggage turned out and left.

The Brigade-Majors are ordered to have their Brigade Returns immediately made, or the General will put the delinquents in arrest, unless the Adjutants fail in their duty, and they put such Adjutants in arrest.

The Brigade-Majors, both standing and temporary, are hereafter punctually to attend at eleven o'clock at Head-Quarters. There has been of late a shameful remissness in some of them.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 5, 1776.

(Parole, Chatham.)

(Countersign, Maryland.)

The Brigade-Majors immediately to settle a Court-Martial, making an allowance for the absence or indisposition of any officers. They are to meet at the brick house near the encampment, late of General McDougall, to-morrow at ten o'clock. Notice to be given accordingly. They are first to try the scoundrels who have been detected in pillaging and plundering Lord Stirling's, and other property.

Such as were directed by yesterday's orders to apply to General Wolcott for discharges, are in future to apply to the Brigadiers under whom their regiments are ranged.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 6, 1776.

(Parole, Pitt.)

(Countersign, Oamden.)

David Henly, Esq., is appointed Deputy Adjutant-General until further orders; and is immediately to repair to General Spencer's division to regulate the several returns, and do the other duties of said office, extending his care to the division under General Heath; he is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Colonel Glover, commandant of General Clinton's brigade, is to recommend a suitable, active officer, for Major of Brigade, in Major Henly's stead.

The General expects the Majors of Brigade to be very active and careful; to get their brigades in the best order; to bring on their guards and fatigue parties early; see the proper reliefs marched off; returns made; and to march with the brigade to the alarm-posts as frequently as possible.

The Adjutants being under their particular direction, they are to see that they do their duty, and put them in arrest where they fail in it.

The Majors of Brigade and Adjutants are reminded that the returns are all expected in to-morrow, both regimental and brigade, in order to complete the General Return. Any one who fails will be noticed in publick orders.

The General is resolved to put a stop to plundering and converting either publick or private property to their own use, when taken off or found by any soldiers. He therefore calls upon all the officers to exert themselves against it; and if the Colonels or other officers of regiments see or know of any horses, furniture, merchandise, or such other property in the hands of any officer or soldier, and do not immediately take hold of it, giving immediate notice of it to the Brigadier-General, such officer will be deemed a party, brought to a court-martial, and broke with infamy. For, let it ever be remembered, that no plundering army ever was a successful one.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 6, 1776.

SIR: By a letter from Major-General Sullivan, while on Long-Island, and which he acquainted me was wrote by your permission, I was informed it would be agreeable to exchange that gentleman for Major-General Prescott; and Brigadier Lord Stirling for any Brigadier of yours in our possession.

In consequence of this intelligence I have wrote to Congress, requesting that General Prescott may be sent here, that this proposal may be carried into execution.

We have no Brigadier of yours a prisoner with us, except General McDonald, taken in North-Carolina, whom I am willing to exchange for Lord Sterling, and shall be glad to know your pleasure on the subject.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

To Lieutenant-General Howe.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO NEW-YORK COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I have now before me your letter of the 4th instant, enclosing the report against ordering out any more of the Militia from the Counties of Orange, Dutchess, Westchester, or Ulster. The reasons alleged by the Committee to whom this matter was referred, are entirely satisfactory to me, and therefore I do not expect a compliance with that part of my letter which respects this matter.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., Chairman, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-York, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I have been honoured with your favour of the 31st ultimo, and am extremely obliged by the measures you are taking in consequence of my recommendation letter. The exertions of Connecticut upon this, as well as upon every other occasion, do them great honour, and I hope will be attended with successful and happy consequences. In respect to the mode of conduct to be pursued by the troops that go over to the Island, I cannot lay down any certain rule; it must be formed and governed by circumstances and the direction of those who command them.

I should have done myself the honour of transmitting you an account of the engagement between a detachment of our troops and the enemy, on Long-Island, on the 27th, and of our retreat from thence, before now, had it not been for the multiplicity of business I have been involved in ever since; and being still engaged, I cannot enter upon a minute and particular detail of the affair. I shall only add, that we lost, in killed, wounded, and prisoners, from seven hundred to one thousand men. Among the prisoners are General Sullivan and Lord Stirling. The enclosed list will show you the names of many of the officers that are prisoners. The action was chiefly with the troops from Jersey, Pennsylvania, the lower Counties, and Maryland, and Colonel Huntington's regiment; they suffered greatly, being attacked and overpowered by numbers of the enemy greatly superiour to them. The enemy's loss we have not been able to ascertain, but we have reason to believe it was considerable. The engagement was warm, and conducted with great resolution and bravery on the part of our troops. During the engagement, a deep column of the enemy descended from the woods, and attempted an impression upon our lines, but retreated immediately on the discharge of a cannon, and part of the musketry from the line nearest to them. As the main body of the enemy had encamped not far from our lines, and I had reason to believe they intended to force us from them by regular approaches, which the nature of the ground favoured extremely, and at the same time meant, by the ships of war, to cut off the communication between the City and the Island, and by that means keep our men divided, and unable to oppose them anywhere, by the advice of the General Officers, on the night of the 29th, I withdrew our troops from thence, without any loss of men and but little baggage.

I am, &c., Go. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

COLONEL MOYLAN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

New-York, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I am informed there remains in the hands of Thomas Greene, Esquire, of Providence, a quantity of Russia duck, which is ordered by the Secret Committee to lay till further orders from them. We are here in great want of tents; if, sir, you would procure an order from said Committee to have the duck made up into tents and forwarded to me, it will be of the greatest service to the army.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

STEPHEN MOYLAN.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

COLONEL MALCOM TO JOHN M'KESSON.

New-York, September 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I am apprehensive that the State hath a bad bargain of my countrymen. I believe Captain Stewart is a very good man, but he has made a horrid collection of soldiers. If the Convention think proper to send me the conditions upon which the company is raising, the bounty allowed, with an order to take some direction concerning it, perhaps I might save the State money, with respect to their pay. I shall return with my regiment, so that the Convention will be relieved of the expense so far. I understand they allow fifteen dollars bounty to the Captain, and he to get the men as he can; if so, they will most certainly be disappointed in their hopes. The reason is obvious—half a dozen men have already been flogged, and thrice the number have deserved to be so.

I would be happy to see a good company or regiment of my countrymen in the army, but equally mortified to see it disgraced by such a set as I have got with Captain Stewart. They are the very last sweepings of hell.

I had a letter from our old friend, good General Woodhull. Mr. Morris must prophecy no more. He said, "Colonel Elliot would do to redeem the General."

As to news or lies I can send nor make none: duty is too severe. However, it agrees well with me. I have never in my life been so stout as when lying in the woods on Long-Island—dry once a week. General Lee hourly expected, as if from heaven, with a legion of flaming swordsmen. I fear we shall evacuate your poor city. The very thought gives me the horrors. Offer my respects to the President and members, and Mr. Benson. Accept the same, and believe that I am with sincere esteem,

Dear sir, your much obliged and humble servant,

WILLIAM MALCOM.

To John McKesson, Esq.

Let me hear from Convention on the first subject soon; the sooner the better. Indeed if the order was even discretionary to stop a further enlistment on bounty, it would be proper. I will not stop it without sufficient cause.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO MRS. REED, DATED NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 6, 1776.

I have written twice this week, but whether any letters ever reach you or not, I do not know. I hope they do, as they will serve to keep up your spirits in our critical situation. We are still here, in a posture somewhat awkward; we think, (at least I do,) that we cannot stay, and yet we do not know how to go: so that we may be properly said to be between hawk and buzzard. To attempt a description of all the circumstances which attend us, would take more time than I can spare, nor would it give you any great consolation. Our comfort is, that the season is far advanced, and if a sacrifice of us can save the cause of America, there will be time to collect another army before Spring, and the country be preserved. The councils of the Congress seem to be dark and intricate, and very badly calculated to raise or continue an army from which substantial benefit can be derived. My sensations are too acute and forebodings too strong for such a service, though I do not find my spirits sink under difficulties, but rather rise. I sometimes think my mind is a very peculiar one; it rises when the spirits of others fall, and suffers by anticipating evil. To use the modern phrase, I have made it up for whatever may happen, and feel no other concern than what arises from thoughts of you and our dear little folks, and even these I get rid of as soon as possible, for it can only unfit me for duty, without doing you any service. When I look around, and see how few of the numbers who talked so largely of death and honour are around me, and that those who are here are those from whom it was least expected, (as the Tilghmans, &c.,) I am lost in wonder and surprise. Some of our Philadelphia gentlemen, who came over on visits, upon the first cannon went off in a most violent hurry. Your noisy Sons of Liberty are, I find, the quietest in the field. The motions of the enemy are very dark and mysterious. Such another surprise would do us mischief. I send a list of such officers as have sent out for their baggage, and are certainly prisoners. I suppose there are others whom we shall hear of soon. I am glad Atlee is safe, because everybody allows he behaved well. An engagement, or even the expectation of one, gives a wonderful insight into character. But we are young soldiers.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM AN OFFICER IN THE ARMY TO HIS FRIEND IN THE COUNTRY, DATED

Turtle-Bay, September 6, 1776.

Monday, August 26, the Regulars, who were landed, in a body of twenty thousand men, on Long-Island, began, in the afternoon, to advance, in large bodies, up towards Flatbush; and large columns were seen, towards night, to file off towards the grand road to Newtown. A regiment of Riflemen and some others were posted in the woods and eminences towards Flatbush, to prevent the enemy from making an approach that way. General Sullivan posted himself on a high and advantageous ground on the Bedford road, and some works were cast up there, to prevent the enemy's penetrating that way. Our numbers on these advanced posts were but small compared with the enemy. They might, possibly, consist of fifteen hundred or two thousand men. The grounds were so advantageous, the woods so thick, &c., that our people imagined that they could, with small numbers, withstand the enemy, at least till such time as that they might be reinforced. But all these advantages were, by good generalship in the enemy, lost at once. The enemy, in the night, filed off, with the Light Horse and Light Infantry, to the eastward, until they came on the great Jamaica road, which was not guarded, and passed by all our posts, and flung themselves, in great numbers, into the woods on our left wing, and there lay concealed, without our knowledge, just by our lines. While this was effecting on our left, the enemy had the art to land a party on the right, between our lines and the Riflemen in their rear. This they effected under cover of the night, which was dark and gloomy, being assisted by a small creek, which ran up on the right of the Riflemen. This cut off all intelligence from the army, so that the officers had no intelligence of what had been done. When the enemy had thus prepared matters, they began an attack upon our right wing, down near Flatbush, where our officers expected it would begin, about three o'clock in the morning. As soon as this was perceived, General Lord Stirling and General Parsons, with a detachment of about a thousand men, were sent off to reinforce the advanced posts on our right; but before they could reach the out-posts, they, being attacked on the right, both in front and rear, were much scattered and broken. In the mean time, the enemy which had advanced to the woods on our left, advanced some of them, briskly, almost to our lines, from which receiving a heavy fire, they gave way, and wheeled to the left, towards our right, to flank and surround Lord Stirling and his detachment, which they, in a manner, effected. In this detachment there was a regiment from Maryland, which were proper Regulars, kept together in a body, and fought the enemy nobly. The fire was kept up till near twelve o'clock, when our people retreated down to a creek, being surrounded by the enemy and water. After pouring a most heavy fire upon the enemy, they attempted an escape across the creek, which most of them effected, but some were killed and some drowned. Some of our people kept coming in almost all day and next night, and some the day after. Our whole loss consists of between five and six hundred men, the most of whom are taken. General Sullivan and General Lord Stirling are among the number captured. Colonel Huntington's and the Maryland regiments suffered the most.

General Parsons says that some of our men fought through the enemy not less than seven or eight times that day. He lay out himself part of the night, concealed in a swamp, from whence he made his escape, with seven men, to our lines, about break of day the next morning.

This unfortunate affair gave the enemy all the woods and high grounds, and confined us to our lines. These were a good defence against musketry, but not against cannon and shells. When we had spared as many men from our other posts as we could with any safety, and manned our lines on the Island as amply as we could, the enemy had more than two men to our one. We were determined, however, to defend them, if the enemy should attempt to force them, sword in hand; but it soon appeared that this was not their design. They began to entrench themselves, and to make regular approaches, which, it was judged, we could not withstand. There was danger that the enemy would get up some of their ships between the Island and the town, and so cut off our retreat; which, should it have happened, would have been very fatal to the cause. It was, therefore, determined to retreat, by a council of officers. Thursday, August 29, orders were given, towards night, for all the sick to be moved to New-York, in such a manner that nobody so much as suspected the design. Orders were given for all the regiments that had been on duty for a day or two to parade at seven o'clock, and to be replaced by new regiments, &c. As soon as it was dark the army retreated, and from that time to the next morning, nine thousand five hundred men passed the river, with all our military stores and baggage, and most of our cannon; and that with so much secrecy and silence that the enemy never so much as suspected it till we called off our sentries from the lines, after break of day. Scarce anything was lost in the retreat. It perhaps equalled almost anything of the kind with which history gives us any acquaintance, and was, doubtless, a wise measure, and much of the goodness of God is to be seen in it.

The army are now much more collected, and able to make a defence whenever a grand attack shall be made; and our retreat, in case of a defeat, would not be so extremely difficult and hazardous. The troops, in general, are in good spirits, and I believe will do their best to defend the country.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Mount-Washington, September 6, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL HEATH: General Washington has ordered me to remain here, in order to forward the works, which are to be finished as soon as possible. This order puts it out of my power to attend to the necessary regulations of the regiments on the east of Harlem River. Let me, then, beg you to give your eye a cast over them, and make such regulations as you would wish and direct me to make, were it in my choice to be with those regiments. I know your great and frequent perplexities will interfere, now and then, with my request; but your zeal and love for business will induce you to undertake anything pro bono publico.

I am, dear sir, yours,

TH. MIFFLIN.

To Major-General Heath, Head-Quarters, King's Bridge.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON FROM A BRITISH OFFICER, DATED NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 6, 1776.

General Howe finding himself at the head of twenty-one thousand men, in high health and fit for action, was determined to begin upon it as soon as possible. Accordingly, a great number of regiments were embarked on board the transports, and everything prepared for an expedition, so secret that neither the second in command at land or sea could guess where the blow was to fall.

Everything being prepared and the cannon embarked, in the night of the 21st of August, the Rainbow, of fifty guns, commanded by Sir George Collier, got under weigh, and anchored near a strong post of the enemy's, called Denys's, upon Long-Island, who fled from thence instantly, expecting the man-of-war would level the place to the ground. A little after nine the transports all anchored in Gravesend Bay, on the southern part of Long-Island. The flat-bottom boats immediately landed the troops, and the gallant Lord Howe was present to direct the operation.

The army, when landed, consisted of eighteen thousand men—the rest being left upon Staten-Island. Lord Cornwallis commanded one of the advance posts, General Grant another, and Earl Percy had a post of difficulty and danger, to which he, on all occasions, showed himself equal.

The King's forces lay still, getting ashore cannon, &c., for three or four days, and then encamped at Flat-Bush. After this, they moved on in three bodies, and surprised many of the enemy's out-posts, and killed and took a number of men.

The 27th, was a pretty smart action between a body of our troops and one of the enemy; but they fled, with considerable loss. Among the prisoners taken was Lord Stirling, one of the Rebel Generals.

The 28th, the Rebels made another stand, but retreated again very soon. This day Sullivan was taken, another of their Generals. Nothing could behave better than the Hessians, and particularly their Jägers, or Riflemen, who are as much superiour to those of the Rebels as it is possible to imagine.

The 29th, upon a movement of the men-of-war and the troops, the Rebels ran away, and left the Island to the conquerors, flying over to New-York in the greatest confusion and dismay.

Long-Island being thus in our possession, with so little loss, (for our killed is but fifty-nine, and our wounded and prisoners only two hundred and seventy,) our men are elated beyond measure, and our enemies depressed.

The Rose, commanded by Captain Wallis, is gone into the last river, to cover the transit of the troops over. But she has been very roughly handled; and two other men-of-war, I hear, are just ordered in her room. General Washington is ready to receive us on the other side, and will welcome us ashore with the feu de joie of forty thousand men.

I am told that the enemy have detached a body of twenty thousand men from Boston to besiege Halifax; and I hear some of the men-of-war will sail, in two or three days, for its defence. It is supposed Sir Peter Parker, as Commodore, will go there in the Chatham.

Matters go on swimmingly; and I don't doubt the next news we send you is that New-York is ours, though in ashes, for the Rebel troops have vowed to put it in flames if the Tory troops get over.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO ABRAHAM YATES.

Dobbs's Ferry, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I received yesterday a letter from the Comptroller, in which he says, "Mr. Franklin has received no letter from Convention respecting the Albany riders; unless there is an absolute necessity for his going constantly on one side the river, it had best not be altered." However, notwithstanding this, I imagine the Convention's design may be answered by the post's riding constantly on the east side as far up as the Fishkill, and then crossing, when it is his turn to ride on the west side, to New-Windsor; and as there are few or no letters between New-Windsor and New-York, the revenue of the office will not be diminished by the alteration.

In the same letter the Comptroller mentions that it is the Postmaster-General's desire I should keep my office at Head-Quarters, as most of the letters now going are for the army. In consequence of this I expect the Convention will not long have the office so near them, unless they furnish a rider to ply constantly between Head-Quarters to carry thither such letters as may come for the army, and wait there while the General gets his despatches ready to go by return of post. This I should think they might do without being at any additional expense, as I understand they have a rider here who is to hold himself in constant readiness to go to Head-Quarters whenever called upon. Please to favour me with a line upon this subject as soon as you conveniently can.

I have not had a word from town yet respecting the privateer.

I am, sir, your very humble servant,

EBEN. HAZARD.

To Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., President of Convention at Fishkill.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO JOHN M'KESSON.

Dobbs's Ferry, September 6, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Sampson gave me your letter yesterday in due season. Their Honours, according to your account, are like myself, very busy doing nothing. I cannot tell where the post-office will be fixed; it is kept at present at Hercules Cronks', next door to Major Abraham Storms', one mile above Dobbs's Ferry; but the Comptroller has informed me that it is the Postmaster-General's desire it would be kept at Head-Quarters, and I am apprehensive I shall be obliged to remove thither, unless the Convention will keep a rider to go from hence to Head-Quarters with letters, and wait there till the despatches are ready to go by return of post. When the matter is settled I will let you know. Whenever you determine contrary to the opinion of so respectable a body as the Representatives of the State of New-York, you should do it "with submission." I cannot get one word of true news here, though I have made diligent inquiry. I send you a newspaper containing a new resolve of Congress.

I am yours,

EBEN. HAZARD.

To John McKesson, Esquire.

COLONEL BIRDSALL TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill, September 6, 1776.

SIR: At this critical hour I conceive time will not admit for me to tarry. The Secretary told me to-day to wait till four o'clock and my business should be done soon enough to ride part of the way home to-night. I have nothing at present to ask for but the bounty for my company, and that to them I am engaged, and that I have to-day applied for. It is a fact, if soldiers are not paid according to promise they have a just cause to complain.

N. B. In regard to Colonel Smith's regiment, he has discharged none of his men; but when he parted with me at New-Rochelle he was determined to make a stand on some part of the east end of Long-Island, and collect his regiment to advance, as circumstances would admit, westward to oppose our enemy; but as his regiment now, some part of them went with him and some by themselves, and some now waiting and ready to go, and some dispersed to their friends for relief till further orders, an immediate call is now for every hearty American friend to proceed, as I intend to do, for the protection of Long-Island. And so I remain your sincere friend, and am ready with heart and hand to defend the cause of America.

BENJ. BIRDSALL, Lieutenant-Colonel.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAMS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill, September 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I was informed this day by some of the gentlemen of the Convention, that you wanted me to give the best information relative to Colonel Smith's regiment. Time will not permit me in person to do it. After my compliments to the Convention, I take the pleasure of giving them a detail of the affair as nigh as I can. The day our regiment marched from New-York we were met near Harlem by Mr. Townsend and Lawrence. They informed us that we were to be put on Long-Island at some rate or other; but whether we were to be put over as a regiment to be stationed there or not, I cannot particularly tell. However Colonel Smith gave leave for every man to shift for himself in getting their effects and families off from Long-Island, and as I took it he did not expect the regiment to form again. I told them that I did not look upon it in the power of the Colonel to discharge me from the service, and therefore should hold myself in readiness to execute any lawful orders should be given by your Convention, and should expect to continue in service until discharged agreeable to resolution of Congress.

I am, gentlemen, your humble servant,

THOS. WILLIAMS, 1st Lieutenant of Captain Nostrand's Company.

To the Convention of the State of New-York.

RICHARD THORNE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fishkill, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I have been informed that one of the Representatives of the State of New-York publicly said in the honourable body over which you preside, that from the testimony of Colonel Jeronimus Remsen I had deserted his regiment without any cause known to him, or words to that effect; and that some disagreeable intimations were then given of my being disaffected to the cause of my country. As I feel myself much injured by such declarations or intimations, I beg the patience of you, sir, and the Convention, while I shortly state the manner and occasion of my short absence from the regiment.

On Tuesday, the 20th ultimo, in the lines at Brookland, I was seized with a disorder frequent in our camps—the flux. I continued there without any remission on duty with my disorder increasing, and on Thursday night following was almost all night out with a guard on Fort Oblong, with a very heavy dew and extremely uncomfortable, although my disorder had then become of the worst and bloody species of that name. The too free use of the good things of this life by the commanding officer of the regiment, to which, however, he might have been induced by the inclemency of the weather and the absence of the Lieutenant-Colonel, left me that night without any assistance, and obliged me so to expose myself to the most inclement weather during the night, and nearly endangered my life from my disorder. I continued, however, in camp with the disorder increased to a high degree, affording every countenance and aid in my power until Sunday, the 25th day of the month, when Colonel Remsen was pleased to give me a permit, here ready to be shown to the honourable Convention, and in the words following, to wit:

"Brookland, August 25, 1776.

"The bearer hereof, Mr. Richard Thorne, Major of Colonel Jeronimus Remsen's regiment, being sick and weak, not able to do duty in the regiment, is permitted to return home to recruit himself.

JERONIMUS REMSEN.

"To all Officers concerned."

As to the state of weakness and debility I was reduced to by the disorder and fatigue I underwent, I cheerfully appeal to Dr. Latham, who attended me, and is now in Fishkill. The almost unremitted application of my time, and any little talents God has been pleased to give me, to the attending Committees and the cause of my country, in one way or another, for several months past, will, I trust, effectually prevent any suspicions of those who best know me that I have any spark of disaffection; but it cannot but give me pain that any such disagreeable intimations with respect to me should from any quarter undeservedly have been given to the Convention.

I have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD THORNE.

To the President and Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Ticonderoga, September 6, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I received the enclosed letter from Colonel Bayley, from Cohos, with a Hessian deserter, whose examination and capitulation you will find in the packet.

This moment I got your letter of the 3d instant, and have just now seen Captain Todd. The measure of quitting Long-Island may, for anything I can tell, be a necessary one, but I cannot help having my apprehensions for the consequences. I am happy to hear our troops behaved with so much true courage and magnanimity. To lose a post, or even a battle, may be our misfortune, as it has often been the misfortune of the bravest and most experienced veterans, but Great Britain loses everything upon this Continent the moment our troops can be brought to fight theirs in the open field.

Enclosed is a copy of my last letter to General Arnold; also a copy of my orders and instructions to Colonel Wigglesworth.

If your Indian intelligence, of the enemy intending to penetrate by the way of Oswego, has proved abortive, I wish you would immediately reinforce Fort George with all the troops that can be spared from Albany, and upon both communications, as Colonel Gansevoort complains for want of men to guard and forward the provisions across the Lakes. Pray order Mr. Douw, the A. D. Q. M. G., to attend his duty immediately at the carrying-place. The grindstones, so much wanted, are not yet sent here. If my Aid-de-Camp, Major Peirce, is in Albany, I beg you will acquaint him it is my positive orders he comes here immediately.

September 8, 1776.—The grindstones are just arrived, but no musket cartridge paper. The enclosed letter from Lieutenant-Colonel Gansevoort, obliges me to send Colonel Phinney's New-Hampshire regiment to Fort George, to batteau the flour from thence. This regiment came lately from Boston, where they were all inoculated and cleansed from the small-pox. At the same time as you order a detachment from below to Lake George, you will order Colonel Phinney, upon his being relieved, to return to this post. No intelligence that can be depended upon has yet arrived from the fleet. Scouts and parties are out, both by land and by water, to make discoveries. This moment two hogsheads with cartridge paper are arrived from Fort George. The paper is rather too thick for musket cartridges, and too thin for cannon—but it must do until we get better. I am, &c.,

Ho. GATES.

To Major-General Schuyler.

The Examination of Anthony Hasselaband, of Colonel Riedesel's regiment of Dragoons, who deserted at Montreal the 24th June, with nineteen others, but does not know what became of them. Says:

That in February one thousand Hessians, three thousand Brunswickers, and three thousand Westphalians, the latter all Roman Catholics, embarked on board forty-six Dutch vessels, at Staad, in Hanover, and sailed for America; that forty-three of these arrived at Quebec 27th May, the other three being blown off from the fleet in a storm about Easter, and supposed to be lost; that some time in June the whole marched for Montreal, where they arrived the latter end of the same month.

That five hundred of the Westphalians and Brunswicker troops were drafted as Dragoons, horses purchased in Canada, and daily training for that purpose. Five hundred more were drafted as Riflemen. The whole are new recruits, from sixteen to twenty-two years of age, quartered at Longueuil, opposite Montreal, under the command of Colonel Beluiz, of the Brunswick troops.

That at Quebec ten of the Germans had deserted; one was afterwards, at Longueuil, ordered to run the gauntlet, through three hundred men; but the whole of the German troops mutinied, owing to their not receiving their pay and provisions as promised them, refused to inflict the punishment, and were going to murder the General, but Colonel Beluiz quieted them with promises of their receiving their allowances regularly for the future. That he understood all the Germans were to return about Michaelmas, and that the English and Canadians amounted to about 5,000 men.

September 5, 1776.

CAPITULATION.

His Serene Highness the Duke of Brunswick, having thought fit to complete and strengthen his serene Dragoon Regiment, all his Infantry Regiments, and his Rifle Corps, and committed the recruiting to me, the subscriber, Colonel Riedesel, Lord of Eisenback, and me thereunto authorizing: therefore, have herewith engaged Anthony Hasselaband, born in Kirchshagen, age twenty-one years, — months, religion Catholick, measuring five feet seven inches, as a Ranger of Horse, and promise him his usual Brunswick pay, and more than double the pay in case of a march, besides bread and other emoluments and capitulation of six years, after which determination he shall be discharged without hindrance.

Given at Head-Quarters, Wolfenbittel, 20th Jan., 1776.

[SEAL.] RIEDESEL,
Colonel and Chief of a Dragoon and Independent Regiment.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I have sent General Arnold, by this conveyance, a reinforcement of seventy men, and have desired him to return the detachment of your regiment to Crown-Point. I desire you will directly order the oar-makers to bring up all the oars now made to Tyonderoga. If convenient, they may also bring what stuff they have on hand unmade up. There will be no necessity for their returning to that place. So you may for the present withdraw any party you had at the oar-makers' encampment. All the oar-makers must come up with the oars, &c.

I am, sir, your very humble servant, Ho. GATES.
To Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, September 6, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: There has been a very heavy cannon-ading down the Lake all this morning. It is, undoubtedly, between our fleet and the enemy; so that you may prepare accordingly. I have sent down a boat just now, to know more particularly.

Sir, I think it of the greatest consequence to hold this ground, if possible. If the enemy should get it, it will be a severe blow. I mean to act agreeable to your orders in all respects.

I would be glad you would immediately send down Colonel Wayne's regiment, or the Second Regiment of Pennsylvanians. If you, from the information I can give you, should think proper to reinforce or strengthen this post further, it may be done if the regiment could be here this evening, with some intrenching tools. I think we could finish a work, by morning, that would hurt them as much as the action at Bunker's Hill.

I am, in haste, your most humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

To General Gates.

P. S. I shall fire three four-pounders, within a short space of time from each other, in case the enemy approach before I can send or hear from you.

T. HARTLEY.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, September 6, 1776—8 at night.

SIR: This moment I received your letter of this forenoon by the bearer. Instead of thinking the support of Crown-Point an object upon this emergency, it is my positive orders to you, that in case of the defeat of our fleet, you immediately retire, with what is saved from their overthrow, to Tyonderoga; better fortune may await America, than that its naval force upon this Lake should be destroyed. Should unhappily that be the case, you are to obey my orders.

I am, &c.,

HORATIO GATES.

To Colonel Hartley.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, September 6, 1776— }
8 o'clock at night. }

SIR: The following is an extract of a letter this moment received from Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley, commanding officer at Crown-Point:

"Friday, 2 o'clock.—There has been a very heavy cannonading down the Lake all this morning. It is, undoubtedly, between our fleet and the enemy; so that you may prepare accordingly. I have sent down a boat just now, to know more particularly."

I am exceedingly vexed that it is above a month since I wrote you, repeatedly, for musket cartridge paper, and not one sheet yet arrived. Let me entreat you to send, if not the exact sort we want, as many old books or such substitute as you can procure. The moment I know the result of this firing down the Lake, I will acquaint you of it by express.

I am, dear General, &c.,
To General Schuyler.
HORATIO GATES.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, Sept. 6, 1776—2 o'clock, p. m.

HONOURED SIR: Since my last, at eleven o'clock this morning, we have heard no firing down the Lake. There must have been hot work. Some noise was heard all the morning, but not till about ten o'clock was it known to be cannon, when upwards of one hundred cannon shot were distinctly heard. I have sent a trusty officer and five men down the Lake, who are to return immediately and bring me intelligence. There are about one hundred officers and men of this regiment along with the fleet. Perhaps this is no unlucky circumstance.

I have called in all my out-parties except a few scouts. I have all my men on fatigue—four four-pounders, three of them mounted. I shall give you the signal of firing three guns within a minute or two of each other, should the enemy be approaching.

In my works here I can fight one thousand or fifteen hundred men conveniently. If you send me a good regiment I will dispose of them to the best advantage I am capable. There are only three places on this point which the enemy can make a landing at without the utmost difficulty. Those three avenues may be stopped in a little time.

My men are in good spirits, as many as I have. By to-morrow morning, if I should have no assistance, we would give a couple of thousand men some difficulty to take our little works from us.

If you send a regiment to reinforce me, I believe, sir, you might securely leave the eighteen-pounder here, and send a few more artillermen; or, if you please, I shall send the cannon up immediately.

I have made every disposition that my small judgment would admit of, either to fight the enemy, or to make a retreat, if upon all circumstances, it were necessary. I hope to act in such a manner as will be perfectly agreeable to you.

Please to direct the following articles to be sent me this evening: One field carriage (if possible) for a four-pounder, one hundred cartridges for the same gun, and the like number of bags of cannister shot; if the eighteen-pounder remains here, a carriage for that. Excuse my incorrectness, being in great haste.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,
THOMAS HARTLEY.

To General Gates.

P. S. Entrenching tools are very badly wanted. I shall perhaps send you another express this evening, if I hear any firing from below. Should our fleet have happened to have been successful, the regiment you send may return to-morrow or next day. I would also be glad that the following articles were sent this evening: 4 lint stocks, 4 prining-wires for a four-pounder, 1 coil slow-match, 3 ladles for those guns, and 3 pair drag-ropes.

Yours, &c.,
THOMAS HARTLEY.

As our officers have delivered up all their papers to make cartridges for the Artillery, we shall want paper to write letters unless a few quires be sent us.
T. H.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Lebanon, September 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I presume you are already informed that our army has retreated from Long-Island, and the enemy are in possession of that and Governour's Island, which, with the command of the west end of the Sound, will enable them to land at pleasure either at York-Island, at Westchester, or Horse-Neck. In case they should land on the first, they will divide our army into two parts, but should they elect either of the latter places, and their ships should at the same time run up the North River, they will cut off our army from the country and all supplies, and will lay the country, especially the west part of this State, from whence all our Militia are drawn off to join the army, wholly at their mercy. Should this be the case, it will be of great importance that a sufficient force should be collected at or near Westchester, to protect the country from incursions, and, as opportunity may offer, make a diversion in favour of the main army. To effect this purpose as far as is in our power, I have ordered two regiments of Light-Horse, and the regiments of Militia which remain in this State, to march with the utmost expedition to Westchester, but as they alone will be inadequate to the purpose intended, I have taken the liberty to propose to the State of Rhode-Island to join their Militia with ours, and now beg leave to propose to you to send such part of your Militia as you think proper to join them.

The critical situation of the army, and the important consequences that will ensue from the events of this campaign, make it necessary to exert ourselves to the utmost, to procure a favourable issue. I make not the least doubt of your ready concurrence in every proper and necessary measure, and am,

Gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. General Assembly of the State of Massachusetts-Bay.

STATE OF CONNECTICUT.

BY THE CAPTAIN-GENERAL.

To SAMUEL ABBOT, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel of the Twentieth Regiment of Militia, in this State, Greeting:

Whereas it appears our enemies are now making their most vigorous exertions to subjugate and destroy these American States; and by their movements it looks highly probable, they are endeavouring to throw over a force upon the main, to cut off our communication with New-York, both by land and water, which makes it necessary to throw in all the succours in our power, in this critical and perhaps decisive moment:

I do hereby, therefore, by the advice of my Council of Safety, order and direct you forthwith, without delay, to call out your regiment, and see them well equipped, both officers and men, and march towards New-York, and rendezvous at or near Westchester, and there wait till orders, in order to be ready to coöperate with the Continental Army in the best manner to defeat the purposes of our enemies.

Given under my hand at Lebanon, this sixth day of September, A. D. 1776.
JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Samuel Abbott, in Norwich.

N. B. Those troops who are ordered to march out of this State will be paid twenty shillings each, before or on their march, in part of pay or wages, and the chief commanding officer in each regiment, on application to him, may excuse such of his regiment from marching as on account of sickness, or other peculiar circumstances, he shall judge reasonable.
J. T.

JOHN SLOSS HOBART TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Fairfield, September 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: This will be handed to you by Mr. Uriah Mitchell, of Queen's County, who was employed by Mr. Townsend and myself as an express, but was prevented from crossing the Sound till we got to Southhold. He has despatches which will inform you of our proceedings till Saturday noon; for what has happened since that time I must refer you to him, as he is perfectly acquainted with all the particulars.

Mr. Mitchell had been driven from home by the Tories for having been very active in the American cause, on which account I take the liberty to recommend him to Convention for some employment that will afford a maintenance for the present.

I shall sail upon an expedition to the Island to-night. As soon as it is over, I shall use all possible despatch to join Convention.

In the mean time, have the honour to be your obedient servant,

JOHN SLOSS HOBART.

To Abraham Yates, Esq., President of the New-York Convention.

DAVID GELSTON TO THE COMMITTEE FOR NEW-LONDON, CONNECTICUT.

Saybrook, September 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By accounts this moment received from Long-Island, there are no Ministerial troops to the eastward of Jamaica. Colonel Livingston is now gone off for Long-Island with his men; he had no time to write you. I write by his request. He and I submit to your consideration, that if it be possible to send over a number of troops, as many as you can, if only one hundred men, whether it would not be of great service? If ten thousand could be sent as was talked of (when with Mr. Shaw yesterday) to Huntington, I presume, gentlemen, you see the infinite service it would be to the grand struggle we are engaged in. Would not naval force be of great use? If it should be determined upon to send only a small number of troops, Colonel Livingston begs they may join him at Canoe Place. Does not all possible despatch appear necessary?

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID GELSTON.

To the Committee, New-London.

GOVERNOUR COOKE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Providence, September 6, 1776.

SIR: The necessity which caused the unexpected evacuation of Long-Island, hath alarmed the General Assembly of this State, as it seems that communications cannot be kept open with an Island where the enemy's ships can approach. This hath filled us with apprehensions for the Town of Newport and the Island of Rhode-Island, which are of so great importance to this and the other United States. Upon which the Assembly hath thought proper to appoint John Collins, Joshua Babcock, and Joseph Stanton, Esquires, a committee to wait upon your Excellency, to acquaint you with the state of this Government, and to confer with you upon the best measures to be taken for its defence, and with respect to the Island of Rhode-Island. I beg the favour of your Excellency to treat them with the most entire confidence, and have no doubt but that the same disposition which hath always induced you to manifest your regard to this State, will induce you to give us your best advice and assistance.

Upon receiving information of the landing of the enemy upon Long-Island, and a letter from Governour Trumbull, acquainting us with your request that a body of men might be thrown upon the east end of that Island, this State ordered the whole brigade, with the two galleys, and a sufficient quantity of provisions and ammunition, to proceed to that Island, and ordered them to be replaced by the Militia of the State.

We exerted ourselves to get them in readiness, and some of them were under orders to proceed, when we received the most uncertain and aggravated accounts of the evacuation of Long-Island, which occasioned us to stop the men until we could receive intelligence to be depended upon; which we did not gain until the last evening. I beg leave to observe to your Excellency the advantages that may accrue to the common cause from the several States having early and authentick intelligence of all matters of importance that shall happen, and to request your Excellency to favour us with accounts of everything material.

I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, sir, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

NICHOLAS COOKE.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., General and Commander-in-Chief of the Armies of the United States of America, New-York.

SELECTMEN OF CHARLESTOWN TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Charlestown, [Number Four,] September 6, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favour came to hand yesterday, informing us of General Gates's complaint against the conduct of a person acting as a physician in this town, inoculating soldiers for the small pox when on their march to the army. Had the General's complaint been founded upon the whole truth of facts, it would most certainly have been highly justifiable by all good men, and the doctor punished, as every enemy to his country deserves. No doubt the General was by somebody informed of such proceedings: probably an enemy to the doctor, or to the scheme of inoculating for the small pox—the most glorious invention ever yet found out for the preserving the lives of mankind against the power of that sovereign disorder in its natural course, which has been for many years approved of by the most skillful physicians in most of the civilized States on earth, and is now recommended by the Continental Congress, and by the several Assemblies of New-York, Connecticut, Rhode-Island, and the Massachusetts-Bay.

We received General Gates's letter of the 10th of August, upon the subject of complaint, which hath been answered by the Committee of Safety, a copy of which you have herewith enclosed.

We conceive it rather hard that we should bear the whole weight of General Gates's resentment, since other towns have been guilty of the like offence. There have been many of the soldiers inoculated at Keene and Claremont, and we do not at present see why it is not as likely that the small pox should be carried to the army from either of those places, as from here. We have no reason to believe that any of the soldiers have carried it from hence to the army, but we can with great truth assert that the small pox has been, by the soldiery, brought and left here—one man who came from Ticonderoga, another belonging to Colonel Wigglesworth's regiment, and another belonging to Colonel Whitcomb's regiment. And we have reason to suspect that several of the inhabitants have taken it from the soldiers of the two Continental regiments, on their route through this town, from Boston to Ticonderoga, who were inoculated at Boston.

We are desirous of quieting the minds of our brethren in the army, in case we can be assured that the small pox shall not be brought here again by the soldiers, who are continually marching to and from the army. Upon these several circumstances we suppose it cannot be kept out of the town, and we must conceive it to be a breach of privilege to be denied of the same liberty (of inoculating our families) that other towns in this Colony enjoy, which we suppose at present to be highly expedient for their safety, which we can do, and not expose any soldiers marching to and from the army, or anybody else, as we had proposed to remove the pest-house from where it now is to about two miles distance from the town and from the road; and put the management of it under such proper regulations as that no person hereafter shall be exposed to take it in the natural way. We had proposed to lay the doctor, the nurses, attendants, and each person inoculated, under bonds, not to spread it through their means, so that all persons may be assured of safety in that regard. Notwithstanding, if it be your will and pleasure that a final stop be put to it in this town, we will do our endeavour to do it, but it's impossible at present to cleanse the town of it. The inoculation is stopped at present; therefore beg to know your sentiments of the matter. Pray, gentlemen, consider that we are more exposed than all the people of the Colony besides.

Gentlemen, we are your humble servants.

SAMUEL HUNT,

WM. HAYWOOD,

ENOS STEVENS.

Selectmen of Charlestown.

To the Hon. Committee of Safety.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM GUILFORD, SOUTH CAROLINA, DATED SEPTEMBER 7, 1776.

Since my last, our publick affairs are in statu quo, except our Indian affairs. General Rutherford, from the District of Salisbury, hath gone over the mountain with a considerable army, to the middle towns, where the Southern Army and ours are to join the 9th of this instant, by whom we hope to have a good account of the Indians. The Virginia troops are forming at Long-Island, and expect to be ready to visit the upper towns by the middle of this month. The Southern army hath destroyed several of the lower towns, got a great deal of old corn, and destroyed the new. The Indians seem sick of their undertaking, and threaten to kill all the whites in the nation. The Tories who fled to them, and perhaps incited them to take up the hatchet, are flying from them, and surrendering to the friends of liberty, among whom is the famous Robinson.

Williamsburg, Va., September 7, 1776.

A vessel is safe arrived at Hampton with one thousand bushels of salt, and a small quantity of rum and sugar; the master of which gives us reason to expect a number of others in a few weeks, with salt and other useful articles. The West-India Islands are in a starving condition for want of the American supplies.

COUNCIL OF VIRGINIA TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

In Council, Williamsburg, July 20, 1776.

SIR: We had the honour to receive your letter of the 8th instant, enclosing the Declaration of Independence and the resolve of Congress respecting the augmentation of the Rifle corps at New-York. We shall take care to have the Declaration immediately published so as that the people may be universally informed of it, who, we have the pleasure to inform you, have been impatiently expecting it, and will receive it with joy.

We are perfectly satisfied of the utility of riflemen, and wish it was in our power to assist in raising the number in our country, voted by Congress for the support of New-York; but the Convention has adjourned, and we are vested with no powers which can, in any manner, enforce or carry into execution that vote. If commissions could be sent to proper persons, they might raise companies which would have a right to march to New-York, but we could not oblige them to do so.

It is with pleasure, sir, we observe that you say, in consequence of the Declaration you are fully convinced that our affairs may take a more favourable turn, and we firmly rely on the protection and continuance of the powerful interposition of that Being whose power no creature is able to resist.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant;

JOHN PAGE, President.

To the President of Congress.

CAPTAIN NICHOLSON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

September 7, 1776.

SIR: By the enclosed requisition, you'll find I have taken upon me to put part of the Militia on duty. Be pleased to take the matter under consideration, and give such orders to the Generals or Colonels as you shall think proper. They are both out of town, which obliges me to act. For further particulars, must refer you to my brother.

I am yours,

B. NICHOLSON.

A COPY OF ORDERS.

Baltimore town, September 6, 1776.

SIR: I must request your company to go on guard until I can hear from the Council of Safety, which, I judge, will be to-morrow or next day at furthest. The necessity of the case will, I hope, induce you to comply (although my requisition does not flow from strict authority) when I inform you that the German companies have marching orders, and this day at twelve o'clock desire relief; and Captain Nathaniel Smith, whom I have applied to for that purpose, says 'tis out of his power.

B. NICHOLSON.

To the Commanding Officer of the Independent Company.

DOCTOR WEISENTHALL TO MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

Baltimore town, September 7, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Dr. Andrew Porter, having been a candidate for a Surgeon's place on the Surgeon's list for FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

some time, and is now willing to go as such in a battalion going to the flying camp. His abilities for that station are such that can recommend him.

Being with due respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

C. WEISENTHALL.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Convention, Annapolis.

WILLIAM ELLERY TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Philadelphia, September 7, 1776.

SIR: As Mr. Hopkins expects that the post will get to Providence before him, he hath left with me the second and third of exchange drawn by Andrew Caldwell, Treasurer, upon Philip Moore, A. Mercer, J. Donaldson, and W. Erskin, Esquires, owners of the privateers Congress and Chance, New-England, in favour of you and others, a committee for building the two frigates at Providence, for thirty-seven thousand five hundred Continental dollars, value received of Stephen Hopkins, Esquire; and hath requested me to transmit to you one of the bills by the post, and to keep the other. Agreeably to his request, I now enclose you the second of exchange—the first bill he hath with him—and wish it may go safe.

Mr. Hopkins tells me that he doth not propose to return to Congress until Spring, if ever. It is, therefore, necessary that an additional Delegate should be immediately appointed; for, otherwise, the State of Rhode-Island may be unrepresented, which might be attended with pernicious consequences to us. I may fall sick, and not be able to attend Congress when some matter may be brought upon the carpet which will immediately relate to our State; not to mention that if two Delegates were here, they might have an opportunity to relax, now and then, from that constant attention which, if one Delegate only should be continued here, he would be obliged to give, unless he should leave the State unrepresented in Congress, which I am determined not to do, let what will be the consequence; and a constant attendance on Congress for nine months, without any relaxation, is too much even for a robust constitution. Besides, it is necessary that motions should be made and supported; in which case, the advantage of having two on the same side is manifest. In causes of no great importance it is common to engage two lawyers; and the vulgar observation, that "two heads are better than one," is just. Can, then, the State of Rhode-Island hesitate about immediately appointing an additional Delegate? I am sure it cannot.

I should be exceedingly glad that Governour Hopkins might return; for he is well acquainted with the mode of conducting business, and is well esteemed in Congress; and I have reason to think, from what hath passed, that we should act in concert and harmony. But if he should conclude not to return, it would be best that two should be immediately appointed; for matters of great consequence will be on the carpet. In the multitude of council is safety; and, in that case, the Delegates might alternately visit home, brace up their relaxed minds and bodies by a journey and enjoying their native air, and thereby be better able to discharge the duties of their office. There is nothing against our State appointing three Delegates but the expense; and if the amount of the allowance to the two Delegates, and their expenses for one year, be summed up, and compared with what would be the amount of the expense, to the State, of these Delegates, at five dollars per day, I believe the difference will be found to be but trifling. But if it should be something considerable, I am sure the benefits resulting to the State therefrom would compensate for any such additional expense. If a Confederacy should hereafter take place, a Council of State would doubtless be appointed, in which case, our State would have only one Delegate to support constantly. The other two, if three should be appointed, would be present only a small part of the year, when the Congress should sit.

Mr. Hopkins will acquaint you with the news, and the state of our armies, &c., so that I hope I shall be excused in not saying anything on those subjects. The same reason will excuse my not writing to the Assembly by this post. I wrote a letter to send by the last post, but, unluckily, the post had set out before my letter reached the office.

Congress have ordered one of our battalions to New-York, and its place to be supplied with a battalion of Militia from Massachusetts. It was moved, at first, that both the battalions should be ordered thither. I opposed the motion to the best of my abilities, and think we have come off pretty well. I expect that if our affairs at New-York should take an ill turn, that the other battalion will be ordered from our State; for it is the sentiment of Congress that the Continental battalion should be drawn together, for that greater reliance is to be placed in them than in a Militia unaccustomed to discipline and the hardships of a camp; and, indeed, the liberties of this country, in my opinion, cannot be established but by a large standing army.

Heartily wishing success to our cause, and to you, sir, and your family, health and prosperity, I continue to be, with great respect, yours,
W. ELLERY.
To Governour Cooke.

CERTIFICATE IN FAVOUR OF JOHN RYON.

SIR: I entered on board his Majesty's ship Roebuck at London, August 14, 1775; and being stationed on this coast, on the 27th March last I was ordered on board of a pilot boat under the command of Lieutenant Ball. The 28th of the same instant was taken prisoner at Lewistown; from which place I was sent to Dover, where I remained till the 12th of May; from which place I was sent to New-Castle, where Mr. Ball and myself were to go on board the Roebuck; but, to our great disappointment, the Roebuck sailed for Virginia. By orders from the Committee of Safety, on the 19th of May I was confined to this gaol, where, most of the time, I have been close-locked in one room, not being allowed any friend to speak to me.

I am, sir, your most humble and obedient servant,

JOHN RYON.

Philadelphia Gaol, September 7, 1776.

These are to certify that the above John Ryon, seaman of his Majesty's ship the Roebuck, is prisoner in this gaol since the 19th of May last, in close confinement; and from all the inquiry I have made, find that he behaved himself firm and steadfast to his duty, by refusing every temptation and offer which have been made to him by the Rebels; do therefore recommend him to his Captain, and all officers in his Majesty's service, as a well-behaved young man.

DANL. McDONALD, Brigadier-General.

ADDRESS TO THE PUBLICK.

Freedom of speech and writing, on matters of publick concern, having, in every free country, been considered the best bulwark to preserve the spirit of liberty from degenerating into supineness and slavery, it gave me great pleasure to observe that the Convention of Pennsylvania, in their declaration of the rights of the inhabitants, have made it an object of their deliberation, viz: "That the people have a right to freedom of speech, and of writing and publishing their sentiments; therefore, the freedom of the press ought not to be restrained."

On this principle I presume to offer a general hint to the consideration of the publick, and hope I do not therein exceed the line of prudence, or injure the personal character of any one.

Those who indulge the idea that the conduct of men in publick stations is exempt from impartial scrutiny, entertain notions incompatible with the good of society; for it is not merely the men, but the measures, which form the good or ill of society. It is the right of examination, and to remedy the defects, that constitute the safety of the people; and when that right is infringed, the Constitution falls a sacrifice to tyranny and usurpation. To appoint men of wisdom and virtue to places of publick notoriety is the characteristic of a judicious nation. Justice and temperance should be the standard for the appointment, and the measures will ever be gloriously supported; for the end cannot be crowned with a happy success where the means to obtain it are founded in publick or private wrongs.

The statesman, the officer, Quartermaster, Commissary, and all those in subordination to them, should be honest, disinterested, and free; otherways, the people, from whom they derive all their power, and are accountable to, will feel the effects of their intemperate measures: instead of distributive justice, we shall be subdued by passion and resentment; and the property of the subject, instead of being protected, will be robbed by avaricious and wicked men.

We are now entering on a scene of publick calamity, to which our feelings and possessions have before been rather strangers; and great care ought to be taken to admit none to govern us, either in a civil or military capacity, but those whose ways are marked out by justice and peace.

The Americans, in general, are considered as a noble and generous people; and their contest with Great Britain founded on the rights of mankind, and in the historick page, will fill posterity with amazement and veneration.

It will be well to examine into the propriety of the hint I have here offered, and if any advantages may be reaped from it, we shall show our wisdom and our spirit of liberty by determining to pursue them.

D—.

Philadelphia, September 7, 1776.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Amboy, 8 o'clock, A. M., September 7, 1776.

SIR: I have been confined two days by a fever, which has not yet left me. It is a great mortification that I have it not in my power to attend at Head-Quarters. It would, however, have been impossible for any officer from this place to be in time at New-York. By some neglect of the messenger, your letter was not delivered till seven this morning.

General Roberdeau waits on your Excellency, to know the result of your determinations, and to inform you of the state of the troops in the New-Jerseys.

My ideas of the operations for this campaign are to prevent the enemy from executing their plan of a junction between the armies of Howe and Burgoyne, on which the expectations of the King and Ministry are fixed. We should keep New-York if possible, as the acquiring of that will give eclat to the arms of Great Britain, afford the soldiers good quarters, and furnish a safe harbour for the fleet. If it even could be retained a month or two, keeping the field so long in this climate may be supposed to affect the health of European troops very much. On the other hand, a free and safe communication with the Counties from whence supplies of men and provisions can come to your army, is a consideration of superiour moment to any other. How far both those objects may be within the compass of your Excellency's force I cannot pretend to judge, having a very inadequate knowledge of the particulars necessary to found an opinion upon.

I have not seen Colonel Rawlings, but gave general orders at all the posts along the Jersey shore that the troops from Maryland should proceed immediately to New-York. I hope to be able very soon to effect some enterprise on Staten-Island, when we have a sufficient number of men for the Flying-Camp to dispose along the different posts; but the Militia are not the men for such a purpose. Four Colonels were with me some nights ago to inform that their men would fight the enemy on this side, but would not go over to Staten-Island.

I have the honour to be, sir, your Excellency's most obedient servant,

HUGH MERCER.

To His Excellency General Washington, Commander-in-Chief.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 13th September.]

New-York, September 7, 1776.

SIR: This will be delivered you by Captain Martindale and Lieutenant Turner, who were taken last Fall in the armed brig Washington, and who, with Mr. Childs, the 2d Lieutenant, have lately effected their escape from Halifax.

Captain Martindale and those two officers have applied to me for pay from the 1st of January to this time; but not conceiving myself authorized to grant it, however reasonable it may be, as they were only engaged till the last of December, at their instance I have mentioned the matter to Congress, and submit their case to their consideration.

I have the honour to be with profound respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL, COMMISSARY-GENERAL, TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 11th September. Referred to Colonel Lee, Mr. Hooper, and Mr. Sherman.]

New-York, September 7, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed I send you copies of three letters from me—one to General Schuyler, one to Mr. Elisha Avery, (a person of as much probity as any on earth, whom I sent to Tyconderoga in my department,) and one to Mr. Walter Livingston, Deputy Commissary-General—by which you find the situation of the affairs of my department in that quarter, and my sentiments thereon. I beg the same may be laid before Congress, and that they will consider this as my request to be dismissed from having any further charge of commissary matter in that district. I cannot undertake to act where I not only have not the countenance of the Commander-in-Chief there, but every step is taken by him to counteract all my regulations. When Mr. Avery went from hence, he expected to go into Canada with General Gates. At Albany General Schuyler told Mr. Avery in express terms he would furnish money to no person in the Commissary Department there but Mr. Livingston; however, General Gates persuaded Mr. Avery to go on. When he came to Tyconderoga he found enough to do to put matters on any tolerable footing. Mr. Livingston had not then, nor has he since, ever been beyond Albany, but left all to others, and all was in confusion. Soon after his arrival at Tyconderoga, General Schuyler sent Mr. Avery a temporary authority to act, when he knew he had full authority from me, which he had seen at Albany, and tacked to his authority a clause restraining him from purchasing anything whatever, however much the army might suffer for want of it. This, Mr. Avery noticed to me. I advised with General Washington on the subject, and sent an order to Mr. Avery to buy anything he could procure that the army wanted, any order from General Schuyler notwithstanding. General Washington had never restrained me or mine, and advised the measure. After this I directed Mr. Livingston to furnish provisions, and forward to Mr. Avery on his application or my direction, and to regulate the several stages and posts south of Lake George, and left Tyconderoga and Skenesborough to Mr. Avery's direction and regulation. On General Schuyler's return from German Flats, he sent an order to Mr. Avery to make weekly returns of provisions to Mr. Livingston. Mr. Avery shew the order to General Gates, and wrote General Schuyler that he did not consider himself subordinate to Mr. Livingston, and sent the returns demanded to General Schuyler instead of sending them to Mr. Livingston. On this, General Schuyler wrote me he should send for Mr. Avery down under arrest, but would first give me notice, on which I wrote the enclosed to him, Mr. Avery, and Mr. Livingston. I never meant to have the returns made by Mr. Avery to Mr. Livingston; I intended in that department, as in this, to have the issuing store account a check on the Magazine, and vice versa, which I have ever thought necessary and kept up but in this instance.

My authority from Congress of displacing, &c., any Deputy Commissary-General, I can't exercise, as I can't put myself, or ask any other person to take the office, where we can't have the countenance or support of the Commander-in-Chief. On the whole, where I can't have the appointment and direction of my own people, who I am in some degree accountable for, I do not choose to act, and therefore beg in this case to be dismissed from any further care or concern, and wish I may have such dismissal as soon as possible, as I can't be easy to think myself in any measure accountable where I can be of no real service.

I am with great esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

Jos. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

New-York, September 5, 1776.

SIR: I have received letters from General Schuyler, Mr. Avery, and yourself, by which I find Mr. Avery and Mr. Yancey can neither of them be of any further service at Tyconderoga. I must say your treatment to Mr. Avery in some of your letters is such as I should not expect you to give him on my account or his own; such treatment I will not have him subject to as I find he must be if he stays there, both from your manner and General Schuyler's supporting you in it. I have, therefore, directed them both to come off, and I give you this notice of it that you may immediately take particular and effectual care that the service does not suffer. They will deliver everything to such person or persons as you send to receive them, and I think it necessary that you go yourself immediately forward to Tyconderoga and the other posts, and see yourself that all matters are put on a proper footing at each place.

I am, sir, your humble servant, Jos. TRUMBULL.
To Walter Livingston, Esq.

New-York, September 5, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I received your favours—three of them by Mr. Lucas yesterday, and one from General Schuyler. By his, I find he is determined to get rid of you by his own sovereign authority. I therefore think it best for you to come off at once and leave Ticonderoga. I must desire Mr. Yancey to stay till Mr. Livingston can send somebody to take his place, which shall be soon. Let General Gates know this order, and the ground of it. Tell him I will not risk my character in the office while General Schuyler commands that army, but will let Congress know my refusal immediately.

I am, dear sir, your most humble servant,
Jos. TRUMBULL.

To Mr. Elisha Avery.

New-York, September 5, 1776.

SIR: I received your letter respecting Mr. Avery. I have directed him to withdraw from Tyconderoga immediately. I find he nor any other person can have anything to do in the Commissary Department in the northern district, without a continual clashing with Mr. Livingston, and that he is supported by the Commander-in-Chief; therefore all must give way to him. Mr. Yancey will also withdraw.

This I have noticed to Mr. Livingston, that he may take care accordingly. I never intended Mr. Avery should be subordinate to Mr. Livingston.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,
Jos. TRUMBULL.

To Major-General Schuyler.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM DOBBS'S FERRY, TWENTY-SIX MILES FROM NEW-YORK, DATED SEPTEMBER 7, 1776.

My last gave some brief account of matters on Long-Island. Since that letter several things have taken place worth relating. The principal is the evacuation of Long-Island. This movement occasioned at first some murmurings among the rash and inconsiderate; but all men of sense and reason who exercised their reflecting faculties, saw the necessity and evident propriety of it. The enemy, whose force upon the Island, from the best intelligence, nearly doubled ours, had advanced within two musket-shot of our lines, flushed perhaps with the advantage of the ground, and rapid progress they had made towards us. The continued rains, past fatigues, present hardships, from being exposed to the inclement season without any covering, and future alarms, were but lesser reasons for this measure. The impossibility of securing a proper retreat in case our lines should be carried by fixed bayonets, or we should be drove out by bombardment, was the grand operative reason, and such a one as all military men would deem sufficient, without any other, for the manœuvre. Our Commander-in-Chief, and the whole flower of our army, in case of a defeat, must have been killed or taken, as no reinforcement could have afforded them any assistance, by reason of the shipping. To transport across a wide ferry fifteen thousand troops, with all the baggage, military stores, and even cannon, from the forts in the enemy's mouths (as it were) in a short Summer's night, without even those who were retreating knowing anything of the matter till just embarked, required the conduct, the vigilance, the generalship of a Washington: and if Fame does not clarify his praises for it, she is not impartial. By eight o'clock on the Friday morning after the date of my last, everything was safe landed in the city—the General Officers in the last boat; and so unsuspecting were the enemy of the movements, that after the army was all safe landed many went over and plundered divers things from the Island before they peeped over our lines.

Governour's Island, which is partly commanded by Long-Island, was occupied by two regiments of our troops; these had no orders to embark for the city till ten o'clock. The British troops after cannonading some time, sent by a flag of truce Colonel (formerly Major) Small, to demand this Island, and every creature and thing upon it, telling our officers that they would all be cut in pieces with their troops if they did not directly surrender, for that General Howe would take the Island immediately. He begged, therefore, "for God's sake, and to prevent the effusion of blood, that they would instantly comply with" his modest request. Major Coburn, who happened to be present, answered this warm and pathetick address with a most stoical coolness and indifference, telling the Colonel that General Howe was welcome to the Island whenever he could take it, but that General Washington was the only person to treat with about surrendering posts.

A young officer then told the Colonel that he had violated an inviolable custom amongst civilized warriors, by firing upon them when the flag of truce lay off. This was really a fact, for General Sullivan had just come up with a flag. The Colonel protested his entire ignorance of the matter, and begged pardon, alleging upon his honour that he knew nothing of the flag. Upon being asked how many men they had lost upon Long-Island, he replied, "We are above a thousand the worse for that engagement." He spoke within bounds, for eighteen hundred were killed and disabled, as we are credibly assured by persons from the Island. Notwithstanding the Colonel's great concern for the vast effusion of blood, this Island was evacuated with the loss of one man's arm by a cannon-shot from the ships, and the baggage and artillery were brought off also.

P. S. I had forgot to inform you that in a furious cannonade up the East River, in consequence of a man-of-war's presuming to lie there, the gallant and experienced Major Crane, of the Artillery, lost a part of his foot, but is likely to do well. We have shattered the ship prodigiously, and are opening another battery against her.

THOMAS RANDALL TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

September 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed is a letter from the Lieutenant of your schooner General Putnam, who informs you that the Captain went away without letting him know of his going, and of course it must be a neglect of his duty; you also have a petition from the ship's company, which complaint I fear is too true. You'll be pleased to take such steps as you think fit; for my part, I think it would be best to appoint a new commander for her. The Lieutenant, I believe, would be more industrious in the service. I also think it would not be amiss to order the people to be paid about one half of their wages to supply them with clothes and stores. I should do myself the pleasure of waiting on Congress, but cannot, owing to my bad situation; being so near the enemy, and at a loss where to find a place of safety for my family. Anything you command me to do here I shall readily comply with.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

THOMAS RANDALL.

To the Hon. President and gentlemen of the Congress of the State of New-York.

On board the Putnam, Cranberry Inlet, September 4, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry to inform you that there is a great disturbance in the vessel, which made its appearance during my absence; and Captain Cregier went away without informing me of it. They, I understand, had told him they were determined not to sail under his command, and requested that they might be permitted to petition the Congress for a discharge from the vessel on account of his bad conduct, which he did not grant; on my requesting to weigh the anchor in order to go out, they one and all acquainted me it was their determined resolution never to act in the schooner while he had the command of her, upon which I have thought fit to grant them the liberty to petition, and send it by the bearer of this letter; as I imagine that the Captain will not inform you of these disturbances, have thought to acquaint you in this manner, and as he is not expected back under eight or ten days, should be glad you would write me as soon as possible, and let me know in what manner you think it is most prudent for me to act.

Your compliance will much oblige your humble servant,
THOMAS QUIGLEY.

To Thomas Randall, Esq., one of the Marine Committee, Elizabethtown.

EXAMINATION OF EMANUEL GABRIEL AND RICHARD KING.

Examination of NICHOLAS EMANUEL GABRIEL, Adjutant in Colonel SWARTWOUT's Regiment, and Mr. RICHARD KING of the same Regiment, taken by HENRY GODWIN, Captain of the Main Guard at KING's BRIDGE, September 7th, 1776, against one GILBERT TIPPIT, confined under Guard, in the main Guard-House by order of Major-General HEATH.

Richard King saith: That on September 5th, 1776, Gilbert Tippit said in publick company, amongst soldiers and others, that if we were united that the Regulars would overcome us; and that at several times he hath found fault with the measures, and spake words tending to a discouragement of the measures now pursued by the United States of America; and that he (Tippit) was no ways the worse for liquor when he spake these words, but looked upon him to be a sober man.

Adjutant Gabriel saith: That on the 5th of September, Anno Domini 1776, that he heard Gilbert Tippit discoursing among several soldiers and other persons, and endeavoured to discourage them, and that he (Gabriel) heard him (Tippit) say, that if all the men in the United Colonies were united, that the Regulars would overcome us yet; and that he (Gabriel) heard him also speak disrespectfully of the Commanding Officers in the service of the United American States.

CASE OF JOHN GROUT, OF CUMBERLAND COUNTY, NEW-YORK.

September 7, 1776.

SIR: As no man is so likely to have a clear remembrance of what passes at any time, as he who is principally concerned in the business, and because it is probable your memory may need refreshing, I have within put to writing the most material facts relating to my trial at Chester, last Fall; and as to my last trial there, I think you told me you were not present all the time; I shall therefore content myself with the depositions of some who attended the whole time.

You will please to commit to writing what you remember respecting my first trial.

Your friend and servant,

JOHN GROUT.

To Major Lovejoy.

My remembrance of the trial at Chester is as follows, viz:

When the accusation was read, I was asked whether I was guilty or not, and instead of answering the question, I asked who was to try me, and was answered, that it was the Committee of Chester, namely: Thomas Chandler, Caleb Church, George Earl, Jabez Sergeant, Abraham Sawyer, Moses Guild, and David Hutchinson. I then asked whether, if I would make such objections against any of those persons, and should show such matters against them, as would be sufficient to remove them from trying me as jurors in the common law courts, whether in such case the Committee would remove such persons, and not allow them to pass on my trial? I was answered by one and all the Committee, that no individual of the Committee should sit to try me against whom I should make such just objections. I then objected against Thomas Chandler, Abraham Sawyer, and Caleb Church, and assigned the following reasons, viz: That some time before, I had had information that said Chandler and some others had an intention to murder me, and that in consequence of that information, I had applied to Rev. Mr. Whiting to use his endeavours to prevent it. That he had applied to Chandler's father to hinder his son's designs; that notwithstanding which, said Chandler had endeavoured to put his designs in execution by attempting to draw me naked out of bed into the open air when sick of a fever, and afterwards by forcing me when sick, as aforesaid, through the open air about half a mile, and there attempting to choke me for denying some things he charged me with; and that the said Caleb Church and Abraham Sawyer at both those times were present with Chandler, and did not disapprove of the violence. On which Chandler acknowledged the abuses aforesaid, and the Committee who were not objected to, unanimously resolved that Chandler should go off and not sit on my trial: and as he before was chairman, the Committee chose in his room another chairman, namely Jabez Sergeant. The question being likewise put, whether the objections against Sawyer and Church were sufficient to remove them from sitting on the trial, on which question the Committee was divided—half being on the yea side, and half on the nay side. After which Mr. Chandler took his seat, declaring that he had a right to sit as chairman of the Committee, and commanded the other members to sit with him at their peril; on which Church, Sawyer, Earl, and Sergeant, sat down with him. But Guild and Hutchinson protested against the procedures and withdrew; and I refused to make any defence, and remained entirely inactive. Some witnesses were sworn and examined, and judgment given that I was an enemy to my country, &c.

To the Gentlemen Committee of Safety for the County of CUMBERLAND.

John Grout humbly sheweth:

That he lately was accused by Oliver Lovell, Esq., of speaking disrespectfully of Congresses and Committees.

That in consequence of it he was brought before the Committee of Chester, and a quarrel arose among the Committee, in respect of the manner in which your Petitioner should be tried; the consequence of which trial was this, viz: a part of the Committee withdrew and would not sit to try your Petitioner with the rest; and a part of the remainder by the whole Committee was ordered to withdraw and not sit to try your Petitioner, for reasons which your Petitioner then offered. Nevertheless, the same remainder did sit to try your Petitioner; but your Petitioner finding the said Committee in a quarrel, made no defence, and they adjudged your Petitioner to be an enemy to his country, &c., from which judgment he appealed to the Committee of Weathersfield.

But as your Petitioner finds that persons accused of such crimes ought, agreeable to the advice of the Provincial Congress, to be tried by the County Committee, your Petitioner has not prosecuted his said appeal; and prays directions in the premises of this Committee.

JOHN GROUT.

[Endorsed—29th November, 1775. This Petition was laid before the Committee, who refused to sustain it or act upon it, and ordered me to withdraw it.]

In Committee of Safety, Cumberland County, }
July 24, 1776. }

Voted, To supersede the order passed yesterday, recommending to the Sub-Committee of Chester to call Mr. John Grout to an account, touching a complaint exhibited by John Chandler, Esq.

Also, Resolved, That the order for seizing said Grout's papers be null and void, and that no seizure of said papers be made.

Resolved, That Mr. Grout answer to the complaint of John Chandler, Esq., next sitting of Committee, viz: first Tuesday of November next; and that complainant serve Mr. Grout with a bill of particulars within fifteen days after notice of this order.

A true copy from the minutes:

ELKANAH DAY, Clerk.

In Committee of Safety, Cumberland County, }
July 26, 1776. }

In consequence of divers complaints of John Grout, it is recommended, that if the said Grout shall be accused between this time and the next sitting of this Committee, that he be not brought before, or tried by, the Committee of Rockingham or Chester, or either of them, but before the Committee of some other town.

A true copy from the minutes:

ELKANAH DAY, Clerk.

Voted, That this people do behave themselves decently, and that there be no rout, riots, or unlawful assembly, at this critical day; and that every person in this County defend the property of every person, and the prisoners in particular, and more especially the person and property of Samuel Gale, Esquire, William Willard, Esquire, Richard Hill, and their wives and families. All which we do highly recommend; persons that have not been called to an account for the transaction of the late murder excepted.

A true copy from the votes of said Committee.

Test:

REUBEN JONES, Clerk.

CUMBERLAND COUNTY.

Be it remembered, that on the 28th day of August, A. D. 1776, personally came before me, Elkanah Day, Clerk of the Committee of Safety for said County, Daniel Ranney, of lawful age, and, being duly sworn, depose and saith: that on the 22d of this instant, August, Mr. John Grout was brought before the Sub-Committee of Chester, being accused by Reuben Jones; that the accusation was read to Mr. Grout, and he was asked whether he was guilty or not guilty, to which he made no answer; and the question being more than once repeated, Mr. Grout at length spake, and said that he durst not make any answer, for, having been once before brought before the Chairman of the said Committee upon an accusation, and asked whether he was guilty or not guilty of the matters charged, he answered that he was not guilty, and that his thus answering was considered as a crime by the said Chairman, who immediately took the said Grout by the throat, and used him roughly for it. This Mr. Grout having said, neither the Chairman nor any of the Committee denied it, but told Mr. Grout that he should not be used in that manner any more. Mr. Grout then told the Committee that he had complained to the County Committee of the aforesaid ill usage, and likewise of the Chairman's having attempted to murder him, by attempting to draw him into the open air when sick of a fever. This the Chairman acknowledged. Mr. Grout then produced a copy of a resolve of the County Committee, made at their last meeting at Westminster, whereby they forbid the Committee of Chester arresting or trying Mr. Grout for any matter whatever, and ordering, that if Mr. Grout should after be accused, that he be carried before the Sub-Committee of some other township for that purpose. Mr. Grout then urged, with great earnestness, that they carry him before some other Sub-Committee; and I insisted that he could never submit to be tried by a Committee whose Chairman had attempted to choke him, for no other cause than because he had ventured to plead not guilty when he was absolutely innocent, and who had maliciously attempted to murder him as aforesaid. The Committee refused to carry said Grout before some other Sub-Committee, agreeable to the said resolve of the County Committee; and said Grout refused to submit to trial before them, alleging he was afraid of savage violence if he should venture to deny the accusation. The Committee nevertheless proceeded, and ordered the said Grout to prison.

DANIEL RANNEY.

Sworn, the 28th August, A. D. 1776, before me,

I, the aforesaid Daniel Ranney, do hereby certify, that as there is now no acting Magistrates in this County, I have offered the above to Doctor Elkanah Day, Clerk to the County Committee, and desired him to administer to me that the same is true; but he refuses, alleging that he has no right so to do. I do therefore hereby certify that the same above deposition by me subscribed is true, and that I am ready to make oath to the same whenever lawfully required; as witness my hand, the 28th of August, 1776.

DANIEL RANNEY.

In presence of

ABIJAH LOVEJOY,
ROBERT NICHOLS.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

Westminster, Cumberland County, September 3, 1776.

At such a time as this, when the Constitution of this State is not settled, no Courts constituted and organized, nor any Magistrates commissioned, there is no doubt but every man who thinks himself injured by others has a right to appeal from the decisions of his arbitrary adversaries to the justice of the impartial publick. And to your justice, my countrymen, I now appeal, to determine whether I am not injured in a manner not to be borne in a free country.

My case is this, (in few words:) About fifteen months go, I had information that Thomas Chandler, Jun., and some others intended to murder me; in consequence of which information, I applied to the Reverend Mr. Whiting to use his endeavours to hinder any such attempt. Mr. Whiting kindly undertook, but without success; for but a very few days afterwards, I being sick in bed of a fever, which raged to a great height, Mr. Chandler, with a small party with him, came to my house and made divers attempts to draw me naked out of my bed, swearing he would draw me in that manner about half a mile. He was entreated by sundry of my good neighbours, happening then to be present, to cease from an attempt so horrid, but to no purpose; for immediately a desperate fellow, then with him, at his commandment, divers times seized me and attempted to execute his aforesaid horrid orders; but was hindered partly by a brave defence my wife made, and partly by the most moving intreaties of my aforesaid neighbours. Nevertheless, the next morning Chandler and his aforesaid party came to my house and forced me away from it about half a mile, and there attempted to execute his wicked designs by choking of me; but a number of people coming to the place, he desisted, and I as well as I could fled for refuge to the Chairman of the then County Congress, who received me with kindness and tenderness, and wrote to Mr. Chandler, requiring him to desist from such practices; and the next week the Congress met, before whom I appeared, as did Mr. Chandler likewise, and I there prayed protection from future danger and abuses. Mr. Chandler made me great pretensions of doing me no injury in future, and the Congress thereupon declined meddling any further with it. Nevertheless, Mr. Chandler afterwards continuing his threats and abuses, I made repeated applications to the County Committee for relief, and at the meeting of that Committee the 24th of July last, they, on my proving that this same Chandler, who is Chairman of the Committee of Chester, having had me before him on an accusation of being guilty of a crime, asked me whether I was guilty or not, and that because I answered him that I was not guilty, he pinched my throat, shook, and otherwise abused me, which was all the trial he gave, refusing to call any witness. The County Committee, on account of this, as well as on account of Mr. Chandler's brother, John Chandler, being another of Chester Committee, ordered that that Committee should not try me on any accusation in a future time, but that I should be triable only by other Committees. Notwithstanding which, Chandler afterwards wrote a complaint, and procured the well-known Reuben Jones to sign it; in consequence of which I was brought before him and his brother John, &c., being in that manner accused of being an enemy to my country, and by them sent and committed to close gaol here, where I have been for more than ten days in a room more cold and wet than any cellar in town; during which time I have three times applied to Captain James Clay, Chairman of the County Committee, for trial before them, whether I deserve this imprisonment or not. But Clay being a great friend of Chandler's, by his written as well as verbal answers has absolutely refused to allow such trial before the County Committee.

Friends and countrymen of the State of New-York, and of this County in particular, you well know that the Convention or Assembly of this State have wisely ordered that any person imprisoned by a Sub-Committee, shall be allowed an appeal to the County Committee: And judge ye what Captain Clay deserves for refusing to grant this appeal, (but I thank God he cannot hinder my appeal to you.)

Captain Clay having thus arbitrarily shut those doors of right, which our Congress or Assembly so wisely opened, and thereby damned my appeals to the County Committee, I appeal to my country at large, to you, my countrymen, who I know will judge righteously.

I entreat that no one of my countrymen may suffer himself to believe or suspect, that any inimical practices of mine towards my country has occasioned this extraordinary treatment. My firm and unshaken attachment to the glorious cause in which my country is engaged, makes my adversaries dread the thoughts of my having a trial; their dirty souls know that a trial will certainly deliver me from their savage cruelties with honour.

That the publick may perceive why such men as the Chandlers are Committeemen in Chester, they are hereby informed, that the township of Chester is a new plantation. The whole township, about ten years since, was the sole property of Colonel Chandler, father of the aforesaid Thomas and John; that the Colonel has settled only about thirty families thereon, and is now superannuated, and it will not, therefore, be thought strange that his sons, Thomas and John, should have such influence on a majority of thirty settlers, as to obtain an election for Committeemen; although it is well known that the aforesaid John Chandler is the same John Chandler who some years since fled from Woodstock, in Connecticut, for reasons which I conceive are well known to the publick.

JOHN GROUT.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Last night I received a letter from Colonel Dayton, dated at Fort Stanwix, the 4th, enclosing the substance of a message sent from Onondaga, and that of another from Oneida, advising that seven hundred Indians and whites, under the command of Butler, were to arrive at Oswego on the 4th instant, and that great numbers would follow those. The Oneidas, who are, I believe, our real friends, advise that reinforcements should be sent. They also inform that a strong party, making, as they express it, five roads where they march, are on their way to that part of the Mohawk River called Canajoharie.

Should this information be confirmed, our force in that quarter will be greatly too weak; nor will it be much increased by the Militia, as the country is drained of men. You will, therefore, please to order three regiments to keep themselves in readiness to march at a moment's warning.

My last letter from General Washington was of the 24th of August, since which I have not heard a word from New-York, except by common report. I cannot, therefore, give you any certain intelligence of what is doing there. It seems agreed that Long-Island is evacuated, and so is the Governour's Island. General Sullivan is gone to Philadelphia on his parole, to try to get exchanged for General Prescott, and some say with offers for an accommodation from Lord Howe. Adieu, my dear General.

I am, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Two of the three Commissioners appointed by Congress to audit the publick accounts in the Northern Department, are arrived here. You will please to give out in orders that every officer or other person to whom or by whom money has been advanced on account for the publick service, and which remains unaccounted for, immediately to transmit their accounts to Jonathan Trumbull, Jun., Esq., Deputy Paymaster-General, that the same may be laid before the Commissioners; and that such whose accounts cannot be adjusted without their personal attendance, will have your permit to repair to this place. It is probable that General Arnold may have accounts unsettled; but as I suppose he cannot be spared at this juncture, if they cannot be settled without his personal attendance, I will request the Commissioners to go up, or postpone the settlement to a future day. I would have wrote the General on the subject, but my letter would not soon reach him, as he is, I suppose, with the fleet.

Your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To General Gates.

WALTER LIVINGSTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 13, 1776. Referred to the Board of war.]

Albany, September 7, 1776.

SIR: The gentlemen who are appointed to audit the publick accounts in the Northern Department, are now here for that purpose; and I could wish Congress would enable me to make a final settlement of mine, by previously ascertaining what wages I am to allow those gentlemen whom I have employed as Assistant Commissaries at Ticonderoga, the Landing, Fort George, Stillwater, Saratoga Falls, Half-Moon, Albany, Schenectady, Johnstown, German Flats, Fort Stanwix, the two principal Commissaries in Canada, and their assistants; likewise what number of rations each must be allowed.

Another matter which will greatly retard the settlement of my accounts, is, the value of a ration for the Northern army has never been fixed. I have applied to General Schuyler (by order of the Commissary-General, who is empowered to supersede me, without assigning a cause) for an order, fixing the sum to be paid as an equivalent for a ration. The General has referred the matter to Congress, and till Congress determines on the above, I cannot properly produce my accounts for a settlement, having paid considerable sums on account.

The Commissary-General has sent a Deputy-Commissary for this department, who, as he is not obliged to follow my directions, refuses to make me the necessary returns, which puts it out of my power to furnish the army with such supplies as from time to time must be wanted. As I received my commission from Congress, to them I now resign it. This dispute may injure the publick cause, which I am determined never to have a hand in. I beg Congress would, as soon as convenient, send a person to fill my office, or direct the Commissary-General to do it effectually. I have wrote the Commissary-General that I would this day send my resignation to Congress, and, as he is empowered to supersede me, requested him to send a proper person to furnish the army, informing him that I will continue to forward supplies till the first of next month, and if that time was not sufficient, that I would continue one week longer. Whatever Congress may think proper to allow me as a compensation for past services, I shall gratefully accept.

Requesting you to lay this before Congress, I remain, with the greatest esteem, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WALTER LIVINGSTON,
Deputy Commissary-General.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

H. GLEN TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Schenectady, September 7, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I would be glad to know by Captain Lansing if any officers have a right to inlist any of the batteau-men that are inlisted to serve as batteau-men during the campaign, as I am much disappointed this morning by Captain John Bradt and his officers inlisting some of the batteau-men as they were just setting off for Fort Schuyler with provisions; and some of the boats are lying here loaded for want of men Captain Bradt and his officers have inlisted of Captain Lansing's batteau-men.

Should Captain Bradt, or any officers of the Rangers which are now raising in Albany or Tyron County, have no right to inlist any batteau-men, I would be glad you would furnish Captain Lansing with a written order, that I may show them they have no right to inlist them. Should they have a right to inlist men who are engaged, it will hurt the batteau service, which should not be the case at present.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

H. GLEN.

To Major-General Schuyler, Albany.

GENERAL WATERBURY TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I received yours of this instant, and agreeable to your request, have got all the paper I could procure here, both cartridge and common writing paper, as your Honour made no distinction in your letter.

I shall proceed forward to Ticonderoga to-morrow morning with one of the galleys, and the other will go forward to-morrow evening or next day morning, which Captain Thatcher will be left to bring forward.

I am, dear sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID WATERBURY, Jr.

To General Gates.

P. S. I should be glad that some of Colonel Swift's regiment may be ordered up, with some batteaus, to forward the troops in.

ORDERS AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR LIEUTENANT-COLONEL JOHN BARRETT, OF THE MILITIA OF CUMBERLAND COUNTY, IN THE STATE OF NEW-YORK.

You are immediately to proceed to cut the road from Number Four, to the foot of Mount Independence, taking care to construct a good bridge over Otter Creek, at or near the Falls at Rutland. In doing this publick service, you are to exert your utmost vigilance with the detachment of Colonel Van Dyck's regiment of Militia, and all others under your command; to obey all orders and directions given you by your senior officers in forwarding a work so essential to the interest of the United States, and so necessary for the safety and protection of the interior inhabitants of all the Middle States of this Union.

Given at Ticonderoga, this 7th day of September, 1776.

ORDERS FOR CAPTAIN JONATHAN FASSETT, COMMANDING ONE OF THE INDEPENDENT COMPANIES RAISED FOR THE DEFENCE OF THE INHABITANTS LIVING ON THE GRANTS.

SIR: You'll immediately repair with the company under your command to Jerico, there to remain until such time as these orders are countermanded. You will keep constant scouts out to watch the motions of the enemy, and not fail, frequently and by every opportunity, to report to Headquarters any discoveries they may make, and the situation you and your company are in.

Given at Ticonderoga, this 7th day of September, 1776.

H. GATES.

[Mem: The same orders were sent to Captain John Fassett, for his station at Colchester Point.]

COLONEL PORTER TO GENERAL GATES.

Mount-Independence, September 7, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Your orders of last night are received, and immediately executed. I am not able to do myself the honour of waiting upon you this morning by reason of sickness. My men are well prepared, well armed, and have sufficient quantity of ammunition; and will be ready to turn out on the shortest notice. All that I want is to know my alarm-post.

I am, with great respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

ELISHA PORTER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

P. S. I am too weak to write myself, and am obliged to employ another hand to write to you for me, but not too weak to subscribe myself as above,

E. P.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM MOUNT INDEPENDENCE, NEAR TICONDEROGA, SEPTEMBER 7, 1776.

Last evening an express brought intelligence from Crown-Point, that heavy firing had been heard for several hours that day on the Lake, upon which the General (eleven at night) issued orders that we should hold ourselves in readiness for an attack; but we are all still to-day and hear nothing from our fleet. What boats the enemy had we know not, but it is thought here they have not a sufficient naval force to cope with us. Upon a moderate calculation we have now twelve thousand men which are effective. The Colonels Whitcomb's and Finney's regiments arrived here last week, and we hear there are two more hard by. Our works go on briskly. We have plenty of good bread, beef, and salt pork.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, September 7, 1776—9 o'clock, P. M.

HONOURED SIR: The wind being so hard down the Lake, I have yet received no intelligence from the fleet; neither of my boats returned. At twelve to-night I shall send off a cannon some leagues down if I do not receive intelligence sooner; in the mean time will prepare part of a letter.

When I wrote for a reinforcement, I was not on any knight errant scheme: I did not mean that with such a small force to hold this ground against ten or twelve thousand men (should the fleet have unluckily been beat.) The reinforcement as well as my own regiment might have been in such a situation as to have retreated with security, had it been imprudent to attack the enemy on their landing. At the same time to have been prepared to take any advantage the casualties of war, wind, time, &c., might have put in our power, and perhaps give some check to the enemy whilst you might have been preparing above, and have reinforced us if upon all circumstances you should think it proper. There are few pieces of ground in America where our irregulars could act against the enemy with a greater prospect of success than at their attempting a landing here, unless it were in an open woody country. However, sir, to your judgment and orders I shall always submit with pleasure. It was from an intimation in one of your letters that I asked for any reinforcement.

Had the fleet been beat, my situation here would have been rather critical. A little skirmishing might have been necessary whilst I sent off the sick, and was preparing for a retreat; the four pieces of artillery, if well worked, might have been useful. I wrote for a few cartridges, &c., for those guns. I have not received them.

I shall send up the eighteen-pounder as soon as possible. I hope the fleet may have been successful, whatever enterprise or action it may have been engaged in. But it is always best to prepare for the worst.

I have done all I could to procure intelligence and secure us against surprise. I have received a letter from George Campbell, Esq., dated at Albany the 3d of September, relating to what he knew of the action on Long-Island. He mentions something of a letter which had come to Albany, giving an account that our troops had evacuated Long-Island. I hope there may be no truth in the last. I should be much obliged to you, if you would let me know the particulars as soon as you have them from New-York.

September 8, 1776—17 minutes past 10 o'clock, A. M.

The wind being so unfavourable yesterday and last night, has prevented either of my boats from returning. The wind has shifted. I expect every moment the arrival of one or other, when I shall immediately send the news to you. The guns were heard about twelve miles down the Lake, from about sunrise till eleven o'clock, on the 6th instant.

As you might wonder why you had not heard from here sooner, I now send this letter. Mr. Burrows presents his compliments to you.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,
THOS. HARTLEY.
To Major-General Gates.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Windmill-Point, September 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I wrote you the 2d instant, from Willsborough, by Lieutenant Calderwood; the same evening anchored at Schuyler's Island, and on the 3d instant arrived safe at this place, which is four or five miles from the Isle-aux-Têtes, and seven miles from the Isle-aux-Motte. We found the Isle-aux-Têtes occupied by the enemy, and several hundred men encamped between that and us, who, the evening of our arrival, made a precipitate retreat.

I have posted my guard-boats at a point running into the Lake, about one mile below us. The enemy's boats have several times appeared on the Lake with a view of decoying our boats, but I have never suffered them to be pursued. Lieutenant Whitcomb arrived here the 5th, in the evening, and went off the same night with three men for St. John's, on the west side. I sent off Ensign McCoy early the next morning on the east side, with three men. They are to send me intelligence from time to time. I expect to hear from them to-morrow. Early yesterday morning the boats were ordered on shore to cut fascines to fix on the bows and sides of the gondolas, to prevent the enemy's boarding and to keep off small shot. One of the boats went on shore, contrary to orders, before the others were ready. They were attacked by a party of savages, who pursued them into the water. They all reached the boat, but before they could row off, three were killed and six wounded. The party was headed by a Regular officer, who called to our people to resign themselves. On our firing a few shot among them, they immediately dispersed. A party was sent on shore, who found a laced beaver hat, the button marked 47th Regiment. The Lee and Gondola arrived here yesterday morning. We are moored in a line across the Lake in such a manner, it will be impossible for a batteau to pass us. I hope the galleys are nearly completed. The force of the enemy is uncertain. However, they have the advantage that they can man all their batteaus with soldiers whenever they think proper to attack; and our vessels are so low that numbers may carry them by boarding. This must be attended with great loss on their side, as I am positive they will not be able to surprise us. If I find the enemy have a considerable naval force, I design to retire to Cumberland Head, or Schuyler's Island, until joined by the three row-galleys, which will be superiour to all our present force, when the whole are joined. I believe the Isle-aux-Motte will be the best stand, as the enemy can bring nothing against us by land, nor will they dare to come on the Island; and by our guard-boats we can prevent any boats going from Missisque Bay. As you have more troops at Ticonderoga than you want, will it not be prudent to send up one thousand or fifteen hundred men, who might encamp on the Isle-aux-Motte and be ready at all times to assist us if attacked? Twenty men to a batteau will be sufficient. They might load under cover of the vessels, push out and fire, and retire under cover again; and if the enemy's boats should make their principal attack on any particular vessel, these batteaus might assist her. Each should be fixed for a swivel in each end, and if they are armed, one should be fixed in them. If you should think it necessary to send a detachment, it will be necessary to bring entrenching tools, that they may cover themselves from small-arms.

We have but very indifferent men in general. Great part of those who shipped for seamen know very little of the matter. Three or four good gunners are wanted. Enclosed is a list of our sick, who increase fast. I have sent up in these batteaus twenty-three men, who will be of no service for some time. I wish fifty seamen could be procured and sent down. I enclose you a letter from Samuel Chase, Esq.; you will observe he requests an explanation of your letter to Mr. Adams. He observes my character is much injured by a report prevailing in Philadelphia of my having sequestered the goods seized in Montreal. As you have had an opportunity of hearing that matter canvassed on the trial of Colonel Hazen, I beg you will be kind enough to write your sentiment to him on the matter. I cannot but think it extremely cruel, when I have sacrificed my ease, health, and a great part of my private property in the cause of my country, to be calumniated as a robber and thief; at a time, too, when I have it not in my power to be heard in my own defence.

The 15th of August, when we left Ticonderoga, the fleet were victualled for thirty days, which time is elapsed except six days. We have on board the fleet six or eight days' provision, beside twenty barrels of flour, left at Crown-Point to be baked, and ten barrels of pork, which I have ordered Lieutenant Calderwood to bring down; which will serve the fleet to the 20th. As the Lake is often very difficult to pass for a number of days, we ought to have at least one month's provisions on hand. Major Grier goes up with the sick, to whom I must refer you for particulars.

We are very anxious to hear from New-York; hope soon to have that pleasure by one of the galleys, which I think must be completed by this time.

Please to make my compliments to the gentlemen of your family, and believe me, with much respect, esteem, and affection,

Dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO THE CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF WAR.

Sag-Harbour, September 7, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Having received certain intelligence that the inhabitants of East-Hampton had driven all their stock from Montauk westward, in order to furnish the Ministerial troops, I determined to make one more effort to save or destroy them. In this I have not succeeded, on account of my having had an account that the Ministerial fleet, or part of them, are turning Montauk-Point, lest they should destroy them. I have saved nearly three hundred and seventy small-arms, and now, through uncertainty whether assistance will be sent, have determined and ordered a second retreat as soon as a few distressed families can be brought. I am so much distressed for them that I cannot consent to leave them.

I am, gentlemen, your much obliged and humble servant,
HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To the Council of War at New-London or Lebanon.

ABRAHAM GARDINER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

East-Hampton, September 7, 1776.

To His Honour JONATHAN TRUMBULL, Esq., Governour of the Colony of CONNECTICUT:

SIR: In consequence of a report prevailing in town that the people of Connecticut are coming to take away our live stock and effects, the Trustees who transact the business of the town have met early this morning and unanimously agreed to send an express humbly requesting your Honour's prohibition of such measures, as apprehensive if prosecuted we shall be involved in perplexities and sufferings far beyond those we are now the subjects of, in that it may be construed we are somehow accessory thereto, which we are not, being subjects of his Majesty King George, and therefore mean not to act a part exposing of us to his displeasure. We have therefore thought proper to request your Honour's interposition as we judge in our favour.

We are your Honour's humble petitioners.

Signed per order of the Trustees:

ABRAHAM GARDINER, Clerk.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

SIR: The Trustees have desired me, the subscriber, to signify to your Honour my acquiescence in the above request, which I now do; and, in testimony thereof, subscribe myself your Honour's humble and obliged petitioner,

SAMUEL BUELL.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 7, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 4th instant to the Committee at New-London, together with a copy of their answer, has been laid before me. The contents of their answer might be well at that time; but as matters now are, it appears to me to be most conducive to the good of the service for you to join the Continental army at New-York unless otherwise ordered. You will not construe this as an order from me, but act as your wisdom shall direct. I have, with advice of my Safety Council, ordered nine regiments of Foot and two of Horse to march with all possible despatch towards New-York, to rendezvous at or near Westchester, until further orders, to prevent the designs of the enemy, who seem to meditate the encircling the Continental army, and to cut off all communications between us and them, which will be attended with the worst of consequences, and must at all events be prevented.

I am, sir, your humble servant, J. TRUMBULL.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, with a party, at Saybrook.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 7, 1776, Present: His Honour the Governour, Ekiphalet Dyer, Titus Hosmer, Jedediah Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

In the forenoon, sundry Letters from the northward, received by Brown, were read and considered, as well as several Letters and several Despatches sent out to forward the marching the Militia the east side of the river towards New-York.

An order was given to William Morgan, Esq., to purchase two hundred fat Sheep, and drive to the Army at the northward, and deliver the same to the Commissary in that department, or by the order of General Waterbury, with encouragement that if the money is wanted to purchase the Sheep, the same shall be paid said Morgan out of the Treasury as he passes through Hartford.

HENRY REMSEN TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-Haven, September 7, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Mr. Peter Colt, is agent for Colonel Trumbull, the Commissary-General, and goes up the North River to purchase flour and other necessities for the army, and being a stranger, desired me to point out the most eligible method to proceed, so that our army may be fully supplied. In consequence I have taken the liberty to request the gentlemen in Convention who represent the Counties along the North River, to communicate to Mr. Colt the persons' names he may apply to, and who are likely to be able to supply him with the provisions he may want, and to desire they will be pleased to furnish him with every other needful information on the subject.

I have been here some days waiting the arrival of Captain Harrison, with the goods from Providence, which were imported by Mr. Van Zandt and self for the State of New-York, and hope soon to be able to render an accurate account of the same, and should be obliged to Convention for orders what to do with them—whether they must be transported by land to the Fishkills or any other place within the State of New-York, or if they are to be stored in any inland town of this State. Many of our brethren have been obliged to abandon Long-Island, and come over into this State with their families, some of them almost naked, having left most of their wearing apparel and bedding. Perhaps Convention will order a sale of part of these goods, to supply such with clothing as may want.

I am, very respectfully, sir, your obedient, humble servant,
HENRY REMSEN.

To Robert Yates, Jun., Esq., President of the Convention.

CAPTAIN J. PAUL JONES TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Providence, at Sea, in North Latitude, 36° 40', and } West Longitude 51°, September 7, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: I had the honour of writing to you 27th ultimo per the brigantine Britannia, a Nantucket whaler, which I sent under the care of Lieutenant Grinnell. Also 4th current per the brigantine Sea-Nymph, from Barbadoes for London, which I sent in under the care of Mr. Hopkins, master of the Providence, with a particular account of my cruise till that time. Nothing has since happened till last night, when I took the brigantine Favourite, laden with sugar, from Antigua for Liverpool, as per custom-house certificates herewith enclosed. As this vessel did not sail from Antigua till 18th ultimo, my future success must be very uncertain. The West-Indies are very much thinned of shipping, and I have already succeeded beyond my expectation; however, I will not yet give up the pursuit. I send this vessel in under the care of Mr. Vesey, my acting master. Since I despatched the Sea-Nymph, I have understood that there is a very considerable property in wine and cash over and above what is enumerated in her clearance. I hope this may appear in time to take measures accordingly. I herewith forward you a large bag of letters, which may, I hope, contain some useful information. Some of them contain bills of lading for the cargo. As I have no clerk, I hope to be excused for not sending copies of my former letters.

I have the honour to be, with grateful esteem and much respect, gentlemen, your much obliged, very humble servant,
JNO. P. JONES.

The Favourite's crew are as follows, viz:

John Davis, Master; Bernard Gallaway, Mate; Jno. Williamson, Second Mate; Jno. Wilson, Ben. Allen, Wm. Robarts, James Bacop, Saml. Cornish, Jno. Gaunt, Jno. Irvine, Seamen.

Providence, September 7, 1776.

Thursday last, arrived here a prize schooner, taken by the Joseph, privateer, Captain John Field, in consort with a Letter of Marque, commanded by Captain Joseph Tillinghast, both of this port. She was in ballast, and bound from Grenada to Liverpool, in Nova-Scotia.

Captain Biddle, of the Andrew Doria, in the service of the United States, we hear, has taken four valuable prizes, one of them said to be a large ship, which Lord Dunmore was sending to England with fifteen thousand bushels of wheat. Two of the prizes have arrived safe in port.

We learn that Captain Jabez Whipple, in the privateer Independence, of this place, has taken three valuable prizes, viz., a ship, brig, and sloop, and conveyed them into a safe port.

TO THE INHABITANTS OF THE MASSACHUSETTS-BAY.

GENTLEMEN: The recovery of the Colony from the wounds occasioned by the present glorious struggle, and its future flourishing condition, should engage our earliest attention. Nothing will be more likely to promote these valuable ends, next to the good morals of the people, than a proper form of government, securing and perpetuating to every man and his posterity the full enjoyment of their rights and privileges, civil and sacred. This will probably induce numbers to come and incorporate themselves with us. But as many, through Colonial prejudices, may object to strangers settling among us, allow me to point out the advantages thereof: Were these strangers only to reside among us till they had acquired fortunes, and then to remove back to their native country with themselves, families, and substance, sound policy would dictate their exclusion; whereas the strangers I mean to have admitted, are those that, groaning under the oppressions, difficulties, and absurd Government of their own country, fly to this, that they may enjoy their natural rights, with a design of continuing among and becoming one of us, through interest and intermarriages. Such flocking in upon the Continent, as we may suppose will be the case shortly, with riches, health, arts and sciences, will soon raise it to a more flourishing condition than it hath ever yet known: and this Colony will act wisely in endeavouring to secure its proportion of them. Their wealth will supply with loans those that, for want of them, are not now able to make the best improvement of their lands and estates, and it is likely something under the common interest; their numbers will help to consume the surplus produce arising from such improvement; their knowledge will assist in forwarding such improvement upon the most advantageous terms; their labour and industry will be so much gain to the publick stock; their persons and fortunes will lessen the proportion of taxes paid by the natives; and should any of them merchandise, that will tend to keep down the price of imported, and to raise the price of exported, commodities. The more merchants, the smaller the profits upon and the cheaper the goods brought from abroad. When the number is great, they cannot so easily enter into combinations to keep up the prices: each sells as cheap as possible to get custom, and gives as high as he can afford for the materials he wants to export. I imagine more great fortunes in proportion were made when the Colony had the fewest merchants, than hath been done since. Let strangers, such as above mentioned, be cordially received and encouraged; and waste lands will be cultivated, cultivated rise considerably in value, foreign trade be greatly increased, farming in all its branches be increased proportionably, and the strength of the State be soon doubled. Every traveller is amazed at the rapid progress that has been made in settling of Pennsylvania. To what has it been owing? Not so much to the excellency of its soil as to the encouragement that has been given by the State for all strangers, and of every denomination, to settle among them. As the friend of liberty, I must wish each Colony the possession of it, in the highest degree attainable. As the friend of this Colony, I would willingly contribute to its uniting in its own particular form of government all the excellencies of the others, while it avoids their defects.

The former letter turned chiefly upon the necessity of having the Legislature consist of more than one branch. I shall now proceed to mention, that the members of each should be independent, neither placemen nor pensioners, or what is equivalent. The South Carolinians have resolved, (article the 10th,) "that if any member of the General Assembly, or of the Legislative Council, shall accept any place of emolument, or any commission (except in the Militia) he shall vacate his seat, and there shall thereupon be a new election, but he shall not be disqualified from serving upon being reelected." In allowing him to be re-chosen, they have virtually destroyed the advantage aimed at by the first part of the resolve. How few of the British Commoners but what are re-chosen immediately after having vacated their seats by accepting places? That the like should not exist among us, the sure way is to make the person ineligible; or, if that should be thought an infringement upon the rights of the electors, to oblige him to resign his place of emolument, or his commission, should he prefer being in the Council or Assembly. The Jerseys have made it one of their chartered rights, (the 20th,) "that the Legislative department of this Colony may, as much as possible, be preserved from all suspicion of corruption, none of the Judges of the Supreme or other courts, Sheriffs, or any other person or persons possessed of any post of profit under the Government, other than Justices of the Peace, shall be entitled to a seat in Assembly; but that, on his being elected and taking his seat, his office or post shall be considered as vacant." To have perfected the article, "the Council" also should have been inserted, and the paragraph have run, "to a seat in Council or Assembly." The Virginians have done the business completely, by ordaining and declaring, in the beginning of their form of Government, as followeth: "The Legislative, Executive, and Judiciary departments shall be separate and distinct, so that neither execute the powers properly belonging to the other: nor shall any person exercise the powers of more than one of them at the same time, except that the Justices of the County courts shall be eligible to either House of Assembly." This appears to me a most important regulation; but clashes so with contrary cases among ourselves, that I am fearful whether it will be adopted. Under Royal Governments a clamour was once raised against having certain characters in the Council, and all such were gradually left out. If the like are suffered under a new-modeled Government, it will be thought that the clamour was needless, and only the offspring of a party to serve a purpose. Let us be consistent, and not resemble the knavish Whigs of King George the First's time, who by a septennial act prolonged the Parliament four years beyond its natural life, which ought to have expired at the end of three, thereby subverted the Constitution, and, as an author says, "went farther in impoverishing and enslaving their fellow-subjects, than all their predecessors from the Restoration." I humbly apprehend, that sooner or later we must follow in the main the example of the Virginians, or rue the consequence. The deviations that may now exist in our infantile State without much danger to the present generation, will, if continued, prove extremely prejudicial when we have attained to maturity, and are become a rich people. And let it ever be remembered, that it is easier to prevent errors getting into the Constitution, than to eradicate them after a long indulgence. But would we avoid the errors alluded to, and set aside the arguments used in support of them, we should pay the persons filling the Judicial and Executive departments rather generously than otherwise. Pay well, and suitable men will be found that will be content with single places, and apply themselves to the proper discharge of the duties thereof. Be niggardly, so that your servants cannot live in character, and they will either seek more services than they can discharge, or will, by secret ways and means, supply deficiencies, or will do your work in a bungling, slovenly manner, and occasion more damage to the publick than the difference saved by an injudicious parsimony can repair. It is beneath the dignity of a State to lay its servants under a temptation either to neglect the publick so that they may attend to their own private business, or to commit frauds, or to receive bribes in the way of presents, that they and families may be decently supported, answerable to their rank. It argues a mean and contracted soul to attempt it. When your rewards are fully proportioned to the services expected, see that you are well served, put up with no neglects, be careful how you admit of customs and perquisites, and punish criminals with exemplary severity.

I have above expressed my desire that the Judiciary, Executive, and Legislative departments might be preserved separate and distinct. The governmental powers being thus divided, the people are the better secured in the possession of their liberties. Each department hath enough to employ it, and by confining itself to its own particular business, will perform it with the greater despatch and advantage, to the no small emolument of the State; and being thus separated the guardians of the publick are increased, and dangerous encroachments upon the Constitution become the less probable. But that the proposed plan may take place, besides excluding the Judges from each branch of the Legislature, the Council should be solely legislative, and the executive power be entrusted with other individuals. Let, then, the Legislative Council consist of thirty, as mentioned in the former letter, upon the supposition of a rotation; and, instead of a Governour, let there be a Council of State, consisting of a given number, with President and Vice-President, who shall occupy the Legislative Department. I was formerly attached to the name of Governour, but considering how apt persons wearing that name are to imagine that they have an innate right to govern, distinct from what has been communicated, I prefer the word President, as less liable to make the creature vain and domineering. The Carolínians having constituted the President a branch of the Legislature, appoint that the Vice-President of the Colony should be a member and President of a Privy Council, which consists of six other members chosen by ballot—three by the General Assembly, and three by the Legislative Council; but they provide, that no officer of the Army or Navy, in the service of the Continent, or of the Colony, shall be eligible. A member of the General Assembly or Legislative Council does not lose his seat by being chosen of the Privy Council, unless elected Vice-President of the Colony. The Privy Council is to advise the President and Commander-in-Chief when required; but he is not bound to consult them in all cases. New-Jersey hath vested the Government of that Province in a Governour, Legislative Council, and General Assembly; and any three or more of the Council are, at all times, a Privy Council. Virginia chooses a Governour or Chief Magistrate annually, who, with the advice of a Council of State, exercises the executive powers of government according to the laws of the Commonwealth, and is not, under any pretence, to exercise any power or prerogative by virtue of any law, statute, or custom of England. The Privy Council, or Council of State, consists of eight members, chosen by joint ballot of both Houses of Assembly, either from their own members or the people at large; their advice and proceedings are to be entered of record, and signed by the members present, (to any part whereof any member may enter his dissent,) to be laid before the General Assembly when called for by them. The members of this Council are incapable, during their continuance in office, of sitting in either House of Assembly. Two of them are to be removed by joint ballot of both Houses of Assembly at the end of every three years, and be ineligible for the three next years. The vacancies occasioned by death or incapacity are to be supplied by new elections in the same manner. With all deference to the great abilities that composed the Virginia plan of government, I conceive that it is capable of an improvement, or, at least, of being better suited to this Northern Colony. If I understand this expression aright—"two members shall be removed at the end of every three years"—there must be a chasm of three years between every removal; of consequence, two members may be continued in twelve years before the first rotation is concluded, and after that, each may sit thus long in the Council of State; and yet the Governour is not to continue in office longer than three years successively, and is not eligible until the expiration of four years after he shall have been out of that office. This regulation appears out of proportion.

Besides, twelve years is certainly too long for any person to possess a share of the executive power, in a well-ordered Commonwealth, before he is reduced to a private station. The Executive department should be stable, and have men of knowledge and experience in business; but this may be provided for, without admitting any man's remaining in it for so long a time. I would, with all due respect, gentlemen, offer to your consideration the following proposals: Let there be a Council of State consisting of eight members, chosen out of the Legislative Council, the House of Assembly, or the people at large. Let each branch of the Legislature choose four, instead of choosing by joint ballot; and at the end of every year, in the like manner, remove and add two, till at the end of four years they have gone through the first rotation; after which, in the succeeding years, let the two that have been in four years be invariably removed. By this means no one will be in more than four years, and ever after the three first years the Council of State will consist of two members that are in their first year of service, two that are in their second, two that are in their third, and two that are in their fourth. Are any of them chosen out of the Legislative body, let their places in that body be vacated, and filled up by new elections. In case of vacancies by death or resignation, let them be filled up, when the number is even, by each branch of the Legislature's choosing a moiety as before; when odd, by the odd one's being chosen by joint ballot, or from time to time alternately, first by the House, then by the Legislative Council. Let no member, when removed, be eligible till he has been out as many years as he was in. Let no officer of the Army or Navy, in the service of the Continent, or of the Colony, be eligible. To this Council of State, let the Legislature add a President chosen by joint ballot, or let the Assembly nominate two or three, and the Legislative Council choose out of that nomination. Let the Council of State choose from among themselves a Vice-President. Let four make a quorum for doing business. Let the President have a single vote with the Council, besides a casting vote when necessary; the Vice-President the same when the President is absent. Let the advice and proceedings of the Council be entered on record and signed by the members present, (to any part whereof let any member be at liberty to enter his dissent,) to be laid before the whole Legislature, when called for by the joint voice of both branches, but not otherwise.

Lest I should be too lengthy, I shall close for the present, and remain, gentlemen, your faithful servant,

WILLIAM GORDON.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO THOMAS FLETCHER.

Watertown, September 7, 1776.

SIR: The Council have received your letter of the 27th of July, informing us that the Indians of the Penobscot Tribe, for good reasons by them suggested, conclude not to engage in the Continental army at present. Therefore the £30 put into your hands to enable you to enlist and bring up a number of said tribe cannot be improved for that purpose; therefore the General Court direct that you return said £30 to Henry Gardiner, Esq., Receiver-General for this State, and take his receipt therefor, the first safe opportunity.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO COLONEL WILLARD.

Council Chamber, September 7, 1776.

SIR: You are hereby directed and commanded to take into your regiment a company of men commanded by Captain John Wentworth, now on Dorchester Heights, and give direction to said Captain to march said company immediately to the Northern Department of the American army, by the same routes the other part of your regiment were ordered to march; and you are further directed and commanded to take into your regiment a company of men lately marched from the County of Middlesex, under the command of Captain Sargent, and you are to give directions to said Captain respecting marching his company and joining your regiment, as you shall think best, having regard to former orders received from the Board respecting marching your regiment.

In the name and per order of the Council:

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

To Colonel Aaron Willard.

RICHARD DEVENS, C. G.
Boston, September 7, 1776.

Exeter, New-Hampshire, September 7, 1776.

We have certain intelligence from Onion River, which is about seventy miles from Haverhill, (Cohoss,) that a party of the King of Great Britain's troops, ten or twelve days ago, burnt nine houses, and destroyed everything in their way except one small fort, and carried off a Tory family. On the door of a building they left wrote the following notification: "We did not destroy this because we suppose it belongs to a friend; and if we have destroyed any effects belonging to a friend of the King's troops, send a bill, and it shall be paid on sight."

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON FROM A MERCHANT AT BARBADOES, DATED SEPTEMBER 8, 1776.

The Ranger, a privateer brig of sixteen guns, fitted out here to cruise against the Americans, has brought into Carlisle Bay an American armed schooner of ten carriage guns, from Brest bound to Philadelphia, on board of which were found several letters; amongst others, was one addressed to the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., from one Mr. Hamilton, an American gentleman who has been for some time at the Court of Versailles. I just had a sight of it; cannot remember the particulars, but have, as near as possible, sent you the contents, which are as follow:

"SIR: I have the happiness to acquaint you that you may assure the Congress that the French Ministry perfectly acquiesce with the proposals which Messrs. Needham.

Gunning, and myself, had the honour to lay before them. They have sent orders for a number of ships-of-war to be fitted for sea with all possible despatch; and a strong squadron will certainly sail from Brest for Philadelphia early in the month of November; and they will also have a very formidable squadron, two bombs, and a fire-ship, ready against Spring, which they intend to send to Quebeck.

"FRED. HAMILTON."

JAMES CAMPBELL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Chingoteague, Virginia, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure to inform you that the Enterprise, privateer, of Baltimore, under my command, is arrived safe in this inlet, having taken during my cruise the following prizes, viz :

The Lancashire, ship, a Guineaman in ballast, now in Sinapuxent, in Maryland—4 guns, 16 men;

The Betsey, brigantine, of Jamaica, from Guadaloupe for Halifax, having on board 120 hogsheads and tierces of molasses, now in this inlet ;

The Black River, ship, from Dominica for Bristol, having on board 158 hogsheads sugar, 58 hogsheads rum, 60 hogsheads molasses, Egg-Harbour;

The snow James, of Lancaster, from Antigua, having on board 100 hogsheads sugar, 171 bales of cotton, 2 hogsheads rum, 14 tierces and 47 barrels sugar, and 50 tons fustick, 23 men—not yet arrived;

The brigantine Betsey, Guernsey, from St. Croix, having on board 240 hogsheads rum, not yet arrived—expected this day ;

The sloop Modesty, of Dartmouth, in England, from Barbadoes for Newfoundland, 30 hogsheads and 4 tierces rum, and 20 barrels sugar, arrived yesterday in Sinapuzent.

The schooner Liberty, of Nova Scotia, from Montreal and Anguilla, having on board 1,000 bushels salt, 14 hogsheads rum, and ten casks nails;

A sloop from Tortola, with a small cargo of salt and rum. Dismissed, with thirty prisoners, being quite outnumbered by them.

When I sailed, I had fifty-three men and boys, twenty-nine of whom never were at sea. I suffered much in my health, and sprung both my masts; but expect to get better soon, and be out again before the Winter. I shall send your honourable Congress a survey of this inlet when my health permits, it being of great importance, and ought to be fortified, for which four guns would be sufficient. In it is fifteen feet water, and among the shoals without, a ship of any size may find shelter till lightened.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant.

JAMES CAMPBELL.

To John Hancock, Esq.

SAMUEL CHASE TO GENERAL GATES.

Annapolis, September 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I was by yesterday's post honoured with your letter of the 23d of August. I cannot account for the delay of my letter of the 14th of June. I wrote you a letter on the subject of yours to Mr. John Adams, the first of last month. I suppose it has not reached you.

I sincerely rejoice to hear of our respectable force with you, and cannot but solicit you to inform me frequently of your affairs.

I am now attending our Convention for the framing of a new Government for this State. I wish and much pressed the completion of this business six months ago.

The same good opinion of Colonel St. Clair which induced me to recommend him to your notice, compelled me to urge his promotion, and for which I stayed in Congress beyond my time limited for my return here.

I have not heard from my friend General Schuyler since his treaty with the savage princes of the wilderness. I cannot express the respect, the affection, and friendship with which I desire to be remembered to that gentleman. I wrote to General Arnold the 9th of August. I wish to hear from him, and am anxious to procure some knowledge, and if possible a map, of the Lakes. Can you get one for me? Present my warmest wishes to General Arnold. Erit mihi Neptunus, if he will defeat Burgoyne.

I presume General St. Clair is at New-York, and therefore I omit to express my esteem and regard for him. I shall write to that gentleman to New-York.

I shall write to your lady on to-morrow. Every good attend you. Farewell.

Your affectionate and obedient servant,
SAMUEL CHASE.

MATTHEW TILGHMAN TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 10, 1776.]

Annapolis, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I received by Henry Frick your letter to our Convention, after their rising yesterday evening. I immediately requested their attendance this morning, that I might communicate the contents, and doubt not, at this most critical juncture, they will exert all the power of this State in support of the common cause.

I had ordered the express to wait, that I might inform of the result, but I cannot keep him.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

MAT. TILGHMAN, President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress, at Philadelphia.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, September 8, 1776—Sunday, 6 o'clock, P. M.

SIR: I am this minute honoured with your favour of the 6th instant, and am to acknowledge the receipt of your several favours to that date.

The Congress, concurring with the proposal of exchanging Generals Prestcott and McDonald for Generals Sullivan and Stirling, have authorized the Board of War to send the two former to you for that purpose, as soon as possible.

In consequence of the message which General Sullivan delivered to Congress from Lord Howe, respecting a conference with some of their members, they have, after great debate, been induced to pass the first resolution of the 5th of September, and have since appointed three gentlemen on that business, as you will observe by a subsequent resolution, to which, without any comment, I beg leave to refer you. But, in order to prevent similar messages for the future, they have passed a resolve directing the mode in which all applications shall hereafter be made, either to Congress or the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and to which only any attention is to be paid. I beg leave to refer you to the resolve itself as the future rule of your conduct with respect to every such verbal application, until it shall be altered, or you shall hear further from Congress on the subject.

The list of officers who are prisoners with the enemy, which you mention as enclosed in your favour of the 6th, it is probable was through hurry omitted, as it has not come to hand.

Before this reaches you, a supply of money will doubtless be arrived, it being now two days since it was sent. Henceforth you will be more regularly supplied with that article. The Congress have ordered a large stock of cloth here to be immediately made up into tents, and to be forwarded to you with all possible despatch. They have likewise ordered some duck in the Eastern States to be made into tents and sent you.

To-morrow morning I will lay your letter before Congress, and acquaint you immediately of the result. General Sullivan went from here two days ago. The committee to wait on Lord Howe will set out to-morrow morning for New-York.

The interesting state of our affairs, and the anxiety of Congress to hear from you as often as possible, will naturally suggest to you the propriety of giving them all the information in your power, as often as your important concerns will admit of it.

My most ardent and incessant wishes attend you, that you may still rise superiour to every difficulty, and that your great and virtuous exertions on behalf of your country may be crowned with that success which, from the Supreme Being's love of justice, and the righteousness of our cause, in conjunction with our own endeavours, it is not irrational to expect.

I am to request you will direct Major Hausegger to repair to this city as soon as possible, to take the command of the German battalion, of which he is appointed Colonel, being extremely wanted.

I have the honour to be, with every sentiment of respect and esteem, sir, your most obedient and humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

DR. FRANKLIN TO LORD HOWE.

Philadelphia, September 8, 1776.

MY LORD: I received your favour of the 16th past. I did not immediately answer it, because I found that my corresponding with your Lordship was disliked by some members of Congress. I hope now soon to have an opportunity of discussing with you, viva voce, the matters mentioned in it; as I am, with Mr. Adams and Mr. Rutledge, appointed to wait on your Lordship, in consequence of a desire you expressed in some conversation with General Sullivan, and of a resolution of Congress made thereupon, which that gentleman has probably before this time communicated to you.

We propose to set out on our journey to-morrow morning, and to be at Amboy on Wednesday about nine o'clock, where we should be glad to meet a line from your Lordship, appointing the time and place of meeting. If it would be agreeable to your Lordship, we apprehend that either at the house on Staten-Island opposite to Amboy, or at the Governour's house in Amboy, we might be accommodated with a room for the purpose.

With the greatest esteem and respect I have the honour to be, my Lord, &c.,

B. FRANKLIN.

To Lord Howe.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN LONDON BY WAY OF NANTZ, DATED PHILADELPHIA, SEPTEMBER 8, 1776.

The defeat of the Provincial forces at Long-Island was in a great measure owing to the bad conduct of Lord Stirling, who neglected sending a proper force for the defence of the heights above Flatbush, and by that means afforded General Howe an opportunity of showing his superiour generalship, in surrounding their lines, instead of attacking them in front as was expected. Only one battalion of Rangers, under the command of Colonel Trail, was left to defend the pass on the road to Jamaica Plain, where the grand attack was made. That young officer for a long time made head against the whole force of General Clinton's body of Infantry; but as no support was sent him, after losing two thirds of his men, and being dangerously wounded himself, he made good his retreat and joined General Putnam at Brooklyn. General Sullivan, Colonel Smith, and Major Guy, behaved with great bravery.

General Washington is at King's Bridge; the grand army under his command consists of about thirty-three thousand men. Lee is ordered by the Congress to make an attack upon St. Augustine. Every prospect of a reconciliation is at an end.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, September 8, 1776, Present: William Atlee, Mathias Slough, Adam Reigart, William Bowsman, Michael Musser, John Miller, George Moore, and Henry Dehuff. William Atlee in the Chair.

Resolved, That Captain Zantzinger's, Captain Boyd's, and Captain Musser's Companies be taken into pay as Guards under the direction of the Committee, for the ensuing month, and that the publick Arms in the hands of the other Captains and Officers and Privates of Colonel Ross's Battalion, who have heretofore done duty as Town-Guards, be taken by Colonel Reigart into his care and distributed to the Captains Zantzinger, Boyd, and Musser, to put into the hands of their Companies as Guards, and that the apprentices, gunsmiths, lockmakers, and such persons as are employed at the works at the Barracks, and belong to those Companies, be excused from duty as Town Guard, and be called upon only as Associators on the appointed days of exercise until further orders.

WILLIAM TRENT TO JACOB S. HOWELL.

Trenton, September 8, 1776.

SIR: By the bearer I have sent you two samples of sulphur ore, the largest piece which is part of a ball I got from Mr. Van Swearingham, tavern-keeper at Middletown, on the road that leads from Hagerstown to Fredericktown, in Maryland; the other comes from the Ohio. If either of them are of value enough to make the mines worth inquiring after, Mr. Van Swearingham can inform you of the place where the first was got, and I can give directions to find the mine the other was taken from.

On a plantation of one Adam Small, a Dutchman, near the Red-House on the road leading from the mouth of Cornicocheque to Winchester, are plenty of black flint-stones. Several hunters who have made flints for their guns of them, say they are very good. If flints are wanted for present use, I am informed there are stones which were brought for ballast and unloaded at Moles' Point, Petapasco Landing, sufficient to make flints to last the army several years.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM TRENT.

To Jacob S. Howell, Secretary to the Committee of Safety, in Philadelphia.

In Council of Safety, Philadelphia, September 8, 1776.

This Board being informed that the publick stock of Flints is nearly expended, they therefore refer this letter to the Board of War, which has that matter immediately under their care. By order of Council:

THOS. WHARTON, JUN., President.

COLONEL CLEMENT BIDDLE TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Perth-Amboy, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I find the troops here begin to want many necessaries that they will suffer for want of unless speedily supplied. Blankets will be much wanted. I have delivered out a number which I received from the Council of Safety of Pennsylvania, and have taken the order of the commanding officers of the battalions with receipts to be accountable for them. I beg to be instructed whether the blankets are to be paid for or not by the Flying-Camp.

The other articles which begin to be much wanted, are shoes, stockings, warm jackets, breeches, and shirts, and I would get a good number of them if I had orders, and that the Colonel or Commanding officers of the Flying-Camp were to stop the amount of what necessaries they took up from the men's pay. I would not proceed farther than I have done from the necessity in this business, until I could receive the directions of the honourable Congress or of the Board of War on this subject. I beg you will lay this before your Board, that I may receive their directions herein.

I have ordered Mr. Risberg, A. D. Q. M. G., to apply to you when necessary in my department, and beg the favour of your assistance to him.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

CLEMENT BIDDLE, D. Q. M. G.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary of War Office, at Philadelphia.

Colonel Miles's troops lost chief of their blankets. I have sent a number forward to supply them, but have few now left.

COLONEL GRIFFIN TO THE BOARD OF WAR.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I have enclosed a return of the army in the Jerseys, as also a list of the prisoners taken at Long-Island by General Howe's army. You will please have it published, in order that the friends of the gentlemen may send them such things as they think necessary.

We find, by a resolution of your Convention, they have ordered all the Militia to march to this place, whether armed or unarmed. It has been an exceeding ill-advised plan, as we have not one hundred stand of arms in our stores; nor would we give them to Militia if we had a much larger number. I hope in a few days we shall have enough of the Flying-Camp, with the Jersey Militia, to prevent the enemy from making any incursions on the Jersey side, so that we shall be able to dismiss the whole of the Pennsylvania Associators.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

SAML. GRIFFIN.

To Richard Peters, Esq., Secretary to the Board of War, at Philadelphia.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 10th September.]

New-York, Head-Quarters, September 8, 1776.

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you on the 6th, I have called a council of the General Officers, in order to take a full and comprehensive view of our situation, and thereupon form such a plan of future defence as may be immediately pursued, and subject to no other alteration than a change of operations on the enemy's side may occasion.

Before the landing of the enemy on Long-Island, the point of attack could not be known, or any satisfactory judgment formed of their intentions. It might be on Long-Island, on Bergen, or directly on the city. This made it necessary to be prepared for each, and has occasioned an expense of labour which now seems useless, and is regretted by those who form a judgment from after-knowledge. But I trust men of discernment will think differently, and see that by such works and preparations we have not only delayed the operations of the campaign till it is too late to effect any capital invasion into the country, but have drawn the enemy's forces to one point, and obliged them to decline their plan, so as to enable us to form our defence on some certainty.

It is now extremely obvious from all intelligence, from their movements, and every other circumstance, that, having landed their whole army on Long-Island, (except about four thousand on Staten-Island.) they mean to enclose us on the Island of New-York, by taking post in our rear, while the shipping effectually secure the front; and thus, either by cutting off our communication with the country, oblige us to fight them on their own terms or surrender at discretion, or, by a brilliant stroke, endeavour to cut this army in pieces, and secure the collection of arms and stores, which they well know we shall not be able soon to replace.

Having therefore their system unfolded to us, it became an important consideration how it could be most successfully opposed. On every side there is a choice of difficulties, and every measure on our part (however painful the reflection is from experience) to be formed with some apprehension that all our troops will not do their duty. In deliberating on this great question, it was impossible to forget that history, our own experience, the advice of our ablest friends in Europe, the fears of the enemy, and even the declarations of Congress, demonstrate that, on our side, the war should be defensive (it has been even called a war of posts;) that we should, on all occasions, avoid a general action, or put anything to the risk, unless compelled by a necessity into which we ought never to be drawn. The arguments upon which such a system was founded were deemed unanswerable; and experience has given her sanction. With these views, and being fully persuaded that it would be presumption to draw out our young troops into open ground, against their superiours, both in number and discipline, I have never spared the spade and pick-axe. I confess I have not found that readiness to defend even strong posts, at all hazards, which is necessary to derive the greatest benefit from them. The honour of making a brave defence does not seem to be a sufficient stimulus when the success is very doubtful, and the falling into the enemy's hands probable; but I doubt not this will be gradually attained.

We are now in a strong post, but not an impregnable one; nay, acknowledged by every man of judgment to be untenable, unless the enemy will make the attack upon our lines when they can avoid it; and their movements indicate that they mean to do so. To draw the whole army together, in order to arrange the defence proportionate to the extent of lines and works, would leave the country open for an approach, and put the fate of this army and its stores on the hazard of making a successful defence in the city, or the issue of an engagement out of it. On the other hand, to abandon a city which has been by some deemed defensible, and on whose works much labour has been bestowed, has a tendency to dispirit the troops and enfeeble our cause. It has also been considered as the key to the northern country; but, as to that, I am fully of opinion that the establishing strong posts at Mount Washington, on the upper part of this Island, and on the Jersey side opposite to it, with the assistance of the obstructions already made, and which may be improved, in the water, that not only the navigation of Hudson's River, but an easier and better communication, may be more effectually secured between the northern and southern States. This I believe every one acquainted with the situation of the country will readily agree to, and will appear evident to those who have an opportunity of recurring to good maps. These, and many other consequences which will be involved in the determination of our next measure, have given our men full employ, and led every one to form a judgment of the various objects presenting themselves to his view.

The post at King's Bridge is naturally strong, and is well fortified. The heights about it are commanding, and might soon be made more so. These are important objects, and I have attended to them accordingly. I have also removed from the city all the stores and ammunition, except what was absolutely necessary for its defence, and made every other disposition that did not essentially interfere with that object—carefully keeping in view, until it should be absolutely determined, on full consideration, how far the city was to be defended at all events. In resolving points of such importance, many circumstances peculiar to our own army also occur. Being only provided for a Summer's campaign, their clothes, shoes, and blankets will soon be unfit for the change of weather which we every day feel. At present we have not tents for more than two-thirds—many of them old and worn-out; but if we had a plentiful supply, the season will not admit of continuing in them long. The case of our sick is also worthy of much consideration. Their number, in the returns, forms at least one-fourth of the army. Policy and humanity require they should be made as comfortable as possible.

With these and many other circumstances before them, the whole council of General Officers met yesterday, in order to adopt some general line of conduct to be pursued at this important crisis. I intended to have procured their separate opinions on each point, but time would not admit. I was therefore obliged to collect their sense more generally than I could have wished. All agreed the town would not be tenable if the enemy resolved to bombard and cannonade it; but the difficulty attending a removal operated so strongly, that a course was taken between abandoning it totally and concentrating our whole strength for its defence. Nor were some a little influenced in their opinion, to whom the determination of Congress was known, against an evacuation totally, as they were led to suspect Congress wished it to be maintained at every hazard. It was concluded to arrange the army under three divisions: five thousand to remain for the defence of the city; nine thousand to King's Bridge and its dependencies, as well to possess and secure those posts as to be ready to attack the enemy, who are moving eastward on Long-Island, if they should attempt to land on this side; the remainder to occupy the intermediate space, and support either. That the sick should be immediately removed to Orangetown, and barracks prepared at King's Bridge, with all expedition, to cover the troops.

There were some General Officers, in whose judgment and opinion much confidence is to be reposed, that were for a total and immediate removal from the city, urging the great danger of one part of the army being cut off before the other can support it—the extremities being at least sixteen miles apart; that our army, when collected, is inferior to the enemy; that they can move, with their whole force, to any point of attack, and, consequently, must succeed by weight of numbers if they have only a part to oppose them; that by removing from hence we deprive the enemy of the advantage of their ships, which will make at least one-half of the force to attack the town; that we should keep the enemy at bay—put nothing to the hazard—but, at all events, keep the army together, which may be recruited another year; that the unspent stores will also be preserved; and in this case, the heavy artillery can also be secured. But they were overruled by a majority, who thought, for the present a part of our force might be kept here, and attempt to maintain the city a while longer.

I am sensible a retreating army is encircled with difficulties; that the declining an engagement subjects a General to reproach; and that the common cause may be affected by the discouragement it may throw over the minds of many. Nor am I insensible of the contrary effects, if a brilliant stroke could be made with any probability of success, especially after our loss upon Long-Island. But when the fate of America may be at an issue—when the wisdom of cooler moments and experienced men have decided that we should protract the war, if possible—I cannot think it safe or wise to adopt a different system, when the season for action draws so near a close. That the enemy mean to winter in New-York, there can be no doubt; that with such an armament they can drive us out, is equally clear. The Congress having resolved that it should not be destroyed, nothing seems to remain but to determine the time of their taking possession. It is our interest and wish to prolong it as much as possible, provided the delay does not affect our future measures.

The Militia of Connecticut is reduced from six thousand to less than two thousand, and in a few days will be merely nominal. The arrival of some Maryland troops, &c., from the Flying-Camp, has, in a great degree, supplied the loss of men; but the ammunition they have carried away will be a loss sensibly felt. The impulse for going home was so irresistible, it answered no purpose to oppose it. Though I would not discharge, I have been obliged to acquiesce; and it affords one more melancholy proof, how delusive such dependencies are.

Enclosed I have the honour to transmit a general return, the first I have been able to procure for some time; also, a report of Captain Newell, from our works at Horn's Hook or Hell-Gate. Their situation is extremely low, and the Sound so very narrow, that the enemy have 'em much within their command.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the President of Congress.

P. S. The enclosed information this moment came to hand. I am in hopes we shall henceforth get regular intelligence of the enemy's movements.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 7, 1776.

(Parole, Temple.)

(Countersign, Liberty.)

John Davis, of Captain Hamilton's Company of Artillery, tried by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Malcom was President, was convicted of "Desertion," and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes.

Levi Webster, of Captain Hyde's Company, Colonel Wyll's Regiment, convicted by the same Court-Martial of the same offence, sentenced to the same punishment.

The General approves the sentences, and orders them to be executed, on the Regimental Parade, at the usual hour in the morning.

A Court-Martial consisting of a Commandant of a Brigade, two Colonels, two Lieutenant-Colonels, two Majors, and six Captains, to sit to-morrow, at Mrs. Montagnie's, to try Major Post, of Colonel Kachlein's Regiment, for cowardice, in running away from Long-Island when an alarm was given of the approach of the enemy. The same Court-Martial also to try John Spanzenbury, Adjutant of the same Regiment, for the same offence, and likewise Lieutenant Peter Zachlein.

Benjamin Stone appointed Quartermaster, William Adams appointed Paymaster, Nathaniel Webb, Adjutant of Colonel Durkee's Regiment. Daniel Tilden, Esq., to do duty as Captain, till further orders.

Richard Sill appointed Paymaster to Colonel Tyler's Regiment.

Major Lee is desired to do the duty of Brigade-Major in Major Henly's stead, till an appointment is made.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 8, 1776.

(Parole, Grayson.)

(Countersign, Tughman.)

Alexander McIntire, of Captain Newall's Company, James Butler, of Captain Dalley's Company, and John Knowlton, of Captain Maxwell's Company, all of Colonel Prescott's Regiment, tried by a Court-Martial whereof Colonel Malcom was President, and acquitted of "plundering a letter belonging to a citizen of New-York; each ordered to be discharged and join their regiments.

Ames Reed, Corporal in Captain Van Cleaver's Company, Regiment late Colonel Johnson's, tried by the same Court-Martial, and convicted of "speaking disrespectfully and villifying the Commander-in-Chief," sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes, at different days successively, thirteen each day, and reduced to the ranks.

John Lillie, of Colonel Knox's Regiment of Artillery, Captain Hamilton's Company, convicted by the same Court-Martial of "abusing Adjutant Henly, and striking him," ordered to receive thirty-nine lashes in the same manner.

The General approves the above sentences, and orders them to be put in execution at the usual time and place.

The General directs that in future, in case of any soldier detected in plundering, the Brigadier-General, or Colonel, or Commanding Officer of the Regiment, immediately call a Court-Martial, and have the offenders tried and punished without delay.

[No. 1.]

Sunday Morning, 9 o'clock.

SIR: I would inform you that the enemy has opened two three-gun batteries, and have at least four royals, and have very much damaged two platforms, and the breastworks are very much shattered. They have also broke our limbers. They have sent a shot through one of our large carriages. One of Colonel Sargent's regiment is killed, and two or three wounded; but we have none lost or wounded. They continue to keep up a very severe bombardment and cannonade. Their ordnance is twelve and twenty-four pounders. I should think it necessary that there should be carpenters sent here to repair platforms.

ELIPHELET NEWELL, Captain.

To Colonel Henry Knox.

P. S. We can bring but two guns to bear upon them.

[No. 2.]

New-Rotchel, September 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We have sent one Samuel Hunt, on Long-Island, a young man I think will answer every purpose he is sent after. It is uncertain when he will return; but this evening there is one Mr. Sands to be over, who can give us a particular account. There was one Mr. Tredwell, and another person from Goshen, in Orange County, the latter unknown to me, across here four or five days ago. Mr. Tredwell is a disaffected person, and all his friends live on Long-Island. I understand that his brothers are warmly engaged against us, and I am well persuaded he will go through the whole of their camps. He is expected over every hour. I have secured the horses, and intend to secure them, put them apart, and bring them to you, as soon as they cross. We will be able to get all we want from them. The news collected since I saw you, is, that the main body of their army is at Newtown, and Lord Howe keeps that as Head-Quarters; that all the wagons, as far eastward as they have been able to go, are pressed and carried to Newtown, and that every horse fit for the troop is pressed and taken away from their proper owners, without any respect of persons. They talk of raising three regiments—one to be a regiment of Rangers, to be commanded by Major Robert Rogers—and if the people will not turn out volunteers, they will draft them. They had their general muster yesterday, but raised no recruits on account of the weather; at which meeting they agreed to keep but two sentries on Cow-Neck—one at Long-Point, and the other at Watch-Point—which makes it safe to cross. It is said there are three regiments at Flushing, one at Jamaica.

From your humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL, Colonel.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have lately received information, on which I can in some measure rely, that it is impracticable for carriages to pass from Harlem-Point, or any of the landing-places contiguous to it, towards King's Bridge, any other way than along the publick roads. I should therefore conceive it would be highly expedient to throw every impediment and obstruction in the ways leading from the above mentioned places, as also in the roads leading from Morris- sania, and Delancy's Mills, and indeed any other which you conceive there is a probability of the enemy's making use of, in order to prevent, or at least delay them, in the conveyance of their artillery. In some places it may be necessary to fell trees across the roads; in others I would recommend deep pits to be dug. In short, I must request you will have them broke up and destroyed in such a manner as to render them utterly impassable.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Heath.

P. S. I mean those roads within your district leading from King's Bridge down to the points on which it is supposed the enemy will land.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I have received your letter by General Roberdeau, of the 7th of September, and am sorry to hear of your indisposition, which, however, I hope will in a short time be removed. There has nothing very critical passed in this quarter since you were here; still matters wear so critical an aspect that I have determined to call over Colonel Ward's regiment from the post opposite Mount Washington; you will therefore be pleased to detach so many of the troops under your command as will make up this deficiency, and still keep General Ewing's complement of fifteen hundred men entire. Notwithstanding this assistance, I shall still stand in need of two or three thousand men to reinforce the posts here, and am anxious for the arrival of the Maryland and Virginia troops, which are on their march to this place. I shall be glad you will immediately inform me by express where they are, and when I may with certainty expect them. I could wish they were pushed forward with all possible expedition. General Roberdeau will communicate to you the result of the Council; also any other things material which are not mentioned in this letter.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Mercer, New-Jersey.

P. S. I desire you will direct the engineer to expedite the works, to the utmost of his abilities, which are necessary for the defence of General Ewing's post.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL JAMES CLINTON.

New-York, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I have this day wrote to the President of the Convention of New-York, requesting that an aid of six hundred Militia may be sent to you from the Counties of Ulster and Orange, or any other that is more proper and convenient, for the purpose of assisting you, either in the defence of the Highlands, in case they should be attacked, or of constructing new works and fortifications by which they may be rendered more secure. However, whether you receive this reinforcement or not, I must entreat you in the strongest manner to exert yourself to the utmost of your abilities in making those two posts at the Highlands as defensible as possible. Their great importance must be obvious to every person.

I am, sir, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General James Clinton, Fort Montgomery.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I have just received the resolve of your Convention, respecting the removal of the bells belonging to the different churches and publick edifices in this city to Newark, in the Province of New-Jersey. The measure I highly approve of, and shall accordingly have it carried into execution.

I have lately been conversing with General Clinton concerning the defence of the forts in the Highlands, who agrees with me in sentiment that the force already there is by no means sufficient. I should therefore conceive it would be greatly in advancement of the service, if you would cause a reinforcement of Militia, amounting to about six hundred men, to be sent there from the Counties of Ulster and Orange, or any other that may be most proper and convenient. They may be usefully and importantly employed, as well in defence of the Highlands, in case they should be attacked, as in erecting new works and fortifications by which they may be rendered more secure.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

New-York, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I wrote you this morning by your express, but forgot to mention a matter of consequence. It being determined to remove our sick to Orange-Town, we shall want four large Albany sloops for that purpose. The fatigue of travelling that distance by land would not only be more than the patients could bear, but we have full employ for our wagons in transporting baggage, tents, &c., for the troops from hence to our own posts. I must therefore beg the favour of your honourable body to procure the above number of vessels, and send them down with as much despatch as possible to this city.

I am, with respect, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

P. S. I shall be glad to know, by return of the express, when I may probably expect the sloops down. There are several now on the lower parts of the river with boards; perhaps you might engage them to come this day, which would save time.

GENERAL GREENE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 13th.]

Camp at New-York, September 8, 1776.

SIR: This will be handed you by Captain Sion Martindale and Lieutenant Moses Turner, that were taken in the brig Washington, in Boston Bay, last Fall. They were sent home prisoners to England and ordered back to Halifax, where they were confined in gaol for some time; at last they found means to cut a passage out, and made their escape, and have got safe home. There is one Lieutenant Child, that was made prisoner with them, and made his escape at the same time the others did. They apply to Congress for their wages and rations due during their captivity. They also apply for an allowance for the losses they met with, and for several advancements they made for the brig Washington and the crew, during the time they were fitting for the cruise; all which, doubtless, the Congress will take under consideration, and grant what justice and equity entitle them to. They all belonged to the Rhode-Island regiments, and while they were under my command, they discharged their duty as became good and faithful officers. How they behaved after they entered on board the brig Washington, I am not able to say. They are men who have families, and no means of support for them but their industry.

I am, with due respect, your obedient servant,

NATHANAEL GREENE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Continental Congress, at Philadelphia.

Red-Hook, August 23, 1776.

I do hereby certify that Captain Sion Martindale, who commanded and was taken prisoner off Plymouth, in the brig Washington, was arranged in the Ninth Regiment, under my command; that during the time of his captivity, the place was considered vacant, and filled, by which means he lost his promotion to the rank and command of a field officer, which, from the casualties of the regiment, would have been his right. J. N. VARNUM, Colonel 9th Regiment.

To all whom it may concern.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, September 8, 1776.

SIR: Since I was honoured with the resolve of Convention of the 3d instant, respecting Colonels Benson's and Smith's regiments, I have used every means in my power to discover the situation of those troops, and join them (if possible) to my brigade. I find them much dispersed—many (leaving their arms behind, as is said) having gone over to Long-Island and are not yet returned; where the Colonels and most of the other officers are, I have not yet been able to discover. Captain Tour, of Colonel Smith's, and Lieutenant Hobart, of Benson's regiment, only, have been with me; they promised to collect all the men they could find and join me, though at the same time they were very apprehensive of difficulties arising from Smith's regiment being inlisted not to go off the Island, and Benson's till the 1st of September only. I doubt not, however, but they will use their best endeavours. Some few of the men of both regiments are strolling about Westchester and New-Rochelle.

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

By the enclosed return of my brigade, you will observe that there are wanting to complete five hundred and ninety-six men; that this deficiency principally arises from the different Militia regiments not having furnished their quotas—from desertions, which latter have been so frequent that unless some effectual method can be devised to prevent in future, not only my brigade, but the whole army, will be much injured if not ruined. If I am rightly informed, the Militia regiments drafted their full numbers; but, having drafted them, never took the proper steps to make them join their companies, and now suffer them as well as deserters to go at large openly among them about their ordinary business, without apprehending and sending them back. I know it is my duty as well as the duty of every other officer in the service, to cause deserters to be apprehended; but it is also the duty of every friend to his country, and more particularly so of members of Committees and officers of Militia. They can do it without injuring the publick service in any degree. I can't: if I send officers and parties of faithful men after them, I thereby weaken the army. The deserters hear of them in their neighbourhood—their business—and, I am sorry to add, are too frequently aided in evading my guard. I wish the companies raised in Dutchess and Westchester, and put under the direction of the Committees of those Counties, might have it in special charge from your honourable body to apprehend and send back deserters in their respective Counties—the extra expense attending which could easily, and with justice, be defrayed out of such deserters' pay. I now enclose a list of Dutchess County deserters, and as soon as I can obtain a list of those from Colonel Thomson's regiment, I will (if approved by the Convention) forward it to Captain Townsend.

I beg leave to lay before you a petition I just now received from Colonels Grahame, Hopkins, and others, respecting the Surgeon of their regiment, which ought (in my opinion) to have been addressed to you in the first instance, the Convention only having power to redress the complainant.

I have confined one William Mahony, of Fishkill Landing, in the main guard, for seducing a soldier from his duty in the city, bringing him up here and endeavouring to pass him by our guards at King's Bridge, and thereby enable him to desert. Mahony confesses the soldier worked as a journeyman with him six weeks before he inlisted; that he knew he afterward inlisted, yet though I offered to release him if he would tell the soldier's name, the company and regiment he belongs to, (which I have the greatest reason to believe is in his power,) he will give me no other satisfaction than that the soldier's name is Riley; and from Mahony's conduct, I am induced to think the soldier, notwithstanding our guards did not suffer him to pass the bridges, has escaped by crossing the river some other way.

I also enclose examination taken against one Tippet, of this neighbourhood, who is also confined in our main guard by some of my officers, for the crime therein particularly mentioned, which is (in my opinion) of the most dangerous nature, and has been too much practised, and not without effect, by the disaffected, since the retreat from Long-Island, which is given out by them as a total defeat. I am extremely unhappy in being obliged to deprive any man of personal liberty but by due course of law; but in the above cases I flatter myself the Convention will justify me till I can have their directions, which shall be faithfully pursued on every occasion.

Nothing very material has occurred since my last. From the best information we have had, the main body of the enemy lie at Newtown and Bedford. Their guards on the Island extend to the Neck, east of White-Stone. The Highlanders are in that quarter. It is said they have impressed from one thousand to fifteen hundred teems to carry across their boats and baggage, and they are erecting a battery opposite Horn's Hook, and heavy cannonade was heard all last night at or near that place, which continued till about seven o'clock this morning. I have not yet heard the particulars, but believe it was from our people against the enemy's new works; perhaps it was reciprocal.

From the disposition of the enemy's army and their delay, I imagine they intend attacking us in two or three different quarters; and I think it more than probable that their grand aim is to hem in our army and cut off our communication with the country, in which case this division of our army, were it possible, should be augmented. It ought to be considered they hem us in by water on three sides. The distance across up as far as Maw-Neck, between the two rivers, don't much exceed twelve miles, though I hope their shipping won't be able to pass Fort Washington; but this is very uncertain. I mention these matters to show the necessity of the Militia holding themselves in the most perfect readiness. For should the enemy attempt anything of this kind so high up, it will be of the utmost consequence to fight and vanquish them before they have time to throw up any works whatever.

My Brigade-Major, Pawling, who has served in that character ever since the brigade was formed, is without a commission, which is the case also with many others of the officers, who express uneasiness on that score. I wish some method could be fallen upon to grant them their commissions. I fear confusion may arise for want of an arrangement of the Field Officers; every Colonel claims seniority. I have taken some pains to settle their respective ranks, but without effect. I most earnestly wish the Convention would give me some directions in this respect, and point out how it is to be done.

Lieutenant-Colonel Ferris is now with me; he complains of being troubled with an old settled disorder in his head, which at present is so violent as to render him unfit for duty. I believe he is a good man, and acts from principle. He means to ask the Convention to supply his place until a return of health, which he hopes will take place on retiring a short time from the noise of the camp.

I am just informed that there are many disaffected persons near the Sound and East River, possessed of large stocks of cattle; that they neglect driving them back, and refuse to part with them to the Commissary at the ordinary prices. It is more than probable they will fall into the hands of the enemy, (where I believe the owners wish them,) unless some proper measures are speedily taken to prevent it.

I am, with the highest esteem, your most obedient servant,
GEORGE CLINTON.

To the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

P. S. The cannonading was from the enemy's new battery against ours at Horn's Hook. I hear one of their shells killed one and wounded three men, but did no other damage.

JAMES WILLIAM PAYNE TO ROBERT BENSON.

Westchester, September 8, 1776.

SIR: On my first arrival from Canada, I made application to the honourable Convention to get in the Artillery service, a department which I rather choose to serve in, as I made it my study early, and having the charge of all the ordnance in the first campaign against Canada, I acquired a tolerable knowledge in the practical part; but there being no vacancies, I could not be provided for, and since my return home have been in a bad state of health, in consequence of the violent fatigues I suffered in Canada.

A few days ago I applied to his Excellency General Washington, laying before him my grievances, that I had just fled from Long-Island, leaving my family behind prisoners, having only time to escape with the clothes on my back. His Excellency desired I would write to the honourable Convention, where there were members who know my family and character; by their recommendation he would immediately provide for me, as I embarked very early in defending the rights of America by every means in my power, and shall ever be actuated by the same principles in preserving the freedom of my country. I make no doubt those gentlemen of the Convention who are acquainted with me, will take my distress in their immediate consideration. You will please to let this be presented to the House, and if from motives of humanity to my little family they choose to write to his Excellency on the occasion, they will as soon as possible; which shall always be gratefully acknowledged by their most obedient humble servant,

JAMES WM. PAYNE.

To Robert Benson, Esq., Secretary to the Convention of New-York, at Fishkill.

LIEUTENANT SAYRE TO GENERAL HEATH.

Westchester, September 8, 1776.

SIR: There seems to be a movement of the enemy; there is a tender moved from the man-of-war to the brig, and has taken all the small crafts along the shore, and the officer of the party sent one of my sentries in order to go to Colonel Hand, and I thought it proper to give your Honour notice.

From your humble servant,

JAMES SAYRE, Lieutenant.

STANDARD OF THE THIRTEENTH REGIMENT.

Ground, Light Buff. Device, Pine-Tree and field of Indian Corn, (emblematical of New-England fields.) Two Officers in the uniform of the Regiment, one of them wounded in the breast, the blood streaming from the wound. Under the pine several children, one of the officers pointing to them, with the motto, "For posterity I bleed."

GENERAL NIXON TO GENERAL HEATH.

MY DEAR SIR: You have no doubt observed that the enemy decamped last night from the Heights to the northward of Flushing Bay. About three or four regiments are now encamping on the hill to the westward of the Bay, and opposite to the Island which forms Hell-Gate. Whether this body is that which decamped, or one marched from Newtown, we cannot determine. Certain it is, their movements indicate an intention to land near you or at Harlem. Four boats were sounding the channel a few minutes since, between Little Hell-Gate and the opening to Harlem. These appearances render it necessary that post should be taken on Morris's Hill this night, for reasons too obvious to be mentioned. If you have strength to do it with the troops marched up to-day, would it not be proper to be done? If you have not strength, (of which advise us,) we will post some regiments there to-night; although it will weaken the middle division, if a landing should be made below this evening. Whatever may be your determination, pray advise us of it in time.

I have the honour to be your humble servant,

JNO. NIXON, Brigadier-General.

To the Hon. General Heath or General Mifflin.

COLONEL NICOLL TO GENERAL HEATH.

New-Rotchel, September 8, 1776.

DEAR SIR: We have sent one Samuel Hunt on Long-Island, a young man I think will answer every purpose he is sent after. It is uncertain when he will return; but this evening there is one Mr. Sands to be over, who can give us a particular account. I understand that his brothers are warmly engaged against us, and I am well persuaded he will go through the whole of their camps; he is expected over every hour. I have secured the horses and intend to secure them, put them apart, and bring them to you as soon as they cross, as we will be able to get all we want from them. The news collected since I saw you, is, that the main body of their army is at Newtown, and Lord Howe keeps that as Head-Quarters; that all the wagons as far eastward as

From your humble servant,

ISAAC NICOLL, Colonel.

To Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge; or in his absence, to Brigadier-General George Clinton.

RECOMMENDATION OF MAJOR GRAY.

Camp, White-Plains, September 8, 1776.

We, the subscribers, from a knowledge of Major Gray's abilities and integrity, and out of a regard for the good of the service, would recommend Major Gray to the Commissary-General's berth in the Northern Department, as a person every way qualified for it, and one who has great merit for his exertions last campaign in that quarter; and who, we make no doubt, will discharge the functions of that office with fidelity to the publick, honour to himself, and to the satisfaction of the troops who are on the way to be stationed there.

ENOCH POOR, Brigadier-General.

JNO. NIXON, Brigadier-General.

JNO. PATERSON, Brigadier-General.

ALEXANDER SCAMMEL, Brigadier-General.

JS. BALDWIN, Engineer.

SAML. COULTON, Lieut. Colonel Commandant.

To B. Arnold, Major-General.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read 13th September. Referred to Board of War.]

Albany, September 8, 1776.

SIR: I did myself the honour to address Congress in a letter of the 16th August. As I humbly conceive Congress could have decided on that part of it which respected my disagreeable situation with very little interruption to those momentous concerns of the publick which claim their attention, I have reason to believe that either my letter or the answer to it has miscarried; and as the calumny against me daily increases, I take the liberty to enclose a copy of that letter, and again request that a committee or court may be instituted to inquire into every part of my conduct since I have been honoured with the command in the Northern Department; for, however little the publick may be interested, it is of some moment to a man conscious of the rectitude of his conduct, that he should be justified and his character cleared from aspersions that may involve him and his family, in this jealous day, into a variety of difficulties.

In obedience to the resolutions of Congress of the 6th July, I have stated the late General Montgomery's accounts as far as I was capable to do it, with the papers transmitted to me from Canada by General Wooster; amongst which there is not any book or memorandum in which it is noted what money the deceased General received either from me or any other person. I have, therefore, only charged what money he received from or through me, and struck the balance, against which is to be put the money he received in Canada from Mr. Price, or others; and what that is, may probably be determined by Congress. Copy of the General's account of disbursements I lodged in the pay-office here; and I believe most, if not all, that was advanced as pay to officers and soldiers is stopped by the Paymaster-General; but I believe very little of that for contingent expenses is yet accounted for.

When I received General Montgomery's papers, I caused my Secretary and Assistant Secretary to open, examine, and make schedules of them, as you will see by their certificates endorsed.

As the Commissioners appointed to settle accounts in this department are not furnished with copies or abstracts of disbursements made by the several commanders in Canada, and by Mr. Price and others, they will find it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to liquidate the various accounts that will become the subject of their inspection. They should also be furnished with what money sent me by Congress, and which I stand charged with, and with what has been sent to the Paymaster-General in this department; for although I can give credit for what I have received, yet that may not be satisfactory to them. I have mentioned this to the gentlemen that are here, (Mr. Wells and Mr. Carter,) and desired them to apply for the necessary papers.

Every kind of clothing for the army, but shoes and stockings especially, are so absolutely necessary, and such great demands are daily made for them, that a mode of supply claims the most early attention. Could not yarn socks, to rise as high as the ankle, be procured in Pennsylvania? The leg-part might be supplied with Indian stockings, which, as they are much more lasting and more comfortable for the men in cold weather, would ultimately be cheaper.

As the publick labours under such difficulty for a supply of shoes, and that the demand will increase in a future campaign, perhaps Congress may think proper to appoint persons to erect a tan-yard in some part of the country where the materials for tanning can be most handily procured, and to which the hides from both armies in this Colony can be the easiest and most expeditiously conveyed. This, though perhaps not the cheapest mode of supplying the army, would, I conceive, be the most effectual.

General Trumbull has sent to the amount of £2,206 6s. lawful, in clothing, to the Northern Army, and was trying to procure more, as also tents for the troops. He has desired me to advise Congress of this.

The season advances so fast that it is time to think of preparing the Winter quarters for such troops as are not to be kept in garrison. The commander in this department should be advised of the intentions of Congress on this head the soonest possible, that barracks may be prepared at such places as Congress may direct, and magazines of fuel, straw, &c., provided in time. Perhaps it would be best not to canton the troops too far from Ticonderoga, as it may be supposed that an attempt will be made by the enemy in the course of the Winter on that post, or at least they will try to burn our navy in order to ensure their passage over the Lake in a future campaign. The barracks in this place will not contain above five hundred men, (if the Hospital is not occupied as a barrack, and I fear it will be wanted for the use of the sick.) If new ones are to be built, would it not be best to erect them in such parts of the country above, where the soldiers can at once have the advantage of purchasing vegetables, and where a plenty of firewood can be procured at a rate so easy as to make it an object worthy of attention, and where the materials for building are to be procured greatly cheaper than in town? Stillwater or Saratoga might be proper places. The amazing quantity of nails that were necessary for so many batteaus and vessels as we have built, has most effectually drained the country of that indispensably necessary article. All we can now get are from the blacksmiths, at a most immoderate price. I wish to have a quantity sent by way of Hackinsack to Hudson's River, and forwarded as soon as possible to this place. A very considerable quantity of glass will also be wanted, and cannot be procured anywhere nearer than Philadelphia.

As there is no appointment of a Deputy Adjutant-General in this department, Colonel John Trumbull now acts as such under a temporary appointment of General Gates. As he is active, discreet, and sensible, I beg leave to recommend him to Congress to be confirmed in that post.

The originals of the enclosed from Colonel Dayton came to hand on the 6th instant. I have requested the Committee of this County to order all the Militia to march into Tryon County; but before they can be ready, I expect further information from Colonel Dayton.

I have requested a further supply of ammunition from General Washington, which I shall soon have if he can spare any; but lest he should not have any to send, I must entreat Congress to forward both powder and ball in considerable quantities.

Since writing the above, a letter from General Gates, of the 5th instant, is come to hand. He observes that "as the fleet is large and mounts a number of cannon, and the body of troops here very considerable, it is immediately necessary that fifteen tons of powder, ten of lead, with flints and cartridge-paper in proportion, should be sent to this post." I have not any of the articles here, and must entreat that they may be sent with all expedition. My Secretary and Aids-de-Camp have hitherto mustered the troops as they passed. I deferred making a temporary appointment, as I was in hopes Congress would have sent a muster-master; but the necessity is now so pressing that I have requested General Gates to appoint one if he can find a person fit for it; if not, to advise me thereof, and I would try to procure one here. Since I received the resolution of Congress that no officer should hold double commissions, I have attempted to procure a proper person to reside at Fort George as an Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General in the room of Lieutenant-Colonel Buel, (of Burrell's,) who was appointed one last Spring; but I have not yet succeeded. Persons fit for such employments, where judgment and activity are both so essentially necessary, are not easily procured, especially where so many of them are wanted. I mention this lest Congress should imagine that I had wilfully omitted obeying the resolution.

I am, sir, most respectfully, your obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To the President of Congress.

P. S. Colonel Dayton cannot be short of salt provisions, as he mentions, unless the Commissary at his post has made a false return. He has had a constant supply of fresh meat since his last return, copy whereof I now enclose.

Fort-Schuyler, September 4, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The enclosed is a message this minute received from Oneida by the hands of three warriors.

Yesterday about two o'clock in the morning, Sconondo, with another Indian of the Castle, arrived express with intelligence by a letter from Mr. Spencer, that a numerous army, chiefly of Indians, were that day to arrive at Oswego; but he advised me to suspend my operations until the return of an express despatched to Onondaga, to know the certainty of the rumour, where it seems it had originated. That express has not yet arrived, but the earnest anxiety of the Oneidas on the occasion causes me to despatch this message before the other arrives.

We are pretty well supplied with flour, but scant of salt provisions.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, very humble servant,
ELIAS DAYTON.

P. S. I have transmitted copies of the Oneida letter to the commanding officers at the Flats and Johnstown.

Oneida, September 4, 1776—morning.

SIR: News from Onondaga inform that there are seven hundred Indians and whites at Swagotche that will be at Oswego this day, and that there are parties out for destroying the inhabitants along the river, and they desire them to be on their guard. They are to come first to Stone Arabia and go down; and that there are particular parties designed to take Major Fonda and Colonel Harkman. The Indians here desire word may be sent with all speed down to the places exposed—the number unknown. They make five roads where they pass in the woods. The Onedages sent word to Conishelage, fourteen miles from hence, that they take care of three of their warriors that have lately come from Canada; they will not be stopped; they will strike whenever they see white people—first here; if they fail, your Fort is the next place. The Indians desire you to keep all your people within on account of those arrived at Oswego, and that you will not send white people for spies lest they meet with harm. This news did not come by the messengers sent Onedage two days past; they are not yet arrived; but was sent by two particular chiefs. Three head warriors from hence are going to meet those three villains, in order to turn them back. I am guarded by my neighbours at present, though I expect I shall not be able to stay here long, on account of private villains in the neighbouring towns, though I shall be advised by the Indians, who have undertaken to protect me.

Your humble servant,

THOMAS SPENCER.

To Colonel Dayton.

N. B. The party designed for Oswego are commanded by Walter Butler. I am at a loss whether they are yet arrived at Oswego or not. Great numbers will soon arrive after the above seven hundred at Oswego.

"BROTHER: We are threatened by those Indians coming to Oswego, on account we sit still and meddle not in the war. We expect to be struck by them. We think it is time to take care, and expect trouble from our enemies. It is the advice of the Onondagas so to do. We desire you will reinforce with all speed. We think there is occasion for more troops this way. We desire the Mohegan Indians in New-England may take their axe and come speedily to our assistance, as they agreed to do. We give our compliments to all the officers and great men, wherever this news may come, and that proper care may be taken that this our desire may be sent to the proper places for our speedy relief. The Chiefs met in council desire the above may be taken as their real sentiments.

"Present: Your humble servant,

"THOMAS SPENCER.

"To Colonel Dayton."

This is a true copy of a letter received this day from the Onondaga Chiefs, with a belt, by the hands of three of their warriors, written and signed, as in the copy, by Thomas Spencer.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 13. Referred to the Board of War.]

Albany, September 8, 1776.

SIR: Since sealing my letter of this day's date, Mr. Livingston, the Deputy Commissary-General, has informed me that he has sent his resignation to Congress. I am sorry for it, and wished to have him remain in the employment, as I am confident Congress will not be able to procure a person of more integrity or better qualified to discharge the duties of that office. It is a justice I owe him to observe, that he has not only acted as Commissary, but as Quartermaster, Storekeeper, and in every office in which he could promote the service, and if any person is entitled to an extra allowance, it is surely he. Some other person ought immediately to be appointed a Deputy Commissary-General in this department, for without such an officer we cannot possibly carry on the business with any degree of regularity.

You will be so good, sir, as to acknowledge the receipt of the despatches carried by the bearer, whom I wish should be sent back to me, with all possible despatch, and with such letters as Congress may please to honour me with.

I am, sir, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, September 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Yesterday I was honoured with your two favours of the 20th ultimo and 4th instant—the former by Mr. Pelissier, the latter by Mr. Allen. Mr. Pelissier will leave this for Tyonderoga to-morrow morning.

Notwithstanding the retreat from Long-Island, I am still in hopes that the enemy will not be able to accomplish their intentions, and that you will, in the end, reap those laurels which you so highly merit.

General Gates, in a letter just received from him, observes, "that as the fleet is large, and mounts a great number of cannon, and the body of troops here very considerable, it is immediately necessary that fifteen tons of powder, ten of lead, with flints and cartridge paper in proportion, should be sent to this post." I have taken the liberty to transmit this request directly to Congress, supposing that you would not be able to comply with it. Should I be mistaken, and your Excellency be able to order up any of these articles, you will please to advise Congress thereof.

By the enclosed papers, your Excellency will perceive that we are threatened with an enemy from the westward. I have requested the Committee of this County to order the Militia to march. They have directed half of the whole Militia of the County immediately to move to Tryon County, and I have requested General Gates to hold three regiments in readiness to march.

Colonel Dayton cannot be short of salt provisions as he mentions, unless the Commissary at his post has made a false return. He has had a constant supply of fresh meat since his last return, copy whereof I now enclose.

Enclose an account of what boards have gone from here. By comparing that with the account of what is received, the Quartermaster-General will know what number may be at Peck's-Hill, and on their way down. I shall order all to be sent that can be collected, but I fear they will be very considerable, as not many boards have been sawed lately.

My mills, that used to cut from forty to fifty thousand boards of fourteen feet long, have not cut one this year, as I was under a necessity of sending my oxen to the army. That has been the case with several others. Should you want timber for the buildings, I believe it might be procured here and sent down in sloops. Should you stand in need of small craft, to convey troops from one quarter to the other, they might be brought from Lake George. I believe fifty could be spared.

I am, dear sir, with the greatest esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To his Excellency General Washington, &c., &c.

P. S. I have advised Congress of the information given me by Colonel Dayton.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 5th instant was last night delivered to me. An hour or two before, I received a letter from General Washington, copy whereof you have enclosed.

I shall immediately try to procure as many ship carpenters as possible, and advise General Waterbury thereof.

Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars shall be sent you immediately.

I am sorry Mr. Avery cannot see the propriety of complying with my request. I have wrote the Commissary-General that I was pleased with his services, and had no reason to complain of his conduct, except in the instance of not making the returns as I directed. He will probably soon have the whole department to himself, and he will receive from me the same countenance and assistance which it is my duty to give Mr. Livingston whilst he is in employ, so long as I remain in the department.

I had already mentioned to Congress the necessity of a further supply of power and lead. I shall send an extract of your letter, and renew the request.

I have requested the Committee of this County to order the Militia to Tryon County. I have not heard from Colonel Dayton since mine to you of yesterday.

One company of seamen, twenty-six in number, will be here to-day and leave this to-morrow.

If Courts-Martial would severely punish officers for illiberal abuse against their superiours, such virulent and ill-founded complaints as you mention to be made by Lieutenant-Colonel Brown, against General Arnold, would soon cease. The latter gentleman will always be the subject of complaint, because his impartiality and candour will not suffer him to see impropriety of behaviour with impunity.

The resolution of Congress not to suffer officers to hold double commissions, distresses me much. I have attempted to procure a person to act as Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-General in the room of Colonel Buel, who is at Fort George, but cannot succeed. It is not an easy matter to get the variety of people we want, unless we take officers.

Is there any one with you, that is not an officer, proper to be appointed a Mustermaster? If there is, pray appoint him; if not, advise me thereof the soonest possible, that I may procure one here.

Soldiers are discharged from the General Hospital as unfit for further service. On their arrival here they apply for money. There seems a want of humanity in not supplying them with some, and yet the Paymaster risks a loss if he does. Please to order that none be discharged unless they are fully paid, and the receipt endorsed on the back of the discharge. I enclose you the Storekeeper's returns of what has lately been sent to you from hence.

A heavy cannonade was heard on Friday morning, by some people on their way up from New-York. A large body of the enemy were encamped on Long-Island, opposite Hell-Gate, and had taken possession of some of the islands there. It seems agreed that our troops behaved with great spirit on Long-Island.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Last evening I received a letter from Mr. Egbert, desiring me to order up shoes and other articles for the army. In answer to which I am sorry to say no shoes and stockings are to be had here. The General has wrote to Congress on this head. Shirts are sent up as fast as they can be procured. Small cartridge paper was sent up last week, and more is wrote for to New-York. Iron pots and kettles shall be sent as fast as they can be collected and wagons procured. It is not in our power to furnish any more lead or musket ball until it arrives from the southward.

I do myself the honour to enclose you a return of cannon, grape and swivel shot, being the first that has arrived in consequence of the requisitions from Tyonderoga. I shall order it up instanter, and as much more as may arrive, without the least delay. I am informed that some of the swivels ordered are arrived. If so, you may be assured that despatch in this instance will also be made.

I am, dear General, most respectfully, yours,
RICHARD VARICK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

H. GLEN TO CAPTAIN EISENFORD.

Schenectady, September 8, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 30th ultimo and 2d instant I have both now before me, and would have answered your first sooner, had I not been overcrowded with business, and the last just came to hand. As to salt provisions, it is entirely out of my power to help you to until the pork comes in, and that will be some weeks. I am well pleased with making two chimneys more in the barn, and in making a bake-oven; the latter and a well are very necessary in a garrison. As to sending you some cash in discharging some of the debts, in particular Captain Bloomfield's company, I would do with the greatest pleasure, but my orders from General Schuyler are to pay no money unless properly certified by the officers who have had things done for the publick. As to the wagoners not coming down next Winter, makes no odds, as the certificates they have will be paid by me to any person in this town, by producing the certificates will receive the money, or one person may receive the whole if he brings the whole of the certificates. As to the guns, I had expected they would have been brought to my store fifteen days ago, and instead of that Mr. Van Tice came to me this morning, and told me they were now done, but seems determined not to part with them till he has his money. Colonel Van Dyck told me you were to pay for them. I have told Van Tice to send you an account and write you a few lines on the subject, as I have no opportunity to send the guns, as my batteaus are all gone for Fort Schuyler. By the time the boats are back Van Tice may know where he is to get his money. As to the billeting money for your company and the rations for the officers, I believe the billeting money must be paid by the Deputy Paymaster-General, and the ration money by Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General. If you will send down an account of the number of officers and rations due them, commencing and ending the time, and another account of the billeting money, I shall do my endeavours to get you the money, which I believe will be no great difficulty in getting the money, so the accounts are properly drawn out and directed to the right person. If the Deputy Paymaster told you that Mr. Livingston was to pay it, then you had better draw the whole against Mr. Livingston, and an order on the account in favour of me or my order, so that I can get some of my friends at Albany to draw it, should you think proper, as I have hardly time to go to Albany myself. Should there be any thing wanting at your place, the commanding officer always better write to the General. If I had it in my power, no man would be more happy than I to serve my friends with any thing I had. I must conclude, with compliments to all friends, and believe me to be your most humble servant,

H. GLEN.

To Captain John Eisenford.

P. S. No receipt for kettles come to hand; nor your commission come to hand.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, September 8, 1776—10 o'clock, P. M.

HONOURED SIR: Two of my boats have just now arrived from down the Lake, but neither of them bring satisfactory accounts from the fleet.

Sergeant Mitchell, with five men, went to the Four Brothers—the place where I ordered him—but saw no appearance of an enemy, or the fleet, this morning.

A party of upwards of twenty of my men were at Gilliland's. They heard a cannonading, supposed to be at the White-House, from Wednesday evening to Friday, near noon, last. You may perhaps judge what the cause of it may have been.

Part of my men at Gilliland's set off towards the fleet this morning.

Mr. Brooks, who first went from here, has not returned. He is either taken or will soon bring intelligence. I send another boat off to-morrow morning. My scouts have returned. No appearance of an enemy in the woods.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,

THOMAS HARTLEY.

To Major-General Gates.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Isle-aux-Motte, September 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: When I wrote the foregoing letter, I designed sending off the batteaus last evening, but was prevented by the stormy weather. Last night the enemy were heard by the guard boat and the people on board the vessels near in shore. On both sides of us several trees were felled and lights discovered. I believe the enemy were erecting batteries, which might have injured us, as the Lake is only one and a quarter miles over, and their design was doubtless to have attacked us both by land and water at the same time. I make no doubt we should have been more than a match for them, but did not think it prudent to run any risk, as it would answer no good purpose. I therefore ordered the fleet under way this morning, and at two o'clock, p. m., anchored at this place. Here, the Lake is about two miles over, and safe anchorage. We effectually secure any boats passing us. Just as we came to anchor, Lieutenant Brooks came on board, sent down by Colonel Hartley in consequence of hearing our cannon fired at the Indians on Sunday morning. I have thought it necessary to despatch him back again, that you may be out of suspense with regard to us. Four guard boats are constantly out, the rounds go every two hours at night, and every precaution is taken to prevent being surprised.

Our men are extremely bare of clothing, and the season is coming on severe, and more so on the water than land. If a watch-coat or blanket and one shirt could be sent for each man, it will be of great service for them. Rum is another necessary article. When the howitzers arrive, I beg three or four of six inches may be sent us, mounted on field carriages, with shells, &c., &c. Fifty swivels are much wanted; the last vessels have none.

I am, very affectionately, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. Send me a few quires, paper.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

HONOURED SIR: Since I wrote to your Honour, the people of East and Southampton have almost universally taken an oath of allegiance to George III., King of Great Britain. It was tendered to them by Colonel Gardiner. They are now driving their cattle into the woods in order to hide them from us. They had brought them from Montauk-Point to Easthampton, in order to drive them westward to the enemy, in compliance with a proclamation issued by General Erskine, who is appointed commanding officer for the eastern part of Long-Island, by General Howe.

The want of whale boats is a great inconvenience to us, as a retreat is almost impracticable without them, should any vessels of force be in the Sound. I am informed there are as many as three hundred whale boats at Boston, that may be had for asking for.

If your Honour should send a body of troops to the Island, I should imagine they might be of service. If it should please your Honour to send any forces upon the Island, I should be extremely glad if I could know it beforehand, as his Excellency General Washington has honoured me with the command on the east end of the Island. I have just received a letter from him, desiring me to endeavour with all my powers to distress the enemy as much as possible, but not to run any risk of the detachment by suffering my retreat to be cut off.

The town of Southold are to-morrow to have a meeting in order to take the oath of allegiance, by Colonel Phineas Fanning's order; but I intend they shall have some unexpected guests at the meeting. The Tories at Coram are beating up for volunteers to join our enemies. Negroes as well as whites are taken into pay. If speedy measures are not used, the whole County of Suffolk will shortly be in arms against us. A small reinforcement will prevent it. General Washington was informed that I was joined by five thousand one hundred men, therefore thought it needless to send me any assistance.

I send with this a letter brought by express from the town of Easthampton; but from some words he dropped here, it was imagined that he had grown tired of the business he came upon, and instead of proceeding with the letter to your Excellency, intended to return to Long-Island. He has taken the oath of allegiance above mentioned. I have detained him in custody until your Honour's pleasure shall be known. I have also in confinement one Patching, formerly of Connecticut, and lately very active against us. What to do with these men I know not, unless the State will take charge of them. The bearer, Captain Conklin, has offered his services to cruise off Montauk Point, to give intelligence of the enemy's motions, if he can be furnished with a swift-sailing vessel he has in his eye at New-London. But the propriety of this I submit to your Honour's superiour judgment.

I remain, with all respect, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull, Esq., of the State of Connecticut, New-London.[Per Captain Conklin.]

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 8, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I just now received your favour by express. I was just going to Long-Island, in order to prevent the people of Southold from swearing allegiance. But would do as you advise, immediately march my detachment to New-York, if I had not permitted many of them to go for their homes, on Long-Island, in order to bring off their families. They are to join me at this place, as soon as they have effected this. I shall wait for them three days, and then proceed to New-York, if no reinforcement is sent to Long-Island, in the meanwhile.

I remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER DATED BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 8, 1776.

Captain Proctor is confined in the common gaol in Halifax, is treated most barbarously, and has been in irons ten weeks on board the Mercury man-of-war. They threaten to take away his life, but he despises their threats; all that he wants is to meet his enemies in the field. He has been in Halifax gaol about five weeks, together with Colonel Allen, Mr. Lovell, and twenty-eight others.

CAPTAIN C. S. SMITH TO MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

Charles County, September 9, 1776.

SIR: As it is disagreeable to me to hold my commission as Captain of the Militia any longer, I now return it to the Council of Safety, enclosed herein. My reason for so doing, is, that the company seem to be discontented and getting into confusion. I therefore would prefer standing in the ranks as a common soldier.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

CHARLES S. SMITH.

To Matthew Tilghman, Esq.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, September 9, 1776, Present: S. Purviance, Chairman; Wm. Lux, Vice-Chairman; T. Gist, J. Boyd, D. Shaw, J. Smith, W. Buchanan, A. Buchanan, W. Wilkinson, T. Rutter, T. Sollers, A. Brittain, B. Griffith, J. Calhoun, W. Aisquith.

Job Green having appeared before the Committee and desired a passport to pass the Fort for the schooner Two Brothers, now loaded with Bread and Flour intended for the West-Indies, and the Committee being informed that the said schooner was the same vessel which belonged to Mr. James Clarke, and was then called the Sea-Flower, demanded of Mr. Green whether he would make oath that the said vessel was his own property before the time Mr. Clarke was published as an enemy to his country; he answered that he would not. The Committee therefore unanimously rejected a clearance for said vessel to pass the Fort, the more especially as Mr. Green has refused to associate, and has paid a fine of £10.

Hugh Finley having applied for a mitigation of his fine, declaring himself willing to enroll:

Ordered, That £5 be remitted on producing a certificate from Captain Thomas Philips to that purpose.

Edmund Hogan's fine is remitted, he having made it appear that he enrolled in April last.

The German Companies which were appointed by the honourable Council of Safety to guard the Magazine and Laboratory in Baltimore Town, being ordered to march, and no directions given by the said Council about a guard, it then became necessary for the Militia to undertake that office, and accordingly, the Independent Company were ordered on duty; this Committee considering the expense that will accrue to the publick from a whole Company being in pay, when a few only are necessary to do duty, and at the same time being of opinion they had not authority to undertake such a measure without the direction of the Council of Safety, applied to Charles Carroll, Esq., one of that honourable Board, for his concurrence therein, who, by his letter recommends the measure. The Committee therefore Resolve, To employ twelve men as a guard, and to pay them 3s. 6d. per day for such service, and to be under the command of an officer of the Militia; the said men to find themselves—the officers to be paid as usual. Captain Henry Shaafe is appointed to take the command, and release the Independent Company immediately.

Attested: GEO. LUX, Secretary.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, September 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 26th ultimo I have received, and delivered the enclosed to Mr. Hancock. I perceive you had not then received mine of the 12th, and am at a loss to guess the reason. I wrote by the post, expecting it would come to your hand before the arrival of Colonel Whipple. His arrival has, no doubt, settled all difficulties.

Yours, by Commodore Manly, I have not received as yet. The Congress have agreed to the exchange of Generals Prescott and McDonald for Sullivan and Stirling; and agreeable to Lord Howe's request for an interview with some of the members of Congress, they have appointed Dr.

Franklin, Mr. J. Adams, and Mr. E. Rutledge, for that purpose, but not as private gentlemen, but as a Committee of Congress; whether or not he will receive them in that capacity, is at present uncertain. They set off this day for New-York.

Yesterday, was sent in here by the Sachem, Continental vessel, a brig bound from Antigua to the British army. She mounted six guns, and fought obstinately; killed three men on board the Sachem; her loading said to be rum and sugar.

I hope before this our State has appointed another Delegate in your stead. Pray hurry them forward as fast as possible, as my very bad state of health hinders often our State from being represented in Congress, though I attend as much as possible.

I am, sir, your friend,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

MRS. SUSANNA CONNOLLY TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

September 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am sorry to be under the necessity of giving you such repeated trouble, but my health has become so infirm, that since I last wrote to you, I have not enjoyed the satisfaction of one day's comfort; and the repeated hysterical fits to which I am become subject, render me truly miserable. I beg, gentlemen, you may be good enough to acquaint the Congress of my distressed situation; hoping they will permit me to return home, as I am willing to come under any restriction that the gentlemen may think proper to require of me. If the honourable Congress think I may be any prejudice to them at Pittsburg, as I hear Mr. Morgan is in town, if the gentlemen please to inquire of him. I hope, gentlemen, you will not let this pass unnoticed, as my situation is truly distressing—the loss of my health and being obliged to live in a prison. It's true gentlemen you do not desire me to live there; the allowance the gentlemen were pleased to make for me, I find it impossible for me to get lodgings for that sum in this City, as lodgings are now raised to a guinea per week. Mr. Connolly's confinement prevents me from having any assistance from him. I would with pleasure, gentlemen, live in gaol if my health was not so impaired.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

SUSANNA CONNOLLY.

June 10, 1776.

SIR: As I expected from the nature of your letter to me, that before now I should have been permitted to return home, I patiently awaited your further orders; but finding no appearance answerable to my expectation, and unconscious of having done anything to merit a detention here from an only child, at an expense very enormous, I must request the liberty of returning on next Monday. I am ready to submit to any examination, or to come under any restriction you may judge necessary; but if I do not hear from you before that time, I shall conclude that I have your permission, and depart accordingly.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

SUKEY CONNOLLY.

To John Hancock, Esq.

PETITION OF LIEUTENANT ANDREW PEPIN, OF CANADA.

[Read September 9, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Continental Congress: The Petition of ANDREW PEPIN, Lieutenant in Colonel LIVINGSTON's Regiment, in the service of the UNITED STATES in CANADA, humbly sheweth:

That your petitioner was Captain of Militia in Canada, and on account of his zeal and attachment to the American cause was noticed by General Montgomery, who gave him his said commission of Lieutenant in the aforesaid regiment, commanded by Colonel Livingston, which commission was given the 20th of November, 1775. That your petitioner has done all in his power to maintain and support the cause, faithfully performing the several duties required of him. That in consequence of his late petition to your Honours, he has received his pay as Lieutenant to the 20th May last past, for which he returns his grateful thanks. He now begs leave to represent, that there is half a year's pay and rations now due to him; that he has a wife and four small children, one of them blind; that he has been obliged to leave his native place and possessions by reason of his zeal for the United States; is now destitute of many necessities of life, in a strange country, without any other support for himself and family than the said pay of Lieutenant. That he applied for a commission, but was informed no army is to be kept up at present in Canada. That he is desirous to serve in the American army, has been a long time on expenses in Philadelphia; and humbly prayeth your Honours will be pleased to take into consideration the present deplorable and necessitous situation of your petitioner and family, and make an order that the arrearages of his pay and rations now due be paid to him, and grant him such other encouragement and relief as to you in your wisdom shall seem meet. And your petitioner, as in duty bound, &c.

ANDREW PEPIN.

Philadelphia, September 9, 1776.

PENNSYLVANIA COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO THE LANCASTER COMMITTEE.

In Council of Safety for the State of Pennsylvania, }
Philadelphia, September 9, 1776. }

Messrs. James Craig and James Wharton being employed to manufacture cordage for the United States of America, an article very much wanted, and being apprehensive they may meet with difficulty in procuring wagons to transport hemp from the country to the rope-yards, we take the liberty to request the favour of you, gentlemen, to afford them all the assistance in your power, and if necessary, to give them letters to any other Committees of Inspection and Observation for same purpose. Those gentlemen will furnish money for the payment of wagon hire.

By order of the Council:

THOS. WHARTON, JUN., President.

To the Committee of Inspection and Observation, Lancaster County.

COLONEL BURD TO WILLIAM ATLEE.

Middletown, September 9, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of a letter from the Committee of the County of Northumberland to us, which we herewith transmit to you, as also a letter to us from Mr. John Harris, we send you by Mr. Michael Sheever (our battalion messenger) the two prisoners sent to us, viz: William Chattam and James Parker. We make no doubt you will pay Mr. Sheever and his party; and we are with much esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient servants,

GEORGE FRY,
ABRAHAM DORR,

Members of the Township Committee of Paxton.

SIR: I have provided a party as above, and am with much respect, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

JAMES BURD.

To William Atlee, Esq., Chairman of the Committee of Lancaster County.

ROBERT FRUTE TO THE PAXTON (PENN.) COMMITTEE.

In Committee for Northumberland County, }
September 5, Anno Domini 1776. }

Whereas it appears that William Chattin and James Parker, who are believed to be two of His Britannick Majesty's soldiers, lately made prisoners at the surrender of St. John's, have behaved themselves in such sort as to give great uneasiness to the good people of this County, in providing themselves with arms, and making other preparations, which appeared to indicate some ill design; and as the attempts of evil-minded persons, either to instigate the Indians to acts of hostility, or to raise dissensions among the inhabitants, may be attended with the most pernicious consequences, this Committee are therefore of opinion that the said William Chattin and James Parker be immediately removed to Lancaster to the corps to which they are supposed to belong.

By order of the Committee:

ROBERT FRUTE, Chairman.

To the Committee of Paxton Township, or to any Committee in Lancaster County.

JOHN HARRIS TO GEORGE FRY.

Paxton, September 9, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, a Sergeant of Captain Parr's, has two of the Regulars' soldiers prisoners, sent by the Committee of Northumberland County to the Committee of Paxton Township. My advice to you and the other members in town of said Committee, is to apply this day to Colonel Burd for a guard of our Militia to escort them safe to the Committee of Lancaster, delivering the paper signed by the Chairman of their Committee containing their crime or misbehaviour among the peaceable inhabitants of said County. I make no doubt but that Colonel James Burd will immediately order a proper guard at the publick expense, and write the Chairman of the Committee of Lancaster County, who will receive them and dispose of them properly. Prevail on the Sergeant to keep them in his custody till you can get a guard ready to receive the said prisoners from him. Show the Colonel this letter, with the paper from Northumberland.

I am, sir, with esteem your very humble servant,

JOHN HARRIS.

To Mr. George Fry.

DISCHARGE OF PENNSYLVANIA ASSOCIATORS.

Head-Quarters, Perth-Amboy, September 9, 1776.

The officers and soldiers of Colonel Hart's battalion of Pennsylvania Associators having done their duty as good and orderly soldiers, and having furnished a company for the Flying-Camp, are hereby discharged the service of the States, and permitted to return home.

SAMUEL GRIFFIN, Deputy Adjutant-General.

To William Baxter, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel.

REGULATIONS FOR CARRYING THE PUBLICK MAILS.

"IN CONGRESS, August 30, 1776.

"Resolved, That the communication of intelligence with frequency and despatch from one part to another of this extensive Continent, is essentially requisite to its safety; that therefore there be employed on the several Post-Roads a Rider for every twenty-five or thirty miles, whose business it shall be to proceed to his stage three times in every week, setting out immediately on receipt of the mail and travelling with the same by night and by day, without stopping, until he shall have delivered it to the next Rider; and that the Postmaster-General be desired, either by the use of way-bills or by such other means as he shall find most efficacious, to prevent delays in the Riders, or to discover where they happen, that such dilatory Riders may be discharged.

"And as it is requisite that the Deputy Postmasters should attend with punctuality at their several offices for the receipt and delivery of Letters:

"Resolved, That it be recommended to the Assemblies and Conventions of these States, to consider how far it may be consistent with the policy and good of their respective States, to excuse such Deputy Postmasters from those public duties which may call them from attendance at their offices, and to proceed therein as to their wisdom shall seem best.

"Extract from the Minutes:

"CHARLES THOMSON, Secretary."

New-York, September 9, 1776.

In consequence of the foregoing Resolution of Congress, "for the more frequent and speedy communication of intelligence," &c., William Goddard, Esquire, Surveyor of the General Post-Office, arrived here on Saturday morning last, on his way through the Northern States, in order to carry into immediate execution that necessary and important business.

We hear that the Deputy Postmaster of this city hath received orders to remove his office immediately from Dobbs's Ferry to Head-Quarters; so that the obstruction that correspondence hath lately met with will now, in a great measure, be removed.

New-York, September 9, 1776.

Since the retreat of our army from Long-Island, the enemy have extended themselves a considerable length on the shore bordering the Sound; and on Tuesday a large number of them landed on Blackwell's Island, about three miles from this city, but the shot from our Batteries soon made them recross the river. On Wednesday a ship from the fleet (supposed to be a frigate) passed between Governour's Island and Red-Hook, and that night got up the Sound abreast of the Island the enemy had been drove from. When under cover of her guns, they the next day again came over to it in large bodies. This brought on a brisk cannonade for near two hours, in which the ship sustained so great damage in her hull, &c., as obliged her to move close in with the Long-Island shore for shelter from our shot and bombs. At the same time of attack a firing also began from the enemy's batteries on Long-Island opposite the city, which was returned with such spirit by our people in their fortresses at and about the ship-yards, that they gave us little or no annoyance since from that quarter.

Several men-of-war now lie within gun-shot of our main battery, and the greatest part of the fleet behind Governour's Island, though they have lately had very favourable winds to come up to the city, which gives us reason to think they mean not to attack it by water till they know the success of their forces in attempting to land on this Island.

TENCH TILGHMAN TO COLONEL MOYLAN.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 9, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency commands me to desire that you would without loss of time set about preparing a sufficient quantity of boards, scantling, and every material necessary for the building of barracks at King's Bridge and the posts thereabouts. His reasons for pressing you to exert yourself at this time, are, that the North River, down which most of the articles must come, is now entirely free from any obstruction by the enemy, but how long that may continue is uncertain. The season advances fast when it would be impossible for the troops to lay in camp, even if they were all supplied with tents, and had a sufficient stock of blankets and other warm clothing; but you well know that in the article of tents, at least one-third part of the army are unprovided, and those that we have are worn and bad: as to bedding and other clothes, they are in a manner destitute. We have every reason to fear and suppose, that the great naval force of the enemy will oblige us to quit this city whenever they please to make an attack upon it. We must then depend upon barracks for shelter, and for that reason his Excellency calls upon you and your deputies to exert yourselves in the most strenuous manner, in collecting such a stock of wood for the building, and brick or stone and lime for the chimneys and ovens, as will enable you in a short time to provide comfortable covering for the men at the different posts. The commanding officers in conjunction with the Engineers will fix upon the proper spots for making the collection of materials, which will be nearest the places where the barracks shall be erected.

I am, sir, by his Excellency's command, your most obedient servant,

TENCH TILGHMAN.

To Colonel S. Moylan, Quartermaster General.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO LORD HOWE.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 9, 1776.

MY LORD: I do myself the honour of transmitting to your Lordship the enclosed letter, recommended to my care by Dr. Franklin, and which just now came to hand.

If your Lordship shall incline to return an answer to Dr. Franklin, and will honour me with the charge of it, I will immediately forward it to him by express.

I am, my Lord, with the greatest respect, your Lordship's, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Lord Viscount Howe.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 9, 1776.

SIR: I have the honour of your favour of the 5th instant, and am sorry to say that, from the best information we have been able to obtain, the people on Long-Island have, since our evacuation, gone generally over to the enemy, and made such concessions as have been required—some through compulsion I suppose, but more from inclination. As a diversion upon the Island has been impracticable under these circumstances, I think you have done well in assisting the removal of the persons and effects of our friends from thence.

I observe, with great pleasure, that you have ordered the remaining regiments of the Militia that can be spared from the immediate defence of the sea-coast, to march towards New-York with all expedition. I cannot sufficiently express my thanks, not only for your constant ready compliance with every request of mine, but for your own strenuous exertions and prudent forecast in ordering matters so, that your force has generally been collected and put in motion as soon as it has been demanded.

With respect to the Militia, both Horse and Foot, I am of opinion that they will render us more service by rendezvousing at different places along the Sound, in Westchester County and thereabouts, than by coming directly to this city. It will not only give the enemy, who are extending their encampment up the Island, an idea of our force along the coast, but if they should attempt a landing above King's Bridge, they will be in readiness to join our force about that place—the Horse particularly, whose rapid motion enables them to be in a short time at any point of attack. Besides, the difficulty of procuring forage upon this Island for any number of horses, is an objection to their being stationed here. I fear the Militia, by leaving their homes so suddenly, and in a manner unprepared for a long absence, have sustained some injury. To this cause I must impute, in a great measure, their impatience to return, and the diminution of their numbers at this time to about two thousand. Their want of discipline, the indulgences they claim and have been allowed, their unwillingness, I may add refusal, to submit to that regularity and order essential in every army, infecting the rest of our troops more or less, have been of pernicious tendency, and occasioned a good deal of confusion and disorder. But, sir, these things are not peculiar to those from any one State; they are common to all Militia, and what must be generally expected; for men who have been free, and never subject to restraint or any kind of control, cannot be taught the necessity, or be brought to see the expediency, of strict discipline in a day.

I highly approve of your plan and proposition for raising such a naval force as will be sufficient to clear the Sound of the enemy's ships-of-war. If Admiral Hopkins will join you, I should suppose it not only practicable, but a matter of certainty; and if it can be effected, many valuable and salutary consequences must result from it. As to drafting seamen from the Continental regiments, it cannot be done, as their numbers have been reduced so low already by taking men from them for the galleys, boats, and other purposes, that some of them have hardly any thing left but the name; besides, I must depend chiefly upon them for a successful opposition to the enemy. If it can be done out of the Militia, I shall not have the least objection, and heartily wish the enterprise, whenever attempted, may be attended with all possible success. Secrecy and despatch will be the most likely to give it a happy issue. The enemy's ships can receive no reinforcements but such as go round Long-Island. Our works at Hell-Gate preventing their sending ships that way, they are sensible of their importance, and yesterday opened two three-gun batteries to effect their destruction, but as yet have not materially damaged them; and they must be maintained if possible.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

Go. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull, Connecticut.

P. S. The more the Militia and Horse keep on the Sound towards King's Bridge, the better, as they will be ready to oppose any landing of the enemy, and also to receive orders for reinforcing any posts on this side, in case of necessity.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

Head-Quarters, September 9, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: We understand that a number of sloops, shallops and petiaugers are collected at or near your post. As they are wanted here hourly, you will please to order them down to call at this place for orders. I fear the flat-bottomed boats will soon be in a bad condition unless put under some good direction. Will you be also good enough to do it? Tupper complains of the want of whale-boats. You mentioned some being about King's Bridge. Enable one or two to get down. The galleys might also come nearer to us, except Stanter's, which is too heavy for any thing else but to lay guard.

You will excuse my troubling you with these matters, but the masters of sloops, galleys, &c., will not obey the orders given by the Quartermaster-General or myself, without your driving them.

I am your most obedient servant,
To Brigadier-General Mifflin. J. REED.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

Head-Quarters, 8 o'clock, P. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Colonel Sargent has just now informed us, by express, that about four thousand men, attended by a number of wagons, have marched down to the place from which the troops embarked this morning, which came to Barnes's or Buchanan's Island, and that they were landing on these islands.

The General desires you would have your brigade in readiness to turn out, and hopes that, agreeable to his letter to-day, you have found a communication over Harlem River.

You will please to despatch this intelligence to General Heath, that his troops may be also ready to march, if necessary, which, it is thought here, will be the case.

I am, in haste, your obedient, humble servant,
J. REED.

To Brigadier-General Mifflin.

The General further adds, that, at all events, the enemy must be prevented gaining possession of the heights this side of Harlem River, or the communication will be cut off. The General is very anxious on the subject, but being very much fatigued is gone to lie down. This depends much on your vigilance and industry.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 9, 1776, }
8½ o'clock, P. M. }

SIR: I am to inform you, by his Excellency's command, that all the Maryland troops that were here yesterday were ordered to march to-day, and join those troops at King's Bridge and its dependencies. Three companies more arrived this evening, which are also ordered to march to-morrow morning.

By a letter from Governour Trumbull, of the 5th instant, his Excellency is informed that he had ordered such of the remaining Militia regiments as could be spared from the immediate defence of the sea coast, to march towards this place with all expedition; also, two regiments of Light-Horse, to move forward and rendezvous above, near Westchester, for the purpose of affording such succour as the exigency of our affairs might require. His Excellency, conceiving that both the Militia and the Horse would be most serviceable if placed on the Sound and towards King's Bridge, where they might be ready to oppose a landing, and to give their assistance as it might be wanted, wrote to his Honour this morning to this purpose. He would have you inquire if any of 'em are in Westchester, or any where near King's Bridge, and take such measures for regulating their motions and conduct as may be most serviceable and beneficial, and most likely to give the speediest aids in case of an attack.

His Excellency, judging it of exceeding importance that the several roads leading from the rocks and points where the enemy may make a landing towards King's Bridge should be stopped and obstructed, wishes your particular attention to be paid to the business, agreeable to his letter of this morning.

Enclosed is a copy of a letter received from General Nixon just now, which his Excellency directed to be transmitted to you, that you may be on your guard in case the enemy should have a design to attempt a landing to-night. A copy is also enclosed for General Mifflin, in the letter directed to him, which you will immediately forward.

I am, in haste, very respectfully, sir, your humble servant,
ROBT. H. HARRISON.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge.

MAJOR VAN RENSSELAER TO GENERAL TEN BROECK.

Fort Constitution, September 9, 1776.

SIR: We are very much in want of thread and twine for cartridges, and sheet lead for aprons for the guns. If any of this thread or twine is to be had, I beg the favour of you to assist those men, Andrew McFarlin and Thomas Preston, to get them, for there is none to be had here.

By complying with the above request, you will much oblige, sir, your humble servant,

HENRY VAN RENSSELAER, Major.
To Abraham Ten Broeck, Brigadier-General, Fishkill.

JOHN SCHENCK TO ABRAHAM YATES.

Poughkeepsie, September 9, 1776.

SIR: This is to inform you I am willing to undertake to supply the garrison at the forts in the Highlands with such articles as you may order, if they are to be had; and, agreeable to your request, shall attend you to-morrow morning, to take my instructions.

I am, sir, with respect, your most obedient servant,
JOHN SCHENCK, Jun.

To Abraham Yates, Esq., President of the State Convention of New-York.

COMMITTEE OF SAFETY TO NEW-YORK DELEGATES IN CONGRESS.

[Read September 20, 1776. Referred to Mr. Chase, Mr. Paine, and Mr. Stockton.]

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, September 9, 1776. }

GENTLEMEN: Sensible of the great importance of the posts in the Highlands, we have lately directed an inquiry into their situation, which will appear from the enclosed returns to be far from such as we could wish.

The necessity General Washington has of all the troops that compose his army at New-York, prevented his sparing to those fortresses sufficient garrisons, or the necessary stores. What may be the fate of the country below the Highlands is as yet uncertain, and may possibly depend on the event of a single battle. Should these posts be properly secured, we cannot but hope that the greater part of this State might nevertheless be retained, and the communication between the Northern and Southern States be by that means kept up; for which reason we wish you to call the attention of the Congress to an object of whose importance they have always been sensible, and to ask a proper supply of stores. We have already afforded them all in our power to supply. Fire-ships would be of great use; yet for want of materials we are unable to proceed in preparing them. Seamen cannot be procured here to man our armed vessels without the greatest delay and difficulty, unless drafted from the army; perhaps they may be got at Philadelphia.

By the enclosed resolves, you will find that we have endeavoured to reinforce the garrison in the Highlands. As these men were all taken from the plough, we are very anxious to have them relieved as soon as the circumstances of the Continent will admit.

We have borrowed of the State of Connecticut twenty pieces of cannon—ten twelve and ten six-pounders—for the forts. We wish they were heavier, but we fear this deficiency cannot be supplied; and therefore must endeavour to do without them.

You will find by the enclosed resolves that we have taken measures to increase the number of our field artillery.

You will be mindful to transmit us every publick resolve of Congress, and at least one of the Pennsylvania Gazettes every week.

We remain, gentlemen, your very humble servants.
By order: ABM. YATES, JUN., President.

In Convention of the Representatives of the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, September 7, 1776. }

The Committee appointed the 2d instant to visit and examine into the state of Forts Montgomery and Constitution, in the Highlands, laid before the Convention returns from different officers at those fortresses, showing the condition and wants of the respective garrisons; from which, and the report of the Committee, (among other things,) it appears that there are at present no more troops in the Highlands than seven hundred and sixty-four men, whereof three hundred and ninety-eight are at Fort Montgomery, and two hundred and sixteen at Fort Constitution—that the troops consist of Militia of the State, excepting five companies of the New-York Continental Battalion.

That to render Fort Constitution tenable, the West Point, which commands it, ought to be fortified.

That considerable progress is made in fortifying an advantageous eminence on the western shore, a little to the south of Fort Montgomery, and within the reach of cannon; but is still incomplete.

That the remaining part of the said troops, being one hundred and fifty, are employed in erecting works on the east side of the river, being about three miles below Fort Montgomery, at a place called Red-Hook, near Peekskill, which are well calculated to prevent the enemy's landing and becoming master of the Highlands opposite to Fort Montgomery.

That Brigadier-General James Clinton, commanding at the said fortress, informed the Committee that, exclusive of the post of Red-Hook, an augmentation of one thousand men was requisite for completing and defending the fortress under his direction; and earnestly requested that the Convention would immediately procure such reinforcement, as well as the several articles of ammunition, stores, and necessaries hereafter specified, of which he stood in the utmost need.

This Convention having duly considered the said representation and requisition, and well knowing how much the safety of this State, as well as the success of the united efforts of this oppressed Continent in the defence of our common liberties, must depend on maintaining the possession of the Hudson River, and guarding it against the invasion which is to be apprehended from the enemy; considering at the same time, the little probability that it can at present be in the power of his Excellency General Washington to detach for this service any of the army which is employed in opposing the progress of the enemy in the southern parts of this State: the Convention, under these circumstances, must again have recourse to the good people of this State; not doubting but that, inspired by a virtuous love for their country, they will, on an occasion so pressing, and at a period when their lives, their liberties, and every temporal blessing are in imminent danger, stand forth with zeal and alacrity in the greatest and best of causes; Therefore,

Resolved, That six hundred men be, with all possible despatch, detached from the Militia of this State, and sent to the Forts Montgomery and Constitution, as a reinforcement to those garrisons.

That one hundred and fifty men from that part of the County of Albany which is within and to the southward of the Manor of Rensselaerwyck, including the City of Albany; one hundred and seventy-five men from the County of Dutchess; two hundred men from the County of Ulster, and seventy-five men from that part of the County of Orange which lies above the mountains—all exclusive of commissioned officers—be immediately detached by ballot, and march to augment the garrisons at Forts Montgomery and Constitution.

Resolved, That the above reinforcement continue in service two months after their arrival at the said fortresses, and that this Convention will discharge them sooner in case sufficient garrisons of Continental troops shall be ordered to and arrive at those forts before the expiration of the said two months; and that the Militia so drafted shall be entitled to the same pay and rations as are allowed to the Continental troops.

Resolved, That the above levies be formed into Companies, in the following manner, viz: Those from the County of Ulster into three companies, and those from Albany and Dutchess respectively into two companies each, and those from the County of Orange into one company; and that each company have one Captain, two Lieutenants, four Sergeants, four Corporals, one Drummer, and one Fifer.

That the said reinforcement shall be formed into one Battalion, to be commanded by a Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, and Major, to be appointed by this Convention. That a Surgeon, Adjutant, and Quartermaster, shall be appointed for the said battalion; the first by the Convention, and the last two by the Colonel.

That the Captains and Subalterns be appointed by the Field Officers of the Regiments of Militia in each respective County from which the quotas are to be raised, out of the Militia officers, having regard to their ranks, and the dates of their commissions, if a sufficient number of such are willing to serve, if not, that they shall be at liberty to appoint such others as they may think properly qualified; and that the non-commissioned officers be appointed by the Captain of each company under whom they are to serve.

Resolved, That each non-commissioned officer and private shall provide himself with a good musket or firelock, bayonet or tomahawk; a blanket and knapsack; and every six men with a pot or camp kettle; and that one penny per mile be allowed to each non-commissioned officer and private during their march, for subsistence-money; and one day's pay for every twenty miles between their respective houses and rendezvous, going and returning.

And to the intent that the Levies so raised may not be unfurnished with arms, the Committees in the different Townships and Districts in the said Counties, and the Colonels of the respective regiments are hereby authorized and empowered to furnish all such as have not arms, by taking them from those who are not drafted, and such other persons in the Districts as have arms; the same being valued by the Committee of each District, the amount of such valuation hereafter to be paid to the proprietors of said arms, restored in the same order to their former proprietors.

Resolved, That fifty spades, fifty wood-axes, fifty pick-axes, twenty-four shovels, twenty-five bill-hooks, two thousand pounds weight of lead, one thousand pounds weight of langrage, one thousand round and bar-shot for nine-pounders, fifty set of cast-iron carriage-wheels for cannon, one thousand pounds weight of nails for building barracks, one thousand round of six-pound ball and grape shot, three sets of men's harness for drawing cannon, thirty pounds of twine and twelve pounds of thread for cartridges, and one armourer, with the tools of his business, be immediately procured and forwarded to Fort Montgomery; and that John Schenck be appointed an agent for that purpose, with authority to draw on the Treasurer for a sum not exceeding twenty-five hundred dollars, for which he shall keep and render an exact account.

In Committee of Safety for the State of New-York, }
Fishkill, September 10, 1776. }

Colonel Livingston informed the Committee that the following articles mentioned in General James Clinton's return of necessaries for Forts Montgomery and Constitution are in store at Fishkill landing, and may be ordered out to Mr. John Schenck, for the Forts. Thereupon the following order was unanimously made, and signed by the President, viz:

Please to deliver to Mr. John Schenck out of the stores in your custody, the following articles for the use of the Forts Montgomery and Constitution, taking his receipt for the same: Twenty-five spades, twenty-five bill-hooks, twelve shovels, five thousand pounds weight of lead; delivering first all the lump lead in store, and the residue in ball and buck-shot, and seven skeins or balls of thread.

ABM. YATES, JUN., President.

To Nathaniel Sacket, Esq.

The following Order was given to Mr. John Schenck for supplying the Fortifications, in the stead of the Order made by the Convention, on the 7th instant, the copy whereof Mr. Schenck returned:

SIR: You are requested, with all despatch, to procure the undermentioned articles for the use of the garrisons of Forts Montgomery and Constitution, and as soon as they are ready, to send them to Brigadier-General James Clinton, commander at the said garrisons, taking his receipt for the same, viz:

An Armourer, with all his tools complete.

50 wood-axes, 25 spades, 25 mattocks.

13 shovels, 20 wheelbarrows.

1,000 lbs. weight of 6 lb. iron shot, } one-half of each

1,000 lbs. weight of 9 lb. do. } double-headed.

3,000 lbs. weight of grape-shot from 4 to 6 ounces.

50 sets of great gun carriage-wheels.

32 thousand bricks—10 thousand shingles.

700 weight of bar iron—25 lbs. blistered steel.

400 weight of 10d nails—300 weight of 20d nails.

7,000 feet of three-inch oak plank.
 20 hogsheads lime.
 2,000 tacks—24 sheep-skins.
 1 large magazine lock—2 pair shears.
 A quantity of oil and paints to paint the carriages.
 1 dozen of flat and half-round files—1 dozen 39 square, do.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 16: Referred to Board of War.

Albany, September 9, 1776.

SIR: At half past ten this morning I received a letter from General Gates, [of September 6,] copy whereof I do myself the honour to enclose.

As it is most probable that the enemy are attempting to cross the Lake, I have therefore thought it necessary to apply to the neighbouring Counties of the New-England States, and those of Ulster and Dutchess in this, to order their Militia to march up. As soon as they arrive, I shall either move with that part which may go to the northward, or with those to the westward, as may be most necessary. Further information from General Gates and Colonel Dayton must determine me.

What cartridge paper his Excellency General Washington could spare, he has sent me. It arrived here on the 2d instant, was sent forward on the 3d, and arrived at Fort George on the 5th, and was probably forwarded from thence on the 6th.

I am informed that the army is in the greatest distress for medicines and hospital stores. As every misfortune and want they labour under is imputed to me, so is this. If I had not been able to foresee a scarcity of medicine, it ought not to be imputed to me as a crime; but Congress has it in their power to exculpate me, as they will find by a retrospect to my letter of the 10th of February last.

It is a duty I owe to myself, as well as my country, that I should not continue any longer in an office so much envied me, and in which I have suffered so much. I am therefore under the necessity of acquainting Congress that I shall resign my commission as soon as I return from Ticonderoga or Tryon County, not to prevent, but to insist on the most critical examination of my conduct. In this alarming day I shall find sufficient occasion to evince how unjustly my character has suffered, and that, as I have ever been the friend to my country, I will live and die so.

Permit me to assure Congress of the indispensable necessity of having a General officer at this place. If there remained one in the service who had not enlarged and liberal sentiments, I should not hesitate to beg that he might not be sent here.

I am, sir, with every respectful sentiment, your most obedient, humble servant,
 PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, September 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: At half after ten this morning I received a letter from General Gates, copy whereof I enclose your Excellency.

As it is most probable that the enemy are attempting to cross the Lake, I have therefore thought it necessary to apply to the neighbouring Counties of the New-England States, and those of Ulster and Dutchess in this, to order their Militia to march up. As soon as they arrive, I shall either move with what part may go to the northward, or with those to the westward, as may be most necessary. This can, however, only be determined by further intelligence from General Gates and Colonel Dayton, which I momentarily expect to receive.

The cartridge paper arrived here on the 2d instant, was sent forward on the 3d, and arrived at Fort George on the 5th, at night, and was probably forwarded from thence on the 6th.

I am informed that the army is in the greatest distress for medicines. As every misfortune and want they labour under is imputed to me, so is this. I am heartily tired of abuse, and was in hopes that Congress would have ordered an inquiry into my conduct. I requested it most earnestly on the 16th of last month, but have not yet been honoured with an answer. I will no longer suffer the publick odium, since I have it most amply in my power to justify myself, and shall therefore resign my commission as soon as I return from Ticonderoga or Tryon County. Of this I shall advise Congress, that orders may be given for a General officer to reside in this place, without which the service will suffer. But in doing this, I shall never forget the duty I owe to my country, and if I can, by advice or any other means, promote the weal of it, none will do it with more alacrity.

I am, dear sir, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
 PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 9, 1776—11 o'clock, A. M.

DEAR GENERAL: Half an hour ago, your letter of the 6th instant was delivered me. I shall immediately write to every quarter for the Militia to come up, and as soon as any of them arrive order them to march to you, and shall either conduct them myself, or march with part of them into Tryon County.

Two hogsheads of cartridge paper left this on the 3d instant, and which I hope has reached you. Not a sheet of any kind is to be procured here.

I hope General Arnold will give a good account of the enemy; but if he should unfortunately be drove back, I trust they will meet with a drubbing from you. God grant us success.

Pray give me the most early advice, that, if it is not necessary for the Militia to move up, they may be dismissed the soonest possible, as they are much wanted at home to get in their seed for their winter wheat.

Expresses should be sent by the way of Skeneshborough to stop the Militia from New-England. Adieu.

I am, dear sir, most sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,
 PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The bearer, Colonel Pelissiere, is appointed an Engineer in the Army of the United States. His Excellency General Washington has directed him to me to be employed in the Northern Department. He now goes to put himself under your command.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
 PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates, &c.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Schenectady, September 9, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This moment received a letter from Captain Eisenford, who writes at the desire of the commanding-officer, Colonel Elmore, at the German-Flats, to send some pork and salt; complains of the soldiers getting sick of the fresh meat. I have had several applications for pork. If you have any, pray send some over, and will forward it; and if there is none, let me know, that I may acquaint them what they have to depend on in regard to the pork. I would be glad to know if I must send any flour to Johnston, and what quantity.

Yours, &c.,

H. GLEN.

To Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General, Albany.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL HARTLEY.

Tyonderoga, September 9, 1776.

SIR: I have just now received your letter of last night, and am entirely at a loss what to believe in regard to the fleet. Your conjecture of the firing on Thursday being at or near the White-House, is the most probable, as it was a post the enemy were not unlikely to endeavour to possess. I cannot think it possible any accident could have happened to the whole fleet, so as to cut off their communication with us, and if any extraordinary blow has been struck by either side, General Arnold would have sent a report. I exceedingly approve of your vigilance to get intelligence, and am certain you will send me the earliest you can procure of every thing that has passed upon the Lake.

Enclosed is all the news I know. Neither General Schuyler nor myself have had a line from General Washington. I shall give you the first authentick account I receive.

I am, dear sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
HORATIO GATES.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley.

P. S. Pray send the oar-cutters, with all their oars, as soon as possible.

GENERAL ARNOLD TO GENERAL GATES.

Isle-aux-Motte, September 9, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 5th instant was delivered me this minute by Colonel Wigglesworth; the intelligence it contains is truly important. I shall wait with the greatest anxiety for the particulars, though the loss is great on our side. If the enemy have been repulsed, and suffered the loss of three thousand men killed, the number of their wounded is doubtless much greater, and must so much weaken and discourage them that they will hardly make another attack this season; and time must gain us a victory. I am extremely glad you have sent Colonel Wigglesworth; he is a gentleman of whom I have a good opinion. The master of the Royal Savage is ill with the fever and ague. I shall observe your directions very particularly. I hope soon to have the pleasure of seeing General Waterbury and the three galleys. I think the station we are in the best in the Lake to stop the enemy; there is not a good harbour, except where the Lake is wide, until you come to Button-Mould Bay, thirteen miles this side Crown-Point. Here I think we are very safe from gales of wind; the anchorage good, and several small harbours in the vicinity where the gondolas will ride safe from any wind that blows. I have sent you Robert Atkins, an experienced pilot, to bring down the galleys, and have given him particular directions.

I am heartily obliged to you for your good wishes, and make no doubt the Almighty will crown our virtuous struggles with success.

I am, with respect and esteem, your affectionate and obedient, humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. I wrote you fully last night by Lieutenant Brooks; and now send by Major Greer twenty-two sick men, exclusive of fifteen of Captain Alexander's company.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 9, 1776.

SIR: The almost constant vicissitude in affairs I find obliges us to alter our measures, and before I had received yours of yesterday, and in consequence of information and application from Captain Leffingwell, I have ordered his company, with such a number as was thought proper from Colonel Westcott's, at New-London, immediately to repair to Long-Island, to coöperate with you in such measures as may be thought proper to interrupt or obstruct the designs of the enemy there. You will, therefore, instead of proceeding to New-York, in consequence of my last advice, for the present join your troops and those I have sent forward, on Long-Island, and pursue every measure there to obstruct the designs of the enemy in that quarter. It is expected that General Washington will still give some diversion to the enemy on Long-Island. You will I dare say do every thing in your power there, till further advice, unless you find yourself obliged to retire to the main land again. You will give us advice of every important appearance, and any assistance in our power will be afforded. Our Militia are forwarding towards New-York, but will not be out of the way to throw across to Long-Island, if the General thinks proper.

May success attend your spirited endeavours; and am, with sincere regard, your humble servant,

J. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Livingston.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 9, 1776.

SIR: Since writing to you this day, received another of your favours without date, giving intelligence of some surprising conduct of the people on the east end of Long-Island relative to the present contest, as also of your having two persons in custody, who are suspected to have acted inimical to the interests of America. I can recollect nothing of importance to add to what I wrote to-day before, save only with regard to the two persons you mention which you have in custody. Those two persons you will deliver to the Committee of Inspection for the town of Saybrook, who are directed to examine them relative to the aforesaid conduct, and, if they find sufficient cause, to send one or both of them to the Committee of the town of Colchester, to be detained there upon their parole till further orders. Have enclosed an order to the Committee of Saybrook, which you will please to deliver accordingly.

I am, with esteem, sir, your obedient, humble servant,
J. TRUMBULL.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Henry B. Livingston.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO THE MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Lebanon, September 9, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The vast importance of preventing the Ministerial Army taking the benefit of the stock on Long-Island, and availing themselves of the advantages of that post—assisting such of the inhabitants to remove, with their effects, who are disposed for it, and prevent their total seduction—I apprehend are matters of more consequence to the common cause than we can easily imagine. To dislodge that army from Long-Island, and destroy the two ships and tenders in the Sound, which at present prevent supplies that way by water to our army, might, at one blow, in a great measure relieve our bleeding country from its impending danger. How far it would be practicable, or what measures are proper to take at this alarming crisis, is matter of serious concern with us. It's supposed here, that in case an attempt should be made to collect a force at the east end of Long-Island, remove stock, &c., a number of whale-boats would be absolutely necessary to transport troops, stores, supplies, &c., as they might avoid all the vessels of force the enemy might send to obstruct us. I am informed that a large number of whale-boats that belong to the Continent are at and near Boston, and might be used for this important service. We have but very few with us. I am also informed that a regiment is ordered from you to Providence, to replace the Continental battalion removed from the State of Rhode-Island; and whether your regiment could not come in the whale-boats to Providence, carrying them across the land at Buzzard's Bay, is, I apprehend, worthy of your consideration, and to be executed without delay.

We are equipping what naval force we have, with all possible expedition. We are exerting ourselves, and desirous to unite our whole strength with the other States in our common cause. I don't doubt of your utmost attention and most vigorous exertions therein. Must entreat your answer to this, and such other measures as you judge may be beneficial. I have communicated to Governour Cooke on the subject.

I am, with great truth and esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,
JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Assembly of the State of Massachusetts.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 9, 1776,

Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour; Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Esquires.

Voted, To give, and accordingly gave, orders to Captain

Zebediah Smith, master of the prize-schooner Elizabeth and Hannah, (now at Newport,) lately taken and sent in by the armed schooner Spy, to embrace the first fair wind and weather, when the coast is clear of the enemy, and proceed with said prize to New-London, and up to Norwich, and take the necessary steps to procure a legal condemnation to be passed thereon as soon as may be.

Voted and Resolved, That one of the Committee of Pay-Table be appointed to receive, out of the Treasury, a sufficient sum of money to pay the twenty shillings to each man of the Militia now ordered to march towards New-York, and repair with the same to New-Haven, and then pay to the Colonel or chief officer of each regiment the sum of twenty shillings for each man his regiment shall consist of, taking his receipt for the same: the said sum to be paid over by such Colonel or chief officer to the soldiers of his regiment—that is to say, twenty shillings to each soldier; and his Honour the Governour is desired to write to the Committee of Pay-Table, and give them orders accordingly.

Voted, That Mr. Martin Levingwell be, and he is hereby, directed to deliver out to the Selectmen of Norwich the Arms contained in a chest of Arms left in his care, last Spring, by one Mr. Lay, of Lyme—taking care to have them prized, and a particular account of the price, mark, and number of each gun, cartouch-box, &c., and to whom delivered in the present service for which said arms are now taken, with the marks heretofore sent. It is directed that the Selectmen of the towns proceed upon the usual plan for furnishing the men now ordered to march; and that those men who have balls for their own guns make use of them.

Voted, That Messrs. Elderkin and Wales be desired to send forward one ton of the Connecticut Powder in their possession, to the care of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, of New-Haven, for the use of the publick.

Voted, That the two Prisoners in the hands of Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston, at Saybrook, if on examination they are found culpable, be committed to the care of the Committee of Inspection at Saybrook, and by them conveyed to the care of the Committee of Inspection at Colchester, to be kept on their parole, or in such way as they find most convenient, until further orders.

Hartford, September 9, 1776.

The Standing Militia of this State, together with the Troop of Light-Horse on the east side of Connecticut River, are ordered to march, with the utmost expedition, to Westchester, near New-York, where it is imagined the enemy will make an attempt to land from Long-Island.

JABEZ HUNTINGTON TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

New-London, September 9, 1776.

SIR: Yours of yesterday came to hand per Mr. Franks, and in answer to the contents was desired by the Committee to signify their advice for your troops not to proceed to New-York for the present, as we are in hopes of a requisition to act in conjunction with a force from Rhode-Island, where your troops will be most useful, as you are best acquainted with the advantages to be taken of the ground in any operations there. In the mean time, transports are going, and some gone, from here with guards on board to assist the Islanders in removing themselves and effects; and no doubt many will take the same measures from the vicinity of Saybrook, in which case we think your prudence will suggest the expediency of what assistance you can afford them in that design.

I am, with esteem, your humble servant,

JABEZ HUNTINGTON.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO SAMUEL CHEW.

Providence, September 9, 1776.

SIR: I received yours, and now acquaint you that I had directions from the Marine Board to offer you the command of a schooner which they made no doubt was in New-London, and directed Mr. Shaw, their agent there, to preserve her, which can't be done, as the schooner is gone.

If Mr. Shaw procures any other in her room, shall fit her out; but I have no orders to buy a vessel myself, that matter being entrusted to their agent, Mr. Shaw. If any thing offers, shall acquaint you. I shall be at New-London in a few days, when I shall be able to inform you with more certainty. In the mean time, I am your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Captain Samuel Chew, at New-Haven.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO NATHANIEL SHAW.

Providence, September 9, 1776.

SIR: I received yours, and desire you will supply Captain Hacker with every thing that may be necessary to enable him to get with despatch his vessel ready to cruise. As to purchasing the schooner you best can tell, as you had directions in procuring the vessel. My instructions are to man her and order her where to cruise. I have no orders to buy or to direct any other person to buy; perhaps you would do well to write to the Marine Committee for orders in that matter, as I believe they had no apprehension of any war-like vessel, guns, or stores of any kind being sold without their especial orders so to do. I expect to come to New-London soon.

Am, sir, your humble servant,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, Jun., Agent for the Continental Fleet at New-London.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO HOYSTEAD HACKER.

Providence, September 9, 1776.

SIR: I received yours of the 5th instant, and observe that you think your vessel is in bad order. If it is necessary, direct you as soon as possible to grave or clean the brig and fit her for the sea, with five or six months' provisions on board. Mr. Shaw will supply you with every thing necessary. I shall come to New-London soon and give some directions about filling up your officers.

I am your friend,

ESEK HOPKINS.

To Hoystead Hacker, Esq., Commander of the Hampden, at New-London.

COLONEL DIKE TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Dorchester, September 9, 1776.

Agreeable to the orders of Major Ward, I send you an Indian fellow supposed to be a Spy from Canada. He says he was sent by Carleton to view Boston, Dorchester Point, and Nantasket. One of my soldiers says he saw this same Indian at Quebeck last April, and he was dressed as one of their Chiefs. Said soldier will be able to give your Honours a more full account. Two men belonging to Milton say that they saw said Indian at Charlestown, Number-Four, about a month ago.

All which is humbly submitted to your Honours by your humble servant,

NICHOLAS DIKE, Colonel.

To the honourable Council of the Colony of Massachusetts-Bay.

Dorchester, September 8, 1776.

A Declaration of Constant Church, an Indian belonging to the Conet Tribe, eight miles from Quebeck, now under Colonel Dike's Quarter-Guard.

The said Church says he left Quebeck after our army retreated to Montreal; that he is one of their Chiefs; that Carleton has agreed with the Conet Tribe to join his army, to give one dollar per man per day for scalping, and five dollars per scalp, and to kill all, both Tory and Whig, that will not join his army, and also women and children; and also to burn houses and barns and kill their cattle. Said Church also says that he was to come down by Onion River, and then on by Number-Four, and so on to Boston and the Castle and Nantasket, and then to return by Cohos to Quebeck. And also that Carleton was to drive our army to Albany, and the Indians were to come on our back settlements and kill, scalp, and destroy. The said Indian can act better than he will act before any body of men. The said Indian says that he was taken up at Number-Four, but they got nothing from him. Said Indian also says that he was sent by the Governour of Quebeck down to Boston about two years past.

RD. O. LYMAN, Captain.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, }
Council-Chamber, September 9, 1776. }

To the Keeper of the Gaol in CAMBRIDGE in the County of MIDDLESEX :

You are hereby ordered and directed to receive into your custody Bill, alias Constant Church, an Indian, supposed to be a Spy sent from Canada, and him safely keep in close confinement till the further order of the major part of the Council.

In the name and by order of the Council :

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

M. DE BERRUYER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Boston, September 9, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: In the quality of a French officer I have the honour of addressing myself to you to reclaim the equity in the circumstance which I find myself.

I shall have the honour to inform you that I had been sick for the space of six months in the French Cape. I then did decide it to come to New-England to establish my health. In consequence I did buy in company of two of my friends a sloop, which we did load to come to North America. We were under sail, and after we had been forty leagues at sea we sprung a leak, making five feet water in her hold in an hour. Being that distance from St. Domingo so we were not able to reach Cape Nicola Mole then. At that time we were forced always to come to this place in order to establish my health. I did then at sea, finding myself in danger, embark sundry goods and merchandise on board of an English vessel bound to Piscataqua; and as my health is repaired, I have bought a vessel at Piscataqua, being a small brig, which I ordered to be got ready for my departure for St. Domingo, to continue in my former service, and am now informed of the embargo for all shipping, for which reason it leaves me in a critical circumstance. Seeing that my conjecture is expired, besides I fear that war will be declared in France against England, which bears a true resemblance, as I was informed before I came away from France; besides one of my friends Monsieur Le Chevalier Delatouch, who commands a man-of-war at St. Domingo, who showed me a letter which he had received from his father who desired him to return to Old France immediately, which shows that there are appearances of war in France, being that there are orders to arm several vessels and frigates; in consequence of which he must go to France to exchange his ship, his not being capable to go or fight. This news ought to be believed, finding that the father of said officer is commander of the department Rocheport.

So you'll be pleased to consider each day that I stay from my duty will do me great damage, whereas if I should not find myself there in time of war I should be deprived to continue in my service, and in consequence I shall be at the King's displeasure, which I may expect if I am not there immediately, after serving twenty-seven years, although I am but thirty-six years old.

I believe, sir, that you would wish that I might return to France, and beg the permission to order my vessel may go, to which effect I have the honour to address you my request in company of the gentlemen of the Congress, in which I flatter myself you'll be favourable to me. My acknowledgment will be forever even as my sentiments, in consideration and respect with which I shall have the honor to be

Your Honour's most humble servant,

DE BERRUYER, Dunourouy,
Officier des troupes de St. Domingue.

ELEAZER RUSSELL TO NEW-HAMPSHIRE COMMITTEE OF SAFETY.

Portsmouth, September 9, 1776.

HONOURABLE SIR: By mistaking the time of the court's sitting, I am rather late in mentioning fees for the maritime office.

As no fees were ordered by authority, I did not care to act my own judgment in the case; therefore asked the opinion of several merchants on the articles in the enclosed list, and upon their advice have hitherto acted, at the same time keeping an exact account of what I have taken from each person, and promising, if the honourable court shall fix the fees lower, to return the overplus.

From wood coasters, (which is the bulk of the business at present,) I have taken only one shilling and sixpence for a pass, and that because the authority of the forts should be kept up, and proper submission made to them.

There has been but one foreign vessel cleared since my appointment, and the owners, who were present, said the fees were not enough, and offered me more.

The coasting fees are one-quarter part of what was formerly taken by the King's officers, and the foreign not more than one-fifth part.

In the Massachusetts State no offices are yet fixed, and some of their coasters have murmured at these fees being so high. One or two of our men, who had run for some time without order, have also thought hard of paying any thing. I ardently wish to be instructed on the matter, in order to proceed without blame.

Far be it from me to utter any thing that may bear the air of dictating, and yet duty to those who appointed me strongly urges that I should offer some thoughts for consideration, especially as my stand in life has given me an insight into the affairs of office, and an opportunity of observing the conduct of those who have rioted on the spoils of trade.

I have ever thought it unreasonable that an individual should grow rich upon the labours of the publick, and yet an equivalent may be expected for a person's devoting his whole time to a service. Fees that would now give a bare decent living, would be too high if trade should return to its natural flow, and exorbitant if it should be double what it was seven years past; and yet a difficulty would attend their being fixed too low now. Such are the humours of mankind that innovations are ever disagreeable, and in this case it might be much better to reduce than to enlarge.

At present, and perhaps for some time, one person may easily do the duty of the maritime office, and I honestly declare that fees which numbers of people might despise would perfectly satisfy me.

Should trade return to the course it had five or seven years ago, I'm sure from experience that the whole time of two persons would be scarce sufficient to go through the business. Then it may be proper for the profits to be such that the officer might pay a deputy or clerk, rather than return to the old, erroneous track, of multiplying officers, or paying them out of any revenue that may be collected.

Would it not be better that one list of fees should answer for the whole Continent? There ever was a murmuring when they were higher in one place than another. I should prefer their being rather lower than here.

There formerly has been, and is now, some uneasiness that a vessel of ten tons should pay as one of an hundred. This I submit, after mentioning that there is the same expense of paper, and often more time, in doing the business of the smaller. The case seems similar to going through the courts to recover a debt of ten pounds or a hundred pounds.

I have made no mention in the enclosed list of endorsing registers as often as vessels change their masters, or of cancelling or filing bonds, both which occasion considerable writing.

If I have erred in offering my thoughts, it's being from a sense of duty I hope will expiate the fault; and am, honourable sir, your most obedient and dutiful humble servant,

E. RUSSELL.

To the Hon. Meshech Weare, Esq.

WILLIAM LEE TO C. F. W. DUMAS.

London, September 10, 1776.

SIR: The 27th ult. and the 7th instant, in the absence of my brother, Arthur Lee, your two letters for him came safe to my hands. My brother is now on the Continent, and perhaps may write to you from where he is. The declaration of independence on the part of America, has totally changed the nature of the contest between that country and Great Britain. It is now on the part of Great Britain a scheme of conquest, which few imagine can succeed. Independence is universally adopted by every individual in the thirteen United States, and it has altered the face of things here. The Tories, and particularly the Scotch, hang their heads and keep a profound silence on the subject; the Whigs do not say much, but rather seem to think the step a wise one, on the part of America, and what was an inevitable consequence of the measures taken by the British Ministry. In short, every one wants to form his judgment by the event of the present campaign, as something decisive is expected to happen from the arrangements under General and Lord Howe, and General Carleton, before the meeting of Parliament, which will be the 24th of October.

In the mean time every effort is made to prevent France from taking any open or even private part with America, for which purpose Mr. Stanley, Mr. Jenkinson, one of the Lords of the Treasury and confidential friend of Lord Bute and of the Solicitor-General, Mr. Wedderburne, have been at Paris some time to aid the negotiations of the British Minister, Lord Stormont. As far as money will answer their purpose, it will not be spared. The French are generally acute enough in observing what is for their interest, but most people here are at a loss to conceive what plan they have in view, as they have not hitherto, as we know of, taken any part with America.

The publick papers will tell you all the material news we have from America, but in general it is supposed the Americans will stand greatly in want of arms, ammunition, and artillery, to oppose such a force as is sent against them, and it is evident they have not experienced officers sufficient to manage such extensive operations as they have in hand. Should you have occasion to write to me, you may address, under cover, as you do to my brother.

I am, with esteem, sir, &c.,

WILLIAM LEE.

GENERAL LEWIS TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 17: Referred to Board of War.]

Williamsburg, September 10, 1776.

SIR: I this day received your orders directing three more of the Continental battalions in this State to march to New-York. The Fourth, commanded by Colonel Stephen, the Fifth, and the Sixth, are those I shall order to march with all possible speed. I heartily wish they were more fit for service. Near half of them are sick, and the Seventh in the same condition, which is the only regiment left, the Ninth, on the Eastern Shore, excepted. The time for which the Second Battalion was enlisted being expired, all are gone to their respective homes. The officers have received bounty money, and are endeavouring to reenlist them and others for the completion of that battalion. I have ordered an express to General Moore, and another to Brigadier-General Stephen, with his commission and your orders.

General Lee not yet returned, nor have I heard of his being on the way.

I am, honourable sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

ANDREW LEWIS, Brigadier-General.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COL. HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 172.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

SIR: Enclosed you have Captain Lines' bill of lading, for one hundred half-barrels of powder, belonging to our Province. You will be pleased to have it wagoned to the Head-of-Elk, and sent to Baltimore Town, to the care of the Committee of that place. We are, &c.

To Colonel Henry Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

[No. 173.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have desired Colonel Hollingsworth to wagon from Christine Bridge to the Head-of-Elk, one hundred half-barrels of powder, belonging to our Province, and to send the same to your care when it arrives. Be pleased to stow it in the new magazine. We think it would be prudent to remove a considerable part of the Province powder that is now stored in Baltimore to the same place, as it may be dangerous to keep large quantities of that article within reach of the enemy. We are, &c.

To the Committee of Baltimore County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GENERAL BUCHANAN.

[No. 174.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

SIR: It has been represented to this Board that it's absolutely necessary that competent Guards be kept at the Magazine and Laboratory at Baltimore Town, and that Captain Smith's company cannot perform that duty, and do duty at the fortifications at the same time. We therefore request the favour of you to order such of the Militia of your County upon that service as you may think requisite.

We are, &c.

To General Buchanan.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL SMALLWOOD AND GENERAL BEALL.

[No. 175.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed we send you an order of the Council of Safety, relative to the arms belonging to this State. You are also requested to cause the several Captains in your department to return an exact list of all the guns, cartouch-boxes, knapsacks and haversacks, camp-kettles, blankets, tents, canteens, wooden bottles, priming-wires and brushes, and every other the effects or utensils belonging to this State, carried away by their respective companies, that we may know how to raise a proper account against the Continent for the same. This may be attended with some little trouble, but 'tis absolutely necessary to be done for the benefit of the publick. We request, therefore, that you will give proper directions, and make the returns as soon as conveniently can be. We are, &c.

To Brigadier-General Rezin Beall and Colonel William Smallwood.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO JESSE HOLLINGSWORTH.

[No. 176.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

SIR: You are requested to sell at vendue all the flour you have belonging to this State that you think unfit for baking into bread. We are, &c.

To Mr. Jesse Hollingsworth.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GERARD HOPKINS.

[No. 177.]

Annapolis, September 10, 1776.

SIR: We this day gave an order to Captain Forrest to receive from you one hundred camp-kettles. We must request that they may be put on board the Defence's tender; and that by the same vessel you send some cannon shot, and that they may sorted in the following manner, viz: four hundred of four-pounders, four hundred of three-pounders, and two hundred of two-pound shot; and also, eighty-six canteens, with as many priming-wires and brushes.

We are, &c.

To Mr. Gerard Hopkins, Deputy Commissary.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO WILLIAM WHIPPLE.

Philadelphia, September 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: The proposal of Lord Howe for the exchange of Generals Sullivan and Lord Stirling for Prescott and McDonald is accepted by the Congress. We have also agreed to send three of our members, not as private gentlemen, but as a committee of our body, to meet Lord Howe, to know of him whether he has any terms of peace to propose, and what they are, &c., &c. Whether Lord Howe will meet them as a committee of Congress, is uncertain. The gentlemen appointed are Doctor Franklin, Mr. Adams, and Mr. Rutledge. The two former had the unanimous vote of Congress, and at the first vote there was a tie between Colonel R. H. Lee and Mr. Rutledge; but as Mr. Lee had opposed the measure, he declined being voted for, as he said he could not accept. The votes then were for Stockton and Rutledge, and the latter carried it.

Nothing has since been done about the Confederation, as the Congress is pretty thin, and hurried with other business.

I am sorry to hear you did not arrive at Boston till the 20th ultimo, as I fear you will not return here so soon as I could wish; and what makes me more anxious for your speedy return, is my ill state of health, which has hindered my constant attendance at Congress. I have, for above a fortnight, been troubled with a very severe cough and asthma, and with a slow fever, if not a hectic; and, though I have attended the Congress every day, I have been often obliged to leave it long before it rose. I am loath that our Colony should be unrepresented, and therefore hope you will return as speedily as possible.

There is a report from the Board of War now before Congress, for putting our army on a more respectable footing than at present. The substance is, that eighty-four regiments should be enlisted to serve during the war, and to give, as an encouragement, one hundred acres of land and ——— dollars bounty, to be proportioned to such State, who are to take care that it's quota is raised. The proportion set to our Colony is four regiments, which is too much, and shall try to get it altered if I am able to attend Congress when it comes on. This plan, perhaps, may be somewhat altered, but will, I am pretty sure, be adopted in the main. Quere: whether, as this is like to be the case, it is best for our State to do any thing at present about raising the regiment ordered in the Spring for our own defence; and whether petitioning Congress to take into their pay our Colonial troops will not be best, considering all circumstances?

You'll excuse me, as I am hardly able to write.

I am your friend, &c., &c., JOSIAH BARTLETT.
To William Whipple.

PETITION OF COLONEL SETH WARNER.

[Read September 10, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Delegates of the Thirteen UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress assembled, the representation of the subscriber humbly sheweth:

That, having been honoured with your orders to raise a regiment on the New-Hampshire Grants for the service of the United States, he advised with the officers who had formerly commanded under him, as well as those more recently appointed to command, and was much troubled to find but two Captains of the late appointment, and not one of the former, who would serve under Elisha Painter, Esq., last July commissioned a Major for said intended regiment. A sense of duty to the publick alone constrains your memorialist to relate any thing that may affect Major Painter's reputation. But he rests assured, that, in the present critical situation of affairs, all parties concerned must be better served by making your Honours acquainted with the real state of the case, than by suppressing the whole or any part of this intelligence.

The Captains in question are remarkably popular, and have great influence with the men many of them have commanded. With their assistance, a regiment would, in all probability, be readily completed. Without them, nothing to purpose can be expected; which disappointment would unspeakably mortify your Honours' most devoted and obedient, humble servant,

SETH WARNER.

Philadelphia, September 10, 1776.

MEMORIAL OF COLONEL WARNER AND CAPTAINS HOPKINS AND BROWNSON.

[Read September 11, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the Honourable the Continental Congress, now assembled at PHILADELPHIA, the Petition of WAIT HOPKINS and GIDEON BROWNSON, in behalf of themselves and Captains OLIVER POTTER, MICAH VAIL, and WILLIAM FITCH, humbly sheweth:

That, on the 28th of July, 1775, your petitioners were appointed Captains in the regiment established by the Provincial Congress of New-York, under the command of Colonel Seth Warner.

Your petitioners, in full faith of receiving the premiums paid to other companies in the State of New-York, advanced much of their own money; which premiums, together with their back rations, are still due and owing to them, and that after repeated applications to the State of New-York for a settlement of affairs.

Your petitioners being again called upon to enter into the publick service, and to make application to a soldiery to whom they are unavoidably in arrears, implore your Honours to prescribe some way for the discharge of these just demands, which will greatly facilitate the raising the recruits needed upon the present pressing occasion. And, as in duty bound, they shall ever pray, &c.

WAIT HOPKINS,
Philadelphia, September 10, 1776. GIDEON BROWNSON.

N. B. As your petitioners have incurred much extra expense in prosecution of the moneys due to themselves, their subalterns and soldiers, they would humbly request to be considered in that article, together with those petitioned for.

LORD HOWE TO DR. FRANKLIN.

Eagle, off Bedlow's Island, September 10, 1776.

Lord Howe presents his compliments to Dr. Franklin, and, according to the tenour of his favour of the 8th, will attend, to have the pleasure of meeting him and Messrs. Adams and Rutledge, to-morrow morning, at the house on Staten-Island, opposite to Amboy, as early as the few conveniences for traveling by land on Staten-Island will admit. Lord Howe, upon his arrival at the place appointed, will send a boat, (if he can procure it in time,) with a flag of truce, over to Amboy; and requests the Doctor and the other gentlemen will postpone their intended favour of passing over to meet him, until they are informed, as above, of his arrival to attend them there.

In case the weather should prove unfavourable for Lord Howe to pass in his boat to Staten-Island to-morrow, as from the present appearance there is some reason to suspect, he will take the next earliest opportunity that offers for that purpose. In this intention he may be further retarded, having been an invalid lately; but will certainly give the most timely notice of that inability. He, however, flatters himself he shall not have occasion to make further excuses on that account.*

R. H. HARRISON TO JOSHUA WENTWORTH.

New-York, September 10, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by his Excellency to acknowledge his receipt of your letter of the 26th ultimo, advising of the capture made of the ship Nelly Frigate, and of the acquittal of the brig Elizabeth, on a trial had the 22d; also, of your appealing to Congress from that decision.

Removed at such a distance as his Excellency is, and involved in a multiplicity of important business, it is impossible for him to give directions about, or to pay attention to, the Continental armed vessels at the eastward. Therefore, at the same time that he doubts not but your conduct is right respecting the appeal, he apprehends you should correspond with the Marine Committee appointed by Congress, in all matters that may occur in your department, presuming that they were appointed and are intended for that purpose. His Excellency can only repeat what he has already said, that the laws prescribed by Congress are the only rules by which you can conduct yourself. It is not his wish nor in his power to give any orders or advice authorizing a deviation or departure from them. If, in any instances, hardships of a peculiar nature cast up, Congress, and Congress alone, have it in their power to relieve, on proper representations being made.

The estate of Colonel Lee, late of Marblehead, having lent the Continent some guns to fit out their armed vessels, which are now wanted and applied for, you will deliver Nathaniel Tracy, Esq., eight that were at Portsmouth, which were taken in some of the prizes. Mr. Tracy has a claim to ten, which his Excellency would have replaced, if you have so many. The reason of mentioning eight is, that he has no account of your having more.

I am, &c.,

R. H. HARRISON.

To Joshua Wentworth, Esq., Portsmouth.

GENERAL MIFFLIN TO GENERAL HEATH.

Mount Washington, September 10, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL HEATH: The enemy are making dispositions to land at Harlem. They will probably attempt Frog's Point at the same time in which their landing may be urged at Harlem. That consideration has induced General Washington to order me to remain at Colonel Morris's, and upon the first intelligence of the enemy moving towards Harlem, to order one thousand men to join me at Morris's.

* The Committee being arrived at Amboy, opposite to the Island, and in possession of the Americans, the Admiral sent over his barge to receive and bring them to him, and to leave one of his principal officers as a hostage for their safe return. The Committee of Congress had not desired a hostage, and they therefore took the officer back with them. The Admiral met them at their landing, and conducted them through his guards to a convenient room for conference.—W. T. F.

from Mount Washington, and with them and the Maryland troops, march to the assistance of our friends at Harlem. I have therefore ordered Colonels Cortlandt, Martin, Newcomb, and Furman, to hold themselves in readiness to join me at Colonel Morris's; Colonels Hutchinson and Phillips to remain at Mount Washington with five hundred men as a garrison.

If a landing is attempted at Frog's Point and no danger appears of an attempt at Harlem, I am to join you with three battalions from Mount Washington and all the Marylanders. For that purpose, I have ordered several boats to be ready near Colonel Morris's, to carry our men over to the Heights of Harlem, which will save us much time.

The General expects you to prepare for a brunt on the side of Frog's Point, or he expects one at Harlem. I told him your disposition was made and you all ready.

I am, with respect, your obedient, humble servant,

THO. MIFFLIN.

To Major-General Heath, at King's Bridge.

COLONEL REED TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 10, 1776.

SIR: The great extent of the army, and the confusion consequent thereupon, for want of a sufficient number of experienced officers, has induced the General to appoint Major Henley Deputy Adjutant-General, and Major Scammel as assistant to me in my department. Major Henley is with General Spencer. Major Scammel is ordered to repair to your division. From his accuracy and industry I hope order and regularity will prevail, and doubt not he will be useful to you, as well as, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JOS. REED.

To Major-General Heath.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, September 10, 1776—quarter past 1, A. M.

DEAR SIR: The enclosed I have just received in one to me by express from his Excellency General Washington, by which I am informed that all the Maryland troops that were in the city the day before yesterday, were yesterday ordered to march and join the troops at King's Bridge and its dependencies, and that three companies more arrived the last evening, which are also ordered to march this morning.

You will, therefore, early this morning, order those troops which arrived yesterday at Mount Washington (I mean those from Maryland) to march to this post, and the three companies to halt at Mount Washington. Two regiments of Light-Horse from Connecticut are ordered here by Governor Trumbull, as is also a number of the Militia.

I am yours, &c.,

WM. HEATH.

To General Mifflin.

GENERAL HEATH TO GENERAL MIFFLIN.

King's Bridge, September 10, 1776—6 o'clock, P. M.

DEAR SIR: I have just returned from Frog's Point, Hunt's Point, and Morrisania, having been riding ever since ten o'clock this morning, without even so much as alighting to dine. I find the enemy making a very considerable movement from Long-Island to Montrossor's Island, where the boats have been passing all this day. I have ordered two hundred men, as a picket, this night to the widow Morris's, and General Clinton's brigade to lie on their arms. General Clinton is yet absent. I have this moment received a line from him, informing that the brig has been collecting boats all this day, and at two o'clock was standing up for Frog's Point. I think you would do well to be at the Pennsylvania camp this night, if you can; if not, that you repair there immediately on the first alarm, as you will be much wanted with that brigade.

I am, dear sir, yours affectionately,

WM. HEATH.

To General Mifflin.

GENERAL M'DOUGALL TO GENERAL HEATH.

September 10, 1776.

SIR: Early this morning about one thousand of the enemy landed on Montrossor's Island, and it's probable many more will be landed there for the convenience of landing on the main, or to raise a battery to facilitate their landing at Morrisania. I judged it necessary to give you this intelligence.

Your humble servant,

ALEX. M'DOUGALL.

To General Heath or General Mifflin.

COLONEL SWARTWOUT TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, King's Bridge, September 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: As Lieutenant-Colonel Ferres of my regiment hath got liberty from General Clinton to return home, upon condition either to resign his commission or return to the regiment when he gets in a better state of health, he tells me when he was appointed by the County Committee that he was not fitting for that commission—for that he had a disorder very often which rendered him unfit for the service of an officer. The complaint of that disorder is that he is spleeny and a dizziness in the head, and that attends him whenever he has trouble. We can expect nothing but trouble in our present condition, so, consequently, he will not be fit for the service of this present campaign; for, should he not be here when we have action, he cannot be of great service to the regiment. He further tells me he has spoke with the General, and should be glad that Colonel Ludington might take his place as Lieutenant-Colonel, but the General tells me that he intends to leave that to your honourable Board. In my humble opinion, it would give greater satisfaction to the officers of my regiment that Major Thompson might be appointed to the commission of Lieutenant-Colonel, and Captain Mott Major, as he holds the oldest commission in my regiment as Captain. My regiment has been joined for some time. If matters should be ordered in another manner it might be productive of bad consequences, as I have seen several instances in the army heretofore; and as there are several of my regiment that have got no commissions, and some that have had subalterns' commissions, which were appointed as Captains by the field officers of the Militia. If there were some blank commissions sent to the General, he might fill them up agreeable to the muster rolls.

General Clinton tells me he has wrote you about the rank of the several regiments. I am almost confident my commission is the oldest of the regiments now raised, but as the General has left that matter to you, I am content to submit the same to your consideration, not doubting but you will do justice. As to my part, I can assure you, gentlemen, I mean to make no uneasiness about the question. I hope you will consider that the whole charge of the regiment lies on my shoulder, as Major Thompson is on the command.

I am, gentlemen, with great respect, your very humble servant,

JACOBUS SWARTWOUT.

To the Honourable Convention of the State of New-York, at Fishkill.

GENERAL JAMES CLINTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Fort Montgomery, September 10, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Yours of the 8th of this instant I just received, and am glad to hear your Excellency has ordered a reinforcement of six hundred men, which I hope will be sufficient, and are as many as we can find barrack room for, if the three barracks were finished that I have ordered to be built.

I hope the Quartermaster-General can supply me with the nails, agreeable to an order sent him—and if not already sent, he may send them with one of the four sloops that goes down to bring the sick from the Hospital in New-York to Orangetown.

We are busy in fortifying these garrisons with the other posts as fast as possible, and order all the garrison out every day, both officers and soldiers, except those on guard and the sick, and a very few number of cooks, and those detached in the Artillery, who are employed daily in making cartridges, &c., and learning the Artillery exercise, for which I have as yet exempted them from any other kind of duty, in order to encourage them to learn.

I have likewise received two letters this day from Congress. Copies of them you have enclosed.

I have just now stopped Captain Dirck Schuyler's sloop from Albany, and sent her down to New-York to remove the sick to Orangetown.

I have ordered Lieutenant Henry Pawling of the Second New-York Regiment, to proceed down the river with a whale-boat and eleven men, to press the first three good sloops he meets with for the same purpose.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
JAMES CLINTON, Brigadier-General.

To His Excellency General Washington, Head-Quarters, New-York.

REV. DAVID JONES TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: When I left Philadelphia, Dr. Franklin delivered to me a large bundle of papers sealed and directed, and as he was reserved respecting the contents, I did not think it proper to send them by this express, but I hope shortly to have the pleasure to see you, when I shall give verbally the news of New-York. There is here a draft of the Militia to go to Fort Stanwix. It is said three parties are coming against them. I fear we are but weak in that department; but General Schuyler uses his best endeavours to reinforce them. We hear of a battle on the Lake, below Crown-Point; this hurries my return; I shall therefore come with the first wagon.

As the express will not wait, I must subscribe myself your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

DAVID JONES.

To Major-General Gates.

DR. JONATHAN POTTS TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, September 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: I found on my arrival here a quantity of old linen had been sent in by the Committee of Salisbury, which I have forwarded to Ticonderoga, under the care of Doctor Tillotson, one of the senior Surgeons of the General Hospital, whom I beg leave to recommend to your Honour as a worthy gentleman. He has directions from me to make it up into bandages and lint for the use of the army.

I have received a letter from Dr. Stringer this day, which informs me that he could not procure that supply of medicines which he thought necessary for our Hospital at Philadelphia, and intends to proceed immediately to New-England to purchase such articles as we are in want of. He mentions no news from New-York, but that General Schuyler had authentick intelligence that seven hundred of the enemy were at Oswego, and that Colonel Fanning had gone over to the enemy.

Your Honour may be assured, should any fresh intelligence arrive at this post, I will immediately forward it to you.

I am your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,

JONATHAN POTTS.

To Major-General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO CAPTAIN VARICK.

Tyonderoga, September 10, 1776.

DEAR SIR: This moment I received yours of the 8th instant from Albany, with General Schuyler's letter of that date. I shall write fully to the General as soon as I receive accounts from General Arnold, as those are every hour expected; in the mean time, this is sent express by Skenesborough to order two of the blacksmith's bellows from hence hither, as the three row-galleys here cannot be fitted without them. This is, therefore, to desire you will without delay replace the bellows we now take from Skenesborough.

General Waterbury arrived yesterday, and is busy equipping the galleys, and will sail with them immediately after they are finished. Colonel Cortlandt has my orders to command at Skenesborough, but has a slight touch of the ague. I wish Colonel Wynkoop may be well enough to go there directly.

I am, sir, your affectionate, humble servant,

HORATIO GATES.

To Captain Varick.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL CORTLANDT.

Tyonderoga, September 10, 1776.

SIR: On receipt of this you will immediately order Lieutenant-Colonel Abijah Brown (who is now at Skenesborough) to this post. If he offers to make any hesitation or delay, you will instantly put him under an arrest and send him down under a good guard.

To Lieutenant-Colonel Cortlandt, Skenesborough.

COLONEL HARTLEY TO GENERAL GATES.

Crown-Point, September 10, 1776—8 o'clock, A. M.

HONOURED SIR: Mr. Brooks's and my other boat are just now returned; very bad weather and strong winds prevented him from being here sooner.

On Thursday it seems there had been some firing of cannon, and Friday morning a small action at Windmill-Point; this with the discharging of the loaded artillery to get them in order, has occasioned the alarm. It is very strange that the firing could be heard so far.

A considerable number of the enemy all around the fleet. Mr. Brooks discovered the tracks of a large party in the woods. This regiment has had one killed and four wounded.

Mr. Brooks has had a great deal of fatigue; but I have persuaded him to go up with this letter. He will be able to inform you particularly concerning the fleet, &c.

One Cross, a man who lives near Cumberland-Head, informed some of my men at Gilliland's that the enemy intended to be up in a week or ten days. This perhaps has no weight.

I am happy to find that no accident has befallen our fleet. I hope the alarm has otherwise had no bad consequences.

Twenty-four men of the detachment taken by General Arnold are returning back sick. I hope my regiment will be relieved, as the party has been gone three weeks.

I would be glad the news from New-York may also be favourable.

My scouts have discovered no enemy near this.

The gondolas I have ordered to proceed down this morning.

I am, honoured sir, with the greatest respect, your most humble servant,

THOS. HARTLEY.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. The oar-makers will be up this evening.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, September 10, 1776.

SIR: When your Excellency was pleased to request the Militia of this State to be sent forward with all possible expedition to reinforce the army at New-York, no time was lost to expedite their march; and am happy to find the spirit and zeal that appeared in the people of this State to yield every assistance in their power in the present critical situation of our affairs. The season, indeed, was most unfavourable for so many of our farmers and labourers to leave home. Many had not even secured their harvest; the greater part had secured but a small part even of their hay, and the preparation for the crop of winter's grain for the ensuing year totally omitted; but they (the most of them) left all to afford their help in protecting and defending their just rights and liberties against the attempt of a numerous army sent to invade them. The suddenness of the requisition, the haste and expedition required in the raising, equipping and marching such a number of men after the large drafts before made on this State, engrossed all our time and attention.

On such a sudden demand of the Militia, your Excellency could not expect to find them all completely officered with either field or commission officers, when you consider that many of both were just before engaged in the service in the eight regiments we had so lately raised. At that time the Assembly could not think it proper to supply their places in the Militia by appointing other officers in the room and stead of those who only had left the Militia for a few months' service in the army, then to return: beside, it cannot be expected but, on such a sudden call as this, many officers may be sick, or at present unfit for service, or some necessary hindrance which may prevent their going forward at this time. And if in these cases we had undertaken to appoint and commission field commission officers and subalterns in the room or places of those absent or otherwise hindered, in a little time we should soon have the greatest part of our Militia to become officers: for when once formally appointed and commissioned, they must remain, and others in whose room they are appointed, when they return, would be out of the Militia, and totally useless; beside many other inconveniences which might follow; and as it is necessary that every company be properly officered, at least in proportion to their numbers, and that those who do the duty of an officer in a particular rank, be considered and treated as an officer of the rank in which he does duty. To explain myself: A colonelcy is vacant, the Lieutenant-Colonel must act for the present company as Colonel, the Major as Lieutenant-Colonel, the eldest Captain in the regiment as Major, and if a captaincy is vacant the First Lieutenant; and when they return they will of course be reduced to their former rank in the Militia at home, to act as Captain, and so in succession. This is the only way I can possibly imagine to relieve the difficulty. Our Militia set out with these ideas; they were encouraged by them; and we could conceive of no difficulty to the publick, either in point of expense or expediency, for the vacancy to be filled up in this way, and to do the duty, take the rank, and receive the pay during the present service. This I am induced to suggest to your Excellency, as I am informed a great uneasiness has arisen by means of those who had taken rank in the manner above proposed, and have been surprised and obliged to relinquish their claim. I can conceive of no possible method beside to supply and fill up these vacancies. Am persuaded it will be agreeable to this State and will be attended with the least inconveniences of any method which occurs, and will give great satisfaction to the Militia who have joined your army, as well as those now going forward; and should be extremely sorry to have any damp on the spirits of so many who have in this critical time, sacrificed their interest beyond most others on the present occasion. Therefore should be much obliged to your Excellency, if no insuperable objections should arise, which at present do not occur to me, if orders might be given for our Militia to be filled up with officers proper to take rank in succession in the respective regiments, in manner as above proposed, for the present campaign; and am, with the greatest respect and esteem, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Lebanon, September 10, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your favour of the 2d instant, and am greatly obliged by the readiness with which the payment of our arrears for last year and our bills for advancement this Summer was ordered as soon as it was in your power, and for the encouragement you give of favouring me with copies of the transactions of the last Indian treaty. The money received by Mr. Williams, I have the pleasure to hear, is safe arrived at Hartford and lodged with the Treasurer. The invoices were sent by the teams that carried the clothing, and will be delivered by the teamsters with their loads; if these will not be sufficient, new ones, upon advice, may be easily procured and sent you. It gives me the greatest pleasure to find the measures taken to prevent the inroads of the small-pox on the Northern Army have proved effectual, and that the liberty I have taken to hint my fears and sentiments on that subject has been received with your wonted candour. I sincerely lament that you should experience the want of it in respect to any part of your conduct, and especially that it should be found in any gentlemen in high offices. The sufferings of our army in the Northern Department last year, though in a great measure resulting from the nature of the service and inevitable, have left a deep impression upon the minds of the soldiery and laid us under the necessity of offering a double bounty this year to induce men to engage in that service. To prevent as far as possible every occasion of complaint of a similar nature this year, seems as well to be dictated by sound policy as justice to the soldiery. With this view I have sent forward clothing and medicine upon being informed of their wants, without waiting for particular orders from Congress, and again the last week I have ordered two hundred sheep, with some salt and vinegar, to be sent over to our regiments with the camp utensils and tents which had been requested, upon being informed that our people were many of them sick at Skenesborough and in want of refreshments, especially mutton-broth and salt for their fresh meat which served to them six times a week, the want of which is supposed to be in part the cause of their sickness.

I am sensible, sir, the great variety of business on your hands renders it impossible for you to attend minutely to the transactions of your officers in lower departments; neither am I able to determine how far the complaints made are just, or the deficiencies complained of inevitable; but I must entreat your indulgence whilst I suggest that I am informed by what seems to me very good authority, that at Skenesborough scarce any provisions besides meat and bread are issued to the troops; that the sick suffer for want of wines and other refreshments; and that what little is to be purchased in the neighbourhood is procured by the soldiers at their own expense, and at the most exorbitant rates. Surely the Commissaries might furnish salt, vinegar, and vegetables, such as beans and peas at least, with suitable refreshments for the sick? If the idea should this year be fixed in the minds of the soldiery, that they are neglected in the Northern Department, or not sufficiently attended to, we must despair of engaging men for that service in future. The anxiety I feel for our troops, and for the future as well as the present defence of these States, will plead my excuse for troubling you with these matters. I must entreat your pardon for again mentioning the old gun-barrels and locks found at Croton Point and Ticonderoga. I am informed there is a large number of arms that have been in service and unfit for use now at Albany, Ticonderoga, and Fort George, &c. Our extreme want of good fire-arms compels me again to request they may be sent to me to be fitted for use.

I am, with great esteem and regard, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL GATES.

Lebanon, September 10, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your favour of the 2d instant, and am glad to find it is in our power in any measure to relieve your wants, or contribute to the publick service in your department.

I am informed our battalions at Skenesborough are many of them sick, and in want of proper refreshments. To alleviate this inconvenience, the teams going and gone from hence with camp utensils, a few tents, and clothing, will carry some salt and vinegar; and I have also ordered two hundred sheep to be purchased and sent forward immediately. This, I am sensible, will bring them only a temporary relief. I find it is the opinion of some that their feeding principally upon fresh meat, and being destitute of vegetables, milk, salt, &c., are among the causes of their sickness. Surely it is in the power of the Commissaries to furnish salt, and vinegar, and vegetables, at least dry beans and peas. You are not insensible how much the soldiery complained for want of necessaries to the northward last year. 'Tis evident a disinclination to the service that way will ensue, and the consequences are equally evident.

I am informed there are some old gun-barrels and locks and arms rendered unfit for service at Crown-Point, Ticonderoga, and Fort George. Could they be sent to me by the return of some of our teams, I could soon have them repaired and fitted for use, and as they are so much wanted, I could wish you would give orders to that purpose. The value of them we should expect to account for with the Continent.

I am, with great truth and esteem, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Connecticut, September 10th, 1776,

Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, Jed. Elderkin, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Esqrs.

Voted and Resolved, That the Military Companies in the first and third societies in Saybrook be excused from marching towards New-York with the Regiment they belong to, at present; and that they remain at home, to assist in erecting the Fort there till further orders. (Copy delivered Captain Samuel Shipman.)

This Board do appoint Gurdon Saltonstall, Esq., Brigadier-General of the nine Regiments of Militia of this State, now ordered to march towards New-York, and rendezvous at or near Westchester; and his Honour the Governour is desired to grant him a commission accordingly.

This Board do appoint Oliver Smith, Esq., to be Lieutenant-Colonel of the Eighth Regiment of Militia for the present expedition towards New-York, and desire his Honour the Governour to grant him a commission accordingly.

And it is further Resolved and Ordered, That said Smith do proceed with said Regiment on the expedition towards New-York.

Voted and Resolved, That the First and Second Companies in the town of New-London, be excused from marching with the Regiment towards New-York, and be permitted to stay at home for the defence of the port and harbour of New-London.

This Board do appoint Dr. Thomas Gray, to be Surgeon's Mate and Physician of the ship Oliver Cromwell, and his Honour the Governour is desired to give him a warrant accordingly.

RICHARD LAW TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Milford, September 10, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Agreeable to your Honour's direction, have opened the enclosed from General Washington, and observed the contents, and now forward the same. Am happy to find the General highly approves every plan and movement made and taken by your Honour. Observe he thinks it best to have them rendezvous from King's Bridge eastward, through Westchester, along upon the Sound. Have seen and conversed with Colonel Fitch; and should have seen Mr. Squiers, but he was gone to New-York, and is expected home to-day, and intend to-morrow to see him. But by what I can learn of Mr. Fitch, it will be impossible to get tents. He says he has not been able to procure but three; and also camp-kettles, &c., are not to be had here. He tells me he heard they were to be had in New-York; advised him to send down immediately and procure them. I should think it would be best to extend the troops along the Sound as far eastward as Eastchester, if not Rockal; by that means, perhaps houses and barns may be found sufficient to supply the want of tents. However, as soon as Mr. Squiers returns, shall be better able to acquaint your Honour of what can be provided by them.

Have nothing new; but a heavy cannonading has been heard here all the forenoon, supposed to be at Hell-Gate. Mr. Gray was taken sick here, and another express was forwarded in his room.

Remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
RICHARD LAW.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., Governour of the State of Connecticut.
[Per favour of Mr. Gray.]

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 10, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I just now received your favours of yesterday, since which I have taken Colonel Abram Gardiner, who tendered the oath of allegiance to the inhabitants of South and Easthampton. I am told he, with a party of men, surrounded the houses of Colonel Hedges, at Sag-Harbour, and Colonel Mulford, at Easthampton, and obliged them to take the oath, much against their inclination. This gentleman with the other two, are inhabitants of and taken in the State of New-York. I should think it highly proper they were confined until they could have their trials in that State; but this I submit to your Honour's better judgment. Before I received your favour, I had sent off the greater part of my detachment to the assistance of my distressed countrymen on Long-Island.

They are endeavouring to get off their stocks, and to prevent the impositions of the boatmen, some of them having been so unreasonable as to exact one-half the stock they carried off for freight. By these cruel impositions, the inhabitants of Long-Island suffer much. Two or three of these hardhearted wretches I myself have detected and prevented, since I have been at this place. As soon as the detachment returns, I shall give Major Ely at Southold notice, and with your Excellency's approbation, prevail on him to join me at Huntington, as nothing of consequence can be achieved eastward of that place.

By what I can learn of the enemy, their whole attention is bent on their operations at New-York; it is possible we may do them some mischief before they are aware of it. I am extremely obliged to your Honour for the assistance you have afforded me, as it gives me an opportunity of pleasing his Excellency General Washington, who has just wrote to me to endeavour to distress the enemy all in my power. If I have no other motive, this request would prove a powerful incentive. I shall not fail to give your Honour advice of every material occurrence.

In the mean while, I have the honour to be, with esteem, your most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

P. S. Your Excellency will attribute to the hurry I was in, and not to inattention or neglect, my omission in not dating my letter of the 8th instant.

COLONEL DAVIS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Norwich, September 10, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty to inform your Excellency of my safe arrival at Norwich last evening, after a long detention in getting up the Sound, by reason of the enemy and contrary winds. Although I have endeavoured to make all despatch in my power, and from the best advice I can get here, together with my own judgment, think it not prudent to come any farther by water, am now making preparations to come by land, with all possible expedition.

Pursuant to my orders from General Ward, as expected when I left Boston to come up to York by water, not knowing the Sound was blocked up, did not bring money to pay the vessels' pilots and sundry other charges that will arise. If your Excellency think proper, please to send me one hundred pounds or more, for which I must give an account, I hope to your satisfaction.

Any orders your Excellency shall be pleased to send, shall be thankfully received and punctually obeyed, by your most obedient servant,

JOSHUA DAVIS.

COMMODORE HOPKINS TO THE MARINE COMMITTEE.

Providence, September 10, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have copies of Captain Hacker's and Mr. Shaw's letters, by which you will know circumstance of the brig and the schooner which Mr. Shaw was to purchase. The Alfred is this day going to Newport, there to be hove down, as upon examining find her bottom so foul that she will not do well to cruise until cleaned.

The Andrew Doria has sent in here two brigs—one from Dunmore, with salt, tobacco, rice, and flour, one phaeton and chaise, bound to Antigua; the other with fifty hogsheads of rum, from Barbadoes to the land. Captain Biddle had also taken a ship with fifteen thousand bushels of wheat, which Lieutenant McDougall thinks was bound to the westward.

There has also arrived in this port this week a large ship loaded with sugar, from Grenada, and a brig with rum from Antigua, taken by the sloop Independence of this place. The people on board Captain Biddle's prizes inform that they left the Columbus in latitude thirty-six, and when they parted a sixty-gun ship was in chase of her.

The whole attention of merchants and seamen at present seems to be on privateering, through the whole New-England Colonies. Any small carriage guns will now sell at the extraordinary price of four hundred dollars per ton.

I believe if you were to give the same prize money, which is one-half, as they do, it would be a great deal easier to man the Continental vessels.

I am, with great regard, your most humble servant,
ESEK HOPKINS.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of the Marine Committee, at Philadelphia.

SILAS DEANE TO C. W. F. DUMAS.

Paris, September 11, 1776.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of yours of the 29th ultimo, of the 2d, 5th, and 7th of this month, and at the same time to make my excuses for not answering them earlier; which was owing to my hurry of business, in part, and part to my hopes of being able to send you something agreeable from America, when I should next write you. Forgive, therefore, this seeming inattention, and accept my warmest thanks for the kind sentiments which you and your good lady entertain for me and my country. The cause of the Americans is the cause of mankind in general, and naturally interests the generous and the good in every part of the world.

The measures you took before my arrival, respecting this Court, were perfectly right, and you may rely on my secrecy as to your concerns. Our commerce is now on as good a footing in this kingdom and in Spain, as the commerce of any other nation, and I trust will very soon have an important preference. When I said in a former letter we wanted only a friendly intercourse by way of commerce, I had not the vanity to suppose the actual assistance of European Powers was not an object deserving attention; but I must say seriously, that if the American commerce can be established with the trading Powers of Europe, and if those Powers of Europe would protect that commerce, it would be all the assistance necessary; and the Colonies by land would be more than equal to any thing Great Britain could bring against them. You are entirely right in saying that the House of Bourbon are the allies we should first and principally court. France is at the head of this House, and therefore what is done here is sure to be done by the whole. This, therefore, requires my whole attention, and I can only say to you, my prospects are nowise discouraging.

As to the King of Prussia, I will, in my next, explain more fully my meaning, and at the same time send to you a state of the United Colonies, of their commerce, of their present contest, with some thoughts or observations on the manner in which Europe must be affected, and what part they ought to take in the present important crisis. My name and business have long since been known to the British Ambassador here, and to the Court of London, and they have remonstrated, but finding remonstrances to no purpose, they have wisely determined to take no notice of me, as I do not appear as yet in a publick character.

Let me ask of you if a workman skillful in the founding of brass and iron cannon can be engaged in Holland to go to America? Also, if I can engage two or three persons of approved skill in lead mines, to go to America on good engagement? Your answer will oblige me, and by the next post I will write you more particularly. The British arms will not, probably, effect any thing in America this season, as they had not begun to act the 8th of August, and that brings Winter to the very door, as I may say, and an indecisive campaign must prove to Great Britain a fatal one. I am, &c.,

SILAS DEANE.

Articles of Agreement agreed on and entered into by and between SILAS DEANE, Agent for the UNITED COLONIES OF NORTH AMERICA for transacting their business, commercial and political, in FRANCE, on the one part, and the Sieur PHILIPPUS-CHARLES JOHN BAPTIST TRONSON DU COUDRAY, Adjutant-General of Artillery in the service of FRANCE.

1. The Sieur Du Coudray, under title of General of Artillery and Ordnance, and in rank of Major-General in the Forces of the United Colonies, shall have the direction of whatever relates to the Artillery and Corps of Engineers, under the order and control only of the Congress of the United Colonies, their Committee of War, or the Commander-in-Chief for the time being.

2. The Corps of Artillery and Engineers, as well officers as soldiers composing the same, shall be under his immediate command, with all the privileges and authority annexed to such command respecting either rewards or punishments, and in case of vacancy in said corps by death, removal, or new creations, it shall be for him to recommend to the Congress, or their Committee of War, the persons proper for filling the same.

3. Whatever relates to the supplying the said corps with provision, to the construction of artillery and fortification, to any plan or scheme relative to these objects, will be consulted on with him, and the execution of whatever may be agreed on committed to him, as within his department.

4. His allowance for pay and table shall be the same as to a Major-General in the service of the United Colonies in a separate command. Should he be made a prisoner, the same shall be continued. Should he by accident of war in the said service be rendered incapable of serving, or should he choose after six years' service to retire, he shall be allowed an honourable annual stipend or reward by the Congress, the particular amount of which Mr. Deane refers to the honourable Congress.

5. Monsieur Du Coudray shall be furnished with an Adjutant, two Aids-de-Camp, or one Aid-de-Camp, and a Secretary, and Designer, at the expense and in the pay of the United Colonies.

6. Monsieur Du Coudray's expenses, also those of his servants, in their voyage to America, shall be refunded him by the United Colonies.

7. No proceedings shall be had against Monsieur Du Coudray but in the same manner as is established and proceeded in against any other officer who is a native of said Colonies, of the same rank in said service; nor shall he be deprived or deposed from his office, but in consequence of a regular and accustomed proceeding against him.

8. Monsieur Du Coudray having, ever since the first day of August last, been employed in the service of said Colonies in procuring stores, &c., his title and emoluments to commence therefrom.*

9. In explanation of article four, be it remembered, that when Mr. Deane left the Congress, "what stipends or rewards to such as were disabled in the service, or might retire," was not settled, and it would be improper in him to make a precedent for them. Further, Monsieur Du Coudray's zeal in entering into this, to him, foreign service, the services he has rendered the United Colonies already in France, and the expected future services in his most important department, will not, in justice, put him in this respect on a footing of a native of the United Colonies, but merit a particular consideration, which, on the part of Mr. Deane, will be warmly recommended to the honourable Congress, in whose generosity Monsieur has the fullest confidence.

10. Monsieur Du Coudray will exert himself in despatching the Artillery and Stores agreed on; also will embark himself as early in the season as is consistent with such despatch.

11. Considering the particular situation of Monsieur Du Coudray as a foreigner, and his uncommon exertions for and in behalf of the United Colonies, it is agreed, that his pension or annual stipend on his quitting the service, as afore-agreed, shall be the one-half of his pay and table whilst serving, or other equivalent gratification.

12. Horses and carriages will be supplied Monsieur Du Coudray, at the expense of the United Colonies, when he has occasion for removing from one part of the Continent to another; also to the officers proposing to go out with him, or advance to him such sum as will be sufficient to procure them in the Colonies where they are serving.

13. Considering the situation of the American war at this time, Mr. Deane thinks that two Engineers, four Captains, and four Lieutenants, with the proposed Adjutant-General, will be as many as he can prudently agree for at present. Fresh intelligence is hourly expected, which may incline him to increase the number, but he now agrees for those at the rates proposed by Monsieur Du Coudray, viz: For the Adjutant-General five thousand livres per annum; for the Captains four thousand livres per annum; for the Lieutenants two thousand livres per annum; relying on their being

* Agreed to commence on the 1st of August, in consideration of his expenses in procuring the Artillery and Stores.
Signed:

S. DEANE.

officers which Monsieur Du Coudray can depend on for their skill and experience as well as fidelity in their departments.

14. Mr. Deane will advance to them the one-half of a year's pay at their embarking.

15. At the close of the war they shall be entitled to the same pension in proportion to their pay as Monsieur Du Coudray, but in this case Mr. Deane thinks they should be held to settle in the United Colonies, to be in the way of future service if called upon.

16. None of the aforesaid officers shall be at liberty to enter the service of any foreign Power, France excepted, without giving up said annual stipend, nor into the service of any Power whatever at war with the United Colonies, unless said Colonies shall refuse to employ them or dismiss them by agreement.

17. The sum advanced to the officers embarking is not to be considered as so much of their pay, and to be by them as such accounted for, but as a full satisfaction for their whole expense during their voyage, and their providing themselves with necessary camp equipage on their arrival. Their pay to commence, independent of this, from the time of their embarkation.

In testimony hereof the contracting parties have hereunto set their hands and seals, this 11th day of September, 1776, in the presence of

September 11, 1776.

MONS. DE COUDRE, and MR. DEANE.

Charlestown, Wednesday, September 11, 1776.

On Friday his Excellency General Lee arrived here from Georgia, and on Monday he set out for the northward. In the orders of the 9th, his Excellency was pleased to signify his approbation of the conduct of our forces in the following terms:

"General Lee thinks it his duty, before his departure, to express the high sense he entertains of the conduct and behaviour of the Colonels and officers of the battalions of South-Carolina, both as gentlemen and soldiers, and begs leave to assure them that he thinks himself obliged to report their merits to the Continental Congress."

On Thursday the brigantine-of-war Comet, Captain Turpin, returned from a cruise, with the ship Clarissa, which he took lying at anchor off Augustine Bar, on the 28th of August. Her cargo consists of lumber, with about forty negroes and some household furniture, said to belong to a gentleman who was removing from Georgia to East-Florida. The day before Captain Turpin's arrival he saw a frigate, which gave chase on that day and part of the next, and came close into the land; but being considerably to leeward, and a dull sailer, could not come up with either the brig or her prize.

Deep-Spring, Virginia, September 11, 1776.

All the Officers, Cadets, and Soldiers of the Sixth Regiment that are absent with leave, are desired to join their regiment immediately, although their limited time of absence should not be expired. Should any soldiers be so imprudent as to disobey this order, they will be looked on as deserters, and treated accordingly.

Wanted in the Sixth Regiment a Chaplain, who is allowed by Congress thirty-three and one-third dollars per month, and two rations per day.

MORDECAI BUCKNER,
Colonel of the Sixth Regiment.

NOTICE OF MEETING OF DELAWARE CONVENTION.

We are informed by authority that the honourable the Convention of the Delaware State, which was elected on the 19th day of August last, for the special purpose of "ordaining and declaring the future form of Government of that State," met at Newcastle on the 27th day of the same month, and having furnished their quota of the Flying-Camp, and ordered another battalion to be forthwith raised, under the command of Colonel Samuel West, to reinforce the army of the United States of America, and having also finished the work for which they were particularly chosen, they dissolved themselves on the 21st instant.

The names of the Members for NEW-CASTLE County:—Nicholas Van Dyke, Richard Cantwell, Alexander Porter, John Thompson, Abraham Robinson, Thomas McKean, George Read, John Evans, John Lea, John Jones.

KENT County: Thomas Collins, Charles Ridgely, James Sykes, Richard Bassett, Jacob Stout, John Cook, Samuel West, John Clarke, Thomas White, Richard Lockwood.

SUSSEX County: Jacob Moore, James Rench, Isaac Bradley, John Wiltbank, Isaac Horsey, William Polke, Joshua Hill, Peter Hubbert, Phillips Kollock, Alexander Laws.

The Hon. George Read, Esq., was unanimously chosen President, and Mr. James Booth Clerk, of the Convention.

In Convention of the Delaware State,
Wednesday, September 11, 1776, A. M. }

A Declaration of Rights and Fundamental Rules of the DELAWARE State, formerly styled the Government of the Counties of NEW-CASTLE, KENT, and SUSSEX, upon DELAWARE.

1. That all government of right originates from the people, is founded in compact only, and instituted solely for the good of the whole.

2. That all men have a natural and unalienable right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences and understandings, and that no man ought, or of right can be compelled to attend any religious worship or maintain any ministry contrary to or against his own free will and consent, and that no authority can or ought to be vested in, or assumed by any power whatever, that shall in any case interfere with, or in any manner control, the right of conscience in the free exercise of religious worship.

3. That all persons professing the Christian religion ought forever to enjoy equal rights and privileges in this State, unless under colour of religion any man disturb the peace, the happiness, or safety of society.

4. That the people of this State have the sole, exclusive, and inherent right of governing and regulating the internal police of the same.

5. That persons entrusted with the Legislative and Executive powers are the trustees and servants of the publick, and as such accountable for their conduct; wherefore, whenever the ends of Government are perverted and publick liberty manifestly endangered by the Legislative singly, or a treacherous combination of both, the people may, and of right ought to, establish a new or reform the old Government.

6. That the right in the people to participate in the Legislature is the foundation of liberty and of all free government, and for this end all elections ought to be free and frequent; and every freeman having sufficient evidence of a permanent common interest with, and attachment to, the community, hath a right of suffrage.

7. That no power of suspending laws or the execution of laws ought to be exercised, unless by the Legislature.

8. That for redress of grievances, and for amending and strengthening of the laws, the Legislature ought to be frequently convened.

9. That every man hath a right to petition the Legislature for the redress of grievances in a peaceable and orderly manner.

10. That every member of society hath a right to be protected in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and property, and therefore is bound to contribute his proportion towards the expense of that protection, and yield his personal service when necessary, or an equivalent thereto; but no part of a man's property can be justly taken from him or applied to publick uses without his own consent or that of his legal representatives: nor can any man that is conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms in any case be justly compelled thereto if he will pay such equivalent.

11. That retrospective laws punishing offences committed before the existence of such laws are oppressive and unjust, and ought not to be made.

12. That every freeman for every injury done him in his goods, lands, or person, by any other person, ought to have remedy by the course of the law of the land, and ought to have justice and right for the injury done to him freely without sale, fully without any denial, and speedily without delay, according to the law of the land.

13. That trial by jury of the facts where they arise, is one of the greatest securities of the lives, liberties, and estates of the people.

14. That in all prosecutions for criminal offences, every man hath a right to be informed of the accusation against him, to be allowed counsel, to be confronted with the accusers or witnesses, to examine evidence on oath in his favour, and to a speedy trial by an impartial jury, without whose unanimous consent he ought not to be found guilty.

15. That no man in the courts of common law ought to be compelled to give evidence against himself.

16. That excessive bails ought not to be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel nor unusual punishments inflicted.

17. That all warrants without oath to search suspected places, or to seize any person or his property, are grievous and oppressive; and all general warrants to search suspected places, or to apprehend all persons suspected, without naming or describing the place or any person in special, are illegal and ought not to be granted.

18. That a well-regulated Militia is the proper, natural, and safe defence of a free Government.

19. That standing armies are dangerous to liberty, and ought not to be raised or kept up without the consent of the Legislature.

20. That in all cases and at all times the military ought to be under strict subordination to and governed by the civil power.

21. That no soldier ought to be quartered in any house in time of peace without the consent of the owner; and in time of war, in such manner only as the Legislature shall direct.

22. That the independency and uprightness of judges are essential to the impartial administration of justice, and a great security to the rights and liberties of the people.

23. That the liberty of the press ought to be inviolably preserved.

A true extract from the Journals of the Convention.
JAMES BOOTH, Clerk.

LANCASTER (PENNSYLVANIA) COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation, Inspection, and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 11th September, 1776, Present: William Atlee, Lodwick Lowman, William Bowsman, Henry Dehuff, George Moor, Adam Reigart, Sebastian Graff, and Andrew Graff. William Atlee in the Chair.

Michael Sherrer yesterday brought a letter from Colonel Burd, with two of the Regulars, prisoners of war, here named, William Chatten and James Parker, who had got as far as into Northumberland County; thought proper to send them to the Committee of Paxton, who, by said Sherrer, forwarded them here, where they are now in confinement; and it is ordered by the Committee that Mr. Atlee pay said Sherrer, for his trouble and expenses in bringing down the said prisoners, the sum of thirty-six shillings and four pence, out of the Continental moneys in his hands.

Ordered, That the Chairman grant a pass to William Gay, the son of Sergeant Gay, to go to Reading, with accounts and papers from Adjutant Thompson to Captain Crawford, of the Twenty-Sixth.

Ordered, That the Chairman grant a pass to Thomas Deacon, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, to go over to York, to attend Captain Gordon as his servant.

John Smith, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with George Cryder, shoemaker, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the resolves of Committee.

John Gostitch, of the Twenty-Sixth Regiment, is permitted to work with Leonard Eielcholtz, skin-dresser, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to resolves of the Committee.

William Woodill, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Henry Halfenstein, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the resolves of the Committee.

EDWARD RUTLEDGE TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Brunswick, Wednesday evening, }
Sept. 11, 1776—10 o'clock. }

MY DEAR SIR: Your favour of this morning is just put into my hands. In answer, I must beg leave to inform you that our conference with Lord Howe has been attended with no immediate advantages. He declared that he had no powers to consider us as independent States; and we easily discovered that were we still dependent, we would have nothing to expect from those with which he is vested. He talked altogether in generals; that he came out here to consult, advise, and confer with gentlemen of the greatest influence in the Colonies, about their complaints; that the King would revise the acts of Parliament and Royal instructions, upon such reports as should be made; and appeared to fix our redress upon his Majesty's good will and pleasure. This kind of conversation lasted for several hours, and, as I have already said, without any effect.

Our reliance continues, therefore, to be (under God) on your wisdom and fortitude, and that of your forces. That you may be as successful as I know you are worthy, is my most sincere wish.

I saw Mrs. Washington the evening before I left Philadelphia. She was well. I gave Mr. Griffin a letter from her for you.

The gentlemen beg their respects. God bless you, my dear sir!

Your most affectionate friend, E. RUTLEDGE.

To General Washington.

P. S. We wrote you about two hours ago, by the post.

SPEECH OF GOVERNOUR LIVINGSTON.

To the Council and Assembly of the said State, at a Session of the General Assembly at PRINCETON.

Speech of His Excellency WILLIAM LIVINGSTON, Esquire, Governour, Captain-General, and Commander-in-Chief in and over the State of NEW-JERSEY and Territories thereunto belonging, Chancellor and Ordinary of the same:

GENTLEMEN OF THE COUNCIL AND GENERAL ASSEMBLY:

Considering how long the hand of oppression had been stretched out against us, while the most assiduous applications for redress were either totally disregarded or treated with insult—how long the system of despotism concerted for our ruin had been insidiously pursued, and was at length attempted to be enforced by the violence of war—reason and conscience must have approved the measure, had we sooner abjured that allegiance from which, not only by the denial of protection but the hostile assaults on our persons and properties, we were clearly absolved. It may, however, afford some consolation to every man duly regardful of the convictions of his own mind and the honour and reputation of his country, that America deferred this important step till the decisive alternative of absolute submission or utter destruction, announced by a numerous fleet and army, had extinguished all hope of obtaining justice, and the whole Continent, save a few self-interested individuals, were unanimous in the separation; in a word, till the most scrupulous conscience could, on the maturest reflection, find itself justified, before God and man, in renouncing those tyrants who, after having ravaged a great part of Asia, and dissipated, in venality and riot, the treasures extorted from its innocent inhabitants by the hand of rapine and blood, finally meant to prolong their luxury and corruption by appropriating to themselves the hard-earned competence of the American world.

Thus constrained to assert our own Independence, and dissolve all political connection with a nation insatiate with plunder, and deaf to the voice of reason, of justice, and humanity, the late "Representatives of the Colony of New-Jersey, in Congress assembled, did, pursuant to the advice of the honourable the Continental Congress, the supreme council of the American Colonies, agree upon the form of a Constitution," which, by tacit acquiescence and open approbation, hath since received the assent and concurrence of the good people of this State, to whose consideration it was for that purpose submitted.

Agreeable to this Constitution, you, gentlemen, have been chosen the Legislative Council and Assembly of this State; and being jointly met, have, in further pursuance of it, proceeded to the choice of a Governour. Having conferred that honour upon one who feels himself very unequal to the task, but at the same time upon one who, having, during the whole contest, taken an active part in opposing the meditated bondage, now disdains, in its most perilous period, to shrink from a station which must render him peculiarly obnoxious to the common enemy, he can, with great sincerity, assure you that it shall be his constant endeavour faithfully to discharge the trust reposed in him. He is, moreover, confident, that how greatly soever you may find yourselves deceived in the favourable opinion you may have been pleased to entertain of his abilities, he will never give you any reason to call in question the rectitude of his intentions.

Gentlemen, in the present situation of affairs, it is absolutely necessary to turn our first attention to the operations of war.

The pay of our Militia, lately called out for the defence of New-York, (which has acquired signal renown by the spirit and alacrity with which it engaged in the common cause,) admits of no delay. That of half our Militia now on duty will be due in a few days.

Some further regulations respecting the better ordering the Militia, merit your speedy attention.

A law for regulating the impressing of such articles as the exigencies of the service may require, is of great importance.

No allowance having been made for the provender of the Light-Horse when in actual service, and it being impossible, from their perpetual station and being frequently employed as expresses, for the Commissaries to provide them, it is reasonable the men should be allowed an equivalent for keeping their horses themselves.

The fixing the seat of Government in some convenient and plentiful part of the State, calls for your seasonable deliberation.

Such other matters as may occur to me during the session, and appear more particularly conducive to give vigour to the Executive branch of the Constitution, I shall take the liberty to lay before you.

To enable me, gentlemen, the more successfully to execute the arduous office wherewith your unsought and unexpected predilection hath invested me, it affects me with singular pleasure to find both Houses composed of the most respectable characters. This affords a happy presage of your zeal and unanimity in promoting the true emolument of that State of which the uncorrupted voice of a free people has made you the guardians and protectors. As it is our indispensable duty, may it be our invariable aim to exhibit to our constituents the brightest examples of a disinterested love for the common weal; and be inflexible in our resolution to know neither friend nor favourite, whenever his solicitations appear incompatible with the general good. In our public capacities we ought to rise superiour to all private attachment or resentment, and make the intrinsic merit of every candidate for an office our sole rule for his promotion. Let us, gentlemen, both by precept and practice, encourage a spirit of economy, industry, and patriotism, and that public integrity and righteousness which cannot fail to exalt a nation; setting our faces, at the same time, like a flint, against that dissoluteness of manners and political corruption which will ever be the reproach of any people. May the foundation of our infant State be laid in virtue and the fear of God, and the superstructure will rise glorious, and endure for ages! Then may we humbly expect the blessing of* the Most High, who divides to the nations their inheritance, and separates the sons of Adam. In fine, gentlemen, while we are applauded by the whole impartial world, for demolishing the old fabrick, rotten and ruinous as it was, let us unitedly strive to approve ourselves master-builders, by giving beauty, strength, and stability to the new.

†WIL. LIVINGSTON.

Princeton, September 11, 1776.

*Deut. xxxii. 8.

†PHILADELPHIA, October, 1776.—In the speech of his Excellency Governor Livingston there is a passage which ought to be printed in letters of gold, that it might engage the attention of the most heedless American. The passage I mean is as follows:

"The most scrupulous conscience could, on the maturest reflection, find itself justified, before God and man, in renouncing those tyrants who, after having ravaged a great part of Asia, and dissipated, in venality and riot, the treasures extorted from its innocent inhabitants by the hand of rapine and blood, finally meant to prolong their luxury and corruption by appropriating to themselves the hard-earned competence of the American world."

This observation is true as the voice of truth itself. It is highly important. May it make a lasting impression on the mind of every one who wishes well to mankind!

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 13, 1776.]

New-York, September 11, 1776.

SIR: I was yesterday honoured with your favour of the 8th instant, accompanied by sundry resolutions of Congress, to which I shall pay the strictest attention, and, in the instances required, make them the future rule of my conduct.

The mode of negotiation pursued by Lord Howe I did not approve of; but as General Sullivan was sent out upon the business and with a message to Congress, I could not conceive myself at liberty to interfere in the matter, as he was in the character of a prisoner and totally subject to their power and direction.

The list of prisoners before omitted through hurry, is now enclosed, though it will probably have reached Congress before this.

I shall write by the first opportunity for Major Hausegger to repair to Philadelphia; he is in the Northern Army; and will also mention the several appointments in consequence of Colonel St. Clair's promotion.

As soon as Generals Prescott and McDonald arrive, I shall take measures to advise General Howe of it, that the proposed exchange for General Sullivan and Lord Stirling may be carried into execution.

Since my letter of the 8th nothing material has occurred, except that the enemy have possessed themselves of Montrossor's Island, and landed a considerable number of troops upon it. This Island lies in the mouth of Harlem River, which runs out of the Sound into the North River, and will give the enemy an easy opportunity of landing either on the low grounds of Morrisiana, if their views are to seize and possess the passes above King's Bridge, or on the plains of Harlem, if they design to intercept and cut off the communication between our several posts. I am making every disposition and arrangement that the divided state of our troops will admit of, and which appear most likely and the best calculated to oppose their attacks, for I presume there will be several. How the event will be, God only knows; but you may be assured that nothing in my power, circumstanced as I am, shall be wanting to effect a favourable and happy issue.

By my letter of the 8th you will perceive that several of the Council were for holding the town, conceiving it practicable for some time. Many of 'em now, upon seeing our divided state, have altered their opinion, and allow the expediency and necessity of concentrating our whole force, or drawing it more together. Convinced of the propriety of this measure, I am ordering our stores away, except such as may be absolutely necessary to keep as long as any troops remain, that if an evacuation of the city becomes inevitable, and which certainly must be the case, there may be as little to remove as possible.

The enclosed packet contains several letters for particular members of Congress, and for some gentlemen in Philadelphia. They came to hand yesterday, and were brought from France by a Captain Levez, lately arrived at Bedford, in the Massachusetts State. I must request the favour of you to open the packet and to have the letters put in a proper channel of conveyance to the gentlemen they are addressed to.

I have the honour to be, with the highest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 9, 1776.

(Parole, Miffin.)

(Countersign, Putnam.)

Elias Matthew, appointed Quartermaster to Tyler's Regiment.

Gardner Carpenter, appointed Paymaster to Colonel Huntington's Regiment.

The Colonels or Commanding Officers of Regiments, or Paymasters where appointed, are immediately to prepare and send in their pay abstracts for the months of July and August. The Paymaster will attend at his old office at Mr. Lispnard's, on Thursday and Friday, to receive those of the division under General Putnam. A time and place will be appointed in general orders to-morrow, to receive those of Generals Heath's and Spencer's divisions.

Mr. Adjutant Bradford to do the duty of Brigade Major to General Nixon's Brigade, during Major Box's illness.

The Maryland Brigade being ordered to march, General Fellows to supply two hundred and fifty men in their stead, till further orders.

The several Brigade Majors are required to have their men on the grand parade at eight o'clock every Monday precisely, or they will be publicly reprimanded. The late relief of the guards is a subject of general complaint. No failure of duty in the Adjutant will excuse, unless the Adjutant is put in arrest.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 10, 1776.

(Parole, Marblehead.)

(Countersign, Orange.)

Major Popst, of Colonel Kachlein's Battalion, having been tried by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Silliman was President, on a charge of "cowardice and shamefully abandoning his post on Long-Island, the 28th of August," is acquitted of cowardice but convicted of misbehaviour in the other instance. He is, therefore, sentenced to be dismissed the Army, as totally unqualified to hold a military commission.

Adjutant Spangenburg and Lieutenant Kachlein, tried for the same offence, were acquitted. The General approves the sentence as to Spangenburg and Kachlein, and orders them to join their Regiment. But as there is reason to believe further evidence can soon be obtained with respect to the Major, he is to continue under arrest till they can attend.

The Brigade Major of the day to carry the parole and countersign to the several Guards as formerly, taking care that it be done early.

The Brigade Majors are directed to have the several Regiments join in Brigade as often as possible, and to be very careful that they are thoroughly acquainted with their alarm posts and the lines they are to man.

The General observes with great concern, that too little care is taken to prevent the men straggling from their quarters and encampments, so that in case of a sudden attack, it will be difficult to collect them; he therefore most anxiously desires both officers and men would attend to it, and consider how much their safety and success depend upon their being at hand when wanted. The order for calling the roll three times a day is to be punctually obeyed, and any officer omitting it will be brought to a court-martial.

Great complaints are made of the Adjutants, as being irregular and remiss in duty. The General informs them that he expects an alacrity and despatch of business equal to the importance of their situation, and will certainly make some examples, if (which he sincerely hopes may not be the case) there should be any further reason for complaint.

The Court-Martial to sit to-morrow for the trial of Captain Rapaljee, confined by Colonel Lasher for refusing to do duty.

Major Scammel is appointed a temporary assistant to the Adjutant General, and is to repair to General Heath's division. He is to be obeyed and respected accordingly.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 11, 1776.

(Parole, Ulster.)

(Countersign, Albany.)

Robert Williams, of Colonel Glover's Regiment, is appointed Paymaster to said Regiment.

William Arnold and Samuel Clark, of Captain Smith's Company, Colonel Smallwood's Regiment; Daniel Donovel, of Captain Hardenberg's Company, tried by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Malcom was President, on a charge of "plundering the house lately occupied by Lord Stirling;" Donovel was convicted of the crime, and sentenced to receive thirty-nine lashes, the others acquitted. The General approves the sentence, orders the latter to join their Regiment, and Donovel to be whipped to-morrow, on the grand parade, before the guards march off. The Provost Marshal to see it executed, Colonel Ritzema's Regiment being removed.

Peter Richards, Sergeant in the General's Guard, convicted by the same Court-Martial of "abusing and striking Captain Gibbs," sentenced to be reduced to the ranks, and whipped thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentence, and orders it to be executed to-morrow morning, at the head of the company, at eight o'clock.

Colonel Palfrey, Paymaster, will receive the pay abstracts, agreeable to yesterday's orders, of General Spencer's division, at General McDougall's quarters, near Harlem, on Saturday and Sunday; of General Heath's division at his Head-Quarters, at any time.

The Commanding Officers of Colonel Silliman's, Colonel Lewis's, Colonel Mead's and Colonel Thompson's Regiments, to examine the state of the ammunition of their Regiments, it being reported that their men on guard last night were deficient.

John Christy, of Colonel Humphry's Regiment, convicted by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Malcom was President, of "desertion," ordered to receive thirty-nine lashes. The General approves the sentence and orders it to be executed to-morrow, at the usual time and place.

Such Regiments whose Paymasters have not been named in general orders, are by their Field Officers immediately to recommend suitable persons to the General for that office. Every recommendation is to be signed by the Field Officers of the Regiments who are present.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL MERCER.

New-York, September 11, 1776.

SIR: I have received your favour by Colonel Weedon. As it seems every day more probable that the posts at King's Bridge will be occupied by this army, and the principal defence made there, I have ordered Colonel Bradley's regiment to move from Bergen, as that post does not seem to be an object of the enemy's attention. I am in doubt whether it is necessary for you to replace this regiment, or leave it to the remaining troops. As you best know what number there are from your camp at that post, I must leave it to you to direct a further supply or not, as, under all circumstances, you think best and necessary. We find a moving camp will require a greater number of wagons than was expected. If Mr. Biddle could engage about fifty of the common country wagons, or in proportion of the Philadelphia teams, to go up to Burdett's Ferry, it would greatly relieve us. The idea of impressing is very disagreeable, and only to be adopted in case of the most urgent necessity. The enemy is taking post on the Islands about Hell-Gate, so as to make a landing with the greater ease and convenience. We are endeavouring to give them a suitable reception, and hope they will not be able to execute their scheme.

I am, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Brigadier-General Mercer, New-Jersey.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL HEATH.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 11, 1776.

SIR: I am commanded by his Excellency to acknowledge yours of last night, and to inform you that he is fully sensible that you are deficient in men, which is not only the case of your post, but of every other one, which he well knew would inevitably be the consequence, when it was determined that our defence should be divided and extended to so many objects. This having been determined on, and the point of attack uncertain, our attention must be had to every part where it is likely to fall.

That you may be reinforced, his Excellency has issued orders for Colonel Ward's regiment at Burdett's Ferry immediately to cross and be under your direction. He also desires that you would send out and get information, if you can, of the Connecticut Militia and Light Horse, and give them orders to advance as fast as possible, and take such stations as you shall think most proper.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBT. H. HARRISON.

To the Hon. Major-General Heath.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO GENERAL GATES.

New-York, September 11, 1776.

MY DEAR GENERAL: Congress having been pleased to appoint Major Haussegger to the command of a German battalion, and signified their earnest desire of his repairing immediately to Philadelphia, I have it in command from his Excellency to request that he may set out for that place without delay. They have also appointed Joseph Wood, Esq., Colonel of the regiment lately commanded by Colonel St. Clair; Thomas Craig, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel; William Butler, Esq., Major.

I could wish to write you a line or two more, but as I cannot for want of time, I shall conclude with my best wishes for your happiness.

Yours affectionately,

ROBT. H. HARRISON.

CERTIFICATE ON WISNER'S POWDER MILL.

In Committee, Wallkill, Ulster County, September 11, 1776.

This is to certify that Henry Wisner, Jun., has made sufficient proof to this Committee that he had manufactured at his Mill nine thousand one hundred and eighty-four pounds gunpowder, between the 1st of March and the 9th of June last.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM WILLKIN, Chairman.

To the Honourable the Representatives of the State of New-York.

In Committee, Wallkill, Ulster County, September 11, 1776.

This is to certify that Messrs. Henry Wisner, Jun., and Morris Phillips have made sufficient proof to this Committee, agreeable to a resolve of Congress, that they had erected a Powder-Mill in this precinct, and had her complete at work by the 20th of May last. And also, that sufficient proof has been made as aforesaid, that there was manufactured at said mill, one thousand four hundred and fifty-nine pounds of good merchantable gunpowder in seven days successively.

By order of the Committee:

WILLIAM WILLKIN, Chairman.

To the Honourable the Representatives of the State of New-York.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: At eleven this morning, I received your favour of the 7th continued to the 8th, with the several enclosures. I was in hopes to have received some intelligence of what occasioned the cannonade heard at Crown Point, on Friday the 5th. I have not heard a word from Colonel Dayton since my last to you. Many of the Militia are already arrived in this town and at Schenectady, where I have halted them, until, by intelligence from you and Colonel Dayton, I shall be enabled to judge which way it will be most necessary to conduct them.

Colonel Gansevoort is strangely mistaken to suppose that I ordered Colonel Van Dyck's corps to this place. I shall immediately order him back. He is not yet arrived here. It would be far from prudent, even if Colonel Dayton's information prove groundless, to draw what few troops are upon the western communication from thence; for as sure as we do, the enemy will attempt to distress us in that quarter. At this place we have no troops except two companies of Van Schaick's, so very incomplete by desertion and sickness, that they are hardly sufficient for the necessary guards of the stores and magazines. Veeder's and Vosbrug's company of Wynkoop's, are employed in repairing the roads. If they are taken from that, all supplies must stop. Even now the roads are extremely bad.

I have ordered Mr. Douw immediately to his post. He informed me that he was here by your leave. Major Pierce is gone down the country, when or where I do not know. As soon as I can find where he is, he will be sent up.

As you will be best able to judge whether Colonel Phinney ought to be moved from Fort George, when Colonel Van Dyck arrives there, you will give orders accordingly, and I shall also write to Colonel Gansevoort on the subject.

I have wrote to Congress and General Washington that as soon as I return from either Tryon County or Tionderoga, to either of which I must go accordingly as intelligence determines, I shall resign my commission and insist upon a hearing.

I have advised them of the necessity of having a General Officer at this place, and as you will command in chief, it is necessary that you should in time fix your own mind on the person that will be most proper for it. I believe my countrymen will be astonished to find that I shall not only clearly exculpate myself of all the infamous charges laid to me, but point out that they ought to be bestowed elsewhere.

I am, dear General, with every friendly wish, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

September 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your letters of the 7th and 8th are now before me. I can make no judgment of the dependence that ought to be placed upon the Indian intelligence sent Colonel Dayton from Onondaga and Oneida; a small diversion that way, it is natural to conclude, the enemy may think will divide our force and cause this important pass to be weakened in a considerable degree of its defence; therefore any drafts from hence should be made with the utmost wisdom and caution, and upon no account made at all before certain information is actually received that the enemy are to the east end of the Oneida Lake. Are the Indians who gave Colonel Dayton the information such men as you confide in? or is there any reason to suspect they are paid for giving the alarm?

I have published the order you desired, in regard to the arrival of the Commissioners of Accounts at Albany, and to the measures those who have received the publick money are to take to have their accounts settled; but it certainly would be highly proper for those gentlemen to come here immediately, as I cannot spare General Arnold from his command, nor any of the publick officers from their duty at this post. Besides, there are many demands due to poor inhabitants here and at Crown Point, which it would be distressing them exceedingly to be obliged to go to Albany to be paid. As to Mr. Avery, I desire not to be concerned in the dispute between him and Mr. Livingston. It is a matter of moonshine to me who is Commissary, so the troops are well supplied. I shall take care you do not want returns of men and provisions upon this ground. I have sent those continually, and now send you one of this day's date. General Waterbury, with the row-galleys, is now here. They are fitting for service with the utmost expedition. I wish Colonel Wynkoop were sent to Skenesborough to command there. I hope his health is reëstablished.

The Congress may think as they please, but unless the officers for the upper staff of the army are taken from the troops, I see not how this army is to be supplied. You cannot take Assistant Deputy Quartermaster-Generals, &c., &c., &c., as you do cannon carriages, from the stumps of trees. You desire I would recommend a Mustermaster, and you will send him a commission. Mr. Peter Huges, I believe to be an honest, sensible man of business. There is a variety of trees in these woods, and but few that bear such fruit. Your news, and every body's news, and all the news from New-York, want a something to make it complete. Clear up this obscurity as soon as you can. This moment I received the enclosed letter from General Arnold. General Waterbury and two of the row-galleys are now here; the third is hourly expected from Skeen. The General promises to lose no time in preparing them for action, and sailing instantly to join General Arnold. I shall be careful to send a timely supply to the fleet. I send you by this conveyance the Tyonderoga mail. I desire you will order the postmaster to send in it all the letters in his office for this army, sealed up to you, and I must beg you to forward it here.

Colonel Wigglesworth, with Lieutenant Calderwood, in two batteaus, with men and provisions, and the last gondola, joined the fleet in a short time after General Arnold's express came away, so that the fleet now consists of thirteen sail. Pray forward as much pork as possible; the fleet will want a considerable quantity. I send to Gilliland's, and the inhabitants in the rear of the fleet, to supply General Arnold with all the fresh beef and mutton, garden stuff, &c., that they can furnish. While we are uppermost Gilliland and the rest will take our money; it is all we can hope from them.

I am astonished at the calumnies that go to Congress against General Arnold, and more astonished they should be one moment attended to. To be a man of honour, and in an exalted station, will ever excite envy in the mean and undeserving. I am confident the Congress will view whatever is whispered against General Arnold as the foul stream of that poisonous fountain, detraction. My respectful compliments wait upon the ladies.

I am, dear General, &c.,

HO. GATES.

To General Schuyler.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, September 11, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Major Backus, has the command of the troops of Light-Horse now ordered from this State to rendezvous at or near Westchester, and there attend your Excellency's orders. I take the liberty to introduce him to you as an officer prepared to execute your orders to the best of his power, and hope, under your direction, he may do his country good service.

I am, sir, with great truth and regard, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

N. B. A Major is the chief officer in each regiment of Light-Horse formed by this State.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, September 11, 1776.

SIR: The bearer, Gurdon Saltonstall, Esq., Brigadier-General of the regiments of Militia now ordered to march and rendezvous at or near Westchester, I beg leave to introduce to your Excellency as a worthy man, a steady and warm friend to the States of America, and an old, tried, and faithful servant of this State, and wish he may meet with that favour and countenance from your Excellency as his zeal and services deserve.

I am, sir, with great truth and regard, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 11th, 1776,

Present: His Honour the Governour, His Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Jedediah Elderkin, Esq's.

Voted, That a draft be made on the Pay-Table for the sum of £500 0s. 0d., in favour of Ebenezer Backus, Esq., Major and Commander of the Second and Fourth Regiments of Horse, now ordered to march towards New-York, to enable him to provide for and support the gentlemen of the Horse, under his command, on said expedition, he giving his receipt to be accountable therefor. (Order drawn September 11, 1776, delivered Major Backus.)

Voted, That the Committee of Pay-Table be, and they are directed to liquidate the accounts of the Selectmen of the several towns, incurred in furnishing the Militia with guns and other warlike stores and equipments for service, and draw for the payment thereof, in the same manner as was directed by the General Assembly for the troops last raised by them.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Saybrook, September 11, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Since my last by Lieutenant Smith, I have been able to collect no assistance. The Militia of Southold, about one hundred and fifty in number, deserted me at the River-Head, on my way to Huntington, having heard that Long-Island was given up to the enemy. Colonel Mulford was gathering the Militia of South and Easthampton when this report (industriously circulated by our enemies) was spread among them. In vain I endeavoured to remove the fallacy. Colonel Smith's regiment, having been dismissed by their Colonel, arrived in small parties and confirmed the report.

I received, at the same time, letters from the town of Huntington, praying me, for God's sake, not to advance any farther, as they had already submitted to the enemy, and much feared that terms would not be granted them should I proceed any farther. These considerations, together with a fear that our retreat might be cut off, as I had engaged no boats to take off the troops, induced me to determine a retreat, which was effected on the 2d of September. In three hours after, we arrived at this place. Since that time I have almost constantly been employed in assisting the unfortunate inhabitants of Long-Island to remove their stock. On my way from the River-Head, hearing that the disaffected in and about Huntington were disarming our friends, I took the same method, and have collected about two hundred and thirty-six small arms, have also brought off six pieces of ordnance—one nine, one twelve, and four six-pounders—all unmounted; five quarter casks powder, two and a half boxes of ball, one hundred and ninety cartouch-boxes, one hundred and sixty powder-horns, (filled,) one hundred and fifty-three bayonets. Before I left Long-Island the towns of Easthampton and Southampton had sent for their pardons to Lord Howe. Since I have left it they have almost universally taken the oath of allegiance to his Britannick Majesty, tendered to them by Colonel Gardiner. I have since taken him, and have him now in custody at this place, with two others. Governour Trumbull has appointed a committee to examine them, and if they merit the indulgence, to permit them the liberty of a town in Connecticut, on their parole. The Governour has also sent about two hundred and eighty men to my assistance, as my own are not to be depended on, their connexions being on Long-Island. Twenty-one deserted on the day of our retreat; since that, many others. This has reduced the detachment to a trifle.

I propose sailing from this place for Huntington to-morrow morning, and hope to have an opportunity of being serviceable. The whole of the troops I shall have with me will be about four hundred and twenty. I am thus particular, as I understand your Excellency was informed I had a greater number. I believe if ten thousand men were sent on the east end of Long-Island, they would give a very unexpected turn to affairs; the diversion would certainly surprise our enemies. I would not have had the presumption to mention this had I not heard it was your Excellency's intention. They are now perfectly secure. Their whole attention is bent on their operations at New-York.

I send enclosed a true state of the detachment under my care, and remain, with respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

P. S. The enclosed are the Proclamations of Generals Howe and Erskine, which I intercepted at River-Head.

A General Return of a detachment of Colonel Regiment, or the First Regiment of YORKERS, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel LIVINGSTON, September 12, 1776.

Present—1 Lieutenant-Colonel, 3 Captains, 6 Lieutenants, 3 Ensigns, 1 Adjutant, 10 Sergeants, 10 Corporals, 5 Drums and Fifes.

Rank and File Effective—178 present, fit for duty, 16 on command, 2 on furlough, 28 deserted; total 224.

Arms—320 good, 60 bad.

A true return, except two Sergeants and two Corporals on command. As Commanding officer of the regiment, I have taken upon me to nominate an Adjutant, until your Excellency's pleasure is known. I shall be joined to-morrow by Captain Leffingwell's Independent company of fifty men, and three companies of Colonel Wolcott's regiment, sixty men each, by Governour Trumbull's order. They are commanded by Major Ely, who is commanded to act in concert with me.

I remain your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Excellency General Washington.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 11, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I am just now applied to by Mr. Marvin for the arms I have taken from the Militia on Long-Island. I have collected about two hundred and thirty-six stands—about one hundred and ninety of them complete with bayonets. If your Honour has occasion for any or all of them, they will be delivered to your order. The Militia, or owners of them, were, if they came over to the main, to have them on their application. However, if they are to be again returned, I should imagine it would be no detriment to the owner to have them in the service, provided they knew who to apply to for them hereafter. I did intend to take them over with with me to Long-Island, in order to put them in the hands of those who should join us in defence of the Isle; but if your Honour has need of them they shall be delivered.

I remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO MAJOR ELY.

Saybrook, September 11, 1776.

SIR: Since I received your favour, I received a letter from Governour Trumbull, acquainting me with your destination. I should be glad you would immediately get in readiness your little detachment to proceed in conjunction with me to Huntington, as nothing of consequence can be achieved short of that place. I shall join you some time to-morrow at Hashemomuck Beach, or as soon as I can get in readiness. I have some reason to think a very powerful diversion will shortly be made on Long-Island. Keep secret our destination, or my design may be frustrated. If we are expeditious you may be of infinite service.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To Major John Ely.

ORDERS BY THE SELECTMEN OF THE TOWN OF BOSTON
RELATING TO THE SMALL-POX.

Boston, September, 11, 1776.

It appearing to the Town, at their late meeting, that there were but few persons then sick with the Small-Pox, the Committees who had visited the several Wards were directed to revisit them, and cause that such houses as were unoccupied and suspected of being infected, be well smoked and cleansed; as also to make strict inquiry how the orders given the inhabitants for cleaning the houses that had been infected have been complied with. The Selectmen were also directed to put the resolve of the General Court and the several laws now in force relative to the small-pox into immediate and strict execution, and to take the same measures to rid the town of infection as have been practised to prevent that disease from spreading in the town.

In compliance with the above, the Selectmen are determined to remove any persons who may be taken with the small-pox, and to prosecute those who neglect to give information of any in their families who have that distemper.

By order of the Selectmen:
WILLIAM COOPER, Town-Clerk.

Annapolis, September 12, 1776.

B. T. B. Worthington, Charles Carroll, Barrister, and Samuel Chase, Esqs., Delegates for this County in Convention, having received instructions from their constituents directing them in framing of a Government to vote for measures in their opinion incompatible with good government and the publick peace and happiness, resigned their seats in Convention, and on Wednesday last a new election was held for this County. On Saturday afternoon the polls were closed, and John Hall, B. T. B. Worthington, and Samuel Chase, Esqs., were declared and returned duly elected.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO MESSRS. VANBIBBER AND HARRISON.

[No. 178.]

Annapolis, September 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Your favours of the 9th, 24th, and 25th of July, and August 1st and 15th, are before us. It has been unlucky for this State, as well as for you, that so many of our outward-bound vessels have miscarried. We have been tolerable lucky in our importations, having only lost the adventures by Scott and Simmerton, that we as yet hear of. Captain Luce is safe arrived in Delaware, and we daily expect to hear of the arrival of the rest of the powder you advise us that you have and are about to ship. We are very solicitous to charter or buy vessels to load out to your address, as we want a large sum of money in your hands for the purchase of salt, arms, coarse cloths, blankets, and lead, but we fear that we shall be disappointed in procuring as many as we want. You will, therefore, if possible, charter or buy vessels with you, and load them in with salt as far as thirty thousand bushels, and draw bills upon us or upon Messrs. Willing, Morris & Co., at Philadelphia, and you may depend upon their being duly honoured. Next to salt, we want a large quantity of coarse cloths, blankets, sail-duck, light as well as heavy, lead, and muskets. We do not restrict you in price, but leave it to you to do the best you can for the State of Maryland, and your bills for the whole or any part thereof will be paid.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Vanbibber & Harrison.

P. S. Your bill on T. Johnson, Esq., will be duly honoured.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO MESSRS. VANBIBBER AND HARRISON.

[No. 179.]

Annapolis, September 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Enclosed you have invoice and bill of lading for twenty-five hogsheads tobacco, two hundred barrels superfine flour, and one hundred barrels bread, on account of this State, which we wish may get safe to hand and to a good market. You will be pleased to despatch Captain Conway with a light load of salt and such of the articles as you can purchase for us, as recommended to you in our letter of equal date with this.

We are, &c.

To Messrs. Vanbibber & Harrison.

PHILIP THOMAS TO MATTHEW TILGHMAN.

Fredericktown, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I am directed by the Committee to inform the Convention that there are many deserters from our regiment now in this and the Upper District, and that they have sufficient reasons to believe they are secreted by their friends. Under these circumstances, the Committee wish the Convention to take some order therein, as they conceive the interposition of their authority may be necessary for the speedy apprehending them and discouraging desertion in future.

I am likewise to mention, that there have been and still are several sick soldiers lodged in this town, belonging to the Continental army, and as no provision hath been made for them, I am to request your directions.

I am, sir, with great respect, your very obedient servant,
PHILIP THOMAS,
of Committee Correspondence.

To the Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of Convention.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War-Office, September 12, 1776.

SIR: By direction of Congress to the Board of War, I have procured two of the Philadelphia Light-Horse to conduct the Generals Prescott and McDonald to your Excellency, to be exchanged, agreeable to the resolve of Congress, for the Generals Sullivan and Lord Stirling. I have directed the gentlemen of the escort to stop short at some safe place on the road, and send off an express to your Excellency for your directions in the matter.

The Generals are on their parole not to attempt an escape or take any steps contrary to the rules of war, but to deliver themselves to your Excellency for your proper disposal of them, until their exchange can be effected.

I have the honour to be your obedient, humble servant,
RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c., &c., New-York.

ROBERT GATES TO COLONEL STEWART.

Princeton, September 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: It gives me great concern to find by your letter of the 26th of August, which I received last Saturday, that my answer to one you were so kind as to favour me with some time ago had not then come to hand. I hope you will not impute this to negligence, as it has been my desire to keep up a correspondence you assure me will give so much satisfaction to yourself and my friends. To prevent your letters from miscarrying for the future, please send them in my father's packet; Mr. Francis Lewis will do me the favour to convey mine in the President's packet.

You inform me that General Arnold with the fleet is gone down the Lake. When I consider the march he performed, and his actions before Quebeck, I join with you in making no doubt but he will signalize himself.

Many remarkable things have happened in this part of the world; one thing in particular, that our troops should abandon Long-Island. I will not pretend to give you a circumstantial account of the action upon this place; let it suffice to say in the language of the people, "We were out-generated, they were out-fought." It is reported in town to-day that the New-England Militia have come upon the back of the Regulars on Long-Island; Lord Stirling and General Sullivan were both taken prisoners in the engagement. The latter had a long conversation with Lord Howe, who permitted him on his parole to go to the Congress and settle an exchange of prisoners, (my Lord and himself for Prescott and McDonald.) and to tell the Congress that he should be glad to converse with any of the members of the Congress, not as members of that body, but as private gentlemen. The Congress sent Mr. J. Adams, Dr. Franklin, Mr. Rutledge, as Commissioners from the Congress of the United States. They met day before yesterday on Staten-Island, where, as far as we hear, they conversed two hours; but they did not converse on publick matters, Lord Howe having told them that he could not confer with them as members of Congress, being not authorized so to do by his commission. They this day passed through on their return to Philadelphia.

I am very sorry that Major Peirce has been so ill; hope he is by this time recovered, and that I shall soon have the happiness to hear from him. Pray remember me affectionately to him. I am much obliged to you for your kind inquiries concerning my health. The journey to Princeton quite drove that mean companion, the ague, away.

Remember me to Major Lewis, Colonel Trumbull, and Mr. Clajon. Adieu, my dear sir.

Yours sincerely and affectionately, R. GATES.
To Colonel Walter Stewart.

ROBERT H. HARRISON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 12, 1776.

SIR: His Excellency being called from Head-Quarters to-day on business of importance, which prevents his writing, I therefore do myself the honour to inform Congress of what has happened since his letter of yesterday.

Last evening the enemy transported a number of men from Buchanan's to Montessor's Island, and by their several movements more strongly indicate their intention to land somewhere about Harlem or Morrisiana—most likely at both at the same time.

This morning one of the ships that has been for some time in the Sound moved down towards Hell-Gate, but the tide leaving her she could not get near enough to bring her guns to bear upon our fortification. If she means to attack it, it is probable she will warp in the next tide. Their batteaus have kept up a pretty constant fire against ours at that place, but without any considerable effect. This morning they opened a new one.

I do not recollect any other material occurrence, and shall only add, that I have the honour to be, with the highest respect, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.
To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq., President of Congress.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I yesterday received the favour of your letter of the 9th, with its several enclosures, and am extremely happy that your honourable body had anticipated my recommendation, by resolving on an augmentation of six hundred men to the garrisons in the Highlands. The importance of those posts demands the utmost attention and every exertion to maintain them.

The vessels for the removal of the sick are not yet arrived; their present situation gives me great anxiety. As the wind is now favourable, I would fain hope that a sufficient number will come down to-day to take in the whole; if they do not, my distress will be much increased.

General Clinton, in a letter of the 8th, transmitted me a list of artillery and ordnance stores wanted at Forts Montgomery and Constitution, which included the several articles you have determined to procure, except those mentioned below. I directed that they should be sent up; but as the situation of our affairs at this time may not perhaps admit of it, I think it will be prudent for Mr. Schenck, whom you have appointed an agent in this instance, to get all he can. Should he be able to obtain the supply you have voted to be necessary, and General Clinton's demand be complied with also, no damage will be done; our stores will not be too large.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,
GO. WASHINGTON.

To the Hon. Abm. Yates, Jun., Esq., President, &c.

Entrenching tools, iron carriages, cannon harness, Armourer with the tools.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL JAMES CLINTON.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I have before me your two letters of the 8th and 10th instant, the first enclosing returns of the number of men and ordnance and artillery stores at Forts Montgomery and Constitution; the last, copies of two letters from the Convention of the State of New-York, by which it appears they had ordered in six hundred Militia as a reinforcement to the two posts, and which I hope will prove sufficient to put them in a proper state of defence.

I ordered Colonel Knox to provide and forward the different articles wanted by you in the ordnance department, but he informed me that from the present unsettled state of our Magazine and Laboratory (many of our stores being removed and on their way to King's Bridge and Mount Washington) he could not comply at once with the whole of the demand, but would send what he could conveniently collect. The Convention of New-York having appointed Mr. Schenck to provide what articles they found wanting at their late review of your works and stores, and which include many of the articles you wrote for, I hope, as he will make it his business, that he will collect many articles which Colonel Knox, from the present hurry of our affairs, cannot attend to; and if they should both provide the same things, your store will only be fuller. I have again ordered the Quartermaster-General to send up the nails with all possible expedition. The Convention having ordered an Armourer, with proper tools, to be fixed at your two posts, I hope what arms are at present out of repair will be soon fit for use. We must make every shift with our old arms till we can get better supplied.

I am, &c., GO. WASHINGTON.
To Brigadier-General James Clinton, Fort Montgomery.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I yesterday evening received your favour of the 8th instant, with its enclosures.

You were right in supposing me unable to comply with General Gates's request. I am by no means provided to supply so large a demand, and am glad you transmitted his application immediately to Congress.

The papers you enclosed but too strongly indicate the hostile intentions of the Indians; however, I trust if they should attempt an incursion upon the frontiers, that the force you will be able to oppose to 'em will be sufficient to repel their attacks, and prevent their doing much mischief.

I have delivered the returns of boards and plank to the Quartermaster-General, who will examine them and pay whatever is due as soon as proper accounts are rendered him. As we shall have occasion for a great quantity, I must request your assistance in furnishing every supply in your power; neither timber or boats will be wanted. I am exceedingly hurried by a variety of business now before me, and shall only add that I am, dear sir, with great respect, &c.,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Major-General Schuyler, Northern Department.

DR. MORGAN TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

New-York, September 12, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: Agreeable to orders I have been into the County of Orange, and collected seven members of Committee, and spent the whole of yesterday and part of this day in viewing the country, and looking out for proper coverings for the reception of the sick and wounded.

I am sorry to report that, in a circuit of fourteen miles in that County, I cannot find or hear of any suitable accommodations for more than about one hundred sick. No country can be worse provided in all respects; and the places proposed are remote from any landing. From the knowledge I have of New-Ark, I am persuaded it is a place infinitely superiour in all respects for the establishment of a General Hospital. There are but four miles of land carriage required; all the rest is water carriage. The houses are numerous, large, and convenient. If it be objected that they are full of inhabitants from New-York, so is every hovel through Orange County; and as to the town of Orange, I cannot find that there is room for one sick person without incommoding some one or other.

After this report, which is grounded on the most careful inquiry and inspection, I wait your Excellency's further orders; but if I may be permitted to offer my sentiments it is, that no time be lost in applying to the Committee at New-Ark by requisition for room for the sick; and if your Excellency thinks proper, I will immediately repair with all despatch to urge the matter without delay, or proceed in any other way your Excellency may see fit.

I am your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN MORGAN.

To His Excellency General Washington.

STEPHEN MOYLAN TO COLONEL HARRISON.

September 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have given a bill of scantling to a man who engages to get as much as will be wanted for the Barracks, between this and Peekskill, so that I don't think it necessary for the General to mention any thing at present relative to the timber.

I am yours,

S. MOYLAN.

To Colonel Harrison.

GENERAL CHESTER TO CAPTAIN ISHAM.

September 12, 1776.

SIR: In consequence of yesterday's orders I appoint you to take the charge and oversight of all the sick in my brigade who are not able to transport themselves from place to place. You are to continue to collect them together in some convenient house near the banks of the North River, and to provide necessaries for their comfort, both as to medicine and food, advising with the Hospital Surgeon who shall be appointed for that purpose, as well as the Regimental Surgeons who may attend the sick. And you are to apply to the Quartermaster-General for money for to supply the same, which you are to use with the utmost frugality. Bloomingdale may be as convenient a place to collect them together, as may be.

JOHN CHESTER, Commandant.

To Captain John Isham.

EBENEZER HAZARD TO ABRAHAM YATES.

Dobbs's Ferry, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I am honoured with your letter of the 10th instant, desiring, in behalf of the Committee of Safety, that the Albany post may ride on the east side of the Hudson River, and cross it at the Fishkill or New-Windsor, when it is his turn to ride on the west side. In answer to it, I beg leave to inform you that I can see no reason why he should not ride as the Committee request, unless it will be contrary to the following order from the Comptroller, dated the 7th instant: "I desire the route of the Albany post may not be altered till there is an absolute necessity, or order from the Postmaster-General." However, sir, I cannot conceive that the alteration you propose can any way affect the revenue of the Post-Office, or occasion any inconvenience to the publick; and, therefore, for my own part, shall have no objections against it, but I do not expect to have the management of these matters much longer, having desired that another Postmaster may be appointed for the district of New-York.

I am respectfully, sir, your and the Committee's most obedient, humble servant,

EBEN. HAZARD.

To Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., President of the Committee of Safety, at Fishkill.

P. S. The Convention are indebted to me for some postage: will you please to procure an order for the payment of it?

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, September 12, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yesterday I was favoured with a letter from General Gates of the 7th instant, continued to the 8th, covering the information given by a Hessian deserter, and copy of his capitulation, copies whereof I do myself the honour to enclose.

General Gates informs me "no intelligence that can be depended upon has yet arrived from the fleet. Scouts and parties are out by land and by water to make discoveries."

Part of the Militia of this County are now in this town and Schenectady, and more are daily coming in. I have not had a line from Colonel Dayton since that of the 4th instant; I have therefore requested the Militia to remain here until I shall be enabled to judge which way it will be proper to march them.

I am, dear sir, most respectfully, your Excellency's obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington, &c.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL ARNOLD.

Tyonderoga, September 12, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I had the pleasure to receive your letters by Lieutenant Brooks, of the Sixth Battalion of Pennsylvanians, from Isle-aux-Mottes. I am perfectly satisfied with your leaving Isle-aux-Têtes, and think from yours and every other account that the post you now occupy is much preferable. Point-aux-Fers is an object that should employ your serious attention. Should it be possible for the enemy secretly to get artillery and a post fixed there, while you are to the northward of that remarkable spot, it might prove a great annoyance to your fleet. Remember how exceedingly you ought to guard against the possibility of the enemy's possessing any narrow pass in your rear, a caution which you so much approved in the orders and instructions you received.

The row-galleys are all three at this place, and fitting with the utmost diligence. General Waterbury is indefatigable, and promises to sail without the smallest unnecessary delay; your best pilot should be sent by the return of the bearer to conduct them down. You wrote to General Schuyler to apply to Governour Trumbull for Captains to command these galleys. The Governour has sent four; by this we are encumbered with double officers, as you appointed three before you left Tyonderoga. What is best to be done in this difficulty? I shall endeavour to pacify all claimants until I hear from you. A good many seamen are procured, and will be sent in the galleys. I have ordered Commissary Avery, and Mr. Deacon Rood of Onion River, to acquaint all the inhabitants upon both sides the Lake, that what cattle, sheep, garden-stuff, or hogs, are sent to you, shall, upon your certificate be paid for in ready money, upon the presentment thereof to me.

Enclosed is a copy of a letter I have just received from Dr. Franklin. The tobacco is not yet come; it shall be sent to you in the first row-galley. Would it not now and then be proper for a row-galley or gondola to cruise a little to the southward, above Point-aux-Fers, to protect boats, &c., passing to the fleet? The enemy are subtle, and quick at expedients; they may endeavour to impose false friends upon you; your watchword should never be given until sunset, and all boats at daylight kept at a proper distance, until their crews are examined.

In obedience to your request, I wrote very fully yesterday in my publick letter, upon the subject you so earnestly mentioned. I fancy when my letter is received, the Congress and your friends will be convinced that every report to your prejudice is founded in calumny, and should meet with the contempt and disregard it so justly deserves.

A fourth row-galley will be quite planked up by Saturday night. Your barge is here, and most elegantly painted and finished. She will be sent by Captain Arnold. The provisions I now send will last much longer than will be necessary for the supply of the fleet, until the first row-galley arrives, even if the inhabitants upon the Lake do not send you any fresh provisions, &c.

I hope to be able to send all the clothing you demand by Captain Arnold. Rum goes by this conveyance, and all the hard bread baked at Crown Point. Commissary Avery has my orders to write, and obey all your orders. The swivels will come with the galley. Gunners are very scarce, but you shall be supplied.

I would fain send you some intelligence from authority, of the proceedings of the armies at Long-Island; but neither General Schuyler or myself have received any letters from General Washington that are particular upon the subject. By private letters it is clear the enemy lost upwards of fourteen hundred men in the three repulses they met with in their attack upon our lines, Wednesday, the 28th ultimo; and Commissary Trumbull writes that we are still in possession of our lines upon Long-Island, and the City of New-York. It is beyond a doubt that our people have behaved with the greatest spirit, and that the enemy have suffered greatly, and must view our troops in a very respectable light.

I am, &c.,

HO. GATES.

To Brigadier-General Arnold.

P. S. When you receive an order to send a flag to the enemy, or have an opportunity by the return of one of theirs, send them the Act of Independence enclosed. H. G.

MAJOR SHEPARDSON TO GENERAL GATES.

Rutland, September 12, 1776.

SIR: The detachment of Colonel Van Dyck's regiment now on the road in repairing the same, under Colonel Barrit's inspection, consisting of ninety men, officers included, are without ammunition. If your Honour will please to give orders for their supply by Lieutenant Cooke, the bearer, you will greatly oblige

Your Honour's most obedient and very humble servant,
JOHN SHEPARDSON, Major.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates, Major-General.

[Endorsed: The bridge is building at Rutland, and the road to Mount Independence comes in at Castletown.
Delivered one thousand cartridges and one hundred flints.]

COLONEL SIMONDS TO GENERAL GATES.

Williamstown, September 12, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to an express from his Honour Major-General Schuyler, I have caused the Militia under my command to be on their march to Tyonderoga. I thought proper to send this by express, so that in case the men should not be wanted, they may have early orders for their return, that so expense of their march farther than necessary may be prevented.

I am your Honour's most obedient servant,

BENJ. SIMONDS, Colonel.

To General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COMMITTEE FOR NEW-HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.

Lebanon, September 12, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I am informed that Mr. Ralph Isaacs of New-Haven, has done and said many things tending to depreciate and obstruct the currency of the Continental bills of credit, and hath likewise encouraged and assisted deserters to make their escape from our army. How these matters are I do not pretend to judge, but think them very worthy your attention. Mr. Dupeau and the French Captain in company with him, can give you information. The same French Captain complains of great injustice from said Isaacs. As he is a merchant stranger, who is come to trade with us upon the faith of the resolves of Congress, I think his case falls within your cognizance as executors of these resolves; and as it is of the greatest importance that speedy justice should be done to such strangers, to encourage them to come and trade with us, I am of opinion you ought immediately to call said Isaacs before you, and take speedy and effectual care that equal and impartial justice be done this stranger.

To the Committee of Inspection, of New-Haven.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I received your favour of the 11th instant, per Mr. Marvin, wherein you are so kind as to offer to supply some of our troops with arms for the present service. There are two companies from Norwich who want. Please to deliver Captain Jabez Wright, for his company, three guns, bayonets, and cartouch-boxes, and to Captain Ezra Brewster, for his company, fifteen guns, &c., taking their respective receipts, with promise to return them, extraordinary excepted. If it appear they want more, please to deliver them accordingly. Let them be prized by judicious men, under oath. Take duplicate receipts and accounts of appraisal; one of each to be sent me.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Henry B. Livingston, (in his absence to be opened by Mr. Dickason.) at Saybrook.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 12, 1776.

SIR: Since my last of the 9th instant, I am favoured with a letter from General Washington, in which he gives his opinion, that, under present circumstances, a diversion on Long-Island is impracticable, and that the only object there is the securing and bringing off the persons and effects of our friends; perhaps some of the provisions for our enemies may be intercepted or destroyed.

I am obliged to recall Major Ely, to take charge of a regiment of Militia ordered towards New-York. The rest of the men from this State will remain there for the present, and so long as they can be serviceable in assisting our friends, or intercepting the provisions for our enemies. I confide in your prudence to direct their operations, and when the aforesaid objects are attained, upon the appearance of danger from the enemy's ships, to make a timely retreat to the Continent.

I am, &c.,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Henry B. Livingston.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO ADMIRAL HOPKINS.

Lebanon, September 12, 1776.

SIR: Since my last to Governour Cooke, on the subject of a naval preparation and expedition against the enemy's ships, &c., in the Sound, near White-Stone, have received a letter from General Washington, urging the attempt, with the greatest confidence and almost assurance of success, if you fall in with the measure, and will take with you such Continental ships and vessels of force as are now in the ports of the State of Rhode-Island, and such others as that State can furnish. We are exerting ourselves to get in readiness those we have or can procure; which are, a twenty-gun ship, new built, a fourteen-gun brigantine, and the bomb brigantine which you brought in there. There is Captain Pond, in the Continental privateer, and another one, Captain Rogers's, belonging to the State of New-York, which probably may be had.

This measure requires secrecy and expedition. We entertain no doubt of your inclination, zeal, and activity, in taking the command and conducting this squadron, which, we are persuaded, will clear the Sound, disappoint our enemy, and give great advantage to our army.

The main difficulty which occurs is the manning this fleet. But, after exerting ourselves in your State and ours to rally what men we can, sailors and marines, General Washington proposes a draft from the Militia lately gone towards New-York, and stationed along Westchester County and thereabout. We want much to hear from you of your opinion on the proposed plan, and what force you can collect, and how soon.

We herein transmit to you an extract of a letter received from General Washington, so far as concerns this subject; which is as follows:

"I highly approve of the plan and proposition for raising such a naval force as will be sufficient to clear the Sound of the enemy's ships-of-war. If Admiral Hopkins will join you, I should suppose it not only practicable, but a matter of certainty; and if it can be effected, many valuable and salutary consequences must result from it.

"As to drafting seamen from Continental regiments, it cannot be, as their numbers have been reduced so low already, by taking men from them for the galleys, boats, and other purposes, that some of them have hardly any thing but the name. Beside, I must depend chiefly upon them for a successful opposition to the enemy. If it can be done out of the Militia, I shall not have the least objection; and heartily wish the enterprise, whenever attempted, may be attended with all possible success.

"The enemy's ships can receive no reinforcement but such as go round Long-Island, as our works at Hell-Gate will prevent their sending any ships that way."

You will be so good as to communicate this letter to Governour Cooke, or, in his absence, to such gentlemen as is proper. I have wrote him very lately on the subject.

We shall want twenty four and six-pounders, with carriages, for the brigantine, as we fear we shall not be able to procure them from our furnace at Salisbury, timely; therefore should be glad you would bring that number with you, if possible, for the present expedition.

A speedy answer from you on the above proposal, and your opinion and advice in the preparation, from time to time, will much oblige your humble servant,

JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To Admiral Hopkins.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 12, 1776,

Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Titus Hosmer, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, Jedediah Elderkin.

Voted, That the Selectmen of the Town of New-Haven have liberty, at the expense of said Town, to take three of the Twelve-pounders at the Furnace at Salisbury for the use of the Fortifications at New-Haven; also one ton of Shot assorted for the Cannon at said Forts, said Cannon and Shot to be made use of at said New-Haven until further orders from the General Assembly, or the Governour and Council of Safety; and if the General Assembly or Governour and Council of Safety shall see fit to order said three Cannon and Shot to any other use during the present contest, the expense of transporting said Cannon and Shot from Salisbury to be paid by the State to the said Town of New-Haven; and the Overseers of said Furnace are directed to deliver said Cannon and Shot accordingly. (Copy delivered Captain Timothy Jones, 12th September.)

Voted and Ordered, That Mr. Hosmer do, as soon as may be, procure some proper person to proceed to Simsbury and Salisbury if needful, and forward the Six-pound Cannon that are ready there to Hartford or Middletown, with Shot for them, and assist and consult with Mr. Humphrey therein, and in the mean time procure proper Carriages for them. Also the Swivels and proper Shot for them, and have twenty of the Swivels swivelled at Hartford or Middletown; and the Overseer of the Furnace at Salisbury is ordered to deliver such Cannon, Swivels, and Shot, accordingly. (Copy delivered Mr. Hosmer, 12th September, 1776.)

Memorandum, September 17, 1776.—William Hillhouse

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

and Benjamin Huntington, Esqs., attended to do business in Council, the other gentlemen not attending. Richard Law, Esq., arrived from Millford in the evening.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO ROBERT R. LIVINGSTON, JUN.

Saybrook, September 12, 1776.

DEAR BROTHER: I have just time to tell you I have been obliged to retreat from Long-Island to this place for several reasons that I have not now time to mention. I have given General Washington a particular account by the same conveyance this is sent by. I shall to-morrow, at the head of four hundred men, set out for Huntington. If I succeed in the attempt I am going to make, I shall yet save Suffolk County, though most of the inhabitants have been prevailed upon to take an oath of allegiance to the King of Great Britain through a persuasion that the Island was given up as indefensible. If you write to me, direct to the care of Governour Trumbull. He has assisted me with two hundred and sixty men; with him a correspondence is established. Remember me to all my friends.

Yours, &c.,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To Robert R. Livingston, Jun., Esq., in Convention at Fishkills.

GENERAL SALTONSTALL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, September 12, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: The honour done me by the commission enclosed in your letter of the 10th instant, appointing me Brigadier-General of the Militia now ordered to march from this State to the aid of General Washington's army, lays me under the highest obligations to your Honour and the honourable Council of Safety.

I lament my ignorance in the duty of the office in every respect but zeal; however, will exert the utmost of my power to do the duty incumbent upon a commanding officer of a brigade. Intend to be at the head of the brigade next Sabbath day at New-Haven.

Your favour of 8th instant, per Captain Lord, received the 9th at Lyme, and that day gave orders for all the men that could be equipped at Lyme to march to the rendezvous at Westchester. The number, including officers, amounted to one hundred and four. And appointed officers to march those that were not equipped (invalids excepted) to Fort Trumbull, there to obey the orders of Colonel Wolcott—eighty in number. Captain Chadwick's company, the eighth in said regiment, did not produce any men equipped.

Returned from Lyme the 9th and found your favour of 9th, and observe what you say with respect to Major Ely, who had embarked for Long-Island before your Honour's express reached Colonel Wolcott, and is not returned. The lads of sixteen years rising are excused from duty. The 10th instant, gave marching orders to the three companies in New-London, (north parish,) amounting to eighty-four—all that could be equipped—and have appointed officers to return those remaining of the three companies to Fort Trumbull. The first and second companies in the town of New-London are by your Honour and Council of Safety excused from marching. Captain Jonathan Calkins, of this town, of the eleventh company in the regiment, is now ready to march with about thirty men equipped, and waits orders from the commanding officer of the Third Regiment. Captain Jonathan Croker's company of this town, and seventh in the regiment, is in the same sad state of Captain Chadwick's, not any equipped. On 10th instant, finding Major Ely absent, and the two companies ordered from Fort Trumbull not in a condition to march until his return, sent an express to order the companies marched from Lyme to halt at New-Haven for further orders;—and the like orders are given to the three New-London companies that are marched. I informed the regiment they would receive at New-Haven from the Committee of Pay-Table, twenty shillings per man towards wages. The New-London companies had not money to support them on the march to New-Haven; and to forward the service lent each Captain money sufficient for that purpose, who are to reimburse themselves out of money received at New-Haven. Your Honour will no doubt order that the brigade be supplied with more money than the twenty shillings per man; otherwise it will in my opinion be impossible to march said brigade very far from New-Haven without discontent.

I am, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant,
G. SALTONSTALL.

To Governour Trumbull.

ALEXANDER EVANS TO ABRAHAM LOTT.

New-London, September 12, 1776.

SIR: I am sorry to acquaint you with the loss of part of my cargo of salt—about seven hundred bushels that was stowed on the south side—and my medicines. I saved my pepper and paper, raisins and prunes, the medicines being so heavy that I could not get them down to the boat, and the wagons were all pressed to carry the Regulars' baggage. The Island was delivered up forty-eight hours before I knew any thing of it. The privateers left it two days before I could get away, and left six prizes, which were all in Tory possession. I have about seven hundred bushels in, more or less, which I have put under the direction of the Congress here till hearing from the honourable Congress of New-York. I should be glad to know how to proceed.

I am, sir, your humble servant,

ALEXANDER EVANS.

To Abraham Lott, Esq., Member of the honourable Congress of New-York.

Boston, September 12, 1776.

Notice is hereby given that the Lecture this day is turned into a Day of Prayer, more especially on account of the critical state of our military operations.

Captain Gill, in a small privateer schooner, Independency, from this port, has taken and sent into Plymouth a brigantine, from Antigua, bound to Europe, laden with rum and sugars. She was first taken by a Connecticut privateer, but the people rose and retook her, and had her in possession three days before Captain Gill came up with her.

We hear a privateer from Salem has taken a brigantine from Cork, loaded with provisions for New-York, and sent her into some port at the eastward.

We hear from New-York that the Roebuck, of forty-four guns, Captain Parker, in attempting to get up East River, through Hell-Gate, got very roughly handled, being hulled fifteen times.

Captain James Tracey, and Lieutenant Mains, of the Yankey Hero brig, were sent from Halifax to Staten-Island, the last of July, on board the Mercury Pirate frigate, James Montague.

Captain Procter, of Philadelphia, who is now a prisoner in Halifax gaol, was eleven weeks in irons on board the above frigate, during which time he was treated in the most barbarous manner by the above Montague, who several times threatened to hang him, and offered one of his sailors forty shillings to swear his life against him. Mr. Carpenter, of this town, is closely confined in irons in Halifax gaol, by order of General Massey, who commands there.

We learn from undoubted authority that the schooner Sally, Captain Roach, which lately went from Piscataqua to Halifax, as a flag of truce, with prisoners, was, on her arrival there, made a prize of, (by that petty, paltry Jack-tar, Commodore Arbuthnot.) and the hands put on board a man-of-war.

One day last week were sent into Providence seven vessels, prizes, with supplies for those unrelenting, barbarous, tyrannical, blood-thirsty butchers, the Royal savage of Britain's troops, now on Staten-Island. They were taken by the Captains Biddle and Whipple, in two vessels-of-war belonging to the United and Confederate States of America. Particulars of their cargoes have not yet come to had.

Last Sunday was taken and carried into Gouldsborough, by two small boats, a brig from Ireland, bound for Halifax, laden with beef, butter, &c. She parted company with twelve other provision vessels the day on which she was taken, all bound for the above port.

By the Hartford Post we are informed that the Royal pirate frigate Rose, commanded by the infamous Wallace, in attempting to get up the Sound, at New-York, was hulled several times, and obliged to put back to the Ministerial fleet.

Williamsburg, September 13, 1776.

A vessel is arrived at Hampton with fourteen hundred bushels of salt and a small quantity of rum. The Captain informs that he spoke a French ship, one of a fleet of fourteen sail, laden with goods, and bound for Delaware. A number of French officers were likewise on board, who intended to offer their services to the United States of America.

By letters from Cape Nicola Mole, of the 28th ultimo, we learn that two frigates had lately arrived at St. Domingo from France, completely manned, in order to cruise off that island, and protect all American vessels within their limits. Two more frigates were daily expected, for the same purpose. These four frigates are to act in conjunction with two Spanish frigates, which are stationed at Porto-Rico, for the protection of all North-American vessels. The Spanish Captains are to pay equal attention to the General of St. Domingo's orders as to those of the Commander at Porto-Rico. There is every appearance of a speedy rupture between France, Spain, and Great Britain, as Spain and Portugal are absolutely now at war.

Sampson Matthews, Esq., is chosen Senator for the district of East Augusta and Dunmore, and William Cabell, Esq., for Buckingham, Albemarle and Amherst district.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO GEORGE COOKE.

[No. 180.]

Annapolis, September 13, 1776.

SIR: We have the pleasure to inform you that you were yesterday appointed Commander of the ship Defence, now lying at Annapolis, bound out on a cruise, and the honourable Convention have directed us to inform you of this appointment, and to request your immediate attendance to take the command of said ship.

We are, &c.

To Captain George Cooke, St. Mary's County.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO BENJAMIN RUMSEY AND JAMES TILGHMAN.

[No. 181.]

Annapolis, September 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We are directed by the Convention to request your attendance in the Council of Safety immediately. Be pleased to signify when you can attend. The President is left with only three others, who are all members of the House, and the Convention do not incline to any new appointment until they hear from the absent members.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Benjamin Rumsey and James Tilghman, Esq's.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee, September 13, 1776,

Present: Samuel Purviance, Jun., Chairman; A. Buchanan, W. Buchanan, B. Nicholson, J. Gittings, J. Moale, D. Lux, T. Sollers; W. Wilkinson, W. Aisquith, B. Griffith, J. Calhoun, A. Britain, T. Rutter, D. Shaw.

The Resolves of Convention for appointing Officers for two Companies of Militia in this County being read, the Committee, jointly with the Field Officers, proceeded to the choice of such Officers by ballot; when the following gentlemen were chosen, viz:

First Company: Frederick Deams, Captain; David Evans, First Lieutenant; Charles Moale Croxall, Second Lieutenant; Samuel Kinsey, Ensign.

Second Company: Nicholas Norwood, Captain; Nathaniel Bond, First Lieutenant; Vincent Greer, Second Lieutenant; Henry Dunn, Ensign.

The Committee being informed that Job Green had obtained permission from the Council of Safety for the sailing of the Schooner, which they, the Committee, had refused to grant at the last meeting, are unanimously of opinion that the said Vessel should not be suffered to depart this Port until the Council is made acquainted with a state of the case.

Whereupon it was Resolved, That Captain Nathaniel Smith, Commander of the Fort, be instructed to prevent the Vessel from sailing, and that the following Letter be immediately sent to him, viz:

"In Committee, Baltimore, September 13, 1776.

"SIR: The Committee being informed that Job Green has obtained a permission from the Council of Safety for the sailing of James Clarke's schooner, contrary to a resolve of the Committee entered into on Monday last, they are unanimously of opinion that the Council would not have granted Mr. Green the said permission had they been acquainted with the facts relative to the vessel in question. For this reason, the Committee requests of you that you will not permit the said vessel to depart this port until they have an opportunity of transmitting to the Council the state of the case, and receiving an answer thereto, of which they will advise you as soon as in their power.

"Per order of the Committee:

"S. PURVIANCE, Jr., Chairman."

Permissions are granted to the following gentlemen to load the following Vessels, by the Chairman, viz:

To Mr. Hugh Young, for the schooner Polly, William Gosnald, master, to Carolina, with bar-iron and rum.

To Mr. Bowly, for the schooner Favourite, Benjamin Earle, master, to Martinico.

To Mr. David Stewart, on behalf of himself and others, for the sloop Independence, James Tibbett, master, for Martinico; and the schooner ———, William Gartner, master, for Hispaniola.

Attest:

GEO. LUX, Secretary.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

In Committee, Baltimore, September 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We take the liberty of transmitting you a copy of a resolve of this Committee, entered into on Monday last, relative to an application made us by Job Green, of this place, for a permission for the departure of a schooner loaded with provisions. The copy of said resolve we should have sent to you before now, had we not apprehended that Mr. John Smith, who was present in Committee during the transaction, had taken a copy of it with him, which we have reason to suspect he did not—it being reported to us that Job Green hath obtained from your Board a permission for the departure of said vessel, which we are inclined to think you would not have granted had you been acquainted with the circumstances of the case. In the mean time, to prevent Mr. Green making an advantage of your permission until you were fully informed of our reasons for refusing him permission, we have requested Captain Smith not to suffer the said vessel to sail before we receive further directions from you on the subject.

The true state of the case is as follows: Mr. Green lately applied to the Chairman to know if he might have a permit to load a schooner with flour to the West-Indies; which he was answered he might have, if he would engage to comply with the terms required by the Committee, of giving security in double the value of the cargo, (when the vessel sailed,) that the vessel should not proceed to any port or place prohibited by Congress or Convention. On promising these terms should be complied with, a permit to load was granted by the Chairman to Mr. Green, not suspecting that any fraud was intended. But being informed shortly after that the schooner which Mr. Green had obtained permission to load was a vessel belonging to Mr. James Clarke, of this town, who had been a few days before published by this Committee as an enemy to the interests of America, of which Mr. Green could not be ignorant, it gave us great room to suspect that the whole matter was a collusion betwixt Mr. Green and Mr. Clarke, and only intended to evade the incapacity of the latter from trading, to which he was subject by his conduct. We apprehend there is more room for such suspicion from Mr. Green's conduct, which does not stand so fair as we could expect from a friend to our common cause. But, at any rate, we conceived that every person was precluded from trading with Mr. Clarke after he was published by the Committee; and by Mr. Green's own acknowledgments before us, it appeared that no sale of the vessel was made to him before that time.

Per order of the Committee:

SAML. PURVIANCE, Jr., Chairman.

To the Hon. Council of Safety of Maryland, at Annapolis.

SECRET COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Philadelphia, September 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have been applied to for a supply of powder for the Continental frigate built at Baltimore, which should have been ordered down there; but as we understand you have a sufficient quantity at that place, and as there is some powder due to the Continent from your State, we request the favour of you to supply Messrs. William Lux, Samuel Purviance, and David Stewart with four tons and a half of gunpowder, for the use of the said frigate, and for proving her cannon, &c.; and hereafter we will repay you in powder the balance that will then become due to your State, or supply you with more should it become necessary.

Your compliance with this request will save time and charges. It will oblige the Secret Committee of Congress, of which we are a quorum; and we remain, gentlemen, your obedient, humble servants,

ROBT. MORRIS,
RICHARD HENRY LEE,
B. FRANKLIN,
JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To the Hon. the Council of Safety of Maryland.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, September 13, 1776.

SIR: The bearers, William Treadwell and Mr. Ludlum, went over from New-Rochelle to Long-Island, soon after the retreat of our army from that place, and continued there till yesterday. On their return to New-Rochelle, Colonel Drake, by my directions, sent them here. I have examined them, and transmitted the intelligence they gave to his Excellency General Washington; and I now send them to the honourable the Convention of the State, as well to account for their conduct in going over to the Island when in the hands of the enemy, as that they may be further examined.

I am, with much esteem, your most obedient servant,
GEO. CLINTON.

To the Honourable the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

Enclosed is a line they wrote to General Washington, which he handed over to me.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY COMMITTEE TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

In Committee, Westchester County, September 13, 1776.

In consequence of orders from your honourable House to me directed, as Chairman of the General Committee of Westchester County, relative to the examination of the persons apprehended with Lounsberry, I caused the said prisoners, to wit: Jacob Scureman, Bloomer Neilson, Joseph Turner, and Samuel Haines, to be brought before me: Josiah Disbrow, the other prisoner, being unable to be removed, on account of his being wounded at the time of his apprehension.

Scureman says he was going over to Rye from New-Rochelle, came across three or four men with Lounsberry, in the woods; stopped and talked with Lounsberry; did not show the inlisting paper, nor ask him to sign it; he did not know Lounsberry was there till he saw him. They had three or four guns in company; did not bring one himself; says he was on board the Phoenix in the North River; was persuaded by Godfrey Haines to go, but he went with Joshua Ferris; did not come away with him. Upon the whole, said Scureman did not incline to tell the truth.

Neilson says he was in company with Lounsberry at the place aforesaid; did not meet by an agreement; confesses his name was put to the inlistment; he got no money; says that Lounsberry came from Staten-Island last; that Lounsberry over-persuaded him.

Turner taken upon Sutton's Neck; his name was in Lounsberry's list. Says Lounsberry asked him to sign the inlistment; he did not sign it himself, but Lounsberry put his name down; was to have £3 sterling, bounty promised him by Lounsberry.

Haines says he promised Lounsberry to inlist with him last Spring; 'listed a few days before taken. The night after Lousberry was taken he was to go to Staten-Island.

The above persons appeared altogether evasive in their answers, and not willing to give a true account. They are sent up to Kingston gaol.

I would further inform your honourable House that Jonathan Purdy, Jun., a young fellow who went with Barnes to Staten-Island, in March last, and Gilbert Horton, of the White-Plains, have, before our Committee, called themselves subjects of King George, and claim the privilege of prisoners of war. These persons are in confinement, and should be glad your honourable House will give us some directions concerning them and all others who declare in that way, as we expect more of them.

From your very humble servant,

JOHN THOMAS, JUN., Chairman.

CORNELIUS GLENN TO ABRAHAM YATES, JUN.

Albany, September 13, 1776.

SIR: Whereas the time for the annual election of a Treasurer is near at hand, I have this day consulted with Judge Ten Eyck, who refers me to your opinion on this matter, as being privy to the intention of Congress as well to the new form of Government now a forming, and as such should be very glad of your advice, whether we must proceed in the usual mode, or drop the matter until a plan is prescribed for this department. Your answer on this head will be very agreeable, and necessary to have it soon.

And am, with respect, your most obedient, humble

CORNELIUS GLENN.

To Mr. Abraham Yates, Jun.

P. S. Mr. Yates is undoubtedly acquainted that the expense of this department is always accrued and due the year before it is raised; so that if it is not continued, it is a grievance to the people performing the service.

H. GLEN TO WALTER LIVINGSTON.

Schenectady, September 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 10th instant I have received. As to the salt and pork which are intended for Fort Schuyler, German Flats, and Johnstown, when come to hand, shall be forwarded immediately according to your directions. I don't believe there is any pork to spare in Johnstown, though I shall know to-morrow, as I have wrote Egberts. Yesterday afternoon, Mr. John Visher came in town with about fifty head of cattle; wanted to leave some with me; I had no occasion for any yet, and should I want any, I can purchase a few round this place. I have a little pork left to victual the batteau-men once more for about twelve days, exclusive of what is to go up to Fort Schuyler.

Last evening Messrs. Seller and Outhout delivered me the enclosed proposals for some cattle they have. I am told it is very good for the season of the year. Should you approve of the proposal to take the cattle, there would perhaps be no occasion for the whole of the one hundred head you wrote me were to come this way in about twelve days' time. You might order some of them to the northward. I have made it publick that whoever has any publick demands against you, must call between this and October 1st. Your answer on this subject, with directions when the salt comes, I shall expect.

Your humble servant,

H. GLEN.

To Walter Livingston, Esq., Deputy Commissary-General, Albany.

COLONEL HENRY B. LIVINGSTON TO COLONEL SAMUEL COIT.

Saybrook, September 14, 1776.

SIR: I expected to have been sent for previous to the delivery of the arms you had of me this morning. You have not signed a receipt that I can with any face show to Governour Trumbull. I send you a form of one, and desire Captain Davis to deliver you the other. The arms delivered you are not by any means intended to be sold; I have not authority to go so far—they are only a loan. They belong to the Province of New-York; they are not my property. I must therefore beg you either to deliver the arms, or a proper receipt, according to the form I send you.

Your most obedient, humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 13, 1776.

SIR: Please to deliver to Colonel Samuel Coit, or his order, such number of guns, bayonets, and cartouch-boxes as will be sufficient to arm and equip such of his regiment as are destitute, taking care to have them appraised, and his receipt to see the same returned, extraordinaries excepted. A duplicate of such receipt and appraisal to be returned to me.

I am, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Henry B. Livingston, Saybrook.

New-London, September 13, 1776.

Yesterday, the armed schooner Spy, Captain Robert Niles, belonging to this State, returned here. She brought in with her the schooner Mary and Elizabeth, Bruce, bound from Barbadoes to Halifax, laden with fifty-nine hogsheads of rum and eight barrels of sugar. About eighteen days ago, she took the ship Hope, Quince, bound from St. Vincent's to London, laden with two hundred and fifty hogsheads of sugar, thirty-two puncheons of rum, some molasses, cocoa, and coffee, and may be daily expected into some port.

In latitude 38°, longitude 65°, Captain Niles saw five large ships, which he supposed were transports, under convoy of a large man-of-war; the latter chased him some time.

WILLIAM BRADFORD TO MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY.

Newport, September 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The most honourable the Continental Congress having ordered one battalion of their troops stationed here to march immediately to New-York, and informed this State that they recommended to you to replace the same with a regiment of your Militia, the General Committee, appointed to act during the recess of the General Assembly, have exerted themselves to get that battalion in readiness to proceed with the greatest expedition; part of which will march to-morrow and the remainder the next day. The Committee have appointed Colonel Church, who will deliver you this, to make application to you to send forward the said regiment as soon as possible.

Mr. President Hancock having also written in the most pressing terms to this State to afford all the aid in our power to the army at New-York, the Committee have recommended it to Colonel Richmond to hold the other Continental battalion in readiness to march at a moment's warning. And he will accordingly march with it as soon as he receives authentick intelligence that the regiment of Militia from your State shall enter into this. They have also ordered a battalion, to consist of seven hundred Militia, to be immediately raised to supply the place of one of the Continental battalions removed. I have no doubt of your compliance with the application of Colonel Church; and beg leave to subscribe myself, with great respect and esteem, gentlemen, your most obedient and most humble servant,

WILLIAM BRADFORD.

To the Hon. General Court of the Massachusetts-Bay.

JEREMIAH POWEL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, September 13, 1776.

SIR: The General Assembly of this State have for some days past been anxiously expecting the particulars of the late attack upon the Continental Army, under your Excellency's more immediate command; but the accounts hitherto received have been vague and uncertain.

It is the earnest desire of the Assembly, at this important crisis, to furnish you with every needed assistance in their power; and having just received a letter from Governour Trumbull, proposing the raising a part of our Militia for this important purpose, and soon after a letter from the honourable Congress to the same effect, as also a resolve of Congress relative to this matter, they have ordered a a fifth part of the Militia not already in the service, (the remote Counties and some sea-port towns excepted) to be immediately drafted out, and to march with all possible despatch to your assistance, excepting one battalion ordered to Rhode-Island, in consequence of the resolve before-mentioned.

Our troops will gladly receive upon their route, your Excellency's orders for their destination, as the express returns.

A copy of our resolve respecting said draft is enclosed. As we cannot furnish tents for these troops, your Excellency will provide for them—perhaps four thousand men. We shall subsist them till they arrive at Horse-Neck, and depend upon your Excellency's giving orders for their receiving rations after that time.

We ardently wish you victory over the enemies of the American States, and remain, with great respect, your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

JER. POWELL, President.

To His Excellency George Washington, Esq., Commander-in-Chief of the Forces of the United States of America, New-York.

Resolves respecting Draft.

Whereas it has been represented to the General Court of this State, by the honourable the Governour of the State of Connecticut, that it is of the utmost importance to the United States of America, to have a large body of Troops stationed above the Island of New-York, to prevent the British Army's cutting off the communication between the American Army at the City and Island of New-York, and the country: And whereas the honourable Congress, in consequence of an application made to them by his Excellency General Washington, in the present critical state of our affairs, have since called upon this Government in the most pressing terms, immediately to send all the aid in our power to the Army at New-York: this Court being sensible that the safety, freedom and future happiness of America depend upon and demand a vigorous and manly management of this campaign, and well considering that, while all that is dear to this people is at stake, they should be chargeable with great remissness if they did not exercise the powers with which they are vested by this State for its salvation at this critical moment, by sending such reinforcement to the Army at New-York as the exigency of the case requires: And whereas the Militia of this State, within the Counties of York, Cumberland, and Lincoln, are too remote to march to the timely aid of the Army: And whereas the situation of the Counties of Nantucket and Dukes County, the Towns of Boston, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Salem, Marblehead, Gloucester, Manchester, Beverly, and Newburyport, renders it unfit for any part of the Militia to be drafted from them at present:

It is Resolved, That one-fifth part of the Militia of this State, not now in actual service by sea or land, excepting those of the Towns and Counties above named, be ordered by the major part of the Council to march immediately, under the command of such General officer as shall be appointed by the General Court and commissioned by the Council to command them, to remain and continue in the service within the four New-England Governments or the State of New-York or the Jerseys, until they are recalled by the General Court of this State, the House of Representatives, or the major part of the Council, under such regulations and upon such establishment as is hereinafter provided.

And that the said fifth part of said Militia may march without delay,

It is Resolved, That the major part of the Council make out their order in writing to Major-General Warren, commanding him that he immediately order the Brigadiers of the several Counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Worcester, Hampshire, Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, and Berkshire, to cause the Militia, as well of the alarm-list as training-band of their respective brigades, to be mustered without delay, excepting those in the towns above excepted, and that they cause to be drafted therefrom when so mustered every fifth able-bodied man of the non-commissioned officers and private soldiers under fifty years of age, except the officers and students of Harvard College, grammar-school masters, and persons necessarily employed in the manufacture of gunpowder, not exceeding four to each powder-mill, and armed with a good fire-lock, a bullet-pouch and powder-horn or cartridge-box, a bayonet, cutlass or hatchet, and twenty bullets fitted to their gun, with a knapsack and blanket; to march to the reinforcement of the Army as aforesaid, and that they form those so drafted into companies of sixty-four men each, including non-commissioned officers, or as nigh thereto as they conveniently can; and that the said Brigadiers, from the officers of their respective brigades, order one Captain and two Lieutenants to take the command of each of said companies, and that said Brigadiers shall form such companies as are raised and drafted from their respective brigades not amounting to sixteen into each regiment, and where they do amount to that number of companies, or upwards, into two regiments, and to each regiment so formed, assign or order from the Field Officers of such brigade, one Colonel, one Lieutenant-Colonel, and one Major, to command the same, and the officers of said detachment of the Militia drafted as aforesaid, shall have, while in said service, the same relative rank with each other as they now have.

And it is further Resolved, That if any person of the alarm-list or train-band, non-commissioned officer or soldier, shall, after being duly warned thereto, neglect to appear upon such muster designed for drafting, as aforesaid, he shall forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds, one half thereof to the use of this State, and the other half to the person who shall sue for the same, by action of debt in any court proper to try the same; and if any person so drafted shall refuse to march upon being ordered thereto, not having a sufficient excuse therefor, and shall not secure some able-bodied and effective man to go in his stead, or shall absent or conceal himself, so that his officer cannot find him to give him marching orders, he shall for either of the said offences pay a fine not exceeding ten pounds, or be committed to prison not exceeding two months, upon his being convicted thereof, on indictment or presentment therefor by the grand jury for the County where the offence shall be committed, before any court proper to try the same, whose duty it shall be to make a presentment thereof.

And it is likewise Resolved, That the said detachment of Militia shall, while out of this Government, be under the general command of the Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army, and shall be under the laws and regulations provided by Congress for said Army.

And it is further Resolved, That the pay and allowance of provisions for said detachment, shall be every way the same as that allowed the Continental Army.

And it is likewise Resolved, That the Selectmen of each Town from whence any part of said detachment shall be drafted, shall be and hereby are directed and empowered to procure as many teams or other conveyances within their respective towns, as shall be sufficient to carry the baggage of the said fifth part of the Militia to Fairfield, in Connecticut, in the most expeditious manner. And the said Selectmen are also directed to furnish said men with kettles and canteens, and also to pay each man one penny for each mile from the place they march from to the place of their destination, to support themselves.

And it is also Resolved, That the Brigadier of each County shall appoint one Chaplain, one Surgeon and Mate, one Adjutant, and one Quartermaster, to each regiment that shall be so drafted from his brigade, and the General officer appointed to command the detachment, shall appoint a Brigade-Major to each brigade.

And it is also Resolved, That each Brigadier-General, as soon as the men are drafted and formed into companies, be and hereby is directed to order them to march to Horse-Neck: subject, however, to such further orders as they may receive from the General Court of this State, the House of Representatives, or the major part of the Council, or the orders of the General and Commander-in-Chief of the Continental Army.

And it is Resolved, That in the absence of any Brigadier of any County, the next officer in command in said brigade shall be held to do the duty assigned to the Brigadier and shall be observed accordingly.

And it is also Resolved, That the Commissary-General of this State be and hereby is directed to send forward immediately to New-Haven such quantities of ammunition as this Court shall order.

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

September 13, 1776.

SIR: The General Assembly of this State beg leave to inform the honourable Congress that the Milford, frigate, of twenty-eight guns, and another ship-of-war, have been for some time cruising on this coast, and have taken several merchantmen and valuable prizes coming into port. We have applied to the Hon. Thomas Cushing and John Langdon, Esq., agents for building the Continental ships, at Newburyport and Portsmouth, requesting that one or more of those ships might be sent out to protect our coast; but are informed by those gentlemen that they have no guns, and if they had, they have no orders to send the ships to sea. Upon this information, the General Assembly of this State resolved to furnish the agent for building the Continental ships at Newburyport, with a sufficient number of guns for one of them, and afford him every other assistance in their power in fitting out and manning said ship, provided leave can be obtained from the honourable Congress for said vessel to cruise on this coast, for the protection of the trade thereof—the agent engaging to reimburse all the expenses this State shall incur in fitting out and manning said ship, and return said guns whenever said ship shall be otherwise employed.

We would further inform the honourable Congress that the guns proposed for the above purpose are twenty-four nine-pounders, which we apprehend are suitable for the ship under the command of Hector McNeill, Esq., and which is in the greatest forwardness for sailing.

As said ship will be inferior to the enemy in force, this State beg leave to suggest to the honourable Congress the great advantage of having the ship under the care of John Langdon, Esq., fitted out immediately to act in concert with her.

The readiness of the State of New-Hampshire to give all possible assistance to Mr. Langdon for the above purpose, will appear by a resolve of that State herewith enclosed.

Signed by the President.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

In the House of Representatives, September 6, 1776.

Voted and Resolved, That it be and hereby is recommended to John Langdon, Esq., Continental Agent for the Continental Frigate now at Portsmouth, to equip the said Frigate as soon as possible for a cruise against the Milford or any other of our enemies on this coast, in conjunction with one of the Continental Frigates in the Massachusetts Bay, and other of their Colony armed vessels—and Colonel Samuel Sherburne, with such as the honourable Board shall appoint, to be a Committee to consult with said Mr. Langdon on that affair, and to assist him if he need it. And that any soldier in the Colony service have liberty to enlist for the cruise, and their wages to continue besides the emoluments of captures, and to return to their service when the cruise is over.

E. THOMPSON, Secretary.

Plymouth, September 9, 1776.

Received of Captain Richard Wheller the brigantine Rising Empire, with her appurtenances, cannon, and stores, for the use of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay, to be delivered when called for by authority.

WILLIAM WATSON.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, September 13, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to your Honour's proposal and the earnest recommendation of the honourable Congress, expressed in their letter lately received, the General Court have ordered one fifth part of the whole Militia of this State not already in the service, those in some of the remote Counties and sea-ports excepted, to march immediately. One battalion of them, in consequence of a resolve of Congress accompanying their said letter, is ordered to Rhode-Island, and the remainder to New-York. They have wrote his Excellency General Washington, informing him thereof, that he may order their destination as the service may require. A copy of the Court's resolve respecting the draft of the said fifth part of the Militia is enclosed. We thank your Honour for your exertions in the common cause, and assure you it will be our ambition to coöperate with the United States to the utmost of their power in efforts for their common safety. We are, &c.

J. WARREN, Speaker.

To Governour Trumbull.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Watertown, September 13, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: We have your letter of the 29th ultimo, and consider the sending out the Continental ships (as you do) of the greatest importance to these United States, and should be glad to promote their being sent out immediately, by every means in our power, for we trust they might be employed to very good purposes, especially as several of the enemy's cruisers are now infesting this coast.

We further assure you that we shall embrace such occasions as may present to render an American State any reasonable services; but considering how much this State is drained of its men by the publick calls, and how much our sea-coast is exposed to the incursions of the enemy, we have thought it needful some time since to pass a resolve, prohibiting the inlisting our sea-coast men into any other service, even such as it may concern this State particularly to attend to. We cannot, therefore, consent to your request that Mr. Grannis may be permitted to enlist his complement of Marines out of the troops in our pay.

If Mr. Grannis chooses another service in preference to ours, we shall endeavour to supply his place by as good a man.

Signed by the President.

To Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Chairman of Committee at Providence.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WARREN.

State of Massachusetts-Bay, }
In Council, September 13, 1776. }

SIR: In pursuance of two resolves of the General Court of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay—one passed the 12th instant, and another passed the 13th instant—you are hereby ordered and commanded immediately to issue out your orders that one-fifth part of the Militia of this State, not now in actual service by sea or land, excepting those of the Counties of York, Cumberland, Lincoln, Nantucket, and Dukes County, and also the towns of Boston, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Salem, Marblehead, Gloucester, Manchester, Beverly, and Newburyport, to march immediately to Horse-Neck, in the State of New-York, under the command of such General Officer as shall be appointed by the General Court and commissioned by the Council to command them, to remain and continue in the service within the four New-England Governments, the State of New-York, or the Jerseys, until they are recalled by the General Court of this State, the major part of the Council, or the House of Representatives; and in order that the said fifth part of the Militia may march without delay, you are hereby ordered and commanded immediately to order the Brigadiers of the several Counties of Suffolk, Essex, Middlesex, Worcester, Hampshire, Plymouth, Barnstable, Bristol, and Berkshire, to cause the Militia, as well of the alarm-list as training-band of their respective brigades, to be mustered without delay, excepting those in the towns above excepted, and that they cause to be drafted therefrom, when so mustered, every fifth able-bodied man of the non-commissioned officers and private soldiers under fifty years of age, except officers and students of Harvard College, grammar-school masters, and persons necessarily employed in the manufacture of gunpowder, not exceeding four to each powder-mill, and armed with a good firelock, a bullet-pouch and powder-horn or cartridge-box, a bayonet, cutlass, or hatchet, and twenty bullets fitted to their gun, with a knapsack and blanket, to march to the aid of the army at New-York, excepting such men as are drafted from the Counties of Plymouth and Barnstable, which you are to direct the Brigadiers of said Counties to order to march to the State of Rhode-Island, to supply the place of a Continental battalion ordered from thence to the aid of the army at New-York, and there remain until recalled by the General Court, the major part of the Council, or the House of Representatives, and that they form those so drafted into companies of sixty-four men each, including non-commissioned officers, or as nigh thereto as they conveniently can, and that the said Brigadiers, from the officers of their respective brigades, order one Captain and two Lieutenants to take the command of each of said companies, and that the said Brigadiers shall form such companies as are raised and drafted from their respective brigades, not amounting to sixteen, into one regiment, and, where they do amount to that number of companies, or upwards, into two regiments, and to each regiment so formed assign or order from the field officers of such brigade, one Colonel or Lieutenant-Colonel, and one Major, to command the same.

And you are to direct the Brigadier of each County to appoint one Chaplain, one Surgeon and Mate, one Adjutant, and one Quartermaster, to each regiment that shall be so drafted from his brigade.

And you are directed to make a return of the men drafted out of the several brigades before mentioned as soon as may be.

In the name and by order of Council.

JER. POWELL, President.

J. LOTHROP TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Plymouth, September 13, 1776.

SIR: I just now received your favour of 9th instant. In answer thereto, would inform you that we have been waiting for a few grindstones from Boston, which, when they come to hand, will enable us to blow in a few days, and am now about hiring a boat to go on purpose for them. I am obliged to you for your kind offers. You may be assured my utmost exertions shall be used to rid this business with despatch, and I believe I can with truth say you cannot be so soon supplied from any works whatever. I purpose to be to Watertown in a few days, and shall want to take some further directions with respect to the size of the weights, &c.

In great haste, I am, with esteem, your friend and humble servant,

J. LOTHROP.

CLARK AND NIGHTINGALE TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Providence, September 13, 1776.

SIR: We now enclose you a bill of lading for twenty-one hogsheds lime, which were all we had in town when this opportunity offered; for the demand for that article has been so great that it is impossible to keep it, and if an opportunity does not offer to ship it as soon as it is dropped out of the cart some other persons will have it. This makes ninety-two hogsheds shipped by us, and if we should meet with any vessel bound your way we will send the other eight.

We are, sir, your most obedient servants,

CLARK & NIGHTINGALE.

To Richard Devens, Esquire.

Shipped in good order and well-conditioned, by Clark & Nightingale, in and upon the good vessel called the Centurion, whereof is master for this present voyage Joshua Johnson, and now riding at anchor in the harbour of Providence, in New-England, and bound for Boston: to say, twenty-one hogsheds lime, being marked and numbered as in the margin, and are to be delivered in like good order and well-conditioned at the aforesaid port of Boston (the danger of the seas only excepted) unto Richard Devens, Esq., or to his assigns, he or they paying freight for the same—lime twelve shillings per hogshhead, with primage and average accustomed.

In witness whereof the master or purser of said sloop hath affirmed to two Bills of Lading, both of this tenor and date: the one of which bills being accomplished, the other to stand void. Dated in Providence, the 9th day of September, 1776.

JOSHUA JOHNSON.

JOSEPH JOSSELYN TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Hanover, September, 1776.

SIR: After my compliments, I desire you to send me all the old shot or gun iron you can, for to make shot. You sent Mr. Harris for shot; I intend to make them for you, but am in great want of iron to make them with. If you can send me iron, I shall make you some more shot as soon as possible.

From your humble servant, JOSEPH JOSSELYN.

To Richard Devens, Esq., Commissary-General.

P. S. Pray send me a line by this bearer, Mr. Wales.

JOSEPH JOSSELYN TO RICHARD DEVENS.

Hanover, September 16, 1776.

SIR: I have sent you a number of shot by the bearer, Captain James Lincoln, viz:

To one 32-pounder,	- 0 1 6 @ 30s.	0	9 3
<hr/>
£70 15 1

45 6-pounders received at the same time.

Sir, the reason I have sent you the 32-pound shot and the 9-pound shot is because Major Aaron Hobart desired me to make them and send them to you, and take a receipt for them at that price for

JOSEPH JOSSELYN.

To Richard Devens, Esq., Commissary-General.

COLONEL GILMAN TO THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE ASSEMBLY.

Portsmouth, September 13, 1776.

Gentlemen of the Council and of the House of Representatives:

I am informed that you have made choice of Captain Pierce Long to command the battalion now raising for the protection of this State—a person I ever esteemed as a very great friend of mine; and if he obtained the appointment fairly had as lief be superseded by him as any person in the State.

If it had been agreeable, I should have been willing to have continued in the service; but as I find it otherwise, am content to live a retired life, though I have been at great cost to equip myself for a short service—much shorter than I expected when I engaged.

I think, gentlemen, that since I have been in the service I have discharged my duty to a punctilio, and that I have done part of the duty of a former Engineer, Colonel, and almost every other officer belonging to the regiment. And I have endeavoured that none of the interests of the State should be wasted; and what thanks have I got for my services, but to be slighted by my own countrymen, in that they have not dealt so generously with me as they have with my subaltern officers in giving me the offer of tarrying in the service, although I have taught them the first principles of the military art? Gentlemen, I do not make this complaint because I desire you to make any alteration in your choice; neither do I desire it, but to let you know I have a spirit as well as another man, and know when I am treated with the respect that is due to a person who has been engaged in the cause of his country as early as any one, and does not want a lawyer to plead his sincerity.

I think, gentlemen, at least you ought to be as cautious of slighting or offending real friends as you are of pleasing or reclaiming of enemies, lest you make enemies instead of friends; for such treatment as I have received will have a natural tendency to make enemies, though God forbid it should have that effect on me. I don't remember that when we groaned under our old Constitution that ever an officer was slighted or neglected for faithfully discharging his duty, but on the contrary promoted. But I am sorry that I have it to say there is too much of that in this day. I fear very much if there is not some alteration very soon, you will be put to it to get any person who is worth employing to engage in your service; for men of spirit will be cautious of engaging and fitting themselves when they are daily liable to be discharged without any crime laid to their charge, or reason assigned therefor.

I shall conclude at this time in wishing you Divine direction, and hope that Providence will, in His own time, open a door for our relief, and that our troubles will have a final issue. I am a well-wisher to my country and the glorious cause we are engaged in.

From your affectionate friend and very humble servant,
DAVID GILMAN.

Williamsburg, in Council, September 14, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Three days ago the Board delivered to Colonel Thomas Fleming of the Ninth Battalion, commissions for the several Captains and Subalterns under his command, upon his representing the very disagreeable situation they must be in, to be engaged in the service of the Continent without having their commissions to show in case the fortune of war should throw them into the enemy's hands. There was no resisting so powerful an argument, and yet the Board were so much at a loss for the proper date of the several commissions that they have issued them without any date, endorsing thereupon that that was purposely omitted, to reserve the matter of rank to the future determination of Congress, upon which head the Board would be glad to have their directions as soon as possible. It may be proper to observe that this matter ought to be settled so circumspectly as not to give any ground of offence to the different officers by inverting the order of their rank. Should the honourable Congress direct the commissions to be dated at the times the several regiments were respectively taken into Continental pay, such would certainly be the unhappy consequence; the Eighth and Ninth Regiments, for instance, would by that rule of precedence be postponed to the Seventh, which has ever hitherto taken rank of the other two. And it is submitted whether any other method can so effectually avoid this as the dating their commissions at the times they were respectively dated in the Virginia service. This would moreover remove the hardship which the officers here think they labour under as they stand related to those commissioned in the other States; for otherwise they must yield rank to officers who have not been so long engaged in opposition to our common enemy, but who have had the good fortune to receive their Continental commissions sooner.

In case the honourable Congress should judge the rule here recommended to be equal, it may be necessary that they should have the dates of the commissions granted to the officers of the First and Second Regiments, on the Provincial establishments, which therefore is enclosed. Those of the other regiments have been already transmitted. The Field-Officers of the Ninth Battalion have not yet received their commissions, which they are desirous of having as soon as may be.

Your several letters have been received desiring the Council to recommend proper persons to fill the vacant Majorities, and in doing so to pay a particular attention to military merit. If the nature of the service here had been such as to give an opportunity of distinguishing, the General must have been able to distinguish with more precision and certainty than this Board; yet even he has not probably had the proper opportunities of judging, to enable him to comply with the intentions of Congress. In this situation of our army, the Board think there is nothing left them, but to refer you to the lists of officers which have been sent, and which will show how they stand in point of seniority.

We have received £1076 2s. 6d, by the hands of Mr. Aylett, which shall be carried to the credit of your account.

I am, gentlemen, your most respectful and obedient servant.

Signed by order of Council :
JOHN PAGE, President.
To the Honourable Virginia Delegates at Congress, Philadelphia.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

By order of the Board of War, I enclose you a copy of the arrangement of Officers in the old Virginia Regiments. At Colonel Crawford's instance I enclose a letter from him, and am, with the greatest respect,

Your very obedient and most humble servant,
RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency General Washington.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO COLONEL WHIPPLE.

Philadelphia, September 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have not received a line from you since yours of the 20th ultimo, from Milford. I have wrote to you every week since you left this City, which I hope are come safe to your hand, but shall not write you after this as I expect you will be on your return here by the time you receive this, or soon after. I hope our Legislature has appointed another Delegate to return with you, that I may return home immediately on your arrival, and try whether a change of air will be serviceable to my health, which is very much altered since you left me, though I am now rather better than I was last week. I shall be under some difficulty about procuring a horse and waiter to attend me on my return, unless you and your colleague will agree to deliver up one of yours to me for that purpose on your arrival, and keep but one to wait on you both here. If you shall not agree to that, I have wrote to Mrs. Bartlett to procure (if she can) a man and horse, and send with you here to accompany me back, as I think it will be much cheaper and better than to hire here. Pray inform Mrs. Bartlett of your determination, that she may know what to do.

Last Wednesday our Committee met Lord Howe on Staten-Island, where they ate and drank together. He treated them with great civility and politeness; and after about three hours' conversation, they took their leave of each other. His Lordship's conversation was full of his friendship for America—particularly the town of Boston, for their respect to the memory of his brother. He said that the ravaging and destroying America would give him great pain and uneasiness. Dr. Franklin replied that we should take proper, and he hoped effectual, care to prevent his Lordship's feelings on that account. On the whole all the terms he had to propose were, that we first of all lay down our arms and return to our allegiance; and then, he said, the King and Parliament would consider the acts we formerly complained of, and if they judged it proper would alter or amend them. They told him that General Sullivan said, that his Lordship in conversation told him that the King and Parliament would give up the right of taxation and of intermeddling with the internal police of the Colonies, and desired to know what authority he had to say it. Lord Howe replied, that General Sullivan must certainly have misunderstood him, as he had no right to say any such thing, nor did he believe the Parliament would give up those claims. The Committee are about to publish the whole affair, which I hope will stop the mouths of the weak and credulous, who have had great hopes of peace from the supposed great powers entrusted with Lord Howe as a Commissioner for that purpose.

Captain Wickes, in the Reprisal, is returned from Martinico, which he left the 26th ultimo; he has brought four or five hundred muskets, some powder, &c., &c. The affair of the Reprisal and the Shark man-of-war in the harbour of St. Pierre, in Martinico, occasioned the British Admiral Young to send to the French General, informing him that the Captain of the Shark would have taken the Pirate ship commanded by Captain Wickes if it had not been for the French Forts protecting him, and he, in the name of his Britannick Majesty, demanded that she should be forthwith seized and delivered up into his hands, or otherwise his protecting, not only the trading ships of Rebels, but their ships-of-war, would be deemed a breach of the peace between the two nations, and that on his refusal he should immediately send a man-of-war to acquaint his Britannick Majesty of the circumstances, &c., &c.

The French General, in answer, told Admiral Young that he had been misinformed concerning the affair; that the Forts did not interfere, but that the Shark, after engaging the American vessel for some time, thought proper to quit her and sheer off, and that the Forts did not fire on the Shark till after she had quitted the Reprisal, and was attempting, as they suspected, to seize an unarmed vessel that was then within reach of their cannon; that Captain Wickes had put himself under his Most Christian Majesty's protection, and that he should not deliver him up, or suffer him to be injured while there; that if the Admiral had been well acquainted with him (the General) he would never have made such a demand of him; that he should immediately send an account of the affair to the King, his master, to whom alone he was answerable for his conduct, &c., &c. This is the substance as near as I can remember. I have seen authentick copies of both.

The affair of the Confederation rests at present. The Committee of the Whole have agreed that ninety regiments shall be enlisted for five years, if not sooner discharged by Congress. The affair of bounty is not yet settled; the proposal of giving lands as a part of the bounty has boggled us; however, it will be got over in a few days, I believe, and sent forward. The great difficulty of raising men for so long a period, made me think it my duty to prevent more being required of our State than their just proportion by numbers; and by producing the return of our number of inhabitants, I have got the proportion to be fixed at three instead of four regiments for our State, to be raised and completed for that term.

Mr. Wythe is come to Congress.

My very poor state of health makes it uncertain whether I may not be obliged to leave Congress before your return. If it should happen so, I should be very glad to meet you on the road, and would therefore propose your coming the upper road to Hartford, if you can conveniently.

I am, sir, your friend and most humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

To Colonel Whipple.

War Office, September 14, 1776.

Congress having directed that the Board of War order all the French Officers who have received commissions in the service of the States, to repair immediately to their place of destination, the said Officers are hereby required to repair to their posts without delay.

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

JOHN ADAMS TO MRS. ADAMS.

Philadelphia, Saturday, September 14, 1776.

Yesterday morning I returned with Dr. Franklin and Mr. Rutledge from Staten-Island, where we met Lord Howe, and had about three hours' conversation with him. The result of this interview will do no disservice to us. It is now plain that his Lordship has no power but what is given him in the act of Parliament. His commission authorizes him to grant pardons upon submission, and to converse, confer, consult, and advise with such persons as he may think proper, upon American grievances, upon the instructions to Governours and the acts of Parliament, and if any errors should be found to have crept in, his Majesty and the Ministry were willing they should be rectified.

I found yours of 31st of August and 2d of September. I now congratulate you on your return home with the children. I am sorry to find you anxious on account of idle reports. Don't regard them. I think our friends are to blame to mention such silly stories. What good do they expect to do by it?

My ride has been of service to me. We were absent but four days. It was an agreeable excursion. His Lordship is about fifty years of age. He is a well-bred man, but his address is not so irresistible as it has been represented. I could name you many Americans, in your own neighbourhood, whose art, address, and abilities are greatly superiour. His head is rather confused, I think.

When I shall return, I can't say. I expect now every day fresh hands from Watertown.

Philadelphia, September 14, 1776.

On Friday last arrived here from Martinico, the Continental ship-of-war the Reprisal, Lambert Wickes, Esq., commander. On board of said ship came passengers several French officers, who we hear are strongly recommended to the honourable the Congress by the Governour of Martinico. One of them it is said is an accomplished Engineer.

On Thursday evening and Friday morning the Hon. Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, and Edward Rutledge, Esqs., returned to this city from Staten-Island, where they spent three hours in a conference with Lord Howe, upon the subject of his propositions to the Congress. We hear that his Lordship possesses no other powers to accommodate the dispute between Great Britain and the United States than those mentioned in the act of the British Parliament, for appointing Commissioners to grant pardons, &c.

A vessel has arrived in this port with two thousand bushels of salt. The whole of it was immediately bought up by a respectable merchant of this city, who is now selling it out in small quantities, at a very moderate advance, for the benefit of the publick.

On Friday last Major-General Prescott and Brigadier-General McDonald set off from this city for New-York, in order to be exchanged for Major-General Sullivan and Brigadier-General Lord Stirling.

Several letters from France mention the very friendly disposition of the Court and people of that Kingdom towards the United States.

NATHAN HILANDS'S RECANTATION.

Hamilton Township, Cumberland County, }
Pennsylvania, September 14, 1776. }

I, Nathan Hilands, have some time past in words inimical to American liberty expressed myself, which I do by these presents acknowledge to be sorry for, and promise for the future to act agreeable to the directions of Congress, Convention, or Committees, and to hold the same in that due esteem and respect as becomes a lover of American liberty; and do likewise allow this, my recantation, to be put in the publick papers.

By order of Committee: JAMES MOORE, Clerk.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER RECEIVED IN PHILADELPHIA, DATED NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 14, 1776.

The enemy, from their different manœuvres and great preparations, intend soon to strike a decisive blow. Their plan is to outflank and hem us in; but I think they will be disappointed, for the heights above Harlem and King's Bridge are strongly manned and fortified, and all the points up to Frog's, securely picketed, the avenues blocked, and the roads cut up to prevent the approaches of their artillery.

They have opened the Courts of Justice upon Long-Island, in which Mr Ludlow presides as Chief Judge. They have confiscated several estates, and condemned one man to perpetual confinement, to linger out his life in chains, and to be fed on bread and water. I think such acts of oppression will turn to our advantage; they carry a high hand, and, flushed with the success which nature and not their own strength has given them, they think in a little time to sweep off our army and be in possession of America. Old Oliver de Lancey is a Colonel, your poor friend Woodhull is killed, and that fawning, treacherous courtier, Governor Tryon, lies at the point of death. This intelligence was got from a person who has been among them for some time, and I think may be depended on.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 16.]

New-York, September 14, 1776.

SIR: I have been duly honoured with your favour of the 10th, with the resolution of Congress which accompanied it, and thank them for the confidence they repose in my judgment respecting the evacuation of the city. I could wish to maintain it, because I know it to be of importance, but am fully convinced that it cannot be done, and that an attempt for that purpose, if persevered in, might and most certainly would be attended with consequences the most fatal and alarming in their nature. Sensible of this, several of the General Officers, since the determination of the Council mentioned in my last, petitioned that a second Council might be called to reconsider the propositions which had been before them upon the subject. Accordingly, I called one on the 12th, when a large majority not only determined a removal of the army prudent but absolutely necessary, declaring they were entirely convinced, from a full and minute inquiry into our situation, that it was extremely perilous, and from every movement of the enemy and the intelligence received, their plan of operation was to get in our rear, and by cutting off the communication with the main oblige us to force a passage through them on the terms they wish, or to become prisoners in some short time for want of necessary supplies of provision.

We are now taking every method in our power to remove the stores, &c., in which we find almost insuperable difficulties. They are so great and so numerous that I fear we shall not effect the whole before we meet with some interruption. I fully expected that an attack somewhere would have been made last night. In that I was disappointed, and happy shall I be if my apprehensions of one to-night or in a day or two are not confirmed by the event. If it is deferred a little while longer, I flatter myself all will be got away, and our force be more concentrated and of course more likely to resist them with success. Yesterday afternoon four ships of war, two of forty and two of twenty-eight guns, went up the East River, passing between Governor's and Long-Island, and anchored about a mile above the city, opposite Mr. Stuyvesant's, where the Rose man-of-war was lying before. The design of their going, not being certainly known, gives rise to various conjectures, some supposing they are to cover the landing of a part of the enemy above the city, others that they are to assist in destroying our battery at Horn's Hook, that they may have a free and uninterrupted navigation in the Sound. It is an object of great importance to them, and what they are industriously trying to effect by a pretty constant cannonade and bombardment.

Before I conclude, I would beg leave to mention to Congress, that the pay now allowed to nurses for their attendance on the sick is by no means adequate to their services—the consequence of which is, that they are extremely difficult to procure; indeed they are not to be got, and we are under the necessity of substituting in their place a number of men from the respective regiments, whose service by that means is entirely lost to the proper line of their duty, and but little benefit indeed to the sick. The officers I have talked with upon the subject all agree that they should be allowed a dollar per week, and that for less they cannot be had. Our sick are extremely numerous, and we find their removal attended with the greatest difficulty. It is a matter that employs much of our time and care, and what makes it most distressing, is the want of proper and convenient places for their reception. I fear their sufferings will be great and many; however, nothing on my part that humanity or policy can require shall be wanting to make them comfortable, so far as the state of things will admit of.

I have the honour to be, with great respect, sir, your most obedient servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

Petition of Major-General GREENE and others for a reconsideration of the Proceedings of a Council of General Officers.

September 11, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: The situation of the army under your Excellency's command is, in our opinions so critical and dangerous, that we apprehend a Board of General Officers should be immediately called for the purpose of considering it. We do not mean to condemn as unwise or imprudent any measures which have heretofore been taken, but we conceive a reconsideration of an important question determined at the last Board of General Officers to be absolutely necessary to satisfy our own apprehensions and the apprehensions of many excellent Field Officers and others, from the dispositions now making by the advice of that Board.

We know the danger and bad policy of giving way to applications for the reconsideration of common propositions, which may have been solemnly determined, but the present case is of such magnitude and is big with such consequences to all America, that a breach of common forms and even the risk of establishing wrong precedents, should, in our opinions, be now overruled.

What we have to offer to your Excellency in general council, proceeds not from fear of personal danger nor the expectation of deriving to ourselves any honour and reputation from a change of measures: it proceeds from a love of our country and a determined resolution to urge the best and wisest measures, and finally, to execute if possible even erroneous ones, which, on cool, dispassionate reconsideration, cannot be avoided.

NATHL. GREENE, Major-General.
JNO. NIXON, Brigadier-General.
THOS. MIFFLIN, Brigadier-General.
REZIN BEALL, Brigadier-General.
SAML. H. PARSONS, Brigadier-General.
JAMES WADSWORTH.

I think it a mark of wisdom to reconsider opinions upon subjects of high importance, whenever so many respectable gentlemen request it as have signed above me. I therefore heartily concur with them in the application above mentioned.

JOHN MORIN SCOTT, Brigadier-General.
To His Excellency General Washington.

A Return of the Army in the service of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in and near the City of New-York, commanded by His Excellency GEORGE WASHINGTON, Esquire, General and Commander-in-Chief.

PROCEEDINGS OF A COUNCIL OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

At a Council of War held at General McDougall's Quarters, September 12, 1776.

Present—His Excellency General Washington; Major-Generals: Putnam, Heath, Spencer, Greene; Brigadier-Generals: Mifflin, Parsons, McDougall, Nixon, Wadsworth, Scott, Fellows, Clinton.

The General read a Letter signed by some General Officers, proposing that there should be a reconsideration of the matter determined in Council last week, with respect to the state and further disposition of the Troops.

The question was put whether the determination of last week should be reconsidered, and the opinions were as follows:

To reconsider: Generals Beall, Scott, Fellows, Wadsworth, Nixon, McDougall, Parsons, Mifflin, Greene, Putnam.

To adhere: Generals Spencer, Clinton, Heath.

It was considered what number of men are necessary to be left for the defence of Mount Washington and its dependencies; agreed that it be eight thousand.

GENERAL ORDERS.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 12, 1776.

(Parole, Franklin.) (Countersign, Congress.)

The difficulty of procuring milk and other proper food for the sick, has induced the General to establish an Hospital where those necessaries can be procured in plenty. The regimental sick are, therefore, to be immediately mustered for this purpose. One of the Hospital Surgeons will attend with the Regimental Surgeon. Such as are able to remove themselves will be allowed so to do, under the care of a proper officer.

A suitable officer, not under the rank of a Captain, is to be appointed by the Brigadier out of each brigade, to attend such sick of each brigade as cannot remove themselves; they are under the advice of the Surgeon, who also attends to see that all proper care is taken for their comfort while removing and afterwards.

The same Court-Martial which tried Major Popst to try Major Hatfield, charged with "making a false report of the guards."

As the care of the sick is an object of great importance, the General directs that a person, not under the rank of a Captain, be also appointed in like manner in each brigade, who shall be empowered to procure necessaries for them, and moneys furnished for that purpose, he taking care that the utmost regularity and care be used.

John Porter, Esq., is appointed Paymaster to Colonel Ward's Regiment, in the Continental service.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 13, 1776.

(Parole, Newark.)

(Countersign, Amboy.)

Sergeant Clements, late of the General's guard, convicted by a Court-Martial, whereof Colonel Malcom was President, of "remissness of duty," is ordered to be reduced to the ranks. The General approves the sentence, and orders that he be sent back to the regiment from which he was taken.

The visiting officer has again reported that the men from Colonel Silliman's, Colonel Lewis's, and Colonel Thompson's regiments go upon guard deficient in ammunition, and with bad arms. The General hopes the officers of those regiments will immediately attend to it.

Simon Learned, late Lieutenant in Learned's Regiment, having resigned his commission as Lieutenant, is appointed Paymaster to said regiment.

General Fellows's Brigade to remove into the adjoining out-houses, and raft the boards which compose their present encampment to King's Bridge, or such part of them as may be deemed necessary by him.

A disappointment with respect to a proper place for the removal of the sick, in some measure vacates the order of yesterday, and the following is now to be attended to and obeyed. The situation of the Army rendering it difficult to make that provision for the relief and support of the sick in the City of New-York which their cases may require, in order in the most speedy and effectual manner to remove the sick to some place where they can be supplied with every thing necessary for them, the General directs the Surgeons of each brigade, under the immediate inspection of the Brigadiers, to examine the state of the sick, and to make a list of the names of such as they suppose can remove themselves to the Brigadier-General of the brigade, who is directed to send such convalescent persons to some convenient place in the neighbourhood of New-York, to be chosen by and be under the care of a discreet officer and one of the Regimental Surgeons, who is in the most prudent manner to make the necessary provision for the reception and support of such convalescent persons, who are immediately to be returned to their regiments, when their health will admit of their doing duty. Such as are so ill as not to be able to remove themselves, are to be collected under the care of another officer of the like rank in one place, and notice given to the Director-General of the Hospital, that they may be taken proper care of. In each of the above cases, the superintending officer is permitted to lay out money in the most frugal manner for the comfortable subsistence of his sick, which will be allowed him on rendering his account.

Mr. Hendrick Fisher is appointed Paymaster to Colonel Prescott's Regiment;

Charles Holby Hubbard, Esq., to Colonel Sargent's Regiment, until the person arrives who is designed for that office.

Head-Quarters, New-York, September 14, 1776.

(Parole, Bristol.)

(Countersign, Roxbury.)

The Court of Inquiry on Major Hatfield not having been able to proceed, he is released from his arrest until they can attend.

The General is exceedingly anxious that every soldier should be well provided with ammunition, and desires that every officer will be careful to see there is no deficiency in this respect, as it is highly probable they may soon be called to action.

It is so critical a period, and so interesting to every true lover of his country, that the General hopes that every officer and soldier will now exert himself to the utmost. It is no time for ease or indulgence; the arms of the men, the condition of the sick, care to prevent imposition in order to avoid danger and duty, vigilance of sentries and guards, are all now requisite. We have once found the bad consequences of a surprise: let the utmost care be used to prevent another. For this purpose the General directs, that none be put out as sentries at night but picked men, that they be visited every half hour, and every motion of the enemy narrowly watched.

General Wadsworth's Brigade to furnish two sentries upon the road, to prevent wagons in the publick service going out empty or carrying sick.

Benjamin Haywood, late Lieutenant in the Fourth Regiment, is appointed Paymaster to said regiment.

Captain Brown is excused from duty on account of his assisting the Quartermaster-General.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM COLONEL JOSEPH REED TO MRS. REED, DATED NEW-YORK, SEPTEMBER 14, 1776.

The enemy are evidently intending to encompass us on this Island by a grand military exertion, which, if successful, must immortalize the name of Howe, to get this whole army and its stores in their power. I hope they will fail. It is now a trial of skill whether they shall or not, and every night we lie down with the most anxious fears for the fate of to-morrow. My own personal safety is not regarded further than as respects you and our dear children. If my life would render any essential service to my country, I would cheerfully lay it down. I am called away.

Ever yours, &c.

P. S. My baggage is all at King's Bridge. We expect to remove thither this evening. I mean our Head-Quarters.

CAPTAIN HAMILTON'S CERTIFICATE.

I do hereby certify that William Douglass, the bearer hereof, faithfully served as a Matross in my company till he lost his arm by an unfortunate accident, while engaged in firing at some of the enemy's ships. He is therefore recommended to the attention of those who have been appointed to carry into execution the late resolve of the Continental Congress, by which provision is made for all persons disabled in the service of the United States.

A. HAMILTON, Captain of Artillery.

New-York, September 14, 1776.

EZEKIEL CHEEVER TO GENERAL GATES.

King's Bridge Inlet, September 14, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Being on board a sloop in which Major Pierce has taken passage for Albany, embarrassed and perplexed to have the sloop cleared of stores brought from York, in order to proceed to Albany, although not of my department, I have effected the same. When I first saw Mr. Pierce in York, I did not think he would be of any service for this campaign; but he has surprisingly fast recovered health. His great anxiety to be with you in short time as possible, has induced me to mention the affair.

Last evening four ships-of-war more passed the East River up to Horn's Hook; the particulars I don't know, as I am in this place to take care of ordnance and stores, and have no one to assist me. I must refer you to Mr. Pierce for particulars. Wishing you all imaginable success in the department, and great good luck to ourselves, I remain, with the truest regard and esteem, your most humble servant,

EZEKIEL CHEEVER.

To Hon. Major-General Gates.

GENERAL HEATH TO HUGH HUGHES, A. Q. M. G.

King's Bridge, September 14, 1776.

DEAR SIR: You are immediately to engage and impress all the wagons and teams that you possibly can, which, with those here, you are to send to New-York, where they are extremely wanted. The vessels also which come up with stores, baggage, &c., must be unloaded without delay, and sent down. I am, sir, yours, &c.

To Hugh Hughes, Esq., Assistant Quartermaster-General.

P. S. Such wagons as have taken sick contrary to orders, are to be sent back immediately.

CAPTAIN BAYLY TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Camp White-Plains, September 14, 1776.

SIR: I am extremely sorry that the present circumstances of my family will not admit of my indulging an inclination to continue in the service; and as the new arrangement which is about to take place will probably occasion some supernumerary officers in the regiment in which I command a company, the justice due to the inferior and very deserving officers of the same regiment, who are determined to spend their lives in the army, and the duty I owe my country, induce me to remove an obstruction to their promotion, and offer my resignation, which I flatter myself you will do the regiment the justice and myself the satisfaction to accept.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
MOUNTJOY BAYLY, Captain.

To His Excellency Gen. Washington, Camp White-Plains.

GILBERT LIVINGSTON TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Poughkeepsie, September 14, 1776.

SIR: Your letter of the 14th is safely come to hand. Am sorry it is not in my power to take the chain down to the Fort. The iron the Committee (by the advice of the smiths) first engaged, on working up, we find vastly short of the quantity wanted. Since I have been here, have been obliged (no other of the Committee being with me) to send an express to the forge for ten tons more. This, I fear, will cause a delay we by no means expected, and as finishing the work depends on the contingency of getting the iron, it is impossible for me to guess the time when it will be finished. I sincerely wish that at least one of the gentlemen of the Committee were with me, as I expect to be obliged to go down to the Fort to see that the apparatus is got ready to fasten and stretch her chain with, that there may be no delay on that account. If one of the gentlemen comes up, it will be necessary that he brings at least two or three thousand pounds with him, as our Treasury is nearly exhausted.

I am, sir, with great respect, your very humble servant,
GILBERT LIVINGSTON.

To Abraham Yates, Jun., Esq., President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 23, 1776.]

Albany, September 14, 1776.

SIR: When I had the honour to address Congress on the 9th instant, it was probable that I should have been under the necessity of marching the Militia either to Ticonderoga or into Tryon County; that necessity is superseded, as Congress will perceive by the information contained in the enclosed papers, in consequence of which the Militia are dismissed; and I do, therefore, now, agreeable to my resolution signified in that letter, hereby resign my commission as Major-General in the Army of the American States, and all and every other office or appointment which I have been honoured with by the honourable Continental Congress.

I do not, however, by this step mean to decline or elude an inquiry which Congress may hereafter be pleased to make into my conduct; on the contrary, it is a duty I owe to myself, to my family, and to the respectable Congress of this State, by whose recommendation, unsolicited by me, Congress, I believe, was induced to honour me with a command, that I should exculpate myself from the many odious charges with which the country resounds to my prejudice. I trust I shall be able fully to do it to the confusion of my enemies and their abettors. But aggrieved as I am, my countrymen will find that I shall not be influenced by any unbecoming resentment, but that I will readily persevere to fulfill the duties of a good citizen, and try to promote the weal of my native country by every effort in my power. I trust that my successor, whoever he may be, will find that matters are as properly arranged in this department as the nature of the service will admit. I shall most readily give him any information and assistance in my power.

As Congress may perhaps judge it necessary that a General Officer should constantly reside at this place, I shall continue to act as usual until such a reasonable time is elapsed in which one could be sent, which, I should suppose, need not exceed a fortnight. I wish it the soonest possible, as I propose attending my duty in Congress without delay.

It is a natural wish, sir, that those gentlemen who have been of my family, and incline to continue in the service, should be provided for. The office of Deputy Master-Master-General in this department is vacant; Congress will permit me to recommend my Secretary, Captain Richard Varick, a gentleman of merit, strict honour, probity, and capacity, to that employment. Major Henry Brockholst Livingston, my Aid-de-Camp, I also beg leave to recommend to the attention of Congress as a gentleman of a most amiable and deserving character; Major Rensselaer, my other Aid-de-Camp, declines any further service.

I am extremely sorry that I am not the only one of the General Officers in this department against whom the virulent tongue of slander has been employed. I perceive by General Arnold's letter that his reputation is also cruelly attacked. I have not the least doubt of the falsity of the reports that prevail to his prejudice; but as I have experienced that innocence is no guard against malevolence, I am the less astonished at what is said of him. I sincerely lament that this unhappy spirit is so prevalent at a time when unanimity is so essentially necessary. I dread the consequences to our common cause; we have external evils sufficient to contend with, without adding that of internal dissension.

As Mr. Douw is removed out of town, and the other Commissioners of Indian Affairs reside so remote that they cannot pay attention to that department, I humbly conceive it will be necessary that others should be immediately appointed.

I beg leave to suggest to Congress the necessity of a speedy answer to the matters I laid before them respecting the Nantikoke Indians, as the Ochquaques have already called upon me to know if I had received an answer.

I am informed that the term for which some of the New-Jersey and Pennsylvania troops, now at Ticonderoga, were engaged will soon expire, and that there is reason to apprehend many of the men will not reëngage; if so, it may be attended with many disagreeable and dangerous consequences. Permit me earnestly to entreat Congress to take some measures to retain them if possible.

I am, sir, with very sincere regard, your most obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 14, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 11th I had the pleasure to receive yesterday. I am happy to learn that General Arnold and our fleet are safe. I think his plan of being supported by a number of armed batteaus a good one. But would it not in that case be best for him to keep a station somewhere near the Split-Rock, that he might be more readily reinforced in case of necessity?

Mr. Livingston informed me that no pork is to be had in any part of the country. Would it not be well to send some of the best cattle to the fleet in the galleys and gondola, or to send them a daily supply of corned beef in a batteau doubly manned? It is probable that it would keep a few days, as the weather begins to grow cool.

I have advised the Commissioners of what you say relative to the persons that have accounts to adjust.

I have not yet had a line from Colonel Dayton since that of the 4th instant. I am in hopes the account he sent me was groundless. If I do not hear from him to-day, I shall take it for granted that it was so and dismiss the Militia.

I cannot inform you of what is passing at New-York. General Washington's time is so totally engrossed that I can hardly expect he should write me, unless there is an absolute necessity.

It is much to be lamented that calumny is so much cherished in this unhappy country, and that so few of the servants of the publick escape the malevolence of a set of insidious miscreants. It has drove me to the necessity of resigning.

Another company of seamen leave this to-day; I cannot say whether more are expected from New-York.

Mr. Avery observes that the roads by which the cattle came to Ticonderoga are scarcely passable. Is it not possible to send a small party to repair them. I have no men here, nor are any to be had in the country.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Head-Quarters, Albany, September 14, 1776.

SIR: The honourable the Continental Congress having (by their resolution of the 11th July) informed the Hon. Major-General Schuyler that officers of their army are prohibited from holding more offices than one, I do, therefore, in obedience to the said resolve, hereby resign to your Excellency the company which I now have in the regiment of forces of the United States of America raised in the State of New-York, whereof the Hon. Brigadier-General McDougall was late Colonel; and I do hereby request your Excellency to accept of this my resignation.

I am, sir, your Excellency's most obedient and very humble servant,
RICHARD VARICK,

Secretary to Major-General Schuyler.

To His Excellency General Washington.

RICHARD VARICK TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 14, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 10th instant was delivered me on the 12th. Immediately on receipt thereof, I ordered the storekeeper to purchase the blacksmith's tools. I am this morning informed that he has procured them, and will be forwarded immediately.

Major Pierce is gone down to New-York. He was ill during his stay here, and was advised to go farther down to recover his health. This is the last place, in my opinion, that a sick person should come to, in the hot season, to reëstablish impaired health.

To-morrow I shall send you another return of all the stores forwarded to Fort George since my last.

I am, dear General, with every sentiment of esteem and respect, your most obedient and very humble servant,

RICHARD VARICK.

To the Hon. Major-General Gates.

COLONEL CORTLANDT TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 14, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I just received a letter from Colonel Simons, who is marching to this post about two thousand Militia-men. In consequence of the report of our fleet being taken, I send his letter forward by express, and have let him (Colonel Simons) know my opinion about his coming, which I thought was unnecessary, and advised him to wait the general orders. It is very sickly here; almost all my men are down. I cannot well do without my other company, which I hope the General will please to send me. They can bring some batteaus and oars with them. The galley will soon be finished, as they go on rapidly, being just planked up.

I am, dear General, your obedient humble servant,

PHILIP CORTLANDT.

To General Gates, at Ticonderoga.

Ile-aux-Noix, September 14, 1776.

Permit the bearer, Antoine Gerouse, to pass from hence to his own habitation on Missisqui Bay.

QUIN JOHN FREEMAN, Major Brigade.

To all concerned.

MAJOR HOISINGTON TO GENERAL GATES.

Newbury, September 14, 1776.

By the positive command received, and the reflections in the same on the troops under my command, and sensible of your Excellency's being entirely unacquainted with the footing on which they are raised, as well as a false representation of our neglect of the publick service, for your further information, I have enclosed you the resolves of the honourable Congress in which my orders are set forth, agreeable to which I have exerted myself to the uttermost of my power, as well as the recruiting officers appointed by the Committees—the first of which is but a little odds of four weeks, some three, and the last a little more than one, out of which time I have kept scouting parties two weeks; and now part of the company ordered on fatigue under the command of Colonel Barrett, are now in the woods towards St. John's, which has orders not to return under eight days, and the rest are at Newbury in Coos. Therefore, would beg the favour, if one of these companies of Rangers, raised and ordered to reconnoitre the woods, must join Colonel Barrett on fatigue, that Captain Day's company who have not yet marched, may do it. Accordingly I have given orders to be conveyed by the bearer, Captain Wait.

Am, sir, your humble servant,

JACOB HOISINGTON.

To His Excellency General Gates, Commander-in-Chief of the Northern Department.

COLONEL HUNTINGTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Norwich, September 14, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Mr. Erastus Perkins, the bearer, is sutler to my regiment, and has come here to get some liquors, &c. I find I gain strength daily; am in hopes of returning to my place in the army in two or three weeks. My father is gone to New-London agreeable to your desire.

My love and duty as is due, and remain, your affectionate son,

JEDEDIAH HUNTINGTON.

To Governour Trumbull.

CHRISTOPHER LEFFINGWELL TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

New-London, September 14, 1776.

SIR: Having returned from Long-Island, beg leave to report, that agreeable to the orders I received from your Honour, of Sunday, 10th present, I mustered and embarked the Infantry company under my command that evening; took up what shipping I could find suitable; joined Major Ely of Colonel Wolcott's, at New-London on Monday, who had four companies under his command; advised with the Colonel, and on Tuesday morning proceeded with them in the shipping, under convoy of the Continental brig, Captain Hacker, for Southold. Lost sight of the brig that night, and saw no more of her until we returned to New-London. Arrived with the remainder of the shipping at Stirling that evening, and landed. Previous to our sailing, gave proper signals to the commander on board every vessel. Wednesday and Thursday penetrated about twelve or fourteen miles up the Island to the westward as far as Cutchague, until we found families and effects sufficient to load our shipping, which effected and brought to New-London, and have mostly landed, viz: two hundred head cattle and about five hundred sheep, several families, furniture, provisions, &c. Before we had completed the loading of our shipping, several applications were made for vessels to go farther westward, but we gave no encouragement of sending any. Had the pleasure of observing our officers and men, both of Major Ely's as well as the Infantry, go through the fatigue with cheerfulness, activity and spirit.

I am, with the greatest esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

CHRISTOPHER LEFFINGWELL.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 14, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I did not so soon think to have troubled you again, but being detained longer than I expected by the Commissary to this detachment, who the day before yesterday was sent to Norwich for a supply of flour, which we are almost out of. He has not yet returned, or I should, by this time, have been on my way to Long-Island.

I just received your Honour's favour by Colonel Coit. Judges are now appraising the arms in my possession, for his use. I have also just received an account that the troops sent to Long-Island by your Honour have returned. I had just sent them a guide and an express, to desire them to continue there until I could join them. I have also prevailed upon many of the Militia of Southold to join us.

If your Honour should still be of the mind to honour me with the command of the detachment that were on Long-Island, to act in conjunction with mine, I should be extremely obliged to you. My object is to seize upon a large quantity of arms lodged at Sautunket, at the house of Mr. Richard Miller; also to cut off the communications between Suffolk and Queen's County: that while we are thus employed the stock, &c., may be removed from Suffolk County to the main; also to seize upon any other advantages that may offer. Your Honour's approbation or disapprobation will determine me for or against the expedition.

I remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

P. S. Two tenders have passed Hell-Gate, into the Sound. An escort of an armed vessel will be sufficient, if your Honour determines we shall proceed.

WILLIAM BRADFORD TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.
State of Rhode-Island, &c., Bristol, }
September 14, 1776. }

SIR: Governour Cooke having entered the Hospital for inoculation, makes it necessary for me to inform your Honour that immediately upon the receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, with the enclosed resolves of Congress, I called the Committee to act in cases of emergency during the recess of the General Assembly, who have taken every necessary measure to facilitate the march of the Continental battalion ordered by Congress to New-York—part of which set out this day, and the remainder to-morrow.

The Committee have the highest sense of the regard expressed by Congress for the security and defence of this State, in recommending to the Massachusetts-Bay to supply a regiment of their Militia to replace the battalion going to New-York; to make application for which they have appointed one of their members to wait upon the General Court of that State.

The Committee, also, in this exhausted state of this Government, still more weakened by the great number of privateers fitted from it, and not having it in their power to afford so speedy an aid in any other way, requested Colonel Richmond, who commands the other Continental battalion stationed here, to hold it in readiness to march at a moment's warning, and he accordingly will march for New-York as soon as he shall receive intelligence from the regiments from the Massachusetts entering this State. To replace it the Committee have ordered a battalion of Militia, of seven hundred men, to be immediately raised and embodied.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem and respect, sir, your Honour's most obedient and most humble servant,
WILLIAM BRADFORD, Deputy Governour.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

WILLIAM BRADFORD TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.
State of Rhode Island, &c., Bristol, }
September 14, 1776. }

SIR: Governour Cooke having entered the Hospital for inoculation, it becomes incumbent upon me to acquaint your Excellency that upon the receipt of a letter of the 3d instant, from Mr. President Hancock, enclosing several resolves of the General Congress, one of them ordering one of the Continental battalions in this State to march immediately to New-York, and requesting the Massachusetts-Bay to send a regiment of their Militia to replace it, and another recommending it to all the States northward of Virginia to furnish all the aid in their power to the army at New-York, I summoned the Committee appointed to act in cases of emergency during the recess of the General Assembly to meet, who have taken every necessary measure to forward the march of the battalions ordered to New-York. Part of them will proceed this day and the remainder to-morrow.

The Committee not having it in their power to afford so speedy an aid in any other way, have requested Colonel Richmond, who commands the other Continental battalion in this State, to hold it in readiness to march at the shortest notice; and he accordingly will proceed with his battalion to New-York as soon as he shall receive intelligence that the regiment from the Massachusetts hath entered this State. To replace it, the Committee have ordered a battalion of Militia, of seven hundred men, to be raised and embodied.

I have the honour to be, with great esteem and respect, sir, your Excellency's most obedient and most humble servant,

WILLIAM BRADFORD, Deputy Governour.

To His Excellency General Washington.

REGIMENTAL ORDERS.

Camp at Newport, September 14, 1776.

That the whole Regiment march to join the Continental Army at New-York, agreeably to resolve of Congress of the 3d instant. Captain Carr, Captain Gorton, Captain Dyer, Captain Arnold, and companies, will form the first detachment, and cross the ferries to Narraganset South-Ferry, this forenoon, if possible. Major Tew will go forward with and have the care of them. Captain Peck, Captain Hop-pin, Captain Martin, Captain Bailey, and companies, to march this afternoon, and cross the said ferries. The Adjutant to go with and assist them. The other four companies to march to-morrow. The Quartermaster to have the necessary care of the whole, and is hereby fully empowered to impress and issue his warrant to impress any thing that is needful for accommodating and enabling the troops to get to New-York as above said. Lieutenant-Colonel Comstock will follow as soon as possible. Commissary Phillips will supply the whole with provisions, as far as New-London, which are to be received here and carried with the companies.

And in the most feeling manner I hereby order that you, on your way, behave in all respects with that order, decency, and character, which become a soldier fighting for his bleeding country, sensible of the necessity of supporting their rights and the liberties of their country. Each Captain will furnish himself with a copy of the above order; besides, it must be entered on the Orderly-Book, by the Orderly-Sergeant, and see that the same be read at the head of the company before they march.

CHRISTOPHER LIPPITT, Colonel.

Providence, September 14, 1776.

The privateers Montgomery and Yankee Ranger, of this port, have taken three large brigs bound from the West-Indies to England, laden with rum, sugar, coffee, cotton, and oil. They are all arrived in safe port.

We hear that Captain Samuel Dunn, in a privateer from Swansey, has taken a large brig with two hundred and sixty hogsheads of rum.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO CAPTAIN SOUTHER.

September 14, 1776.

The brigantine Massachusetts, under your command, being properly armed and manned, and in other respects fitted for a cruise, you are hereby ordered and directed immediately to proceed to sea, and use your utmost endeavours to protect the sea-coast and trade of the United States, and you are also directed to exert yourself in making captures of all ships and other vessels, goods, wares, and merchandise, belonging to the King of Great Britain or any of his subjects, wherever residing, excepting only the ships and goods of the inhabitants of Bermuda and the Bahama Islands. And you are directed not to cruise farther south than latitude 34° north, nor farther east than the Grand Bank of Newfoundland, nor farther west than the Shoals of Nantucket, at all times using necessary precaution to prevent your vessel from falling into the hands of the enemy.

And whereas you have received a commission, authorizing you to make captures as aforesaid, and a set of instructions have been delivered to you for regulating your conduct in that matter, these instructions you are hereby directed diligently to attend to; and if you are so fortunate as to make any captures, you are to order them to make the first safe harbour within the United States of America. And you are further ordered, not to expend your ammunition unnecessarily, and only in time of action, or firing alarm or signal guns.

SELECTMEN OF BOSTON—SMALL-POX.

September 14, 1776.

The Selectmen inform the publick, that by the return of the Committees appointed to inquire into the state of the Town respecting the Small-Pox, there are now but eighteen persons sick of that distemper, and those chiefly in the outskirts of the Town. They are so far recovered, that the Selectmen are determined to take off the guards from the Neck and the Ferries after Wednesday next; at which time, according to present appearances, the Town will be free of infection.

JOHN SCOLLAY,
EBENEZER STORER,
SAMUEL AUSTIN,
HENRY BROMFIELD,
JOHN GREENLEAF,

Selectmen of the Town of Boston.

ON COUNTY CONVENTIONS AND COMMITTEES.

MR. EDES: In last Monday's paper, I observed sundry resolutions of the Committees of Correspondence, &c., in the County of Middlesex in General Convention assembled. The matter suggested in said resolutions (excepting what respects their convening together) was to me highly agreeable, as it was full evidence of their patriotism and zealous endeavours to serve their country. I heartily wish their sense in this regard may be adopted; but however evident their patriotism may be, however worthy of notice their suggestions, yet I think the mode and channel in which they were originated, and were exhibited to publick view, are highly improper. Committees of Safety, &c., are officers made by, and known in, the law; therefore the law must be their rule. They are Town Officers, chosen in the same manner as the Selectmen are; their business is to inspect the political behaviour of their townsmen, and use their endeavours to suppress every effort of the enemies of their country, and whatever else is of the same complexion. But for the Committees of several towns to assemble together, and organize themselves into a body, resembling a Congress or General Assembly, exhibiting their doings under the name of Resolutions, is without their line, and beyond their sphere.

When the powers of government in this State were suspended by the enemies of our peace, such political manœuvres were necessary, and tended greatly to the salvation of America; but when this suspension was at an end, and the forms and execution of Legislative and Executive Government were assumed and restored, the reason and necessity of County Conventions came to a period; all that Committees of Correspondence, &c., now have to do, is, to take care of the enemies of the State, in their several towns, and to give all necessary information to each other and to proper Magistrates. County Conventions, at this time of day, can do no good, and may be productive of lasting mischief. If in their resolutions they coincide with the doings of the Legislature, it is nugatory, because the business may as well be done without them, and charges saved. But on the other hand, should their resolutions clash and interfere with the sense of the General Assembly, the State must be divided against itself. By the same rule that one hundred members are collected in one County, a proportionable number may be collected in the whole State, which (to say the least) would be double the number of the General Court. And no reason can be given why a State Convention of Committees, &c., may not take place, as well as a County Assembly. Should this Convention proceed to publish resolutions different from the acts and the intentions of the Legislature, founded on mature and solemn deliberation, they (the Court) must be under duress, and in continual fears; the consequence of which (at least) must be formidable.

I hope and trust, as the General Court are the creators of Committees, that they will define their power, and limit their jurisdiction; for at present, it is unlimited, which cannot be affirmed of any constitutional part of State administration.

I am no friend to mysteries in Government—a rule within a rule, a wheel within a wheel! The line of Government should be unperplexed with intricacies, and the same should be affirmed of the law.

SPECULATOR.

County of Middlesex, September 14, 1776.

BENJAMIN GILES TO COLONEL BELLOWES.

State of New-Hampshire, Exeter, September 14, 1776.

To Colonel BENJAMIN BELLOWES, Jr.:

Pursuant to a resolve of the Council and Assembly of said State, in consequence of a requisition of the Continental Congress, you are required with all the despatch possible, not exceeding ten days, to raise and see equipped with arms complete, out of the Militia in your regiment, fifty men, and march them off for New-York to assist our brethren there in this important crisis; and for your assistance you are to call upon the alarm-list as well as the training-band, and direct their march to Hartford, in the State of Connecticut, where further directions and orders will be given for their regulations, and you are to let them know that they are to be detained in the service until the first of December next, unless sooner discharged, and that they are to receive twenty dollars down upon their being mustered, and with that the bounty to be made equal to the bounty of the Massachusetts State's afterwards; that the wages of the officers and soldiers and rations to be the same as in the Continental army; that the officers and soldiers be paid two pence per mile for travelling expenses from their homes to Head-Quarters, to be paid them at the place of rendezvous; that the Commanding officer of your regiment for the time being, is to appoint one Captain and two subalterns out of said men, which are to make up one company.

BENJAMIN GILES,

Chairman of Committee appointed for this purpose.

N. B. You are to make returns to the Assembly or Committee of Safety of this State as soon as may be.

You are appointed Mustermaster and Paymaster for the men to be raised in your regiment, and you are to pay the Captain eight pounds, Lieutenants five pounds eight shillings, Ensign four pounds, being one month's advance pay; non-commissioned officers and soldiers six pounds each.

STEPHEN EVANS TO MESHECK WEARE.

September 16, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: As I am informed by the Committee appointed by both Houses of the Legislative body of this State, that I am to raise in my regiment one hundred men, including officers, to be drafted for the purpose of marching and joining the Continental Army in New-York as a reinforcement there, and that I was appointed by said Committee Mustermaster and Paymaster to said men when raised, and in order to my complying, and discharging that trust, it is necessary that I should be supplied with money therefor, which will be for five commission officers, and all other officers necessary for arrangement with the number of men, and for the soldiers in the whole, one hundred men, which sum please to order paid to Major Ebenezer Tibbetts, and it shall be accounted for by your very humble servant,

STEPHEN EVANS.

To the Honourable Mesheck Weare, Esq., President of the Council of the State of New-Hampshire.

P. S. SIR: According to the orders I have received, the men are not to receive their billeting money before they get to Hartford, which I find will make a difficulty if they haven't it here before they start. I hope that will be ordered otherwise. As before, yours,

ORDERS TO CAPTAIN HOUSE.

State of New-Hampshire, Exeter, September 14, 1776.

To Captain JOHN HOUSE:

Pursuant to a resolve of the Council and Assembly of this State, in consequence of a requisition of the Continental Congress, you are hereby authorized and empowered to raise a company of not less than fifty men, to march with all possible despatch (not exceeding ten days) for New-York, towards reinforcing the Continental Army there, of which you are to take the command, and have the appointment of the subaltern officers; and for their encouragement you are to inform them, that they shall receive twenty dollars down upon being mustered, and with that the bounty to be made afterwards equal to that of the Massachusetts State; and that the wages of officers and soldiers be the same, and the rations the same, as in the Continental Army, and to be two pence per mile for traveling expenses from their homes to Head-Quarters, the same to be paid at Hartford, in Connecticut State, on their arrival there; and you are to join and put your company under the command of one of the Colonels appointed to the regiments ordered from this State on the same service, to continue on duty until 1st December, unless sooner discharged.

But you are to observe this direction, not to take any of the men out of the regiments from which drafts are now making for the two regiments ordered from this State, and make return of your doings herein as soon as may be.

B. GYLES, Chairman of the Committee.

ORDERS TO COLONEL HUMPHREY.

Rhinebeck, September 15, 1776.

SIR: As the Convention has been pleased to make a resolve to order one hundred and seventy-five men to be raised in the County of Dutchess, for a reinforcement for the forts in the Highlands, you are hereby commanded to raise twenty-five men in your regiment immediately for your quota, and supply them with good arms, if possible, and all accoutrements, and a camp-kettle to every six men, and to be on Continental pay from their enlistment, and be allowed one penny on their march to the fort, and stand two months after their arrival, if not sooner discharged by the Convention. You are hereby desired to meet me on Friday, the 20th instant, at twelve o'clock that day, at Poughkeepsie, to consult raising the officers. Fail not at your peril.

Given orders by my hand, Head-Quarters, to the above date.

PETRUS TEN BROECK, Brigadier-General.To Colonel William Humphrey.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Albany, September 15, 1776.

SIR: Yesterday I had the honour to receive your favour of the 10th instant. As I could not find time to get the treaty with the Indians copied, I took the liberty to send you the originals, which I hope you have received. It will not be necessary that I should be furnished with the invoices of the sundry articles you have been so good as to send to Ticonderoga. The amount of the first parcels was endorsed on one of the accounts brought me by Mr. Williams, and not discovered until after I had written.

I am happy, sir, that the reflections you have made on the state of the Northern army, are similar to those I have long since done myself the honour to communicate to Congress. The officers and soldiers who were last year engaged in the service, and those that are now, will be convinced that I have paid early and repeated attention to their distresses. As soon as I can publish a narrative in justification of my conduct, which I am bound to do, in justice to myself, to my family, and to the Convention of this State, who, unsolicited by me, wrote a letter so favourable to Congress as induced them to confer the command in this department upon me, and who also kindly, though without my knowledge, requested Congress above two months ago, that an inquiry should be made into my conduct—that if guilty I might suffer; if otherwise, the odium which I so generally laboured under might be wiped away. I had gone before the Convention in this request, and I have since repeated it in the most pressing terms, but hitherto without success. Perhaps, it may hereafter appear, that it was in the power of Congress to have justified me against every calumny; if so, it is probable the candid will ask why it was not done. That, too, may possibly appear.

Your attentions, sir, to supply the army merits the warmest acknowledgments of every friend of his country. You have mine most unfeignedly. How it comes that the troops are not supplied with salt, vinegar, and mutton, I really do not know. By the last return, of the 1st of this month, four hundred and sixty sheep were at Fort George. There are not less than seven hundred barrels of salt at Fort George, &c., which I had ordered to be purchased last Fall, and a very considerable quantity of vinegar is gone up, for which I have given a special permit to a person who had it for sale. Peas have only lately been forwarded—as none were to be had of the last year's crop. I shall immediately write to the Superintendents of the Hospital, on the subject of wine and refreshments for the troops, and order that it be furnished the unhappy sick. I assure you, sir, that I have always felt much for them, and wished and strove to alleviate their distresses as much as lay in my power. Before fresh meat could be got for them from the interior parts of the country, I sent an hundred sheep from my farm at Saratoga, with as many milch cows as I could possibly spare, and ordered a number to be purchased in the vicinity of this place—which were sent the soonest they possibly could—nor shall I slacken to aid them during the short time I am to remain in the command, which I believe will not exceed a fortnight, as I have sent my resignation to Congress. I sincerely wish my successor may meet with less trouble than I have had, and give more satisfaction than I have been able to, with my best exertions. If he deigns to consult with me, I will do all in my power to aid him, and in every instance will try to convince my countrymen that I am the honest and warm though injured friend of America.

The cannonade on Lake Champlain, which was supposed to be occasioned by our fleet's meeting with the enemy, was only a few cannon fired by General Arnold at a party of the enemy, who attacked a boat belonging to the fleet, and killed three and wounded six of the crew. Our fleet lays off Isle-au-Motte, consisting of thirteen sail, and will very soon, if it is not already, be reinforced by three large and stout galleys. The intelligence from Fort Stanwix proved fallacious.

The Commissioners of Congress appointed to adjust the publick accounts in this department are arrived. I beg you will be so good as to cause publication to be made in your State, requesting all persons that have any accounts to settle to repair to this place. Little can, however, be done in the Canada accounts until they are furnished with General Wooster's. Will your Honour be so good as to advise that gentleman of this, if he should be in Connecticut?

The Storekeeper informs me, that he has not above fifty gun-barrels that cannot be repaired here. These he will send by the first conveyance, together with such as he may receive from Ticonderoga, which are ordered to be sent for.

I am, sir, most respectfully, and with great esteem, your most obedient humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. Jonathan Trumbull, Esq., &c.

COLONEL CORTLANDT TO GENERAL GATES.

Skenesborough, September 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: The clothing is gone off on board a petiauger which I detained for that purpose. She belongs to a person living near Crown Point. The Commissary is on board with the goods. I can give the General but little information about the road from Chesher's to Fort Edward. Report says the labourers are idle and the road very bad. Colonel Yates writes me that the men are under no command, their Major sick, and they swear that they will obey none but their own officers; from which account, I believe little is done. Colonel Wynkoop is in Kingston, very unwell, so that I do not expect him for some time. I am in hopes that I shall keep my health, as I have been clear of the fever several days.

I am, with respect, dear General, your humble servant,
PHILIP CORTLANDT.

GENERAL GATES TO GENERAL SCHUYLER.

Tyonderoga, September 15, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: This moment General Waterbury delivered me the enclosed list of naval stores, which are immediately wanted to complete the equipment of the row-galleys, and which they cannot sail without. I despatch Mr. Egbert to receive and bring them forward without delay. He is sober and vigilant. Pray strain every nerve to supply us, for it is of the greatest consequence to get the galleys down to General Arnold. Enclosed is General Arnold's last letter to me. He has stationed the fleet in a masterly manner.

Yours,

HO. GATES.

Wanted to complete the three Galleys—Three 8-inch cables, (new if possible;) seventy-one fathom 7-inch rope; ten ditto 5-inch do; five coils 3-inch do; six do 1½-inch do; one do 4-inch do; six do 2-inch do; two do 2½-inch do; three do spun-yarn.

The above-mentioned coils must be full coils.

N. B. The cables that are sent are good for nothing, old and rotten. No rope here fit for the breechings of guns; the seventy-one fathom 7-inch rope intended for that purpose.

GENERAL GATES TO COLONEL SYMONDS.

Tyonderoga, September 15, 1776.

SIR: I this moment received your letter, dated Williamstown, 12th instant. As I did not send the orders for your march to camp, I could not take measures more early to stop your proceeding. The last account from General Arnold convinces me there is no immediate necessity for the Militia coming forward at this time. A copy of his last letter to me I send you enclosed. The alarm was occasioned by some firing from our enemy on the shores opposite Isle-aux-Têtes; and I believe a great number of small-arms and cannon fired that and the succeeding days by brigades of the enemy at exercise at their post below, all which deceived the Commanding Officer at Crown Point.

A good road will be finished by this day se'nnight, from Rutland through Castletown to the east foot of Mount Independence, and an excellent bridge over Otter Creek, at Rutland, will be completed in three days. For the future, any body of men intended for our succour should march that way.

The United States are, in general, obliged to you for your alertness to succour their army, and particularly, sir,
Your, &c., &c.

HO. GATES.

To Colonel Benjamin Symonds.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM TICONDEROGA, DATED MOUNT INDEPENDENCE, SEPTEMBER 15, 1776.

The 7th instant, our fleet lying across the Lake, against a place called the Isle of Motte, they sent a boat ashore with eighteen men, to cut fascines for some use on board; as soon as they got on shore they set their guns against a rock, when the Sergeant took two men as a sentry, while the others were at work. He had not placed them before he saw an Indian within half a stone's throw. The Indian hailed the Sergeant, saying, who is there? The Sergeant answered, who are you? To which he replied, I am a Caughnawaga. Then the Sergeant and men ran on board, and pushed off the boat as soon as possible; but the Indians were too nigh for them, for they came so nigh as to near tomahawk them. The Sergeant had a match in his hand just going to fire a cannon charged with shot, when an Indian fired and cut the match off, so that he could not fire. They then discharged their eighteen pieces, but do not know whether they killed any. After which the fleet fired a considerable number of cannon into the woods, which soon scattered the savages. In the action we have three men killed, and five wounded, though not mortally. After the fleet found they had fled, there went a number on shore, but could find nothing but one laced hat. Our people are making strong here as fast as possible.

TO WILLIAM WINDS, MATTHIAS OGDEN, AND WILLIAM DE HART.

GENTLEMEN: When persons who are appointed and commissioned as officers in a regiment, or other department, neglect or absent themselves from their duty, or behave in a manner unbecoming the rank and character of officers and gentlemen, we think it the indispensable duty of others to make known their conduct; it is indeed a duty they owe to themselves, to the regiment, and to their country. Permit us, therefore, to inform you (if it has as yet escaped your notice) that the behaviour of Mr. Lewis Johnston Costigan, a Lieutenant in our regiment, is, and constantly has been, such as makes a complaint highly necessary. He is now absent, and has been so upwards of six weeks, although he desired leave only of fourteen days, and obtained twenty, and that, we have the greatest reason to believe, on a false pretence. Had this been the first instance of his endeavouring to sconce his duty, possibly it might have passed unnoticed; but his whole conduct ever since our knowledge of him has been the same, and he has not done, nor do we expect any duty of him while he can possibly avoid it.

We are, gentlemen, your most humble servants,

JOSEPH MORRIS, Captain.
SILAS HOWELL, " JOHN CONWAY, "
J. POLHEMUS, " JOSEPH MEEKER, " ANDW. McMYER, " DANIEL ROOT, "

We are of opinion that the above representation of Lieutenant Costigan's conduct is just, and request he may be superseded.

WILLIAM WINDS, Colonel.
MATT. OGDEN, Lieutenant-Colonel.
WM. D. HART, Major.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO COLONEL HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

Lebanon, September 15, 1776.

SIR: I have before me yours of the 14th inst. Acknowledge the favour of the arms you are so kind as to lend for the use of our Militia.

Yesterday, Captain Leffingwell, of Norwich, was here. I gave him a letter to Colonel Wolcott, wherein I have said, "What may be further done for the relief of the people on Long-Island cannot be so well judged by me at this distance; must therefore leave the same to your good discretion. If by the assistance of men from your regiment, with Captain Leffingwell's company, and some armed vessel that may be employed, any thing further can be reasonably expected to be done on Long-Island, for relief of those people, or bringing off stock, you will give your orders accordingly. Otherwise, Captain Leffingwell to join the Twentieth Regiment, at or near Westchester."

By this, you see my desire to serve those people doth agree with your inclinations. And if Colonel Wolcott shall judge it prudent to make any further attempts on the Island, I readily comply therein, and the command of the detachment of course devolves on you, in which I do heartily acquiesce, and wish you success in that, or whatever you undertake.

I am, with esteem and regard, sir, your obedient, humble servant,

JONATHAN TRUMBULL.

To Colonel Henry B. Livingston, at Saybrook.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 15, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I am just informed that General Howe has issued orders for the inlisting and impressing of two thousand men on Long-Island. The wharves are covered with our friends at Sag-Harbour. They are resolved to perish rather than take up arms against their countrymen. Now is the most favourable period for sending assistance to them, as they will join us to a man rather than be our butchers. I will embark to-day in order to give them all the assistance in my power. A most infamous abettor of the Ministry is just now brought in here—one Zeb Howell. A number of vessels are wanting to carry off the families and effects of these unhappy people. I shall wait for your Honour's answer by Lieutenant Havens, as I am still of opinion that it will be of much greater advantage to us, and a greater obstacle to the enemy's design, for us to land at Huntington.

I remain your Honour's most obedient and humble servant,

HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

Southampton, September 13, 1776.

DEAR SIR: A universal consternation is this moment fallen upon me and all my neighbours, by express by Zeb Howell, arrived from Head-Quarters at Jamaica, viz., that one brigade be forthwith raised for the sole purpose of defending his Majesty's well-disposed subjects on Long-Island, and for driving out or apprehending all secreted Rebels in said County, and for all other purposes, which other purposes explains us in the front of their main body in the hottest battle. Said express further saith, that all the fat cattle and sheep, except for the families' use, be forthwith drove unto Jamaica, and men pointed out to do it. Thirdly, all the Captains are commanded to take all the guns, except long fowling-pieces, and convey them in boats to Hempstead, south, and men nominated to receive them, and to do it immediately. And fourthly, that all effects, estates personal and real, belonging to those persons who have evacuated their houses and gone over to the Rebels, are confiscated, and if any person be found with any of their goods, they shall suffer as principals. Lastly, we have orders to send two men to Jamaica to give General Howe a true account of the state of Suffolk County. The western part of the County have appointed Nathan Woodhull, of Setauket, and to-morrow at one o'clock at Sag meeting-house, we have directed the town of Easthampton to meet us to make choice of one man for that purpose. Sir, this gloomy moment is so similar to the first day's march of the twelve tribes from Egypt's galling yoke, when an impassable mountain was on their right and left wing, the Red Sea before, and Pharaoh in burning rage behind them close pursuing, that we are in a perishing necessity for the same Almighty deliverance. May that great and glorious Being whose mercies are over his other works, look down in mercy and save us, or we perish. So you can't be at any loss how much sincere friendship I have for you, your brother, your spouse, and tender offspring, for whom my bowels yearn. I am, &c., &c.

To Uriah Rogers, at Guilford.

P. S. I have just heard that Elisha Halsey has got a commission or warrant to inlist, and the General informs us that he hopes we shall cheerfully inlist into the service to prevent the disagreeable necessity of detaching them.

Saybrook, September 15, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: The above letter is a copy of one just now intercepted; though no name is signed, yet from the style and character I am at no loss the author to be Mr. Obadiah Jones, of Southampton.

Our men are embarking in order to proceed for Long-Island. Your answer by Lieutenant Haven is the only thing that detains me.

I remain, with respect and esteem, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

H. B. LIVINGSTON.

To his Honour Governour Trumbull.

P. S. The prisoner I have now in custody has been guilty of holding an intercourse with our enemies—a crime which is declared death in the State of New-York. A parole, therefore, in my opinion, ought by no means to be taken.

Watertown, Monday, September 23, 1776.

Yesterday se'nnight, arrived at Newburyport the brigantine Georgia Diana, Peter Rigan, master, bound from Grenada to London, taken by the Washington, privateer, Nathaniel Odiorne, having on board two hundred and fifty hogsheads rum and sugar, and about twenty chaldrons of coal, &c., &c.

Monday last returned to Plymouth, Captain Sampson, after a short cruise, in which he has taken five prizes, three or four of which are arrived safe into port.

On Monday evening last, was sent into Cape Ann, by Captain Coas, of the Warren, privateer, a brig of about one hundred and twenty tons, mounting three carriage guns and ten swivels; she was from the coast of Guinea, but last from Tobago, with some elephants' teeth and gold dust. When she left Captain Coas, he was in chase of a ship.

The ship which the Warren sent in last Saturday was from Tobago, bound to London, called the Picary, Captain Breckholt Cleveland, commander, having on board three hundred and twenty-five hogsheads of sugar, fifty hogsheads of rum, one hundred and sixty-one bales of cotton, one hundred and eighteen pipes, twenty-nine hogsheads, and ten quarter-casks Madeira wine, and some indigo.

The Honourable Matthew Thornton, Esq., of Londonderry, is chosen a member of the honourable Continental Congress, for the State of New-Hampshire, in the room of Colonel John Langdon, who has resigned.

Thursday afternoon, arrived in Boston harbour, Wait Ratchbun, prize-master to the ship Venus, from Honduras, of near four hundred tons, taken by Elijah Freeman Paine, in the schooner Eagle, from Providence, on the 23d August, at night, in latitude 35°, longitude 57°, west. Her cargo consists of one hundred and sixty tons of chip logwood, four hundred logs of mahogany, and one hundred and fifty weight of turtle-shell. The next day Captain Paine espied a brigantine, gave chase, and took her; she was from Virginia, bound to Hamburgh, laden with tobacco, belonging to one Smith of that place, but by the papers and letters found on board it appeared she was designed for London.

The New-York Post informs that on Monday last, about five thousand of the enemy landed about seven or eight miles above New-York, when a body of our troops attacked them, killed about five hundred, took a number of prisoners, four field-pieces, two standards, and a number of small-arms. Our loss in this affair, it is said, is about one hundred killed.

The same day two of the enemy's frigates, in attempting to get up the North River, were burnt by our people.

A letter from New-York mentions that when the Tories on Long-Island went to congratulate Lord Howe on his success in driving the Rebels from thence, he replied, "that he thought they ought rather condole with him on the loss of eighteen hundred brave men, and three Generals."

Charlestown, South-Carolina, October 2, 1776.

Intelligence having been received at Savannah on September 16th, by Colonel Elbert, that a party of the enemy from Cockspur had surprised two of the guard posted on Wilmington Island, and that they were expected to return the next night to plunder the other part of the Island, where a Sergeant and six privates from the Georgia battalion were fixed; he ordered a reinforcement of fifteen men to march and take post on the above mentioned Island. The reinforcement consisted of one private from the First Regiment, two from the Second, and twelve privates and one Sergeant from the Rangers of South Carolina, commanded by Lieutenant Hicks, of Thomson's Rangers. They arrived on the Island early in the morning of the 17th of September, and soon discovered the plunderers, viz., twenty-one blacks, and five white associates, busy in carrying off their booty. They were soon interrupted by Mr. Hicks, who, on the first fire, killed seven or eight of them; an engagement here ensued. The enemy lost eleven or more negroes killed, and one prisoner; four of the whites were also taken, one wounded. The one who got off was much wounded. Lieutenant Hicks lost two men.

Captain Goodwyn, of the Rangers, was sent immediately off to the assistance of our men, in expectation of the enemy returning to the Island, but they had learned wisdom by their late drubbing, and did not care to venture for more delicacies for their brother pirates' palates.

COLONEL DORSEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Anne Arundel County, September 16, 1776.

The Field Officers of the Elk-Ridge battalion of Militia beg leave to recommend to the honourable Convention Mr. Leven Lawrence as First, and Mr. Thomas Todd as Second Lieutenant under Captain Thomas Watkins, Jun., of Colonel Weems's battalion, agreeable to a resolve of Convention the 10th instant.

THOMAS DORSEY, Colonel.

We the Field Officers of the Thirty-First Battalion, beg leave to recommend Captain Thomas Watkins as Captain, and John Hams, Jun., as Ensign, to one of the companies to be raised in Anne Arundel County, agreeable to the late resolve of the honourable Convention passed the 10th instant.

JOHN WEEMS,
RICHARD HARWOOD, Jun.
JOSEPH GALLOWAY.

To the Honourable Council of Safety.

COLONEL TYLER TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Monday, September 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Conformable to your request, I met my battalion on Friday last, when I assisted all in my power to raise the company wanting to reinforce the American army at New-York, and am very sorry to inform you there was the greatest backwardness that could be in our young men. I also was at the meeting of Colonel Sims's battalion the next day, which behaved with the same lukewarmness. There are several gentlemen recruiting, viz: Mr. Levin Covington, Mr. Abraham Boyd, and Mr. Richard Wooten, but am afraid a company will not be made, especially as the people will be divided with regard to their commander. I am of opinion that were we ordered by the Convention to meet our battalions together at Upper Marlborough, we should be able to settle all such difficulties, and by that means make out a company. I should be glad you would fix on a day for our meeting; it would save us the trouble of meeting on that account. Monday next would answer very well. All which I submit to your Honours, and am, gentlemen, your most obedient, humble servant,

ROBT. TYLER.

To the Honourable the Convention of Maryland.

BALTIMORE COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee September 16, 1776, Present: Samuel Purviance, Jun., Chairman; B. Griffith, J. Calhoun, W. Aisquith, T. Rutter, T. Cockey, J. Moale, W. Buchanan, A. Buchanan, T. Sollers, E. Talbot; Geo. Lux, Secretary.

The Committee having received a Certificate signed by Henry Lowes, on behalf of Doctor James Houston, representing him as an Associator in Somerset County, and vouching that no charge has been alleged against him, nor no suspicion of his being inimical to the liberties of America, the bond entered into by Doctor Weisenthall is hereby declared cancelled.

The Chairman and Vice-Chairman being absent, Mr. John Moale was appointed Chairman pro tem.

Mr. Benkid Willson (one of the Quakers) appeared to further a charge respecting fines assessed on him and his two sons as Non-Enrollers, &c., &c., &c.

Ordered, That the fine of £10 laid on William Willson, who lives in Harford County, be released, and that the Committee of Harford be informed of it by a letter from the Chairman of this Committee, that they may take order therein.

The Committee are also of opinion that if Mr. Benkid Willson can make it appear to this Committee by Monday next, that his son Benjamin was not sixteen years of age on the 15th of March last, the fine of £10 be released; otherwise that he pay the sum of £5 in lieu of the said fine of £10.

Mr. John Bailey was appointed First Lieutenant in Captain Frederick Deam's Company, vice Mr. David Evans, who resigned.

A Letter from Jacob Karns to the Clerk of this Committee, vindicating himself from being inimical to America, was received, read, and ordered to lie on the table.

Attest:

Geo. Lux, Secretary.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Philadelphia, September 16, 1776.

SIR: The Congress having at different times passed sundry resolves relative to a variety of subjects, I do myself the honour to enclose you a copy of the same, as necessary for your information and direction.

The resolve of the 12th, respecting Colonel Trumbull, will, I trust, be satisfactory, and prove the means of his continuing in an office of such importance to the army, and which he has hitherto discharged with the greatest fidelity and success.

I have the honour to be, with perfect esteem and respect, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To General Washington.

PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS TO JOSEPH TRUMBULL.

Philadelphia, September 16, 1776.

SIR: I have the pleasure to enclose you a resolution of Congress relative to your department, by which you will perceive that your letter and the papers transmitted therewith have been under their consideration, and that it is the expectation of Congress your difficulties will be thereby removed.

Since passing this resolve, your brother, Mr. John Trumbull, has been appointed by Congress Deputy Adjutant-General of the Northern Department, and Mr. Livingston's resignation as Deputy Commissary has been accepted, agreeable to his request.

The honour and reputation with which you have hitherto executed the arduous and extensive business of your office, and the satisfaction you have afforded the publick, convince me that you will still continue to render your country all the service in your power, and by no means decline your present employment.

Your bills on me till this date have been duly honoured.

I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

JOHN HANCOCK, President.

To Jos. Trumbull, Esq., Commissary-General.

BOARD OF WAR TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

War-Office, September 16, 1776.

SIR: The Board of War have directed me to lay the foregoing memorial of the Second Lieutenants of the Virginia Regiments before your Excellency for your opinion and advice thereon, which the Board request you will communicate to them as soon as convenient.

I have the honour to be your most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD PETERS, Secretary.

To His Excellency General Washington, Esq., &c., &c., New-York.

PETITION OF THE SECOND LIEUTENANTS OF THE FIRST VIRGINIA BATTALION.

[Read September 14, 1776. Referred to the Board of War.]

To the honourable the Continental Congress, now sitting in the City of PHILADELPHIA, the Petition of the Second Lieutenants of the First VIRGINIA Regiment humbly sheweth:

That your petitioners stood forth amongst the foremost in offering their service for the defence of the liberties of their country, and took the earliest opportunity of getting in the army as soon as the first troops were raised in Virginia. That though your petitioners were not influenced by any sinister motive of rank or precedence, yet they by no means supposed their pushing forward early was to be an almost total obstacle to their promotion, which must be the case if Lieutenants are to rise by their rank in companies and not by the date of their commissions. Your petitioners would further represent that when the last seven regiments were raised in Virginia, the greatest part of their regiment was immediately in the face of the enemy, which prevented your petitioners from seeking that preferment in their different Counties which their services and friends would probably have procured them. Your petitioners cannot help observing, that Sergeants and Privates from their regiment were permitted, at the same time, to go home on furlough, and some of them were elected First Lieutenants. In short, if they are to rise by their rank in companies, and not by the date of their commissions, there are now seventy-five Lieutenants in the new-raised regiments of Virginia that stand between your petitioners (who have borne the heat and burthen of the day) and preferment. Your petitioners are now at a long distance from their friends and places of nativity; they have been informed that six new regiments are to be raised in Virginia, and consequently sixty more First Lieutenants put over their heads. Under these circumstances your petitioners have the melancholy prospect of growing grey in the service without a possibility of preferment.

Your petitioners would represent that they never conceived that First and Second Lieutenants had reference to any thing but companies—their pay and the number of men in their command being the same. Your petitioners, therefore, look up to your honourable House for justice, and pray that they may rise according to the dates of their commissions, and not be suffered to look forward with the gloomy certainty of being still further from promotion the older they grow in the service of their country. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

To His Excellency General WASHINGTON: The Memorial of the First Lieutenants of the Third VIRGINIA Regiment, humbly sheweth:

That the memorialists have seen the petition of the Second Lieutenants of the First Virginia Regiment, but they cannot conceive that it can be entitled the Petition of the Second Lieutenants of the Virginia Regiments, it being calculated to serve the purposes of that regiment only. Your memorialists, however, shall leave the petition to its fate, and only consider the distinction between First and Second Lieutenants.

Your memorialists would humbly represent to your Excellency the mode by which the troops were raised in Virginia. Field-Officers being appointed by Convention, a Captain, two Lieutenants, and an Ensign, were appointed by each County Committee. They proceeded first to appoint the Captain, then the First Lieutenant, then the Second Lieutenant, and then the Ensign. By this mode of appointment, every First Lieutenant was supposed to be equal in abilities, and superior to every Second Lieutenant. Your memorialists would further observe to your Excellency, that the mode of rising was settled in the two first raised regiments thus, viz: Every First Lieutenant took command and succeeded to a company before any Second Lieutenant, although the commission of the Second Lieutenant was of elder date. (The dating of commissions of the Virginia officers being from the completion of the companies, was the reason why any Second Lieutenant bore a commission of an older date than a First Lieutenant.) Further, the idea of the Convention of Virginia concerning the rank of Lieutenants, was it not already fully known, might be plainly gathered from the number of men which they appointed each officer to raise; to a Captain twenty-eight, to a First Lieutenant twenty-one, to a Second Lieutenant sixteen, to an Ensign nine. With these expectations many gentlemen who offered for companies accepted of First Lieutenantcies, expecting to rise upon the first vacancy.

Your memorialists would further observe, and can assure your Excellency, that, till very lately, no Second Lieutenant entertained an idea of ranking before a First Lieutenant. On the contrary, many of the eldest Second Lieutenants (where vacancies happened) received First Lieutenants' commissions, and many First Lieutenants, bearing commissions of a younger date than Second Lieutenants, have succeeded to companies, without the smallest objection on the part of the Second Lieutenants, and this even in the regiment to which the petitioners belong. By this your Excellency will plainly perceive that any innovation with respect to the rank of Lieutenants would materially injure the First Lieutenants, and that the Second Lieutenants can by no means suffer, though no new regulation should take place.

Your memorialists, trusting in your Excellency's wisdom and justice, hope that they will not be deprived of that rank which they have always deemed, and which custom has established to be, their right. That your Excellency may enjoy all happiness, is the earnest prayer of your memorialists.

RICHARD HENRY LEE TO SAMUEL PURVIANCE, JR.

Philadelphia, September 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Since your brother left this city, Mr. Nicholson has been confirmed First Lieutenant of the Washington; and his worthy brother may be assured that in settling the ranks of the Captains, his merit will not be forgotten. It is not probable that the frigates will sail in fleets for some time, and therefore it is likely that no higher appointment than that of Captain will soon take place. It will be highly proper for Captain Nicholson to hasten on the Virginia (for that is most certainly the name of the Baltimore frigate) as much as possible. Her great obstruction, I fear, will be the anchors; however, we hope that will be removed ere long, as means have been taken to forward them.

You will shortly see published the conference of our members with Lord Howe, on Staten-Island, in which you will find that his Lordship's much talked of powers are no more than to confer and converse with gentlemen of influence, and to prosecute the war! We anxiously expect here the issue of a long cannonade at York, and another lately on Lake Champlain.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

RICHARD HENRY LEE.

To Samuel Purviance, Jun., Esq., Baltimore.

JOSIAH BARTLETT TO JOHN LANGDON.

Philadelphia, September 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I have not had the pleasure of receiving but one letter from New-Hampshire for some time. I fear there is some stoppage in the post, and that my friends in New-Hampshire find it as difficult to get letters from this place as I from them.

The Congress have passed a new order concerning the posts, which will, I hope, put them in a better situation. Yours by Captain Roche I have just received, and if it is in my power to serve him, will do it, depending on your recommendation; but at present know of no place open for him.

The Secret Committee are in want of proper goods to export to an European market, such as potash, dry fish, beeswax, &c., &c.; and they have desired me to write home to New-Hampshire to know whether any quantity sufficient to load a vessel or two can be procured; if so, they would give somebody a contract for that purpose. Please to make inquiry, and inform me if such things can be procured and sent from our State. It will be an advantage both to the publick and to individuals. I have wrote to some others to make the same inquiry.

As to news we have nothing very material here, and must beg leave to refer you to my letter to Colonel Whipple for what I have to send. I suppose you have formally resigned your seat in Congress, and another is appointed in your stead. Pray send them forward with all expedition, as my ill state of health will, I fear, prevent my attending Congress till they arrive here.

I am, sir, your sincere friend and humble servant,

JOSIAH BARTLETT.

RICHARD DALLAM TO JOHN HANCOCK.

[Read September 18, 1776.]

State of New-Jersey, Brunswick, September 16, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: By order of General Mercer, I have despatched the bearer, Mr. Francis Dallam, for a supply of money for this department.

The demands on me are very great and pressing, especially from the Deputy Quartermaster-General's Department, which is at this time in a strait for want of cash.

I am, sir, your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

RICHARD DALLAM,

Deputy Paymaster-General to the Flying-Camp.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esquire.

COLONEL CURTENIUS TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Hackensack, September 16, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Agreeable to your order of the 10th instant, I have enclosed an account of the quantity of lead, &c., shipped off, and the persons' names to whom delivered. As to military stores, I have none remaining in my hands, having delivered them from time to time to the military store-keeper,

Mr. Norwood; and after his removal the residue was delivered to Mr. Zedekiah Mills.

Mr. Allen and Mr. Varick have set up their business in this place, and I have engaged of them one hundred muskets, which will be ready (they say) in the course of a month; twenty-five of which are ready.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

PETER J. CURTENIUS.

P. S. Mr. Norwood is removed to Passaic Falls.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 17, 1776.]

Head-Quarters, at Colonel Roger Morris's House, }
September 16, 1776. }

SIR: On Saturday, about sunset, six more of the enemy's ships, one or two of which were men-of-war, passed between Governour's Island and Red-Hook and went up the East River to the station taken by those mentioned in my last. In half an hour I received two expresses, one from Colonel Sargent at Horn's Hook, (Hell-Gate,) giving an account that the enemy, to the amount of three or four thousand, had marched to the river, and were embarking for Barnes's, on Montrossor's Island, where numbers of them were then encamped; the other from General Mifflin, that uncommon and formidable movements were discovered among the enemy, which being confirmed by the scouts I had sent out, I proceeded to Harlem, where it was supposed—or at Morisania, opposite to it—the principal attempt to land would be made. However, nothing remarkable happened that night; but in the morning they began their operations. Their ships came up the North River as high as Bloomingdale, which put a total stop to the removal by water of any more of our provisions, &c.; and about eleven o'clock those in the East River began a most severe and heavy cannonade, to scour the grounds and cover the landing of their troops between Turtle Bay and the city, where breastworks had been thrown up to oppose them. As soon as I heard the firing, I rode with all possible despatch towards the place of landing, when, to my great surprise and mortification, I found the troops that had been posted in the lines retreating with the utmost precipitation, and those ordered to support them, (Parsons's and Fellows's brigades,) flying in every direction and in the greatest confusion, notwithstanding the exertions of their Generals to form them. I used every means in my power to rally and get them in some order; but my attempts were fruitless and ineffectual; and on the appearance of a small party of the enemy, not more than sixty or seventy, their disorder increased, and they ran away in the greatest confusion, without firing a single shot. Finding that no confidence was to be placed in those brigades, and apprehending that another part of the enemy might pass over to Harlem Plains and cut off the retreat to this place, I sent orders to secure the heights in the best manner with the troops that were stationed on and near them; which being done, the retreat was effected with but little or no loss of men, though of a considerable part of our baggage, occasioned by this disgraceful and dastardly conduct. Most of our heavy cannon, and a part of our stores and provisions, which we were about removing, were unavoidably left in the city, though every means, after it had been determined in Council to evacuate the post, had been used to prevent it. We are now encamped with the main body of the army on the Heights of Harlem, where I should hope the enemy would meet with a defeat in case of an attack, if the generality of our troops would behave with tolerable bravery; but experience, to my extreme affliction, has convinced me that this is rather to be wished for than expected. However, I trust that there are many who will act like men, and show themselves worthy of the blessings of freedom. I have sent out some reconnoitring parties to gain intelligence, if possible, of the disposition of the enemy, and shall inform Congress of every material event, by the earliest opportunity.

I have the honour to be, with the highest respect, sir, your most obedient servant.

P. S. SIR: The above letter is merely a copy of a rough one sketched only by his Excellency this morning, and who intended to sign it; but having rode out, and his return or where to find him uncertain, I have sent it away without. And I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT H. HARRISON.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM HARLEM, SEVEN MILES FROM NEW-YORK, DATED SEPTEMBER 16, 1776.

Yesterday was an unlucky day for us. The enemy landed about ten o'clock, at Turtle-Bay, below Hell-Gate, under cover of many ships-of-war. The brigade under General Parsons were soon obliged to retire from the water-side, and give ground for the enemy to land. General Mifflin immediately marched from Mount Washington with a thousand men, to the ground near and below this place, where he made a stand, threw up some works, rallied our retreating troops, and in an hour after had the principal part of our army (who were stationed below us) drawn up in good order on the heights. Generals Putnam and Scott were in New-York, but made their way through the enemy's line, with all their men and the guards of the city. Colonel Knox is missing, and supposed to be taken, as he was late in town looking for a boat to cross the North River. Three days since it was resolved to quit the town, and we have been removing ever since. We have taken almost every thing out of the city, but lost some cannon and stores. New-York never was tenable, and the holding of it obliged us to divide our army into many weak parts, but now I think we are in a good way; we only want two or three days to refresh our men and secure the heights.

JOHN WHITE TO CAPTAIN PLATT.

Rhinebeck, September 16, 1776.

SIR: Desertion has arrived to such a pitch now amongst the troops in or belonging to this State at present, that I fear if not timely remedied our army will shortly be reduced to a mere shadow. Merely inflicting punishments on the delinquents when taken, I fear, will answer little purpose, as they find so many who will conceal and support them. I am, therefore, of opinion that Congress ought to take this matter into consideration, and devise ways and means to punish those who harbour, conceal, or support such deserters, with a strong recommendation to County and Precinct Committees to see that every man exerts himself properly in bringing to justice all such delinquents; otherwise they cannot be apprehended. I suppose there are not less in this and Northeast Precinct than thirty of them, who keep in the woods, and are supported by their friends. Our Committees are rather more indolent than formerly, and ought to be quickened a little; as long as they pass by these people without taking notice of them, private persons will also, and those fellows robbing the publick go unpunished.

I am, sir, your most humble servant,

JOHN WHITE.

To Captain Zephaniah Platt, in Congress, at Fishkill.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Albany, September 16, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I do myself the honour to enclose you copies of General Arnold's and Colonel Dayton's letters. In consequence of the intelligence they contain, I have dismissed the Militia.

Yesterday I transmitted to Congress copies of the papers here mentioned, together with my resignation, and have advised them that I shall continue to act as usual, until such a time is elapsed in which a General Officer can be sent here, if they think it necessary that one should reside here, which I suppose could not exceed a fortnight, immediately after which I propose attending my duty in Congress.

As there is not sufficient water at this season to raft boards to this place from the mills which border on Hudson's River above this, they must be brought part of the way by land, which will considerably enhance the price, and of which I have advised the Quartermaster-General.

I am informed that the term for which De Haas's, Maxwell's, and Winds's regiments were engaged expires the beginning of October, and I fear the soldiers will not remain in the service after that. If they leave Tyonderoga it will not only weaken, but greatly dispirit our troops. I sincerely wish Congress would take some measures, if possible, to detain these people, until the season shall be so far advanced as that there will be no prospects of the enemy attempting any thing in this quarter until another year.

Your Excellency's favour of the 12th instant, Mr. Allen delivered me yesterday.

I am, dear sir, most respectfully and sincerely your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Head-Quarters, Ticonderoga, September 6, 1776, }
8 o'clock at night. }

SIR: The following is an extract of a letter this moment received from Lieutenant-Colonel Hartley, commanding-officer at Crown-Point:

"Friday, two o'clock.—There has been a very heavy cannonading down the Lake all this morning; it is undoubtedly between our fleet and the enemy, so that you may prepare accordingly. I have sent down a boat just now to know more particularly."

I am exceedingly vexed to think that it is above a month since I wrote repeatedly for musket cartridge-paper and not one sheet yet arrived. Let me entreat you to send, if not the exact sort we want, as many old books or such substitute as you can procure.

The moment I know the result of this firing down the Lake, I will acquaint you with it by express.

I am, dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
HO. GATES.

To the Hon. Major-General Schuyler.

Windmill-Point, September 7, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: I wrote you the 2d instant, from Willsborough, by Lieutenant Calderwood. The same evening anchored at Schuyler's Island, and on the 3d instant arrived safe at this place, which is four or five miles from the Isle-aux-Têtes, and seven miles from the Isle Motte. We found the Isle-aux-Têtes occupied by the enemy, and several hundred men encamped between that and us, who, the evening on our arrival, made a precipitate retreat.

I have posted my guard-boats, at a point running into the Lake, about one mile below us. The enemy's boats have several times appeared on the Lake, with a view of decoying our boats, but I have never suffered them to be pursued.

Lieutenant Whitcomb arrived here the 5th, in the evening, and went off the same night, with three men, for St. John's, on the west side. I sent off Ensign McCoy early the next morning on the east side, with three men. They are to send me intelligence from time to time. I expect to hear from them to-morrow.

Early yesterday morning the boats were ordered on shore to cut fascines, to fix on the bows and sides of the gondolas, to prevent the enemy's boarding, and to keep off small shot. One of the boats went on shore (contrary to orders) before the others were ready: they were attacked by a party of savages, who pursued them into the water. They all reached the boat, but before they could row off, three were killed and six wounded; the party was headed by a regular officer, who called to our people to resign themselves. On our firing a few shot among them, they immediately dispersed; a party was sent on shore, who found a laced beaver hat, the button marked 47th Regiment.

The Lee and gondola arrived here yesterday morning.

We are moored in a line across the Lake in such a manner it will be impossible for a batteau to pass us.

I hope the galleys are nearly completed. The force of the enemy is uncertain. However, they have this advantage, that they can man all their batteaus with soldiers whenever they think proper to attack us, and our vessels are so low that numbers may carry them by boarding; this must be attended with great loss on their side, as I am positive they will not be able to surprise us. If I find that the enemy have a considerable naval force, I design to retire to Cumberland-Head or Schuyler's Island, until joined by the three galleys, which will be superiour to all our present force. When the whole are joined, I believe the Isle Motte will be the best stand, as the enemy can bring nothing against us by land, nor will they dare to come on the Island; and by our guard-boats we can prevent any boats going from Mississqui Bay. As you have more troops at Ty than you want, will it not be prudent to send up one thousand or fifteen hundred men, who might encamp on the Isle Motte, and be ready at all times to assist us if attacked?

FIFTH SERIES.—VOL. II.

Twenty men to a batteau will be sufficient; they might load under cover of the vessels, push out and fire, and retire under cover again; and if the enemy's boats should make their principal attack on any particular vessel, those batteaus might assist her; each should be fixed for a swivel in each end, and if they are arrived, one should be fixed in them. If you should think it necessary to send a detachment, it will be necessary to bring entrenching tools, that they may cover themselves from small-arms.

We have but very indifferent men in general; great part of those who shipped for seamen know very little of the matter. Three or four good gunners are wanted.

Enclosed is a list of our sick, who increase fast. I have sent up in three batteaus twenty-three men, who will be of no service for some time. I wish fifty seamen could be procured and sent down.

I enclose you a letter from Samuel Chase, Esq. You will observe he requests an explanation of your letter to Mr. Adams. He observes my character is much injured by a report prevailing in Philadelphia of my having sequestered the goods seized in Montreal. As you have had an opportunity of hearing that matter canvassed on the trial of Colonel Hazen, I beg you will be kind enough to write your sentiments to him on the matter. I cannot but think it extremely cruel, when I have sacrificed my ease, health, and great part of my private property, in the cause of my country, to be calumniated as a robber and thief—at a time, too, when I have it not in my power to be heard in my own defence.

The 15th August, when I left Tyonderoga, the fleet was victualled for thirty days, which is elapsed except six days. We have on board the fleet six or eight days' provisions, besides twenty barrels flour, left at Crown-Point to be baked, and ten barrels pork, which I have ordered Lieutenant Calderwood to bring down, which will serve the fleet to the 20th. As the Lake is often very difficult to pass for a number of days, we ought to have at least one month's provisions on hand.

Major Grier goes up with the sick, to whom I must refer you for particulars. We are very anxious to hear from New-York; hope soon to have that pleasure by one of the galleys, which I think must be completed by this time.

Please to make my compliments to the gentlemen of your family; and believe me, with much respect, esteem, and affection, dear General, your humble servant,

B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

Isle Mott, September 8, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: When I wrote the foregoing letter, I designed sending off the batteaus last evening, but was prevented by the stormy weather. Last night the enemy was heard (by the guard-boats, and by the people on board the vessels near in shore,) on both sides of us. Several trees were felled, and lights discovered. I believe the enemy were erecting batteries, which might have injured us, as the Lake is only one and a quarter miles over; and their design was doubtless to have attacked us by land and water at the same time. I make no doubt we should have been more than a match for them, but did not think it prudent to run any risk, as it could answer no good purpose; and therefore ordered the fleet under way this morning, and at two o'clock, p. m., anchored at this place. Here the Lake is about two miles over, and safe anchorages, and effectually secure any boats passing us. Just as we came to anchor, Lieutenant Brooks came on board, sent down by Colonel Hartley, in consequence of hearing our cannon fired at the Indians on Sunday morning. I have thought it necessary to despatch him back again, that you may be out of suspense with regard to us. Four guard-boats are constantly out; the rounds go every two hours at night, and every precaution is taken to prevent being surprised.

Our men are extremely bare of clothing, and the season is coming on severe, and more so on the water than land. If a watch-coat, or blanket and one shirt, could be sent for each man, it will be of great service for them. Rum is another necessary article.

When the howitz arrive, I beg three or four of six inches may be sent us, mounted on field-carriages, with shells, &c.,

&c. Fifty swivels are much wanted; the last vessels have none.

I am, very affectionately, dear General, your obedient, humble servant,
B. ARNOLD.

To Major-General Gates.

P. S. Please to send me a few quires paper. B. A.

Fort Schuyler, September 11, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: An express has just delivered your letter, dated the 9th instant, as also one of the 2d.

As I have been waiting for more authentick intelligence than that contained in my last message, I have delayed transmitting any accounts from this post longer than otherwise would have been my duty. No parties have as yet been discovered about or near this place, so that I begin even to suspect the truth of the report in general. Since my first message from Oneida, I have endeavoured to despatch a scout of Indians, accompanied by one of my regiment, to Oswego, but could not accomplish it, the Chiefs objecting to any of our men making one of the party. At length I obtained a few Indians only to start for Oswego, and proceed there, or at least until they should meet with an enemy, who left this Fort last Monday. As they had positive orders to return immediately with all speed, should they spy an enemy between here and Oswego, and they have not yet returned, I conclude there is none on their way. When they arrive you shall speedily be furnished with their intelligence. I constantly keep a large party commanded by a trusty Captain, at the east end of the Oneida Lake, supplied with axes, so that the passages may be stopped at the approach of an enemy; but I assure you, sir, I possess very little uneasiness from any expectation of their coming. Our Fort is now very strong, our men healthy and spirited, so that I will undertake to vouch for the security of Fort Schuyler.

Captain Bloomfield, with his company, arrived here about a week ago; but I can obtain no intelligence of Captain Dickinson's company.

Enclosed I transmit you the return of my regiment for the month of September.

I am, my dear General, your most obedient, humble servant,
ELIAS DAYTON.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 16, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Enclose you a letter from General Washington. His Excellency gives me not a word of the state of the army, in one he did me the honour to write on the 12th instant. He is so immersed in business that he really has not time to lengthen a letter.

I have just received a letter from Colonel Wynkoop, who is still very much indisposed at Kingston, but hopes a speedy recovery, and will join his corps the soonest possible.

Governour Trumbull has forwarded sundry necessaries for the army, amongst which are some medicines. As you will soon command in this department, permit me, as a friend, to advise you to open, if you have not already done, a regular correspondence with that gentleman. You will find him one of those who dignifies human nature by his virtues—sincere, candid, and liberal in his sentiments. You will at once receive pleasure and profit by the intercourse.

It is said that there is an interview at Amboy between Lord Howe and a committee of Congress—Messrs. Franklin, J. Adams, and Rutledge, the members. On what occasion I do not know, for I have not heard from Congress for a long while past, although I have frequently wrote.

If General Arnold is with you, beg him to share in my best wishes. I owe him a letter, which I will repay with interest. Adieu.

Accept my best wishes, and believe me, dear General, very sincerely, your obedient, humble servant,

PH. SCHUYLER.

To the Hon. General Gates.

COLONEL VAN SCHAICK TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Albany, September 15, 1776.

SIR: Having understood that a resolution appointing Paymasters to the several regiments at present on foot, has been passed by Congress, and being well convinced of the utility thereof, and the many salutary purposes that will thereby be answered, I take the liberty to recommend to you as a fit person to officiate in that station to my regiment, Mr. Leonard Gansevoort, Jun., in whose integrity I can place the utmost confidence. I would be exceeding glad, if you should think proper to appoint him, that it might be done as soon as possible.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,
GOOSE VAN SCHAICK.

To the Hon. John Hancock.

JACOB CUYLER TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Albany, September 16, 1776.

SIR: In obedience to the order of the Committee of Safety, I did, on my arrival here yesterday morning, wait on General Schuyler with the papers to me delivered, and conferred with the General on the subject-matters; but previous to my arrival, orders were sent down to Ulster and Dutchess to stop the march of the Militia. The General mentioned to me he would write to the Convention, and give them all the intelligence both from the northward and westward. It will therefore be needless for me to say any thing on that subject. I propose to stay a few days with my family, and then to join the Convention.

I am, sir, with the greatest respect, your most obedient and most humble servant,
JACOB CUYLER.

To Abraham Yates, Esq., President of the Convention.

GENERAL GATES TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Tyonderoga, September 16, 1776.

SIR: I am just now presented with your Excellency's favour of the 10th instant by Mr. Brown. Believe, sir, it is not the want of vegetables, salt, vinegar, or any very necessary article of salt or fresh provisions, that has occasioned the sickness at Skenesborough; but the natural unwholesomeness of the place alone is the cause of all the fever and ague there, here, and upon every part of the shores of this Lake, from Skenesborough to St. John's, inclusively. This is a calamity the inhabitants suffer in common with the troops, and the enemy's troops perhaps much more than ours, as the Isle-aux-Noix and St. John's are reputed to be the most unhealthy spots upon the Lake. The same climate that affects us distresses our enemies; with this difference, that they, to my knowledge, are not half so much indulged nor have half the comforts that our troops enjoy. The provisions delivered to the troops here are excellent, and plenty reigns in our camp. The two hundred sheep sent by your Excellency will be a seasonable supply. About one hundred thousand feet of boards have been distributed to, or rather taken, by the troops that were at Skenesborough, so there has been but little distress for want of tents. The Doctor, that is cold weather, is beginning, and the intermittents will cease of course. We grow daily more and more healthy. A good bounty will give us more troops; but those should be all engaged for the war, and, if possible, officered by men who have authority, and sense to exert it properly. General Waterbury is active in fitting the three row-galleys now here; the instant that is done, they will sail under his command to join General Arnold and Colonel Wigglesworth, at Isle-aux-Motte.

I am your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,

HO. GATES.

To His Excellency Governour Trumbull.

ENSIGN WEBSTER TO GENERAL GATES.

Mount Independence, September 16, 1776.

I arrived here the night before last, but have been so ill of the ague was not able to come to your Honour to make my report, which I hope you will excuse. I left Lieutenant Whitcomb at Rangers' Island, near the Isle-au-Motte, where I was sick, and not being able to follow him, when I got some better I proceeded towards Head-Quarters. I discovered one batteau loaded with men, and four bark canoes. They were dressed in blanket coats, as near as I could judge.

As soon as I am able to move, will wait upon your Honour and inform you of all I have seen.

I am your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
 AMOS WEBSTER,
Ensign Colonel Wait's Regiment.

To Major-General Gates.

GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Lebanon, August 16, 1776.

SIR: Major-General Schuyler has requested that two hundred seamen may be raised in this State to man the vessels on the Lake. As most of our seamen are marched with the Militia to join your army, I have to ask the favour of you to permit Captain David Hawley and Captain Frederick Chappel to enlist such number of seamen out of our Militia as may be necessary for that service.

I am, sir, with great respect, your obedient, humble servant,
 JONTH. TRUMBULL.

To His Excellency General Washington.

Norwich, September 16, 1776.

Last week returned from Long-Island the Norwich Light Infantry company, commanded by Christopher Leffingwell, Esq., and seemed well pleased in having been instrumental in assisting and relieving a number of the distressed inhabitants, and removing them from thence to New-England, with their families and effects.

We learn by a gentleman from Long-Island, that it gave the distressed inhabitants great satisfaction to see our men in such high spirits when they were assisting them to embark with their families and effects; that a number of the worthy inhabitants, who still remain on that Island, are willing to embrace the first opportunity and move off with their families, &c., as they are in great fear of the enemy, who are daily expected.

CLARK AND NIGHTINGALE TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Providence, September 16, 1776.

SIR: Last week we received a letter from Captain William Rogers, commander of the sloop Montgomery, in the service of your State, requesting us to undertake the agency, and act in behalf of the State and himself, in libelling one brig, which was returning from a whaling voyage with about three hundred barrels oil, and had been taken by the English, carried into New-York, and acquitted by them, and afterwards taken by Captain Rogers, in company with the privateers Schuyler and Mifflin, and sent in here. The commander and Continental Agent in behalf of the other two privateers (which are fitted out by the Continent) gave the brig up, as there were no papers appeared by which they could condemn her, and they produced a certificate, a copy of which you have enclosed, of their permission to sail at the time they did. As matters were thus circumstanced, we imagined it would be in vain to libel her, when the others, who were two thirds concerned, saw no prospect of condemning her; and after consulting with the Prize-master, we declined prosecuting. The other is a Bermudian sloop, which was taken with intrenching tools on board. The tools are taken out and were sent to General Washington, and they put a quantity of flour on board from some other of their prizes. She is libelled, and will be tried the 1st of October next, and as there is no claimer, she will of course be condemned. We shall now await your orders in what manner to proceed, as she was taken in company with the above-mentioned privateers, and shall be glad to hear from you as soon as possible. We are, in the mean time, with due respect, sir, your most obedient servants,

CLARK & NIGHTINGALE.

To the Chairman of the Congress of the State of New-York.

P. S. Enclosed with the certificate you have the affair of the brig stated by the lawyer.

THE CASE OF THE BRIGANTINE TEMPLE.

It appears by her papers that she was owned by William Rotch, of Nantucket, and cleared out there on a whaling voyage the 26th May, 1775, in common form, but did not sail till the last of October following.

After her clearing and before her sailing, to wit, in the month of August, the following resolve passed in the House of Representatives of the Massachusetts-Bay and concurred with by the Council: "That from and after the 15th day of this instant, August, no ship or vessel shall sail out of any port of this Colony on any whaling voyage whatever, without leave first had from the Great and General Court of this Colony, or from some committee or committees or persons they shall appoint to grant such leave." The brig sailed from Nantucket under the command of Joshua Morris, some time the last of October, for the coast of Brazil, on a whaling voyage, and upon her passage home, having about three hundred barrels of oil on board, she was taken by a British man-of-war and carried into Sandy-Hook, and after being detained a few days was dismissed with a pass from Admiral Howe to proceed to Nantucket. Soon after she left the Hook, to wit, on the 20th of August, 1776, she was taken by the Continental sloop of war called the Mifflin and the Schuyler, and by the sloop Montgomery, fitted out by the State of New-York, and carried into the harbour on the south side of Long-Island, where she lay till the British troops got possession of Long-Island, when the captors sent her into this port to be libeled.

At the time of capture she had on board no certificate that she had obtained leave to go on a whaling voyage; but since her arrival here, her owner, from Nantucket, has sent the following certificate, to wit:

"Treasury Office, September 28, 1775.

"I hereby certify that William Rotch hath given bond according to the direction of the General Assembly of this Colony, in order to send on a whaling voyage the brig Temple, Joshua Morris master.

HENRY GARDNER, Treasurer."

Quere—Whether it is advisable to libel the brig or no?

Newport, Monday, September 16, 1776.

The sloop ———, Captain Lever, belonging to New-York, arrived at Dartmouth, last Thursday, in seven weeks from France, by whom we learn that American vessels find a very free trade there, and that the French only waited for a declaration of independence from this country, when they were determined to strike some capital blow.

We learn by the above vessel that the carpenters were so closely engaged in the ship-yards, she could not procure a single hand to do one day's work on her; that Mr. Deane, from the honourable the General Congress, was at the French Court, and that letters for the Congress from him came in this vessel, which were despatched forward last Friday morning.

On the 3d of August Captain Nathan Bull, of this place, and Mr. Gideon Coggeshall, of Middletown, with twelve other Americans, made their escape from Halifax in an open boat, in which they came round Cape Sable, crossed the Bay of Fundy, and arrived at Beverly on the 14th of August, from whence Captain Bull was brought to town by land last Wednesday, in a very low state of health; by whom, and Mr. Coggeshall, we learn that Halifax was left without one ship of war; that the whole force they can raise there would amount but to fifteen hundred men; that a little before they came away a number of transports arrived from England, which brought out three hundred head of cattle, but ninety-three of which lived through the passage, and those miserably thin.

The fore part of last week the Cerberus, frigate, retook a prize brig between Block-Island and Norman's Land; this prize was one of Dunmore's motley squadron, bound to Bermuda, with a number of passengers, some household furniture and dry goods, from Virginia, and was taken by the Andrew Doria, Captain Biddle, close in with the Island; the people put on board to bring her in, made their escape in the boat, and landed at Block-Island, from whence they came to this place.

Captain Samson, in a brig belonging to Plymouth, has sent a sloop into an Eastern port, loaded with rum and cotton, bound for Halifax.

Three brigs loaded with rum, sugar, and molasses, arrived in some neighbouring port since the 9th; and it is said the ship loaded with fifteen thousand bushels of wheat, taken by the Andrew Doria, is arrived a little way to the Eastward.

Last Tuesday a fine large brig, loaded with about two hundred and forty hogsheads of rum, &c., went up the east passage; she was taken by the sloop Revenge, from Swansey, Captain Samuel Dunn, who was reported to have been taken.

The Hon. Gurdon Saltonstall, of Connecticut, is appointed Brigadier-General of the Eastern Militia of that State, and is marched with the whole of said Militia for New-York.

Abington, June 10, 1776.

Watertown, September 16, 1776.

Last Sunday se'nnight was taken and carried into Goldsborough, by two small boats, a brig from Ireland, bound for Halifax, laden with beef, butter, &c. She parted company with twelve other provision vessels the day on which she was taken, all bound for the above port.

List of Prizes lately taken and carried into the WEST-INDIES, by some of the Ministerial Pirates.

The brigantine Hester, John Marshall, master, belonging to New-York, was taken on the coast of Africa, the 12th of May, 1776, and carried into Antigua, by the sloop Weazel, Samuel Warren, commander, the 12th of June. Her cargo consisted of ivory, wax, dry goods, and wood.

The brig Duff, Captain Knapp, from Guadaloupe, bound to Newfoundland, with rum, sugar, and molasses, was carried into Bassaterre Road the 3d of May, by the Pomona, sloop of war, Captain Eastward.

May 8th.—Brig Hero, Captain Jones, from Saba, in stone ballast, taken off Eustatia, by the Pomona, arrived at St. Kitts this day.

May 10th.—The sloop Two-Brothers, Sandford Thompson, master, from Ocracock, for St. Croix, with white oak staves and heading, taken by the Pomona, arrived at St. Kitts this day.

June 19th.—The sloop Fanny, Captain Worth, from the coast of Braziletto, bound to St. Eustatia, laden with spermaceti oil, &c., arrived at St. Kitts. She was taken by the Pomona.

June 20th.—The sloop Prince of Orange, Eber Waterous, master, from Guadaloupe, laden with sulphur and a small quantity of powder, taken by the Pomona, and sent up to Antigua.

June 23d.—The brig Regicobus, Captain Booker, from St. Eustatia, bound to Amsterdam, laden with sugar and coffee, but it is imagined she has a quantity of powder and warlike stores in sugar casks, taken off St. Eustatia by the Pomona, arrived at St. Kitts this day.

Taken by the Portland, Thomas Dumaesque, Esq., commander, two days after he left the fleet he was convoy for, and carried into Antigua, the sloop Sally, of ninety tons, Giles Buckingham, master, from Philadelphia, bound to St. Croix, taken in latitude 24° north, longitude 62° 30' west. Her cargo consists of six hundred and fifty barrels of flour, three hundred kegs of white biscuit, a few barrels of beef and pork, a great quantity of staves and heading; also, a new four-wheeled wagon, with iron axletrees, brass bushes for the wheels, and harness complete.

Two days after was taken by the Portland's tender, and carried into Antigua, the brig Resolution, of two hundred and fifty tons, Robert Stacy, master, from Piscataqua, bound to Martinico, laden with lumber: When she was taken she was in musket-shot of Port-Royal harbour.

July 17th.—The schooner Fox, ——— Buck, master, from New-London, for Curaco, taken by the Seaford, Captain Colepoice, arrived at St. Kitts this day.

Also the brig Betsey, ——— Dresser, master, from North-Carolina, for St. Eustatia, laden with lumber, taken by the Pomona.

July 19th.—Sloop Maria, Captain Gurley, from St. Croix, for St. Eustatia; her cargo consists of twenty-one hogsheads rum; taken by the Pomona.

A sloop from New-London, with oxen, horses, and lumber, taken by the Pomona, sent into Tortola.

And the sloop ———, Captain Hutterfield, from St. Eustatia, for Bermuda, laden with rum, taken by the Pomona.

The firing heard last Sunday morning was occasioned by the safe arrival of a fine prize ship of three hundred tons, at Cape Ann. The contents of her cargo at present unknown to us.

ORDERS FOR COLONEL BELLOWES.

Exeter, New-Hampshire, September 16, 1776.

SIR: Orders were yesterday sent off from hence to you, for your raising fifty men in your regiment, to recruit our Army at New-York, and three hundred pounds in money to pay them six pounds each. Upon a review of the matter this day, considering the frontier state of your regiment, it is determined that you omit raising the men at present; and as one Captain John House, of Hanover, hath received orders to raise a company of volunteers for said service, you are appointed Mustermaster to said company, and to pay each able-bodied, effective man he inlists six pounds; and if he should inlist more than fifty men, you are desired to advance the money, and your draft therefor shall be honoured; but if he should not be able to inlist so many as fifty men, it is expected you will make up that number out of your regiment. You are desired to acquaint Captain House of your being appointed Mustermaster to his company.

By order of the Council and Assembly.
I am your very humble servant.

To Colonel Benjamin Bellows, Jun.

ORDERS TO COLONEL JOHN LANGDON.

State of NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

To JOHN LANGDON, Esquire, Colonel of an independent Company of Militia in the Town of PORTSMOUTH:
Pursuant to a resolve of Council and Assembly, in consequence of a requisition of the Continental Congress, you are hereby required, with all the despatch possible, to raise, and see equipped, out of the company under your command, three men, and join them to those that shall be raised in Colonel Whipple's regiment, to recruit the Army of the United States of America at New-York, to assist our brethren there; and you are to let them know that they are to be detained in said service until the first day of December next, unless sooner discharged. The men are to receive twenty dollars on their being mustered, and with that the bounty to be made equal to the bounty of the Massachusetts State afterwards; that the wages of the men be the same, and their rations the same, as in the Continental Army; that the men be paid two pence per mile for their travelling expenses from their place of residence to New-York.

You are to make return of your doings to the General Assembly, and, in their recess, to the Committee of Safety.

Given at Exeter, the 16th day of September, 1776.

BENJAMIN GYLES,

Chairman of a Committee appointed for that purpose.
To Colonel Langdon.

State of New-Hampshire, Portsmouth, September 28, 1776.

Agreeable to the within requisition to me directed, the company under my command have raised three men, viz: Benjamin Dockum, Benjamin Dockum, Jun., and Jonathan Kenneston, all able men, and equipped with one good musket each, which are to be charged to them, or returned to the Colony; the price of which three guns is twenty-three dollars.

JOHN LANGDON.

Portsmouth, September 23, 1776.

The brigantine Three-Friends, burthen about eighty tons, mounting eight carriages, owned by Philip Moore and John Donaldson, of the city of Philadelphia, in the State of Pennsylvania, merchants, and Archibald Mercer, of the town of Brunswick, in the State of New-Jersey, merchant, commanded by Captain Daniel Jackson, and Henry Nutter, Mate, navigated by twenty men, with twenty barrels provisions and four hundred weight powder and ball.

JOHN DONALDSON & Co.

ORDERS FOR CAPTAIN PARKER.

To Captain ROBERT PARKER:

You are hereby empowered to inlist a company of Matrosses, to consist of forty-four men, including officers, to guard and defend the battery on Levey's Island, for the term of one month, unless it should appear expedient to the Congress, or this Committee, to dismiss them sooner. And you are hereby acquainted that they shall receive, for the time they shall be in the service, the same wages as Captain Salter's company. And you will take care to inlist no man but what is properly accoutred.

SILAS DEANE TO ROBERT MORRIS.

Bordeaux, September 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: I shall send you, in October, clothing for twenty thousand men, thirty thousand fusils, one hundred tons of powder, two hundred brass cannon, twenty-four brass mortars, with shells, shot, lead, &c., in proportion.

I am to advise you, that if, in future, you will give commissions to seize Portuguese ships, you may depend on the friendship and alliance of Spain. Let me urge this measure. Much may be got, nothing can be lost, by it. Increase, at all events, your Navy. I will procure, if commissioned, any quantity of sail-cloth and cordage.

A general war is undoubtedly at hand in Europe, and consequently America will be safe, if you baffle the arts and arms of the two Howes through the Summer. Every one here is in your favour.

Adieu! I will write again next week.

SILAS DEANE.

To Robert Morris.

LETTER FROM THE HAGUE TO A GENTLEMAN IN LONDON,
DATED SEPTEMBER 17, 1776.

Sir Joseph Yorke has made application to the States of Holland to forbid the Americans entering any of their ports in the West-Indies, and also the carrying on any trade whatsoever with them. The answer given to Sir Joseph is said to be this: That Holland only considered itself as a commercial country, and that any check to its trade must be severely felt by its inhabitants; that the West-Indies received great part of their support from the Continent of America, which it would be very ill policy in them to put a stop to; and indeed would be almost impossible, as hardly any commands would tie a people down when they were in want of provisions; and that Sir Joseph might assure his Court that they had hitherto, and would still continue, to prevent any military stores being furnished to the Americans from any part of the dominions belonging to the States. The present trade with the Americans is exceedingly beneficial to them.

Deep-Spring Camp, September 17, 1776.

Deserted last night from my company of Riflemen, the following soldiers, viz: Josiah Jones, about twenty-two years old, six feet two inches high, well made, has short black hair, a very lively countenance, and when intoxicated very talkative and desirous of raising disputes; he carried away with him a hunting-shirt trimmed with red, a pair of leather breeches, several new shirts, and other things which I cannot recollect at present. David Barnett, aged twenty-one years, six feet four inches high, well made, has short black hair, a thin visage, (occasioned by the ague and fever, which he had when he deserted,) is very serious, and speaks but seldom; he carried with him a hunting-shirt trimmed with red, a pair of leather breeches, a pair of new shoes, and several yards of linen, which I had delivered to him about two days before he deserted. Joseph Canterbury, aged twenty-eight years, five feet ten inches high, well made, has short red hair, a reddish complexion, and a dejected look; he carried along with him a hunting-shirt trimmed with red, a gray-coloured broadcloth waistcoat and breeches, a pair of black stockings, two pair of shoes, and several yards of linen, which I delivered to him a few days before he deserted. They went off indebted to the publick store, and were raised and inlisted in Amherst, where I expect they will endeavour to get. Whoever will deliver the said deserters to the commanding officer in Williamsburg, or safely contrive them to the Sixth Virginia Regiment at New-York, shall have £4 10s. for each, and all reasonable expenses paid.

SAMUEL JORDAN CABELL,

Captain in the Sixth Virginia Regiment.

COLONEL STAINSTON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Caroline County, September 17, 1776.

SIR: Agreeable to the requisition of the Convention, made to the Field-Officers of this County, to endeavour to get a company made up to march for New-York, I thought it necessary to convene the Twenty-Eighth Battalion of Militia on Saturday last for that purpose; and after meeting in the usual field of parade, the several companies were drawn up, except the company under the command of Captain John Fauntleroy. I then requested he would draw up his company, who made me for answer, that he had but a few officers in the field, and that he should not draw up under me as the commander of the field.

Captain Fauntleroy's reasons for not joining the battalion I do not certainly know, but after the battalion was dismissed, I am credibly informed, he endeavoured to see who would join him against me; for what purpose I do not know, unless to treat me ill.

As it appears to me, sir, that he is a disobedient officer, and possibly was I to look over this injury to the common cause it might prove to be of bad consequences, besides under these circumstances my person as well as character may not be altogether safe, and in order, sir, that peace and harmony may again take place, I pray that a Court-Martial may be appointed by your Board for the trial of Captain Fauntleroy, in order to find out what I am to be accused with, and that he or myself may meet with the instant demerits we deserve.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

BENSON STAINSTON.

To Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esquire, President of Council of Safety.

ALEXANDER MCFADON TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Georgetown, September 17, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: I received your favour of the 8th instant, and duly observe the contents, wherein you request to know the steps I have taken to fulfill my engagements with the publick, what progress I have made, and what returns. The steps I have taken are as follows, viz: I have, at a very considerable expense, prepared a house that will contain sixteen looms and all other utensils for carrying on the weaving business. I shall by the last of next week have up eight looms, and as soon as I can procure hands will set up the remainder. I have purchased looms, hired journeymen, taken apprentices, &c. I have erected a mill for bruising and mangling flax, the best on the Continent. I have purchased a quantity of flax, and employed spinners, and expect in a short time to have it in my power to finish one hundred yards of linen per day, which the Convention may have, provided they will give me as much as I can sell my linen for. By receiving letters from the Council of Safety that they are much wanting coarse linen for tenting and sheeting, I carried two hundred and thirty-nine and a half yards to Annapolis the week before last, and by the valuation the Committee put on it I lost from six to ten pounds of what I could have sold it for here, notwithstanding they confessed they had not received as good linen from any other factory. This is publick punishment, in place of publick encouragement. With regard to the progress I have made in manufacturing, it is so well known to the most of the gentlemen in this part of the Province; and some of the members in Convention know I have brought manufacturing of linen to greater perfection than has ever before been done in the Province, and am able to bring it to as good perfection, both in fineness and whitening, as any imported, provided I meet with proper encouragement.

I am, with the greatest respect, gentlemen, your very humble servant,

ALEXANDER MCFADON.

To the Committee for inquiring into Manufactory.

BENJAMIN RUMSEY TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Joppa, September 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In the last letter wrote you by the Harford Committee, of which I was late a member, I was desired by them to inform you of their transactions in a particular department under the signature of the Chairman, and also of their dissolution, which they in consequence notified to the people by advertisements set up in the most publick places in the County.

Since my writing the above I received a letter from Mr. Ashmead, in which he informs me he had sent down to Harford the remainder of his guns and blankets, and also the enclosed account proved, which closes the affair of the £300, and there remains in my hands a balance of £10 18s. 1d.

No expectations can be formed of our Committee's acting longer without a new election. They universally looked upon the Convention's continuing them beyond the time for which they were elected by the people to be unconstitutional, and laying a foundation and precedent for one of the most alarming stretches of power—the continuation of some future Convention or publick body for many years. This was their opinion before the resolve of the Convention. I have no right to think it changed.

In obedience to the commands of the Convention, I called my battalion together on Monday last, and on reading their resolves, three Captains in the battalion, with their commissioned officers, to wit: Captain James McComas, Captain Alexander Cowen, and Captain Robert Harris, the first with thirty-one, the others with thirty of their privates, offered to serve their country agreeable to the resolves of the Convention; and to-day the Field-Officers meet in order to decide who shall go, and believe the lot will fall on Captain Harris, as he is a single man, of spirit, very desirous of going, and the farthest from the water and internal enemies, in case of an attack.

I should be glad to know of you if the arms and blankets in this County collected and now at Harford, could be spared for the use of the company in my battalion. It will be necessary to inform me immediately, and also to give Hollingsworth orders to make bayonets for them. They can be sent there directly, and before they march I think I can have the residue with some difficulty got from the people in the same manner they were collected by the Committee.

Money being the life of all business and the sinews of war, it will be absolutely necessary to send up immediately and lodge in the hands of some one of this battalion a sum of money large enough to discharge the bounty and month's pay advance, and also gun and blanket money.

I returned from our place of meeting to attend six companies to-morrow at Deer-Creek, to assist our Captain in completing his company, and to endeavour to inspire as many as I can with a love of their country, and desire to serve her, and assure those that enlist with their speedy getting the money, though it would have the most charms if glittering in their sight.

Tents will be necessary. The soldiers that will go will chiefly be farmers and their sons. What price per yard will the Province pay if they find it, or can the Council of Safety furnish all the troops?

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

BENJAMIN RUMSEY.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

COLONEL BUCHANAN TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Lexington, Baltimore County, September 17, 1776.

SIR: In compliance with yours of the 8th, (and the resolves of Convention therein referred to,) a meeting of the Field-Officers of Colonel Tolly's, and the Baltimore Town Battalions, with the Committees of Observation, was held on Friday last, by appointment previously advertised, for the purpose of nominating officers for two companies of Militia to march immediately for New-York, which nomination was accordingly made.

On Saturday I met my battalion to publish the same, and solicit volunteers. They were very backward in offering, until some officers of the companies turned out. This in some degree roused the ranks, and enabled the officers of three companies to get a considerable number of their men to offer to go. I met all these officers yesterday in town; each tells me he has engaged some; on the whole, I think about a number sufficient for one company, mostly of this battalion; and say if they had money to discharge the bounty advance and purchase of arms, they have no doubt of succeeding. Here we wait not only the money, but also for an explanation respecting the offers of companies, whether they are to be confined to two, and therefore supercede our nomination, or whether all volunteer companies, together with the two by us nominated, are to be taken into pay, not that I have the least expectation that the whole County can turn out more than the two companies properly equipped, in good time, one of which we would have a good chance of effecting by consolidating the three offering companies of my battalion, with one of those nominated.

I know not whether I have been right in telling the volunteers that so high a bounty is given to enable each to equip himself with a blanket as well as other necessities for their immediate march. This, however, will be the most expeditious method of procuring blankets, should they be paid for by the State, which is by some expected. The bearer, Captain Teams, one of our nominated Captains, will be a good opportunity to send money by for this business; he waits upon you for that purpose; and further instructions therein, to,

Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

WM. BUCHANAN.

To Hon. Matthew Tilghman, Esq., President of the Convention of Maryland.

P. S. Some directions for the subsistence of the troops are also wanting.

JOSEPH HEWES TO SAMUEL PURVIANCE.

Philadelphia, September 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: Agreeable to my promise to your brother, I now send a printed article for seamen. You will observe the wages allowed to able seamen, is eight dollars per month; ordinary seamen and landsmen, six dollars and two-thirds of a dollar, per month.

I am respectfully, dear sir, your most obedient servant,

JOSEPH HEWES.

To Samuel Purviance, Esq.

PHILADELPHIA COMMITTEE.

In Committee of Inspection and Observation for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, September 17, 1776:

On motion, it was unanimously

Resolved, That the Committee of Inspection and Observation for the City and Liberties of Philadelphia, and the Townships of Moyamensing and Passyunk, be dissolved, and they are hereby dissolved. The Committee of Accounts, and for the Distribution of Salt, to be continued until the business for which they were appointed be finally settled.

Extract from the minutes:

SAMUEL C. MORRIS, Secretary.

Committee of Accounts.

Philadelphia, September 25, 1776.

All persons who have any accounts against the late Committee of Inspection for this City and Liberties, are desired to bring them in immediately to any one of the subscribers, in order for settlement. It is expected that every demand will be furnished by the 15th day of October next, at which time they intend completing this business.

JOHN BAYARD,
JONATHAN B. SMITH,
JOSEPH DEAN,
SHARP DELANY,
FRANCIS GURNEY,
CHRISTOPHER MARSHALL,
WILLIAM BALL, and
SAMUEL C. MORRIS,
Committee of Accounts.

LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA, COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Committee of Observation and Inspection, and Observation and Correspondence, at the house of Adam Reigart, the 17th of September, 1776, Present: William Ailee, William Bowsman, Lodwick Lowman, Adam Reigart, John Miller, Andrew Graff, Christopher Crawford, Henry Dehuff, George Moore, Sebastian Graff. William Ailee in the Chair.

Resolved, That Mr. George Moore, bricklayer, be employed, and he is engaged, to build the addition to the Barracks of Brick and Stone: the first or Cellar story of Stone, and the residue of Brick; that he be allowed for the stone-work at the rate of four shillings per perch, and at the rate of twelve shillings and sixpence per thousand for the brick-work; he, as usual, to find his own workman and labourers.

Robert Dixon, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Jacob Kehler, wheelwright, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the Resolves of the Committee.

Resolved, That the Bricks of the additional Buildings at the Barracks be had of Peter Albright, Lewis Peters, and George Lindelberger, in equal proportions, and each of them are requested to deliver twenty thousand Bricks as expeditiously as possible, for which they are to be allowed twenty-two shillings and sixpence per thousand, delivered at the Barracks.

John Rycraft, of the Seventh Regiment, is permitted to work with Sebastian Graff, he here in Committee engaging to be answerable for him, agreeable to the Resolves of the Committee.

SPEAKER OF THE ASSEMBLY OF NEW-JERSEY TO RICHARD STOCKTON, DELEGATE IN CONGRESS.

[Read September 23, 1776. Copy sent to General Mercer.]

Prince Town, September 19, 1776.

SIR: I take the liberty of enclosing you an extract of a letter from Amboy, from a gentleman who is a true friend to this country, and hearty in the American cause; and also a resolve of our House of Assembly, sent you by order of the House. The inconveniences the inhabitants of Amboy now labour under are daily increasing; therefore the House beg you and our other Delegates will please to use your utmost endeavours to get the grievances complained of redressed as speedily as possible, by appointing some person in that town, and others where troops lay, who are well acquainted with the business, to furnish them with sufficient quantities of fire-wood.

I am, with respect, sir, your most humble servant,

By order of the House: JOHN HART, Speaker.

Resolve of the Assembly.

Resolved, That the President write to General Mercer, enclose him extracts of the Letter from the Speaker of New-Jersey, and the enclosed Letter from Amboy, and that General Mercer be desired to take such steps as shall effectually introduce order and remove the complaints of the inhabitants of the State of Jersey.

Extract of a Letter from AMBOY, dated September 16, 1776.

I would suggest the House to immediately make some law for protecting the little property still left in this town; the means must leave to them, but wood is the grand article. I think a provider in this town, for wood only, would be a great means of removing the complaint here, and there might be one in every town from this to the northward, as far as the camp goes. Leaving it to Quartermasters, living in other Governments, entire strangers to the method of procuring that article here, has been one great cause of complaint; but the season of the year and scarcity of hands to cut wood, it being salt hay time and sowing time, have greatly helped on the distress. The destruction and havoc made here with fences and houses, is great; another reason of our distress is, that the teams, when they bring wood, are impressed and detained in the service, which prevents them coming to town with wood, &c.

House of Assembly, September 19, 1776.

Mr. Manning, one of the members of Middlesex, informed the House, that from certain information by him received, the inhabitants of Amboy are great sufferers by their houses and fences being destroyed by the troops now there, owing in a great measure for the want of proper persons being appointed for purchasing a sufficient quantity of wood.

Resolved, That the Speaker do write a Letter to the Delegates for this State at the Continental Congress, desiring they will endeavour to have Samuel Serjeant, Esq., or some other suitable person or persons in Amboy to furnish the Troops with fire-wood, in order that the property of the inhabitants and that peace may be in future preserved, and the grievances complained of remedied.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE OF THE COUNCIL OF THE STATE OF NEW-JERSEY.

State of New-Jersey, Council Chamber, September 19, 1776.

Your Committee, appointed to meet a Committee of the House of Assembly, in a free conference on the subject-matter of a memorial from the Committee of Elizabethtown, and a letter from Brigadier-General Williamson, respecting a supply of ammunition, and the pay of the Militia called into actual service, beg leave to report:

That the said Committees having met in conference, according to order; and having read and considered the said Memorial and Letter, came to sundry resolutions, which are as follows, viz:

1. Resolved, That the publick Magazine of Ammunition kept for the use of the Militia, at or near Elizabethtown, is nearly exhausted; and that it is necessary that provision should be immediately made for replenishing the said Magazine.

2. Resolved, That it is proper that his Excellency be requested to procure an immediate supply of one ton of Gunpowder for the use of the Militia; and that he be empowered to draw from the Treasury of this State, as much money as may be necessary for the purchase and carriage of the same.

3. Resolved, That large bodies of the Militia of this State have been called out, at sundry times, in the Continental service; and that for the want of a proper mode having been established for the pay of the said Militia, many inconveniences have arisen, and are daily increasing; Therefore,

4. Resolved, That it is proper that his Excellency the Governour be requested to make application to the honourable the Continental Congress, and desire that they will be pleased to direct the immediate payment of such of the Militia of this State, as have been called out in the service of the Continent, and to establish some mode for the regular and punctual payment of such of the Militia of this State as shall hereafter be called into the said service.

By order of the Committee:

JOHN COOPER, Chairman.

A true Copy: CHAS. PETTIT, Clerk of the Council.

AFFIDAVIT OF ELIZABETH FRANKLIN.

Province of New-Jersey, City of PERTH-AMBOY:

Personally appeared before me, Samuel Sergeant, Esq., one of the Aldermen of said city, Mrs. Elizabeth Franklin, of the same place, and she being duly sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, on her oath doth depose and declare that she has no knowledge at all of the books of the Council of said Province, papers relative thereto, or chest in which they were said to be contained. That she never did see but one of the books, which was last May, at a time the Council were sitting. That Governour Franklin did, some time before he was made prisoner, as he informed this deponent, send away or secure some things; but she knows not what they were, or where sent. That she is an utter stranger as to the place where said books, papers, &c., now are, and verily believes they are not in the house where she now resides; and further saith not.

ELIZABETH FRANKLIN.

Sworn this 17th of September, 1776,

Before me: SAMUEL SERGEANT, Alderman.

GENERAL MERCER TO GENERAL WASHINGTON.

Perth-Amboy, September 17, 1776, 4 P. M.

SIR: I received just now the favour of Colonel Grayson's letter of yesterday, and in consequence shall send off a detachment of the men inlisted for the Flying-Camp to Paulus-Hook. The Militia of Pennsylvania and New-Jersey, stationed on Bergen and at Paulus-Hook, have behaved in a scandalous manner, running off from their posts on the first cannonade from the ships of the enemy. At all the posts we find it difficult to keep the Militia to their duty.

By some accounts received to-day, the enemy met with a repulse from your troops. I beg leave to congratulate your Excellency on the success, and hope it will animate our army to act more generally with the spirit of freemen.

I have the honour to be your Excellency's most obedient servant,

H. MERCER.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

*Head-Quarters, at Colonel Morris's House, }
September 17, 1776. }*

SIR: I received the honour of your favour of the 6th instant by Messrs. Collins, Babcock, and Stanton, and should have acknowledged it before now had I not been prevented by the peculiar situation of our affairs.

I communicated my sentiments to those gentlemen upon the subject of your letter and the several propositions that were before me, who, I doubt not, will make a full and due report of the same to you and your honourable Assembly; however, I shall take the liberty of adding, that the divided state of our army, which, when collected in one body, is inferior to that of the enemy, their having landed almost the whole of their force on Long-Island, and formed a plan of cutting off all communication between that and the city of New-York, which we had but too good reasons to believe practicable and easy to effect with their ships of war, made it necessary and prudent to withdraw our troops off from the former, that our chance of resistance and opposition might be more probable and likely to be attended with a happy issue.

I feel myself much concerned on account of your apprehensions for the town of Newport and the Island of Rhode-Island, and should esteem myself peculiarly happy were it in my power to afford means for their security, and that of the State in general, or to point out such measures as would be effectual for that purpose. But, circumstanced as I am, it is not possible for me to grant any assistance; nor can I, with propriety, undertake to prescribe the mode which will best promote their defence. This must depend on such a variety of circumstances, that I should suppose you and the Assembly, who are in the State, will be much more competent to the task than what I or any person out of it can be; therefore, I can only recommend that you will pursue such steps as you in your judgment shall think most conducive to that end, observing that it appears to me a matter of extreme difficulty, if practicable, to prevent the enemy's ships doing damage to every island accessible to 'em, unless the passes between them and the main are so narrow as to oblige them to come very near such batteries as may be erected for their annoyance, on commanding ground.

I cannot sufficiently express my thanks for the readiness you and your Assembly manifested in ordering troops, &c., to Long-Island, on hearing my request to Governour Trumbull upon that subject. At the time that I made it, I considered the plan of much importance, and that many valuable and salutary consequences might have resulted from it. But as things have undergone a material change since, it may not be improper to consider and be satisfied of some facts, which ought to be clearly known previous to any attempt to carry it into execution, and on which the success of it will greatly depend; such as an entire conviction of the friendly disposition of the inhabitants on the island; the number that would join the troops that might be sent over; the lengths they would go; the support they would and can give, and whether a retreat from thence could be safely afforded in case it should be necessary. Those matters, and others which a more minute consideration of the plan will present to your view, should be well weighed and digested, and which I thought it my duty to mention, especially as the scheme had originated with me. My anxiety and concern for the inhabitants at the east end of the island, who have been represented always as friendly and well attached to the cause of the States, prompt me to wish them every assistance. But if the efforts you could make, in conjunction with Governour Trumbull, would not promise almost a certainty of success, perhaps they might tend to aggravate their misfortunes. The Committee stated sundry propositions respecting this expedition: such as, if any thing was attempted, where a stand should be made? This must be left to the discretion of those who command; nor can I spare an officer for that purpose or recommend one. What number of men should be sent, and what proportion from the Massachusetts? The number necessary will depend upon the force they will have to oppose, and the assistance they would derive from the Islanders; the proportion from the Massachusetts, on the will of the Legislature or voluntary engagement of the people in the service. What artillery should they have? I am of opinion the artillery would be subject to loss, without any great advantage resulting from it. They also asked whether any frigates should be sent, &c. As the enemy have now the free and entire command of the Sound, and many ships of war in it, they will be much more liable to be taken than they would have been some time ago, and when it was proposed by Governour Trumbull to make an attempt upon the ships above Hell-Gate. In this instance, however, I do not conceive myself at liberty to say any thing peremptory one way or other, having no power over the frigates.

I am sensible of the force of your observation, that the common cause might be benefited by the several States receiving early and authentick intelligence of every material occurrence; permit me at the same time to assure you, that I often regret my incapacity in this instance, and that the neglect does not arise from want of inclination or through inattention, but from the variety of important matters that are always pressing upon, and which daily surround me.

Before I conclude, I shall take this opportunity to inform you that having received certain information that the enemy's plan was, to pass from Long-Island and land in our rear with their army to cut off all communication with the country, and for which they were making every possible disposition, a council of General Officers determined last week on a removal of the army from the city, in order to prevent the fatal consequences which must inevitably ensue, if they could have conducted their scheme, resolving at the same time that every appearance of defence should be kept up till our sick, ordnance, and stores could be removed. This was set about with the greatest industry, and as to the sick was completely effected; but on Sunday morning before we had accomplished the removal of all our cannon, provisions and baggage, they sent three ships of war up the North River, whereby the water carriage was totally stopped, the ships anchoring not far above the city, and about eleven o'clock those that were lying at Turtle Bay, or rather below it in the East River, being six or seven in number, besides some transports, began and continued for some time a most severe and heavy cannonade, to scour the grounds and cover the landing of their troops. I had gone the night before to the main body of the army, which was posted on the Plains and Heights of Harlem, apprehending from many uncommon and great movements among the enemy, that they meant to make an attack there that night, or to land on the east side of Harlem River. As soon as the firing began I rode with all possible despatch towards the place of landing, where breastworks had been thrown up, and to my great surprise and mortification found the troops that had been posted in the lines, retreating with the utmost precipitation and disorder, and those ordered to support them notwithstanding the exertions of their Brigadiers (Parsons and Fellows) to form them, running away in the most disgraceful and shameful manner, nor could my utmost efforts rally them or prevent their flight. This scandalous conduct occasioned a loss of several tents and other baggage, which otherwise would have been easily secured. The remainder of the troops that were in the city got out, and the retreat of the whole was effected with the loss of but very few men; not more than three or four that I have heard of were made prisoners, and only one or two killed.

I am now encamped on the Heights above mentioned, which are so well calculated for defence, that I should hope that if the enemy make an attack, and our men will behave with tolerable resolution, they must meet with a repulse, if not a total defeat. They advanced in sight yesterday in several large bodies, but attempted nothing of a general nature, though in the forenoon there were some smart skirmishes between some of their parties and detachments sent out by me, in which I have the pleasure to inform you our men behaved with bravery and intrepidity, putting them to flight when in open ground, and forcing them from posts they had seized, two or three times. From some of their wounded men which fell into our hands, the appearance of blood in every place where they made their stand and on the fences as they passed, we have reason to believe they had a good many killed and wounded, though they did not leave many on the ground. In number our loss was very inconsiderable, but in the fall of Lieutenant-Colonel Knowlton, I consider it as great, being a brave and good officer; and it may be increased by the death of Major Leitch, of the Virginia regiment, who unfortunately received three balls through his side.

Having given you a summary account of the situation of our affairs, and in such manner as circumstances will admit of, I have only to add, that I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the highest esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

To Governour Cooke, Rhode-Island.

P. S. The Committee have expressed their apprehensions of being obliged to abandon the Island of Rhode-Island and Newport, and requested my opinion. At present, I can see no causes for it, and the propriety of the measure must depend upon circumstances. But I should suppose they ought to be very pressing, and the necessity great, before they ought to be given up. Most certainly no imaginary ills or necessity should lead to such a measure. At this time the danger can only be ideal; and if the enemy persevere in their plans here, and our men behave as they should do, I am persuaded they will not have an opportunity to employ their attention elsewhere this campaign.

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOUR COOKE.

Camp at Harlem Heights, September 17, 1776.

SIR: I suppose you have heard of the retreat from Long-Island, and the evacuation of New-York. The retreats were both judicious and necessary, our numbers being very insufficient to hold such an extent of ground. His Excellency had proposed to evacuate the city and suburbs of New-York some time before the enemy made their last landing, and had the Quartermaster-General been able to furnish the necessary wagons to remove the stores and baggage, the retreat would have been effected in good order, had the enemy delayed their landing twenty-four hours longer. Almost all the old standing regiment was drawn out of the city, in order to oppose the enemy at Hell-Gate, where they made an appearance of a very large body of troops, and movements as if they intended a landing.

We made a miserable, disorderly retreat from New-York, owing to the disorderly conduct of the Militia, who ran at the appearance of the enemy's advance guard; this was General Fellows's brigade. They struck a panick into the troops in the rear, and Fellows's and Parsons's whole brigade ran away from about fifty men, and left his Excellency on the ground within eighty yards of the enemy, so vexed at the infamous conduct of the troops, that he sought death rather than life.

The retreat was on the 14th of this instant, from New-York; most of the troops got off, but we lost a prodigious deal of baggage and stores. On the 16th we had a skirmish at Harlem Heights: a party of about a thousand came and attacked our advance post. They met with a very different kind of reception from what they did the day before. The fire continued about an hour, and the enemy retreated; our people pursued them, and by the spirited conduct of General Putnam and Colonel Reed the Adjutant-General, our people advanced upon the plain ground without cover, and attacked them and drove them back. His Excellency sent and ordered a timely retreat to our advanced post, for he discovered or concluded the enemy would send a large reinforcement, as their main body lay near by. I was sick when the army retreated from Long-Island, which by the by, was the best effected retreat I ever read or heard of, considering the difficulty of the retreat.

The army now remains quiet, but expect an attack every day. Colonel Varnum's and Colonel Hitchcock's regiments were in the last action, and behaved nobly, but neither of the Colonels was with them, both being absent—one sick, the other taking care of the sick. Time won't permit me to say much more, as I am wanted to go into the Jerseys.

I had the honour of seeing and conversing with your Committee. I think, and so does his Excellency, that the operations of the campaign will have no effect upon you, as it will be impossible for the enemy to detach any part of the army, while our army is able to make any stand. I would not evacuate one foot of ground, as it will tend to encourage the enemy and dispirit our people. I am sure the Government is safe, and will remain so, unless the enemy can ruin this army. This is their grand object, and every nerve will be exerted to effect it; but they will not have opportunity and strength sufficient to molest you. I have not time to add one word more.

I am, with all due respect, your most obedient, humble servant,

N. GREENE.

To Nicholas Cooke, Esq.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER TO A GENTLEMAN IN ANNAPOLIS, DATED AT HEAD-QUARTERS, SEPTEMBER 17, 1776.

We are now encamped between York and King's Bridge, on very advantageous heights, and have formed our lines from the North River to a creek that makes out of East River, running up to King's Bridge.

Soon after we came to New-York, there was a council held by the General Officers, and the question was put, whether New-York was tenable against the King's forces. It was carried in the negative.

Three days ago the whole of our troops evacuated New-York; and the day before yesterday the King's troops landed about three miles below this, where there were two brigades stationed, who abandoned their posts with precipitation.

Yesterday morning the Regulars came within half a mile of our lines, and made a stand. A few of our scouts, who were out, attacked and drove them off. In two hours after, two thousand of them returned. General Beall sent out three companies of Riflemen, under the command of Major Mantz, who attacked them. Immediately General Washington reinforced with the remainder of our brigade, together with General Weedon's regiment from Virginia, Major Price's three independent companies, and one regiment of Rhode-Islanders. Never did troops go to the field with more cheerfulness and alacrity; when there began a heavy fire on both sides. It continued about one hour, when our brave Southern troops dislodged them from their posts. The enemy rallied, and our men beat them the second time. They rallied again; our troops drove them the third time, and were rushing on them, but the enemy had got on an eminence, and our troops were ordered to retreat, the General considering there might be a large number of the enemy behind the hill, concealed; which was the case. We were informed by a prisoner that our men took, there were about eight or ten thousand concealed.

From the number of the enemy that I saw lay on the field dead and wounded, I think their loss must be three or four times ours. I have not yet been able to get a full account of our loss, only of our brigade, which is as follows: Captain Low, wounded through both his thighs. Twelve privates wounded, and three missing. Major Leitch, of Colonel Weedon's regiment, received three balls through his belly. More is the pity, for never was a braver hero. He stood the field, with the greatest bravery, till the third shot, when he was obliged to fall. He appears to be in good spirits. The doctors are of opinion he will recover. Colonel Knowlton, from Boston, killed in the field, who distinguished himself at Bunker's Hill, as well as in this engagement. He will be interred to-day, with all the honours of war.

From our present situation, it is firmly my opinion we shall give them a genteel drubbing, in case the Yankees will fight with as much spirit as the Southern troops.

As near as I can collect, our loss, killed, wounded, and taken, amounts to fifty men.

We expect every hour when the general engagement will come on; and if we prove successful, the campaign will be settled for this present year.

General Washington gave great applause to our Maryland troops, for their gallant behaviour yesterday.

Baltimore, September 23, 1776.

By a gentleman of undoubted veracity, just come to town from the camp at Harlem, we have the following intelligence, viz: That on Sunday, the 15th instant, the enemy landed their army near Turtle Bay, under cover of their shipping; from thence marched to the city of New-York, which we had evacuated, after taking out almost all our stores, &c. General Putnam, who commanded with a small detachment of our army, retreated, with little molestation or loss, to the main body of our army.

By the above gentleman, we are favoured with the following extract of a letter from a General Officer who was present at the time of action, viz:

"On Monday morning, September 16, the enemy appeared in several large bodies on the plain, about two miles and a half from our lines. About noon a firing began between a party of our Rangers, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Knowlton, and an advanced party of the enemy, who were supposed to be about three hundred. Three companies of Colonel Weedon's regiment of Virginians, under the command of Major Leitch, and Colonel Knowlton, with his Rangers, composed of volunteers from different New-England regiments, were ordered to try to get into the rear of the enemy, whilst dispositions were making as if to attack them in front, and thereby draw their attention that way. This took effect; for, on the appearance of our brave troops in front, the enemy immediately ran down the hill, took possession of some fences and bushes, and a smart firing began, but at too great a distance to do much execution on either side. The parties under Colonel Knowlton and Major Leitch began their attack too soon, as it was rather in flank than in rear. In a little time, Major Leitch was brought off wounded, having received three balls through his side; and in a short time after, Colonel Knowlton got wounded, which proved mortal. Our men, however, persevered, and continued the engagement with the greatest resolution. Part of Colonel Griffith's and Colonel Richardson's Maryland regiments, with some volunteers from the Northern regiments, who were nearest the place of action, advanced to support our men. These troops charged the enemy with great intrepidity, and drove them from the wood into the plain, and were pursuing them from thence, having silenced their fire in a great measure, when it was thought prudent to order a retreat, fearing the enemy (as it was since found to be really the case) would send a large body to support their party.

"Major Leitch, it is hoped, will recover; but Knowlton's fall is much to be regretted, as that of a brave and good officer. We had about forty wounded. The number of slain is not yet ascertained, but is very inconsiderable."

"By a Sergeant who deserted from the enemy, and came in this morning, we were informed that their party consisted of the Second Battalion of Light Infantry, a battalion of Royal Highlanders, and three companies of the Hessian Riflemen, under the command of Brigadier-General Leslie. The deserter reports that their loss, in killed and wounded, amounts to one hundred and forty, about forty of which we found dead on the field, and buried."

"On the whole, the enemy got completely defeated, which has given great spirits to our army, who are encamped on the heights at Harlem, where they are advantageously posted, and in high spirits, waiting the attack of the enemy."

By letters received from New-York, we are informed that the enemy were encamped about two miles from Headquarters; that they were landing their artillery from Long-Island at Horn's Hook; and that an attack was shortly expected on our lines, which were very formidable.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 23, 1776.]

King's Bridge, September 19, 1776.

SIR: Since I wrote Congress requesting my dismissal from any further concern with Commissary matters in the Northern Department, I find Mr. Livingston has sent his resignation to Congress, and General Schuyler has sent my letter to Mr. Avery, ordering him off, back to me; and the time Mr. Livingston sets for leaving the business is near at hand. I must, therefore, beg a speedy determination of Congress thereon, or all will be in confusion.

I also wrote, some time since, respecting salt for curing provisions the approaching season, to which I have had no answer as yet. I must now also apply for directions concerning the purchasing and curing provisions for the next year. The season is now near at hand when it must be done, and an early attention thereto may make a very considerable saving to the Continent, by making the necessary preparations therefor, at the proper places, and in due time. I would humbly propose to Congress that large quantities of salted pork and beef, proportioned to the number of men most probably to be employed, should be put up, in the proper season, in different parts of the country, at the expense and for the benefit of the Continent, as it will be impossible to foresee or determine where we shall be attacked. Had a large quantity been secured last season, in and near this State, as was done in Massachusetts-Bay, it would have saved an immense sum to the Continent, which has since been paid to purchase the same pork from individuals. If it had not been wanted, it could have been disposed of without loss, if not to profit. What happened last season must another, if not provided against in time. I secured for the Continent last winter, and now have, a quantity of salt, near Boston.

My attention, from my employment, is led to these matters. I thought it my duty to mention them to Congress, and beg their early attention to, and orders on, these subjects.

I am, sir, your most obedient, humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

JOSEPH TRUMBULL, COMMISSARY GENERAL, TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 23, 1776.]

King's Bridge, September 19, 1776.

SIR: I have this day drawn on you in favour of Colonel Thomas Lourey, for sixty thousand dollars, for supply of the Continental troops in New-Jersey, which you will direct to be paid, and charge the same to my account accordingly.

I am, most respectfully, sir, your most humble servant,

JOS. TRUMBULL.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

HUGH HUGHES TO NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, September 17, 1776.

SIR: The Commissary-General, and Commissary of Ordnance Stores, having complained of two Albany skippers who have deserted the service without discharging their loading, one of them named Brooks, has such utensils for supplying the army with soap and candles, that the business cannot be carried on without them. The other, named Rolf or Roff, has ammunition on board, besides sundry articles belonging to the Quartermaster-General's Department, it is said. It is not known but the first mentioned may have some things belonging to the same Department also.

As such conduct may immediately be attended with the worst consequences to the United States, besides setting a most dangerous and scandalous example, the General has directed me to acquaint your honourable House therewith, in order that a suitable remedy may be timely applied.

I have the honour to be, with the greatest respect, sir, your most obedient, and very humble servant,

HUGH HUGHES,

Assistant Quartermaster-General.

To the Hon. the President of the Convention of the State of New-York.

THADDEUS CRANE TO MAJOR JOSEPH BENEDICT.

Salem, Westchester County, New-York, September 17, 1776.

DEAR SIR: 'Tis with regret I address you on the following subject. I have left no stone unturned to the end the opposition to our cause which has so wickedly prevailed here might be suppressed. I find my neighbours inflexibly determined to fill up the measure of their guilt to the brim. The present situation of our enemy has so spirited up our Tories that, except our Convention provide some immediate remedy, I shall be drove to the disagreeable necessity of seeing our important measures obstructed by the men whose principles I abhor, and make no attempt to detect their machinations. I have several times lately been called upon to execute orders with which it has not been in my power to comply, and am continually liable to misfortunes of this kind—a circumstance with which I am extremely disobliged. However, sir, I might tell you that such is the state of the neighbourhood in which I am unhappily situated, that except some more effectual measures are taken, and that speedily, I might with some few of my good neighbours, suppress my sentiments through fear of falling under the resentment of a set of abandoned fellows, of whose cruel designs we want no proof. But, sir, 'tis needless for me to dwell on a subject with which you are so well acquainted. I would only suggest to you what I think might be done, through which your friends might be relieved, and the general cause served. If you should concur in sentiment with me, I beg the favour of you that you wait on the honourable Convention of this State, and through our members petition the House, that Captain Samuel Dellivan be commissioned to raise a company of twenty-five or thirty men, for the purpose of awing and detecting those insulting villains; his known character is a sufficient recommend to all who know him. He has, I think, every qualification requisite to such appointment, his situation very convenient.

On the whole, sir, I beg leave to suggest to you that the removal of a number of persons from this and other parts of our County is absolutely necessary, and that advantage which may be expected therefrom, depends on it being speedily done.

I am, sir, with much esteem, your very humble servant,

THADDEUS CRANE,

Chairman of the Committee.

To Major Benedict, Cortlandt's Manor.

DUTCHESS COUNTY (NEW-YORK) COMMITTEE.

In Committee, Dutchess County, September 17, 1776.

It having been suggested to this Committee by the deputies from this County in Convention that the quorum at present necessary to represent the County, being five, was too numerous, and that by means thereof was frequently deprived of a voice in the Convention,

Resolved, therefore, That the number of the quorum be reduced from five to three, and accordingly that of the nine Deputies to represent this County in the Convention of the Representatives of this State, any three of them be a quorum for that purpose.

By order:

EGBERT BENSON, Chairman.

GENERAL SCHUYLER TO GENERAL GATES.

Albany, September 17, 1776.

DEAR GENERAL: Your favour of the 15th instant, was delivered me by Mr. Egberts about half after twelve, this day. I immediately attempted, but in vain, to procure the articles mentioned in the list you enclosed. Not an inch of such cordage was to be had. I therefore despatched two batteaus, with a most pressing letter to Mr. Van Zandt, at Poughkeepsie. The batteaus went off before two o'clock, with positive orders to the officer to go without delay, both in the night and day, so that I hope soon to receive the cordage, which will be forwarded from hence in wagons, the moment it arrives, with orders to procure fresh horses on the roads, that you may receive it the soonest possible.

The bearer is Major Livingston, my aid-de-camp, who goes on a visit to Tyonderoga. His amiable disposition will entitle him to your attention whilst he stays.

I am, dear General, yours most sincerely, &c., &c.

PH. SCHUYLER.

To Hon. General Gates, &c., &c.

PETITION FROM NEW-HAVEN TO THE GOVERNOUR, ETC., OF CONNECTICUT.

New-Haven, September 17, 1776.

The memorialists, from their maritime situation, are more exposed to the destructive measures of our internal enemies, than their brethren who live more remote from the sea-coast; as the conveyance of intelligence to the British army, who are now in possession of the whole of Long-Island, is liable to less interruption, than if there was a tract of inhabited country to travel through, before the camps of our enemies could be entered. These circumstances, added to a full persuasion and belief that there are persons, now residents in this town, who at least would rejoice at the loss of our liberties, and, we fear, contribute to the obtaining that end, induce us to approach your Honours on the present occasion. We should esteem ourselves very unfortunate, should we, in our zeal for the preservation of our liberties, entertain jealousies of any that are really friends to our country; but if an early disapprobation of Congressional measures; frequent assertions that we should certainly be overcome; that it was in vain to enter the lists against so potent a Power as Great Britain; invariably treating with singular marks of approbation the professed enemies of American liberty; in short, if an uniformity of conduct, the completion of which bears striking marks of their suspected character, will justify suspicion, we flatter ourselves we shall stand acquitted by your Honours of the imputation of feigning our fears.

Your Honours will permit us to point out the persons we have particularly in view: Abiathar Camp, James Curgenven, William Glen, Edward Carrington, Ambrose Ward, and Ralph Isaacs, are the men we have in our eye; besides particular acts and expressions of these men, which will admit of no construction but what pronounces them unfriendly to the general cause, they have by the whole tenor of their conduct, evinced to us most clearly the same point. We therefore consider their residence among us to be dangerous to our safety. We are every night exposed to be destroyed by our open enemies; we live on their borders, separated only by a few miles of water, the absolute command of which is in their hands; our internal enemies, intimately acquainted with our harbours and our defenceless situation, can introduce them into our houses, can involve us, our property, our wives, and our little ones in ruin, before we apprehend their approach. The great law of self-preservation, therefore, calls upon us to leave no avenue unguarded—no measure that will procure our safety unesayed. As the laws of this State have not provided a remedy adequate to the evil, we are under the necessity of applying to your Honours for your interposition in our behalf; praying that your Honours would order and decree, that the aforementioned persons be removed to some interior part of the country, or that your Honours would in some other way make provisions for our security. This mode of procedure, we conceive, is not unprecedented among civilized nations; and if we are rightly informed, was very recently adopted in a neighbouring State, with regard to persons whose conduct had not afforded more grounds of jealousy than the conduct of those persons we have pointed out to your Honours.

And your memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

BENJAMIN HUNTINGTON, Clerk.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety, September 27, 1776:

Upon the Memorial of Isaac Doolittle and others, inhabitants of the Town of New-Haven, setting forth the fears and apprehensions they are under on account of sundry persons suspected of being inimical to the liberties of America; praying this Board to take the matter up, and order and decree such suspected persons to be removed, &c., as per Memorial, dated September 17, 1776;

Voted, That the consideration of said Memorial, and the matters therein contained, be referred to the honourable General Assembly, to be holden at New-Haven, on the second Thursday of October next; and that in the mean time a citation go forth thereon, to cite said suspected persons therein complained of, to appear before said Assembly, to make answer thereto; and that the civil authority, Selectmen, and Committee of Inspection for said town, be directed to make inquiry, and collect the evidence relating thereto, and lay the same before said Assembly, that justice may be done thereon.

A true copy of record. Attest:

BENJAMIN HUNTINGTON, Clerk.

On the final trial Ralph Isaacs and Abiathar Camp were found guilty.

COLONEL LIVINGSTON TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Saybrook, September 17, 1776.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR HONOUR: I send you a duplicate receipt and appraisal of the arms taken on Long-Island; they are valued extremely low, owing to their having been much rusted, and want of judgment in the appraisers; I hope it will be no temptation to their being kept from the State of New-York, as the want of them is great, and they can no ways be supplied for the value affixed.

I think, I informed your Honour in my last, that I had taken a prisoner accused of a capital crime, viz: carrying on an intercourse with our enemies; he has since been before the Committee of Saybrook, and confessed that he having been told the contents of a letter delivered him for the purpose of carrying it to Lord Howe, and that he did carry said letter to Lord Howe, and that the purport of said letter was to inform General Howe some arms taken from the people of Easthampton, by order of Colonel Gardiner in the King's name, had been retaken by the subjects of the States on this side the water; that the towns of South and Easthampton did send this letter to avoid the imputation of being in connection with us. Thus much I collected from Mr. Howel's own confession. The Committee have thought proper to permit him his parole to remain in the County of Colchester; as this appears very singular to me, that a criminal accused of a capital crime, should be permitted to be at large previous to his trial, I have thought proper to remit your Honour an account of it; that if possible this matter may be rectified if wrong. Few men would pay much regard to their honour, when life is at stake. I should have proceeded early this morning for Long-Island, but the wind and tide being both contrary, prevents.

I remain your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,
HENRY B. LIVINGSTON.

To His Honour Governour Trumbull.

Saybrook, September 14, 1776.

Received of Colonel Henry B. Livingston, sixty-nine arms, valued, marked and appraised as above. These arms are delivered on condition they be returned to said Colonel Henry B. Livingston, or his order, unless taken in war by our enemies, they being only a loan in the present emergency. One hundred cartouch-boxes and sixty-nine bayonets being included.

(Duplicate.)

SAMUEL COIT, Colonel.

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN MEETING.

At a Town-Meeting of the Town of Providence, legally warned and assembled on the 17th day of September, A. D. 1776. Captain John Updike, Moderator.

This meeting being especially called pursuant to an order of a meeting of the Committee appointed to act during the recess of the General Assembly, held at the Court-House in Newport, on the 12th day of September, A. D. 1776, to raise the Town's proportion of the Battalion of Militia ordered for New-York; and the Town having taken the said order of said Committee into consideration, do thereupon vote and resolve, that in order to raise this Town's proportion of said Battalion with as much expedition as possible, the sum of six pounds lawful money be given as a bounty to each soldier who voluntarily inlists himself into said Battalion as one of this Town's proportion thereof; and that the Town Treasurer be requested immediately to hire a sufficient sum of money for this purpose.

Voted, That Messrs. Daniel Hawkins, Joseph Fuller, David Bacon, James Arnold, and Nathaniel Wheaton, Esq., be a Committee to number the male persons suitable to bear arms in the Town of Providence.

Voted, That Colonel Jabez Bowen be empowered to inlist men for this Town's proportion of the battalion aforesaid, until the officers are appointed.

MASSACHUSETTS ASSEMBLY TO WILLIAM BRADFORD.

Watertown, September 17, 1776.

SIR: We have your letter of the 13th instant, and would now inform you that in consequence of orders issued by this Court some days since, the most vigorous exertions are now making to detach as large a proportion of the Militia of this State as it's supposed can possibly be spared, to march to the aid of the army at New-York, with the utmost expedition. Since the issuing these orders, we have been requested by the honourable Congress to send one regiment of our Militia to Rhode-Island, to supply the place of one of the Continental regiments ordered from thence. Whereupon that part of our Militia to be raised in the Counties of Plymouth and Barnstable were destined to Rhode-Island, and Major-General Warren was commanded to give the necessary orders therefor. But as this regiment is to take the care of a number of whale-boats as far as Rhode-Island, agreeable to Governour Trumbull's proposal in a letter now come to hand, their arrival with you may be in some measure delayed; but you may be assured that every means will be used to get them there as soon as possible.

To the Hon. William Bradford.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENERAL WARREN.

Council Chamber, September 17, 1776.

You are hereby directed and commanded to give orders to the Brigadiers of the Counties of Plymouth and Barnstable, to cause the men drafted from their respective brigades, in consequence of the resolves of the General Assembly of this State, of the 12th and 13th instant, to march as soon as may be to Falmouth, or Buzzard's Bay, in the County of Barnstable, and to Dartmouth, in the County of Bristol, with their baggage, or such part of them as may be necessary, there to take charge of sixty whale-boats, to be provided by a Committee of the General Assembly, and in said boats, with all possible despatch, to proceed to Rhode-Island, and them to deliver to the Hon. Nicholas Cooke, Esq., Governour of said State. Hereof fail not, and make return of your doings as soon as may be.

To Major-General Warren.

MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL TO GENS. FARLEY AND PRESCOTT.

In Council, September 17, 1776.

As one-fifth part of the Militia in this State are ordered to march to reinforce the army at New-York, and as you may be called to take the command of a brigade appointed to that service, you are ordered to hold yourself in readiness to march with said Militia on the shortest notice. If there is any thing in the situation of your affairs which will prevent your taking this command, you will immediately inform the Council thereof, that some other person may be called on to march in your stead.

JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary.

To Brigadiers Farley and Prescott.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CAPE NICOLA MOLE, DATED SEPTEMBER 18, 1776.

The French here are, to a man, in favour of America. There are ten thousand men in this island, one thousand here, who, with five hundred Negroes, are busy employed in building forts, and a French war is inevitable. A French frigate arrived the other day from France, with orders to the General to protect all American vessels. A pilot boat belonging to a merchant in Philadelphia, was taken the day before yesterday and sent to Jamaica; a French frigate of thirty-six guns, and a guarda-costa, which last hoisted Continental colours, were immediately sent after her, with orders to follow her into Port-Royal harbour, if they could not overtake her before, and demand her. What will be the consequences time will discover. The French were very much exasperated at her being taken, which was within two leagues of the land.

PETITION OF CAPTAIN FULFORD'S ARTILLERY COMPANY.

The humble Petition of Captain JOHN FULFORD's Company, the Royal Train of Artillery, or Second MARYLAND Matrosses, humbly sheweth:

That your worthy patriots, that are filled with a due sense of liberty, and were enlisted under the banners of the same, and are ready to advance into the field at a moment's call, and there to fight our daring foes in the present cause and behalf of America, and, in the highest spirits, like the bold soldier, willing to go to the field conquering and to conquer, undaunted like tyrants, not fearing to die, you will give them a hearing.

Gentlemen, from the great veracity and confidence that we repose in your Honours, we hope, therefore, that you will allow us, most honourable gentlemen, an addition to our pay, in order to alleviate our pain, and for our laborious work, and most fatiguing in life, and much more so than any company has gone through hitherto; namely, in building or assisting to build fortifications or batteries, together, most honourable gentlemen, with the hard fatigues of guard, namely, once every other day mounting, and still, gentlemen, we are resolved that our motto shall be, Death or Glory. Therefore, most honourable gentlemen, we hope your Honours will take your poor petitioners' petition into your most serious consideration, and consult deliberately thereon, and give us a grant, most honourable gentlemen, of something more than our present pay, which will make a retaliation or recompensation for our hard duty. And in so doing we shall be in duty bound to pray, most honourable gentlemen.

THE ROYAL TRAIN OF ARTILLERY.

God bless the Congress and direct our General!

Philadelphia, September 18, 1776.

Yesterday arrived the Continental brig Andrew Doria, Captain Biddle, from a cruise, in which he took six vessels, viz: ship Molly, Brigder Goodrich, late belonging to Mr. Jonathan Hudson, of Maryland, and brig Peggy, Cook, both prizes of Lord Dunmore's, bound from Virginia to Bermuda; brig Elizabeth, Captain Johnson, a prize taken by the English, from Cape-Fear, North-Carolina, for Bermuda; brig Lawrence, Captain Layburn, from Barbadoes to Newfoundland, and two other brigs, in ballast, from Virginia, with Tories, for Bermuda. The two latter, being short of water and provisions, he let go.

By sundry gentlemen who arrived from New-York yesterday and the day before, we collect the following intelligence: That last Monday General Washington having received intelligence that an advanced party of the enemy was approaching his lines at Harlem, he prepared to attack them with one party in front, whilst another attacked them in the rear, to prevent their retreat, which was nearly effected, when the enemy, after a smart engagement, secured their retreat under cover of their men-of-war in the East River. Colonel Knowlton commanded one party, and Major Leitch the other—the former killed, and the latter wounded. That the Regulars had lost thirty men killed; that we had taken three field-pieces, and lost only five men. We are also informed that on Sunday evening last our people had sent three fire-ships down upon the enemy's fleet, one of which had grappled with a man-of-war; but the man-of-war disentangling herself, they burnt to the water's edge without doing any damage.

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Head-Quarters, York-Island, September 21, 1776.

MY LORD: I have the satisfaction to inform your Lordship of his Majesty's troops being in possession of the City of New-York.

Upon the Rebels abandoning their lines at Brooklyn, the King's army moved from Bedford, leaving Lieutenant-General Heister encamped upon the Heights of Brooklyn, with two brigades of Hessians and one brigade of British at Bedford, and took five positions in the neighbourhood of Newtown, Bushwick, Hell-Gate, and Flushing.

The two Islands of Montresor and Buchanan were occupied, and batteries raised against the enemy's work at Horen's Hook, commanding the passage at Hell-Gate.

On the 15th instant, in the morning, three ships of war passed up the North River as far as Bloomingdale, to draw the enemy's attention to that side; and the first division of troops, consisting of the Light Infantry, the British Reserve, the Hessian Grenadiers, and Chasseurs, under the command of Lieutenant-General Clinton, having with him Lieutenant-General Earl Cornwallis, Major-General Vaughan, Brigadier-General Leslie, and Colonel Donop, embarked at the head of Newtown Creek, and landed about noon upon New-York Island, three miles from the town, at a place called Kepp's Bay, under the fire of two forty-gun ships and three frigates, as per margin,* Commodore Hotham having the direction of the ships and boats.

The Rebels had troops in their works round Kepp's Bay, but their attention being engaged in expectation of the King's troops landing at Stuyvesant's Cove, Horen's Hook, and at Harlem, which they had reason to conclude, Kepp's Bay became only a secondary object of their care. The fire of the shipping being so well directed and so incessant, the enemy could not remain in their works, and the descent was made without the least opposition.

The conduct of the officers of the navy does them much honour; and the behaviour of the seamen belonging to the ships of war and transports employed to row the boats, was highly meritorious. Much praise in particular is due to the masters and men of six transports that passed the town on the evening of the 14th, under a heavy fire, being volunteers, to take troops on board for the more speedy disembarkation of the second division.

The British immediately took post upon the commanding height of Inclenberg, and the Hessians moving towards New-York, fell in with a body of Rebels that were retiring from Stuyvesant's Cove; some firing ensued, by which a Brigadier-General, other officers, and several men of the *Phoenix, Roebuck, Orpheus, Carysfort, Rose.

Rebels were killed and wounded, with the loss of four men killed and eight wounded on the part of the Hessians.

As soon as the second embarkation was landed, the troops advanced towards a corps of the enemy upon a rising ground three miles from Inclenberg, towards King's Bridge, having McGowan's Pass in their rear, upon which they immediately retired to the main body of their army upon Morris's Height.

The enemy having evacuated New-York soon after the army landed, a brigade took possession of the works in the evening.

The prisoners made in the course of this day were about twenty officers and three hundred men. The enclosed return will show the artillery and stores taken.

The position the King's army took on the 15th in the evening, was with the right to Horen's Hook, and the left at the North River, near to Bloomingdale, the Rebel army occupying the ground with extensive works on both sides of King's Bridge, and a redoubt with cannon upon a height on the west side of the North River, opposite to the Blue Bell, where the enemy have their principal work, in which positions both armies still continue.

On the 16th, in the morning, a large party of the enemy having passed under cover of the woods, near to the advanced posts of the army, by way of Vanderwater's Height, the Second and Third Battalions of Light Infantry, supported by the Forty-Second Regiment, pushed forward and drove them back to their entrenchments, from whence the enemy observing they were not in force, attacked them with near three thousand men, which occasioned the march of the reserve with two field-pieces, a battalion of Hessian Grenadiers, and the company of Chasseurs, to prevent the corps engaged from being surrounded; but the Light Infantry and Forty-Second Regiment, with the assistance of the Chasseurs and field-pieces, repulsed the enemy with considerable loss, and obliged them to retire within their works. The enemy's loss is not ascertained; but from the accounts of deserters it is agreed that they had not less than three hundred killed and wounded, and among them a Colonel and Major killed. We had eight officers wounded, most of them very slightly, fourteen men killed, and about seventy wounded.

Major-General Vaughan was slightly wounded in the thigh, on the 15th, by a random shot, as he was ascending the Heights of Inclenberg with the Grenadiers; and I have the pleasure of informing your Lordship that Lieutenant-Colonel Monckton is so well recovered he has been walking about some days.

Captain Balfour, my second Aid-de-Camp, will have the honour of delivering your Lordship this despatch; and with the most profound respect, I have the honour to be, &c.,

W. HOWE.

To Lord George Germaine.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM VICE-ADMIRAL LORD VISCOUNT HOWE, TO MR. STEVENS, DATED EAGLE, NEW-YORK RIVER, SEPTEMBER 18, 1776.

I have the satisfaction of being able to inform their Lordships that a disposition having been made for landing the army on York-Island, on the morning of the 15th, the Captains Parker and Wallace, whose abilities and distinguished resolution point them out for the most important services, with the Captains Fanshaw, Hamond, and Hudson, officers of great merit, passed the fire of the town of New-York with their ships on the evening of the 13th, to wait off Bushwyck Creek, opposite to Kepp's Bay, where the landing was proposed to be forced in the East River. The flat-boats, batteaus, and galleys, under the direction of Commodore Hotham, but arranged in divisions commanded by the Captains Vandeput, Caldwell, Dickson, Caulfield, Phipps, and Molloy, and the Lieutenant Howorth, of the Eagle, assisted by the Lieutenants Henry, Parry, Chads, and Bristow, agents of transports, were manned from the two-decked ships and transports, as on the former debarkation, and sent up at different times under the shore of Long-Island, undiscovered by the enemy on the opposite side.

Six transports, which Messrs. Robert Roughead, Richard Fowler, John Randall, Thomas Brown, ——— Chambers, and ——— Stuart, (the different masters making a voluntary offer of their services,) engaged to conduct, were sent up the East River on the 14th, under the direction of the agent, Lieutenant Knowles, with Lieutenant Laird, whose active assistance in the most fatiguing parts of the debarkation duty, the conveyance of the artillery, has marked his zeal for the King's service in a particular manner. They were appointed to take in a number of troops from Bushwyck, for facilitating the more timely support of the first division embarked in the flat-boats at Newtown Creek.

The pilots declining on account of the strength of the tide to take charge of the particular covering ships that were intended to be placed towards Hell-Gate, for countenancing the appearance of a descent on that part of the coast, all the five were placed in Kepp's Bay on the morning of the 15th, and having, by the effect of their well-directed fire, compelled the Rebels to quit their entrenchments upon the shore, the debarkation was made without further opposition.

The General's publick acknowledgments addressed to the Commodore and the several officers and seamen employed, will be the best testimony I can render of their meritorious services on this occasion.

In order to facilitate the operations of the army in the East River, another detachment of the ships of war was appointed by the General's desire, to proceed up the North River to give jealousy to the enemy on this side. The Renown, Captain Banks, with the Captains Davis and Wilkinson in the Repulse and Pearl, were ordered for that purpose. They passed the enemy's battery without material injury early on the 15th, to a station about six miles to the northward of the town. On the ensuing night the enemy directed four fire-vessels in succession against them, but with no other effect than that of obliging the ships to move their stations, the Repulse excepted. The Renown returned on this side the town, but the two frigates remain still in the North River, with the Tryal armed schooner, to strengthen the left flank of the army, extending to the western shore of York-Island, as circumstances will admit.

SIR WILLIAM HOWE TO LORD GEORGE GERMAINE.

Head-Quarters, York-Island, September 23, 1776.

MY LORD: Between the 20th and 21st instant, at midnight, a most horrid attempt was made by a number of wretches to burn the town of New-York, in which they succeeded too well, having set it on fire in several places with matches and combustibles that had been prepared with great art and ingenuity. Many were detected in the fact, and some killed upon the spot by the enraged troops in garrison; and had it not been for the exertions of Major-General Robertson, the officers under his command in the town, and the brigade of Guards detached from the camp, the whole must infallibly been consumed, as the night was extremely windy.

The destruction is computed to be about one quarter of the town; and we have reason to suspect there are villains still lurking there ready to finish the work they have begun, one person escaping the pursuit of a sentinel the following night, having declared that he would again set fire to the town the first opportunity. The strictest search is making after these incendiaries, and the most effectual measures taken to guard against the perpetration of their villainous and wicked designs.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

W. HOWE.

To Lord George Germaine.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read September 20, 1776.]

Head-Quarters at Colonel Roger Morris's House, }
September 18, 1776. }

SIR: As my letter of the 16th contained intelligence of an important nature, and such as might lead Congress to expect that the evacuation of New-York and retreat to the Heights of Harlem, in the manner they were made, would be succeeded by some other interesting event, I beg leave to inform them, that as yet nothing has been attempted upon a large and general plan of attack. About the time of the post's departure with my letter, the enemy appeared in several large bodies upon the plains, about two and a half miles from hence. I rode down to our advanced posts, to put matters in a proper situation, if they should attempt to come on. When I arrived there I heard a firing, which, I was informed, was between a party of our Rangers under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Knowlton, and an advanced party of the enemy. Our men came in and told me, that the body of the enemy, who kept themselves concealed, consisted of about three hundred, as near as they could guess. I immediately ordered three companies of Colonel Weedon's regiment from Virginia, under the command of Major Leitch, and Colonel Knowlton with his Rangers, composed of volunteers from different New-England regiments, to try to get in their rear, while a disposition was making as if to attack them in front, and thereby draw their whole attention that way.

This took effect as I wished on the part of the enemy. On the appearance of our party in front, they immediately ran down the hill, took possession of some fences and bushes, and a smart firing began, but at too great a distance to do much execution on either side. The parties under Colonel Knowlton and Major Leitch unluckily began their attack too soon, as it was rather in flank than in rear. In a little time Major Leitch was brought off wounded, having received three balls through his side; and in a short time after Colonel Knowlton got a wound, which proved mortal. Their men, however, persevered, and continued the engagement with the greatest resolution. Finding that they wanted a support, I advanced part of Colonel Griffith's and Colonel Richardson's Maryland regiments, with some detachments from the Eastern regiments, who were nearest the place of action. These troops charged the enemy with great intrepidity, and drove them from the wood into the plain, and were pushing them from thence, having silenced their fire in a great measure, when I judged it prudent to order a retreat, fearing the enemy, as I have since found was really the case, were sending a large body to support their party.

Major Leitch, I am in hopes, will recover; but Colonel Knowlton's fall is much to be regretted, as that of a brave and good officer. We had about forty wounded; the number of slain is not yet ascertained; but it is very considerable. By a Sergeant, who deserted from the enemy and came in this morning, I find that their party was greater than I imagined. It consisted of the Second Battalion of Light Infantry, a battalion of the Royal Highlanders, and three companies of the Hessian Riflemen, under the command of Brigadier-General Leslie. The deserter reports that their loss in wounded and missing was eighty-nine, and eight killed. In the latter, his account is too small, as our people discovered and buried double that number. This affair I am in hopes will be attended with many salutary consequences, as it seems to have greatly inspirited the whole of our troops. The Sergeant further adds, that a considerable body of men are now encamped from the East to the North River, between the seven and eight mile-stones, under the command of General Clinton. General Howe, he believes, has his quarters at Mr. Apthorp's house.

I have the honour to be, with sentiments of the highest regard and esteem, sir, your most obedient servant,

GO. WASHINGTON.

P. S. I should have wrote Congress by express before now, had I not expected the post every minute, which I flatter myself will be a sufficient apology for my delaying it.

The late losses we have sustained in our baggage and camp necessities, have added much to our distress, which was very great before. I must therefore take the liberty of requesting Congress, to have forwarded, as soon as possible, such a supply of tents, blankets, camp-kettles, and other articles, as can be collected; we cannot be overstocked.

GO. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The Arrangement for this Night.

General Clinton to form next to the North River, and extend to the left. General Scott's Brigade next to General Clinton's. Lieutenant-Colonel Sayer, of Colonel Griffith's Regiment, with the three companies intended for a reinforcement to day, to form upon the left of Scott's Brigade.

General Nixon's, Colonel Sargent's division, Colonel Weedon's, and Major Price's Regiments are to retire to their quarters and refresh themselves; but to hold themselves in readiness to turn out at a minute's warning. General McDougall to establish proper guards against his brigade upon the height, and every regiment posted upon the heights, from Morris's house to General McDougall's camp, to furnish proper guards to prevent a surprise, not less than twenty men from each Regiment. General Putnam commands upon the right flank to night; General Spencer from McDougall's brigade up to Morris's house. Should the enemy attempt to force the pass to night, General Putnam is to apply to General Spencer for a reinforcement.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, September 17, 1776.

(Parole, Leitch.)

(Countersign, Virginia.)

The General most heartily thanks the troops commanded yesterday by Major Leitch, who first advanced upon the enemy, and the others who so resolutely supported them. The behaviour of yesterday was such a contrast to that of some troops the day before, as must show what may be done, when officers and soldiers will exert themselves. Once more, therefore, the General calls upon officers and men to act up to the noble cause in which they are engaged, and to support the honour and liberties of their country.

The gallant and brave Colonel Knowlton, who would have been an honour to any country, having fallen yesterday while gloriously fighting, Captain Brown is to take the command of the party lately led by Colonel Knowlton. Officers and men are to obey him accordingly.

The loss of the enemy yesterday would undoubtedly have been much greater, if the orders of the Commander-in-Chief had not, in some instances, been contradicted by inferior officers, who, however well they may mean, ought not to presume to direct. It is therefore ordered, that no officer commanding a party, and having received orders from the Commander-in-Chief, depart from them without counter orders from the same authority; and as many may otherwise err through ignorance, the Army is now acquainted that the General's orders are delivered by the Adjutant-General, or one of his Aids-de-Camp, Mr. Tilghman, or Colonel Moylan, the Quartermaster-General.

Brigade Majors are to attend at Head-Quarters every day at twelve o'clock, and as soon as possible to report where their several Brigades and Regiments are posted. If many Regiments have not been relieved for want of the attendance of their Brigade Majors for orders, it is therefore the interest and duty of every Brigadier to see that his Brigade Major attends at twelve o'clock at noon, and five in the afternoon; and they are to be careful to make the Adjutants attend them every day.

The several Majors and Brigadier-Generals are desired to send to Head-Quarters an account of the places where they are quartered.

Until some general arrangement for duty can be fixed, each Brigade is to furnish guards, who are to parade at their respective Brigadiers' quarters, in such proportions as they shall direct.

Such Regiments as have expended their ammunition, or are otherwise deficient, are immediately to be supplied by applying to the Adjutant-General for an order; but the Regiment is to be first paraded, and their ammunition examined; the Commanding Officer is then to report how such deficiency has happened.

Head-Quarters, Harlem Heights, September 18, 1776.

(Parole, Jersey.)

(Countersign, Newport.)

The Brigade Majors are immediately to settle a Court-Martial for the trial of prisoners, to meet at the white house near Head-Quarters.

Commanding Officers of Regiments, and all other officers, are charged in the strictest manner to prevent all plundering, and to seize every soldier carrying plunder, whether belonging to the same Regiment or not, or on whatever pretence it is taken; and the General positively commands that such plunderer be immediately carried to the next Brigadier, or Commanding Officer of a Regiment, who is instantly to have the offender whipped on the spot.

The Regimental Surgeons are to take care of their own sick for the present, until the General Hospital can be established on a proper footing. They are to keep as near their Regiments as possible, and in case of action, to leave the sick under the care of their mates, and be at hand to assist the wounded.

Under the pretence of ranging or scouting, the greatest irregularities and excesses have been committed; the General therefore forbids, in the most express manner, any such parties, but by his leave, or of the Brigadier-General of the day, in writing, and then always to be under the direction of an officer. The General does not mean to discourage patrolling and scouting parties, when properly regulated; on the other hand, he will be pleased with and accept the services of any good officers who are desirous of being thus employed, and will distinguish them.

General Parsons's, General Scott's, and Colonel Sargent's Brigades are to march over King's Bridge, and take General Heath's orders for encamping. Colonels Shee, Magaw, Haslett, and the Regiment under Colonel Brodhead, are to return to Mount Washington, and be under the immediate care of General Mifflin.

Colonel Ward's Regiment, from Connecticut, may, for the present, be annexed to the Brigade commanded by Colonel Sargent.

Generals Mifflin's, McDougall's, Heard's, Wadsworth's, and Fellows's Brigades, and the Brigades under the command of Colonels Silliman and Douglass, are to have each a Regiment in the field this evening, by Mr. Kortright's house.

GENERAL GEORGE CLINTON TO COMMITTEE OF NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

King's Bridge, September 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: Since my last, many matters of importance to the publick, and more particularly to this State, have taken place; but I have been so situated as neither to find leisure or opportunity of communicating them to Congress. I returned late last night from the command of the picket or advanced party, in the front of our lines, and was just sitting down to write to the Convention, and intended sending an express, when I was favoured with yours of yesterday.

About the middle of last week it was determined, for many reasons, to evacuate the City of New-York; and accordingly, orders were given for removing the ordnance, military, and other stores from thence, which, by Sunday morning was nearly effected. On Saturday, four of the enemy's large ships passed by the city up the North River, and anchored near Grenage, and about as many up the East River, which anchored in Turtle Bay; and from the movements of the enemy on Long-Island and the small Islands in the East River, we had great reason to apprehend they intended to make a landing, and attack our lines somewhere near the city. Our army for some days had been moving upwards this way, and encamping on the heights, southwest of Colonel Morris's, where we intended to form lines, and make our grand stand. On Sunday morning the enemy landed a very considerable body of troops, principally consisting of their Light Infantry and Grenadiers, near Turtle Bay, under cover of a very heavy cannonade from their shipping. Our lines were but thinly manned, as they were then intended only to secure a retreat to the rear of our army, and unfortunately by such troops as were so little disposed to stand in the way of grape-shot that the main body of them almost instantly retreated, nay, fled, without a possibility of rallying them, though General Washington himself, (who rid to the spot on hearing the cannonade) with some other General Officers, exerted themselves to effect it.

The enemy, on landing, immediately formed a line across the Island. Most of our people were luckily north of it, and joined the army. The few that were in the city crossed the river, chiefly to Paulus-Hook, so that our loss in men, artillery, or stores, is very inconsiderable; I don't believe it exceeds one hundred men, and I fancy most of them, from their conduct, staid out of choice. Before evening, the enemy landed the main body of their army, took possession of the city, and marched up the Island, and encamped on the heights extending from McGown's and the Black-Horse to the North River.

On Monday morning, about ten o'clock, a party of the enemy, consisting of Highlanders, Hessians, the Light Infantry, Grenadiers, and English troops, (number uncertain,) attacked our advanced party, commanded by Colonel Knowlton, at Martje Davit's Fly. They were opposed with spirit, and soon made to retreat to a clear field, southwest of that about two hundred paces, where they lodged themselves behind a fence covered with bushes. Our people attacked them in front, and caused them to retreat a second time, leaving five dead on the spot. We pursued them to a buckwheat field on the top of a high hill, distant about four hundred paces, where they received a considerable reinforcement, with several field-pieces, and there made a stand. A very brisk action ensued at this place, which continued about two hours. Our people at length worsted them a third time, caused them to fall back into an orchard, from thence across a hollow, and up another hill not far distant from their own lines. A large column of the enemy's army being at this time discovered to be in motion, and the ground we then occupied being rather disadvantageous, a retreat likewise, without bringing on a general action, (which we did not think prudent to risk,) rather insecure, our party was therefore ordered in, and the enemy was well contented to hold the last ground we drove them to.

We lost, on this occasion, Colonel Knowlton, a brave officer, and sixteen privates, killed. Major Leitch, from Virginia, and about eight or ten subaltern officers and privates wounded. The loss of the enemy is uncertain. They carried their dead and wounded off, in and soon after the action; but we have good evidence of their having upwards of sixty killed, and violent presumption of one hundred. The action, in the whole, lasted about four hours.

I consider our success in this small affair, at this time, almost equal to a victory. It has animated our troops, gave them new spirits, and erased every bad impression the retreat from Long-Island, &c., had left on their minds. They find they are able, with inferior numbers, to drive their enemy, and think of nothing now but conquest.

Since the above affair, nothing material has happened. The enemy keep close to their lines. Our advance parties continue at their former station. We are daily throwing up works to prevent the enemy's advancing. Great attention is paid to Fort Washington, the posts opposite to it on the Jersey shore, and the obstructions in the river, which, I have reason to believe, are already effectual, so as to prevent their shipping passing; however, it is intended still to add to them, as it is of the utmost consequence to keep the enemy below us.

None of Smith's or Remsen's regiment have yet joined me, nor do I believe they intend. I have heard that many have gone over on the Island, and continued there. I have not been able to get any late account from thence. We are getting a new supply of Connecticut Militia in here; if they are not better than the last, I wish they would keep them at home. I hope, however, they are; they look better. A regiment or two lately arrived from Virginia. I can't recollect any thing else worth mentioning.

I am, with much respect, your most obedient servant,
GEO. CLINTON.

To Henry Wisner, William Allison, Robert R. Livingston, Esq., or either of them, at Fishkill.

P. S. I have lately heard, and believe General Woodhull is not dead, as was reported.

We shall want oak plank for platforms, and square timber. How can it be procured? I am sure, if left to the Quartermaster-General, he will not get it in time. The General desired me to make some inquiries when it may be had.

MAJOR BENEDICT TO COLONEL DRAKE.

Cortlandt-Manor, September 18, 1776.

SIR: The unhappy situation of our affairs at this most critical conjuncture, will no doubt sufficiently apologize for this address to you. The state of Cortlandt's Manor and northern post of Salem you are too well acquainted with to want any intelligence from me. The almost criminal disaffection of our ungrateful neighbours is, I think, now become a subject worthy the immediate attention of the guardians of this State. The present near approach of the enemy has emboldened our Tories to a most intolerable degree. They are indeed now prepared for adventures such as till now they dared not attempt. I am under the painful necessity of telling you that except the leaders of this baneful herd can be removed to some remote part of the country, whereby the mischievous effects of their secret conferences with their remaining adherents may be prevented, your friends must not only be insulted as advocates for the cause of our country, but lie continually under pressing apprehensions of more important sufferings, through the wicked attachments of those abandoned fellows, made on their persons or estate. What horrid crimes they may soon commit Heaven only knows; I have no reason from present appearance to think they are governed by principles of manhood or justice. On the whole, sir, a delay in this matter for a few days may prevent all the advantage of such measures as may now be under deliberation. I think the immediate removal of some persons is of great, of very obvious importance.

I am, sir, with esteem, your very humble servant,

JOSEPH BENEDICT.

To Colonel Gilbert Drake, Member of the Convention.

LETTER FROM WILLIAM JOHNSTON.

Tunadilla, September 18, 1776.

An extract of a letter from Mr. Spencer at the Oneidas, to Colonel Dalton at Fort Schuyler, formerly called Fort Stanwix, warning the inhabitants to take care, for Butler was landed at Oswego with one hundred men, Indians and Canadians; and it is said there is more coming. They are intended to attack your country in five different places, viz: German Flat-Stone, Ruby, Mohawk River, the Delaware, and it is supposed the Susquehanna River, too. Now, you can take care and put yourselves in readiness, and send word to Coschethon, and stand your ground, and keep a Ranging company to watch their roads from Chenango across to you, and from Oswego and from Tioga. The people at the Mohawk River are in great confusion, so that our Tunadilla people cannot get much help from them. They have raised three companies, seventy-eight men in each company, to range in the woods on the frontiers, and are all employed now; and the country has had an alarm, occasioned by our scout finding a fire in the woods, and some fresh pork on sticks roasting by the fire, above Shanackadigo, up the North River. The scout was so close to them that they ran up a hill, and it appeared by their tracks to be about seventeen or eighteen men, and our scouts ran round the hill, but could not see them. It is supposed they got their meat from some that support them there; and I hope that all good people upon Delaware will take particular care, and not let any disaffected persons be harboured about you in your woods.

Now, sir, you may see by the above the danger you and we are in; and as we lie just in the way for the enemy to make their march to you, and to prevent their so doing, and for our mutual safety, oh! sir, you would do well to use your best endeavours to send us thirty or forty men, to be stationed here for some time at Tunadilla, with store of arms and ammunition; for we resolve as long as life permits to stand our grounds if we can have but some assistance. Our Onaquagas at the news of Butler's army at Oswego, mustered up in all speed about twenty-five or thirty of their Chiefs, and they were pleased in a friendly manner to come out of their way to tell us not to fear, as yet they would meet their friends at Oneida to prevent the enemy coming down upon us, and advise all Indians to lie by and not meddle in the present dispute; and if friend Indians would not be advised to lie neuter, our Indians are gone prepared to make battle against them; and if there was any immediate danger they would send two of their number to inform us. As yet we have had no account; in four or five days we expect them here, if they can keep the friend Indians from lifting the hatchet against us. What further may be said on this subject, the bearer, Mr. Carr, can inform.

Your care in this, and answer with speed, will greatly oblige us, your friends and well-wishers here in general, and me and mine in particular, who remain yours in all sincere affection,

WILLIAM JOHNSTON.

P. S. This to be laid before your Committee, or such good friends as will give us immediate aid against approaching danger. Further the bearer informs that the self-same day he came away there was a man from Venango that informs that Butler has sent to them for to come and treat with him, or else he would send an army to cut them off; and the Chiefs are all gone to the treaty; and the Onaguaga Indians say that if they cannot have help soon they must either join or do something else. The Onaguaga Indians say they must have word within ten or twelve days, so as to know what to do in the affair.

MATE OF A VESSEL ON LAKE CHAMPLAIN TO THE NEW-YORK CONVENTION.

Left camp 18th September, 1776; about two hundred sick, principally with a little flux; most of them fit to stand on guard at the camp; none dangerous; little fever and ague.

That they have made fascines at Isle-aux-Noix to land their cannon on; their cannon in good order; the army in general well; Isle-aux-Noix low land bears clover; a French family on it; a large barn on it, which would make a good barrack; a dry, fine soil.

Met Lamb opposite to Isle la Motte; they went about eight knots; would get to the army in four hours; met him 19th.

Goforth at Isle-aux-Noix; three companies at Ticonderoga, of grey with green; at Lake George a company, (Captain Woodward, 25th,) of grey with blue—these were proceeding; at Albany, 27th, part of three companies, waiting for arms—they were proceeding; a company from New-York at Crown Point, only staid a night—21st, in the morning, they proceeded; Stephen McDougall there.

Near three thousand fit for duty; Major Brown came with a guard of fifty Canadians and got one hundred men volunteers, who went to Chamblée; got safe; belongs to Eastern regiment; lives at Sandersfield; about twenty-six years of age.

CONNECTICUT COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

At a meeting of the Governour and Council of Safety of Connecticut, September 18, 1776,

Present: His Honour the Governour, his Honour the Deputy-Governour, Eliphalet Dyer, Jabez Huntington, Richard Law, William Hillhouse, Nathaniel Wales, Jun., Benjamin Huntington, and P. M., Titus Hosmer, Esquires.

Voted, That an order be given to Colonel Porter to cast proper wheels and bed for a Powder-Mill, for Colonel William Pitkin & Co., for the use of their Powder works at Hartford; taking the direction of Colonel Pitkin for the model thereof.

Voted, To draw on the Pay-Table for £220, in favour of Colonel William Pitkin, for making of Powder, and to be in account: (Order drawn September 18, 1776.)

Voted, That this Council do advise his Honour the Governour to grant to James Church, of Hartford, a permit to export a cargo of the value of sixty or seventy pounds to the foreign West-Indies, for the purpose of purchasing a load of Salt, to be brought into this State, for supplying the inhabitants with that article.

Upon the representation of Colonel Samuel Coit, of the Eighth Regiment of Militia in this State, that he, by reason of age and infirmity, is unable to serve in the present expedition as a Colonel in the Militia, now ordered to New-York, praying his Honour to release him, &c.:

Voted and Resolved, That said Colonel Coit be, and he is hereby, excused from said service in the present expedition, and he has liberty to return home accordingly.

Voted, That this Council do approve of an order drawn by his Honour the Governour on the Pay-Table, in favour of Colonel Jonathan Fitch, for £1,000, dated September 13, 1776, to be in account.

Voted, That this Council do approve of an order drawn by his Honour the Governour, September 17, 1776, upon Colonel William Pitkin, for forty pounds of Powder, in favour of Mr. Asahel Case, of Norfolk, for town stock, to be delivered at 5s. 4d. per pound.

Voted, To draw an order on the Pay-Table for £50, in favour of Captain Elijah Hide, to enable him to advance in part of wages of the gentlemen of the Horse under his command on their expedition to New-York, &c., to be in account.

Voted, To desire his Honour the Governour to draw on Lieutenant-Colonel Livingston for eight Guns, for the use of the gentlemen of the Horse on their expedition to New-York.

Voted, That his Honour the Governour is desired to draw on the Pay-Table to amount of 20s. per man of the gentlemen of the Horse on their expedition towards New-York, who are to march under command of Captain Andrew Lathrop, of Norwich; said order to be in his favour, and to be in account.

Whereas great numbers of our distressed friends, inhabitants of Long-Island, by advice and request of the Convention of New-York, have fled and escaped from the enemy there, and more are still expected from thence into this State, in a destitute and helpless condition, and stand in need of assistance of the people here for their support, there being no law of this State which fully extends to their case:

Wherefore it is Voted and Resolved by this Council, that the Committee of Inspection in the several Towns where such distressed people come, be, and they are hereby, advised to provide such things as they shall judge necessary for the support of the people aforesaid, until the sitting of the General Assembly in October next, keeping an exact account of their expenses thereof, and that they lay the same, with the circumstances of those people, before said Assembly, for such orders and advice as they shall give thereon.

It being represented to this Board that many of the Troops from this State are returning home sick and wounded, and that they are exposed to suffer for want of proper accommodations and refreshments:

Voted and Resolved, That convenient Hospitals be provided for the reception and accommodation of the Troops from the Army at and near New-York, who are sick, on furlough, or discharged; that one or more such Hospitals be procured in every Town between New-Haven and King's Bridge, in the State of New-York; that a suitable person be employed at each of said Hospitals, whose duty it shall be to see that the same be furnished with provisions and refreshments for the use of the sick and wounded soldiers that may be received there, and that they be properly attended and taken care of therein; that the Selectmen in the Towns from New-Haven to Greenwich be appointed and empowered on behalf of this State, to take up and provide such Hospitals in their respective Towns, and to procure proper persons to oversee and furnish said Hospitals as aforesaid, and also to examine into the state and circumstances of sick soldiers belonging to this State on the road home, and to afford them such assistance as they judge necessary, and that Mr. Elkanah Tisdale be appointed to provide such Hospitals in the State of New-York, and appoint overseers to furnish them as aforesaid; that an order be drawn on the Pay-Table to draw upon the Treasurer, to pay said Elkanah Tisdale the sum of £100 lawful money, to enable him on his part to carry this Resolve into execution, and render his account of the same, and that said Tisdale do communicate and leave attested copies of this Resolve with several Selectmen aforesaid, and that he do also advise with, and ask the assistance of, the Committees in the State of New-York, and also of General Washington, (if necessary,) in executing this Resolve as aforesaid. (Order drawn and delivered Mr. Tisdale, September 20, 1776.)

MAJOR CARNES TO GENERAL GATES.

Fort George, September 18, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: My Colonel not being very well, I thought it my duty to acquaint you with it, and with the progress the regiment has made in the business we came upon.

The next day after we got here our men were despatched with flour and other stores for the use of the army with you, and they continue to carry cattle and stores daily, and have made great despatch, and to the entire satisfaction of the gentlemen here.

Colonel Greaton (with whom I came down at his earnest desire) began, as we thought, to mend upon his coming here; but for several days has been very ill indeed, and his life measurably despaired of, and it is now thus. He is very dangerous. But too much cannot be said in praise of the Conductor-General, and other gentlemen of the faculty. They have done every thing for the Colonel, and for others, that it was possible for men to do.

The sickness here rather abates, and I am persuaded that the mortality would not have been nigh so great as it has been, if the sick had been sent here sooner. Major Loring and other officers mend that came but lately, and they intend as soon as possible to return to their respective regiments.

Part of the troops that went from here returned last night, but not all, nor enough to do the duty necessary to be done, as I am informed. But Colonel Phinney is ready for your orders, and would have returned now if all the troops had come back. As for news, we have nothing very late that is very material.

Wishing, sir, that you may long be continued a great blessing to the United American States, and that your enemies may fall before you, I subscribe myself your Honour's most obedient, humble servant,

JOHN CARNES.

To the Hon. Horatio Gates.

P. S. Colonel Phinney's men are, almost all of them, used to the water, and understand boating.

OLIVER ELLSWORTH TO GOVERNOUR TRUMBULL.

Hartford, September 18, 1776.

SIR: Your Honour will not, perhaps, expect to be informed that any accounts of disbursements by this State, for the common safety, the year past, remain yet unprepared to lay before the Continental Congress for adjustment. This, however, is the case with regard to all the Commissaries' accounts, none of whom, notwithstanding the Assembly have ordered, and the Pay-Table Committee by advertisements requested their speedy settlement, have as yet exhibited their accounts, except Mr. Commissary Bissel, with whom a settlement could not be completed, as he was not, at that time, possessed of all the requisite vouchers. Your Honour will please to advise what further steps are to be taken for bringing those accounts to a final close, by, sir, your Honour's most respectful and obedient, humble servants,

THOMAS SEYMOUR, for OLIVER ELLSWORTH.

To the Hon. Governour Trumbull.

To the Printer of the CONNECTICUT Courant:

In your Courant of the 2d instant I was advertised as an enemy to my country; whether injuriously or not, you will better enable the publick to judge by publishing the following extracts from the Journals of the Assembly of the State of the Massachusetts-Bay.

The Petition of Charles Goodrich, Esq., of Pittsfield, in the County of Berkshire, having been considered, the following Resolve is passed thereon, viz:

"In Council, September 16, 1776.

"Whereas the Committee of the Town of Pittsfield have advertised the said Goodrich in the Connecticut Courant of September 2d, 1776, as an enemy to his country, to the end that all connections and commercial intercourse be withdrawn from him till he give satisfaction for his unfriendly conduct; and the said Committee have set forth the reasons of their proceeding against him in this manner, the principal of which are, 'his having procured to himself a commission in the King's name, to exercise authority over the people as a Justice of the Peace, which they seem to have considered as a submission to British authority; his not paying a proper regard when he was drafted from the alarm-list to serve in the expedition against Canada; and his having joined himself with the most ancient Tories and implacable enemies among us.'

"As to the first charge, Mr. Goodrich received a commission from the major part of the Council of this Colony, of such tenure and form as they judged it proper to adopt, and such, as far as they could learn, as was agreeable to the practice of the other Colonies, and agreeable to the sentiments of the Congress. The said Committee, therefore, in exhibiting this charge, have discovered an entire ignorance of the line of their duty, and great indecency towards the constitutional authority of this State.

"With regard to the second article of charge, it appears that Mr. Goodrich considered himself as not liable, by the laws of this State, to be drafted from the alarm-list, in such manner and for such purposes as was intended; and that therefore it was he did not yield a ready compliance, according to the expectation of the Committee. The other charges being general, and not supported by any proper proof or evidence, do not merit attention.

"Wherefore, it is Resolved, That it does not appear to this Court that the said Charles Goodrich, Esq., ought to be stigmatized as an enemy to his country; but that on the other hand, we consider him as a friend to the rights of mankind, and to the grand cause in which these United States are engaged.

"In Council, September 16, 1776,

"Read and accepted. Sent down for concurrence.

"JOHN AVERY, Deputy Secretary."

"The foregoing is a true copy of the Resolve on the Petition of Charles Goodrich, Esq., which passed the honourable Board, and brought down to the House of Representatives, September 16, 1776.

"Attest: SAM. FREEMAN, Clerk."

The following Vote is the reason that a concurrence with the proceeding was not tried in the House of Representatives, viz:

"In the House of Representatives, September 16, 1776.

"On motion, Voted, That no private matter be taken up during the present sitting of this Court.

"Extract from the minutes.

"Attest: SAM. FREEMAN, Clerk."

The Committee above referred to are: Valentine Rathburn, Joseph Wright, William Francis, Aaron Baker, Joseph Keeler, William Barber, Stepan Crawfoot, James Noble, and John Strong. If these men, as the honourable Council have adjudged, ignorant of the line of their duty, would usurp a power to control their own constitutional Legislature, and punish with infamy a man for paying a dutiful respect to their acts and appointments—if these men, with the cry of liberty, and the misplaced confidence of the credulous, are aiming at a total dissolution of the powers of Government, and force a people, made desperate with anarchy, to seek a refuge in the jaws of British tyranny—if these are their views, and this the tendency of their conduct, they ought to be named to the publick, and guarded against as the most dangerous species of internal enemies.

I am, sir, your's and the publick's friend and humble servant,

CHARLES GOODRICH.

Pittsfield, September 18, 1776.

PROVIDENCE (RHODE-ISLAND) TOWN-MEETING.

At a Town-Meeting of the Town of Providence, holden on the 18th day of September, A. D. 1776, by adjournment, Captain John Updike Moderator:

Voted, That each soldier who inlists himself into this town's proportion of the Battalion to replace Colonel Richmond's Regiment, equip himself fit for marching to Newport.

Voted, That the officers be ordered not to inlist any men out of the neighbouring towns in the County into this town's proportion of the men for the Battalion now raising to go upon Rhode-Island, until Saturday, the 21st instant, and that they inlist the number of forty-three able-bodied men, as this town's proportion of said Battalion, officers included, who belong to this town.

Voted, That one hundred small-arms, belonging to the Town of Providence, be sold and delivered to Colonel John Mathewson, for the use of the State, at the price of £3 18s., each, and that the money therefor be paid to the Town Treasurer as soon as may be.

GENERAL LINCOLN TO MASSACHUSETTS COUNCIL.

Boston, September 18, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: By the late resolve of Court, the General Officer is to appoint a Brigade Major to each brigade. I should be glad of your Honours' advice, whether I am confined in the appointment to Militia officers? There are now no Brigade Majors in the Militia. It is an office of great importance, and requires a good degree of knowledge in military matters. I should be glad of your Honours' advice, also, whether such an officer may expect allowance for a horse? Without one he cannot go; neither can he, in common case, do without one in camp.

Colonel Crafts will wait on your Honours for an answer.

I am your Honours' most obedient servant,

BENJ. LINCOLN.

TO THE PRINTER OF THE LONDON CHRONICLE.

London, September 19, 1776.

SIR: Observing that the Earl of Chatham's speech in favour of the Americans is now republished, and circulating by thousands through the kingdom, will you be pleased, at this most important crisis, to publish the following extract from Governour Pownall's celebrated speech in defence of the Americans, in 1769, which, with all submission, is no way inferior to his Lordship's:

"If you attempt to force taxes against the spirit of the people of America, you will find, when perhaps it is too late, that they are of a spirit which will resist all force, which will grow stronger by being forced—will prove superior to all force—and ever has been unconquerable: they are of a spirit to abide, nay, to court persecution: and if, amongst other propositions which they have taken up, they should once take it into their heads, that they are under a state of persecution, that spirit of enthusiasm which is of their temper, and of their very nature, will arise, and every mischievous consequence, in every extreme, will accompany it.

"This spirit is not dead in them; it is only dormant; the utmost care and skill of those who lead them, either in civil or religious matters, is employed to restrain and keep it down. If this spirit should once take fire—and believe me, sir, it is in such a state of inflammability, that the smallest spark would give it fire—it will break out into a flame, which no reason, no prudence, no force, can restrain: those who yet retain some lead, and have kept matters from running to extremities, to whom the people still listen—will either lose that lead, or will take the lead of this spirit when it shall be once gone forth—and if the ministers (whom we here call the clergy) once fall in with this spirit, if the people once call on them, they must take the lead—and if they do, the people (to use their own phrase) will be led by Moses and Aaron, by the civil and religious, under a bond of unity that no factions will divide, no force can break.

"The spirit of their religion will, like Moses' serpent, devour every other passion and affection; their love for the mother country, changing its nature, will turn to the bitterest hate; their affectation of our modes and fashions (the present source of great part of our commerce) will become an abomination in their sight.

"That spirit which led their ancestors to break off from every thing which is near and dear to the human heart; from every connection which friendship, relation, blood, could give; which led them to quit every comfort that a settled and civilized country (their own native country) could afford; and to encounter every difficulty and distress, which a wild wilderness of savages could oppose to them; * to struggle even for their existence,—that spirit equally strong, and equally inflamed, has but a slight and trifling sacrifice to make at this time; they have not to quit their native country, but to defend it; they have not to forsake their friends and relations, but to unite with and stand by them, in one common union. The only sacrifice they have to make is, that of a few follies and a few luxuries. It is not necessity that is the ground of their commerce with you; it is merely the affectation of our modes and customs: the love for home, as they call England, that makes them like every thing which comes from thence; but passion may be conquered by passion, and they will abominate as sincerely as they now love you; and if they do, they have within themselves every thing which is necessary to the food, raiment, or the dwelling of mankind, and have no need of your commerce.

"But, that gentlemen may not think this to be mere harangue, I will come to particulars. They have a great surplussage of hides; and leather hides are even part of their exports. They have peltry. They have wool, linen, and cotton. They work up all these, and have home-made and home-spun sufficient for their clothing. They have fish, game, beef, mutton, and every other article, at about one-third of the price which we pay here! They have iron and copper, which they cast and work up in every form that is necessary. The only difficulty which they have at first to labour against, will be the manufacture of hardware. But when I tell the House that they do already make all the implements of husbandry better than those which come to them from England—and that the husbandmen buy such in preference to those made in England—they will see how large a stride they have taken towards the establishment of this branch of business; and (overloaded, from various reasons, as every branch of our manufactures is with manufacturers,) if a stop be put to them but for one year! The tide is on the turn; the manufacturers with the turn of that tide, will go over in shoals to America, as they once came over hither from the Netherlands. If it be not the humour of the House to bear to be told this now, they will remember it hereafter.

* See Hutchinson's history, as he calls it.

“In one word. If the spirit of the Americans should once arise upon the idea of persecution, those people whom Great Britain hath, to this hour, drawn as it were with a thread, and whom it has governed, as you have been ingeniously told,* with a little paper and pack thread, you will not, for the future, be able to govern it with a rod of iron: and every benefit which this country has derived from that country, will be stopped at every source.

“If it be not the humour of the House to believe this at present, I only beg they will remember it has been said, and that they are forewarned of it.”

Is it possible that any man living could have foretold with greater precision, the precise crisis that hath now, in this our day, come into event? Could an angel from Heaven have spoken more to the purpose? Yet this did not please; a certain late Governour's hypocritical epistles and criminal misrepresentations suited better, and for which he now enjoys an enormous pension, while Mr. Pownall (really the King's friend) has nothing at all from Government.

I am, sir, your most obliged, humble servant,
AN AMERICAN.

TO THE PRINTER OF THE LONDON CHRONICLE.

London, September 19, 1776.

SIR: I confess I was once an advocate for the Americans; their claim to be exempted from Parliamentary taxation seemed to me to be founded in justice; and I thought it was equitable at least to give them security against an oppressive exercise of it. But some of their late proceedings have convinced me that their opposition is not dictated by true patriotism, but by a spirit of tyranny and despotism. I shall not insist on their having destroyed the liberty of the press, and preventing any thing from being published amongst them, which controverted the measures of the Congress; I shall not mention their having obliged peaceable citizens, at the peril of the loss of their lives and fortunes, to subscribe associations, however contrary to their principles and opinions. Some of the late resolutions of the Provincial Congress at New-York, must fill the mind of every good man, of every friend to the rights of humanity, with indignation and horror. We there find these pretended advocates for freedom audaciously depriving their fellow-citizens of the common privilege of investigation and speech, precluding them of the benefit of trial by jury, subjecting them to punishments by ex post facto laws, and exposing to the mercy of an unconstitutional and inquisitorial judicatory, the fortunes and lives of those whom they may determine have spoken disrespectful of their proceedings, or controverted their authority. A judicatory, indignant reader! which may be composed of men who may at the same time act in the capacity of accusers, legislators, and judges, and enjoy the forfeited estates of those who may be so unhappy as to fall under their sentence. Are these the men for whom Englishmen are contending? Is the happiness of thousands to be sacrificed, to aggrandize riches like these? Shall the sacred name of Liberty be made the instrument to glut the avarice, the tyranny, of such enemies to civil society? I beg leave only to insert an extract from the resolves of the Provincial Congress, which met at New-York, on September 1, 1775, and submit it to the perusal of every impartial Briton:

“Resolved, That if any person or persons shall hereafter deny or oppose the authority of the Continental or this

* By Mr. Burke.

Congress, or the Committee of Safety, or the Committees of the respective Counties, Cities, Towns, Manors, Precincts or Districts, in this Colony, or dissuade any person or persons from obeying the recommendations of the Continental or this Congress, or the Committee of Safety, or Committees aforesaid, and be thereof convicted before the Committee of the County, or any thirteen or more of their number, who shall or may meet upon a general call of the Chairman of the Committee where such person or persons may reside, that such Committee shall cause such offenders to be disarmed, and for the second offence they shall be committed to close confinement at their respective expense; and in case any of the said Committees are unable to carry this or any resolution into execution, they are hereby directed to apply to the next County Committee, or Commanding Officer of the Militia, &c., for necessary assistance, as the case may require. But if it shall so happen, that any violators of this resolution shall reside in a County where there is no Committee of the County, in that case the matter shall be triable before the Committee of the next County, &c.

“Resolved, further, That the respective Committees and the Militia of the several Counties by order of their respective Committees, or of the Commissioned Officer of the Militia then nearest, are expressly enjoined to apprehend every inhabitant or resident of this Colony, who now is, or shall hereafter be discovered to be enlisted, or in arms against the liberties of America, and to confine such offender or offenders into safe custody, and his or their punishment is reserved to the determination of this or some future Provincial Congress. And the Committee nearest to any person who shall be so enlisted, or hath taken up arms against the liberties of America, are hereby directed to appoint some discreet person to take the charge of the estate, both real and personal, of any such person or persons; which person so appointed, shall be invested with such estate, and render on oath a just and true account thereof to this or some future Congress, or to Commissioners to be by them appointed, and pay the issues and profits thereof to the Treasurer appointed by this Congress for the use of the associated Colonies.”

Thus have these pretended advocates for liberty given us a true picture of their spirit and designs; and the best punishment which can be inflicted on their abettors in this country, would be to transport them to that, that they may experience the difference between the mild and equitable laws of a British Parliament and the tyrannical edicts of an American Congress.

I am, sir, your humble servant, APPIUS.

SPEECH OF HIS EXCELLENCY JOHN RUTLEDGE, ESQ., PRESIDENT AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE STATE OF SOUTH-CAROLINA, TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY MET AT CHARLESTOWN ON THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1776.

Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council,
Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the General Assembly:

I think it my duty to pay this tribute of applause to those brave troops, who, in repelling the formidable British armament which attacked them on Sullivan's Island, vainly flattering themselves with an assurance of easy conquest, displayed firmness and intrepidity that would have reflected honour on Roman veterans; and I most heartily congratulate you on their heroick behaviour. It is an auspicious presage of what may be expected from the valour of our other troops, when theirs shall be the post of danger; as it demonstrates that men, animated by an ardent zeal for the sacred liberties of their country, and trusting in the Divine support, are capable of the most glorious achievements.

The Cherokee Indians having committed such barbarous acts of hostility as threatened desolation to the frontier settlements, at a time when the enemy lay in view of this town and an attack on it was daily expected, a considerable force was immediately sent into that nation to obtain satisfaction for their cruel outrages, by acting with the greatest vigour. Our people have behaved with much spirit. It has pleased God to grant very signal success to their operations, and I hope, by His blessing on our arms and those of North-Carolina and Virginia, from whom I have promises of aid, an end may soon be put to this war.

Since your last meeting, the Continental Congress have declared the United Colonies free and independent States, absolved from allegiance to the British Crown, and the political connection between them and Great Britain totally dissolved—an event which necessity had rendered not only justifiable but unavoidable. This declaration, and several resolves of that honourable body received during your recess, shall be laid before you. I doubt not you will take such measures as may be requisite in consequence of them.

A well-regulated Militia being essential to the preservation of our freedom, I am persuaded you will think with me that your time cannot be better employed than in framing a law for making such improvements in the Militia as may produce the most beneficial consequences.

It is not improbable that, at the season appointed for the meeting of the next Assembly, the business of legislation must yield to that of a different nature; and it behooves us to employ this time of the enemy's absence in making the best preparations for defence, and enacting such laws as the present exigencies demand. I have therefore thought it for the publick service to call you together now, that you may deliberate on those matters which tend to the interest and security of the State.

I shall propose what, in the course of your session, appear so to me, and be happy in receiving your advice on, and concurring with you, in any that may effect those important objects.

JOHN RUTLEDGE.

September 19, 1776.

To this Speech, the Legislative Council returned the following Answer:

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the Legislative Council now met in a Constitutional Assembly of the State, return your Excellency our thanks for your speech to both Houses at the opening of the present session; it contains information truly glorious and important, and must be highly acceptable to every true lover of his country.

The late defeat of the British forces by our troops on Sullivan's Island, near Charlestown, is an illustrious event in our history. Those troops acquired as much honour as troops could obtain. By their bravery, under God, our country was relieved from much anxiety, and procured present safety. And we rejoice at the opportunity we have of paying our tribute to their merits, at the same time congratulating your Excellency upon their conduct, which was and is as honourable to themselves as important to the State. We embrace this auspicious presage of what may be expected from our other troops, in whom we have a most perfect confidence; and we are persuaded, that men animated with an ardent zeal for the liberties of their country, and trusting in the Lord of hosts, are equal to the most ardent enterprises.

The critical commencement of the Cherokee war fills us with a just indignation of the treachery of those savages, and convinces us of what, indeed, we had before little reason to doubt, of the indiscriminate atrocity and unrelenting tyranny of the hand that directs the British war against us. But it has pleased God to take an injured people under his protection, and to bless our arms with distinguished success, as well against our British enemies as their savage allies. In repelling this barbarous attack on our people, the spirit of our frontier inhabitants deserves the highest commendations; and with a continuance of the Divine favour upon their efforts, now in conjunction, as we have reason to believe, with the good people of North-Carolina and Virginia, we hope by a speedy and complete conquest of the Cherokee lands, already so happily and far advanced by our arms, this State, as well as our neighbouring States, will be effectually secured from a repetition of those hostilities from those merciless savages in a day of distress.

The Declaration of the Continental Congress, that “the United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States—that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved,” calls forth all our attention. It is an event which necessity had rendered not only justifiable, but absolutely unavoidable. It is a decree now worthy of America. We thankfully receive the notification of and rejoice at it; and we are determined at every hazard to endeavour to maintain it, that so, after we have departed, our children and their latest posterity may have cause to bless our memory.

We shall pay all proper attention to the resolves of the truly honourable Continental Congress, and enter into such measures respecting them as may be expedient for the publick service.

Sensible as we are that a well-regulated Militia is essential to the preservation of our freedom, your Excellency may be assured that we shall endeavour to place that bulwark of our safety upon the best foundation; and that now, while we have an opportunity free from the immediate alarms of war, we shall diligently proceed so as to amend our old laws and to form others as may effectually tend to prosecute the publick interest, to be in a proper state of preparation to repel the expected attacks of the enemy, and in general to establish the best polity in our new State.

We beg leave to notify to your Excellency our entire satisfaction in and approbation of your publick conduct during the time of your administration.

In the Legislative Council the 20th day of September, 1776.

By order of the House:

THOMAS SHUBRICK, Speaker.

To this Answer of the Legislative Council, the President replied:

HONOURABLE GENTLEMEN: The sentiments which you express respecting our troops, must give them great pleasure.

Your determination to endeavour to maintain the independence of the United States, at every hazard, proves that you know the value and are deserving of those rights for which America contends.

I doubt not your attention to publick business; and am glad to find that my conduct meets with your approbation.

JOHN RUTLEDGE.

September 20, 1776.

To His Excellency JOHN RUTLEDGE, Esq., President and Commander-in-Chief of the State of SOUTH-CAROLINA: The Address of the General Assembly of the said State.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY: We, the Representatives of the State of South-Carolina, met in General Assembly, beg leave most heartily to join your Excellency with our tribute of applause to those brave troops who lately signalized themselves by their firmness and intrepidity in repelling the formidable British armament which attacked them on Sullivan's Island, and thereby disappointing the vain and flattering expectations of our cruel and unnatural foes; a tribute we deemed justly due from an injured country for such heroick behaviour, and a grateful testimony of the early and auspicious presage of the future valour and heroism of men animated by the noblest of all incentives—an ardent zeal for the sacred liberties of their country, and a confidence in Divine justice.

We are happy to find the barbarous and ungrateful attempt of the Cherokee Indians, instigated by our British enemies, on our frontier settlements, are checked by the spirit and activity of our brave countrymen in those parts; and from their past success, as well as the zeal and activity of our friends of North-Carolina and Virginia, hope a speedy end will be put to the outrages of those detestable savages.

It is with unspeakable pleasure we embrace this opportunity of expressing our satisfaction in the declaration of the Continental Congress, constituting the United Colonies free and independent States, absolved from allegiance to the British Crown, and totally dissolving all political union between them and Great Britain; an event unsought for, and now produced by unavoidable necessity; and which every friend to justice and humanity must not only hold justifiable as the natural effect of unremitted persecution, but equally rejoice in as the only effectual security against injuries and oppressions, and the most promising source of future liberty and safety. The Declaration of Independency and Resolves of the honourable the Continental Congress, now laid before us, shall be the principal objects of our attention in our deliberations for the publick good.

We are fully persuaded that it is essential to the liberties and support of a free State to have a well-regulated Militia; and more especially to this State, in the present circumstances of affairs in America. We shall therefore think it our duty, while the business of legislation is not interrupted by the din of arms, to employ every opportunity to effect a purpose so beneficial, in making the best preparations for defence, and in framing such laws as are necessary for the safety and security of the State.

In the General Assembly the 20th day of September, 1776.

By order of the House:

JAMES PARSONS, Speaker.

HIS EXCELLENCY'S ANSWER.

MR. SPEAKER AND GENTLEMEN: This most honourable reward cannot fail to make the deepest impression upon generous minds. It will increase the laudable ambition of those on whom it is conferred, and excite others to emulate that fame which they have acquired.

May the happiest consequences be derived to the United States from the independence of America, who could not obtain even peace, liberty and safety by any other means.

Your disposition and assurances afford a confident expectation that this session will be usefully employed.

JOHN RUTLEDGE.

GENERAL MOORE TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

[Read October 7, 1776.]

Wilmington, September 19, 1776.

SIR: Yours of the 3d instant I had this day the honour to receive, and shall with all possible despatch proceed to execute the order of Congress, for marching two battalions of the Continental troops to the reinforcement of the army at New-York.

One entire battalion and a considerable part of two others having marched on an expedition to Florida, will put it out of my power to make up two full battalions. I flatter myself I shall, however, be able to march with about eight hundred men, and leave a sufficient number for the defence of this place.

I hope to begin my march in two days, and be assured, sir, nothing in my power shall be wanting to afford a timely aid to our friends engaged in the glorious cause of liberty, than which not any thing will contribute more to my happiness.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

JAMES MOORE.

To the Hon. John Hancock, Esq.

ADDRESS TO GENERAL STEPHEN.

The Address of the Officers of the Fourth VIRGINIA Battalion to ADAM STEPHEN, Esq., Brigadier-General in the service of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

SIR: It is with heartfelt satisfaction that the Officers of the Fourth Battalion have been informed, that the honourable Continental Congress have been pleased to promote you to the rank of a Brigadier-General in the Continental service. We conceive it a promotion justly due to your merit; and please to permit us to congratulate you on this event, which we cordially hope may be attended with every possible degree of happiness to yourself, and service to the just cause in which you have so early and readily embarked.

When we reflect, sir, on the kind, the indulgent, the manly treatment we have received whilst under your immediate eye, as commandant of our battalion; when we also consider with what facility you established amongst us that discipline and order so essential to the preservation and glory of an army, we are at a loss which most to admire, the polite gentleman or the accomplished officer.

By the regulation of Congress we fear we shall be deprived of you—although it is amongst one of the most desirable wishes of our hearts to be still under your immediate direction and command; should we, sir, be so unfortunate as to find our conjectures right on this occasion, we would wish you to know that the officers of the Fourth Battalion, with hearts replete with gratitude and respect, will devoutly implore the Divine Being for your safety and protection, in whatever part of America the service of the United States thereof may require your presence.

Portsmouth, September 19, 1776.

GENERAL STEPHEN'S ANSWER.

GENTLEMEN: I am sensible of the honour done me by your friendly and affectionate address.

In the course of all my service, and this is the twelfth campaign, I have seldom met with officers so warmly attached to the service, or so anxious and attentive to study their duty.

It is owing to you, gentlemen, that discipline has been established in the regiment with so much facility.

The harmony that has subsisted in the corps, and your exemplary conduct to the soldiers, has made me easy and happy in the command.

I will be ever interested in the behaviour of the Fourth Battalion, and am firmly persuaded that, when opportunity offers, they will distinguish themselves in the most honourable manner, in the service of the United States.

That your ardour may be tempered with prudence, and your efforts crowned with success, is the ardent wish of, gentlemen, your most affectionate, humble servant,

ADAM STEPHEN.

To the Officers of the Fourth Regiment.

COLONEL TRAVERS TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

September 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: The conduct of Levi Willen, First Lieutenant, and Job Todd, Ensign, in Captain Henry Lake's company, of my battalion, being very exceptionable, I beg you will be pleased to appoint a Court-Martial to inquire into their conduct.

I am, with much respect, gentlemen, your most humble servant,

WILLIAM TRAVERS.

To the Honourable Council of Safety of Maryland, Annapolis.

MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY TO COLONEL SIM.

[No. 184.]

Annapolis, September 19, 1776.

SIR: We send by Captain L. Covington, the bounty money for raising a company of Militia in your County. We do not send the month's pay advance, because we think the company ought to be in some forwardness before that money is issued. Arms are to be borrowed or impressed. You are to have a meeting of Field-Officers and Captains on Monday next, by order of Convention. When the recommendations are completed, we will send down warrants and money for guns, on having the appraisement returned.

We are, &c.

To Colonel Joseph Sim.

THOMAS GANTT TO MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

September 19, 1776.

HONOURED SIR: Mr. Thomas N. Stockett being desirous of being appointed Assistant Surgeon, applied to me for a recommendation concerning his medical knowledge, having lived with Mr. Stockett for four or five years past, the greatest part of which time he applied himself to the study of physick; and since my leaving that place, have had frequent opportunities of being acquainted with his method of practice; think him sufficiently qualified to act in that character, should you think proper to appoint him.

Remain your obedient servant,

THOMAS GANTT, 3D.

To the Hon. Daniel of St. Thomas Jenifer, Esq.

COLONEL SIM TO THE MARYLAND COUNCIL OF SAFETY.

Prince George's County, September 19, 1776.

GENTLEMEN: In compliance with a resolve of Convention, of the 6th instant, and sent me, I have recommended the bearer, Captain Levin Covington, to command the company to be raised in this County; and I have also recommended the other three commissioned officers, who are all very agreeable to the people, and are now engaged in recruiting; and I flatter we shall be able, in a very short time, to complete the company within my district. But as nothing effectual can be done without having both the bounty and advance money in hand, Captain Covington now waits on you for it; which I hope will be furnished him.

As the guns are to be furnished for this company, it will be absolutely necessary the money for this purpose should be also sent down immediately.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

JOSEPH SIM.

To the Hon. the Council of Safety of Maryland.

AN ACT FOR THE SECURITY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF NEW-JERSEY.

Whereas it is essentially necessary for the safety of the State that every person who holds any office or post of a publick nature should evince his fidelity and attachment to the Government from whence he derives protection, and under which he is authorized to act: and whereas, to effect this important purpose, it is necessary that a proper test be established, to be taken by all officers, civil and military, within this State; and that the Governour or Commander-in-Chief be authorized by law to administer such test, and the official and other necessary oaths, in the several Counties thereof:

1. Therefore, Be it enacted by the Council and General Assembly of this State, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That the following test shall be taken by all officers, civil and military, who are now in office, or hereafter shall be appointed, elected, or commissioned, within the several Counties of this State; that is to say:

"I, A B, do sincerely profess and swear (or, if one of the people called Quakers, affirm) that I do not hold myself bound to bear allegiance to the King of Great Britain; so help me God."

"I, A B, do sincerely profess and swear (or, if one of the people called Quakers, affirm) that I do and will bear true faith and allegiance to the Government established in this State, under the authority of the people; so help me God."

Which oaths or affirmations shall be administered by any person or persons who shall be duly authorized to tender the same by the Commander-in-Chief of this State, by dedimus protestatem or otherwise. And all officers refusing or neglecting, for the term of one month after notification given by any person named in the dedimus protestatem, to take the said test, are hereby declared to be disqualified and incapable of executing such their offices; in which case some other fit person or persons shall, pursuant to law, be appointed or elected, as the case may require.

2. And whereas it is necessary that fit persons be duly empowered to qualify the Magistrates and other officers who have been or shall be elected, appointed or commissioned throughout this State:

Be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That his Excellency the Governour, or the Commander-in-Chief for the time being, shall be, and he is hereby authorized to issue commissions of dedimus protestatem, or other commissions, from time to time, as occasion may require, for the purposes aforesaid.

3. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the act passed the 5th of May, 1772, intituled "An Act for the security of his Majesty's Government of New-Jersey," and so much of the act passed the 10th of February, 1727-'8, intituled "An Act prescribing the forms of declaration of fidelity, the effect of the abjuration oath and affirmation, instead of the form heretofore required in such cases, and for repealing the former acts in the like cases made and provided," as relates to taking affirmations to the King of Great Britain, and the acts thereby repealed, shall be, and the same are hereby, repealed.

Passed at Princeton, the 19th of September, 1776.

Pursuant to the foregoing Act, his Excellency the Governour has been pleased to issue a commission to the Members of the Council, the Justices of the Supreme Court, the Secretary and the Clerk of the Supreme Court, empowering them, and each of them, to administer the oaths and affirmations, as the case may require, to all officers, civil and military, within this State; and commissions to the Judges and Clerks of the Inferiour Courts of Common Pleas, empowering them, and each of them, to administer the oaths and affirmations, in like manner, within their respective Counties.

By RICHARD Viscount HOWE, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, and WILLIAM HOWE, Esquire, General of His Majesty's Forces in AMERICA, the King's Commissioners for restoring Peace to His Majesty's Colonies and Plantations in NORTH-AMERICA, &c., &c., &c.

DECLARATION.

Although Congress, whom the misguided Americans suffer to direct their opposition to a reestablishment of the Constitutional Government of these Provinces, have disavowed every purpose of reconciliation not consonant with their extravagant and inadmissible claim of Independence, the King's Commissioners think fit to declare that they are equally desirous to confer with his Majesty's well-affected subjects, upon the means of restoring the publick tranquillity, and establishing a permanent union with every Colony as a part of the British Empire. The King being most graciously pleased to direct a revision of such of his royal instructions to his Governours as may be construed to lay an improper restraint on the freedom of legislation in any of his Colonies, and to concur in the revisal of all acts by which his Majesty's subjects there may think themselves aggrieved, it is recommended to the inhabitants at large to reflect seriously upon their present condition and expectations, and judge for themselves whether it be more inconsistent with their honour and happiness to offer up their lives as a sacrifice to the unjust and precarious cause in which they are engaged, or return to their allegiance, accept the blessings of peace, and to be secured in a free enjoyment of their liberties and properties, upon the true principles of the Constitution.

Given at New-York, September 19, 1776.

HOWE.

W. HOWE.

By command of their Excellencies:

STRAGHEY.

EXPLANATION OF A LATE DECLARATION.

By RICHARD Viscount HOWE, of the Kingdom of IRELAND, and WILLIAM HOWE, Esq., General of his Majesty's Forces in AMERICA, the King's Commissioners for deluding the good people of AMERICA by insidious offers of peace, or shedding their blood without mercy.

DECLARATION.

Although the Congress, whom the much-injured Americans suffer to direct their opposition to the establishment of tyranny, and an unconstitutional Government over these Provinces, have disavowed every purpose of reconciliation not consonant with that liberty to which they have the most clear and undeniable right, the King's Commissioners aforesaid think fit to declare, that they are equally desirous to confer with his Majesty's subjects (if any so weak and abandoned are to be found) upon the means of establishing a permanent tyranny over every Colony, and fix them the everlasting slaves of the British empire.

The King being most graciously pleased to direct a revision of such of his Royal instructions as may seem not to lay a sufficient restraint upon the freedom of legislation in any of the Colonies, and to concur in the revisal of all acts by which his subjects there may think themselves aggrieved, for the better strengthening and confirming the same, it is recommended to the inhabitants at large to reflect seriously upon their present condition and expectations, and to judge for themselves, whether it be more consistent with their honour and happiness to risk their lives in defence of a glorious Independency, or return to the galling yoke of tyrannick usurpation, and be deprived of every security in the enjoyment of their liberty and properties upon the true principles of a wicked and destructive policy.

HOWE.

W. HOWE.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO THE PRESIDENT OF CONGRESS.

Head-Quarters, at Colonel Roger Morris's House, }
September 19, 1776. }

SIR: Since I had the honour of addressing you yesterday nothing material has occurred; however, it is probable in a little time, the enemy will attempt to force us from hence as we are informed they are bringing many of their heavy cannon towards the heights and the works we have thrown up. They have also eight or nine ships of war in the North River, which, it is said, are to cannonade our right flank, when they open their batteries against our front. Every disposition is making on our part for defence, and Congress may be assured that I shall do every thing in my power to maintain the post so long as it shall appear practicable and conducive to the general good.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient servant,
Go. WASHINGTON.

GENERAL WASHINGTON TO GENERAL HOWE.

Head-Quarters, September 19, 1776.
