Our friend the colonel has a very red nose. He accounts for this by asserting that he was stung by bees in his early youth, "strikes me there must have been some S's with those B's."

He—The great trouble with Gabley is that he talks too much.

She—That's strange. When he has been with me he scarcely said a word.

He—Oh, he is too much of a gentleman to interrupt.

Butcher—What can I sell you to-day?

Servant Girl—I've come to order some roast beef for to-morrow, but let there be lots of bones.

Butcher—Be plenty of bones? How's that?

Servant Girl—You see, the money I gets for the bones is my parkisit.

He—Oh, Miss Jones, I have so much to say to you, and the pianist has just finished!

She—I am dying to hear—let's encore him.

A woman in Philadelphia broke her arm in trying to scratch her back. She was no relation to the woman who broke her jaw in trying to hold her tongue.

Jackson—Any sleeping apartments in the club you belong to?

Snarleigh—Not one, except the reading room.

She (reading)—Fashion novelties. Large checks will be much in demand for winter costumes.

He—Large cheques! My goodness, Ethel, there's not much novelty in that!

A man courting a young woman was interrogated by her father as to his occupation.

I am a paperhanger on a large scale, he replied.

He married the girl, and turned out a bill-poster.

Quericus—How did such a place ever get the reputation of being a great health resort?

Cynicus—Two or three prominent men died there.

Miss Passe—How did you like my new photograph?

Little Girl—It's perfectly lovely. Did you really sit for it yourself?

Amiable Mother—Here, Tommy, is some nice castor-oil with orange in it.

Doctor—Now, remember, don't give it all to Tommy; leave some for me.

Tommy (who has had some before)—Doctor's a nice man, ma; give it all to doctor.

When you see a girl pasting a scrap-book full of cooking recipes out of the newspapers, you know pretty well that some young man is in a position to be congratulated; and yet, when you think of the recipes, you feel rather sorry for him, too.

What did the doctor do for your complaint
Told me the name of it.

A man going home at a late hour in the night saw that the occupants of a house standing flush with the street had left a window up, and he decided to warn them, and perhaps prevent a burglary. Putting his head into the window, he called out—Halloa! good peop—

That was all he said. A whole pailful of water struck him in the face, and, as he staggered back, a woman shrieked out—Didn't I tell you what you would get if you wasn't home by nine o'clock.

Old Lady (to niece who is portionless)—How is it, my dear, that you have never kindled a flame in the bosom of a man.

Niece—The reason, dear aunt, is that I am not a good match.

So they discovered him in spite of the fact that he was disguised as a woman? said one detective to another.

Yes.

How did they find out that he was a man?

They got him into a game of cards, and he always knew what trumps were.

A health journal says you ought to take three-quarters of an hour for dinner. It is well also, perhaps, to add a few vegetables and a piece of meat.

Our friend the colonel has a very red nose. He accounts for this by asserting that he was stung by bees in his early youth. Ahem! says the captious critic, strikes me there must have been some S's with those B's.

From a new novel: Adolar was bewitched. never had the Countess seemed to him so beautiful as at this moment, when, in her dumb grief, she hid her face,
