

A CONCISE

HISTORICAL ACCOUNT

OF ALL THE

BRITISH COLONIES

I N

NORTH-AMERICA,

COMPREHENDING THEIR

RISE, PROGRESS, and MODERN STATE; Particularly of the

MASSACHUSETS-BAY,

(The Seat of the prefent Civil War)

TOGETHER WITH THE

OTHER PROVINCES OF NEW-ENGLAND.

To which is annexed, An ACCURATE DESCRIPTIVE TABLE OF THE SEVERAL COUNTRIES;

Exhibiting, at One View,

Their refpective Boundaries, Dimenfions, Longitudes, Latitudes, Divifions, or Counties, Chief Towns, Capes, Harbours, Bays, Rivers, Various Productions, Animals, &c. &c.

INTERSPERSED WITH

Particulars relative to the different SOILS and CLIMATES, CAPITAL CITIES, &c. &c.

DUBLIN:

Printed for CALEB JENKIN, No. 58, Dame-freet; and, JOHN BEATTY, No. 32, Skinner-row. MDCCLXXVI.

PREFACE.

AS it is natural to suppose, that among the Public there are many ftrangers to British North-American History, who, from the present interesting juncture of affairs, with for information concerning the rife, eftablishment, and growth, of our Colonies in that part of the world; to fatisfy, therefore, the curiofity of fuch perfons in these particulars, at an eafy price, is the defign of the following pages, wherein fimple matters of fact are related with precifion, candour, and impartiality. Observations and reflections are not to be expected in fo concife a publication: the reader is left to make his own.

The

iv PREFACE.

The hiftory of the province of Maffachufets-bay is, beyond comparifon, of more magnitude and importance than that of any of the other colonies; and the reader will find that a large proportion of room has been allotted thereto, and fuch incidents felected, as, it is prefumed, cannot fail of affording him competent ideas of the extraordinary fcenes in which the people of that colony have, from their firft emigration, been continually interefted and engaged.

The manner in which the annexed DESCRIPTIVE TABLE is printed, prefents a firiking collective and comparative view of the feveral countries; and, amongft other useful purposes, it may ferve for a very proper companion to a Map: It has cost much pains, and, the author hopes, will meet with a favourable reception.

INTRODUCTION.

Of the Discovery of AMERICA in general.

PREVIOUS to entering on an hiftorical account of the firft fettlement and prefent ftate of the Britifh Colonies in North-America, it feems incumbent on us to take a curfory view of the events which led to the difcovery of that part, involved as it was in the difcovery of America in general. Herein we fhall be as brief as poflible, omitting whatever does not appear neceffary to perfpicuity.

Till the latter end of the fifteenth century, the whole known terrefirial world confifted only of the three great portions, Europe, Afia, and Africa, together with their appendages of iflands and adjacent feas. The difcovery of the fourth portion is now to be inveftigated.

At

AMERICA IN GENERAL.

At this period, (viz. the latter end of the 15th century,) Chriftopher Columbus, a native of Genoa, having conceived a notion of the possibility of failing to the Indies (the traffic to which parts was then carried on either through the inland parts of Afia, or thro'Egypt and the Red Sea, and was chiefly engroffed by the Venetians) by a weftward courfe, proposed the making such an attempt to his countrymen, as the means of opening a new avenue to commerce, wealth, and dominion; but his scheme, seeming to them to be founded in abfurdity, was confequently rejected. Columbus, confcious of the fuperiority of his own knowledge in the matter, was not thus to be foiled; and, retiring from his country in difguft, fucceffively repeated his propofal to the courts of France, England, and Portugal; all which, however, looked upon it as too chimerical to be adopted. Notwithstanding these mortifying difappointments, which probably would have overwhelmed the genius of any other perfon, Columbus was still firmly perfunded of the practicability of his plan, and refolved to propole propole it to the court of Spain : and here, after a delay of eight years, his defign was at length countenanced by the interest of Queen Isabella, who railed money on her jewels to carry it into execution. Accordingly, in 1492, the adventurous Columbus fet fail with three fhips. In croffing the Atlantic, his crew, full of apprehenfions of danger in a vaft unknown ocean, especially from the circumstance of the variation of the compals, which was now first observed, broke out into a mutiny : happily, however, it fublided, when, at the end of thirty-three days, they discovered land, which proved to be the Bahama Islands. These Columbus at first hoped to be a part of the Indies he was in queft of (for, tho' he possibly had an idea of the fpherical figure of the earth, he was certainly ignorant of its dimensions, and confequently of the great fpace ftill between him and the wifhed-for country): but foon finding his miftake, he fleered to the fouthward, and fell in with Cuba and Hifpaniola ; whence he returned to Spain, but not without fome famples of gold to be met with in A 2 the

2

4 AMERICA IN GENERAL.

the latter, and gaining a flight knowledge of other iflands.

This profperous voyage procured Columbus, not only the most honourable reception and highest applause, but also a speedy equipment of 17 ships for a second, in which he established a colony at Hispaniola, and discovered Jamaica, Guadaloupe, and many other islands of the West-Indies.

But Columbus foon found that a continuation of fuccels had excited a jealoufy among the grandees of Spain, which was very unfavourable to the profecution of his defigns : however, with much difficulty, he was enabled to undertake another expedition, wherein he flood, from the Canaries, for fome time, towards the fouth; then changed his course directly weft, suffering grievous heats and heavy rains; but a brifk gale fpringing up carried him in feventeen days to the Island of Trinidad on the coaft of Guiana: which passing, he was foon aftonished at the violent agitation of the water, occasioned by the tide of the fea clashing with the rapid current of the river Oroonoco; but failing forward, he firfł first came in fight of that continent, which was afterwards called, in general, America, or fometimes, on account of its magnitude, emphatically, THE NEW WORLD.

From the first successes of Columbus, all Europe, which refounded with the fame of them, began to think that great man's project was not totally a chimera; and the avarice of Henry VII. of England; who, as we before intimated, declined to engage in fuchan undertaking when propoled by Columbus, now prompted him to be dabbling in adventurous voyages alfo. Neverthelefs, according: to his usual fafe policy, he was refolved not to be too venturefome; but granted a patent to John Cabot, a Venetian, and his fons*, empowering them, with five fhips bearing English colours, to discover and take posfeffion of any countries, either in the eaft, weft, or north, which before that time were unknown to all Chriftians, referving to himfelf a fifth part of the clear emoluments that fhould arife.¹ This happened in 1496; and, in confequence, the eaftern coaft in general of America, from latitude 34 deg. N. was foon after difcovered, and, for a time, together with the ifland which ftill bears the appellation, was called by the English Newfoundland. From the difcoveries of the Cabots, therefore, Great Britain derives her claims in America, where, next to Spain, she holds the most confiderable possessions.

* Lewis, Sebastian, and Sancho.

Λ3

About 1498, Americus Vespucius, a Florentine, in a voyage from Spain, explored the coafts of Paria, Caracas, &c. to the Gulph of Mexico; and (what is very extraordinary) had the address of appropriating his own name to half the globe, though the honour of the discovery of it is undoubtedly due to Columbus.

In 1500, Alvarez Cabral was driven on the coaft of Brazil in a ftorm, as he was proceeding to the Eaft-Indies by the Cape of Good Hope, which voyage was firft compleatly made in 1497. He fet up a pillar, with the arms of the King of Portugal on it. But Brazil was foon after more fully difcovered by Americus Vespucius above-mentioned, who had quitted the fervice of Spain in difgust, not not thinking himfelf fufficiently rewarded, and entered into that of Portugal.

The eaftern fide of the continent being difcovered, the Spaniards afterwards made their way to the weftern, amidft millions of Indians, by flaughter and devaftation, which Fernando Cortez began in the conqueft of Mexico. Hence they fpread themfelves over the countries bordering on the South-Sea.

To compleat our account of the difcovery of this New World as far as yet made (for its northernmost parts are still unknown), it only remains to be mentioned, that, about 1520, its southern extremity was first discovered by Magellan, when he failed thro' the straight still bearing his name into the South-Sea.

America at large is fuppofed to contain 14,110,874 fquare miles, 60 to a degree;³¹ which are 3,342,051 more than Afia; 4,456,067 more than Africa; and 9,654,809 more than Europe. It is divided by geographers into North and South, the ifthmus of Panama, or Darien, which is about 300 miles long, and 60 broad in its narroweft part, joining the two huge maffes, which A 4 feem feem to balance each other. The north portion is at prefent entirely poffeffed by the English and Spaniards. The territories belonging to the former conftitute the subject of the following pages; those of the latter are called Louifiana, New Mexico, Mexico or New Spain*, and California. In South America the Spaniards posses Terra Firma, Peru, Paraguay or La Plata, (where the Jefuits have been long fince eftablished), Chili, and Terra Magellanica (yet unfettled); the Dutch and French, Guiana; and the Portuguese, Brazil : besides these, there is a large country called Amazonia, but as yet Europeans are very little acquainted with it.

* Comprehended in New Spain, the English claim and have fettlements on part of the Bay of Honduras, and the Mosquito-shore; both which territories are generally confidered as annexed to and dependent on Jamaica.

Modern geographers include New Spain and the north part of Terra Firma under the denomination of the West-Indies; also Florida, now possessed by the English.

HISTORICAL

8

HISTORICAL PARTICULARS

RELATING TO THE

Rife, Progrefs, and Prefent State,

ог тне

BRITISH COLONIES IN AMERICA.

Of NEW-BRITAIN, comprehending LA-BRADOR, NEW NORTH WALES, &c.

HE eaftern coaft of North-America, in general, as we have already observed, was discovered by the Cabots; but for the first knowledge the English had of the interior extensive regions comprized under the denomination of New-Britain*, they were indebted to the feveral adventurers in fearch of a N.W. passage to China, &c. which project began to be much in agitation in the fixteenth century. Forbifher, Gilbert, Davis, Hudfon, Button, Baffin, Munk, Fox, James, Middleton, and, laftly, Moor, have fucceflively embarked in the perilous undertaking,—but in vain; amongft whom, however, he that feems to have made the greateft progrefs was Hudfon, in a voyage performed in the year 1610*. For that vigorous exertion to ferve his country, he deferved a better fate than befel him; of which the prefent fubject leads to a brief recital.

* See the feveral parts of this country in the column of Divisions in the Table annexed.

10 NEW-BRITAIN, &c.

This fkilful and determined navigator first entered the straights and bay which to this day bear his name, and explored a great part of the coast; but, though hitherto unfuccessful in seeking the defired passage, he was not hopeles, nor dismayed by the many difficulties he had met with, and determined to perfevere in his endeavours the next year. With this view-he wintered (it is faid) in the latitude of 52 deg. N. which is beyond

* Mr. Hudfon had before made three voyages to the N. on difcovery, in one of which he penetrated into the latitude of $\delta_0 \frac{1}{2}$ deg.

comparison

NEW-BRITAIN, &c.

comparison more rigid in those parts than with us, owing to the wind blowing for three quarters of the year from the North, over most stupendous high mountains which are continually covered with fnow. But when the feafon proper for profecuting the discovery arrived, his crew mutinied, and having feized him, together with feven of those who were best affected towards him, fet them adrift, in an open boat, in the furrounding furious, icy feas, the dangersof which if they escaped, it was, doubtles, only to perifh among favages. His barbarous crew afterwards putting on fhore on an ifland for wild fowl (their provisions being confumed), four or five of the ringleaders were cut to pieces by the natives; but the reft, with the utmost difficulty, effected their return home.

In 1670, certain perfons obtained a charter for the exclusive right of trading to the bay above-mentioned. They are commonly called the Hudfon's-Bay Company, keep a garrifon of 186 men in feveral forts round the bay, employ four thips and 130 failors, export.

LL

12 NEW-BRITAIN, &c.

export annually British commodities to the amount of 16,000 l. and, by their fur and peltry trade, and fishery, return to the value of 29,3401. yielding to the revenue 37341. Inconfiderable as this traffic may appear, its emoluments are very great, as the riches of the Company demonstrate. A revocation of their charter has been fuggefted as a means of benefitting the nation by a free trade to the Bay; but we apprehend, if any advantage would accrue from fuch a proceeding, which no doubt the Company would think arbitrary, it is anticipated by the acquisition of Canada, the northern parts of which feem equally convenient for dealing in peltry and furs with the territories allotted to them, and are open to all British traders. There is no other fettlement in these countries, owing to their barrenness and inclement climate, and, confequently, they are less known than any part of the British dominions belides, Avarice having here little to feed on.

The inhabitants of Labrador, in general, little removed from a flate of nature, are conftantly conftantly engaged in war, and it is their cuftom to deftroy the aged and decrepid, when they become useless and burthensome; but with respect to the Esquimaux, in particular, who occupy the northern fhore, we are informed by Lieutenant Roger Curtis, who took a chart of their coast, by order of Commodore Shuldham, in 1773, that they came indifputably from Greenland, are ftrangers both to jealoufy and contention, and, as he supposes, do not exceed in number 1623. This coaft, from the river St. John to Hudfon's Straights, was, by the King's proclamation at the conclusion of the laft war, in 1763, in order to extend the British fishery to these parts, put under the care and infpection of the Governor of Newfoundland.

Of CANADA, or THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

THE French, who formerly poffeffed this country, were originally intruders into it; as, it should seem, they were also into Louisiana, 14

Louifiana, their other quondam North-American territory. They had no right to either, but what was derived from treaties. Their pretended claim to Canada was founded on 'Verronazi's difcovery in 1524, which was certainly invalidated by that of the Cabots, made no less than twenty-feven years before. The country of Louisiana was early known to the English, being first discovered and explored by Col. Wood, between the years 1654 and 1664; and afterwards vifited by Captain Bott, in 1670. Again, in 1698, two ships, fitted out by Dr. Cox, of New Jerley, difcovered one of the mouths of the Miffifippi, and failing about a hundred miles up that river, took poffellion of the country, calling it Carolana. The next year, and not before, the French for the first time set foot on it, from whom it received the name of Louifiana, which it has borne ever fince; and, in 1712, the trade of it was granted to M Crofat.

It may feem fomewhat extraordinary, that a people, who could in reality, whatever might be their pretenfions, plead no better right right to a country than peffeffion, fhould find means to get themfelves effablished therein by the countenance and authority of treaties, made with another power, which might claim the fame country in right of original difcovery; but is it not more extraordinary, that a people fo circumstanced should not be content with the allowed enjoyment of fuch possession, but must even be daring enough to fofter notions of fupplanting that other power in fettlements to which its pretenfions were indifputable? Yet fo it was :- the French, having once fettled themfelves on the banks of the rivers St. Laurence and Millifippi, (the only entrances into their American territories, and whofe mouths are upwards of 3000 miles alunder) inflead of confining themfelves to a weftern extension, in which direction they had the breadth of the whole continent before them, and probably would never have been molefted but by the Indians, they bore towards the Eaft, ftretched themfelves along the back of the British Colonies, and, by never misling an opportunity of making encroachments, as well well in times of peace as of war, foon manifefted in America the fame perfidy, jealoufy, and ambition, by which their nation had long been characterized in Europe.

15

16

The repetition of fuch aggrefion was the immediate cause of the last war. In 1750, they feized two-thirds of Nova Scotia, and, in 1752 and 1754, erected forts at Shenigto, Bay-Verte, and at the mouth of St. John's river : in 1752 and 1753, they built two forts on the lake Erie; and, in 1754, they took two English forts in the Ohio country, drove the people out of the back fettlements, and, as it were, kept Virginia and the neighbouring colonies befieged by a chain of forts they erected to facilitate the execution of their aspiring intention of becoming masters of them. These and many other acts of hoftility they committed, before the English, wearied out with fruitless negociation, refolved to have recourse to arms for redress; in confequence of which a declaration of war took place in 1756.

We have been particular in specifying fome of the circumstances which brought on this this war,' that the reader may observe how confpicuous the hand of juffice was in the event of it; -a war that, it is worthy of remark, deprived the French of the very country in which it was by them fo wantonly begun, and moreover occasioned their own expulsion out of North-America, instead of effecting that of the English, which was the grand point they aimed to accomplifh: for, at the peace in 1763, they were obliged to fuffer the mortification of confirming the victorious Britons, whom they hoped to have driven into the Atlantic, in their then polfeffion of Canada, by an express ceffion; and, in 1769, they gave up Louisiana, the only territory they had there befides, to the crown of Spain.----Such was the exit of those infidious people out of their North-American territories, of which, but for their reftless jealousy and aspiring effrontery, they might still have kept peaceable possession, and enriched themfelves with its products.

The French had various chimerical ideas refpecting the limits of Canada; in general, however, their vanity made them very extenfive, tenfive, comprehending, on the eaft, part of Nova Scotia, New England, and New-York, and thence the immenfe weftern regions stretching to the Pacific Ocean itself: but, on its becoming fubject to the King of Great-Britain, as above-mentioned, certain moderate boundaries were affigned to it (under the denomination of the Government of Quebec) by a proclamation iffued on the 7th of October, 1763, for the general regulation of the newly acquired countries; according to which, its northernmost point was the head of the river St. John on the Labrador Coaft; its wefternmoft, the fourth end of the Lake Nipiffin; its fouthernmost, the 45th parallel of north latitude, croffing the river St. Laurence and Lake Champlain; and its eafternmost, Cape Rosiers, in the Gulph of St. Laurence; the land included being about eight hundred miles long, and two hundred broad. Neverthelefs, in 1774, an act paffed for making more effectual provision for the government of this province, of which, on account of the ftrenuous opposition made to it in Parliament, and the popular popular declamation it has, and does ftill create, more or lefs, throughout the nation, we fhall here infert a concife abftract of the feveral claufes.

18

The act extends the province fouthward to the banks of the Ohio, weftward to the banks of the Mififippi, and northward to the boundary of the Hudson's-Bay Company.

By the first clause, the proclamation of October 7, 1763, was rendered void May 1, 1775.

By the fecond, the Romifh clergy enjoy the exercise of their religion, subject to the King's supremacy, as established by the first of Queen Elizabeth; and receive their accustomed dues and rights from persons professing the Romish religion; with a proviso added, that his Majesty shall not be disabled from making such provision for the support and maintenance of a Protestant clergy as he shall think fit.

By the third claufe, all Canadian fubjects, except religious orders and communities, hold all their properties, &c. as if the proclamation clamation had not been made'; and all controverfies relative to property and civil rights are determined by the Canada laws before in being, or fuch as may be enacted by the Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, and Legiflative Council; with a provifo, that fuch perfons who have a right to alienate goods, lands, or credits, in their life-time, may bequeath them to whom they will at their death; but this does not extend to lands granted, or that may be granted, by his Majefty in common focage.

By the fourth claufe, the criminal law of England is inflituted, fubject to fuch amendments as may be made by the legiflative powers now to be mentioned.

By the fifth claule, a legiflative authority is appointed, confifting of perfons refident there, not lefs than feventeen, nor more than twenty-three, to be appointed by his Majefty, with the advice of his Privy Council, under his or their fign manual, to make ordinances for the government of the province, with a prohibition from laying on taxes: and alfo every ordinance, &c. made, is

20

is to be transmitted to his Majesty, and, if difallowed by his Majefty, every fuch ordinance, &c. is to ceafe, upon his Majefty's order in council being promulgated at Quebec: provided likewife, that no ordinance touching religion, or inflicting any greater punishment than fine, or imprisonment for three months, shall be valid, till it receives his Majesty's approbation; and provided alfo, that no ordinance shall be passed at meeting of council, except between Jan. 1, and May 1, unless upon fome urgent occafion, when every member of council refident at Quebec, or within fifty miles thereof, is to be perfonally fummoned by the Governor or Lieutenant-Governor, or Commander in Chief in his absence, to attend the fame.

By the fixth and laft claufe, his Majefty and fucceffors may erect any courts, criminal, civil, and ecclefiaftical, within the province of Quebec, by letters patent under the Great Seal, whenever his Majefty fhall judge neceffaty.

Of this act we shall only observe in general, that the principles on which it is framed are truly monarchical. Particular comments and reflections we shall leave to our readers themselves, some of whom, perhaps, will endeavour to obviate most of the objections commonly urged against it, by remarking, that the generality of the people for whofe regulation it is calculated, are French, and confequently most in love with that fystem of government, though the reverse of what the English call free, to which they have always been accuftomed. As to the policy of extending this province along the back of many of the old British Colonies, with an intent, as is generally imagined, to awe them, in the prefent bloody contention concerning the right of taxation, into an acquiescence with ministerial terms, the time is even now at hand, which will beft fhew, how well or ill advifedly the act has been projected in that respect.

The conquest and subsequent cession of this country put the English into the undisturbed flurbed poffeffion of its trade, which employs thirty-four fhips and 400 feamen; and the exports to Great-Britain, confifting of fkins, furs, ginfeng, fnake-root, capillaire, and wheat, amount to 105,500 l. annually, which is nearly the value of the English articles fent to Canada in return.

The inhabitants of Canada, exclusive of the Indians, were not estimated, at the commencement of the last war, at more than 45,000; nor can they be supposed to be now much increased, otherwise than by the accession of such English subjects as have settled amongs them since the peace.

OF NOVA-SCOTIA.

THOUGH this territory undoubtedly belonged to the English by right of discovery, yet not being settled by them, the French usurped it till the year 1613, when they were driven out by Sir Samuel Argal. In 1622, the Scotch began a settlement here, under Sir William Alexander, who had obtained tained a grant of the country for that purpole from James I' to whom he was Secretary; and hence it acquired the name of Nova-Scotia, or New-Scotland. In 1620, Sir William, as if endued with the gift of fecond fight, fold his property herein to one Claude de la Tour, a French protestant, whom he had permitted to fettle at St. John's, and who was to hold it of the crown of Scotland; two years after which the country was impoliticly yielded up to the French (who called it L'Acadie) by the treaty of St. Germain en Laye. It was recovered in Oliver Cromwell's time, but again given up by the treaty of Breda; and thus it afterwards reverted feveral times, from the one nation to the other, till it was finally confirmed to the English, in 1713, by the treaty of Utrecht. The French fettlers transferred their allegiance, but were allowed the enjoyment of their religion and plantations, and called the Neutral French; though they by no means answered that character, either in the war of 1744, or in the laft, laft, in both which they gave their countrymen all the affiftance they could in their hoftile attempts in those parts.

24 NOVA-SCOTIA.

In 1731, the crown purchased of Aglate de la Tour, a descendant of Claude de la Tour above mentioned, the whole property of Nova-Scotia, for 2000 guineas. This female had artfully recovered it from the different hands it had fallen into during fo many revolutions, and wifely fold it as above. It is, therefore, in a peculiar manner, a royal province.

On the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748, the English government, in confequence of the imagined importance of this country, began to make preparation for fettling it on a refpectable footing. The defign was indefatigably purfued by the Earl of Halifax; and next year, 3750 families embarked as a colony, with the Hon. Edward Cornwallis, Efg; at their head, who had been appointed Governor and Commander in Chief; and by them was built the town of Halifax, fo called in honour of their chief patron. They were joined by other companies, both from B the

26 NOVA - SCOTIA.

the mother-country and New-York. A vaft expence, however, has attended this fettlement, within the first feven years the Parliament granted at times for its fupport, no lefs a fum than 415,484 l. 14s. 11[‡]d.

Prior to the commencement of the laft war, the French, whole claims were generally preceded by their taking poffession, feized two thirds of this country, and thought to have kept their footing by the fubsequent erection of forts; but, in 1755, they were diflodged by Lieutenant Colonel (now General) Monckton.

The British exports to Nova-Scotia confist chiefly of fishing-tackle, rigging for ships, woollen and linen cloth, to the value of about 26,500 l. annually; the imports in return are timber, and the produce of the fishery, to the amount of about 38,000 l. Hence it should seem, that this colony, which has continued to put Government to a constant expence*, has been maintained,

* The fum voted last session (in April, 1775) for its support, was 43461. 10 s. 5 d.

not

not for the fake of the mercantile benefits to be derived from itfelf, which appear fo inconfiderable, but with a view of preventing the annoyances to which the other colonies would be exposed, were this in the possefilm of an enemy.

Charles Laurence, Efq; was appointed the firft Lieutenant Governor, and Jonathan Belcher, Efq; Chief Juffice, in 1754; the latter of whom ftill holds his office. The prefent Governor is Francis Legge, Efq; and Lieutenant Governor, Michael Francklin, Efq;

CAPE BRETON.

THIS island was formerly annexed by the French to the government of Nova Scotia, but they did not give it up with that country to the English at the treaty of Utrecht. In 1745, Admiral Warren, and the Americans under Lieut. Gen. Pepperell, reduced it, but only to be reftored at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. During the last war it was again taken, in 1758, by Admiral B 2 Boscawen Boscawen and General Amherst; and, according to the example of its old establishment, was again put under the jurisdiction of Nova-Scotia, by his Britannic Majesty's proclamation of October 7, 1763, for the better protection of its fishery, which is confiderable.

OF NEW-ENGLAND.

THERE is no certain account, that this extensive territory was actually visited by any European, till Bartholomew Gosnold, an Englishman, failed hither in the year 1602. He called three of the new-discovered islands by the name of the Elizabeth Islands, and another of them by the name of Martha's Vineyard; and, having trafficked to great advantage with the natives, returned with favourable accounts both of the people and country.

In confequence of this fuccefsful voyage, application was made by certain gentlemen and merchants to James I. for a grant of lands in America, fimilar to that which Sir Walter NEW-ENGLAND.

Walter Raleigh had obtained from Queen Elizabeth*, but which had been forfeited by his attainder; and, accordingly, in 1606, that King granted all the north continent from 34 to 45 deg. dividing it into two portions; one of which, extending from 34 to 41 deg. was allotted to perfons called the London Company, being principally merchants of that city; the other, reaching from 28 to 45 deg: was configned to other perfons, chiefly of Devonshire, and called the Plymouth Company: their limits feaward and within land ftretched a hundred miles each way; and they were under the reftriction of not fettling within that diftance one of another. It may here be proper to remark, that, as the name of Virginia had been generally given to all English North America, on Sir Walter Raleigh's first attempt to fettle it, fo the first of the abovementioned portions newly granted was called South Virginia, and the other North Virginia; and their respective companies were

* See our account of Virginia.

fometimes

B 3

30 NEW-ENGLAND.

fometimes diffinguished by the fame denominations.

Agreeable to this grant, the Plymouth Company, in 1607, meditated a fettlement at Sagadahok; and about a hundred perfons were fent to make the attempt; but the deaths of feveral gentlemen concerned in the undertaking, amongft whom was John Popham, Efq; its principal promoter, happening foon after, it was dropped, and the colonizers returned to England.

Thus foiled, the patentees exerted themfelves but feebly afterwards to fettle their new territories: neverthelefs the Englifh fent fhips to the coaft, fome for the purpole of fifhing, others to trade with the natives; and the French, having alfo found their way hither, and made fome advances towards eftablifhing themfelves, were routed in 1613.

In 1614, Captains John Smith and Thomas Hunt, in two fhips, made the fame voyage. The former took a furvey of the territory of the Indians called Maffachufets, which on his return he prefented to the Prince NEW-ENGLAND.

Prince of Wales (afterwards Charles I.), who gave the country the appellation of New-England, and changed the original name of Maffachufets river into that of Charles. Hunt had been directed to carry the fifh to be difpofed of in Spain; but, in the execution of this order, his avarice led him to the commiffion of an action which well nigh ruined the English interest among some of the Indians: he feduced twenty-feven of a tribe called Patuxes on board, and fold them in Spain as flaves, at the rate of twenty pounds a man. For this execrable treachery he was broke by his owners on coming home; but that made no reparation to the Patuxes in America, who were highly exafperated, and determined on revenge. It does not appear that they had any opportunity of carrying this refolution into execution till the year 1610, when Captain Dormer visiting their coaft, and landing, was fo furioufly fet upon by them, that he narrowly escaped with his life, having received no lefs than fourteen wounds. Perhaps their animofity against the English would have proved irreconcileable, B 4

$_{32}$ NEW-ENGLAND.

able, had not one of the Indians, named Squanto, whom Hunt had fold in Spain, luckily made his efcape into England, and been brought back by Captain Dormer to his native home, where he gave his countrymen an account of the deteftation in which the Englifh held Hunt's villainy, and of his punifhment, extolling at the fame time the kind treatment which he himfelf had received :-by which means he gradually pacified them, though too late to prevent their affaulting Captain Dormer.

About 120 years had now paffed fince the first discovery of North-America, without any other settlement being formed there than the one first set on foot by Sir Walter Raleigh at Virginia (now properly so called), and even that, as it were, was struggling for life. This miscarriage, indeed, is not much to be wondered at, confidering the prodigious expence likely to be incurred *; for the land, being in its natural wild, uncleared state, afforded no immediate conveniencies or fublistence; and the ideas of the advantage deducible from fifting on the coaft, and trafficking with the natives in fkins and furs, which was all this country offered, were as yet too faint to ftimulate to a perfeverance in arduous undertakings minds full of the readier way, newly taught by the Spaniards, of acquiring treasure from the bowels of the Thus, the few attempts which had earth. been made by the Plymouth Company, with the direct view of founding a colony, having failed, the Company itfelf had infenfibly. funk into annihilation: when lo! a moft wonderful turn of affairs enfued, and the wished-for period arrived when least expect. ed :-- the event, which the motives of intereft arifing from a new branch of commerce had been too weak to effectuate, was wonderfully brought about by the influence of those of religion.

* Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mafon are faid to have fpent no less than 20,0001. each, in unprofitable colonizing undertakings.

Certain Brownists*, who, with one Mr. Robinson at their head, had, about the year 1608,

* The first fect which separated from the church, and so called from one Brown, a young clergyman of B_5 free 1608, in order to avoid perfecution in England, retired to Amfterdam, and next year to Leyden, in Holland, (where they began to dwindle away), folicited, about the year 1617, the South Virginia Company for a tract of their American territory. With this application of the Brownifts that Company were fo well pleafed, that they even addreffed the King in their behalf, for a grant under the great feal, fetting them entirely at liberty as to matters of religion; but nothing more than a promife of connivance being to be obtained from James, the defign was not then carried into execution. In 1619, refolving to venture at all events, they renewed their application; and towards the end of that year a grant paffed, under the Company's feal, to John Wincob.

fire and zeal over-proportionate to his differentiate. It is faid, that, though he boafted he had been in every prifon in England for religion and conficience fake, yet afterwards cooling, he made a recantation; but he found it much eafier to feduce people from the church, than to bring them back again to it.

In July, 1620, a part of them arrived at Southampton, where two fhips had been: previoufly provided for their accommodation. They attracted the attention of the London merchants, fome of whom joined perfonally, whilft others entrusted them with goods and money by way of adventure. On the 5th of next month they fet fail; but one of the ships springing a leak, they were twice obliged to put back, and at laft to take their paffage in one fhip well flowed, which left Plymouth on the 6th of September. They were bound to Hudfon's. river; but the Dutch having bribed their pilot to carry them more northerly, they arrived in the harbour of Cape Cod on the tith of November. 'Twas now too late for. them to venture to fea again; they, therefore, ranged in a boat along the coaft, and having found a commodious fituation, they built a town, and gave it the name of New Plymouth, in memory of the last Englishport they had failed from.

These adventurers amounted to about onehundred; but John Wincob, the abovementioned

35

зб

mentioned grantee, was not among them: however they could have derived no title from the faid grant, as that part of the country to which their pilot had fteered them was not within the limits prefcribed in it, the claim of the South-Virginia Company extending no higher than to about 20 miles N. of the mouth of Hudson's river. Neverthelefs, felf-prefervation dictated to them the neceffity of forming themfelves into an affociation on their arrival at Cape Cod, which they did by an inftrument figned by fortyone perfons, wherein they declared themfelves subjects of the crown of England, and folemnly promifed fubmiflion to fueh laws as the good of the colony fhould render it neceffary for the majority to make. Mr. Carver, a gentleman of confiderable fortune, which he had embarked in this undertaking, they unanimoufly appointed their first Go-Fifty of them died the enfuing vernor. winter

Had the colony been now attacked, they must have fallen an easy prey to the neighbouring Indians; but these favages had already ready bloody work enough upon their hands, being engaged in a war with another tribe of the natives called Narraganfets; befides which, it is faid, they fuffered greatly from an epidemical difeafe, which was very rife among them at this time. These circumstances inclined them to friendsthip; and Squanto, of whom we before had occasion to speak, prevailed upon the chief Sachem, whose name was Massaffoiet, to pay a visit to the colony, which he did in great form the next March, and entered into an alliance with them, acknowledging King James to be his fovereign. Of this Massaffoiet, it is pretended the colony purchased their land.

In April died Mr. Carver, who was fucceeded as Governor by Mr. Bradford, formerly a gentleman of Yorkshire.

In the mean time, the fpirit of colonizing revived in England, to which probably the adventure of the Brownists not a little contributed; and a new patent was granted, dated Nov. 3, 1620, incorporating adventurers rers to the northern colony, by the name of the Council for the affairs of New-England, or, as they were commonly called, the Council of Plymouth. This grant included all lands between the 40th and 48th degrees of N. latitude, and E. and W. between fea and fea, if not poffeffed by any Chriftian ftate, nor within the limits of the fouthern colony already mentioned; the quit-rent to be the fifth part of all their gold and filver ore.

Of the above Council of Plymouth a Mr. Wefton obtained the first grant of lands on the Massachulets-bay, and, in 1622, between 50 and 60 perfons began a plantation at a place fince named Weymouth; but through their bad conduct, and unneighbourly behaviour towards the Indians, it did not fucceed.

The Council made feveral other trifling grants, but none worthy of mention till 1627, when they fold to fix Dorfetshire gentlemen "all lands from three miles north-"ward of any and every part of Merri-"mack river to three miles fouthward of "any and every part of Charles river, and "of " of Maffachufet's-bay, eaft and weft from " fea to fea, with all iflands on the eaftern " or weftern coafts." The fix gentlemen who had obtained this grant, having affociated to themfelves twenty others, Mr. Endicot, an original grantee was difpatched to Naumkeak (afterwards by him named Salem) with planters, and furnished with inftructions to fuperintend the affairs of the colony; he was to be affifted alfo by a kind of council, confifting of fome of the other grantees, who went over at the fame time.

But now the affociation difcovered, that, though they had a good title to the lands by virtue of their purchafe of them from the Plymouth Company, they were neverthelefs, defitute of the powers of government, which could only be conveyed to them by a royal charter. They, therefore, applied to Charles I. who accordingly, granted them a charter, dated March 24, 1628-9, according to which the corporation was to confift of a Governor, a Deputy-governor, and eighteen Affiftants, to be chofen annually out of the freemen.

freemen. For the first year, the King nominated Matthew Craddock, Governor, and Thomas Goff, Deputy-governor; also the eighteen Afliftants. The Governor was empowered to call an affembly at pleafure, and the Governor and Affiftants, not lefs than feven in number, might once a month meet to transact business. Four great and general courts or affemblies of the freemen were to be holden annually; at which the Governor, and at least fix of the Affistants, with the reprefentatives of the townships, were to admit freemen, conftitute officers, and make laws, but not repugnant to the statutes of England. Such were the fundamentals of what is now called the old charter.

The Company being thus encouraged by royal favour, a fecond embarkation was foon after determined on, which was accompanied by four minifters. They arrived at Salem the 29th of June, where they found about 100 planters and nine houses. Their own addition made the whole number of fettlers about about 300, 100 of whom removed to Charlestown, where was one house built; the reft remained at Salem.

The Puritans, now turning their thoughts to spiritual institutions, after a previous enquiry concerning the regulations adopted by the Brownists at New Plymouth, fixed on the 6th of August for the choice and ordination of elders and deacons, when thirty perfons entered into a covenant in writing, and two of the above ministers were elected. the one as teacher, the other as paftor, both of them conjointly with three or four perfons of the graver fort, laying their hands on one another, with folemn prayer. This is called the beginning of the church. However, it did not give universal satisfaction. Two gentlemen (Meff. Samuel and John Brown) of Mr. Endicot's council, not approving of this rejection of the church of England, withdrew, with fome others of the people who were of the fame lentiments, in order to form a separate society; but this was foon crushed by the Governor's fending

41

fending his two counfellors back to England.

In July 1629, feveral perfons of fortune, difgufted at the proceedings both in church and flate at home, proposed a large embarkation, and the transfer of the corporation itfelf, to America; and, after some deliberation concerning the legality of the measure, it was refolved, " by the general confent of " the Company, that the government and " patent should be settled in New-Eng-" land."

In October, 1629, a new Governor, Deputy, and Affiftants, were elected, confifting of fuch perfons as were willing to go over with the patent. In the fpring of the next year, they embarked, and were followed by other adventurers at different times; fo that, before the end of July, eleven fhips had arrived in New-England, and by the end of the year fix more, having carried thither upwards of 1500 fouls.---- The Governor, John Winffrop, Efq; had failed from Yarmouth in the Arabella, on board which, he and other gentlemen figned a paper, wherein in they disclaimed any intention of separating from the church of England, and declared their design to be a section in point of place only, not of doctrine or worship. But are the doctrine and worship of the Independent church, which those gentlemen afterwards so zealously maintained in America, the doctrine and worship of the Church of England? How gross, then, their diffimulation!

42

The above general embarkation (who, on landing in New-England, were obliged, for want of provisions, to fet all their fervants, to the number of 180, at liberty, to fhift for themfelves, though they had coft them from 16 to 201. fterling each) fpread themfelves along the coafts of the Maffachufets-bay, and were the founders of moft of the towns now upon it; and among the reft (by direction of the Governor) of the town of Bofton*, which has fince become the

• Said to be fo named from refpect to the celebrated Mr. Cotton, minister of Boston, in England, whom they expected to join them; which he asterwards did, and was accordingly ordained teacher of the church of Boston, the capital of all New-England. As the winter approached, Diftrefs ftared them in the face. Before December they loft 200 of their number, through the unhealthinefs of the uncleared country, and the want of neceffary accommodation, and many moreperifhed by the feverity of the winter.

The first Court of Affistants was held on the 23d of August, 1631, at Charlestown, when four of them were appointed justices of the peace, which office, it was ordered, should be also exercised by the Governor and Deputy for the time being. On the 19th of October was held the first General Court, at which every one who was free of the corporation attended perfonally. It was then determined, that, in future, the freemen should elect the Assistants; and the ton on the 17th of October, 1633 — The peninfula on which this town is feated, was previoufly occupied by one Mr. Blackftone, a clergyman, who had retired thither from England, becaufe he did not like the Lords Bifhops; but he was now forced to make a fecond removal by the Lords Brethren, as he called the Puritans, whofe tyranny he found much more intolerable.

Assistants,

Afliftants, from themfelves, the Governor and his Deputy; and that the power of making laws, and appointing officers, fhould be vefted in the court of Afliftants;—which was inconfiftent with their charter. No lefs than 109 freemen were now admitted, among whom were many who did not belong to any of their churches, which were now increafing apace.

But at the General Court of election, in 1631, notwithftanding the former vote, the freemen themfelves refolved to chufe the Governor, Deputy, and Affiftants; and ordered that none fhould thereafter be admitted to the freedom of the body politic, but fuch as were actually church-members.

In 1631, 1632, and 1633, fresh emigrants embarked for New England; some with commercial views, and many to avoid the rigour of the ecclesiaftical courts; in the last year particularly, ships were failing thither all summer, 12 or 14 in a month: meanwhile, diffensions were found to multiply with their numbers; so that, in order to prevent the spreading of the "consultion " and

" and diffraction already grown there," especially in regard to religion, an order of the King in Council was issued on the 21st of February, 1633, to put a flop to further emigrations during pleasure *.

At a General Court for elections in 1634, twenty four of the principal inhabitants appeared as the reprefentatives of the body of freemen; a neceffary alteration on account of their great increase, though not warranted by their charter; when, among other fimilar regulations, it was refolved, "That none " but the General Court had power to " make and eftablish laws, or to elect and " appoint officers, to raise monies and

* Archbithop Laud is faid to have been the advifer of this proclamation, which may be prefumed to have proved fatal both to himfelf and his royal mafter, if it be true, as is pretended, that Oliver Cromwell, Sir Matthew Boynton, Mr. Hampden, and other flaunch and active eacouragers of the colonizing Puritans, were thereby prevented from joining them, after being actually on fhip-board for that purpofe, that ill humour thus recoiling upon the royalifts at home, which otherwife would have vented itfelf abroad. Neverthelefs, the national difcord then prevailing foon rendered the prohibition of little effect.

" taxes,

" taxes, or to difpole of lands;" and that there should be four General Courts annually. And this regulation of their legislative body, excepting the reduction of their General Courts to two only in one year, continued till the diffolution of their charter.

The colony of Brownifts, whom we before mentioned as having feated themfelves at New Plymouth, loft fifty of their company the first winter by fevers and scorbutic diforders; nevertheles, they perfevered in their fettlement with the utmost fortitude. dividing themfelves into nineteen houfholds or meffes, and for the first two or three years having every thing in common. They were at times joined by new-comers, yet but flowly, their whole number, in 1624. amounting to no more than 180 perfons, in 22 houfholds. In this year, being ftill without any authoritative title to the country they poffeffed, Mr. Bradford, their Governor, obtained a grant from the new Council of Plymouth, which, afterwards, he generoufly made over to the freemen in general for their encouragement; encouragement; and this affignment was confirmed by a new grant from the abovementioned Council, in January, 1629-30.

As they increased in numbers, they formed their churches after a manner now well known by the term Independent, which the first settlers in Massachusets-bay copied after. For a confiderable time, however, their ecclefiaftical effablishments were but in a tottering condition, no minifters of their own fect having joined them, and, through their want of confidence even in the Puritan clergy, the facerdotal duties being performed by laymen, the chief of whom was Mr. William Brewster, who had formerly been in an honourable employment under William Davison, Elg; Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, but afterwards had affociated himfelf with Mr. Robinfon's congregation of Brownifts at Leyden, where he became an elder. He went over with the first embarkation to America; and Mr. Robinfon was to have followed with the remainder of the flock; but he died, in 1624, in Holland.

In

In compliment to the Maffachufets-bay fettlers for taking the hint of their Independent mode of church establishment from them, the Plymotheans followed the example of the former in their juridical oeconomy, (though, having no charter from the King, they were utterly deftitute of any authority for fo doing, unlefs the agreement be thought fuch which was entered into by them at their first landing at Cape Cod, as already mentioned), and in criminal cafes manifested the fame intolerance of spirit, which (as will hereafter more fully appear) characterifed the Puritans their neighbours, than whom, however, it must in justice be observed, they paid more regard to the common law of their mother country in civil matters.

The growth of the colony of New Plymouth was by no means fo rapid as that of the Maffachufets bay colony; neverthelefs, before the year 1643, they had fettled Duxbury, Scituate, Taunton, Rehoboth, Sandwich, Barnftaple, Yarmouth, and Eaftham.

Amongft

49

С

Amongst the many adventurers we have already mentioned to have transported themfelves to America within the years 1631, 1632, and 1633, were, the Rev. Mr. John Elliot, the apoftle of the Indians (into whole language he translated the Bible, and feveral pious works), and three leading Puritan divines, Mr. John Cotton, Mr. Thomas Hooker, and Mr. Samuel Stone. So much wifdom and orthodoxy, one fhould think, would have reftored peace to their religious and civil establishments; but the reverse was the confequence, and the confusion and distraction complained of in the King's proclamation became more and more prevalent. The Puritans, in general, were remarkable for ftubbornness of opinion; fo that on any controverfy arifing, each party maintained his own with an enthusias fcarcely warrantable by infallibility itfelf; and hence arole perfecution, without measure and without end.

In the year 1634, the Rev. Mr. Roger Williams, minister of Salem, was accused of propagating divers heterodox tenets, which which it would be tedious to specify; fuffice. it to fay, therefore, that he was declared a fchilmatic and heretic, and banished from the Maffachusets-bay colony. His devotees, whole fentiments were not affected by thole of his acculers and judges, determined to accompany him; whereupon Mr. Williams leading them to the fouthward, they fixed on a fpot and built a town, calling it Providence, and thus became the founders of what is called Providence Plantation. Cenfurable as he might be as a divine, Mr. Williams is faid to have made a good civil governor; to have been very inftrumental in procuring the charter of Rhode-Ifland, to, which his plantation was thereby annexed; and, by his upright conduct: during can abode of, forty years in those parts, to have recovered his reputation even among his. perfecutors.

The fettlers in the country bordering on Maffachufets-bay, beginning, by their prodigious increafe, to be firaitened for want of room, a party of about a hundred perfons, with the Rev. Mr. Hooker at their head, fet C_2 off, off, in 1635, on foot for the country of Connecticut, of which they had received a very favourable account; and, after a very laborious journey through wilderneffes for near a fortnight, arrived on the banks of the Connecticut river, where they built a town to which they gave the name of Hertford; and other companies reforting thither alfo, laid the foundations of Windfor, Weathersfield, and Springfield. They had taken with them an authority from the colony of Maffachusets-bay to erect a government in Connecticut; but conceiving that they were out of the limits of the Massachusets jurifdiction, they refolved themfelves into a diftinct body-politic, yet much upon the plan of the Maffachufets, both as to civil and ecclefiaftical affairs, the most remarkable difference between them being their not infifting on membership of their churches as an abfolutely neceffary qualification to admittance to freedom, or holding offices, amongst them. They choice Edward Hopkins, Efg; their first Governor.

51

But

But a settlement in Connecticut had also been planned by the mal-contents in England. The Narraganset country is faid to have been granted by Charles I. to the Earl of Warwick in 1630, and by him afterwards disposed of to the Lords Say and Sele, Brook, Rich, Sir Nathaniel Rich, and Charles Fiennes, John Pym, and John Hampden, Efgrs: &c. who are supposed to have made this purchase with an intent of securing a place of retreat, in cafe they should fail in the accomplishment of their defigns at home. Hence it happened, that in the fame year that the first fettlers in Connecticut emigrated from Maffachufets-bay, Mr. Winthrop, jun. arrived there from England on the fame defign, with a number of men, arms, ammunition, ftores, 2000l. in money, and other requifites for eftablishing a colony, of which, by a commission from the above-mentioned nobles and gentlemen, he was appointed Governor; and they accordingly began their fettlement by building a fort at the mouth of Connecticut river, which they called Say-brook. Here now appeared C 3 a fort a fort of claffing between his defign and that of the colonizers from Maffachufetsbay; however, for the fake of union, and the general profperity, Mr. Winthrop and his company fuffered the others to proceed without moleftation

53

By this time fettlements had fprung up in the diffrict of New-Hampshire, and that formerly called the Province of Main, by the vigorous efforts of Capt. John Mason, and Sir Ferdinando Gorges; but which in time were claimed by the Massachusets colony*.

* Several clashing grants of lands between the rivers Merrimack and Sagadahok had paffed at different times under the feal of the Council of Plynouth to divers perfons, especially to Gorges and Maton, who spared neither pains nor money in their 'colonizing purfuits. But we need only particularly note, 1. A grant obtained by Mafon, in 1629, of the lands between Merrima k and Pifcataqua rivers, or the lands which conflitute New-Hampshire, and which he had formerly endeavoured, and ftill continued to endeavour, to fettle, at a great expence, but without adequate fuccefs; infomuch that, in the year 1635, he seens to have been weary of the undertaking; for, though at a refignation of the Council's patent to Charles I. in that year, this yery grant was referved referved to Mason, it does not appear that he afterwards exerted himfelf to compleat his fettlement .--- 2. A patent granted in 1639 to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, with powers of jurifdiction, of the lands between the rivers Pifcataqua and Kennebek, by the name of the Province of Main: here he had long before beftowed, and was continuing to befow his money and labour to fettle and effablish \bar{a} colony on a respectable footing, when his attention was diverted to the civil war in Eugland, in which he engaged on the fide of the royalifts.

55

As the profecution of the Puritans increafed in the mother country, they fled to America

The Maffachufets, having traced the river Merrimack. to its head, or northernmost part, found, that a line drawn eaftward from " three miles north" of it, (fuch was the idea entertained by them of extending their north boundary-line,) would include within their grant the territories of New-Hampshire and Main; and the inhabitants of the former, from their own inability to preferve order amongst themselves, making overtures of fubmillion to the jurifdiction of the Maffachufets-bay, were annexed to that colony in 1541, and allowed the privilege of fending two deputies to the General Court .----Main being in a manner forfaken by Gorges in the civil war, his authority declined, and the people fell into confusion; of which the Maffachufets taking advantage, encouraged the difpolition which prevailed in numbers of them to unite with their colony; and next year that province was made a county, fubject to the Maffachufets government, by the name of Yorkthire, and had liberty to America for shelter, and many added themfelves to the colony at Maffachufetsbay in 1635, and among them Henry Vane, Efq; (afterwards Sir Henry,) who was received with great cordiality, and admitted to the freedom of the community. This induced him to lay afide a defign he had formed of fettling a plantation in Connecticut, and to remain in Maffachufetsbay, of which he was the next year chofen Governor. And now arole a religious difpute, which threatened to involve the colony in a civil war. Mrs. Hutchinson, a fanatic woman, who had formerly lived at Alford, near Bofton, in England, and had gone over to America about the year 1623. observing that the men met frequently at Bofton (befides the public ftated times), to exercife themfelves in religious matters, took it into her head that there ought to be to fend deputies to the General Court; the inhabitants being, moreover, allowed the peculiar privilege of becoming freemen on taking the ufual oath, without fubmitting to the condition of church-membership, fo rigidly exacted from others.

meetings

meetings of the women alfo, which the accordingly affembled at her houfe, where fhe enlarged upon the fermons of her admired teacher Mr. Cotton, broached a variety of prepofterous notions, and diffinguished the churches into two claffes, characterizing the one (which the efpoused) as under a covenant of grace, the other as under a covenant of works. Hence high disputes took place among all ranks of people, fome countenancing, others condemning her doctrines. The Governor betrayed ftrong indications in favour of them, whilft they were equally the objects of the Deputy-Governor's (Mr. Winthrop's) opposition : nay, they were occafionally explained with fuch fubtlety, as to caufe a difference of fentiments among the ministry themselves. On this occasion, the Governor, though warmly supported by the -people of Bofton, loft his popularity in other parts of the country; infomuch that, at the next election, he was supplanted in his office by Mr. Winthrop. Mr. Vane, ill brooking this mortifying event, returned to England, where he had no fmall share in foment-C 5 ing ing the troubles that enfued, for which, at length, the axe put an end to his life.

57

Mrs. Hutchinfon, regardlefs of the mifchievous tendency of her conduct, perfifted in the propagation of her tenets; fo that it was found neceffary to hold a fynod to take cognizance of them; and after a difputation of three weeks continuance, upwards of eighty religious dogmas, which were faid to be maintained by fome or other of the people, were condemned as erroneous. This determination made way for the interference of the fecular power, and accordingly Mrs. Hutchinfon was put on her trial, of which the following fentence was the refult : "Mrs. "Hutchinfon, the wife of Mr. William " Hutchinfon, being convented for traduce-" ing the minifters and their miniftry in the " country, the declared voluntarily her reve-" lations, and that the thould be delivered, " and the court ruined with their pofterity, " and thereupon was banified; and in the "mean while was committed to Mr. Jofeph "Weld (of Roxbury) until the court should " difpofe of her."

One

One of the most avowed defenders of Mrs. Hutchinfon and her doctrines was the Rev. Mr. Wheelwright, who, being alfo fentenced to banishment, led his followers into New Hampshire, where he founded the town and church of Exeter, removing afterwards to Hampton, and thence to Salifbury. And as the Bostonians, in particular, had difcovered air attachment to the fame religious principles, fixty of the most forward of them were obliged to furrender up their arms, and a law was paffed to punish any perfon by fine, imprisonment, or banishment, who should traduce any court, or any of their fentences. This occasioned the feceffion of numbers out of the colony, most of whom, as also Mrs. Hutchinson and her husband, betook themselves to the island of Aquetneck, which Mr. Hutchinfon, Mr. William Coddington, and others, jointly purchased of the natives for lefs than the value of 50 l. fterling, and changed its name to Rhode-Island *. The refugees here, as elsewhere, refolved

* By the art and influence of his wife, Mr. Hutchinfon became chief ruler there; nevertheles, after his ceath, refolved themfelves by their own, for want of a better authority, into a body politic, allowing liberty of conficience to people of all perfuafions; and, through this indulgence, the ifland foon becoming overftocked with people fome of them purchafed, from the colony of New Plymouth, a tract of land on the oppofite part of the continent, and there built the town of Warwick.

$60 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

During the inteftine troubles above-mentioned, happened the firft fray between the colonifts and the Indians; a tribe of whom, called Pequods, inhabiting the Connecticut country, had, as long ago as the year 1634, attacked and murdered Captains Stone and Norton, with all their crew, on their failing in a finall veffel up Connecticut river, and, lately had renewed their hoftilities from a jealoufy of the new fettlers in those parts; but the New-Englanders, being joined by death in 1642, Mrs. Hutchinfon, having taken fome offence, removed to the Dutch colony beyond Newhaven; and the next year, fhe and all her family, amounting to 16 perfons, were murdered by Indians, excepting one daughter, whom they carried away captive. the Narraganset Indians, who were at high enmity with the Pequods, in effect extirpated that patriotic tribe, with the loss only of three men killed : many, however, were wounded.

In the year 1637, arrived in New-England, Meff. Eaton and Hopkins, two London merchants, and the Rev. Mr. Davenport, formerly minister of a church in Coleman-ftreet, and many other perfons of good condition. The most delectable spots of Maffachulet's bay being already occupied, and information having been given those adventurers of a large bay, commodious for trade to the fouth weft of Connecticut river, they purchased of the natives all the landlying between that and Hudson's river, and with a number of followers removed thither, and built the town called Newhaven; thus laying the foundation of a flourishing colony, which became known by the denominaon of the colony of Newhaven. They also made fettlements in Long-Ifland - Having no charter, they, as the Connecticut fettlers had done before them, took the liberty of forming forming themfelves into an affociation, to be regulated by laws of their own making, and fet Mr. Theophilus Eaton at their head as Governor.—Mr. Hopkins, however, went to Connecticut.

The loss of inhabitants by the emigrations which the late religious frenzy had occafioned from Maffachufet's bay was compenfated in 1638, by the arrival of 3000 fettlers, chiefly Puritans, in 20 fhips, from England, where the measure of trouble was then filling apace. 'Tis formewhat remarkable, that a fpirit of religious intolerance, which drove them from the one country, fhould have made room for them in the other.

In the fame year happened a violent earthquake in New-England, long recognized as an æra to compute from by the people.

This year is memorable also for the death of the Rev. Mr. John Harvard, minister of Charlestown, who bequeathed near 8001. towards founding a college; and the colony having previously advanced 400 l. towards the same purpose, a building was erected, and,

and in honour of the greatest contributor to it called Harvard College *. It

* It was at first merely an academical free-school (or schola illustris), but in 1650 was incorporated by the government of Meffachufets-bay, and the name of the town in which it was fituated, was changed from Newton to Cambridge. The corporation confifts of a Prefident or Rector, five Fellows, and a Treasurer ; and confers the degrees of Bachelor and Master of Arts, In 1698, another building was added, called Stoughton Hall, from the name of its founder; and a chapel has alfo been erected at the expence of Mrs. Holden .- At the head of a lift of charitable benefactors to the college flands the family of Hollis. Mr. Thomas Hollis, of London, who died in 1731, founded two professorfhips, one of divinity, the other of mathematics and natural philosophy, and furnished an apparatus for making experiments. He also contributed largely to the library, which, by other donations, at length confitted of 5 or 6000 volumes, but which, together with the apparatus, and the whole of the college that contained the fame, were confumed by fire in January 1764. Very generous prefents have fince been made towards a new library, particularly by Mr. Hollis, of Gray's-inn. To a new college built in 1763, by the General Court, at an expence of between 4 and 5000 l. fterling, has been appropriated the name of Hollis-Hall, in grateful remembrance of the benefactions of this worthy family. The next confiderable benefactor feems to have been Thomas Hancock, Eig; late of Bofton, deceased.

It cannot but strike the reader, that, as the oppression of the nonconformists in England gave birth to the first fettlements in New-England, so a perfeverance in that conduct proved the chief, though undefigned, means of their aftonishing growth. A continued accession of refugees had, within the space of twenty years only, advanced them, in respect of population, to a state of independence: for by the year 1640*, upwards of 21,200 fouls had emigrated this ther +, and since that time a greater number of perfons have removed from, than to that country.

deceafed, who gave 10001. fterling towards founding a profefforfhip for the oriental languages; and it must be observed of Mr. John Hancock, his executor, that being informed of the testator's intention to have given 5001. more towards the library, he honourably contributed that sum for the same purpose.

* The country bordering on the Muffachufet's-bay was really over-peopled at that time; for many of the inhabitants of Lynn, in Effex county, had then removed, for want of room, to Long Ifland, where they built the town of Southampton, and, by advice of the Governor of the Maffachufets-bay colony, erected themfelves into a diftinct government. The whole ifland however, was afterwards annexed to the Province of New York.

† The expence then incurred (that of fettling included) was supposed to be not lefs than 192,0001.

Indeed,

Indeed, New-England feems to have been fettled in a very critical period. The colonies no fooner arrived at the degree of profperity just mentioned, than the original great ftimulus to refort to them ceafed, by the discontent in England ripening into an open rupture between the king and parliament. Nay whether from motives of revenge, or from the hopes, in an alteration of state-affairs, of sharing the good things from which they had been excluded, many of the principal people, both clergy and laity, returned to the mother-country, and joined their now alcendant party. Among them were, Edward Winflow, and Edward Hopkins, Efors, Mr. George (afterwards Sir George) Downing; and the following Reverends, viz. Meff. Wm. Hook, Sam. Mather, Sam. Eaton. John Knowles, Thos. Allen, John and Benjamin Woodbridge, Robert Peck, — Blinman, — Saxton, Giles Firmin, Henry Whitfield, Henry Butler, ----- Farmworth, and the famous Hugh Peters :- all or most of whom obtained, under Cromwell's $66 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

Cromwell's administration, good employments and benefices*.

The following sketch will give the reader a clear idea of the state of New-England in 1642. There were 50 towns and villages, 40 churches, upwards of 40 ministers houses, a castle, prisons, forts, cartways, causeways, &cc. all compleated at the people's own charge. The planters had commodious houses, with gardens, orchards, corn-fields, meadow and pasture ground, fenced in with hedges as in England; the merchants were furnissed with warehouses, wharfs, ships, boats, and seamen; and tradesse with good shops, &cc. in thort, there was every where an appearance of business.

The colonies of Mallachulets-bay, New-Plymouth, Connecticut, and Newhaven, having now a little leifure for reflection, took into confideration_the dangers to which they were liable, as well from European as Indian foes; the Dutch being effablished on

* Several of these clergymen, together with upwards of 2000 others, were deprived of their livings by the Bartholomew act, in 1662.

Hudson's

Hudion's river, the French getting footing in the north-eaft, and the Narraganfet Indians beginning to betray fymptoms of jealoufy and difaffection. On a propolal of the first-mentioned colony, therefore, in 1643, they readily entered into a firm and perpetual confederacy, offensive and defensive, after the manner of the provinces of Holland, ftyling themfelves therein the United Colonies of New-England. The Rhode-Islanders were excluded.

We pais to the next firiking occurrence in the hiftory of this country, which was the perfecution of the Quakers, who began to propagate their doctrines there in the year 1656. Many of them were fined, imprifoned, and whipped; which proving ineffectual to reftrain them, a law was made for cutting off their ears, and perforating their tongues with hot irons; which feverities also being inflicted in vain, another law was made fubjecting them to banifhment, and, in cafe of return, to death; and imposing heavy fines on all perfons who should bring them into the colony, or harbour them in it. Neverthelefs, thelefs, the zeal of the Quakers led them to return almoft as faft as they were banifhed; and, in confequence, William Robinfon, of London, merchant, Marmaduke Stevenfon, of Yorkfhire, hufbandman, and Mary Dyer, were actually hung in the year 1659; as was alfo William Ledea, a foreigner, in 1660. And thefe perfecutions (which were carried on in the Maffachufets-bay and New-Plymouth colonies, but chiefly in the former) did not ceafe, till they were prohibited by an order received from Charles II. dated Sept. 9, 1661*.

$68 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

The

* The wild enthusia in which actuated most of these Quakers may be conceived from the following inftances. In a paper figned by Stevenson a little before his execution, he fays, "That, when he was following his "plough, in the east part of Yorkthire, in Old England, "he was in a fort of rapture, and heard a fecret voice "in his conficience, faying, I have ordained thee a prophet "of the nations; and in obedience to this voice he left "his family and employment, and went first to Barba-"does, in the year 1658, and from thence to Rhode-"Ifland, where, as he was visiting the feed, the word "of the Lord came to him, faying, Go to Boston with "thy brother William Robinson; and for yielding obedience "to The Puritans of New-England, on Cromwell's affuming the exercife of fovereign power, had, as was naturally to be expected, very readily acknowledged his authority; on the other hand, they as prudently fubmitted to that of Charles II. at the Reftoration. In the address of the Maffachufets-bay colony on this occafion, after expressions of their loyalty, endeavours to juftify their conduct towards the Quakers, and folicitations for the King's protection of them in the continuance both of their civil and religious li-

" to this command of the Everliving God, and not obey-"ing the commands of men, he fuffered."-Robinfon left a paper of the like import; and Ledea told the populace at the gallows, " That he fuffered for bearing " his testimony for the Lord against the deceivers and " the deceived."-Deborah Wilfon (a fifter of exemplary life no doubt) went through the ftreets of Salem, naked as the was born; for which one of the fect made the following apology: " If the Lord did ftir up any of his " daughters to be a fign of the nakedness of others, he " believed it to be a great crofs to a modeft woman's " fpirit, but the Lord must be obeyed."-One Faubord. of Grindleton, was on the point of factificing his fon, in imitation of the patriarch of old; but the neighbours, hearing the lad cry, broke into the Loufe, and prevented it.

berties,

liberties, is the following fingular paffage :--"We are not feditious, as to the interefts " of Cælar: nor schissnatical, as to matters " of religion. We diftinguish between " churches and their impurities. We could " not live without the public worship of " God; nor be permitted the public worfhip, " without fuch a yoke of fubleription and " conformity, as we could not confent unto "without fin. That we might, therefore," " enjoy divine worfhip without human mix-" tures, without offence to God, man, and " our own confciences, we, with leave, but " not without tears, departed from our coun-" try, kindred, and fathers houles, into this "Patmos."-The good-natured monarch gracioufly received this address, and promiled the protection requefted.

In 1662, Mr. Winthrop carried over a charter for the colony of Connecticut, to which was thereby annexed the colony of Newhaven. The people of this diffrict at first refused to fubmit, alleging that they were without the bounds preicribed; but afterwards they thought proper to change their their fentiments, and, of a diffinct colony, became a county of Connecticut, as they have ever fince remained.—By virtue of this charter, the freeholders annually chufe a Governor, and a certain number of Affiftants, who compole the Council or Upper Houfe of Affembly, and are also the grand ordinary in all testamentary cases. The freeholders also elect, from among themselves, two to represent each town, who form the Lower House. Both Houses, resolving into a grand committee, chuse all civil and military officers, and have the cognizance of matrimonial and other matters.

The people of Rhode Ifland, alfo, obtained this year a charter, incorporating with their own colony that called Providence Plantation. In right of it, they annually elect a Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and ten Affiftants, of whom confifts the Upper Houfe of Affembly. About 70 reprefentatives, chofen half-yearly by the different towns, conftitute the Lower Houfe. The two Houfes, in general affembly, appoint all public officers, whether civil or military, (the Recorder, Treaturer, Treafurer, and Attorney-General, alone excepted being elected annually by the people); and have the powers of enacting laws, regulating the militia, and tranfacting all other bufinels of government. They are obliged to fit immediately after every election, in the fummer at Newport, and in the winter at Providence, in South Kingfton, and Narraganfet alternately. They adjourn themfelves, but may be fummoned together again by the Governor on any emergency. The Governor has no negative; he only votes with the Affiftants, and has the caffing voice in cafe of an equality.

In 1665, the anabaptifts were charged with "gathering them felves into a pretend-"ed church state, in opposition to the order "of the churches in Christ in the colony," &c. The allegation not being denied, they were at first admonished and threatened only; but this not restraining them, such as were freemen were disfranchised; which also being ineffectual, the offenders were imprisoned and banished. But severity only making profetytes, it was thought adviseable adviseable to defift from further profecutions.

The King, in 1664, commissioned Colonel Nichols and George Cartwright, Esq; in conjunction with Sir Robert Carr and Samuel Maverick, Esq; to reduce the Dutch settled on Hudson's river, to visit the colonies in New-England, hear and determine all matters of complaint, and settle the peace and security of the country.

They arrived at Bofton in July; whence, after acquainting the Government with, and imparting a few particulars of, their commiffion, they proceeded to Hudson's river to execute their orders there, before they entered upon bufinels at Maffachulets-bay. In the mean time, a General Court was ca'led to confider of proper measures to be purfued at this critical period, when the authority and privileges of the government were thought to be invaded. They took feveral conciliatory fteps, one of which was (agreeable to a letter received from Charles II. in 1652), the repeal of the law of 1631, relative to the admission of freemen, in room whereof D whereof was fubfituted another, which allowed orthodox and moral freeholders, rateable at a certain value, to be made freemen, though not members of the church.

The Dutch furrendered on being fummoned; Colonel Nichols remaining at New-York, the other three Commissioners returned to Bofton, the 15th of February, 1665. As they expected to meet with opposition from the Maffachulets, they thought proper, for example's fake, previoufly to exert their authority in fome of the weaker colonies, and departed the next day for Plymouth, where they were fubmiflively received, and found that almost every thing they had to recommend was already observed. From Plymouth, they went to the Narraganfet country, and, holding their court at Warwick, enquired into the titles of lands there, and made divers determinations, which, however, were foon difregarded. They returned again to Bofton the latter end of April; and as their conduct feemed to have a strong bias on the fide of prerogative rather than privilege, it is not much to be wondered wondered at, that they were looked upon with a diffruftful eye. A General Court being met, the bufinefs commenced. Our plan will not permit us to enter largely upon it; but the temper of both parties will appear from the following particulars:

One of the King's inftructions to the Commissioners, communicated by them to the court, runs thus :--- " That they" (the commiffioners) "fhould not receive any " complaints against a magistrate, except " for fomething done against equity, or a-"gainst the charter; nor interrupt the " course of justice between party and party, " except the proceedings should be ex-" prefsly contrary to the rules prefcribed by " the charter; or the matter, in difference, " arole from fome expression or clause in " fome grant under the great feal. In those " cafes, to examine and proceed according " to juffice."

Upon the subject of this instruction, the Commissioners acquainted the Court, " They had received many complaints "from D 2

" from the English of hard measure in fe-" veral kinds, one more especially, which " they offered to communicate, and dared " not refuse to examine it, but had so much " respect to the authority in the several co-" lonies, that they would leave it to the " choice of the Court, whether it should be " heard at Providence, in Rhode-Island, or " at Boston, either at that time, or after " the Commissioners returned from the " eastward, where they were going."— This referred to a criminal profecution against one John Porter, jun. to whom they had granted a warrant of protection, as it was termed.

The anfwer returned by the Court was as follows: "That hearing and determining "appeals from their judgments is incon-"fiftent with their charter; neverthelefs, "as they defired to be doers of truth and "righteoufnefs, and not to fhun the light, "if the Commiffioners would be pleafed to "impart the complaints that had been "brought againft the government; they "hoped to be able to give fuch anfwer as "fhould "fhould fatisfy his Majefty that their actions had been confonant to reafon and equity, and not fuch as evil-minded men had reprefented them."

To this answer the Commissioners replied, "That they were forry to find that "the Court put more value upon their own "conceptions, than the wissiom of the King, "in interpreting the charter. The Com-"missioners would reduce all the discourses "upon this head to one question, —Do you "acknowledge his Majesty's Commission, "wherein we are nominated Commissioners, "to be of full force to all the purposes "therein contained?"

The Court defired to be excufed from a direct answer to this queftion, and choice rather to plead his Majefty's charter, and the special charge the Commissioners had received not to disturb them in the enjoyment of it; adding, that they were ready to give such an account of their proceedings, as that the Commissioners might be able to represent their perfons and actions to his Majefty. But the Commissioners infifting D $_3$ on on a direct answer, the Court declared, "That it was enough for them to give their "fense of the powers granted to them by "charter, and that it was beyond their line to determine the power, intent, or purpose of his Majesty's Commission."

78. NEW-ĖNGLAND.

Thus the Maffachulets government not fubmitting to have their own authority fuperfeded, this famous Commission, so far as it respected them, was productive of little more than jarring altercation and diffurb-At length, breaking off further conance. ference, the Commissioners went to New-Hampshire and the Province of Main. where they appointed juffices of the peace. exercifed divers acts of government, and attempted to detach those colonies from the authority of the Maffachufets, to which they had some time fince submitted. They failed in New-Hampshire, finding very few towns inclined to countenance the propofal. What temporary fuccess they met with in Main will be feen prefently. The Commissioners returning to Bofton, fome fharp words paffed between them and the Court, concerning their their proceedings in New-Hampshire and Main. They then repaired to Connecticut, where they had no better fuccess than at Maffachusets-bay: but by the colonies of Plymouth and Rhode-Island they were again submitted to, fitting as a court in the latter, at the towns of Providence and Warwick, fcrutinizing into the proceedings of the executive powers, receiving all complaints of the discontented, examining into purchases of lands from the Indians, &c. &c. for the space of feveral months.

Ferdinando Gorges, grandfon and heir to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, attempted, in 1664, to recover the Province of Main; and procured a letter to be fent by Charles II. to the Government of the Maffachufets colony, requiring fuch reftitution to be forthwith made, or reafon to be fhewn for the contrary. The Government, in an humble addrefs, excufed themfelves from a compliance, and affigned reafons for their conduct: neverthelefs, Mr. Gorge's claim being countenanced by the Commiffioners, the people were encouraged to withdraw from their D 4 fubjection fubjection to the Maffachufets. But, the province becoming a scene of confusion, as might naturally have been expected from fo unfettled a ftate, fome of the principal perfons made application, in 1688, to the Maffachulets Government to re-affume the jurifdiction over it; and agreeable hereto a declaration was published requiring the inhabitants to vield obedience to the laws of the Maffachufets colony, and to chufe officers within the feveral towns, as they had done before the late interruption. This declaration had its intended effect, though fome opposition was made to it by the perfons appointed to act there by the Commiffioners.

An execution which happened at Bofton, in 1673, is too remarkable to be unnoticed. The crew of a veffel bound from the Straits to London, having entered into a confpiracy, took occafion to quarrel with the mafter and fome of his officers, turned them into the long-boat with a small quantity of provisions, about 100 leagues to the weftward of Spain, and and then ftood with the fhip for New England. The mafter and little company, driving before the wind, by a fingular providence, made the coaft of New-England alfo, with the lofs of one man only; both mafter and crew, as may well be fuppofed, were aftonifhed at feeing each others faces there; but the former acquainting the Governor with the above circumftances, the mutineers were feized, and the ringleaders hanged.

The New-England Colonies, whether it was owing to their own confederacy, or to the difagreements which prevailed among the fachems or chiefs of the Indians, had met with little opposition or annoyance from them fince the reduction of the Pequods in the year 1637; but in 1674, a confpiracy was difcovered to be forming by Metacom, or (according to an affumed English name) Philip, fon and fucceffor of Maffaffoiet. whom we mentioned as entering into an alliance with the colony of New-Plymouth on their first arrival. Philip, conceiving himfelf and other fachems (perhaps with D. 5 rea(op) reason) to be fervilely treated by the encroaching colonizers, fecretly invited his countrymen to a general infurrection, as the only means of recovering their expiring liberties.' Of this the Government of Plymouth were apprized by one Saufaman, who had embraced Christianity, and was employed by the English as a missionary among the natives. Saufaman fell a facrifice to the refentment of the natives on account of this difcovery; for falling into the hands of a party of them as he was crofling a frozen pond, they murdered him, and cutting a hole plunged his body under the ice, leaving his hat and gun at top, that it might be thought he had fallen in accidentally. This artifice, it is faid, in fome measure fucceeded, the body, when found, being interred without fuspicion of violence: but doubts arifing in the mind of the Governor, he ordered it to be taken up and examined, when the neck was found to be broken, the head fwolen, and feveral other parts fhockingly bruifed; in confequence of which, in 1675, 1675, three fulpected Indians (one of them, named Tobias, being, it scems, of Philip's council) were feized, adjudged guilty *, and hanged.

8 I

$82 \qquad NEW-ENGLAND.$

This execution, no doubt, much chagrined Philip, and hurried him to the immediate commencement of hoftilities by plundering fome plantations near his palace at Mount Hope, and murdering eight or nine perfons at Swanley. But a body of men from Maffachusets-bay immediately joining the Plymouth forces, agreeable to the ftipulation of the Confederacy, King Philip quitted Mount Hope, and retired to the Pocasset Indians on the sea-coast, whereupon the English marched into the country of the Narragansets, whole friendship they had reafon to fuspect, and compelled them to fign a treaty, obliging themfelves to take an active part against Philip, and offering rewards for his apprehenfion. They then

* The credulous Dr. Mather fays, that the first intimation of the identity of the murderers, proceeded from the circumstance of the bleeding of the corps, on being touched by Tobias.

purfued

$N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

purfued this warrior into the Pocaffet country, and, on July 18, attacked, and would most probably have taken him in a fwamp, had not night obliged them to defift. It was afterwards judged most prudent to ftarve him into a furrender, by placing guards round the fwamp.

In the mean time, the Indians in other parts of New-England had followed Philip's hoftile example. On the 14th of July, the Nipmucks killed four perfons at Mendon, in the Maffachufets colony: neverthelefs, that government, with a view of reclaiming them, dispatched Captain Hutchinson, at the head of about 20 horsemen, to Brookfield, the inhabitants of which place had great hopes of a good iffue attending a treaty which the Indians had promifed to hold at a certain place on the 2d of August. A few of the principal people, therefore, accompanied Capt. Hutchinfon to the fpot appointed; where finding none of the Indians, it was agreed to proceed to their chief town. But, when they had travelled about four or five miles, the infidious infidious Indians fired * upon them from an ambush, killed eight on the spot, and mortally wounded three more, among whom was the Captain himfelf. However, the furvivors escaped to Brookfield, where the inhabitants were obliged to run together into one large houle, to avoid the fury of the Indians, who, following the blow, poured into and burnt the town. To the house where the inhabitants had taken refuge, the Indians attempted to fet fire feveral times, but in vain. At length, they filled a cart with hemp and combustibles, which they were thrufting in flames towards it, when (moft fortunately) a heavy fhower of rain still prevented their defign. The befieged now receiving a reinforcement under Major Willard, the Indians thought proper to retreat, deftroying all the horfes and cattle they could meet with, to a fwamp 10 or 12 miles off, where on August 5, they were joined by

* In the war with the Pequods, a part only of that tribe had fire-arms; but they were now come into general use among the Indians, who had industriously got great numbers into their possession, and rendered themfelves good marksmen.

Philip,

8.5

Philip, who had found means to elcape from his dangerous fituation at Pocaffet the latter end of July. His followers had all deferted him but 40 men, and a number of women and children.

Hostilities were commenced about the fame time by the Indians upon Connecticut river, near Hadley, Hatfield, and Deerfield; alfo by those at Penicook and other places on Merrimak river. Skirmishes frequently happened, and generally to the difadvantage of the English. Captain Lothrop, with 80 men, being fent to guard a quantity of corn from Deerfield to Hadley, was attacked by 7 or 800 Indians: he fought them manfully, till only feven or eight of his fmall corps remained. Captain Mofeley advanced with his company from Deerfield, but too late to refcue Lothrop. He renewed and continued the engagement for four hours; and, at length, Major Treat coming up to his affiftance with about 160 Monhegin Indians, the enemy were put to flight.

Soon afterwards, a body of the Springfield Indians, who had for 40 years lived in the

the most friendly correspondence with the English, were prevailed upon, by Philip's Indians, to join them in an attempt upon Springfield town. The plot was discovered time enough to fave the lives of the inhabitants, but not the town, upwards of 30 houses, besides barns, &c. being burnt down before any forces could be got together. The same Indians on the 9th of October, made a furious affault upon Hatfield; but the Maffachufets and Connecticut forces being happily at hand, they were repulled : and finding themfelves not likely to fucceed in any further attempts in those parts of the country, the generality of them retired amongst the Narragansets, Indeed the country of the Indians laft mentioned, notwithftanding their late treaty with the Englifh, was now become the general rendezvous of Philip's foldiers, and other Indian infurgents; whence it was much feared that the Narraganfets intended openly to join them in the fpring. Such an event would, in all probability, have proved fatal to the Englifh; it was, therefore, judged judged prudent to anticipate the rupture') attacking them, if poffible before they were prepared. Accordingly 1000 men were forthwith raifed *, and marched into the Narraganset country. In the mean time, the Indians, receiving intelligence of the defign against them, fortified themselves in a fwamp, with all the skill they were mafters of. On the 19th of December, about one o'clock, the English reached the spot, and, without drawing up in order of battle, fuddenly entered the fwamp, purfuing the advanced guard to the fortrefs, which was fituated on an eminence, palifadoed all round, and within a very thick hedge. It was only to be entered by a gap at one corner, where the breaftwork was lower the ain other parts; but directly opposite this palfage was placed a blockhoufe. As it happened, the English fell upon this very place. The captains entered at the head of their companies,

* 527 by the Massachusets, the rest by Connecticut and Plymouth colonies.

companies, but not without the lofs of the two foremoft, Johnfon and Davenport, and many of their men, who were fhot dead on the fpot. The Indians were then attacked in their ftrong-holds; they fought defperately, and forced the affailants out of the fort. A furious fight fucceeded for upwards of two hours, by which time, however, the English had re-taken the fort, and ict fire to 5 of 600 Wigwams, wherein many women and children were deftroyed.

Night coming on, haftened the return of the English to their quarters, which were at 15 or 16 miles distance. They carried their dead and wounded men with them, but had the mortification to see many of the latter expire in this long and cold march, who might otherwise have been preserved. They reached their quarters about two o'clock next morning. Of their killed and wounded the whole number was about 170; amongst the former, besides the two abovementioned were the Captains Gardner, Gallop, Siely, and Marshal. The Indians, as fome of them confessed, had 700 warriors killed, killed, and 300 more died of their wounds: the number of touls loft by the fire could not be afcertained. They repoffeffed the fort the next day; and the English, having spent fome weeks in refreshing themselves, during which terms of accommodation were unfuccessfully proposed on both sides, returned to Boston in February.

The enemy quitted the Narraganset country in January, which ftruck terror thro"all the colonies, from an apprehenfion that a general junction was intended by the favages. On the 10th of February feveral hundreds of them burnt Lancaster, killing and taking prifoners 40 of the inhabitants; on the 21st, they burnt down half the town of Medfield, and killed 18 perfons; and on the 25th, fet fire to 7 or 8 houfes at Weymouth, within 20 miles of Boston. In March the Indians ravaged with fire and fword the towns of Northampton and Springfield on Connecticut river, Groton, Sudbury, and Marlborough, in the Maffachufets, and Warwick and Providence in Rhode-

Rhode-Island colony, killing many of the inhabitants: they penetrated into the town of New Plymouth, where they murdered 1 t perfons of one family; on the 26th drew Captain Pearce, of Scituate, at the head of 50 English and 20 allied Indians, into an ambush, and killed every man of the former, and a great part of the latter, who, however, fold their lives very dear; and on the 28th, burnt 40 houses, belides barns, at Rehoboth.

The war was now at a crifis which endangered the very being of the colonies in New England. Where Philip paffed the winter has never been certainly different, for he difguifed his perfon, to prevent apprehenfion on account of the reward; but his affairs were never at fuch an height of profperity, nor those of the English in fuch a depth of adversity, as at that time. Happily, the month of April brought a turn of fortune. The Indians were worfted in two battles with the Connecticut forces, and fuffered confiderable loss, though not a fingle man fell among the victors. The Maffachufets, fets, indeed, loft Captain Wadfworth and 50 foldiers, as they were marching to the relief of Sudbury, which the Indians had attacked; but this appears to have been the laft blow the English received. A want of provisions and ammunition, which the enemy had long experienced; daily increasing, their vigour began to relax; and the Mohawks falling upon and killing 50 of them^{*}, added to their discouragement. The English availed themselves of this distress, andfrom time to time routed them wherever they made a stand : Captain (asterwards Colonel) Church particularly distinguished himfelf.

But it was on the life or death of Philiphimfelf that war or peace depended. He, therefore, was the chief object of the enquiries

* Philip, it was faid, killed a party of the Mohawks, a powerful Indian nation, and then reported that the English were the murderers, with a view of provoking that body to engage in the war; but one of the party, who had been left for dead, recovering, and undeceiving his countrymen, that vengeance fell upon Philip's own people, which he villainously intended for the English.

quiries of the English. At length, information was received, that, after a twelvemonth's absence, he was returned to Mount Hope, whither being quickly purfued, he fled from one fwamp to another, till, after lofing the chief of his friends (particularly his wife and fon, who were made prifoners), he was shot through the heart, on the 12th of August, 1676, by one of his own foldiers, who from fome offence received, had deferted to the English. His right hand having a remarkable fcar, well known to the English, the fellow cut that off, instead of his head, and acquired a pretty penny from the curious. Tranquility was foon after reestablished in the southern parts, the rest of the Indians either quitting the country, or fubmitting to the English.

But a war ftill continued, which had been commenced about the time of the beaking out of Philip's difturbances, by the Indians in the N. E. parts, where they had committed numerous murders and outrages. A peace, however, was concluded on the 13th 13th of November, 1676; notwithstanding which, they continued their depredations in 1677, till Major Andros having stationed forces at Pemaquid, by authority of the Duke of York, the favages were for fome time kept quiet.

93

In the mean time, the Maffachufets were alarmed with the apprehension of troubles of another nature. Complaints and enquiries were making in England which ftruck at the powers of their government, and, indeed, which eventually occafioned the diffolution of their charter. But what more immediately threatened them was the loss of the territories of New-Hampshire and Main, to which claims were respectively preferred and maintained by Mason and Gorges. It would be an ungrateful tafk, had we room, to enter into the merits of them, on account of the confusion of grants made by the Council of Plymouth. Suffice it, therefore, to fay, that the Maffachufets fent over agents to defend their own title; but upon a hearing before the Lords of a Committee of the the Council, in 1677, were unfuccefsful *. Hereupon, the Maffachufets, loth to fuffer fo confiderable a difmemberment, purchafed of Mr. Gorges his right to Main, for 12001. fterling: but they entirely loft New-Hampfhire; for Mafon not pretending to have any right to the jurifdiction, but to the foil only, the Crown iffued a committion for governing that province, the Governor, Council, and Magistrates, being afterwards appointed by the King.

But this was but the beginning of troubles: the colony of Maffachufets-bay had many enemies in England, and none greater than Edward Randolph, who had been difpatched to them with the complaints of Mafon and Gorges, and who, (it being a part of his errand likewife to enquire into the flate of the colony,) according to the people's own-phrafe, "went up and down "feeking to devour them;" and, on his return to England, reprefented them as paying no obedience to the acts for regulating the trade of the plantations. The Quakers, alfo, prefented complaints of opprefion.

* It was then determined, that the Mailachufets had a right to "three miles north" of Merrimack river, following its courfe throughout.—The province experienced another defalcation, by a determination of his late Majefty in Council, in 1738, viz. that fo far as the river kept a weftern courfe, and no farther, the province line fhould run the fame courfe, keeping the diffance of three miles N. of the river, but after that to run due weft.

On account of the gathering ftorm, it was neceffary the agents should remain in England, whilft the colony endeavoured to avert it, by a removal of the exceptions taken against them in England. An act was made to punish high treason with death; another, to compel all perfons upwards of 16 years of age to take the oaths of allegiance; and the King's arms were put up in the court house. What they complied with the most reluctantly, were the acts of trade. They told their agents, they, "ap-" prehended them to be an invalion of " the rights, liberties, and properties of " the fubjects of his Majefty in the colony, "they not being reprefented in parliament; "..... however, as his Majefty " had fignified his pleafure, that those acts "fhould

" fhould be obferved in the Maffachufets, " they had made provision, by a law of the " colony, that they should be strictly attend-" ed to from time to time, although it " greatly discouraged trade, and was a great " damage to his Majesty's plantation."— These precautions were followed by a fast on the 21st of December, 1678, to implore the divine blessing upon their endeavours for obtaining favour with the King, and the continuance of charter privileges.

The Popish Plot gave a short respite to inquisitorial proceedings against the colony; and the agents obtained leave from the King to return home, where they arrived on the 3d of December. They carried with them a letter from his Majesty, dated July 24, 1679, containing fundry requisitions, one of which was, that agents should be fent over in fix months, fully instructed to answer and transfact what was undetermined at that time. But in this particular the colony failed, alleging, in excuse, their inability to support the expence, from the great charges of the late war.

97.

98

In 1678, Randolph arrived in New-England, in the capacity of infpector of the cuftoms, and became very troublefome as an informer, but loft most of his actions with cofts. He was in England again in 1679; __in New-England at the end of the fame year, watching the colony narrowly; -in England the next winter,-and in New-England again in 1681, * with a commiffion from the crown, appointing him collector, furveyor, and fearcher of the cuftoms in New-England. He'defired the countenance and authority of the General Court; but his application being flighted, he gave public notice of his office by fetting up an advertisement in the town-house, which, however, being taken down, he imputed the fact to the General Court.

A letter being received from the King in 1680, cenfuring their neglect of fending over agents, and requiring a compliance within three menths after receipt, the Court proceeded proceeded to appoint Meff. Stoughton and Nowell to the fervice; but they abfolutely refused to undertake it : and the choice of others was delayed. At length, their good friend Randolph brought another letter from the King, dated October 21, 1681, complaining, "That the collector had not " been able to execute his office to any ef-"fect; ... that he had been obliged to " deposit money before he could bring an " action against offenders; that appeals, in " matters relating to the revenue, had been " refused;" &c. wherefore, it was required, " that fit perfons be fent over without delay, " to answer these complaints, with powers " to fubmit to fuch regulations of govern-"ment as his Majesty should think fit, ... " and that appeals be allowed." The Court answered, "That Mr. Randolph was ac-" knowledged collector; ... that they would " require no deposit for the future; but, as " to admitting appeals, they hoped it would " be further confidered."----There were other charges in the King's letter, but of less E 2 moment.

* According to a parade he made of his fervices to the Committee of Council, he visited New-England eight feveral times in nine years.

99

$100 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

moment, and the Court politively denied them.

The immediate appointment of agents was refolved upon by a Court called in February, 1681-2, when Meff. Dudley and Richards were chosen: they failed May 31, and a fast was ordered to be observed thro' the colony, on June 22, to pray for their fuccess, and the prefervation of the charter. Randolph followed the agents, to be at hand, in order to publish every thing they might wish to conceal.

With refpect to the King's requifition, that they fhould inveft their agents with power to fubmit to regulations of government, every one plainly perceived that the power meant was that of furrendering the charter : neverthelefs the Court relied (or rather were willing to rely) on his Majefty's repeated declarations in favour of it; and, therefore, directed the agents not to confent to any thing which fhould violate the privileges granted, or the government eftablifhed, thereby. Soon after the agents had been heard before the Council, they received commands commands to deliver their powers and inftructions to Sir Lionel Jenkins, Secretary of State, for his private perufal; when it appearing, that they were by no means fuch as had been required, Lord Radnor acquainted the agents, that the Council had, nem. con. agreed to report to his Majefty, that, unlefs they forthwith obtained powers enabling them to fatisfy in all points, a Quo Warranto fhould proceed.

To a representation of the above to the General Court, the agents added as well an account of the fubmission of many cities in England, as the determination on the Quo Warranto issued against the city of London for refusing to furrender; that the Court might be the better enabled to judge what ftep would be most proper to take at so important a crifis .--- The inhabitants at large were confulted; when it appeared to be the general opinion, that "it was better to die " by the hands of others than by their own :" and the agents were confequently inftructed to make no concessions of any privileges which E 3 which the colony enjoyed by virtue of their charter.

$102 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

This refolution was no fooner known in England than a Quo Warranto was ordered to go against the charter; and Randolph was the appointed "meffenger of death." The business of the agents, therefore, being at an end, they left England, and arrived at Bofton on the 23d of October, 1683: and a few days after arrived also Randolph, armed with the above-mentioned writ, and 200 copies of the proceedings against the charter of London, to be difperfed through the colony, by advice of the Privy Council. However, these instruments of terror were accompanied by a conciliatory declaration from the King, to the following purport : "That, if " the colony, before profecution, would make " full fubmiffion and entire refignation to his " pleasure, his Majesty would regulate their " charter for his fervice and their good, and " with no further alterations than should be " neceffary for the fupport of his govern-"ment there."-In defpair of any fuccefs from refistance, the Governor and major part part of the Affiftants, on the 15th of November, 1683, paffed a fubmiffive vote indeed, in which are the following paffages; "That, upon a ferious confideration of his "Majefty's gracious intimations, . . . in his "late declaration . . . we will not prefume "to contend with his Majefty in a courfe "of law, but humbly lay ourfelves at his "Majefty's feet, in a fubmiffion to his plea-"fure fo declared," &c. &c. "The ma-"giftrates have paffed this with reference to "the confent of their brethren the Deputies "thereto."

The Deputies, however, after a fortnight's ferious confideration, were of a different opinion, and, on the 30th of November, with reference to the vote of their bretbren the magistrates, laconically declared as follows: "The Deputies confent not, but adhere to "their former bills."—A letter of attorney was therefore fent to Mr. Humphreys, empowering him to appear and answer for the colony; and several address were succeffively presented; but all in vain, judgment being entered up against their charter, in E 4 June

103

June 1684, through default, but fubject, neverthelefs, to this refervation, that, if the colony appeared the first day of the enfuing Michaelmas term, and pleaded to iffue, fo as to take notice of trial to be had that fame term, then the faid judgment to be fet aside, otherwise the same was to stand recorded. Hence, in September, a Scire Facias was received at Bofton by Mr. Dudley, and laid before a special Court: but another address was all the answer attempted; for the time appointed for their appearance at Westminster was elapsed before the writ was received; and, indeed, further time having been applied for in vain, the judgment before entered up against their charter flood recorded.

Similar requisitions of submission had been fent also to the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island, and complied with to the full fatisfaction of Charles II. who, as we have seen above, was jealous enough of authority: nevertheles, under James II. on July 15, 1685, an order was made in Council for the Attorney-General to bring 'writs writs of Quo Warranto against both their charters. — An offer was kindly made to Connecticut of being annexed either to the colony of Massachusets-bay or New-York. The people importuned for the continuance of their privileges; but, if they must lose their charter, they chose to be annexed to the Massachusets. This was construed a furrender.

$N \in W - E N \in L A N D.$ 105

But, notwithstanding the submission of the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Ifland, and the actual disfranchifement of Maffachufets-bay, they feverally continued, though in a feeble manner, to exercise their former powers of government. In May, however, 1686, a commission was received at Boston, empowering Mr. Dudley as Prefident, and feveral gentlemen of the Council, to affume the government of Maffachufet's-bay. This administration was unimportant and short; for in December following arrived Sir Edmund Andros, as Governor of New-England; fo that the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Ifland, which poffibly expected better things, after bowing fo low to Cæfar, E 5 now now faw the fame fcourge held over them, with which the refractory Maffachufets were to be chastifed. The arbitrary disposition of Sir Edmund was well known : and, though a little reftrained at first, foon broke out to the fore grievance of the people. The Governor, and four or five of his Council, imposed what taxes they pleafed; and amongft various other maxims equally prepofterous, it was broached, that the people's conveyances were not according to the laws of England, and that, upon the annihilation of their charters, their former titles ceafed, or, according to a quaint expression then in vogue, "The calf died in the cow's belly:" fo that there was a neceffity of their taking out new grants or titles, which was not to be done but at high rates and exorbitant fees.

It is by no means extraordinary, that the colonies fhould take the first favourable opportunity of delivering themselves from these oppressions. Such the Massachusets thought presented itself on the arrival at Boston of the joyful news of the Revolution in in England. The fmothered flame of their indignation now burft out; on April 16, 1689, they fuddenly rofe, and made prifoners of the most obnoxious of their tyrannizing rulers, and forced Sir Edmund to furrender himfelf and the fort. * This coup de main was ftruck by the great body of the people, without any previous propofal of it to the leading men of the place; fome of whom, however, feeing matters carried to fuch a height, thought it prudent to form themselves into "a council for the fafety of " the people, and confervation of the " peace," and recommended to the different towns an election of representatives to compose an assembly. These being met, it was agreed, that the Governor, Deputy-Governor, Council, &c. last chosen beföre Dudley's administration, should take upon them respectively the part they had borne in

* Sir Edmund was afterwards fent for to England, to anfwer certain charges of mal-administration; he, on the other hand, recriminated on the colony on account of the infurrection; the whole, however, was hushed up.

107

in the government under the charter, (of which, neverthelefs, they difclaimed the reaffumption,) until orders fhould be received from England; and foon after, they were authorized to "continue, in the King's "name, their care in the administration" of public affairs, until his Majefty should give "directions for the more orderly fettle-"ment" thereof.

The colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Ifland, upon receiving information of the overthrow of the Governor, re-affumed their charters, in the enjoyment of which they were fuffered to continue by the new monarch, no judgment having been given against them. The people of New-Plymouth, alfo, re-established their old conftitution, and preferved it till they were incorporated with their neighbours the Massachufets.

The Indians on the north-eastern frontiers renewed, in 1688, their ravages and murders; and the Penicook Indians, on Merrimak river, treacherously broke the peace also in the spring of the year 1689. These

109

These favages being inftigated and supported by the French in Canada and Nova Scotia, the Government, as soon as the late diffurbances afforded leisure, formed a design of carrying the war into those territories. Eight small vessels, therefore, with 7 or 800 men, under the command of Sir William Phips, * sailed for Port-Royal

* Sir William Phips had been a favourite of Fortune. He was born at Pemaquid, in 1650, and kept fheep there till the 18th year of his age, when he was apprenticed to a ship-carpenter. Having compleated his fervitude, he fet up; but his inclination foon led him to a fea-faring life, wherein he was lucky enough to gain intelligence of a Spanish wreck near the Bahama Islands, of which he gave fo flattering an account in England, that he was fent out in a King's ship (the Algier Rofe) in fearch of it; but failed, and the Government declined to make a fecond trial. However, fo fanguine were the hopes of Sir William, who attributed his late miscarriage to the impatience of his crew, that the Duke of Albemarle was induced to equip a vessel for another attempt. Accordingly, Sir William failed, found the much-coveted object, and filled up gold, filver, &c. &c. to the value of 300,000l. whereof 16,000l. fell to his own share; and the Duke, by way of gratuity, made his lady a prefent of a golden cup worth 1000l. The courtiers advifed the King to feize the treasure; but his Majefty rejected

Royal (fince called Annapolis) the then chief fortrefs of Nova Scotia, on the 28th of April, 1690. The place furrendered without refiftance; and Sir William having taken poffeffion of the whole fea coaft from thence to the New-England fettlements, returned on the 30th of May.

This fuccels infpired the Maflachulets with the hopes even of the conqueft of Canada, efpecially as Connecticut and New-York engaged to join in the undertaking. Affiftance had also been folicited from England, and, very unadvisedly, the beft part of the fummer was spent in waiting for it. The fleet mustered for the purpose confisted of between 30 and 40 vessels, and the men amounted to about 2000, with Sir William Phips at their head: this armament was destined to make a descent on Quebec; whilst a strong corps, raifed by Connecticut and jected their propofal, retorting, that it was owing to their putillanimous counfels he was not the legal owner of it; and, as a mark of approbation of Sir William's conduct, conferred on him the honour of knighthood. and New-York, were to march over land and attack Montreal, with a view of dividing the French forces.

Defpairing, at length, of fuccours from England, the fleet failed on the 9th of Auguft; but contrary winds retarded its appearance before Quebec till the 5th of October. Sir William next morning fent Count Frontenac, the Governor, a pompous fummons to furrender, but received an infolent * refufal. An attempt was made to land on the 7th, but fruftrated by the wind. On the 8th between 12 and 1300 (all the effective) men were landed, but in diforder, the French and Indians firing

* Count Frontenac was fo enraged at Sir William's fummons in the name of King William and Queen Mary, that he was with difficulty reftrained from hanging the officer who carried it. The anfwer he returned was as follows :---" That Sir William Phips " and thole with him were heretics, and traitors to " their King, and had taken up with that ufurper " the Prince of Orange, and had made a 'revolution, " which, if it had not been made,' New-England and " the French had been all one; and that no other an-" fwer was to be expected from him, but what should " be from the mouth of his cannon."

$\mathbf{112} \qquad \mathbf{NEW} - \mathbf{ENGLAND}.$

firing upon them from the woods : the fhips were drawn up the next day before the town, but (the largest carrying only 44 guns) did not fo much damage to the enemy as they received. The troops on fhore made very little progrefs, receiving from a deferter an account of the ftrength of the French, which he reprefented to be very great. To retreat was preferable to acting on the defenfive merely; which, as it is pretended, was all that could be done in the fituation they then were; the troops, therefore, re-embarked on the 11th, and that with precipitation. At a council of war the next day, it was agreed to make another attack; but tempestuous weather coming on, dispersed the fleet, and left no hope but that of returning fafe to Boston, where Sir William arrived on the 19th of November. Some of the fhips were driven to the West-Indies, one loft on the island of Anticofti, and two or three never heard of again. According to Sir William's account, no more than 20 men were killed by the enemy; but numbers died of the small-pox and camp difease: the

the whole lofs about 200, befides thofe who perifhed by fhipwreck. Mr. Walley, who commanded the forces that landed, was cenfured by individuals, but he was never called to account by authority. However remifs he might be, it is generally allowed, that the expedition failed chiefly from the latenefs of the feafon, and the unaccountable conduct of the New-York and Connecticut colps, which, 'tis true, fet off' on their propofed march, but returned without even reaching the place of their defination; fo that Frontenac referved his whole force for the defence of Quebec.

On the return of the fleet, the foldiers were preffing for their pay, which the Government were as totally unprovided to give them, as if they had fully depended upon the fpoils of the enemy for that purpofe. However, they paffed an act for levying the requifite fum; but the men would not wait the time neceffary to bring it into the treafury, and betrayed ftrong fymptoms of a mutinous inclination. From this dilemma originated the iffuing of bills of credit, as a fubflitute fubflitute for cafh. The foldiers demands were difcharged by notes, from 2s. to 10l. value; which were to be received in payment of the tax about to be levied, &cc. But though Sir William Phips is faid to have exchanged a large fum at par, to give thefe notes credit, the foldiers could pafs them for no more than 12 or 14s. in the pound, yet by the time the taxes were to be paid, the notes had gradually rifen to above par, being for that purpofe better than fpecie, by reafon of the Government's allowing five per cent. difcount.

$\mathbf{114} \qquad \mathbf{N} \in \mathbf{W} - \mathbf{E} \mathbf{N} \mathbf{G} \mathbf{L} \mathbf{A} \mathbf{N} \mathbf{D}.$

During the expedition to Port Royal, the Indians made themfelves mafters of Cafco fort, and took 100 perfons prifoners: but whilft the event of that to Canada was unknown, they generally feemed difpofed to a truce; and one was agreed to on Nov. 9, to continue till May 1, 1691, when a lafting peace was to be eftablished: but, as foon as the truce was expired, the Indians, inifead of attending, according to appointment, for fettling the conditions, recommenced hoftilities ties with redoubled fury, flaughter, and devaftation.

115

Notwithstanding the miscarriage of his late expedition, Sir William Phips was still bent on the reduction of Canada; and determined to apply perfonally to the crown for assistance. He arrived in England in the beginning of the year 1691, and reprefented his proposed undertaking in the most flattering point of view: but, at that juncture, King William found it necessary to employ all the men and money he could raise in defending himself against the French.

In the mean time the Maffachufets were foliciting by agents a reftoration of their old charter; but foon found themfelves not likely to fucceed in that point, as well from the King's own fentiments, as from the arguments urged against it by the enemies of the colony, who imputed all its prefent diftreffes to the old bad platform of government. A difference of opinion arofe among the agents: one of whom (Mr. Mather) was inclined, inclined, fince little hope remained of recovering-the old one, to petition for a new charter, referving as many of the old privileges as poffible, whilft the other two (Meff. Cooke and Oakes) would have the old charter, or none. However, Oakes fo far relaxed as to join with Mather in petitioning for a new charter, which, after many difappointments and croffes, the ftrenuous perfeverance of the latter at length obtained.

116 N E W-E N G L A N D.

We have mentioned that the colonies of Connecticut and Rhode-Island re-assumed their charters on the revolution in Massachuset's bay. Plymouth never had any; and the prefent was judged a proper opportunity to supply the defect of their constitution in that respect. The colony, therefore, made application to the crown for a charter; but it was not duly supported, the intession of the people preventing their raising a fund sufficient for the purpose. The design at court was, to annex that colony either to New-York or Massachusets-bay. Mr. Wiswal, agent for the the colony, imprudently multiplying exceptions to the propofal of joining it to the latter (though with the view of obtaining a feparate charter) difgusted the ministry, and occafioned its incorporation with New-York. This could not but prove, to the laft degree, diffatisfactory to the New Plymotheans, on feveral accounts, but effecially as the two territories were near 300 miles afunder: and Mr. Mather, knowing them to have a predilection in favour of Massachusets-bay, if a separate charter could not be obtained, very difcreetly interfered, and procured the colony's being ftruck out of the New-York charter, and inferted in that of the Massachulets,* the substance of which we shall now lay before the reader.

The new charter annexes to the former colony of Maffachufets-bay, the ancient colony

* Time has evinced the wildom of this alteration: "The cultoms, manners, and religious opinions of the "two colonies being much the fame, they mutually "confider themfelves as having one joint general in-"tereft, as fully in all respects as if they had been one "colony from the beginning."

117

colony of New-Plymouth, the Provinces of Main and Nova-Scotia, and the country lying between Main and Nova-Scotia (Sagadahok) as far north as the river St. Laurence; also the Elizabeth Islands, and the islands Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard, &c. and incorporating the whole into one province, by the name of the Province of Maffachufets-bay, in New-England. The quit-rent to be a fifth part of all gold, filver, and precious stones, which may be found there. Lands, hereditaments, &c. formerly granted by any General Court, to be con-The Governor, Lieutenant-Gofirmed. vernor, and Secretary, to be in the King's nomination. A General Court or Affem. bly to be convened the last Wednefdav in May yearly, confifting of the Governor, Council, and Representatives of the towns, not exceeding two for each town; the qualification for an elector 40s. freehold, or 501. Sterling perfonal eftate. The General Affembly * to elect 28 counfellors, viz. 18 from

* It became matter of doubt whether the Council (who were part of the General Affembly) were entitled to

from the old colony of Maffachufets-bay, four from that of Plymouth, three from the Province of Main, one from the territory of Sagadahok, and two at large; whereof feven at leaft to make a board. The Governor, with confent of the Council, to appoint the officers in the courts of juftice. All born in the province, or in the paffage to and from it, to be deemed natural-born fubjects of England. Liberty of confcience to all Chriftians, except Papifts. * The General to votes in their own re-election. The point was politely agreed to be given up by the first Council; but the perfon deputed to fignify their concession to the House of Representatives, finding, on coming to that assume that they were candidly putting that very question to the vote, waited the result, which proved to be, that the members of one Council should have voices in chusing the next : which privilege they have ever fince enjoyed.

* There is no express provision for an ecclesiaftical conflitution. Some time after the new charter, a great part of the church and inhabitants of Salem village petitioned the General Court to appoint an ecclesiaftical council to fettle a controvers with Mr. Paris, the minister, but the Court refused.—Synods were occasionally called under the old charter. Some steps were

General Assembly to constitute judicatories for all caufes criminal or civil, capital or not capital. Probate of wills, and granting of administration, to be in the Governor and Council. In perfonal actions, exceeding the value of 3001. sterling, appeal to be made, within 14 days after judgment, to the King in Council, but execution not staid. The General Affembly to make laws, but not repugnant to those of England; to appoint all civil officers, excepting the officers of the courts of justice above-mentioned; and to impose taxes, to be disposed of by the Governor and Council. The Governor to have, a negative in all acts and elections. * All acts of Affembly were taken for calling a fynod about thirty years after the new charter arrived, but a royal instruction prevented any farther progress.

* The Speaker of the Houfe was at first elected, and took his place, without any notice to the Governor; and, for many years after the prefent charter, there was only the formality of notice, until disputes, upon other points with the Governor, caused him to infust upon his right of negativing the Speaker, which. the House was obliged, after a long struggle, to submit to.

Affembly to be fent, by the first opportunity, to the King in Council, for approbation : if not difallowed within three years after prefentation, to continue in force until repealed by the Affembly. The Governor to command the militia, to ule the law martial in time of actual war, to erest forts, and demolish the fame at pleasure; but the law martial not to be executed without consent of the Council. When there is neither Governor nor Lieutenant-Governor, the majority of the Council to act. The General Affembly to have full power of granting lands throughout the province, with this reftriction, no grant of lands between Sagadahok and St. Laurence rivers to be valid without the royal approbation. All trees fit for masts, of 24 inches diameter and upwards, twelve inches from the ground, growing on land not before granted to any private perfons, to be referved to the crown; penalty for cutting any fuch referved trees, 1001. fterling per tree. No fubject of England . to be debarred from fishing on the feacoafts, creeks, &c. The conversion of the F Indians

Indians to be attempted.——This charter is dated October 7, 1691.

Though the new charter expressly referved to the King the nomination of the Governor, his Majesty allowed the agents, or rather Mr. Mather, to make choice of the first, who fixed on Sir William Phips: and on May 14, 1692, Sir William arrived at Boston, where the charter, whatever were the fentiments of fome individuals, met with general approbation.

This feems to be the proper place for laying before the reader an account of the horrid perfecutions for witchcraft, which have caft an indelible blot on the hiftory of this country, and cannot be paralleled in that of the whole world befides.

Witchcraft first gained credit in New-England about the year 1645; when feveral perfons refiding at Springfield, upon Connecticut river, were fuppofed to be possified by evil spirits, and, among the rest, two of the minister's children. Many perfons were charged with dealing with dæmons, and great pains taken to prove them guilty; but none none were convicted till 1650, when three women fuffered death, one at Charlestown, one at Dorchester, and another at Cambridge, declaring their innocence to the laft moment. In 1655, Mrs. Hibbins, a counfellor's widow, was hanged at Bofton.-In 1662, three women were executed at Hartford, in Connecticut.----From this time, though many were fufpected of being witches, and ill-treated, none lost their lives on that account till 1687 or 1688. when four children of John Goodwin, three girls and a boy, in Boston, having taken an averfion to an old woman, one of the Wild Irish, were all feized with fits. They pretended to be tormented in various parts of their bodies, to be deaf, dumb, and blind. Sometimes their tongues hung out of their mouths, at others would be drawn down their throats; their jaws and all their joints would appear to be diflocated, and then they made most horrible outcries of being cut with knives, beat, burnt, &c. Thefe complaints were never heard but in the day-F 2 time:

time; for all night the children flept quite free from the leaft diffurbance. The poor old wretch, fixed on as the victim of fuperfition, was apprehended; and, notwithftanding fhe appeared difordered in her fenfes, and nothing worfe could be proved againft her than her having ufed fome abufive language to the eldeft child, a girl of 13 years of age, fhe was pronounced a witch, and executed accordingly.

But în February, 1691-2, commenced the principal and last act of this bloody tragedy. A daughter and a niece of Mr. Paris, the minister of Salem village, girls of ten or eleven years of age, and two other girls in the neighbourhood, made the fame fort of complaints which Goodwin's children had made two or three years before. The phyficians, having no other way of accounting for the diforder, pronounced them bewitched. An Indian woman, who was brought into the country from New-Spain, and then lived with Mr. Paris, tried fome experiments, to which fhe pretended to have been accuftomed in her own country, in order order to find out the witch. This coming to the childrens knowledge, they cried out upon the poor Indian as appearing to them, pinching, pricking, and tormenting them; and fell into fits. Tituba, which was the Indian's name, acknowledged that fhe had learnt how to find out a witch, but denied that she was one herself. Several private faits were kept at the minister's house, feveral more publicly by the whole village, and then a general fast through the colony, to feek to God to rebuke Satan, &cc. So much notice taken of the children, together with the compassion expressed by those who vifited them, not only tended to confirm them in their defign, but to draw others into the like. Accordingly, the number of the complainants foon increafed, among whom were two or three women, and fome girls old enough to be witneffes. These had their fits too, and, when in them, cried out, not only against Tituba, but against Sarah Ofburn, a melancholy, distracted old woman, and Sarah Good, another old woman, who was bed-ridden; infomuch that Tituba, at length, confeffed herfelf a witch, and that the two old women were her confederates; whereupon they were all committed to prifon. Poor Tituba, upon fearch, was found to have fears upon her back, which were called the devil's marks; but might as well have been fuppofed those of her Spanish master.

Soon after this, two women of good characters, members of the church, were complained of as caufing the children to fall into fits, and tormenting the mother of one of them, and committed to prifon. Nay, fuch was the rage of this unaccountable infatuation, that an infant about four years old, was fent to prifon alfo for biting fome of the complainants. If the afflicted, as they called themfelves, did but utter the name of any perfon during their pretended torments, that was fufficient accufation against the fairest character.

This peftilent phrenzy increasing, a commission of Oyer and Terminer for the trial of persons accused of witchcraft was opened at Salem the first week in June, 1692; when Bissop

Bishop Bridget was put on her trial. She had been charged with witchcraft 20 years before, but cleared by her accuser's confesfion of having charged her falsely: nevertheles, the neighbours imputing to her machinations all the losses they met with in cattle and poultry, oversetting of their carts, &cc. and the afflicted and confessing witches testifying what they had heard from the spectres, and seen of her spectre, the poor cld woman must needs be a witch still; and being convicted, she was executed on the 10th of June.—Having given an instance of their righteous judgment and mercy, the Court adjourned to

June 30, at which feffion the following women were capitally convicted. Sarah Good, Rebekah Nurfe, Sufannah Martin, Elizabeth How, and Sarah Wilder.—Of thefe none gave much trouble but Rebekah Nurfe, who, being a perfon of great piety, made fo good a defence, that the jury at first found her Not Guilty; but the afflitted witneffes burfting into hideous outcries a-F 4 gainst gainft her, they then found her guilty, and the fuffered as well as the reft.

At the next adjournment, on the 5th of August, fix perfons were condemned, one of whom was the Rev. Mr. George Burroughs, minister of Falmouth, and a man of great probity. The evidence on which he was convicted, was as abfurd and extravagant * as can 'be imagined, and the conduct of his judges

* In his indictment (which is a specimen of the reft) it is alleged, " That George Burroughs . . . on the " 9th day of May, in the 4th year of the reign of our " fovereign Lord and Lady William and Mary, by the " grace of God of England, &c. and divers other days " and times as well before as after, certain detestable " arts, called witchcrafts and forceries, wickedly and " felonioully uted, practifed, and exercifed, at and " within the town of Salem, in the county of Effex " aforefaid, in, upon, and againft one Mary Walcot, " of Salem village, in the county of Effex, fingle-" woman; by which faid wicked acts, the faid Mary "Walcot, the oth day of May in the year abovefaid, " and divers other days and times, as well before as "after, was and is tortured, afflicted, pined, con-" fumed, walled, and tormented, against the peace " of our fovereign Lord and Lady the King and " Queen," &c.

The confessing witches fwore, that Mr. Burroughs was the principal actor in their nocturnal revels, and was judges equally prepofterous. In their equitable difpensation, witchcraft was that ftrange species of crime, the confessed guilt of which was always pardoned *, whilf the denial of F_5 it was promifed to be made king of Satan's kingdom, then about to be erected; that he gave them puppets, and thorns to flick into them, for afflicting the people of Salem, &c. &c. One of the afflicted witnesses deposed, that the prisoner preffed her to set her hand to a book, and inflicted grievous torments on her for refusing; others, that he founded a trumpet for the witches to rendezvous at a facrament, and tempted those he tormented to partake with them, &c, Another convincing circumftance against him was, that, though he was a little man, he had held out a gun of feven feet barrel with one hand, and had carried a barrel full of cyder from a canoe to the fliore. The prisoner said, that an Indian held out the gun also: on which it was immediately concluded, that the Indian must have been the Black Man. Again, his brother-in-law fwore, that going out after ftrawberries, upon their return, Mr. Burroughs went into the bushes on foot, and tho' the witness rode a quick pace, yet the prifoner was at home as foon as he. Mr. Burroughs urged, that another perfon, who accompanied him, walked as fast as he did ; but this was determined to be the Black Man alfo.

* Pity it is, that none of the many confessors of witchcraft were put to the trial of fealing their acknowledged guilt with their blood; such a proceeding, probably, would foon have detected the fraud.

it was punished with death: and Mr. Burroughs's integrity preventing him from offering violence to his innocence by the confession of a pretended wickedness, the unjust fentence pronounced upon him was carried into execution. Before he was turned off the ladder, he made a folemn speech in vindication of his innocence; and performed his devotions, which he concluded with the Lord's Prayer, with such composure, yet fervency of spirit, as drew tears from most of the spectators.

George Jacobs, fen. tried at the fame time, was condemned on the evidence of his grand-daughter, who, to fave her own life, had been forced to confess herfelf a witch, and appear against him.

At the feffions holden on Sept. 9, and 17, fixteen more perfons were condemned. Samuel Wardwell, who was accufed even by his wife and daughter, to fave their own lives, confeffed himfelf a wizard; but recanting his confeffion, he was hanged.

Martha Cory was condemned on spectral evidence, it being sworn, that Mr. Paris's daughter, daughter, and two other children, faw a ghoft, in the likeness of Mrs. Cory, come towards them with a book to fign.

Giles Cory, her husband, was preffed to death, for refusing to plead and submit to such chimerical evidence.

Mary Efty, fifter to Rebekah Nurfe, was another fufferer.—She prefented a pathetic petition to the magistrates, not fo much with a view of faving her own life, as to induce them to examine the confessing witches more strictly, and to make them fensible of the innocent blood they were shedding.

We need not, we think, particularize more inflances to give the reader a lively idea of the madnefs of the time: but muft obferve, generally, that, as the fureft way to avoid accufation, was to become the accufer, the number of the afflitted increased every day, and the number of the accufed in proportion. There was no fastety even for the most unblemissed reputation. More than one hundred women *, most of them of irreproachable reproachable characters, and of the best families in the towns of Salem, Beverly, Andover, Billerica, &c. were apprehended, examined, and the greatest part of them committed to prifon. Some weak women, indeed, were really perfuaded that they were witches; and that the devil, fome how or other, although they could not tell how or when, had taken poffession of their evil hearts, and therefore they thought they ought to confess themselves guilty .--- Befides, these impious proceedings were in no fmall degree fomented by Avarice, which gluttoned on the confifcated effects + of the perfecuted. Moreover, (fo general was the delusion!) the Governor himself, Sir William man, a doctor, and eight women, appointed to examine their bodies for teats and other devil's marks. It is faid, that the credulity of thefe juries was fuch, that even a flea-bite was miftaken for a devil's mark.

* A principal part of the evidence against fome of the women was the return of a jury, confisting of one man,

$_{132}$ NEW-ENGLAND.

† About 20 years afterwards, upon the petitions of the relations of those who had been executed, and of others who had fled to fave their lives, and whose goods had been seized, the General Court made grants in confideration of the loss fustained; but these bore no proportion to the real damages. liam Phips, countenanced the popular cry against the pretended offenders: and, to compleat their destruction, the magistrates manifested the groffest inimical preposses against them in their behaviour to the witnesses; for, instead of cross-examining and endeavouring to fift them to the bottom, they made use of such leading questions as might truly be faid to put the words of conviction into their mouths.

The exemplary lives, folemn protestations, earnest remonstrances, and patient fufferings, of the fuppofed delinquents, were of no effect against this complication of adverse circumstances; and it is hard to fav when the barbarous perfecutions would have had an end, had not the accufers over-acted their parts, by beginning to charge the crime upon the magistrates themselves, and perfons in high office. Thus Dudley Bradstreet, Esq; a justice of peace, relaxing in the profecutions, was charged, and obliged to abfcond; as was alfo his brother John Bradstreet : nay, the Secretary of the colony of Connecticut, and (according to a creditable ble writer) Sir William Phips's lady *, were likewife among the accufed.

133

It was high time for things to take a new turn; and, happily for the community, fome of the most zealous actors in this tragedy began now to be of opinion that innocent blood had been shed; which necessarily occasioned an alteration of conduct. Accordingly, at a Court holden at Salem in January, 1692-3, when about 56 perfons were tried for witchcraft, no more than three were convicted, and those the Governor afterwards pardoned; and all that were not brought upon trial he ordered to be discharged. But none of the affiisted were ever brought to trial for their impoflures.

The number of perfons condemned in the laft year was between 30 and 40, 19 of whom were hanged, and one preffed to death. The prifoners difcharged amounted to about 150; and the accufed perfons paffed over to 200. The confeffing witneffes

* She is faid to have faved a poor accufed woman from trial; whence, to be fure, the muft have been a confederate in witchcraft. witneffes (among whom were three not above ten years of age) had increased to 50, and the afflicted to the fame number.*

Sir William Phips found the colony in a flate of great perturbation, not only from the affair of the witches, but from the irruptions of the Indians. He was charged by his inftructions to build a ftrong fort at Pemaquid, which he did in the fummer of 1692. This produced a peace in those parts

* These horrid transactions, however, passed not away without leaving the ftings of remorfe in the breafts of many perfons concerned, particularly of 12 jurymen, who published a confession that they "were fadly deluded and mistaken, for which they were much disquieted and distressed, and did therefore humbly beg forgiveness of God, for Christ's fake, for their error; and alfo prayed, that they might be confidered candidly and aright by the living fufferers, as having been under the power of a ftrong and general delufion." One of the judges, alfo, was convinced he had done wrong; and at a public fast, in a full meeting, acknowledged his error in the late proceedings, and defired to humble himfelf for the fame before God and the people. The Rev. Mr. Paris, too, publicly confessed his error; nevertheles, he had incurred the odium of the people of Salem to fuch a degree, that they would not fuffer him to continue their minister.

135

parts in August, 1693. Nevertheless, it was broken the next year by the Penobscot and Norridgewock favages, at the instigation of the French, who supplied them with arms and ammunition.

Sir William was a man of a benevolent, but, at the fame time, of a paffionate difpofition. An attachment to his friends embroiled him in a difpute with Mr. Brenton, the Collector of the Cuftoms, which, together with another that happened between him and the Captain of the Nonefuch frigate, being preferred before the King, intereft was made to difplace Sir William from his government; but his Majesty was defirous of hearing his defence, and fent orders for him to repair to England to make it. Sir William's intereft had for fome time been upon the decline in New-England: however, he obtained an addrefs to the King from the House of Representatives, praying that the Governor might not be removed. He left Bofton Nov. 19, 1604; and Mr. Stoughton took the chair. Sir William fo far justified his conduct in London.

London, as to be on the point of returning to his government, but was prevented by death on the 18th of Feb. 1694-5. The Earl of Bellamont was appointed Governor of Maffachufets in his room; also of New-York and New-Hampshire.

We have mentioned that Nova-Scotia was conquered by the Maffachufets in the year 1690. Their claim to that country was confirmed to them by its being included in the new charter. However, in 1691, it was feized by Monf. Villebon, by commiffion from the French King, and the Maffachufets, having mifcarried in feveral attempts to recover it, petitioned the Crown, in 1696, that their province might be freed from any further expence concerning it. * In 1696, alfo, the French demolifhed the ftrong fort at Pemaquid.

The Indians continued to harrafs the northern parts of the country, in a greater or

* This feems to have been confidered as a renunciation of their right; for, after the peace of Utrecht, Nova-Scotia was fettled as a diffinct province by the Crown.

138 N E W - E N G L A N D.

or lefs degree, till the year 1698*, when, having been deprived of the affiftance of the French

* In March, the Indians, in an attack upon Haverhill, burnt 9 houses, and killed and took prifoners near 40 of the inhabitants. Among the latter were Hannah Dunstan, who had lain in but a week before, her infant, and the nurfe : the hufband, with feven other children, having escaped. The infant's brains were presently dashed out against a tree, but the women were forced to travel 12 miles the first night, and to continue their route day after day towards an Indian town at 250 miles diffance. When they had trudged 150 miles, the Indians told them, that, on their arrival at the town, they must undergo the difcipline of running the gantlet. Dunftan and her companion had been given as fervants to an Indian family, confifting of two men, three women, and feven children, besides an English boy who had lived a prisoner with them for eighteen months. The dread of the gantlet excited all Dunftan's refolution; and fhe perfuaded the nurse and the English boy to affist her in recovering their freedom by the defiruction of the Accordingly, in the morning, before day-Indians. light, our Amazon called up her confederates to action. One after another the enemy were knocked on the head with their own hatchets, yet with fuch caution that none awoke; and thus these three prisoners difpatched the whole family, except a favourite boy, who was defignedly spared, and an old woman whom they supposed they had killed, but who jumped up, and French by the treaty of Ryfwick, concluded the preceding year, they again folicited and entered into terms of pacification.

Lord Bellamont arrived at Bofton, from New-York, May 26, 1699. He refided only 14 months in New-England; during which time he was chiefly employed in the fupprefion of the Buccaneers. He returned to New-York in the fummer of 1700, and there died on the 5th of March following. Mr. Dudley, who was appointed Prefident in 1696, after the vacation of the charter, fucceeded him as Governor of the Maffachufets province.

In May, 1702, died also Lieutenant-Governor Stoughton; when, the Governor not being arrived, the administration, for the first time, devolved upon a majority of the Council, according to one of the provisions of the new charter.

Mr. Dudley, and made her escape with the boy. With ten of their scalps, after a very fatiguing and dangerous journey, they reached their own home; and, for their courageous behaviour, received a reward of 501. from the General Court, besides many valuable presents from individuals.

$140 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

Mr. Dudley, on his arrival at Boston, in 1702, was received with ceremonial respect; but foon engaged himfelf in difputes with the two Houfes, particularly the Houfe of Representatives. At the first election he negatived five of the Counfellors; and, in the year 1705, the Speaker of the Houle of Representatives. These steps gave very great offence, and the latter was not fubmitted to, the House alleging that no such authority belonged to his office. Another great contention arole from the Governor's being charged to recommend to the Affembly's particular attention the eftablishing honourable salaries for the Governor, Lieut .-Governor, and Judges of the Courts, for the time being. This inftruction he urged to little purpose; for the House refused to fix any, allowing him only 500l. annually (300l. in the fpring, and 2001. in the fall), and the Lieut -Governor 2001. per annum.

The Governor had alfo a troublefome war on his hands. In confequence of the rupture between England and France, in 1702, the French of Canada and Nova-Scotia, and confequently quently the Indians, renewed their hoftilities on the northern frontiers of New-England, furprifing and facking Deerfield * in 1703. To

*. Intelligence had been received that an attack was meditated by the Indians on the town of Deerfield, and the minister, Mr. Williams, had a ftrong impreffion on his mind that it would be deftroyed. The inhabitants ftrangely flighted the warnings he gave them, and all the affiftance provided against the threatened danger was a guard of 20 foldiers. In the night preceding the 29th of February, about 300 French and Indians approached the town, and, the watch which patrolled the ftreets falling afleep about two hours before break of day, fet upon it with great fury. Mr. Williams was awaked with the noife of a party of them entering his bed-chamber. Though there was no hope of life from refiftance, he took a loaded piltol from the tefter of his bed, and fnapped it at the first which drew near to him. It fortunately miffed fire ; for the death of one of the favages would only have infured his own. He was feized, and kept ftanding in his fhirt, whilft his houfe was plundered, and two of his children and a Negro woman murdered, Orders were then given for himfelf, wife, and five other children, to drefs, and prepare for a long march. Other houses had met with the like fate from other parties of the favages; 40 perfons were killed, and 100 taken prisoners. About an hour after sunrife the enemy had finished their work; and then left the place in flames. They hurried on with the utmost expedition,

To encourage fmall parties to fcour the woods, and hunt the enemy, the General Court offered a reward of 40l. for every Indian fcalp; and in 1704, Col. Church, with 550 men, did confiderable mifchief to the enemy in Nova-Scotia, and the neighbourhood of Penobscot river, &c. &c.

In

expedition, for fear of a pursuit; fo that Mrs. Williams, who was in a weak condition from a recent lying-in, acquainted her hufband the fecond day, fhe could keep their pace no longer. He folicited permission to accompany and assist her; but, being under different masters, he was obliged to leave her behind. Perhaps every tender reader will think Mr. Williams's distress could not be heightened : alas ! within a few days, he was informed his wife's master had funk a hatchet into her brains. About 20 more of the prifoners, wearied out, were killed alfo, before they reached Canada .- Mr. Williams and most of the furviving captives were in time redeemed ; and two of Mr. Williams's fons became worthy ministers at Waltham and Springfield : however, one of his daughters remained, having married an Indian hufband ; which is not fo much to be wondered at, if it be confidered, that the Indians frequently used their prisoners with great tendernefs, when they had once fecurely carried them home.

In April, 1706, the enemy fuddenly fell. upon the English, on Oyster river; and a body of 270 men made spoil on Dunstable, Chelmsford, Sudbury, Groton, Exeter, Dover, &c. nay, five of them ventured to Reading, no more than 16 or 17 miles off Bofton, where they furprifed a poor woman with eight children, three of whom and the woman they killed, and carried the reft away *.

In 1708, the enemy fell upon Haverill, fet fire to feveral of the houfes, killed between 30 and 40 perfons, among whom were Mr. Rolfe, minister, and Mr. Wainwright,

* Being straitened for provisions in their return, through bad fuccefs in hunting, they were preparing to reaft a child of one Hannah Parfons; but (happily) a strange dog which they chanced to meet with ferved in its room .- Samuel Butterfield, a Groton soldier. having in his own defence killed one of their Chiefs. a dispute arose whether he should be burnt or whipped to death, and an appeal was made to the wife of the deceased for determination. She answered, If killing the prifoner would reftore her hufband to life, fhe cared not by what means he fuffered ; but, if it would not, she wished to have him for her flave: which request was complied with.

143

wright, Captain of the town, and took many prifoners.

In 1709, an expedition was meditated in England againft Canada: but the face of affairs in Europe was fo altered by the battle of Almanza, that the defign was dropped.

The folicitation of Col. Nicholfon brought another expedition on the carpet against that country, but it terminated in a descent on Nova Scotia. On Sept. 18, a fleet of 36 fail, men of war, transports, &c. included, failed from Nantasket for Port-Royal. The land forces confifted of a regiment of marines, and four regiments raifed in New-England, under the command of Colonel Nicholfon. The armament arrived at Port-Royal on the 24th of September, and the forces were landed without opposition. On the first of October, the batteries began to play: but the French Governor being fummoned to furrender the fame day, a ceffation of arms enfued, in order to confider of terms of capitulation, which were figned by both parties the next day. The garrifon

N E W - E N G L A N D. 145 fon were allowed to march out with the honours of war.

The favourite project against Canada afterwards induced Nicholfon to repair to London for affiftance. He returned to Bofton on the 8th of June, with orders for the feveral governments of New-England, New-York, the Jerfeys, and Pennfylvania, to get ready their respective quotas of men with the utmost dispatch, as a fleet was fhortly to be expected; and which accordingly did arrive on the 24th, confifting of 15 men of war, and 40 transports. More dependance had been placed upon the Government of Massachuset's-bay for the completion of this armament, than was confiftent with the difpatch required : * how-G ever,

* The army was to be fupplied with ten weeks provision at Boston:—a very extraordinary and hazardous circumstance this; as it might well have been queftioned, whether a sufficient quantity could be there procured, a failure in which would have ruined the enterprize. It luckily happened, however, that the General Court was fitting when the news was brought; and, as provisions had thereupon flarted to a very ever, with fuch diligence were the preparations carried on there, that the fleet weighed on the 30th of July, in order to proceed on the expedition. The land-forces, two New-England regiments included, amounted to near 7000 men. On the 18th of August, they arrived at Gaspee, and failed again on the 20th. The two following days proved foggy; and the wind beginning to blow fresh at E. S. E. the spin brought to, with their heads to the fouthward. This was afterwards pretended to have been done by advice both of the English and French pilots on board, though the former positively a very extravagant rate, an order paffed, fixing prices to the feveral kinds of provisions required. The owners demurred, and fhut up their thores; in confequence of which, another order was iffued, giving authority to open doors, and feize all the defired provisions that could be found There was another error in the plan of this undertaking, viz. a reliance on obtaining alfo fkilful pilots at Bofton. The country really afforded no better than fhip-mafters who had been once or twice up St. Laurence river, and were averfe to quitting employments on which the fupport of their families depended; neverthelefs they likewife were impreffed into the fervice.

pofitively denied the charge, fo far as it respected themselves. In a few hours after the fleet brought to, fome of the transports were befet with breakers, and at midnight eight or nine fhips bulged upon rocks. Six or feven hundred men were taken up by the other fhips, but 1000 were drowned. The men of war escaped; and next morning, the wind changing to W.S.W. the fleet bore away for Spanish River; but, the wind shifting again to E. eight days elapfed before all the fhips arrived there. It was now refolved, in a council of war, to make no further attempt; and the fleet fet fail on its return home on the 16th of September .*-In the mean time, Nicholfon G' 2 advanced

* It has been attempted to fix the caufe of this mifcarriage on the Government of Maffachufets-bay, by imputing to them a dilatorinefs in complying with the requifitions prefcribed; but with the groffeft injuffice, as their zeal to promote the undertaking led them to meafures fo incompatible with the liberties of a free people, as, in our opinion, were fcarcely warranted even by the exigency of the occafion. But the fpeedy failing of the fleet from Bofton, confidering the flort notice given, is alone a fufficient refutation of the calumny.

advanced with a body of American forces from Albany towards Montreal; but, hearing of the difafter which had befallen the fleet, he prudently marched back again.

In the year 1711, there was fo ruinous a fire at Boston, that it was denominated the Great Fire till the year 1760, when happened the last and most dreadful.

In 1713, the Indians finding themfelves carrying on the war without the French after the treaty of Utrecht, made overtures of peace, and, afking pardon for all paft rebellions, entered into new articles of fubmiffion.

After a troublefome administration, partly from the long war, and partly from the opposition of the people over whom he presided, Governor Dudley was supplanted by Colonel Burgess on the accession of George I. but the Colonel was prevailed upon by Mess Belcher and Dummer, for the consideration of 10001. sterling; to refign his commission, in favour of Colonel Shute, who was accordingly appointed Governor, and arrived at Boston, Oct. 4, 1716. Difputes putes were renewed in a fhort time between him and the Houfe of Reprefentatives, particularly in regard to the power of the Governor to negative their Speaker. He alfo infifted on their fettling a fixed falary of 1000l. fterling per ann. on the Governor, but with no better fuccefs than his predeceffor; nay, his own allowance was reduced to 180l. for half a year.

In 1722, war was declared against the Norridgewock Indians, who had for feveral years been infulting and committing depredations on the English in the northeastern parts, at the inftigation of the French, particularly of a famous Jesuit, named Rallé, who had been long fettled among them at Norridgewock, where he was almost adored; but he lost his life in an attack which the English made on that village on the 12th of August, 1724, re-'fufing (as it is faid) to give or take quarter. Six noted Indian warriors fell at the fame time. This fuccefs contributed greatly to a peace, which was agreed upon the enfuing year, and proved a lafting one.

G 3

The

The Houfe of Reprefentatives carried fo high a hand against the Governor, that he determined to appeal to the Crown. Having, therefore, obtained permission for a temporary quittance of his government, he fuddenly embarked for England the latter end of the year 1722, leaving the adminiftration to Lieut. Gov. Dummer. New fubjects of contention had been started between himfelf and the House of Représentatives; these he resolved into certain complaints against that House, in substance as follow :---Infringing the refervation of trees for mafts for the royal navy 3-affuming power in the appointment of days for fasting and thankfgiving ;---adjourning themfelves to a distant day by their own act ;--difmantling forts, &c.-fuspending military officers, &c. - appointing committees of their own to direct and muster his Majesty's forces .- All these allegations the House voted to be groundlefs; but the determination of his Majesty in Council was the reverse. This occafioned an explanatory charter in 1725, wherein the power of the Governor to negative negative the Speaker was expressly afferted, and the power of the House to adjourn themselves limited to two days.

 $N \in W - E N \in L A N D.$ 151

Colonel Shute did not return to New-England; for, on the acceffion of George II. in 1727, he was removed to make room for Mr. Burnet, (fon to the Bifhop,) who had been conftrained to yield up his government of New-York and the Jerfeys to a favourite of the King's: however, the Colonel was rewarded, more to his mind, with an annual penfion of 4001. fterling.

In the fame year, happened an earthquake in New-England, and through a great part of North America. It was preceded by an aftonifhing rumbling noife, for about half a minute; then began the fhock, which increased gradually for half a minute more, when it as gradually decreased.

Governor Burnet arrived at Boston July 13, 1728, into which capital he was ushered by a greater number of the inhabitants on horseback and in carriages, than had ever met any Governor before. From G 4 this this grand appearance Mr. Burnet deduced an argument, in his first speech to the Affembly, of their ability to fupport the Governor in an honourable manner; and, at the fame time, reminded them of the King's inftructions concerning an eftablished falary, which he was charged to infift upon. The House of Representatives parried the ftroke with equal address and resolution. They agreed that a greater or lefs fum ought not to be an object of disputation with them, comparatively with the manner in which it was to be granted ;- they were willing to allow, by renewed grants, an honourable fupport to the Governor; and, tho' they had denied more than 500l. fterling per annum to Colonel Shute, they paffed grants to Mr. Burnet to the amount of 1700l. one of 300l. to defray the charges of his journey, and the other of 1400l. for his fupport. Mr. Burnet accepted the gool. voted for his expences; but the 1400l. tendered for his fupport, he refused, because it was not voted to him as a fixed falary. This dispute, in which extraordinary powers of of reafoning were difplayed by the Governor, was wound up to fuch a pitch, that the Houfe of Reprefentatives refolved to prefent an humble addrefs to the King on the fubject; and Meff. Wilks and Belcher were employed as their agents in England : but the conduct of the Governor was approved in Council, and that of the Houfe condemned.

In the midft of this fharp contention the Governor was feized with a fever, of which he died on the 7th of September, 1729.

The miniftry were willing to appoint as a fucceffor to Mr. Burnet, the perfon who was most likely to procure an establishment of fixed falaties; and, however surprising it may seem, Mr. Belcher, whom we have just mentioned as employed in England in opposition to that measure, arrived, in. August, 1730, as Governor at Boston. He was joyfully received; for the Colony, no lefs than the Crown, expected to find their account in his appointment. In his first speech, however, which was eagerly attended to, they found a reiteration of the G 5 fubject:

fubject which had produced fo much diffention, and an express declaration, that " nothing prevented the controverfy being « laid before the Parliament but his Majefty's great lenity and goodnefs." Neverthele's, the House still refused to comply, and the contest continued, though not with that animofity as during the preceding administration. At length, the matter was accommodated by the following expedient : the House having prepared a bill, granting to the Governor 3400l. currency, or about 1000l. fterling, with a flipulation for the grant of the like fum annually during the Governor's continuance, he advifed the House to petition for leave for him to receive the fum. This was granted, with an injunction on the Governor to perfevere in his utmost endeavours to procure a full compliance with the instruction. He contiqued to receive particular grants by the like permittion for two or three years; when a general order of leave being obtained to receive fuch fums as were granted, this long controverfy fubfided.

In 1739 was carried into execution a fcheme for a land-bank *, which Governor Belcher had endeavoured to fupprefs in vain: but he continued, neverthelefs, to evince his averfion to it; he negatived the Speaker and 13 new-elected Counfellors, and difplaced a number of officers folely on account of their being favourers of it. This conduct created him many enemies, who ceafed ceased not to blacken his character by mifrepresentations, till in return they had infidiously effected his removal, without affording him any opportunity of vindicating himself.

* A Scarcity of money being univerfally complained of, 700 or 800 perfons, fome few of good, but . the generality of finall eftate, proposed to give credit to 150,000l. lawful money, to be iffued in bills, each perfon being to mortgage a real effate in proportion to the fums he fubfcribed and took out, or to give bond with two fureties; but no one was to subscribe more than 100l. on personal security. Ten directors and a treasurer were to be chosen. Every fubscriber or partner was to pay 3 per cent. interest for the fum taken out, and 5 per cent. for the principal; and the produce and manufacture of the province might be paid inftead of bills -- But the operation of this measure was confined, and of short du-Men of large property and the principal. ration. merchants refused to receive the bills, whilft shopkeepers and fmall traders gave them credit : hence great confusion beginning to arife, the former applied to Parliament, and obtained an act to suppress the company.

Mr. Shirley was his fucceffor, and in general well approved of by the province; and a falary of 1000l. fterl. per ann. was allowed him.

A rupture with France being looked upon as an unavoidable event, after war was commenced with Spain in 1740, Castle-William was repaired, and ftrengthened with a new battery of 24 pounders. In May, 1744, Duvivier, with 900 men, from Louisbourg, furprized and made himfelf mafter of Canfo; and many Englift veffels were afterwards taken and carried into Louisbourg. A project was formed, therefore, of furprizing that place, in turn, early in the enfuing year, before the cuftomary fuccours should have arrived there from Europe; and, after much deliberation, refolved upon by the Houfe of Representatives by a majority of one only. Nevertheles, verthelefs, as each entered into the debate with no other than truly patriotic views, the defign was no fooner adopted, than a hearty concurrence took place among all of them to promote it. A body of men, to be commanded by Colonel Pepperell, was accordingly raifed, and other preparations carried on, with the utmost difpatch; * and with

* All the colonies as far as Pennfylvania were invited to engage in the-undertaking ; but all excufed themfelves, except the other three of New-England. which feverally agreed to raife the following bodies of men; viz. Connecticut 500, New-Hampshire and Rhode-Island 300 each. The Massachusets forces confifted of 3250 men. What they ftood most in need of was a fleet, fufficiently flrong to keep the feas against the enemy in those parts : 2 ships, the largest only of 20 guns, a privateer of 200 tons, three fnows. a brig, and three floops, conftituted the whole of their naval force. But by a feries of lucky incidents they furmounted all difficulties. The winter was fo mild, as to admit of all preparations being carried on without impediment ; and the Governor interested himfelf indefatigably in furthering them with all the powers of his office. The armament failed from Nantafket, March 24, 1745, and reached Canfo, the place of rendezvous, on the 4th of April, where the New-Hampshire corps had arrived four days before ; but the Connecticut forces did not join them till with the affiftance of a fleet under Commodore Warren, the place was reduced, and furrendered on the 17th of June.

In

till the 25th. The Rhode-Island men were of no fervice, not arriving till the bufinefs was done .- Whilft the preparations for this expedition were carrying on, Mr. Shirley, fenfible of the little probability there was of fuccess, without a respectable naval force, dispatched an express to Commodore Warren, who was then on the West-India station, acquainting him with the proposed descent on Louisbourg, and foliciting affistance. The express returned the day before the fleet failed from Nantasket, and brought a negative answer from the Commodore, who did not chuse to be concerned in the affair, because it originated in the province without orders from England. This difagreeable intelligence the Governor concealed from all but the General and Brigadier Waldo (the next in) command), for fear of difcouraging the men; and they failed in hopes, that, though they should not find themselves equal to the reduction of Louisbourg, they should at least regain Canso. Soon after the above-mentioned express left the West-Indies, to return with the Commodore's answer to Governor Shirley, the Hind floop brought orders, from England, to Mr. Warren to fail to Boston, in order to concert measures with Mr. Shirley for his Majesty's fervice. In his paffage he was informed, that the fleet had failed for Canfo, and having met with a. schooner, he sent her to Boston, with notice to Mr. Shirley

NEW, ENGLAND. 159

In 1746, the French, full of revenge for the loss of Louisbourg, fent a very powerful fleet into the North-American feas, with Shirley that he was proceeding to Canfo, with orders for fuch thips as might be in those feas to join him. Hence it was that the Eltham men of war, of 40 guns, was fecured ; for though the was actually under fail with the maft fleet, when an express arrived at Portfmouth, in New-Hampshire, with the Commodore's orders, yet the Captain fent his convoy into port again, and repaired to Canfo, where he arrived on the 23d, as did also, foon afterwards, the Commodore himfelf, to the unspeakable joy of the army. in the Superb of 60 guns, with the Launceston and Mermaid, of 40 guns each. After a short consultation the ships of force failed to cruize before Louisbourg ; and the forces landed at Chapeau-Rouge-bay the 30th of April, with very little opposition. The enemy discovered the transports early in the morning, which was the first intimation they received of the defign against them. Next morning 400 men marched, behind hills, round to the north-east harbour, fetting all the houses and storehouses on fire, until they approached within a mile of the grand battery. The thick imoke from the ftorehouses, which contained various kinds of combustible commodities, prevented the enemy from difcovering the number of men who were coming against them ; but suspecting them to be the greatest party of the army, they abandoned the fort, cannon, and shot, to the English, depriving them of the powder only, which they threw into

$160 \qquad N E W - E N G L A N D.$

with a view of recovering that fortrefs, reducing Nova-Scotia, Bofton, &c. and laying wafte the English colonies from thence into a well. This fuccefs fo much exceeded the expectations of the English, that when an advanced party of them (about 20 in number) came up to the battery, and faw no appearance of the enemy, they were apprehensive of some plot, and declined entering, (as it is faid) till a Cape-Cod Indian had fummoned up courage to go in alone, and difcovered the real ftate of the fort, time enough however, to exclude the French, who were returning to re-poffefs it. The fiege commenced with a very laborious operation, the men being obliged to drag their cannon, mortars, shot, &c. through a morass for near two miles. From the grand battery a conftant fire, with 42 pounders, was kept up for some time on the town, and did much damage to the houfes. The English foldiers had no notion of making regular approaches. "When they heard Mr. Bastide's propofals for zigzags and epaulements, they made merry with the terms, and went on, void of art, in their own natural way," taking advantage of the night. By the 20th of May, five fascine batteries were opened ; and foon after another on the light-house point. Ih the mean time, the men of war were cruizing off the harbour; and on the 18th of May the Mermaid fell in with a French man of war, of 64 guns, with 560 men on board, and all kinds of ftores for the garrifon. As the Mermaid was of inferior force, the Captain thought it prudent, by a pretended flight, 10' feduce thence to Georgia. The country was much alarmed; but the French armament met with fuch a fuccession of ill-fortune and diffres, feduce the Vigilant (which was the name of the French ship) amongst the other cruizers :--- he fucceeded, and thus that fuccour fell into the hands of the English, which, had it reached the place of its deftination. (as, but for the men of war, it certainly muft have done) would, no doubt, have put an end to all their hopes of reducing Louisbourg at that time. The Princess Mary, of 60 guns, and Hector of 40 guns, having unexpectedly arrived at Bofton, from England, were fent to join the Commodore, agreeable to his orders, which they did on the 22d; fo that now a defign began to be in contemplation of forcing the harbour, and making an attack with the ships. On June 10, arrived also the Chester, of 50 guns, and, on the 12th, the Canterbury and Sunderland, of 60 guns each, from England, in confe-, quence of dispatches sent by Governor Shirley, giving an account of the expedition. The Commodore had now 11 ships of force : and it is faid to have been determined to make a general attack, both by fea and land, on the 18th. The French feem to have been in expectation of it, and, from the execution done by the forces on fhore, unwilling to fland it; for on the 15th they fent out a flag of truce to the General, requesting a ceffation of hostilities, that they might the better confider of proposals for capitulating. Next morning they fent terms on which they were willing to furrender, but they were fuch as both the diftrefs, as rendered their defign abortive. -On the other hand, the conqueft of Canada was meditated in England, and the extirpation of the French from all North-America; for which purpose the colonies raifed men in the following proportions: New-Hampshire 500; Massachusets 3500; Rhode-Island 300; Connecticut 1000; New-York 1600; New-Jerfeys 500; Maryland 300; Virginia 100; Pennfylvania 400 ;--- in all 8200 : they continued in pay till Sept. 1747; but, to their great furprize, no fleet nor affiftance arrived from England to make the attempt. The reafon, probably, was a profpect of peace, which was re-established in 1748.

160 N E W-E N G L A N D.

A war

the General and Commodore could not approve of ; and therefore they offered others to the French in their room. These were accepted, and on the 17th the place was given up.——The expence incurred by the Maffachusets in this fervice, was afterwards repaid them by parliament, which voted the fum of 180,0001. for that purpose; nevertheles, Louisbourg was restored to the French by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. A war with the Indians, which was a natural confequence of a war with the French, broke out in 1744; but the English fuffered less now than formerly; and peace was renewed with them in 1749.

This year is principally remarked by the abolishing bills of credit * in the province of

* For feveral years after the first emission of them, the government defrayed the public charges of the province by fresh bills of credit; and as long as the fum was small, filver continued the measure, and bills retained their value. When an augmentation of expences fucceeded the Canada expedition in 1711, the bills likewise encreased; but in a proportionate degree the filver and gold forfook the country. Hence, in 1714, bills, to the amount of 50,000l. and, in 1716, 100,000l. were issued, and lent, on land fecurity, to the inhabitants, payable within a certain period, during which they were to be confidered as money. When no more filver and gold remained, and the bills were become the fole inftrument of commerce, pounds, shillings, and pence, existed 'in idea, only; so that for near 40 years, the currency continued in much the fame flate "as if 100,000l. had been stamped in pieces of leather, or paper of various denominations, and declared to be the money of the government, without any other fanction than this, that, when there should be taxes to pay, the treafury would receive this fort of money, and of Maffachufets-bay, by an act of Affembly. This was effected, chiefly, by means of 180,0001. fterling, which fum had been voted by parliament, as a reimburfement to the Maffachufets of their expences in the reduction of Louifbourg, and which was applied towards the redemption of the bills then out ftanding, amounting to 2,200,0001. nominal value. Thofe which remained unredeemed, were drawn in by a tax. Hereupon, filver of fterl. alloy, at 6s. 8d. the ounce, in payments in bullion, or milled dollars at 6s. each, became the lawful money of the province. Neverthelefs, bills of credit were foon afterwards revived +.

Governor Shirley returned to England in the latter end of the year 1749; and, in Jan.

and that every creditor fhould be obliged to receive it from his debtor." Surely, fuch a medium could not but depreciate in value, and that enormoufly. In 1702, 6s. 8d. was equal to an ounce of filver; but, in 1749, when the bills were abolifhed, the ounce was estimated at 50s.

† In 1751, an act of parliament passed to restrain and regulate the paper-money of the four New-England provinces.

Jan. 1750, he, and William Mildmay, Efq; were appointed commiffaries to adjuft, with France, all differences relative to America, then fubfifting between the two crowns; but after an abode of two years at Paris, Mr. Shirley was thoroughly convinced, by the chicanery, delays, and evafions of the French Court, that no permanent accommodation was intended on their part. He therefore returned to England; and thence to his government.

After this period the hiftory of New-England becomes blended with that of the other colonies, as the depredations of the French, threatening their general extirpation, induced one common caufe of felfdefence amongft them. — So foon as the year 1754, that treacherous people had commenced hoftilities on the back of all the Englifh North-American fettlements, by erecting a line of forts, within 20 and 30 miles diftance of each other, upon the lakes and rivers, from Canada to the Miffifippi, invading the fouthern colonies, cutting off all intercourfe with the Indians in thole parts, parts, and inftigating them to join in their encroachments: and as they had in like manner feized the greateft part of the province of Nova-Scotia, a body of 2000 men were generoufly raifed by the Maffachufets, to affift in diflodging them, which was accomplifhed the next year, under Lieut. Col, (now General) Monckton.

$_{166}$ NEW-ENGLAND.

With a view of checking the career of the French, whofe hoftile proceedings (though no war was declared) rendered it necessary to take the field, the British ministry ordered Halklet's and Dunbar's regiments of foot to embark for America, and General Braddock was appointed Generalissimo. Orders were also given for raising two American regiments, to be commanded by Sir William Pepperell and Mr. Shirley .---General Braddock marched towards Fort Du Quesne, and arrived within 10 miles of it on the 8th of July, 1755. The next day, about noon, as he was advancing in a manner unpardonably carelefs, he fuddenly received a general fire upon his front, and along his left flank, from an invisible enemy; fo artfully were they concealed behind trees and bushes. In an instant, a panick and confusion feized the regulars, who, being strangers to that mode of assault, precipitately gave ground, and would, most probably, have been cut off, had not the Provincials advanced alone amongst the furrounding woods, and covered them. The General, with a few officers, kept his ground, endeavouring by his example, entreaties, and commands, to rally his men; nor when he found all in vain, could he be prevailed upon to quit his dangerous fituation. At length, however, he was conveyed away by Lieut.-Colonel (now General) Gage, and another officer, after having had no lefs than five horfes fhot under him, and received a musket-ball through his right arm and lungs, of which wound he died within four days. The English lost, in this action, 700 men, 10 pieces of cannon, ammunition, baggage, &c. Sir Peter Halklet fell at the head of his regiment, on the first fire. The French fay, they loft no more than than 400, of whom the greatest part were Indians.

In the mean time, 6000 men, besides Indians, raifed by the Government of Maffachusets-bay, Connecticut, New-Hampfhire, Rhode-Ifland, and New-York, had rendezvoused at Albany, and marched from thence on expeditions against Niagara and Crown-Point. In the latter end of August, General Johnfon encamped, with the troops deftined against Crown-Point, at the fouth end of Lake George, where, on Sept. 8, he was attacked by the enemy, who had just before been reinforced with a large body of fresh troops from France, under the Baron Diefkau. Gen. Johnfon had fecured his camp with a breaft-work of trees; and the action was hot and bloody, continuing from between 11 and 12 o'clock, till 4 in the afternoon, when the enemy were put to flight, with great flaughter. The English had 130 killed, 94 wounded, and fix miffing. Among the former were the Colonels Williams and Titcomb, Major Ashley; and the Captains Ingerfal, Puter, Ferral, Stoddert.

Stoddert, M'Ginnes, and Stevens, together with old Hendrick, the great Mohawk fachem. Among the wounded were General Johnfon himfelf in the thigh, Major Nichols, and two Captains.----The enemy had near ten thousand men killed, amongst whom were the Major-General, (the fame who defeated Gen. Braddock in 1755,) and the greater part of their chief officers. Baron de Dieskau, who commanded the French regulars, was dangeroufly wounded, and also was one of about 30 prisoners. Notwithstanding this defeat, the enemy, through the late reinforcement, were too ftrong at Crown-Point, and the feafon too far advanced, for the English to proceed against them with fuccels. *

Through various delays, the corps which was appointed for the reduction of Niagara, under General Shirley, did not arrive at Ofwego before the end of August, when H they they found themfelves fo badly furnished with provisions, that it was unanimously refolved, in a council of war, to defer the attempt till the next year. Mr. Shirley, therefore, leaving a strong body, under Colonel Mercer, to garrison Oswego, and to complete some additional works he had begun there, marched on the 2_4 th of Oct. on his return to Albany.

* General Johnson was created a Baronet for this fervice, and rewarded by Parliament with a present of 50001.

In 1756 (the year war was declared), two more regiments were fent to America from England, under the command of General Abercrombie, who was to be followed by Lord Loudon as Commander in Chief : but his Lordship's arrival there being procrastinated beyond expectation, the English army wasted the summer in inactivity, of which the French failed not to avail themselves. The enterprizing Marquis de Montcalm, with 1300 regulars, 1700 Canadians, and a confiderable number of Indians, laid fiege to Ofwego. Colonel Mercer made the beft defence in his power; but being unfortunately killed by a cannon-ball, the garrifon, confifting of Shirley's and Pepperell's regiments, giments, and part of Schuyler's militia, in all 1600 men, furrendered themfelves prifoners of war. The Englifh loft alfo 121 pieces of cannon, 14 brafs mortars, 23000 wt. of powder, 8000 wt. of lead and ball, 2950 bullets, and a great quantity of bombs, grenades, fufees, and provifions. The French had but four men killed, (the chief engineer one,) and 20 wounded. They demolifhed all the works.

When at length Lord Loudon joined the army, it was too late in the year to undertake any offenfive measure against the enemy: he, therefore applied himself to the defence of the country during winter, and brought the several colonies to act with harmony and steadines, which some of them had failed to do before.

Early in the year 1757 the French met with a check from the garrifon of Fort William-Henry, upon which they made no lefs than five furious affaults in vain. But a project of the English proved its destruction in August following.

 H_{2}

An expedition had been concerted against Louisbourg, in confequence of which Lord Loudon embarked, June 19, at New-York, with 6000 men, for Halifax, where he was to join Admiral Holburne, with a fleet and reinforcements. The Admiral did not arrive there till July 9, after which near a month was spent in exercising the men. By this delay the French had an opportunity of acquiring fuch powerful reinforcements, that, though the fleet at length failed from Halifax, with an intent of profecuting the undertaking, it was thought adviseable to defift, on receiving intelligence, by letters found on board a packet-boat (that perhaps defignedly fell in the way,) of the great ftrength of the enemy, but which no doubt was much exaggerated.

Lord Loudon, having drawn the troops from the frontiers, Monfieur Montcalm renewed his attack on Fort-William, which had fo bravely beat him off before. The garrifon again flood firm, under Col. Monro, for fome time; but, there being no prospect of fuccour, without which it was impossible N E W-E N G L A N D. 173 impoffible to hold out against fo great a force, were obliged to capitulate on the 9th of August, on honourable terms; nevertheles, to the eternal difgrace of the French general, the Indians in his army were fuffered to murder and scalp 1300 of them, besides women and children. The fort was demolished.

In the year 1758 extraordinary preparations were made by Government for carry-- on the war with vigour. An army of 17,000 - en were to open a paffage into Canada by the reduction of Crown-Point, and another corps of 8000 to drive the French from the Ohio country; whilft Admiral Bofcawen and General Amherft undertook the conqueft of Cape-Breton. * General Abercrombie fuperfeded Lord Loudon in the command of the forces in America, and took the conduct of the ex-H 3 pedition

• This was heroically accomplifhed; but comes not within our detail, as the Americans had no fhare in that atchievement, nor was it immediately connected with the operations on the Continent.

pedition against Crown-Point upon himself, but was defeated at Ticonderoga.*

The expedition to the Ohio country was committed to the care of Brigadier-general Forbes, who happily furprized Fort Du Quefne, + and reduced the Indians to the obedience of the English.

The

* With 7000 regulars, and 10,000 Provincials, he embarked on Lake George, in 900 batteaus, and 12" whale-boats, and failed on July 5 for Ticon¹ ga, which fort it was neceffary to take in the root of ap-proach Crown-Point. They lander and marched towards it the next morning. L. their way, the most advanced party fell in with a body of the enemy in an ambush ; and, though they were put to flight, it was not without the low of the brave Lord Howe, who was the first man killed, being shot through the breast For want of proper guides, it with a musket-ball. was the 7th of July in the evening before they drew near Ticonderoga. The enemy lay entrenched before the fort, in a camp fo ftrongly fortified, and of fuch difficult accefs, that it was in vain the English repeatedly attempted, on the 8th, to force it; fo that, with the lofs of 500 men killed, and near 1400 wounded, General Abercrombie thought proper to retire precipitately and repais the lake.

+ He marched from Philadelphia on the 30th day of June, proceeding towards Fort Du Queine with

The plan of operations for the year 1759was as follows: General Wolfe, with a confiderable body of forces, was to proceed up the river St. Lawrence against Quebec, H 4 there all the caution which the misfortune attending Braddock's rafhnefs may be fuppofed to have infpired. When he arrived at Ray's-Town, 90 miles E. of Fort Du Quesne, he detached Col. Fouquet, with 2000 men, to fecure the post of Lyal-Henning, and to reconnoitre Fort Du Quesne. Fouquet secured the poft, but sent 800 men only, under Major Grant, to reconnoitre the fort, though at the diffance of 40 miles. As foon, therefore, as the enemy discovered that fmall party near them, a body large enough to furround them marched out, and fell upon them; The English, with bayonets fixed, closed with the enemy, and flood their ground for three hours; but, being unsupported, were at length borne down by the fresh accession of strength their antagonists received from the garrifon, and made a diforderly retreat, leaving their commander a prifoner. Brigadier Forbes haftened with all prudent difpatch to retrieve this difaster; and, suddenly appearing before Fort Du Quefne, flruck the French with fuch a panic, that they difinantled the fort and fled, on Nov. 24. The next day Forbes took poffession of it; and, having repaired the works, gave it the name of Pittfbourg, in honour of the Great Commoner then at the head of affairs. The Brigadier died foon after at Philadelphia, much lamented.

175

there to be joined by another corps which General Amherft was ordered to march over land from New-York, reducing Ticonderoga and Crown-Point in his way; whilft a body, under the command of Generals Prideaux and Johnfon, attacked Niagara and Montreal.

A ftrong fleet, confifting of twenty-one fail of the line, and commanded by Admiral Saunders, with 7000 land forces, regulars and Provincials, under Major General James Wolfe, appeared before Quebec the latter end of June. As the French expected this vifit, they had prepared themfelves accordingly by collecting their forces together, to the amount of 12,000 men, exclufive of Indians, and adding to the very great natural ftrength of the place and adjacent country, all the artificial fecurity of intrenchments and fortifications, under the direction of the experienced Montcalm.

It was General Wolfe's chief aim to draw the enemy out of their very advantageous encampment, but every ftratagem meditated for for that purpole was baffled by infurmountable difficulties arifing from the nature of the country: he was obliged, therefore, to take the bold refolution of attacking them in their entrenchments. Accordingly an attempt was refolved to be made on July 31, on the enemy's left, near Montmorency river; but miscarried chiefly through some of the boats grounding as they were proceeding with troops to the place of attack, and thro' the misconduct of 13 companies of grenadiers, who, instead of forming themselves into four distinct bodies, and making the onfet fuftained by another corps, rashly ran on towards the intrenchments in the greatest diforder, and without their appointed fupport. So much time was loft by the boats grounding, and the irregularity of the grenadiers, that, the day beginning to clofe, the General was obliged to defift from his attempt.

After this miscarriage, General Wolfe left no manœuvres untried above the town to induce Montcalm to quit his strong H 5 camp;

camp; and at length fucceeded in the following manner.

Early in the morning of the 13th of September, a part of the army, accompanied by the General himfelf, and Brigadiers Monckton and Murray, were embarked in flat-bottomed boats : they fell down the river with the tide, undifcovered by the enemy, and landed within a league of Cape Diamond, an hour before break of day; the fhips, with admirable fkill, preferving a communication with them.

The troops had a very fteep, high fhore to afcend, thickly covered with boughs and ftumps of trees, and guarded by Canadians and Indians, who fired upon them : neverthelefs, they fcrambled up by the help of the boughs, and, difperfing the enemy, fecured the landing of the remainder of the troops, which was committed to the care of Brigadier Townfhend.

Soon after the whole army was landed, General Wolfe had the fatisfaction of perceiving that Montcalm had quitted his strong holds, and was croffing Charles river with with the apparent defign of giving him battle; whereupon the General immediately formed his line, and advanced to meet him. Some bufhes in the enemy's front were lined with 1500 Indians and Canadians, the beft markfmen in the French army: thefe kept up an irregular, but galling fire on the Englifh, who, notwithftanding, referved their own till they were within 40 yards of the enemy's main body, which then forely felt its dreadful effects, and, not being able to withftand the fhock of the Englifh, who foon after rufhed on with their bayonets, were forced to feek refuge, by a precipitate retreat to the town.

Glorious as this victory was, it was dearly obtained, not on account of the number of men flain, which were only 57, but becaufe one of that number, after receiving three wounds, was the General himfelf; in whom concentered every qualification of a true hero, and who was, confequently, the admiration, not only of the foldiery; but of the Englifh at large. The wounded amountedamounted to 588, among whom was Brigadier-general Monckton, the fecond in command, who received a musket-ball a few minutes after Wolfe was carried off: fo that at the close of the action the command devolved on Brigadier Townshend. The lofs of the French was fuppofed to be 1500 men. Montcalm, their general, was killed in the action, and their fecond in command died on board the English fleet .- The fiege was commenced by General Townfhend, with the conduct of an experienced officer; and on the 18th the garrifon capitulated, marching out with the honours of war, in order to be fent to France. The English troops took possession; 5000 of whom were left to maintain the place, under the command of Brigadier Murray.

'Twas well the heroifm of Wolfe funk not under his difappointment in not being joined before Quebec by General Amherft, according to the plan of operations beforementioned. Through a variety of unforefeen delays, it was the 21ft of July before the latter could get his forces acrofs Lake George,

George, and appear before Ticonderoga, where Abercrombie had been repulfed the preceding year: but the fort was now approached with fuch firmness, precaution, and skill, that the enemy, after damaging the works, abandoned it. Col. Townfhend, however, loft his life by a cannonball, as he was reconnoitring. This acquifition was followed by that of Crown-Point, which the French (whatever might be the reason of it) also deserted, even before the English army, had moved from Ticonderoga. The General immediately fent 200 rangers to fecure the post, and foon after followed with the main body; and there he wintered, the feafon not permitting him to proceed further.

General Prideaux having been joined in due time by the Provincials, and 1100 Indians under Sir William Johnfon, the expedition againft Niagara was undertaken by them with fuccefs. By the 19th of July they were advanced within 140 yards of the covered way; but a fad accident now happened: General Prideaux, through the careleffnefs careleffnefs of his own gunner, was unfortunately killed, by a cohorn-fhot, as he was walking in the trenches. Sir William Johnfon immediately acquainted General Amherft with this misfortune, who difpatched Brigadier-general Gage to take the command; but, before he arrived, Sir William had compelled the garrifon to furrender themfelves prifoners of war, having previoufly intercepted and defeated a reinforcement of near 2000 men, on which the French much depended. The Englifh took poffeffion on the 25th of July.

Early in the year 1760, 12,600 French (regulars and Canadians), with 400 Indians, under the command of the Chevalier de Levi, made an attempt to recover Quebec, and worfted Governor Murray, whofe corps was reduced by death and ficknefs to 3000 men, in an action on the 28th of April; neverthelefs, on the arrival of a British naval force before the town, the enemy raifed: the fiege in the night of the 16th of May with fuch precipitation, as to leave 34 cannon, non, 6 mortars, all their field-equipage, provisions, &c. &c. behind them.

General Amherst also refumed the operations he was obliged to leave incompleat the preceding year. On the 10th of August he embarked at Ofwego; and, having taken Swegatchie on the 17th, L'Isle Royale on the 23d, and L'Isle Perrott on Sept. 4, he landed and encamped before Montreal on the 6th. The next morning, the Governor, the Marquis de Vaudreuil, fent proposals of capitulation to him, which were returned with fuch alterations as the Marquis would fain have had retracted : but the English General was resolute, and the garrifon was forced on the 8th to laydown their arms, and engage not to ferve that war. To refift would have been madnefs; for, during the negociation, General Murray arrived with his troops from Quebec, and Col. Haviland, with his corps, from the Isle aux Noix, as if to be witnesses of this coup de grace to Gallic power in Canada; which country was entirely ceded to Great-

Great-Britain at the peace concluded in 1763.*

We are now come to the period which should prefent to our readers view the melancholy scene of those unhappy differences which have arisen between the Mother-Country and the chief of her American Colonies; but they are too recent and wellknown to need recital, and are likewife bevond the compass and defign of our undertaking. We shall only observe, that we deeply lament the rife and progress of this unnatural contest, and fincerely wish that our King and legiflators may be infpired with wifdom, in aid of their councils, fo that they may be able to avert the impending ruin which threatens us on all fides, and.

* During this war, the following fums were voted by parliament to the Colonies, towards reimburfing their expences.

In 1756,			115,000£.
I757,	-		50,000
March, 1760,			200,000.
Jan. 1761,	-		200,000

565,000

and reftore peace and commerce to Great-Britain and her Colonies, upon a folid and permanent foundation.

We shall, therefore, conclude this epitome of the history of New-England with a few particulars relative to the inhabitants, religion, crade, &c. of this country, before the commencement of the present hostilities.

The inhabitants of Massachusets-bay are computed to amount to 400,000 fouls, 80,000 of whom are capable of bearing arms. They are become much more liberal in fentiment than they were formerly, when all their moral notions were derived from the books of Mofes. The gentry of both fexes are by no means deftitute of goodnature and hospitality; but these good qualities are always accompanied with fuch an air of stiffness and referve, as cannot fail to mar the pleafing effects which otherwife would refult from them. The women are well-featured, with fair complexions, but have bad teeth. The lower class of people are equally formal, yet inquisitive, in regard to to ftrangers, to a degree of impertinence fcarcely to be borne with*.

The eftablished religion is a refinement upon that of the Independents, the profeffors of it flyling themselves Congregationalists: however, there are great numbers of people of other persuasions, particularly of the

* The following account of a remarkable cuftom in vogue amongst some of them is given by a writer of credit, who was in Massachusets bay in 1760 :- A very extraordinary method of courtship is fometimes practifed amongst the lower people of this province, and is called Tarrying. When a man is enamoured of a young woman, and wishes to marry her, he propofes the affair to her parents (without whole confent no marriage in this colony can take place) : if they have no objection, they allow him to tarry with her one night, in order to make his court to her. At their usual time the old people retire to bed, leaving the young ones to fettle matters as they can ; who, after having fate up as long as they think proper, get into bed together alfo, but without pulling off their under-garments, to prevent scandal. If the parties agree, it is all very well; the banns are published, and they are married without delay: if not, they part, and poffibly never fee each other again : unlefs, which is an accident that feldom happens, the forfaken fair-one prove pregnant, and then the man is obliged to marry her, under pain of excommunication."

the church of England, whole moderate principles gain ground daily; yet in Bofton there are 13 or 14 meeting-houses, and only three churches.

The Maffachufets importation goods from Great Briter from Holland, flaves

* The trade of the Colonies in general is laid under fuch reftraint by Parliament as feems neceffary for the advantage of Great-Britain. They are obliged by law to land Spanifh and Portugal wines, &c. in England, fubject to duties for re-shipping for America. The exportation of hats, or woollen goods, 'made in the Colonies, is prohibited, even from one to the other; and they are forbid alfo to erect plating or flitting mills, or fteel furnaces, to fecure their application to the mother-country for the manufactures which require them .- The enumerated goods, of the growth, produce, or manufacture, of the British Colonies, viz. tobacco, cotton-wool, indigo, ginger, fuffic or other dying woods, molaffes, hemp, copper ore, beaver-fkins or other furs, pitch, tar, turpentine, mafts, yards, bowsprits, sugar, rice, coffee, pimento, cocoa-nuts, whale-fins, raw filk hides and fkins, pot-afhes, pearlashes,-are not to be laden on board any vessel, until the mafter, with one furety, give bond that the faid goods shall be landed in some British colony, or in Great-Britain, except rice, which may be exported to the Southward of Cape Finisterre, and to foreign plantations in America, on payment of the duties, and obferving flaves from Africa, and fugars, coffee, and molaffes, from the West-Indies. With the money they paid their creditors in England; the fugars they exported to Holland; the provisions, the flaves, lumber, and goods to the neighbourned and the dry Innies. to this traffic, that they built annual number of veffels, which they loaded with falt-fish, whale-bone, fish-oil, pitch, and tar; and, having disposed of the cargoes, fold the fhips likewife. They have a few other manufactures, of which fpirits, iron, and beaver-hats, are the chief. Throughout the colonies they attempt to make woollens; but whilft their wool continues as coarfe and observing certain regulations prescribed by law; also fugar, to the Southward of Cape Finisterre, in like manner. Nor are the non-enumerated goods, viz. all other goods and commodities of the growth, produce, or manufacture, of the British Colonies, to be laden on board any vessel, until bond is given by the master, and one furety, that the faid goods shall not be carried to any part of Europe Northward of Cape Finisterre, unless to Great-Britain or Ireland, except lumber, which may be landed in the Madeiras, the Western Islands, or any part of Europe Southward of Cape Finisterre, on giving bond as above.

$188 \qquad N \in W - E N G L A N D.$

as

NEW-ENGLAND. 189 as fhort as at prefent, they will never bring them to any tolerable degree of perfection.— Here was little paper-money. *

The people of Connecticut, who amount to about 192,000, \dagger are remarkably induftrious; and, in proportion to their extent of country, export great quantities of lumber, fo far as that means barrel and hogfhead flaves and heading, hoops, cliftboards, and fhingles of cedar; and the markets in fome of the other colonies are much indebted to this for their fupply of butter, beef, mutton, pork, wheat, and Indian corn. The flate of religion is much the fame here as in the former province.

New-

* There is a mint at Bofton, which was erected in 1652, for coining fhillings, fix-pences, and threepences, to prevent fraud in money; but this proceeding making one of the complaints of Charles II. against the Colony, it was difcontinued.

+ The estimates given in this publication of the number of fouls in the feveral provinces of New-England, New-York, New-Jerfey, Pennfylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and the Carolinas, were made in Congrefs, in September, 1774.

New-Hampshire fupplied the royal navy with mass, yards, spars and oars, and confequently was of no mean affistance to Great Britain in maintaining her sovereignty of the fea. The inhabitants are estimated at 150,000, and are of divers religions, that of the Congregationalists being established. The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel have two missionaries there. Mass, spars, &c. spars (to the amount of 200 a year) cattle, sish, &c. are their chief exports. The paper currency is extremely bad, at 2500 per cent. discount.

No religion is eftablished among the inhabitants of Rhode-Island, but all are tolerated. The Society fend four mislionaries. The private people are faid to be cunning, felfish, and much given to illicit trading; the magistrates partial and corrupt; which is owing to the democratical constitution of the province, whereby they are totally dependent on the populace. The number of the inhabitants is about 59,678, and their commerce is much the fame as the Massachusets, except that they build few or no fhips, fhips, and export very little falt-fifh: but their horfes are much coveted by the other colonies. They have very few manufactures; fperma-ceti candles is one of the chief. Their paper currency is as bad as that of New-Hampfhire.

The value of British and India commodities annually imported into New-England was nearly 395,000 l. and the exports to Britain, were estimated at 370,500 l. The trade of this country was greater formerly; but two capital branches, viz. ship-building and the fishery, have been upon the decline for fome years.

OF NEW-YORK.

THE celebrated Hudfon (of whom we have before fpoken in our account of New-Britain) was the first European who explored this part of North-America; which he did in the year 1608, difcovering and giving his own name to the great river that still bears it. By his means the Dutch got footing here; and though their plantations were deftroyed 192

deftroyed by Sir Samuel Argal about the year 1613, they, neverthelefs, not only kept possession of the country, but also re-established their settlements, built a city which they called New-Amfterdam, and became a flourishing colony under a Governor. King James 1. complained of this ulurpation to the States, who difclaimed the proceeding, afcribing it folely to their Weft-India Company: whereupon James, calling the country New-Albion, fent Edward Langdon thither as Governor, to whom the intruders thought proper to fubmit; but during the civil wars of Charles I, which afforded them too favourable an opportunity, they refumed their own authority, and afterwards overran the neighbouring territories, fince called New-Jerfey and Counties on Delaware, but then occupied by the Swedes, who were constrained to submit to them in 1655. To these territories the Dutch then gave the common appellation of Nova Belgia, or the New Netherlands, and maintained their authority in them till the year 1664, when a war beginning to break out, they were furrendered rendered to a force fent against them by Charles II. On this event the capital city of New-Amsterdam exchanged its name for New-York, in honour of James, Duke of York, to whom Charles had granted the New Netherlands: and these countries were confirmed to the English by the peace of Breda, in 1667, in lieu of Surinam, which the Dutch had taken from them.

NEW-YORK.

In the war of 1672, the Dutch recovered the New Netherlands; but, being reftored by the peace concluded at Westminster in Feb. 1673-4, they were again granted to the Duke of York, who difposed of New-Jerfey, but retained the country of New-York to himfelf, which confequently vefted in the Crown on his acceffion to the fovereignty, and fubfequent abdication. It has fince continued a royal province, the King appointing the Governor and Council, and the people chufing a Houfe of Reprefentatives, which they do every feven years. In them is vested the entire legislative power, each branch having a negative : their laws, however, must have the King's approbation, T tion, and not be repugnant to those of Great-Britain.

194 NEW-YORK.

Many Negroes are imported into this province. The whole number of the people is fupposed to be 250,000, great part of whom are descended from the Dutch, who remained in it after its fubjection to the English; but here are also numbers of different origins, as may be inferred from the following account of the places of worship in the city of New-York: 3 for perfons of the church of England; 3 for Dutch Prefbyterians; 2 for English Presbyterians; I for Scotch Presbyterians; 2 for German Calvinists ;---the Lutherans, French refugees, Quakers, Baptifts, Moravians, Methodifts, and Jews, have I each fect. In the whole province there are fix churches, the religion of the church of England being established throughout. A fine college has lately been erected, and is called King's college.

Most of the inhabitants of New-York are traders; and if it be possible to give fo mixed a people any general characteristics, theirs are industry and frugality : nevertheles, NEW-YORK.

195

lefs, the genteeler fort amuse themselves with balls and fleighing expeditions in the winter, and form fishing parties, and make excursions into the country, in fummer. On East river, near New-York, are several houses, pleasantly situated : here, once or twice a week, thirty or forty ladies and gentlemen have turtle-feasts, fishing and amufing themfelves till the evening ; when they return home in Italian chaises,* a gentleman and lady in each. About three miles from New-York there is a bridge, over which, as they pass, it is a part of the etiquette for the gentleman to falute his chargèe; whence the bridge is called Kiffingbridge. Long-Island teems with the villas and country-houses of the wealthy.

The exports of this colony, which are confiderable, confift chiefly of grain, flour, pork, fkins, furs, pig-iron, lumber, and I 2 flaves.

* The carriage most in fashion in this and other parts of America, except Virginia, where coaches, drawn by fix horses, are chiefly used.

$196 \qquad N E W - J E R S E Y.$

flaves. Those to Great-Britain only, before the present diffurbances, were faid to amount annually to 526,000l. and the imports from the same were not less than 531,000l. Their most material manufactures are, a small quantity of cloth, some linen, hats, shoes, and other wearing-apparel; glas, wampum, * refined sugars, and rum: they also build some ships. The difference of exchange between currency and bills is from 70 to 80 per cent.

OF NEW-JERSEY.

THE first European settlers in this tract of North-America were Swedes, but on their formal furrender of it to the Dutch in 1655, the latter called it, together with New-

* The money of the Indians. It is made of the clam-fhel', which is like a thick oyfter-fhell, and purple and white within. When clipped to a proper fize, it is drilled, and afterwards ground finooth, and polinhed. As a very finall part of the fhell is purple, the wampum of this colour is by much the most valuable. NEW-JERSEY. 197

New-York, the New Netherlands. We have already related, in our account of New-York, that the territories fo named were reduced by Charles II. in 1664. On this event, the Duke of York, (afterwards James II.) to whom the fame had been previoufly granted, disposed of that portion we are now treating of, to Lord Berkeley of Stratton and Sir George Carteret, from which last gentleman it received the name of New-Jerley, his family eftate lying in the island of Jersey. The New Netherlands were ratified to the English by the treaty of Breda in 1667, and Lord Berkeley affigned his fhare in New-Jerfey over to others; and thefe new proprietors had agreed upon a partition with Sir George, when the Dutch, in 1673, recovered the country: however, it being reftored to the English in Feb. 1673-4; fresh grants passed, first from the King to the Duke of York, and afterwards from him to the former proprietors; whereupon New-Jerfey was divided into two portions, denominated East and West Jersey, Sir George possessing I3. the

198 NEW-JERSEY.

the former. Both diffricts in time devolved into many hands, and various diffentions and diffurbances fprung up : neverthelefs, the proprietors, though not without temporary interruptions, maintained their authority till the year 1703; when, it having been judged by them expedient to furrender their right of governing to Queen Anne, the two proprietary became united into one royal government; the Governor and Council being nominated by the Crown, and the Reprefentatives by the people. Each branch has a negative. The General Affemblies are held at Perth-Amboy and Burlington alternately, at the latter of which places the Governor generally refides.

There is no eftablished religion in this province; but the Society have fix mission naries here; and, amidst the different perfuasions, the church of England gains profelytes daily. Here are 22 churches, 57 English and Scotch Presbyterian meetinghouses, 22 Dutch, 39 Quakers, 22 Baptists, PENNSYLVANIA. 199 tifts, 7 Lutheran, 1 Moravian, 1 Separatifts, and 1 Rogereens meeting-house.

The New-Jerfey-men, are truly gentlemen farmers, living upon their effates; and are good-natured, hofpitable, and of a liberal turn of mind. There are fuppoled to be 130,000 fouls in this province, (Negroes included, of whom there is a greater or lefs number in all the colonies.)

New-Jerfey, though efteemed the garden of North-America, has no foreign trade, the inhabitants felling its productions to the merchants of Philadelphia and New-York, of whom they take European articles in return. Their paper is at about 70 per cent. difcount, but in very good repute.

OF PENNSYLVANIA.

ADMIRAL Sir William Penn, in confideration of his national fervices, and (as fome fay) of a debt due to him from the Crown, obtained a promife of this country from Charles II. but lived not to fee it ful-I 4 filled.

filled. After some time, his son, William Penn, the famous Quaker, finding his fpiritual brethren harraffed in every part of England on account of their religion, ftrenuoufly applied to Court for the grant promifed to his father ; which, with many folicitations, he obtained in 1681, and purchafed the country of the Indians. The flip of land now called the Three Lower Counties on Delaware was not included in the above grant, but purchased by Mr. Penn of James, Duke of York; and the county of Bedford, lying Westward of the mountains on the Ohio, was bought of the Indians known by the name of the Six Nations no longer ago than the year 1768, and fettled in 1771.

On being granted, the country received the name of Pennfylvania, in honour of the proprietor, whofe excellent character and plan for forming his colony drew after him not only great numbers of Quakers, but alfo many other perfons of different religious perfuafions, infomuch that upwards of 2000 accompanied him on his first going over;

over; and, whether for the fake of religion or commercial advantages, people afterwards continued to flock to him, as well from other nations as England : for civil and religious liberty, in the most liberal fense, was the great foundation of this wife man's inflitutions; and Christians, without exception, were allowed to fhare in the government,---which is proprietary, and confifts of'a Governor, appointed, with the King's approbation, by the proprietor, and a Houfe of Reprefentatives chosen by the people. The Three Lower Counties. viz. Newcaftle, Suffex, and Kent, have a diffinct Affembly and government; for, though the fame Governor prefides over both, the members of the Houfe of Reprefentatives are different, and are elected folely. by these three counties.

Pennfylvania, including the Delaware Counties, is supposed to contain 350,000. 'fouls, of various nations indeed, but with fewer Negroes among them than might be expected. They are not fo hospitable to ftrangers as the generality of the other colonies .

nies; but they are frugal, industrious, and the most enterprizing of any. The women are gay, very handfome, and much more accomplished than the men. Dancing is here a favourite amusement in winter; and, when show is upon the ground, another usual diversion is to make fleighing-parties, or to go upon it in fledges. In the summer, parties of pleasure are also formed for recreation in the country, or upon the Schuilkill. *

No particular religion is eftablished in this province; all sects that believe in God are tolerated: but a fifth part of the inhabitants

* A fociety of 16 ladies and the fame number of gentlemen, of the beft families in the province, meet once a fortnight upon the banks of the Schuilkill, where they have erected a very pleafant room, to dine and drink tea in. A number of pleafant walks are about it; and fome wild and rugged rocks, the river, and neighbouring groves, confpire to form a fcene at once romantic and beautifully picturefque. The ladies drefs in a neat and fimple uniform. Boats and fifthing-tackle are at hand; and the company delight themfelves either with going upon the water, fifthing, walking, dancing, finging, &c. &c. as is most agreeable to them.

bitants are Quakers. Twelve clergymen are maintained here by the Society for propagating the Gofpel: fome of them are itinerant miffionaries. In the city of Philadelphia there are two churches, one Swedifh, and one Romifh chapel, three Quakers meeting-houfes, two Prefbyterian, one Lutheran, one Dutch Calvinift, one Anabaptift, and one Moravian meeting-houfe.

Before the prefent commotions, the people built annually 25 veffels, and exported provisions of all kinds, lumber, hemp, flax, flax-feed, iron, furs, and deer-fkins, to the annual amount of 705,5001. and the value of their imports from Britain was about 611,000l. . The difference of exchange between bills and the currency of this province is about 75 per cent. The manufactures. are numerous and good : better hats are: made here than in Europe; some Irish set. tlers make good linen; and Germantown thread flockings are highly admired :. confiderable also are the manufactures of cordage, linfeed-oil, ftarch, myrtle-wax, fpermaceti candles, soap, earthen ware, &c. &c.

204 MARYLAND.

OF MARYLAND.

RELIGION of one fort or other appears to have been a main fpring of English colonizing in America: New-England, it has already been shewn, owes its establishment to the Brownists and the Puritans, and Pennfylvania to the Quakers; that of Maryland originated from the Roman Catholics. These people being generally difliked towards the close of the reign of Charles I. George Calvert, Lord Baltimore, obtained the promife of a grant of this country as an afylum for them; but he dying before the patent was fully made out, it was finished in the behalf of his fon, Cecilius, Lord Baltimore, in 1632. Accordingly, the year following, about 200 Papifts (most of them of reputable families) embarked to take poffession of this new territory, to which was given the name of Maryland, in honour of Henrietta-Maria, King Charles's Queen. They purchased the the lands of the Indians; and, it is faid, that, in the first two years, Lord Baltimore expended 40,000 l. in transporting people over thither, and furnishing the colony with ftores and provisions. Oliver Cromwell deprived Lord Baltimore of his rights, and appointed a new Governor in his room. At the Reftoration, Charles, Lord Baltimore, fon to Cecilius, obtained a confirmation of the grant, and next year fent over his fon Charles as Governor, on whom both the title and eftate afterwards devolved, and by whole wife regulations the colony flourifhed and increafed exceedingly. In the teign of James II. it was again in agitation to deprive the Baltimore family of their rights; but the meafure was prevented by that Monarch's own troubles. It fo far took place, however, at the Revolution, as that they were divefted of the power of governing, on account of their being Roman Catholics; but after the family profeffed the Protestant Religion, they were restored to their former authority.

The

206 MARYLAND.

The late Lord Baltimore, who died in 1771, bequeathed his property in Maryland, in tail male, to Henry Harford, Esq; a minor.

A Governor, and Council of 12 perfons, under and nominated by the Proprietor (whofe power is next to regal,) together with a Houfe of reprefentatives elected by the people, conflitute the government of this province at prefent. The Proprietor claims a negative upon every bill, exclusive of the Governor.

The number of fouls in Maryland is effimated at 320,000. The effablished religion is that of the church of England, to the support of whose clergy every titheable, (that is, every male white, and all Negroes whatsoever, from 16 to 60) in their respective parishes, must contribute 30 lb. of tobacco, whereby some make more than 3001. sterling per annum : nevertheles, there are as many Roman Catholics as Protestants.

Maryland is expressly exempted from taxation by charter. The difference of exchange between between paper-money and currency in this province is about 50 per cent.

207

For particulars refpecting the trade of this country, we refer the reader to the following account of Virginia; wherein he will also be enabled to judge of the people of Maryland by what is faid of the Virginians, there being little or no difference between them in point of character.

OF VIRGINIA.

THE first fettlement which the English made on the other fide of the vast Atlantic was in this part of the American continent, but not without great toil and difficulty. Several attempts were made under the directions of Sir Walter Raleigh, in confequence of letters patent he obtained in 1584, authorifing him " to posses, plant, " and enjoy, for himfelf and fuch perfons " as he should nominate, themfelves, and " their fuccessions, all fuch lands, territories, " &c. as they should difcover, not in the " possession"

" possession of any Christian nation." The country was called Virginia, in compliment to the Virgin-Queen Elizabeth; a name which from thence became common, for a time, to a large portion of North-America: but partly from the extreme difficulty of the undertaking, and partly from the inattention paid to Sir Walter's orders, his endeavours failed; as did fome attempts made, with his permiffion, by other perfons, the adventurers perifhing either through famine, disease, or the ferocity of the Indians. * In another enterprize, which was fet on foot by a Society incorporated by. James I. in 1606, denominated the London Company, (as we have mentioned in our account of New-England,) the people, having been reduced by the fame means to a small, feeble number, had, in despair, actually fet fail on their return to England in 1610, when, meeting Lord Delaware, in the mouth of Chefapeak-bay, with a fquadfoll

* The feveral attempts of Sir Walter Raleigh were made at places now within the limits of North-Carolina.

dron laden with provisions and all necessaries, they were perfuaded to difembark again, and renew their endeavours; which being affisted by the Earl's advice, prudence, and winning behaviour, the colony was at length fettled, and put on a respectable footing. They built the first town the English had in the New World, which they called James town. The colony increased greatly, and, during the fubfequent civil wars in the mother-country, afforded refuge to many of the royalifts; and, under the government of Sir William Berkeley, held out for the King, until reduced rather by stratagem than force. As it was the last to fubmit to the Oliverian voke, fo it was the first to cast it off; and Charles II. was proclaimed King by Sir William in Virginia, even before he was reftored in England. About the year 1676, a young lawyer, named Bacon, taking advantage of fome difcontents which prevailed in the colony, excited the common people to a rebellion, but by his timely natural death tranquillity was foon re-established.

At

At first, the right of jurifdiction over this province was exercifed by a Governor and Council only, appointed by the London Company; but in the year 1620 it was thought adviseable to add a third branch, to be composed of Burgeffes, elected by the people. In 1626, however, great diforders having arifen through mal-administration, Charles I. diffolved the Company, and took the country and government under his own immediate direction, by appointing the Governor and Council himfelf : and this conftitution has been fince preferved, each of the three branches having a negative on all laws propofed, and the King's approbation being neceffary to render them permanent. The Governor is generally a nobleman.

The established religion is that of the church of England; and the clergy, who are under the control of a superintendent fent by the Bishop of London, have each a glebe of two or three acres of land, a house, and a salary fixed by law of 16,000 wt. of tobacco, with an allowance of 1700 more for

VIRGINIA. 211

for shrinkage. Here are but few Difsenters.

The people in Virginia are computed to be 650,000, a great part of whom are Negroes and other flaves .--- We fhall fpeak of them in the words of a Rev. Gentleman, observing, with him, that general characters are always liable to many exceptions.-" The climate and external appearance of the country," fays he, " confpire to make them indolent, eafy, and good-natured ; extremely fond of fociety, and much given to convivial pleafures. In confequence of this, they feldom fnew any spirit of enterprize, or expose themselves willingly to fatigue. Their authority over their flaves renders them vain and imperious, and intire ftrangers to that elegance of fentiment which is fo peculiarly characteristic of refined and polished nations. * Their ignorance of mankind.

* " A gentleman fome years ago travelling upon the frontiers of Virginia, where there are few fettlements, was obliged to take up his quarters one evening at a miferable plantation; where, exclusive of a Negro or two, the family confifted of a man and his wife, mankind, and of learning, exposes them to many errors and prejudices, especially in regard to Indians and Negroes, whom they fcarcely confider as of the human fpecies; to it is almost impossible, in cases of violence, or even murder, committed upon those unhappy people, by any of the planters, to have the delinquents brought to juffice: for either the grand jury refuse to find the bill, or the petit jury bring in their verdict, not guilty. The difplay of a character thus conftituted will naturally be in acts of extravagance, oftentation, and a difregard of æconomy.... The women are, upon the whole, rather handfome, though not to be compared with our fair countrywomen in England. They have but few advantages, and confequently are feldom accomplished; wife, and one daughter about 16 years of age. Being fatigued, he prefently defired them to fhew him where he was to fleep; accordingly they pointed to a bed in a corner of the room where they were fitting. The gentleman was a little embarraffed; but, being exceffively weary, he retired, half undreffed himfelf, and got into bed. After fome time the old gentlewoman came to bed to him, after her the old gentleman, and laft of all the young lady." accomplished; this makes them referved, and unequal to any interesting or refined conversation. They are immoderately fond of dancing. Towards the close of an evening, when the company are pretty well tired with country-dances, it is usual to dance jigs; a practice originally borrowed, I am informed, from the Negroes. * Excepting thefe amufements, and now and then a party of pleafure into the woods to partake of a barbacue, the ladies chiefly fpend their time in fewing and taking care of their families; they feldom read, or endeavour to improve their minds; however, they are in general good housewives; and though they have not, I think, quite fo much tendernefs and fenfibility as the English ladies, yet they make as good wives.

*" These dances are without any method or regularity: a gentleman and lady fland up, and dance about the room, one of them retiring, the other purfuing, then perhaps meeting, in an irregular fantaftical manner. After fome time, another lady gets up, and then the first lady muss fit down, she being, as they term it, cut out: the fecond lady acts the fame part which the first did, till fomebody cuts her out. The gentlemen perform in the fame manner." wives, and as good mothers, as any in the world."

Virginia and Maryland, prior to the civil war now most unhappily prevailing, annually exported into Great-Britain, of tobacco alone, to the value of 768,000l. that is, at 81. each, to the number of 96,000 hogfheads. About 13,500 of these ferved for home confumption, yielding, by a duty of 261. 1s. per hogshead, 351,6751. to the revenue: the remaining 82,500 our merchants exported to the different countries of Europe, and returned their value into the kingdom. The benefits of this fingle branch of commerce, therefore, cannot but ftrike every one, efpecially if the additional national advantages be confidered, viz. that it employed 330 fail of ships, and was a conftant nurfery for near 4000 feamen ! But this was not all : these provinces traded in other articles,-naval ftores, wheat, Indian corn, and iron in pigs and bars, &c. which being added to the tobacco, the whole amount of their exportation to Great-Britain rofe to 1,040,000l. annually, and in return they 215 they took of British manufactures to the value of 865,000l.

214

CAROLINA's.

OF THE CAROLINA'S.

THESE countries, notwithstanding the English right to them derived from Cabot's discovery, were formerly claimed by the Spaniards as part of Florida, which name they would fain have extended to the whole continent of America North of Mexico. The lands, however, lay neglected till the year 1562, when a party of French hugonots attempted a fettlement, built Charles-Fort at Port-Royal, and called the tertitory Carolina, in honour of their King (Charles IX.) Thefe were maffacred by fome Spaniards in 1564, and they, in turn, were deftroyed by other Frenchmen in 1567, who, neverthelefs, dropped their defign of fettling there. At length, in 1663, the Lords Clarendon, Albemarle, Craven, Berkeley, and Afhley (afterwards Shaftefbury,) Sir George Carteret, Sir William Berkeley, and Sir John Colleton, obtained a grant a grant of these territories from Charles II. and, by their united efforts, a colony was founded, and regulated by laws which employed the pen of the great Mr. Locke. The first town built was called Charlestown, after the King's name. The patentees were flyled Lords Proprietors, and had a power of conferring fuch titles of honour as they thought proper, provided they were not the fame as were conferred in England. Accordingly, they appointed one of their own number to hold a preeminence over the Governor, under the denomination of Palatine, and created a few Landgraves and Caciques, to answer to the nobility of England .- But, notwithstanding the extraordinary care taken to form their fystem of government upon a perfect plan, the exercise of it was attended with the utmost confusion and distraction. Impolitic and oppreflive administration in fome of the Governors, contention religious and civil amongst the people, added to their quarrels with the Indians, had, by the year 1728, brought the province to the brink of destruction.

216 CAROLINA's.

CAROLINA'S. 217

deftruction, and the then proprietors fold their interefts therein to the Crown for the confideration of 22,500l. excepting John, Lord Carteret (afterwards Earl of Granville,) who retained his fhare. On this event, the country was divided into the two diftricts of North and South Carolina, and put under two diftinct royal governments, on the fame plan as the others under the King's immediate authority; and harmony being eftablished, both amongst the people, and with the Indians, fuccess and prosperity have fince crowned their proceedings.—The eftablished religion is that of the church of England.

The Carolinians live in much the fame eafy and luxurious manner as the Virginians. The planters are remarkably hofpitable towards ftrangers; and perfons who fall into diffrefs through bad fuccefs or misfortune fcarce ever fail of being relieved by their liberality: fo that beggary is almost unknown in these parts of the world.

There

218 NORTH-CAROLINA.

There are supposed to be 300,000 fouls in NORTH-CAROLINA, amongit whom are great numbers of Negroes and other flaves.-The taxables in 1773 were computed to amount to 64,000: the number of Negroes and Mulattoes about 10,000.-----Exchange with Great-Britain 1751. for 1001. sterling. Legal interest 6 per cent. per ann. Bills returned protefted fubjected the drawers, &c. to 15 per cent. re-exchange, and 10 per cent. interest.-The commerce of this country appears to have been neglected very much, on a comparison with that of South-Carolina .- Its exports to Great-Britain, before the prefent troubles, fell short of 100,000l. per ann. and its imports scarce rofe to more than 20,000l. Some trade. however, was carried on with the Weft-Indies

In the year 1770, the number of white inhabitants in Charles-town, SOUT H-CAROLINA, was 5030;—the number of Negro and other flaves, 6276; free Negroes, Mulattoes, &c. 24. Exclusive of the above in Charles-town, the Negro and other SOUTH-CAROLINA. 219 other flaves amounted to 75,452; free Negroes, &c. 125. Great numbers have been fince imported; and the whole number of Negroes, Mulattoes, &c. now in the province, is fuppofed to be 120,000. The total number of fouls is estimated by the Congress at 225,000.

The trade of South-Carolina has had a furprifing increase. In the year 1734, the annual value of the exports was calculated at little more than 100,000l. sterling : for fome years past they have amounted to half a million sterling. Those to Great-Britain only (confifting of native commodities, for which the reader is referred to the Table fubjoined), previous to the prefent ruinous interruption, were reckoned at 395,000l. and the imports in return from hence at 365,000l. The remainder goes chiefly to the West-Indies. Again, the number of vessels cleared out in Charles-town, in 1734, was 209; in 1736, 217; in 1772, 431; and in 1773, 507. - The exchange with Great-Britain was 7001. currency for 1001. sterling ;---with Boston, 541l. 138. 4d. for K 2 1001.

100l. lawful money;-with New-York, 400l. for 100l. New-York currency ;---with Philadelphia, 433l. 6s. 8d. for 100l. Pennfylvania currency ;---with Jamaica and Barbadoes, 500l. for 100l. currency of each of the faid iflands ;-with Antigua, St. Chriftopher, Grenada, &c. 400l. for 100l. currency of each of the faid islands .- Bills of exchange on Great-Britain, New-York, and Philadelphia, were usually drawn at 30 days fight : they were feldom drawn on any of the other provinces, or any of the West-India islands. When returned protested, the drawers, &c. were fubjected to 15 per cent, re-exchange, and 8 per cent intereft. The fums neceffary for defraying the annual expences of government are raifed by a poll-tax on flaves and free Negroes, a tax on land, value of town-lots and buildings, monies at interest or arising from annuities, flock in trade, and the profits of all faculties and professions, the clergy excepted, factorage and employment, and handicrafttrades ;---which is called the general tax. In the law passed in 1768, to raise the sum of 105,773l. 9s. 6d. the proportions were as follow, being what are generally obferved, viz. flaves and free Negroes the head, 12s. 6d.—lands the 100 acres, 12s. 6d. town-lots and buildings, 6s. 3d. on every 100l. value :—monies at intereft, 6s. 3d. the 100l.—annuities, 25s. on every 100l.—flock in trade, profits of faculties and profeffions, &c. 6s. 3d. on every 100l. The general tax collected in 1769 was 146,199l. 1s. 5d. and the laft collected, viz. in 1774, was 102, FPIL 13. FId.

SOUTH-CAROLINA. 221

The annual expences of government in 1767 amounted to 151,3171. 98. 3d. and in 1768 to 104,4401. 198. 3d. The flipends of the effablished clergy, parochial charges, &c. amounting to about 18,0001. per ann. are not included in the above sums, being charged to the general duty fund. The falary of the Chief-Justice, Affistant-Judges, and Attorney-General, now make an addition of 15,4001. per annum to the expences of government;

In 1772, the produce of the feveral country-duties was 97,804l. 14s. 6d. but this was a larger fum than they had produced for fome years preceding : the in-K 3 creafe crease arole from the great number of Negroes imported in that year.

The amount of the poor-tax raifed in Charles-town in 1769 was 7000l. the next year 8000l. and in the two fucceeding years 9000l. each year. The poor-tax is raifed in the fame manner as the general tax.

OF GEORGIA.

THIS tract was originally included in the grant of Carolina to the Lords Proprietors, but was re-united to the Crown by a purchase confirmed by act of Parliament in 1728, as before related. In 1732, feveral public-fpirited noblemen and gentlemen, moved with the diffres of the poor, and meditating their relief, by employing fuch as were willing to labour in forming a new settlement in America, raised a confiderable fubscription, and obtained a charter from George II. for fettling a certain portion of land (then a part of South-Carolina, but unoccupied) in America. It was called Georgia, from the name of his Majefty; and 10,000l. was added by Government to the GEORGIA.

the fubscription, for the promotion of the undertaking. The grantees were flyed Truftees for establishing the colony of Georgia. The first embarkation confisted of 116 perfons, of various occupations, under the conduct of General Oglethorpe; and, as more money was fubfcribed, others went over afterwards. By the year 1752 the colony had increased to upwards of 1000 perfons : when, from fome hardfhips they fuffered under its proprietary government, diffentions of all forts prevailed. which threatened the ruin of the fettlement : the Trustees, therefore, furrendered their charter to the Crown; whereupon a patent passed the great feal to invest the King and his fucceffors with all the properties, powers, and privileges, before granted to the body politic; and under the new (royal) government all grievances were redreffed.

The progrefs of the trade of Georgia, fince the above event, will appear from the following account of its exports during 23 years.

Year.

223

224	Ģ	E	0	R	G	F	A:
Year.	Veffels cleared.	Sterl. V of Expo		Ke	a r. .	Veffe cleare		terl. Value f Exports.
1750	8	£.20	04,	176	2	57		27,021
17,5 L	11			176		92		7,551
1752	17	48	41	176	4	115	5	5,025
1753	23			176		148	7	3,426
1 754	42			176		154	8	F,228
1755	52	15,7				154	6	7,092
1756	42	16,7				186	9	2,284
1757	44	15,6				181	8	6,480
1758	21			177		186		9,383
1759	48	12,6				185	10	6,387
1760	37	20,8	52	177	2,	217	12	1,677
1761.	45	15,8	7,0	•				,

Of the exports in 1772, about 20,000l. was from Sunbury, and the reft from Savannah.

The number of white inhabitants is very uncertain. The number of Negro and other flaves (who were not allowed to be kept under the proprietary government) is supposed to be 14,000; that of free Negroes, Mulattoes, &c. very inconsiderable.

The fum granted in 1773, to defray the expences of government for the three preceding years, was 51711. 155. $10d_{\overline{x}}$; to raife, which, every 100 acres of land, and every 18th flave, was taxed 2s. 6d.—goods imported, imported, 7s. 6d. per cent.—which are the principal articles: other fmaller articles were taxed in proportion.

Exchange with Great-Britain, 1081. currency for 1001. fterling. Bills returned protefted fubjected the drawers, &c. to 15 per cent. re-exchange, and 8 per cent. intereft.

OF FLORIDA.

THE Spaniards were the first Europeans who got footing in this country, and marked their entrance into it (as was their cuftom in America) with violence and flaughter, under the command of Ferdinand Soto, about the year 1514. According to their own hiftorians, there was in his army a large greyhound, called Brutus, whofe allowance was equal to that of an archer; for he did greater execution among the Indians than ten foldiers. At length, however, he was shot by the infidels, and his death caused a mourning throughout the army of the Christians. The territory, thus over-run, continued in the poffession of the spoilers, without:

226 EAST-FLORIDA.

without their making further fettlements therein than feemed fufficient to exclude other nations, till the conclusion of the last war, in 1763, when they were obliged to cede it to the English. By the King's proclamation of the 7th of October, in the fame year, it was divided into two colonies or governments, under the names of East and Weft Florida; and it is further specified, in the fame proclamation, that " as foon as the state and circumstances of the faid colonies will admit thereof," their refpective Governors " shall fummon and " call General Affemblies within the faid " governments, in fuch manner and form "as is used and directed in those colo-"nies and provinces in America which " are under the King's immediate govern-" ment."

EAST-FLORIDA being a peninfula in a great meafure furrounded by the fea, the air is confequently cooler, and the rains more frequent, than in the neighbouring parts of the continent. It contains 12 millions of acres, which is about the fame quantity WEST-FLORIDA.

227

tity as Ireland; has many lakes and rivers abounding with fish; and is worn, at its fouthern extremity, by the action of the waters, into a number of islands, keys, banks, rocks, &c. As yet here are but a small number of planters; but their commerce is in a very promifing flate: in 1770, they received into their ports 50 floops, and fitted out 52; and in 1772, they had exported 30,000 wt. of excellent indigo. Before the acquifition of this country, the English had no fettlement which produced in any confiderable quantity the barilla or kali plant, whereof are made pearl-ashes, that enter fo much into the manufactures of glass, foap, &c. The Governor is affifted by a Council of nine perfons, but no Affembly has yet been called.

WEST-FLORIDA is feparated from the former division by the river Apalachicola: it is a long tract of upwards of 80 leagues, inclosing feveral French fettlements ceded with the reft to Great-Britain at the last peace, the people of which build a few scale of the people of which build a few scale of the people of of the fhort; the indigo is more brilliant than that of St. Domingo. 'The inhabitants, in general, amount to about 6000; but they increafe rapidly, especially towards the Miffiffippi, where the planters are attracted by the beauty of the country, the purity of the air, and the neighbourhood of the Spaniards, who are now in possession of Louisiana. Their trade, at prefent, feems confined to furs, which they get from the Indians in vaft abundance, and wood for building, dying, &c. In 1768, their exports amounted to 10.405l. the year following, to 10.806l. and, in 1770, 30 veffels entered their ports, and they fitted out 41. The affairs of this colony are at prefent administered by a Governor and 12 Counfellors. It was divided into two counties; but this law was repealed by the King:-and country-duties were imposed, which were likewise repealed.

228 WEST-FLORIDA.

The charges of both governments are defrayed by the mother-country, with whom exchange is at par. Protefted bills fubject the drawers to 151. per cent. re-exchange, and 8 per cent. intereft.

A DESCRIP-