Great Western Railway Company.

The charter under which, with various subsequent amendments and modifications, this railroad was constructed, dates back to 1834. In March of that year an act was passed by the Canadian Parliament incorporating the "London and Gore Railroad Company;" under this charter, authority was given to construct a single or double track, wooden or iron, railroad from London to Burlington Bay, and also to the navigable waters of the river Thames and Lake Huron, and to employ thereon either the force of steam or the power of animals, or any other mechanical power. The capital was fixed at $400,000, in 8000 shares of $50 each. Authority was, however, given to increase the capital stock to double this amount, in case it was determined to continue the road to Lake Huron. The charter was to be in force for twelve years from its passage. No action appears to have been taken under this act, and in 1845, when its privileges were on the eve of lapsing, application was made for its renewal, and for amendments to be introduced, changing the corporate name of the company, increasing its capital stock to $6,000,000, and authorizing the construction of a road from the Niagara River to Lake Huron. In accordance with these amendments, the title of the company was changed to Great Western Railway Company, and the capital stock being placed on the market, eleven-twelfths were immediately subscribed for in England, and one-twelfth in Canada. A description of the route selected for this railway is almost superfluous, but it may be stated that after leaving the Niagara River at Suspension Bridge, where the land is 330 feet above the level of Lake Ontario, it gradually descends to the level of the lake near Hamilton, where the general offices of the company are located, where there are commodious machine and repair shops, and where the branch to Toronto diverges from the main line. From Hamilton the grades are ascending to a point near Guelph, and thence the road descends gradually to the St. Clair River, at Detroit. From Komoka westward, 100 miles are nearly level, and 57 miles are in a straight line. The advantages of such a location for the economical transaction of a heavy traffic will be readily appreciated by railroad officers. The original estimate for building the road between Suspension Bridge and Windsor had been $6,000,000, and it had been supposed that the subscriptions to the share capital would supply sufficient funds for the undertaking; but experience demonstrated the utter fallacy of these estimates, and when the road was completed the share capital was in the neighbourhood of $25,000,000. It would be impossible, in the space at our disposal, to trace accurately and chronologically the vicissitudes through which the Great Western Railway Company passed in attempting to solve the problem of operating a railway, which, from its connections at either terminus with the American system of railroads, was practically American. On the same principles which governed the management of English railroads year by year, the directors found that they were losing ground in the competition for business, the gauge of the road militated against a prompt interchange of traffic and economical operating, and the "north shore route" was rapidly losing the prestige to which, from its geographical location, it was justly entitled. Finally, in the fall of 1869, a deputation from the board of directors, in London, visited this country, with the view of making permanent arrangements for conducting the through traffic between Suspension Bridge and Chicago on a more economical basis, and for consolidating the interests of the Michigan Central Railroad and the Great Western Railway Companies. By this arrangement, which was approved by the stockholders at a special meeting, held in February, 1870, the receipts from through traffic over the Michigan Central, Great Western, and Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Companies are divided between the three lines in the proportion of 48 per cent. to the Michigan Central, 48 per cent. to the Great Western, and 4 per cent. to the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Company. The proportion of earnings for the purpose of the agreement was based on the result of the two previous years' through traffic in the case of the two first-named lines, and on one year's traffic of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad. It may be noted here that in 1868 the Great Western Railway Company obtained permission from the Canadian Government to have its original charter repealed, in so far as the maintenance of a 5 feet 6 inches gauge was concerned, and the strenuous efforts made to assimilate the gauge to that of the roads with which the company had close business relations was so far successful that, in 1870, the whole line from Windsor to Komoka, and from Hamilton to Toronto, and Suspension Bridge, was reduced to the American standard, while the remainder of the main line was accommodated with a third rail, which allowed the passage of narrow-gauge cars over the whole line.

It may be noted here that in 1869 the friends of the Great Western Railway deemed it prudent to obtain from the Ontario Legislature a permissive and protective charter for a loop line to occupy the territory south of the Great Western main line. The proposed addition to the system then owned and controlled was to extend from Glencoe Station to Fort Erie, opposite Buffalo, and was to be constructed by a company called the "Canada Air-Line Company;" and to carry this project out an organization was effected in the winter of 1869–1870. The capital stock was subscribed for, and contracts for the construction of the first 38 miles were let on favorable terms. Some difficulty was at first experienced, in consequence of a tight money market and other contingencies in promulgating a scheme to raise the capital necessary for this new project; but in July, 1870, the stockholders of the Great Western Railway Company ratified an agreement for the amalgamation of the "Air-Line" with the Great Western, and for an assimilation of the stocks and securities of both companies. The new enterprise thus became thoroughly identified in its prosecution with the older organization, and no difficulty has been experienced in providing the necessary funds for carrying on the work. During the first six months of 1870 the alliance between the company and the Michigan Central, and Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Companies appears to have worked satisfactorily, and the unremitting attention paid to the prompt running of trains and sure connections resulted in large additions to the revenue derived from through passenger traffic. Local business also responded to the increased facilities afforded for its accommodation; and the directors congratulated the stockholders on the improved condition of their property, and predicted that with a superior organization, with a management recognizing directly the principle of individual responsibility, with a narrow-gauge track in good order, and with improved freight rates, a prosperous future might be confidently anticipated. Nor were the directors deceived in these prognostications, as the aggregate traffic receipts for half-year ending December 31, 1870, were £20,357 more than in the preceding half-year, and the directors were able to declare a semi-annual dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum on the ordinary stock capital. These results were especially satisfactory in view of the fact that during the fifteen months ending December 31, 1872, more than 111 miles of the main line had been relaid with steel rails, or with an excellent quality of iron rails, the cost of which, with the exception of the difference in value of 3000 tons of steel above iron rails, had been charged to revenue. At the same time the managers had the satisfaction of stating that a very large traffic had been worked over the line with great regularity and freedom from accident; also, that the important policy of changing the gauge had been proceeded with so far that only 86 miles of the main line was laid with triple rails, and the use of broad-gauge engines was confined to that section of the road lying between Komoka and Hamilton. It will be readily understood that the expenses incident to remodeling all the equipment to the narrow-gauge standard necessitated very heavy expenditures, and additional equipment was also required to meet the demands of an augmented traffic. A special fund was therefore raised for defraying these extraordinary expenses, with the understanding that money thus advanced should be a charge against revenue, and should be paid in half-yearly installments, extending over a period of five years, and commencing with the half-year ending June 30, 1871. The item to which the cost of these alterations was charged was "alteration of gauge—suspense account." While, however, the directors of the Great Western Railway Company were busily occupied in improving the material condition of the property intrusted to their charge, they were not unmindful of their relations to other roads and the development of through traffic; consequently, in 1870, arrangements were entered into with the Port Huron and Michigan, and Detroit, Hillsdale and Indiana Railroad Companies, whereby the traffic of those roads then in process of construction was practically secured for the line via Suspension Bridge, it being mutually understood that a certain portion of the additional traffic earnings derived from these new roads should be applied to the acquisition and redemption of their first mortgage bonds. These arrangements were justified on the grounds that by the first-named railroad as running from Port Huron to Owosso access was obtained by a short line route to one of the best-settled portions of the State of Michigan, while by the latter the Great Western Railway Company was enabled to enter into competition for the traffic of a section of Michigan and Indiana from which it had been previously debarred.

The opening of the Suspension Bridge and Niagara Branch of the Erie Railway in the early part of 1871 was an important incident in the history of the Great Western Railway Company, because it rendered them, comparatively speaking, independent, and gave them two available outlets for their traffic to the seaboard. These advantages have not been overlooked, and it is believed that the route via the Erie Railway and Suspension Bridge has become so popular with the travelling and shipping public that the Erie Railway now derives a considerable revenue from business which, in former years, was monopolized by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad. During the fall of 1870, the project was revived of building a short branch from Harrisburg to Brantford, a distance of 7½ miles. The cost of this road was estimated at $150,000, and the town of Brantford contributed $75,000 as a bonus to aid in its construction. This branch is now, and must remain, a valuable feeder of the Great Western Railway, especially as it terminates at the canal basin of the Grand River navigation, where the bulk of the grain business of the town and adjacent country is concentrated. The report for half-year ending December 31, 1870, states that contracts had been let for 103 miles of the work on the Glencoe and Buffalo line, said contracts being at prices within the engineer's estimates. Arrangements, however, at that time, had not been quite completed for the additional 46 miles between Canfield and the International Bridge, at Buffalo, and negotiations were in progress looking to a joint use of track between those two points by the Grand Trunk and Great Western Railway Companies. Earnings from January, 1871, up to the present time have continued to show a steady increase, and the arrangements for handling through traffic have been so much improved that in the year ending December 31, 1872, earnings from through business alone, in contradistinction to local, were £96,217 13s., or more than $480,000 in excess of a similar period in 1871, and the net earnings over and above operating expenses and the interest on bonded debt or debentures were sufficient for a 6 per cent. dividend upon the share capital. A further expenditure of capital will, however, be necessary, so that the heavy volume of traffic may be economically and expeditiously handled; in fact, the gross earnings of a single track road have now reached their maximum, and arrangements must be made at once for preventing any delay in transportation. The "air" or "loop" line, from Glencoe to Buffalo, virtually affords a second track for part of the system, but the main line, from Windsor to Glencoe, must be double-tracked at once, additional sidings must be built, and the equipment must be largely increased. It is believed that the necessary funds can be provided by the issue of additional capital stock to the extent of $1,000,000, and that the company will then be in a better condition to compete with the rival lines than at any previous period of its history; but the prospects of the road, however flattering, cannot be considered as perfectly assured until a bridge over the Detroit River is completed, and the delays incident in the winter to ferry transportation are entirely obviated. This, at present, is the only drawback to what is commonly known as the "north shore route," and until it is remedied the Great Western Railway Company must compete on unequal terms with lines which are not burdened with such difficulties. A tunnel under the river may be, and doubtless is, feasible, but its advantages are at the best questionable, and it would be well for both the Michigan Central and Great Western Railway Companies if they would address themselves at once to the task of building a bridge, which would guarantee an unbroken through communication during winter with the western States. If the project cannot be undertaken on company account, a special bridge company might be organized, and by indorsement of its bonds, and by agreement to pay certain tolls, the company might secure all that it wants in the shape of a through route without increasing its share capital. Had the same time which has been expended on tunnel explorations been applied to bridge construction there could have been now a through all-rail line; there would be no more outcries about blockades, and the transportation business could have been conducted with greater economy and regularity.

The financial condition of the Great Western Railway Company is clearly indicated in the following statistics: capital stock, £4,451,133 11s. 3d.; 5 per cent. preference stock, £235,660; perpetual 5 per cent. debenture stock, £46,700; bonded debt, £2,163,200, consisting of 6 per cent. bonds, due 1873, £488,200; 6 per cent bonds, due 1876, £127,000; 5½ per cent. bonds, due 1877, £485,000; 5½ per cent. bonds, maturing 1878, £62,000; 5 per cent bonds, due 1881, £1,000; 6 per cent. bonds, due 1890, £1,000,000: total receipts on account of capital, £6,896,693 11s. 3d. This sum has been disbursed as follows: cost of main line, Toronto, Galt, Sarnia, Petrolia, and Brantford Branches, £5,555,842 5s. 8d.; payments on capital account during six months ending January 31, 1870, £263,435 9s.; discount on 5 per cent. preference stock, £5,873 8s. 1d.; difference on conversion of 5 per cent. preference stock, £2,363 2s.

11d.; Glencoe and Buffalo Line, £710,815 14s. 5d.; Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad Company, £250,000: balance to the credit of capital account, £108,358 11s. 2d. Among the various items of expenditure charged to capital account during the six months are £100,734 8s. 10d. for 30 new narrow-gauge engines, 6 new four-wheel tank engines, and 1 broad-gauge engine purchased from the London and Port Stanley Railway; £97,548 14s. 9d. for 1 second-hand steam car, 10 new first-class cars, 3 new post-office cars, with smoking accommodations, 6 new baggage cars, 30 new freight train conductor's cars, 461 new freight cars of different classes, and 50 cars purcased from the London and Port Stanley Railroad, and converted to the narrow-gauge standard. £4,419 17s. 3d. was also expended on a new car ferry-boat, and £5,950 2s. 4d. for new car-shops and additional sidings at London. Receipts from all sources for the half-year were £595,839 11s. 10d., derived from the following sources: from the transportation of 547,512 passengers, £209,322 6s. 6d.; from mail service, £5,065 2s. 11d.; from express, £9,116 8d.; from general freight, £371,572 16s. 11d.; from rents, £763 4s. 10d. Ordinary operating expenses for the same period amounted to 61 41-100 per cent. of gross receipts, or £365,920 14s. 2d., distributed as follows: for maintenance and renewal of way and structures, £93,180 6d.; for locomotive repairs, £101,592 5s. 3d.; for car repairs, £43,269 9s 3d.; for conducting transportion, £115,725 17s. 2d.; for general expenses, £12,153 2s.; sundry items in the shape of taxes, rent, etc., amounting in the aggregate to £10,592 11d., were also charged against revenue, and the total expenses were £376,512 15s. 1d. The balance carried to net revenue account was £219,326 16s. 6d. A comparison of earnings with those of a similar period ending January 31, 1872, shows that there was an increase in the passenger traffic, £27,718 15s. 5d. (£13,166 10s. 1d. from local, £14,552 5s. 4d. from through travel). The increase in freight receipts amounted to £39,809 13s. (£6,888 from local, and £32,921 13s. from through freight). There was also an increase in revenue from express, £962 7d., and the aggregate increase was £68,490 9s. Some idea of the growth of business on the Great Western Railway may be formed from the following table, exhibiting the receipts and expenses for seven corresponding half-years:

It should be noted in this connection that some two years ago the managers of the Great Western Railway Company deemed it advisable to appropriate in every year so much per mile for repairs and renewals of rolling stock, and to credit the account with that fixed sum, whether it was actually expended or not. As a result of this system, there was on January 31, 1873, a balance to the credit of "locomotive renewal fund," £20,096 3s. 11d., and to the credit of "car renewal fund," £8,764 13s. 11d. The total amount therefore available for the reconstruction and renewal of engines and cars was £28,860 17s. 10d. The average cost per mile of main line and branches, exclusive of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce, and London and Port Stanley Railroads, is £12,336; but in this investment is included the value of 177 locomotives, 146 passenger cars, 39 post-office and baggage cars, and 3,136 freight cars of all classes.

Branch Lines and Leased Roads.

Toronto Branch.

An act was passed by the Canadian Parliament in 1852, incorporating a company as the "Hamilton and Toronto Railway Company," with power to raise a capital stock of $1,800,000, and build a road from Toronto to Hamilton. In 1853 arrangements were made with the Great Western Railway Company for a lease of the property, at a rental of 6 per cent., together with a participation in all dividends over and above that amount earned by the Great Western Railway Company. It was understood in this agreement that the lessees should supply the rolling stock and buildings. Subsequently, in 1855, articles of consolidation were agreed on, and in the Great Western accounts for July, 1856, this branch is debited with an expenditure of $1,860,556, the cost of the line and equipment.

Galt and Guelph Branch.

In 1852 a company was incorporated by special act of the Canadian Legislature as the Galt and Guelph Railway Company," to build a railroad from Harrisburg to Guelph, a distance of 27½ miles. The capital stock was limited by the charter to $560,000, and the company was empowered to borrow the sum of $200,000. An arrangement was entered into with the Great Western Railway Company to supply the iron for the new road, and take therefor first mortgage bonds. When the road was completed 16 miles, to Preston, the company became embarrassed, and an additional issue of bonds was authorized, the proceeds of which, in addition to a subscription of $80,000, received from the town of Guelph, were estimated to be sufficient for completing the road. It was agreed that the Great Western Railway Company should take these bonds, operate the line at cost, and, after deducting 6 per cent. annual interest upon the securities which they held, pay over the balance to the Galt and Guelph Railway Company. The line was opened through to Guelph in September, 1857, but the results of its operations were far from satisfactory, and the net earnings were entirely insufficient to pay the annual interest on the bonds. The mortgage therefore was foreclosed, and the Great Western Railway Company became owners of the property, which is charged on the books as having cost the mortgagees $304,733.50.

Brantford Branch.

This branch was built under an enabling act of the Great Western Railway Company, the town of Brantford contributing $75,000 as a bonus. The branch, 7½ miles in length, cost in the neighbourhood of $150,000, and was opened for business in 1872.

Sarnia Branch.

In 1853 a company called the "London and Port Sarnia Railway Company" was incorporated by special act to construct a railway from Komoka, on the main line of the Great Western Railway, to Sarnia, an estimated distance of 50 miles. The capital stock was fixed at $2,000,000, and authority was given to amalgamate, if deemed advisable, with the Great Western Railway Company. This was subsequently done, and the entire cost of construction, real estate, etc., is charged against capital account of the Great Western Company as $1,873,666. This branch was opened for traffic in December, 1858.

Petrolia Branch.

This branch, 5½ miles in length, was constructed by the Great Western Railway Company under an enabling act, which conferred on them the requisite powers. It was completed and opened for traffic in December, 1866, and the cost of construction is quoted as £10,551 14s.

Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway, (Operated.)

The road from Guelph to Southampton, a distance of 101 miles, has been constructed by an independent company, but under the direct auspices of the Great Western Railway Company, and on terms which guarantee them eventually ownership of the property. The capital stock of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway Company proper is $30,000, but bonuses of $561,000 have been granted by the city of Hamilton and the various towns and counties through which the road is located. The agreement made with the Great Western Railway Company relative to operating the road was to this effect: they were to furnish the necessary equipment for the line as fast as completed and approved by their general superintendent, to regulate the rates of freight and all other charges, and to operate it for one thousand years; 30 per cent. of the gross traffic receipts were to be paid to the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway Company, and a strict account was to be kept of the traffic interchanged between the two companies, it being conditioned that a sum amounting to 20 per cent. of the receipts from such interchange of traffic should be annually appropriated to the purchase of bonds of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway Company. In framing this annual estimate, however, of the interchange of traffic, a fixed sum, computed from the average of three years' business prior to 1869, derived from the Galt and Guelph Railroad, was to be deducted, it being the intention of this agreement to appropriate only 20 per cent. on the increase of traffic derived from the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway. In 1870, the Great Western Railway Company undertook to purchase bonds of the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway to the amount of $12,000 per mile of completed road, and to this amount the issue of bonds is limited. The road was opened from Guelph to Fergus, 16 miles, in September, 1870, and to Alma, a farther distance of 7 miles, in December of the same year; 25 miles more, from Alma to Harriston, were completed in November, 1871. The road was further completed to Clifford in the spring of 1872, and to Southampton in November of the same year. Thus far results from operation of the road have fully justified the terms under which the road is operated, as the lessees are able to operate it within the 70 per cent. and the interchange of traffic during the year ending January 31st, 1873, has increased the earnings of the main line nearly $100,000. The Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway Company have also constructed a line from Palmerston to Kincardine, a port on Lake Huron, a distance of 67 miles. This is known as the "South Bruce Division," and will be operated on the same terms as the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway.

London, Huron and Bruce Railway,

A company has been incorporated by the Canadian Parliament to build a railway from some point on the main line of the Great Western Railway, near London, to Wingham, a station on the Wellington, Grey and Bruce Railway, a distance of 70 miles. Arrangements have been proposed to the Great Western Railway Company for operating the new road, as fast as completed, at 70 per cent. of gross earnings, it being understood that 20 per cent. of the traffic interchanged between the two companies should be appropriated to the acquirement of the bonds of the London, Huron and Bruce Company at par. The issue of these bonds is limited by the charter to $12,000 per mile. This proposal was recommended to the shareholders for their adoption at a late regular meeting, and will doubtless be favorably acted on.

Canada Air-Line Railway.

A company obtained a special charter, in 1868, to construct an air line from Glencoe, on the main line of the Great Western Railway, to Buffalo. This project was undertaken under the auspices of the Great Western Railway Company; and in the year subsequent to the passage of the act the two companies were amalgamated, and the total cost of construction up to date has been charged in the accounts of the last-named company against capital. The construction of this road was necessitated by the increase of traffic, which could not be accommodated on a single-track road, and it was esteemed less expensive to build the new line than double-track the old road. The Great Western Railway Company, by building what is commonly called the Loop Line, obtains all the advantages of a double-track road, and at the same time the local traffic derived from two different sections of country. These advantages are enhanced by the leases of the London and Port Stanley, and Welland Railroads, which connect the main and loop lines at two important points, and enable the management to use either road for its traffic in case of an accident or unexpected contingency.

London and Port Stanley Railway.

This railway, extending from London to Port Stanley, on Lake Erie (24½ miles), was built under special charter of the Canadian Legislature, and was opened for traffic in 1856. The road is owned principally by the city of London, the counties of Middlesex and Elgin, and the town of St. Thomas, and was built more with a view to develop the country which it traversed than from any expectation of profits in operating it. The total cost of road and equipment is quoted at $1,342,248. In the winter of 1871-1872 negotiations were entered into with the Great Western Railway Company for a lease of the property, and an agreement to that effect, covering a period of twenty-one years, was ratified by the stockholders in 1872. By terms of this lease the Great Western Railway Company pay an annual rental of $20,000; the lessees also took the rolling stock at a valuation. The importance of this acquisition to the Great Western Railway Company will be readily appreciated by reference to the general map; and its control is more important, in view of the fact that the supply of fuel on the line of the Great Western proper is gradually decreasing, and that it involves the ownership of a road which has for its terminus a port only 80 miles distant from the coal-fields of Ohio and Pennsylvania. By securing an inexhaustible supply of good fuel, the Great Western Railway Company will be amply compensated for any risk incident to the lease.

N.B.—Communications for this company should be addressed to the lessees, Hamilton, Canada.

TORONTO.

Toronto, the capital of the populous and fast growing Province of Ontario, had its commercial birth some 125 years ago. In 1749, M. de la Galissoniere, administrator in the temporary absence of the French Governor of Canada, ordered the erection of a stockade and the establishment of a royal trading post at Toronto; and the fortified post was known in its early history as Fort Rouillé, though subsequently, while Canada was still a French possession, it was more generally spoken of as Fort Toronto. The English had, previously to 1749, established a trading post where Oswego now stands, and by more liberal dealing, had drawn off the Indian trade from their northern rivals; and as a large number of the customers were from the Lake Simcoe region, who launched their canoes at Toronto, the latter was thought the best possible point at which to establish a rival post. In 1759, Fort Toronto, in common with the rest of Canada, came into the possession of the British Crown. In 1793, the first survey of the harbour was ordered, the fort being occupied by the troops drawn from Niagara and Queenston; and at noon on the 27th of August, in the same year, the first royal salute was fired from the garrison, and responded to by the shipping in the harbour, in commemoration of the change of name from Toronto to York, done as a compliment to Frederick, Duke of York, after receipt of tidings of his military successes in the Netherlands. In 1834, the name was once more changed back to Toronto, and "muddy little York" is become a thing of the past. Although the original site of Toronto was in the vicinity of Humber Bay, it was not there, but near the River Don, that the modern town began to grow. Where the old jail now stands—at foot of Berkeley street—was erected at the close of last century the first Parliament Buildings of the Province of Upper Canada; and from them as a centre streets gradually diverged and extended more and more. On the 5th of November, 1803, the first weekly market of the Town of York was held, and in 1824, the Market Square was closed in "with a picketing and oak ribbon." In 1831, a brick building was erected for a market, and after a fire in 1849, it was replaced by the present St. Lawrence Hall and Market.

The growth of the city during these years was steady, but gradual, but from then to 1857 a period of inflation followed, and of great apparent prosperity. The panic of that year was followed by a number of very lean years, when the commerce of Toronto grew very slowly, the vigorous competition of Montreal merchants securing the most valuable portion of the Ontario trade. As railways, however, centering at Toronto began to give her citizens more command of various sections of the surrounding country, and as banking capital began to be attracted hither, the growth of the city became very rapid, and now, just seven years from the Confederation of the leading Provinces of British North America, Toronto has acquired a commanding position as a commercial, manufacturing and monetary centre. The gaps in her business and residence streets are being rapidly filled up, and magnificent blocks of stores now stand where a few years back were unused and vacant lots. Increased accommodation has been found necessary for the Customs, Inland Revenue and Post Office Services, and the new buildings for these purposes would do credit to cities of much greater population.

The population of Toronto, according to the census of 1871, was 56,092, but this has probably increased to considerably over 60,000, the number of new residences erected annually for some years past indicating a very rapid growth of population.

The imports anually entered at the Toronto Custom House now amount to the value of $14,000,000. The foreign export trade is comparatively small, as far as the records show, but the shipments by rail and coast-wise, which are very heavy, of wool, produce and provisions, are not included in the Custom House returns, which embrace only the shipments to the United States by lake.

Toronto, which less than a quarter of a century ago, was the headquarters of but one chartered bank, with a capital of $4,000,000, has now six with an authorized capital of $14,500,000, of which $12,896,013 are paid up.

THE SPECTATOR,

THE DAILY SPECTATOR,

$6 a Year by Mail. 12½ cts. a Week delivered in the City.

Contains the latest news from all parts of the world, carefully written editorials on current topics, the freshest local news, and a well selected literary miscellany.

THE WEEKLY SPECTATOR,

$1 A YEAR.

Designed especially to be a Newspaper for the farmer and the family circle; and contains a condensed epitome of the news of the week—social, agricultural, literary, political, etc.

ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS MUST BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

It is respectfully suggested to subscribers that no paper can be successfully carried on if subscriptions are not promptly paid. It is a mistaken idea to suppose that publishers can give unlimited credit—as many people appear to expect they shall—for newspapers. The only true system is that which requires payment in advance, which the Publishers of the SPECTATOR propose to adhere to for the future, and of which subscribers in arrears are requested to take notice and govern themselves accordingly. If a newspaper is worth having, it is worth paying for in advance.

LONDON.

The city of London, in the township of that name, is the judicial seat of the County of Middlesex. It is beautifully situated in the midst of a fine section of country, at the point of junction of the two branches of the River Thames. The streets are wide and regular, crossing each other at right angles, and with the numerous bridges, bear the time-honored names of those of the British metropolis.

London was incorporated as a village in 1840, with a population of 1,700, and became a city in 1855, when it had increased to 10,000. Since this time its growth has been rapid, and its population at present, with the suburbs of Westminster, Petersville, etc., numbers about 30,000.

Several branches of manufacturing are extensively carried on, and the carriages and agricultural implements of London manufacture are specially celebrated. One of the leading branches of industry is coal oil refining, which has added greatly to the growth and prosperity of the city. Several large flouring mills in successful operation afford a ready market for the products of the surrounding country. Large shipments of flour are made to other points, and considerable quantities exported to Europe.

The extensive foundries and machine shops located here employ a large number of mechanics, and afford profitable remuneration for capital.

In educational facilities London possesses superior advantages, containing, in addition to numerous primary and select schools, the Huron and Hellmuth Colleges, Convent of the Sacred Heart, and other flourishing institutions. The moral interests of the city are represented by numerous churches, many of which are beautiful and costly edifices.

The public buildings and hotels compare favorably with those of other cities, and the principal banks of the Dominion have branches established here.

London contains several wholesale stores, embracing dry goods, groceries, drugs, confectionery, hardware, boots and shoes, etc., three large breweries and two tanneries.

The Great Western, Grand Trunk, and London and Port Stanley Railway, a branch of the Great Western, run through the city. The Great Western has a fine large depot and extensive workshops here.

The Montreal and Dominion Telegraph, and American and Canadian Express Companies have offices here.

Distance from Buffalo 140 miles, from Toronto 115 miles, from Detroit, 110 miles, from Hamilton 76 miles, from St. Thomas 15 miles.

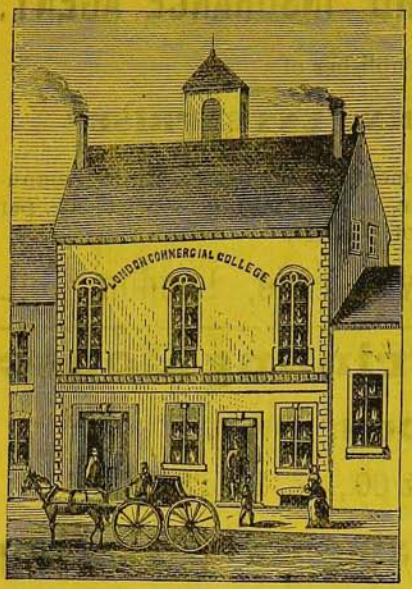
A THOROUGH BUSINESS EDUCATION



Can be obtained at the

COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

With a smaller outlay of time and money than in any other institution in Canada.

The course of study is especially adapted to meet the wants of a large class of presons who desire, in the shortest possible time and at the least expense, to qualify themselves to fill positions as Clerks, Agents, Book-keepers, Bankers, and Financiers, or to enter upon the successful management of their own affairs.

In the Theoretical Department the best text book on Book-keeping is used that can be procured in America; also, a large number of Theory Sets, published specially for this College. In the Actual Business Department the forms are such as are in use in the best business houses. This is the only Business College in the Dominion where book-keeping by single and double entry is taught on the IMPROVED plan of

REAL BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS!

OUR TERMS are more liberal, and good board can be obtained here cheaper than elsewhere.

Among the large number of students in attendance from all parts of the country are a number of

Ladies taking the Commercial Course,

To whom we grant a very liberal discount.

We have no terms or vacations; students, therefore, can enter at any time and pursue their studies as rapidly as they wish.

LOUISVILLE.

A way station on the Great Western Railway, distance from Chatham, 6 miles, from London 55 miles.

CHATHAM.

The county seat of Kent Co., is situated on both banks of the Thames River, 15 miles from its mouth. It is also the most important town on the line of the Great Western Railway, between Windsor and London, 45 miles east of Windsor, 65 miles west of London, and 184 miles west of Niagara Falls, via. G. W. R. The river at this point is of sufficient depth to allow the passage of vessels of considerable size, and is here spanned by two bridges which connect both parts of the town. The surrounding country is highly productive, and Chatham is one of the most important grain markets in the Western part of the province of Ontario. There are two papers published here, viz. the "Planet," (tri-weekly and weekly,) and the "Banner," (weekly). The American Express Company and the Dominion and Montreal Telegraph Cos., have offices here.

OLD DOMINION SS. CO. Ticket Office, 11 James Street, Hamilton.

Chatham was incorporated as a town in 1855, and now has a population of about 8,000.

WINDSOR,

An incorporated town of about 6,000 inhabitants, in the township of Sandwich, county of Essex, is beautifully situated on the Detroit river, opposite the City of Detroit, Michigan. It is the western terminus of the Great Western Railway, which connects by ferry with Detroit and the various roads leading thence to all points in the United States. As a commercial center, Windsor occupies an enviable position and is rapidly growing in wealth and population. Since the disastrous fire which occurred a few years ago a number of fine substantial blocks have been erected, giving to the water front a solid city like aspect, and greatly improving the business facilities of the town. A large portion of the local trade is in farm and dairy products and an extensive lake and river trafic is carried on.

Distance from Niagara Falls, 229 miles; from Toronto, 221 miles; from London, 110 miles; from Hamilton, 186 miles.

Montreal and Dominion Telegraph, and American and Canadian Express Companies., have offices here.

Brantford is connected by a branch, 8 miles in length, with the main line of the Great Western Railway at Harrisburg, it is a leading station on the Buffalo and Goderich branch of the Grand Trunk Railway.
