Reader,

Hat thou hast no sooner enjoy'd this long expetted Edition, thou can'st not justly blame either the Author or my felf: Not my felf, for I. could not Publish the Book before I had it, nor the Author, because many unexpected Occasions drove off his Mind to other Matters, and interrupted him in his present Design, infomuch that he was (natch't away by Death before he had quite finished it. But the' the learned World may very well lament the los of so able and ingenious a Writer, yet as to this prefent Point, if that may mitigate thy Sorrow, in all likelihood this Book had not seen the light so soon, if he had lived; fo many emergent Occafions giving him new Interruptions, and offering him new Temptations to further delay: Indeed it had been defirable that it might have had the Polishing of his last Hand, as the Peruser of his Papers signifies in his last Adver-

To the Reader.

Advertisement; but to compensate this loss, the said Peruser, a Friend as well to his Design as to his Perfon, has digested those Materials he left into that order and distinctness, and has so tied things together, and supplied them in his Advertisements, that to the judicious Reader nothing can seem wanting that may ferve the ends of his intended Treatife; not to intimate what confiderable things are added more than it is likely had been if he had finished it himself, for befides the Advertisements of the careful Peruser of his Papers, and that notable late Story of the Swedish Witches, Translated out of the German into the English Tongue, there is also added a short Treatife of the true and genuine notion of a Spirit, taken out of Dr. More's Enchiridion Metaphyficum, to entertain these that are more curious Searchers into the nature of these things; the number also of the Stories are much encreased above what was design'd by Mr. Glanvil, tho' none admitted but fuch as feemed very well attested and highly credible, to his above faid Friend, and such as rightly understood, contain nothing but what is confonant to right Reafon and found Philosophy, as I have heard him earnestly avouch, tho' it had been too tedious to have explained all; and it may be more grateful to the Reader to be left to exercife his ownWit and Ingeny upon the reft. Thefe are . the advantages this Edition of Mr. Glanvil's Demon. of Tedworth, and his Confiderations about Witchcraft have above any Edition before, the' the last of them was so bought up that there was not a Copy of them to be had in all London and Cambridge, but the Perufer of his Papers was fain to break his own to ferve the Preßwith. If these Intimations may move thy Appetite petite to the reading so pleasant and useful a Treatises and yet I can add one thing more touching the Story of the Damon of Tedworth which is very confiderable, it is not for me indeed to take notice of that meanneß of Spirit in the Exploders of Apparitions and Witches, which very strangely betray'd it self in the decrying of that well attested Narrative touching the stirs in Mr. Mompesson's Heuse, where altho' they that came to be Spectators of the Marvelous things there done by fome invisible Agents, had all the Liberty imaginable, even to the ripping of the Bolfters open to fearch and try if they could discover any natural Caufe and cunning Artifice whereby Juch strange feats were done; and numbers that had free access from Day to Day, were abundantly fatisfy'd of the reallity of the thing; That the House was haunted and disturb'd by Damons or Spirits; yet some few Years after the stirs had ceased, the truth of this Story lying fo uneafie in the Minds of the difgusters of such things; they rais'd a Report, when none of them, no not the molt diligent and curious could detect any trick or fraud themselves in the matter, That both Mr.Glanvil himfelf, who published the Narrative, and Mr. Mompel. ion, in whofe Houfe thefe wonderful things happen'd, had confect the whole Matter to be a Cheat and Imposture, and they were so diligent in spreading abroad this grofs untruth, that it went current in all the three Kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland, an egregious discovery of what kind of Spirit this sort of Men are, which as I (aid, though it be not for me to take notice of, yet I will not stick to signifie it being both for mine own Interest and the Interest of Truth, that those Reports raised touching Mr. Glanvila R vil, by his Preface to the fecond part of the Book; that touching Mr. Mompellon, by two Letters of his own, the one to Mr. Glanvil, the other to my felf, which are subjoined to the said Preface: Which thing alone may justly be deemed to add a very great weight to the value, as of that Story so of this prefent Edition; but I will not upon pretence of excising thy Appetite keep thee from the satisfying it by an overlong Preface, which yet, if it may seem to be defective in any thing, the Doctor's Letter (where amongst other things you shall meet with that famous and well attested Story of the Apparition of Anne Walker's Ghost to the Miller) will, I hope, make an abundant supply. I shall add nothing more my felf, but that I am

Dr. H. M. his Letter with the Postfcript to Mr. J. G. minding him of the great Expedience and ulefulness of his new intended Edition of the Damon of Tedworth, and briefly representing to him the marvellous weakness and gullerie of Mr. Web-Iter's display of Witchcraft.

SIR,

WHen I was at London, I called on your Bookfeller, to know in what forwardness this new intended Impression of the Story of the Dæmon of Tedworth was, which will undeceive the World touching that fame spread abroad, as if Mr. Mompeffon and your felf had acknowledged the business to have been a meer Trick or Imposture. But the Story with your ingenious Confiderations about Witchcraft, being fo often printed already, he faid, it behoved him to take care how he ventur'd on a new Impression, unless he had some new Matter of that kind to add, which might make this new Edition the more certainly failable; and therefore he expected the iffue of that noifed Story of the Spectre at Exeter, feen to oft for the difcovering of a Murther committed fome thirty Years ago. But the event of this business, as to juridical process, not answering expectation, he was difcouraged from making use of it, many things being reported to him from thence in favour to the party most concern-But I told him a Story of one Mrs. Britton her appearing ed. to her Maid after her Death, very well attefted, though nor of fuch a Tragical kind as that of Exeter, which he thought considerable. But of Discoveries of Murther I never met with any Story more plain and unexceptionable than that in Mr. John Webster his display of supposed Witchcraft . The Book indeed it felf, I confess, is but a weak and impertinent piece but that Story weighty and convincing, and fuch as himfelf (though otherwise an affected Caviller against almost all Stories of Witchcraft, Apparitions) is constrained to assent to, as you shall see from his own Confession. I shall for your better ease, or because you haply may not have the Book, transcribe it our out of the Writer himfelf, though it be fomething, Chap. 16. Page 298 about the Year of Lord 1632. (as near as I can remember, having loft my Notes and the Copy of the Letters to Serjeant Hutton, but am lure that I do most perfectly remember the Substance of the Story.) Near unto Chefter in the Street, there lived one Walker a Yeoman of good Eftate, and a Widower, who had a young Woman to his Kinfwoman that kept his House, who was by the Neighbours sufpected to be with Child, and was towards the dark of the Evening one Night fent away with one Mark Sharp, who was a Collier, or one that digged Coals under ground, and one that had been born in Blakeburn Hundred in Lancashire; and so the was not heard of a long time, and no noife or little was made about it. In the Winter time after, one James Graham, or Grime, for so in that Country they call them) being a Miller, and living about 2 Miles from the place where Walker lived, was one Night a-Ione very late in the Mill grinding Corn, and about 12 or 1 a Clock at Night, he came down the Stairs from having been putting Corn in the Hopper, the Mill doors being thut, there ftood a Woman upon the midft of the Floor with her Hair about her Head hanging down and all Bloody, with five large Wounds on her Head. He being much affrighted and amaz'd, began to blefs himfelf, and at last asked her who she was, and what she wanted ? To which the faid, I am the Spirit of fuch a Woman, who lived with Walker, and being got with Child by him, he promifed to fend me to a private place, where I fould be well lookt to till I was brought in Bed and well again, and then I should come again and keep his House. And accordingly, faid the Apparition, I was one Night late fent away with one Mark Sharp, who upon a Moor, naming a place that the Miller knew, flew me with a Pick, fuch as Men dig Coals withal, and gave me thefe five Wounds, and after threw my Body into a Coal-pit hard by, and hid the Pick under a Bank; and hisShoes and Stockings being bloody, he endeavoured to walk ; 'em bus feeing the Blood would not forth, he hid them there. And the Apparition further told the Miller, that he must be the Man to reveal it, or elfe that the must still appear and haunt him. The Miller returned home very fad and heavy, but fpoke not one Word of what he had feen, but eschewed as much as he could to flay in the Mill within Night without Company, thinking thereby to escape the seeing again of that frightful Apparition. But notwithstanding, one Night when it began to be dark, the Apparition met him again, and feemed very fierce and cruel.and threatned him, that if he did not reveal the Murder the would continually purfue and haunt him; yet for all this, he ftill concealed cealed it until St. Thomas Eve before Christmas, when being foon after Sun fet walking in his Garden, the appeared again, and then fo threatned him, and affrighted him, that he faithfully promifed to reveal it next Morning. In the Morning he went to a Magistrate and made the whole Matter known with all the Circumstances; and diligent fearch being made, the Body was found in a Coal-pit with five Wounds in the Head, and the Pick and Shoes and Stockings yet bloody, in every Circumfance as the Apparition had related unto the Miller; whereupon Walker and Mark Sharp were both Apprehended, but would confess nothing. At the Affizes following, I think it was at Durham, they were Arraigned, found Guilty, Condemn'd and Executed; but I could never hear they confest the Fact. There were fome that reported the Apparition did appear to the Judge, or the Fore-man of the Jury, who was alive in Chefter in the Street about ten Years ago, as I have been credibly inform'd, but of that I know no certainty : There are many Perfons yet alive that can remember this strange Murder and the difcovery of it; for it was, and fometimes yet is, as much discoursed of in the North Country as any thing that almost hath ever been heard of, and the relation Printed, tho' now not to be gotten. I relate this with the greater confidence (though I may fail in fome of the Circumstances) because I faw and read the Letter that was fent to Serjeant Hutton, who then lived at Goldsbrugh in York shire, from the Judge before whom Walker and Mark Sharp were tried, and by whom they were Condemn'd, and had a Copy of it until about the Year 1658, when I had it and many other Books and Papers taken from me; and this I confess to be one of the most convincing Stories, being of undoubted verity, that ever I read, heard or knew of, and carrieth with it the most evident force to make the most incredulous Spirit to be fatisfied that there are really fometimes such things as Apparitions; thus far he. This Story is fo confiderable that I make mention of it in my Scholia on my Immortality of the Soul, in my Volumen Philisophicum, Tom. 2. which I accquainting a Friend of mine with, a Prudent, Intelligent Perlon, Dr. 7. D. he of his own accord offered me, it being a thing of fuch confequence, to fend to a Friend of his in the North for greater affurance of the truth of the Narrative, which motion I willingly embracing he did accordingly. The Answer to this Letter from his Friend Mr. Shepherdson, is this, I have done what I can to inform my felf of the Passage of Sharp and Walker; there are very few Men that I could meet that were then Men, or at the Tryal, faving these two in the inclosed Bз inclosed Paper, both Men at that time, and both at the Trial; and for Mr, Lumley, he lived next door to Walker, and what he hath given under his Hand, can depose if there were occasion. The other Gentleman writ his Attestation with his own Hand : but I being not there got not his name to it. I could have fent you twenty Hands that could have faid thus much and more by Hearfay, but I thought these most proper that could speak from their own Eyes and Ears. 'Thus far Mr. Shepherdson, the Doctor's discreet and faithful Inrelligencer; now for Mr. Lumly of Lumley, being an ancient Gentleman, and at the Trial of Walker and Sharp upon the Murder of Anne Walker, faith, That he doth very well remember that the faid Anne was Servant to Walker, and that the was fuppoled to be with Child, but would not disclose by whom; but being removed to her Aunts in the fame Town called Dame Caire, told her Aunt that he that got her with Child would take care both for her and it, and bid her not trouble her felf. After some time she had been at her Aunts, it was observed that Sharp came to Lumley one Night, being a sworn Brother of the faid Walker's; and they two that Night called her forth from her Aunts House, which Night the was Murder'd; about fourteen Days after the Murder, there appeared to one Graime a Fuller, at his Mill, fix Miles from Lumley, the likenels of a Woman with her Hair about her Head, and the appearance of five Wounds in her Head, as the faid Graime gave it in Evidence, that that Appearance bid him go to a Juflice of Peace, and relate to him, how that Walker and Sharp had Murthered her in fuch a place as the was Murthered; but he fearing to disclose a thing of that nature against a Person of Credit as Walker was, would not have done it; upon which the faid Graime did go to a Justice of Peace and related the whole Matter. Whereupon the Inflice of Peace granted Warrants against Walker and Sharp, and committed them to a Prifon; but they found Bail to appear at the next Affizes, at which they came to their Tryal, and upon Evidence of the Circumftances, with that of Graime of the Appearance, they were both found Guilty and Executed.

William Lumley.

The other Testimony is of Mr. James Smart of the City of Durham, who saith, that the Trial of Sharp and Walker was in the Month of August, 1631. before Judge Davenport. One Mr. Fairbair gave it in Evidence upon Oath, that he saw the likenels of of a Child stand upon Walker's Shoulders during the time of , the Trial, at which time the Judge was very much troubled, and gave Sentence that Night the Trial was, which was a thing never used in Durham before nor after; out of which two Teftimonies feveral things may be corrected or fupplied in Mr. Webster's Story, though it be evident enough that in the main they agree; for that is but a small disagreement as to the Years, when Mr. Webster fays about the Year of our Lord 1632, and Mr. Smart 1631. But unless at Durham they have Affizes but once in the Year, I understand not fo well how Sharp and Walker stould be apprehended some little while after St. Thomas day, as Mr. Webster has it, and be tried the next Affizes at Durham, and yet that be in August according to Mr. Smarts Teftimony. Out of Mr. Lumley's Teftimony the Christian Name of the young Woman is fupplied, as also the name of the Town near Chefter in the Street, namely Lumley; the Circumstances also of Walker's fending away his Kinfwoman with Mark Sharp, are fupplied out of Mr. Lumley's Narrative, and the time rectified, by telling it was about fourteen Days till the Spectre appeared after the Murther, when as Mr. Webster makes it a long time.

Two Errours also more are corrected in Mr. Webster's Narration by Mr. Lamley's Teftimony; the diftance of the Miller from Lumley, where Walker dwelt, which was fix Miles, not two Miles as Mr. Webster has it; and also that it was not a Mill to grind Corn in, but a Fullers Mill, the Apparition Night by Night pulling the Cloths off Graimes's Bed, omitted in Mr. Webster's Story, may be supplied out of Mr. Lumley's, and Mr. Smart's Teltimony puts it out of Controversie that the Trial was at Durham, and before Judge Davenport, which is ommitted by Mr. Webster. And whereas Mr. Webster fays, there were fome that reported that the Apparision did appear to the Judge, or the Fore-man of the Jury; but of that he knows no This Confession of his, as it is a fign he would not certainty. write any thing in this Story of which he was not certain for the main, fo here is a very feafonable fupply for this out of Mr. Smart, who affirms that he heard one Mr. Fairbair give Evidence upon Oath, that he faw the likeness of a Child stand upon Walker's Shoulders during the time of the Trial: It is likely this Mr. Fairbair might be the Fore-man of the Jury, and in that the Judge was fo very much troubled, that himfelf alfo might see the same Apparition as Webster fays report went, though the miltake in Mr. Hebster is, that it was the Apparition of a Woman; but this of the Child was very fit and appofite, placed oa on his Shoulders as one that was justly loaded or charged with that crime of getting his Kinfwoman with Child, as well as of comploring with Sharp to Murder her.

The Letter also which he mentions writ from the Judge, before whom the Trial was heard, to Serjeant Hutton, it is plain out of Mr. Smart's Testimony that it was from Judge Davenport; which in all likelihood was a very full and punctual Narrative of the whole busines, and enabled Mr. Webster in some confiderable things, to be more particular than Mr. Lumley; but the agreement is so exact for the main, that there is no doubt to be made of the truth of the Apparition. But that this forfooth, must not be the Soul of Anne Walker, but her Astral Spirit, this is but a fantastick Conceit of Webster and his Paracelfians, which I have sufficiently shewn the Folly of in the Scholia on my Immortality of the Soul, Volum. Philos. Tom, 2. Page 3⁸4.

This Story of Anne Walker I think you will do well to put amongft your Additions in the new Impression of your Damon of Tedworth, it being so excellently well attessed, and so unexceptionably in every respect; and to hasten as fast as you can that Impression, to undeceive the half witted World, who so much exult and triumph in the extinguishing the belief of that Narration, as if the crying down the Truth of that of the Damon of Tedworth, were indeed the very flaying of the Devil, and that they may now with more gaiety and fecurity than ever sing in a loud Note; that mad drunken Catch Hay bo! the Devil is Dead, &c.

Which wild Song, though it may feem a piece of Levity to mention; yet believe me, the Application thereof bears a fober and weighty intimation along with it, viz. that thefe fort of People are very horribly afraid there fould be any Spirit, leaft there hould be a Devil & an account after this Life; & therefore they are impatient of any thing that implies it, that they may with a more full lwing and with all fecurity from an after reckoning, indulge their own Lufts and Humours in this ; and I know by long experience that nothing rouzes them fo out of that dull Lethargy of Atheifm and Sadducifin, as Narrations of this kind, for the being of a thick and gross Spirit, the most fubrile and folid deductions of Reafon does little execution upon them ; but this fort of fenfible Experiments cuts them and ftings them very fore, and fo ftartles them that by a lefs confiderable Story by far than this of the Drummer of Tedworth, or of Anne Walker, a Doctor of Phylick, cryed erved out prefently, If this be true, I have been in a wrong Box all this time, and must begin my account anew.

And I remember an old Gentleman in the Country of my Acquaintance, an excellent Juftice of Peace, and a piece of a Mathematician, but what kind of a Philosopher he was you may understand from a Rhime of his own making, which he commended to me at my taking Horse in his Yard, which Rhime is this,

Ens is nothing till Senfe finds out : Senfe ends in nothing, fo naught goes about.

Which Rhime of his was fo rapturous to himfelf, that the reciting of the fecond Verfe, the old Mar min'd himfelf about upon his Toe as nimbly as one may observe a dry Leaf whisk'd round in the corner of an Orchard-walk by fome little Whirlwind. With this Philosopher I have had many Discourses concerning the Immortality of the Soul and its diffinction : when I have run him quite down by Reafon, he would but laugh at me and fay, this is Logick. H. calling me by my Chriftian name, to which I reply'd, this is Reason, Father L. (for I used and some others to call him) but it seems you are for the new Lights and immediate Infpiration, which I confess he was as little for as for the other; but I faid fo only in way of Drollery to him in those times, but truth is, nothing but palpable experience would move him, and being a bold Man and fearing nothing, he told me, he had used all the Magical Ceremonies of Conjuration he could to raife the Devil or a Spirit, and had a most earnest Defire to meet with one, but never could do it. But this he told me, when he did not fo much as think of it, while his Servant was pulling off his Boots in the Hall, fome invisible Hand gave him such a clap upon the back that it made all ring again; fo, thought he, now I am invited to the converse of my Spirit; and therefore so soon as his Boots were off and his Shoes on, out he goes into the Yard and next Field, to find out the Spirit that had given him this Familiar clap on the Back, but found none neither in the Yard nor Field next to it.

But though he did not feel this ftroke, albeit he thought it afterwards (finding nothing came of it) a mere delution; yet not long before his Death it had more force with him than all the Philosophical Arguments I could use to him, though I could wind him and non-plus him as I pleased; but yet all my Arguments, how folid soever, made no Impression upon him; wherefore fore after feveral Reafonings of this nature, whereby I would prove to him the Souls diffinction from the Body and its Immortality, when nothing of fuch fubtile Confiderations did any more execution on his Mind, then fome Lightning is faid to do, though it melts the Sword on the fuzzy confiftency of the Scabard: Well, faid I, Father L, though uone of thefe things move you, I have fomething ftill behind, and what your felf has acknowledged to me to be true, that may do the bufinefs; do you remember the clap on your Back when your Servant was pulling off your Boots in the Hall? Affure your felf, faid I, Father L, that Goblin will be the first that will bid you welcome into the other World. Upon that his Countenance changed most fensibly, and he was more confounded with this rubbing up his Memory than with all the Rational or Tolophical Argumentations that I could produce.

Indeed, if there were any Modefty left in Mankind, the Hiftories of the Bible might abundantly affure Men of the Exiftence of Angels and Spirits; but thefe Wits, as they are taken to be, are fo jealous forfooth, and fo fagacious, that whatever is offered to them by way of eftablifhed Religion, is fulpected for a piece of Politick Circumvention; which is as filly notwithftanding, and childifh, as that Conceit of a Friend of yours when he was a School-Boy in the loweft Form of a Country Grammar School, who could not believe fcarce that there were any fuch Men as Cato and Æfop, Ovid, Virgil and Tully, much lefs that they wrote any fuch Books, but that it was a trick of our Parents to keep us up io many Hours of the Day together, and hinder us from the enjoying our innocent Paftime in the open Air, and the Pleafure of planting little Gardens of Flowers, and of hunting of Butter-flies and Humble-Bees.

Befides, though what is once true never becomes falle, fo that it may be truly faid it was not once true; yet these fhrew'd Wits suspect the truth of things for their Antiquity, and for that very reason think them the less credible: Which is wifely done as of the old Women the Story goes of, who being at Church in the Week before Easter, and hearing the Tragical Description of all the Circumstances of our Saviours Crucificion, was in great forrow at the reciting thereof, and so folicitous about the business, that the came to the Priest after Service with Tears in her Eyes, dropping him a Courts, and asked him how long ago this fad accident happen'd; to whom he answering, about fifteen or fixteen Years ago, the presently begun to be comforted, and faid, Then in Grace of God it may be true. At this pitch of Wit in Children and old Wives is the Reason of our profeffed fed Wit-would-be's of this prefent Age, who will catch at any flight occafion or pretence of mif-believing those things that they cannot endure should be true.

And forafmuch as fuch courfe grain'd Philosophers as those Hobbians and Spinozians, and the reft of the Rable, flight Religion and the Scriptures, becaufe there is fuch express mention of Spirits and Angels in them, things that their dull Souls are fo inclinable to conceit to be imposable; I look upon it as a fpecial piece of Providence, that there are ever and anon fuch fresh Examples of Apparitions and Witchcraft as may rub up and awaken their benum'd and Lethargick Minds into a fufpicion at least, if not assurance that there are other intelligent Beings befides those that are clad in heavy Earth or Clay; in this I fay, methinks the divine Providence does plainly outwit the Powers of the dark Kingdom, permitting wicked Men and Women, and Vagrant Spirits of that Kingdom to make Leagues or Covenants one with another, the Confession of Witches against their own Lives being fo palpable an Evidence, befides the miraculous Feats they play, that there are bad Spirits, which will neceffarily open a door to the belief that there are good ones, and laftly that there is a God.

Wherefore let the fmall Philosophick Sir-Foplings of this prefent Age deride them as much as they will, those that lay out their pains in committing to writing certain well attefted Stories of Witches and Apparitions, do real fervice to true Religion and found Philosophy, and the most effectual and accommodate to the confounding of Infidelity and Atheilm, even in the Judgment of the Atheifts themselves, who are as much afraid of the truth of these Stories as an Ape is of a Whip, and therefore force themselves with might and main to disbelieve them, by reason of the dreadful confequence of them as to themselves. The Wicked fear where no fear is, but God is in the Generation of the Righteous; and he that fears God and has his Faith in Jesus Christ, need not fear how many Devils there be.nor be affraid of himfelf or own his Immortality; and therefore it is nothing but a foul dark Confcience within, or a very grofs and dull conftitution of Blood that makes Men fo averle from these truths.

But however, be they as averle as they will, being this is the most accommodate Medicine for this Disease, their diligence and care of mankind is much to be commended that make it their business to apply it, and are refolv'd, though the pevishnels and perversness of the Patients makes them pull off their Plaister, as they have this excellent one of the Story of the Decemen Damon of Tedworth by decrying it as an Imposture, so acknowledged by both your self and Mr. Mompession, are resolved I say with Meekness and Charity to bind it on again with the addition of new filletting, I mean other Stories sufficiently fresh and very well attested and certain. This worthy defign therefore of yours, I must confess I cannot but highly commend and approve, and therefore with you all good success therein; and so commit you to God, I take leave and reft

Postfcript.

His Letter lying by me fome time before I thought it opportune to convey it, and in the mean while meeting more than once with those that feemed to have fome Opinion of Mr. Webster's Criticisms and Interpretations of Scripture, as if he had quitted himfelf fo well there, that no Proof thence can hereafter be expected of the Being of a Witch, which is the fcope that he earneftly aims at; and I reflecting upon that Passage in my Letter, which does not flick to condemn Webster's whole Book for a weak and impertinent piece, prefently thought fit, (that you might not think that Cenfure over-raft or unjust) it being an endlefs task to shew all the weaknefs and impertinencies of his Difcourfe, briefly by way of Poltfcript, to hint the weaknels and impertinency of this part which is counted the Master-piece of the Work, that thereby you may perceive that my Judgment has not been at all rafh touching the whole.

And in order to this, we are fift to take notice what is the real fcope of his Book; which if you perule, you shall certainly find to be this. That the Parties ordinarily deemed Witches and Wizzards, are only Knaves and Queans, to use his Phrase, and arrant Cheats, or deep Melancholists; but have no more to do with any Evil Spirit or Devil, or the Devil with them, than he has with other Sinners or wicked Men, or they with the Devil. And Secondly, we are impartially to define what is the true Notion of a Witch or Wizzard, which is necessary for the detecting of Webster's Impertinencies.

As for the Words Witch and VVizzard, from the Notation of them, they fignifie no more than a wife Man, or a wife Woman, In the Word VVizzard, it is plain at the very first fight. And I think the most plain and least operoie deduction of the name Witch, is from Wit, whose derived Adjective might be Wittigh or Wittich, and by contraction afterwards Witch; as the Noun Wit is from the Verb to weet, which

So that a Witch, thus far, is no more which is, to know. than a knowing Woman; which answers exactly to the Las tine word Saga, according to that of Festus, Saga dista anue que multa sciunt. Thus in general: But Use questionless had appropriated the Word to fuch a kind of skill and knowledge. as was out of the common road, or extraordinary. Nor did this peculiarity imply in it any unlawfulnefs. But there was after a further reftriction and most proper of all, and in which along now adays the words Witch and Wizzard are used. And that is, for one that has the knowledge or skill of doing or telling things in an extraordinary way, and that in vertue of either an express or implicite fociation or confederacy with some Evil This is a true and adequate definition of a Witch or Spirit. Wizzard, which to whomfoever it belongs, is fuch, & vice ver/à. But to prove or defend, that there neither are, nor ever were any fuch, is, as I faid, the main fcope of Webster's Book: In order to which, he endeavours in his fixth and eighth Chap: ters to evacuate all the Teftimonies of Scripture; which how weakly and impertinently he has done, I shall now shew with all poffible brevity and perfpicuity.

The Words that he descants upon, are Deut. 18, 10, 11. There shall not be found among you any one that useth divination. or an observer of times, or an Enchanter, or a Witch, or a Charmer. or a confulter with familiar Spirits, or a Wizzard, or a Necromancer. The first Word or Name in the Hebrew is glad [Kolem Kelamim] a Diviner. Here becaufe DDP [Kalam] fometimes has an indifferent fence, and fignifies to divine by natural Knowledge or humane Prudence or Sagacity; therefore nothing of such a Witch as is imagined to make a visible League with the Devil, or to have her Body fuck'd by him, or have carnal copulation with him, or is really turned into a Cat. Hare, Wolf or Dog, can be deduced from this Word. A goodly inference indeed, and hugely to the purpole, as is apparent from the foregoing definition. But though that cannot be deduced, yet in that, this Divination that is here forbidden. is plainly declared abominable and execrable, as it is v. 12. it is manifest that fuch a Divination is understood that really is for which cannot well be conceived to be, unlefs it imply either an express or implicite inveaglement with some evil invisible Powers who affitt any kind of those Divinations that may be comprehended under this general Term. So that this is plainly one Name of Witchcraft according to the genuine definition thereof. And the very Words of Saul to the Witch of Endorg are, קסומי נאלי באוב that is to fay, Divine to me I pray thee by by thy familiar Spirit. Which is more than by natural Knowledge or humane Sagacity.

The next Word is [Megnonen] which though our English Translation renders (from [Gnon] Tempus) an observer of Times; (which should rather be a Declarer of the feafonablenefs of the time, or unfeafonablenefs of the time, or unfeafonablenefs as to fuccefs; a thing which is enquired of alfo from Witches) yet the usual fense rendred by the learned in the Language, is Prastigiator, an imposer on the Sight, Sapientes prisci, says Buxtorf, a "y [Gnajin, Oculus] deduxerunt & aver [Megnonen] effe eum dixerunt, qui tenet & præstringit oculos, ut falfum pro vero videant. Lo another Word that fignifies a Witch or a Wizzard, which has its name properly from impofing on the fight, and making the By-ftander believe he fees Forms or Transformations of things he fees not. As when Anne Bodenham transform'd her felf before Anne Styles in the shape of a great Cat ; Anne Styles her fight was to imposed upon, that the thing to her feem'd to be done, though her Eyes were only deluded. But fuch a delution certainly cannot be performed without confederacy with evil Spirits. For to think the Word fignifies Prastigiator in that fense we translate in English, Jugglor, or an Hocus-Pocus, is so fond a conceit, that no Man of any depth of Wit can endure it. As if a merry Juggler that plays tricks of Legerdemain at a Fair or Market, were fuch an abomination to either the God of Ifrael or to his Lawgiver Moses; or as if an Hocus-Pocus were to wife a weight as to be confulted as an Oracle : For it is faid v. 14. For the Nations which thou Inalt poffes, they confult Dy [Megnonenim] What, do they confult Jugglers and Hocus-Pocuffes? No certainly they confur Witches or Wizzards, and Diviners, as Anne Styles did Anne Boamham. Wherefore here is evidently a fecond name of a Witch.

The third Word in the Text, 1. UTID [Menackefb] which our English Translation renders an Bichanter. And with Mr. VVebster's leave, (who infulteth fo over their supposed ignorance) I think they have translated it vey learnedly and judiciousity: For Charming and Enchanting, as VVebster himself acknowledges, and the Words intimate, wing all one, the Word UCID [Menachefb] here, may ver, well fignifie Enchanters or Charmers; but such property as'all Serpents by their charming, from UCID [Nachafb] which fignifies a Serpent, from whence comes UCID [Nichefb] to Kil Serpents or make away with them. For a Verb in Pibel, functimes (efpecially when it is formed from a Noun) has a contrary fignification.

Thus from WW radix is WW radices evulge, from, fication. TOT Cinis IUT removit Cineres, from NUT peccavit NUT expiavit à peccato; and so lastly from UTI Serpens, is made Un liberavit à serpentibus, nempe occidendo vel fugando per incantationem. And therefore there feems to have been a great deal of skill and depth of Judgment in our English Translators that rendred UDIO [Menachefb] an Enchanter, especially when that of Augur or Southfayer, which the Septuagint call 'Olavi-Comprov (there being to many harmles kinds of it) might feem less fuitable with this black Lift : For there is no fuch abomi-nation in adventuring to tell, when the wild Geefe fly high in great Companies and cackle much, that hard weather is at Hand. But to rid Serpents by a Charm is above the power of Nature; and therefore an indication of one that has the affiftance of fome invisible Spirit to help him in this exploit, as it happens in feveral others; and therefore this is another name of one that is really a Witch.

The fourth Word is, JUD [Mecaffeph] which our English Translators render, a Witch; for which I have no quarrel with them, unless they should so understand it that it must exclude others from being fo in that fense I have defin'd, which is impossible they should. But this, as the foregoing, is but another term of the fame thing; that is, of a Witch in general, but fo called here from the Preftigious imposing on the fight of Beholders. Buxtorf, tells us, that Aben Ezra defines thole to be [Mecassephim] qui mutant & cransformant res naturales ad aspectum oculi. Not as Jugglers and Hocus-Pocusses. as Webster would ridiculously infinuate, but so as I understood the thing in the fecond name : For the fare but feveral names of a Witch, who may have feveral store Properties than one Whence it is no wonder that Translators Name intimates. render not them always alike But fo many names are reckoned up here in this claufe of the Law of Moses, that, as in our Common-Law, the fence may be more fure, and leave no room to evafion. And that hee this name is not from any tricks of Legerdemain as in common Jugglers that delude the fight of the People at a Marker r Fair, but that it is the name of fuch as raile Magical Specres to deceive Mens fight, and fo are most certainly Witches is plain from Exod. 22. 18. Thou (halt not fuffer Inecassephab] that is, aVVitch to live. Which would be a Lav of extreme leverity, or rather cruelty, against a poor Hocus. 'ocus for his tricks of Legerdemain.

The Fifth Name is חובר חבר (Chobber Chebber] which our English Translators render Charmer, which is the fame with Enchanter. Webster upon this name is very tedious and flat, a many Words, and fmall weight in them. I shall dispatch the meaning briefly thus : This חיבר חבר [Chobher Chebher] that is to fay, Socians Societatem is another name of a Witch, fo called specially either from the consociating together Serpents by a Charm, which has made Men ulually turn it (from the example of the Septuagints iradow iranulu) a Charmer, or an Enchanter, or else from the fociety or compact of the Witch with fome evil Spirits; which Webster acknowledges to have been the Opinion of two very learned Men, Martin Luther and Perkins; and I will add a third, Aben Ezra (as Martinius hath noted who gives this Reafon of the Word היבר [Chobber] an Enchanter, which fignifies Socians or Jungens, viz. Quod malignos Spiritus fibi affociat. And certainly one may charm long enough, even till his Heart akes, e're he make one Serpent alfemble rear him, unlefs helpt by this confederacy of Spirits that drive them to the Charmer. He keeps a pudder with the fixth Verse of the fifty eight Plalm to no purpose; whenas from the Hebrew, חברים מחכם אשר לא ישמע לקיל מלחשים; if you repeat לקול צעומא להיש before אוומא you may with eafe and exactnels render it thus; That hears not the voice of muttering Charmers, no not the voice of a confederate Wizzard or Charmer that is skilful. But feeing Charms, unless with them that are very shallow and fillily credulous, can have no fuch effects of themfelves, there is all the reafon in the World (according as the very Word intimates, and as Aben Ezra has declared) to afcribe the effect to the affiftance, confederacy and co-operation of evil Spirits, and fo היבר חברים [Chobher Chabharim] or The Chobber Chebber] will plainly fignifie a Witch or Wizzard according to the true definition of them. Bur for J. VVebster's rendring this Verse p. 119. thus, Que non audiet vocem mussitantium incantationes docti Incantantis, (which he faith is doubtless the most genuine rendring of the place) let any skillful man apply it to the Hebrew Text, and he will prefently find it Grammatical Nonfense. If that had been the ienle, it should have been הובר מחכם.

The Sixth Word is, בויאל אוב [Shoel Obh] which our Englifh Translation renders, a Consulter with familiar Spirits; but the Septuagint 'Emaseinulo. Which therefore must needs fignifie him that has this familiar Spirit : And therefore 218 7810 [Shoel Obh] I conceive, (confidering the reft of the Words are to to be understood) is to be understood of the Witch of Wizzard

Wizzard himself that asks Counfel of his Familiar, and does by vertue of him give Answers unto others. The reason of the name of IN [Obb] 'tis likely was taken first from that Spirit that was in the Body of the Party, and fwelled it to a protuberancy like the fide of a Bottle. But after, without any relation to that Circumstance, OBH fignifies as much as Pytho: as Pytho allo, though at first it took its name from the Pythii Vates, fignifies no more than Spiritum Divinationis, in general, a Spirit that tells hidden things, or things to come. And OBH and Pytho also agree in this, that they both fignifie either the divinatory Spirit it felf, or the Party that has that Spirit. But here in [Shoel Obh] it being rendred by the Septuagint 'Emaselundo, OBH is neceffarily underftood of the Spirit it felf, as Pytho is Alts 16. 16. if you read wredun me-Swra, which Ifaac Cafaubon; but if no Swr G, it may be understood either way. Of this wreujue mi Swy, it is recorded in that place, That Paul being grieved, turned and faid to that Spirit. I command thee, in the name of Jefus Chrift, to come out of her, and he came out -at the fame hour; which fignifies as plainly as any thing can be fignified, that this Pytho or Spirit of Divination, that this OBH was in her : For nothing can come out of the Sack that was not in the Sack, as the Spanifly Proverb has it; nor could this Pytho come out of her unless it was a Spirit diftinct from her; wherefore I am amazed at the profane impudence of 3. VVebster, that makes this Pytho in the Maid there mentioned, nothing but a wicked humour of cheating and couzening Divination : And adds, that this Spirit was no more caft out of that Maid than the feven Devils out of Mary Magdalen, which he would have understood only of her feveral Vices; which foolish Familistical conceit he puts upon Beza as well as Adie. Wherein as he is most unjust to Beza, fo he is most grosly impious and blasphemous against the Spirit of Christ in St. Paul and St. Luke, who makes them both fuch Fools as to believe that there was a Spirit or divining Devil in the Maid, when according to him there is no fuch thing. Can any thing be more frantick or ridiculous than this passage of St. Paul if there was no Spirit or Devil in the Damsel? But what will this profane Shuffler stick to do in a dear regard to his beloved Hags, of whom he is for Advocate, and refolved Patron, right or wrong?

But to proceed, that IN [Obb] fignifies the Spirit it felf that Divines, not only he that has it, is manifest from Levit. 20. 27. Vir autem five mulier cùm fuerit [Cham Ale in eis . Pythe Pytho. And I Sam. 28. 8. Divina qualo mihi [24] per Pythonem. In the Septuagint it is is to Equescipile, that is, by that Spirit that fometimes goes into the Body of the Party, and thence gives answers; but here it only fignifies a Familiar Spirit. And laftly, בעלת איב [Bagnalath Obh] I Sam. 28. 7. Que habit Pythonem ; there OBH must needs fignifie the Spirit it felf. of which the of Endor was the owner or poffeffor; that is to fay, it was her Familiar Spirit. But fee what brazen and ftupid Impudence will do here, בעלת איב [Bagnalath Obh] with VVebster must not fignifie one that has a Familiar Spirit but the Miftress of the Bottle. Who but the Master of the Bottle, or rather of whom the Bottle had become Mafter, and by guzling had made his Wits exceffively muddy and frothy; could ever fumble upon fuch a foolifh Interpretation? But becaule X'J [Obb] in one place of the Scripture fignifies a Bottle, it must fignifie so here, and it must be the Instrument forfooth, out of which this cheating Quean of Endor docs whisper, peep, or chirp like a Chicken coming out of the Shell, p. 129. 165. And does the not, I befeech you, put her Nib alig into it fometimes, as into a Reed, as it is faid of that Bird, and cries like a Butterbump? certainly he might as well have Interpreted Bagnalath Obb] of the great Tun of Hydelberg, that Tom. Coriat takes fuch special notice of, as of the Bottle.

And truly fo far as I fee, it must be some fuch huge Tun at length, rather than the Bottle, that is, fuch a spacious Tub as he in his deviceful Imagination fancies Manaffes to have built; a unevelov forlooth, or Oracular Ædifice for cheating Rogues and Queans to play their couzening tricks in; from that place 2 Chron. 33. 6. Et fecit Pythonem. Now, fays he, how could Manasses make a Familiar Spirit? or make one that had a Familiar Spirit? Therefore he made a Bottle a Tun, or a large Tub, a marleior, or Oracular Edifice for cheaties Rogues or Queans to play their couzening tricks in. very wifely argued, and out of the very depth of his ignorare of the Hebrew Tongue, whenas if he had looked into Pxtorf's Dictionary he might have understood that Tout fightes not only fecit but also paravit, comparavit, acquisivit, ,agni fecit, none of which Words imply the making of OBHn his fenfe, but the only appointing them to be got, and count iancing them. For in Webster's sense he did not make " "idegnoni] neither, that is Wizzards, and yet Manaffes is fal to make them both alike. יעשהאיב וירעני Et fecit Pyth em & Magos. So plain is it that I'm [Obb] fignifies Pytho, nd that adequately in the fame fenfe that Pytho does, either Familiar Spirit, or him him that has that Spirit of Divination. But in IX FUT [Bagnalath Obb] it neceffarily fignifies the Familiar Spirit it felf, which affifted the Witch of Endor; whereby it is manifest the is rightly called a Witch. As for his Stories of counterfeir Ventriloquifts, (and who knows but fome of his counterfeir Ventriloquifts may prove true ones) that is but the threadbare Sophiftry of Sadducces and Atheifts to elude the faith of all true Stories by those that are of counterfeirs or feigned.

The feventh Word is ודעוני [Fidegnoni] which our English Translators render a Wizzard. And Webster is fo kind as to allow them to have translated this Word aright. Wizzards then Webster will allow, that is to fay, He-Witches, but not She Witches. How tender the Man is of that Sex! But the Word invites him to it 'Jidegnoni] coming from feire, and answering exactly to Wizzard or Wile-man. And does not Witch from Wit and weet fignifie as well a Wife-moman, as I noted above ? And as to the Senfe of those Words from whence they are derived, there is no hurt herein : and therefore if that were all, 'Ifidegnoni] had not been in this black Lift. Wherefore it is here underftood in that more reftrict and worfe fenfe : So as we underftand usually now a' days Witch and Wizzard, fuch wife Men and Women whole skill is from the confederacy of evil Spirits, and therefore are real Wizzards and Witches. In what a bad fenfe iFidegnoni] is underftood, we may learn from Levit. 20. 27. A man alfo or woman that hath a familiar Spirit, or that is a Wizzard [Jidegnoni] [hall be put to death, they [hall stone them with stones, &c."

The laft Word is TICUT [Dorefo Hammethim] which our Translators rightly render Necromancers ; that is, those that either upon their own account,o or defired by others, do raife the Ghofts of the deceased to confult with; which is a more Particular term than I'M JJI [Bagnal Obh:] But he that is Bagal Obh, may be also Dorefh Hammethim, a Necromancer, as appears in the Witch of Endor. Here Webster by man [Hammbim] the Dead, would understand dead Statues ; but let him, the can, any where shew in all the Scripture where the Word המתוק [Hammethim] is used of what was not once alive. He inks he hits the Nail on the head in that place of Ifaias, 8. 19, and when they fhall fay unto you, Seek unto (האבריה, that is, the with of Endor was) them that have Failiar Spirits, and to Wizzards that peep and that mutter ; (the Hebre has it המהגים and המצים; that that is, ipeak with querulous murmurant or muffitant voice, when they either conjutup the Spirit, or give responses. If this be to to peep like a Chicken, Isaiah himself peept like a Chicken, 38. 14.) [hould not a People feek unto their God? for the living. to the dead? Where Hammethim is to far from fignifying dead Statues, that it must needs be understood of the Ghofts of dead Men, as here in Deuteronomy. None but one that had either ftupidly or wilfully forgot the Story of Samuel's being being raifed by that It [Bagnalath Obb] the Witch of Endor, could ever have the face to affirm that [Hammethim] here in Ilaiah, is to be underftood of dead Statues, when Wizzards or Nicromancers were fo immediately mentioned before, especially not VVebster, who acknowledges that I's [Shoel Obb] fignifies a Necromancer in this Deuteronomical Lift of abominable names. And therefore, forfooth, would have it a Tautology that Dorefb Hammethim thould fignifie fo too. But I fay it is no Tautologie, this laft term being more express and restrict. And besides, this enumeration is not intended as an accurate Logical division of Witches or Witchcraft into fo many diftinct kinds, but a reciting of feveral names of that ill Trade, though though they will interfere one with another, and have no fignifications fo precifely diftinct. But as I faid before, this fuller recounting of them is made that the prohibition in this form might be the furer fence against the Sin. And now therefore what will 3. VVebster get by this, if Doresh Hammethim will not fignifie a Witch of Endor, when it must necessarily fignifie a Necromancer, which is as much against his Tooth as the other? Nay indeed this Necromancer is also a Witch or Wizzard, according to the definition produced above.

The reft of the Chapter being so inconfiderable, and I having been to long already upon it, I thall pais to the next, after I have defired you to take notice how weak and childifh or wild and impudent Mr. VVebster has been in the Interpretation of Scripture hitherto, in the belief of his fage Dames, to fence off the reproach of being termed Witches; whenceas there is scarce one Word in this place of Deuteronomy that does not imply a Witch or Wizzard, according to the real difinition thereof. And truly he feems himself to be conscious of the weakness of his own performance, when after all this ado, the fum at last amounts but to this, That there are no names in all the old Teftament that fignifies fuch a Witch that destroy Men or Beasts, that make a visible compact with the Devil, or on whole Body he fucketh, or with whom he hath carnal Copulation, or that is really changed into a Cat, Hare, Dog, or fuch like. And to shew it amounts Ĉ a amounts to no more than fo, was the task we undertook in this Chapter.

But affure your felf, if you perule his Book carefully, you fhall plainly find that the main drift thereof is to prove, as I above noted, that there is no luch Witch as with whom the Devil has any thing more to do than with any other finner, which, notwithftanding this Conclution of his a little before recited, comes infinitely fhort of: and therefore this fixth Chapter, confitting of about 30 Pages in Folio, is a meer piece of impertinency. And there will be Witches for all this, whether these particulars be noted in them or no; For it was fufficient for Moles to Name those ill founding terms in general, which imply a Witch according to that general notion I have above delivered; which if it be prohibited, namely the having any thing to do with evil Spirits, their being fuckt by them, or their having any luftful or venerous Tranfactions with them is much more prohibited.

But for some of these particularities also they may seem to be in some manner hinted at in some of the Words, especially as they are rendred fometimes by skilful Interpreters: for Mecaffeph] is Translated by Vatablus, and the vulgar Latin Maleficus, by the Septuagint papuanos, that is Veneficus; which Word fignifies mifchievoufly enough both to Men and Beaft. Befides that Mecaffeph carries along with it the fignification of Transformation allo; and haply this may be the diffence betwixt JUD [Mecaffeph] and U'UD [Megnonen] that the former uses prestigious Transformations to some great mifchief, as where Olaus Magnus tells of those that have Transformed themselves into Wolves to Mens thinking, and have presently fallen upon worrying of Sheep. Others transformed in their Aftral Spirit, into various shapes, get into Houses and do mischief to Men and Children, as I remember Remigius reports. And therefore it is less wonder that that that Law of Moles is against the [Mecassephab] fuch a Witch as this is, Thou fhalt not fuffer a VVitch to live ; this may be a more peculiar fignification of that Word. And now for making a compact with the Devil, how naturally does that name [Chobher Chebher] fignifie that feat alfo? But for fucking and Copulation, though rightly stated it may be true, yet I confess there is nothing hinted towards that so far as I see, as indeed it was neither necessary that the other should be. But these are the very dregs, the Fax Magorum & Sagarum that fink in those abominations, against which a sufficient Bar is put already by this prohibition in general by fo many names. And the other is fo filthy, bale and nafty, that the Heaven a Maria Prima menmention thereof was neither fit for the facred Style of Mofes Law nor for the Ears of the People.

In my paffing to the eight Chapter I will only take notice by the way of the shameles impudence of 3. VVebster, who in favour to his beloved Hags, that they may be never thought to do any thing by the affiftance of the Devil, makes the victory of Moles, with whom the mighty hand of God was, or of Chrift, (who was the Angel that appeared first to Moles in the Bufh, and conducted the Children of Ifrael out of Egypt to the promifed Land) to be the victory only over fo many Hocus-pocuffes, fo many Juglers that were as it feems, old and excellent at the tricks of Legerdemain; which is the bafeft derogation to the glory of that Victory, and the vileft reproach against the God of Ifrael, and the Person of Moles, that either the malicious wit of any Devil can invent, or the dulnels of any funk Soul can fumble upon. Affuredly there was a real conflict here betwixt the Kingdom of Light and the Kingdom of Darknels and the evil Spirits thereof, which affifted the [Hartummim] the Magicians of Egypt; who before that name is named, that no Man may miltake, are called D'9'000 [Mecassaphim] fuch kind of Magicians as can exhibit to the fight manifold preftigious transformations through diabolical affiftance, and are rendred Malificia by good Interpreters, as I noted above; that is, they were Wizzards or He-witches. The felf fame Word being used in that fevere Law of Moles, Thou shalt not suffer a Witch to live. Are nor these Magicians then examples plain enough that there are Witches; that is to fay, fuch wretched Wights as do strange miraculous things by the affiftance or confociation of the evil Spirits ?

O no, fays Mr. VVebster, these are only [Chacamim] VVise-men and great Naturalist, who all what they did, they did בלהטיהכים, by their bright glittering Laminac, for fo forfooth must fignifie. But what neceffity thereof that hould fignifie Lamina ? there is only the pretence of that one place, Gen. 3. 24. הרב , where it is only that fignifies the Lamina, and that of a long form, fcarce ulual in those magical Lamine with Signatures celestial upon them, which 3. Webster would be at; but your fignifies meerly Flamma; fo that בלרטוחם by this account muft fignifie by their flames, if it be from und ardere, flammare : And therefore Buxtorfius (judicioully places the Word under abfcondit, obvolvit, reading not בלהטיהם but בלאטיהם, which is as much as to fay, occultis fuis rationibus Magicis, which is C 4 briefly briefly rendred in English; by their Enchantments; which agrees, marvelloufly well with D'DOD [Mecassephim] which is as' much as Profigiatores Magici, or fuch as do strange wonderous things in an hidden way, by the help of evil Spirits. But that the Egyptian Magicians should do those things that are there recorded of them in Exodus, by vertue of any Lamels or Plates of Metals with certain Sculptures or Figures under such or such a Constellation, is a thing so fortish and foolish, that no Man that is not himself bewitched by some old Hag or Hobgobling, can ever take Sanctuary here to fave himself or his old Dames from being in a capacity, from this History in Exodus, of being accounted Witches. For if there may be He-witches, that is, Magicians, such as these of Egypt were, I leave 3. Websser to scratch his Head to find out any reason why there may not be She-witches also.

And indeed that of the Witch of Endor, to pass at length to the eighth Chapter, is as plain a Proof thereof as can be defired by any Man whole Mind is not blinded with Prejudices. But here J. Webster, not impertinently, I confels, for the general, (abating him the many tedious particular impertinencies that he has clogg'd his Discourse with) betakes himfelf to these two ways, to shew there was nothing of a Witch in all that whole Narration. First, by pretending that all the transaction on the Woman of Endors part was nothing but Collusion and a Cheat, Saul not being in the fame Room with her, or at least seeing nothing if he was. And then in the next place, that Samuel that is faid to appear, could neither be Samuel appearing in his Body out of the Grave, nor in his Soul; nor that it was a Devil that appeared; and therefore it must be fome colluding Knave, fuborned by the Witch. For the discovering the weakness of his former Allegation, we need but to appeal to the Text, which is this, 1 Sam. 28. v. 8.

And Saul faid, I pray thee, divine unto me by the familiar fpirit, and bring me up whom I foall name unto thee, $17 \times 17 \times 10^{-1}$; that is, do the Office of a Divinerefs, or a Wife-woman, I pray thee unto me, $5\times 1 \times 1^{-1}$ [Beobh] by virtue of the familiar fpirit, whose affistance thou hast, not by virtue of the Bottle, as Mr. VVebster would have it. Does he think that Damsfel in the Ast, which is faid to have had $\pi ve \tilde{v} \mu a \pi v \Im w \mathcal{O}$, that is, to have had $\exists N = [Obh]$ carried an Aqua-vitæ-Bottle about with her, hung at her Girdle, whereby the might divine and mutter, chirp, or peep out of it, as a Chicken out of an Egg-shell, or put her Neb into it to cry like a Bittern, or take take a Dram of the Bottle, to make her Wits more quick and divinatory. Who but one who had taken too many Drams of the Bottle, could ever fall into fuch a fond Conceit? Wherefore $\exists M [Obb]$ in this place does not, as indeed no where elfe, fignifie an oracular Bottle or payrior, into which Saul might defire the Woman of Endor to retire into, and himfelf expect answers in the next Room; but fignifies that familiar fpirit by virtue of whole affistance the was conceived to perform all thole wondrous Offices of a Wife-woman. But we proceed to Verfe 11.

Then faid the woman, VV hom floall I bring up unto thee? And he faid, Bring me up Samuel. Surely as yet Saul and the Woman are in the fame Room, being the Woman askt, VV hom floall I bring up unto thee? and he answering, Bring up unto me Samuel, it implies, that Samuel was to brought up that Saul might fee him, and not the Witch only. But we go on, Verle 12.

And when the woman faw Samuel, she cryed with a loud voice; and the woman spake to Saul, Jaying, VVby hast thou deceived me, for thou art Saul? Tho' the Woman might have some suspitions before that it was Saul, yet she now seeing Samuel did appear, and in another kind of way than her Spirits used to do, and in another hue, as it is most likely to holy a Soul did, the prefently cryed out with a loud Voice, (not muttered, chirpt, and peept as a Chicken coming out of the (hell) that now the was fure it was Saul, for the was not fuch a Fool, as to think her Art could call up real Samuel, but that the prefence of Saul was the caufe thereof: And Fofephus writes expresiv, "On geard when to quilarov av-Sea orphuou is Decompenin raporte), is webs This only chonaver, i où, onoiv, o Baonseùs ΣάκλΘ; i.e. The woman (ecing a grave God-like Man, is startled at it, and thus astonished at the Vifion, turned herself to the King, and said, Art not thou King Saul? Verfe 12.

And the King faid noto her, Be not afraid; for what fawest thou? And the woman faid unto Saul, I faw Gods afcending euy of the Earth, The King here affures the Woman, that the was Saul, yet no hurt should come to her, and therefore bids her not be afraid. But she turning her Face to Saul as she ipake to him, and he to her, and so her fight being off from the Object, Saul asked her, VV hat fawest thou? and the in like manner answer'd, I faw Gods, &c, For Gods I suppose, any free Translator in Greek, Latin, and English, would fay, Sauwas, Genios, Spirits. And The Market Angels Angels as well as Gods; and it is likely thefe Wife-women take the Spirits they converfe with to be good Angels, as Ann Bodenham the Witch told a worthy and learned Friend of mine, That thefe Spirits, fuch as the had, were good Spirits, and would do a Man all good Offices all the days of his Life; and 'tis likely this Woman of Endor had the fame Opinion of hers, and therefore we need not wonder that the calls them Difference of Saul. And that more than one Spirit appears at a time, there are repeated Examples in Ann Bodenham's Magical Evocations of them, whole Hiftory I muft confefs, I take to be very true.

The Cale stands therefore thus: The Woman and Saul being in the fame Room, the turning her Face from Saul, mutters to her felf fome Magical Form of Evocation of Spirits; whereupon, they beginning to appear and rife up, feemingly out of the Earth, upon the fight of Samuel's Countenance, the cryed out to Saul, and turning her Face towards him, fpoke to him. Now that Saul hitherto faw nothing, tho' in the fame Room, might be either becaufe the Body of the Woman was interpoled betwixt his Eyes and them, or the Vehicles of those Spirits were not yet attempered to that confpillation that they would ftrike the Eyes of Saul. tho' they did of the Witch. And that fome may fee an Object, others not seeing it, you have an Instance in the Child upon Walker's Shoulders, appearing to Mr. Fairbair, and it may be to the Judge, but invitible to the reft of the Court: and many fuch Examples there are. But I proceed to Verfe 14.

And he faid unto her. What form is he of? and the faid, An old Man cometh up, and is covered with a Mantle. He asks here in the Singular Number, becaufe his Mind was only fixt on Samuel. And the Womans Anfwer is exactly according to what the Spirit appeared to her, when her Eye was upon it, viz. And the Womans Anfwer is exactly actor he was but coming up when the looked upon him, and accordingly deferibes him: For An old Man coming up; for he was but coming up when the looked upon him, and accordingly deferibes him: For Ty there, is a Particle of the prefent Tenfe, and the Woman deferibes Samuel from his Age, Habit, and Motion he was in, while her Eye was upon him. So that the Genuine and Grammatical Senfe in this Anfwer to What form is: he of? is this, an old Man coming up, and the fame covered with a Mantle, this is his Form and Condition I faw him in. Wherefore Saul being fo much concerned herein, either the Woman or he changing ing their Poftures or Standings, or Samuel by this having fufficiently conspillated his Vehicle, and fitted it to Saul's fight also, it follows in the Text And Saul perceived it was Samuel, and he stooped with his Face to the ground and bowed himfelf:

O the impudent Profanenels and Sortifunels of perverle Shufflers and Whifflers! that upon the hearing of this Paffage can have the Face to deny that Saul faw any thing, and meerly because the word [perceived] is used, and not [faw] when the Word [perceived] plainly implies that he faw Samuel, and fomething more, namely, that by his former familiar Converse with him, he was affured it was he. So exquifitely did he appear, and over-comingly to his Senses, that he could not but acknowledge (for so the Hebrew Word VT) fignifies) that it was he, or else why did he stoop with his Face to the very Ground to do him Honour?

No, no, fays 7. Webster, he faw nothing himself, but stood waiting like a drowned Pupper (fee of what a bafe rude Spirit this Squire of Hags is, to use such Language of a Prince in his diffres) in another Room to hear what would be the iffue; for all that he underftood, was from her cunning and lying Relations. That this Gallant of Witches should dare to abuse a Prince thus, and feign him as much foolisher and sottisher in his Intellectuals, as he was taller in Stature than the reft of the People, even by Head and Shoulders, and meerly forfooth, to fecure his old Wives from being fomuch as in a capacity of ever being fulpected for Witches, is a thing extremely coarfe and intolerably fordid. And indeed, upon the confideration of Saul's being faid to Bow himfelf to Samuel, (which plainly implies, that there was there a Samuel that was the Object of his fight, and of the Reverence he made) his own Heart milgives him in this mad Adventure, and he shifts off from thence to a Conceit that it was a confederate Knave, that the Woman of Endor turned out into the Room where Saul was, to Act the part of Samuel, having first put on him her own short Cloak, which the uled with her Maund under her Arm to ride to Fairs or Markets in. To this County-flouch in the Womans Mantle, must King Saul, stooping with his Face to the very Ground, make his profound Obeyfance. What was a Marker-womans Cloak and Samuel's Mantle, which Folephus calls Station iepertulu, a Sacerdotal Habit, so like one another? Or if not, how came this Woman, being fo surpriz'd of a sudden, to provide her self of such a Sacerdotal Habit Habit to cloak her confederate Knave in ? Was Saul as well a blind as a drowned Pupper, that he could not difern fo grofs and bold an Impostor as this? Was it possible that he should not perceive that it was not Samuel, when they came to confer together, as they did? How could that confederate Knave change his own Face into the same Figure, Look, and Mien that Samuel had, which was exactly known to Saul? How could he imitate his Voice thus of a fudden, and they Difcourfed a very confiderable time together?

Befides, Knaves do not use to speak what things are true, but what things are pleafing. And moreover, this Woman of Endor, though a Pythonels, yet the was of a very good nature and benign, which Josephus takes notice of, and extols her mightily for it, and therefore the could take no delight to lay further weight on the oppressed Spirit of distress'dK Saul; which is another fign that this Scene was acted bond fide, and that there was no couzening in it. As also that it is another, that the spoke fo magnificently of what appeared to her, that the law Gods afcending. Could the then poffibly adventure to turn out a Country-flouch with a Maund-womans Cloak to act the part of fo God-like and Divine a Personage as Samuel, who was Osio this ules will as the Woman defcribes him in Fofephus Antiq. Judaic. lib. 7. c: 15. unto all which you may add, That the Scripture it felf, which was written by Inspiration, says exprefly, v. 20. that it was Samuel. And the Son of Sirach, Chap. 46. that Samuel himself prophesyed after his Death, referring to this Story of the Woman of Endor. But for our new Inspired Seers, or Saints, S. Scot, S. Adie, and if you will S. Webster sworn Advocate of the Witches, who thus madly and boldly, against all fense and Reason, against all Antiquity, all Interpreters, and against the inspired Scripture it felf, will have no Samuel in this Scene, but a cunning confederate Knave, whether the inspired Scripture, or these inblown Buffoons, puffed up with nothing but Ignorance, Vanity and ftupid Infidelity, are to be believed, let any one judge.

We come now to his other Allegation, wherein we shall be brief, we having exceeded the measure of a Postscript already. It was neither Samuel's Soul, fays he, joined with his Body, nor his Soul out of his Body, nor the Devil; and therefore it must be fome confederate Knave suborned by that cunning, cheating Quean of Endor. But I briefly answer, it was the Soul of Samuelhimself; and that it is the fruitfulness of the great Ignorance of $\mathcal{F}.VVebster$ in the found Principles of Theophofy and true Divinity, that has enabled him to heap together no lefs than Ten Ten Arguments to difprove this Affertion, and all litile to the purpofe: So little indeed, that I think it little to the purpofe particularly to answer them, but shall hint only fome few Truths which will rout the whole band of them.

I fay therefore, that departed Souls, as other Spirits, have an durtification in them, fuch as Souls have in this Life; and have both a faculty and a right to move of themselves, provided there be no express Law against fuch or fuch a defign to which their motion tends.

Again, That they have a power of appearing in their own perfonal fhapes to whom there is occafion, as Anne VValker's Soul did to the Miller; and that this being a faculty of theirs either natural or acquirable, the doing fo is no Miracle. And Thirdly, That it was the ftrong piercing defire, and deep diftrefs and agony of Mind in Saul, in his perplexed Circumftances, and the great compaffion and goodnels of Spirit in the holy Soul of Samuel, that was the effectual Magick that drew him to condescend to converse with Saul in the Womans House at Endor; as a keen fense of Justice and Revenge made Anne VValker's Soul appear to the Miller with her five Wounds in her Head.

The ridged and harsh severity that VVebster fancies Samuel's Ghost would have used against the Woman, or sharp reproofs to Saul; as for the latter, it is somewhat express in the Text, and Saul had his excuse in readiness, and the good Soul of Samuel was sensible of his perplexed condition. And as for the former, sith the Soul of Samuel might indeed have terrised the poor Woman, and so unhinging her, that she had been fit for nothing after it, but not converted her, it is no wonder if he passed her by; Goodness and Forbearance more besitting an holy Angelical Soul than bluster and fury, such as is fancied by that rude Goblin that actuates the Body and Pen of VVcbster.

As for departed Souls. that they never have any care or regard to any of their fellow Souls here upon Earth, is expresly against the known example of that great Soul, and universal Pastor of all good Souls, who appeared to Stephen at his stoning, and to St. Paul before his Conversion, though then in his glorified Body; which is a greater condescension than this of' the Soul of Samuel, which was also to a Prince, upon whose. Shoulders lay the great Affairs of the People of Israel: To omit that other notable example of the Angel Raphael to called (from his Office at that time, or from the Angelical Order he was adopted into after his Death) but was indeed the Soul of of Azarias the Son of Ananias the Great, and of Tobit's Bretheren, Tobit 5. 12. Nor does that which occurs, Tob. 12. 15. at all clash with what we have faid, if rightly understood: for his faying, I am Raphael one of the feven holy Angels which present the Prayers of the Saints, and which go in and out before the glory of the holy one, in the Cabbalistick fense fignifies no more than thus, That he was one of the universal Society of the holy Angels, (and a Raphael in the Order of the Raphaels) which minister to the Saints, and reinforce the Prayers of good and holy Men by joining thereto their own; and as they are moved by God, minister to their necessities, unprayed to themfelves, which would be an abomination to them, but extreme prone to fecond the Petitions of holy fincere Souls, and forward to engage in the accomplishing of them, as a truly good man would sooner relieve an indigent Creature, over-hearing him making his moan to God in Prayer, than if he begged Alms of himfelf, though he might do that without Sin. This Cabbaliftical account, I think, is infinitely more probable, than that Raphael told a downright lye to Tobit, in faying he was the Son of Ananias when he was not. And be it fo, will 7. VVebfter fay, what is all this to the purpose, when the Book of Tobit is Apocryphal, and confequently of no Authority? What of no Authority? Certainly of infinitely more Authority than Mr. VVagstaff, Mr. Scot, and Mr. Adie, that Mr. VVebster fo frequently and reverently quoteth.

I but, will he farther add, these Apparitions were made to good and holy Men, or to elect Veffels; but King Saul was a wretched Reprobate. This is the third liberal badge of Honour that this ill-bred Advocate of the Witches has beftowed on a distressed Prince. First, a drowned Puppet, p, 170. then a distracted Bedlam, in the fame Page, which I paffed by before: and now, a wretched Reprobate : But affuredly Saul was a brave Prince and Commander, as Folephus justly describes him. and reprobate only in Type, as Ifmael and Efau; which is a mystery, it seems, that J. VVebster was not aware of. And therefore no fuch wonder that the Soul of Samuel had fuch a kindness for him, as to appear to him in the depth of his diftrefs, to fettle his Mind, by telling him plainly the upflot of the whole business, that he should lose the Battel, and he and his Sons be flain, that so he might give a specimen of the braveft Valour that ever was atchieved by any Commander, in that he would not fuffer his Country to be over-run by the Enemy while he was alive without refiftance; but though he knew certainly he should fail of fuccess, and he and his Sons dye ŤW in the Fight, yet in fo juft and honourable a Caufe as the defence of his Crown and his Country, would give the Enemy battle in the Field, and factifice his own Life for the fafery of his People, Out of the knowledge of which noble Spirit in Saul, and his refolved valour in this point, those Words haply may come from Samuel, To morrow fhalt thou and thy Sons be with me, (as an aufpicious infinuation of their favourable reception into the other World) in Their favourable reception into the other World) in the same

Laftly, as for that weak Imputation, that this Opinion of its being Samuel's Soul that appeared is Popifh, that is very Plebeisnly and Idiotically fpoken, as if every thing that the Popifh party are for, were Popifh, We devide our Zeal againft fo many things that we fancy Popifh, that we fearce referve a juft fhare of deteftation againft what is truly fo: Such as are that groß, rank and feandalous impoffibility of Tranfubstantiation, the various Modes of fulfome Idolatry and lying Impoftures, the uncertainty of their Loyalty to their lawful Soveraigns by their fuperfittious adhefion to the fpiritual Tyranny of the Pope, and that barbarous and ferine Cruelty againft those that are not either fuch Fools as to be perfuaded to believe fuch things as they would obtrude upon Men, or are not fo falfe to God and their own Confciences, as knowing better, yet to profes them.

As for that other Opinion, that the greater part of the reformed Divines hold, That it was the Devil that appeared in Samuel's Shape; and tho' Grotius alfo feems to be enclined thereto, alleging that Passage of Porphyrins de abstinentia Animaliun, where he describes one kind of Spirit to be, I'erO+ άπατηλής φύσεως, παντομοςφόντε η πολύτεοπον, πουκεινόμενον κ Jess & Animoras is Juza's refrancoror. (which is, I confels, very apposite to this Story; nor do I doubt but that in many of these Necromantick Apparitions, they are ludicrous Spirits, not the Souls of the Deceased that appear) yet I am clear for the appearing of the Soul of Samuel in this Story, from the Reasons above alleged, and as clear that in other Necromancies, it may be the Devil or fuch kind of Spirits, as Porphyrius above describes, that change themselves into omnifarious Forms and Shapes, and one while all the parts of Dzmons, another while of Angels or Gods, and another while of the Souls of the Deceased: And I confess such a Spirit as this might Personate Samuel here, for any thing Webster has alleged to the contrary, for his Arguments indeed are wonderfully weak and wooden, as may be underftood out of what L

I have hinted concerning the former Opinion, but I cannot farther particularize now.

For I have made my Postcript much longer than my Letter. before I was aware; and I need not enlarge to you, wno are to well verfed in these things already, and can by the quicknefs of your Parts prefently collect the whole measures of Hercules by his Foot, and fufficiently understand by this time it is no rash Censure of mine in my Letter, That Webster's Book is but a weak impertinent piece of Work, the very Master-piece thereof being fo weak and impertinent, and falling to thort of the Scope he aims at, which was really to prove that there was no fuch thing as a Witch or Wizard, that is, not any mention thereof in Scripture, by any Name of one that had more to do with the Devil, or the Devil with him, than with other wicked Men; that is to fay, of one who in virtue of Covenant, either implicit or explicit, did ftrange things by the help of evil Spirits, but that there are many forts of Deceivers and Impostures, and divers Persons under a. paffive Delusion of Melancholy and Fancy, which is part of his very Title-page.

Whereby he does plainly infinuate, that there is nothing but Couzenage or Melancholy in the whole Businessof the Feats of Witches, But a little to mitigate or fmother the groffnels of this falle Affertion, he adds, And that there is no corporeal League betwixt the Devil, and the Witch; and that he does not fuck on the Witches Body, nor has carnal Copulation with her, nor the Witches turned into Dogs or Cats, &c, All which things as you may fee in his Book, he understands in the groffest imaginable, as if the Imps of Witches had Mouths of Flesh to fuck them, and Bodies of Flesh to lie with them, and at this rate he may understand a corporeal League, as if it were no League or Covenant, unless some Lawyer drew the Instrument, and Engrossed it in Vellum or thick Parchment, and there were fo many Witneffes with the Hand and Seal of the Party: Nor any Transformation into Dogs or Cats, unlefs it were Real and Corporeal, or grofly Carnal; which none of his Witch mongers, as he rudely and flovenly calls that Learned and Serious Perfon, Dr. Cafaubon and the reft, do believe. Only it is a disputable Case of their Bodily Transformation, betwixt Bodinus and Remigius; of which more in my Scholia. But that without this Carnal transmutation, a Woman might not be accounted a Witch, is for foolifh a Supposition, that VVebster himself certainly must be alhamed of it;

Wherefore if his Book be Writ only to prove there is no fuch thing as a Witch that Covenants in Parchment with the Devil by the Advice of a Lawyer, and is Really and Carnally turned into a Dog, Cat, or Hare, Sc. and with carnal Lips fucked by the Devil, and is one with whom the Devil lies Carnally; the Scope thereof is manifeftly impertinent, when neither Dr. Cafaubon, nor any one else holds any fuch thing. But as for the true and adequate Notion of a Witch or Wizard, fuch as at first I described, his Arguments all of them are too too weak and impertinent, as to the difproving the Existence of such a Witch as this, who betwixt his Deceivers, Impostors and Melancholifts on one Hand, and those gross Witches he describes on the other Hand, goes away shere as a Hare in a green Balk betwixt two Lands of Corn, none of his Arguments reaching her, or getting the fight of her, himfelf in the mean time ftanding on one fide amongst the Deceivers and Impostors, his Book, as to the main Design he drives at being a meer Cheat and Impostor.

ADVER-

ADVERTISE MENT.

Hs Letter of Dr. Moor being left amongst other Papers appertaining to this new intended Edition, by Mr. Glanvil, and I perceiving in a Letter of his to the Doctor, that he had a Mind this Letter should be Published together with h's Book, it is done accordingly and prefixed at the beginning thereof, as natural Method requires, the Letter being Hortatory to quicken Mr. Glanvil to dispatch his intended new Edition for the undeceiving of the World, and the Post(cript, containing many things of a general Influence upon the whole Book. But that the Doctor may fuffer no prejudice thro' this Publishing of his Letter and Postfcript, from the sharpness and fatyricalness of them in some places, I thall for the more rightly underfranding his meaning in the using that Mode of Writing upon this occasion, transcribe a Paffage of a Letter of his to his Friend Mr. Glanvil, relating thereto. I pray you fend me word, whether that Postfcript will not meet with all the elufory Cavils of that profane Buffoon, upon these places of Holy Scripture; his unworthy usage of the Holy Writ, and his deriforious Interpretations of it in the behalf of his beloved Hags, provoked my Indignation to fuch Schemes of deriding and exposing him, as otherwise I should never have condescended to. This is a sufficient Testimony of the Doctor's averlenels from fuch manner of Writing. But as Divines tell us, that Anger and Punishment are God's Opus alienum, his ftrange Work, as being more abhorrent from his Nature ; but yet for the good of the Universe, he steps out sometimes into that Dispensation; fo I think it not mis-becoming good Men, sometime to condescend, (as the Doctor calls it) to the chaftifing profane Drolls and Abufers of Holy things, by a just Derision and Satyrical Reprehension for their freakish and impious Saucinefs, provided it be done fincerely, and for the publick good.

Sadu-

To the Illustrious CHARLES

Duke of Richmond and Lenox.

My LORD,

VOUR Grace having been pleased to command the first, and more imperfect Edition of this Discourse, I have presumed that your Candour will accept the Draught that hath had my last hand upon it. And though I am not fond enough to fancy any Art or Ornament in the composure to recommend it ; yet, I know, the Esfay is seafonable, and contains things which relate to our biggest Interests; the design being to secure some of the Out-works of Religion, and to regain a parcel of Ground which bold Infidelity hath invaded. And my Lord, I cannot but observe fadly, that while the Sects are venting their Animolities against each other, and scrambling for their Conceits, and the particular advantages of their way, they perceive not that Atheifm comes on by large strides, and enters the Breeches they have made. Sober and considerate Men see the formidable danger, and fome of them have strenously endeavoured to maintain the Walls, while the Factions within are fo busie and Dz and fo divided, that they cannot attend the defperate hazard, and will not join in a Common Defence. Among those generous Defendants I defire to pitch, and have undertaken to make good one of the Forts upon which the Enemy hath made imperuous Affaults, and I hope with no contemptible success.

For my part, my Lord, I am very little concerned for the small Pedlaries that some Mens fondness calls Religion, by which that facred thing hath been exposed to a great deal of contempt and dishonour. But yet I think it my duty to have a zeal for those great and certain matters upon which our hopes in an other World are grounded: And that our expectations of a future Being are not imaginary and fantastick, we have reasonable evidence enough from the Attributes of God, the Phænomena of Providence, and the Nature of our Souls, to convince any, but those who will flupidly believe that they (hall dye like Beafts, that they may live like them. I confeß the Philosophick Arguments that are prodused for the defirable Article, though very cogent, are many of them speculative and deep, requiring fo great an attention and fagacity, that they take no hold upon the whiftling Spirits, that are not used to confider; nor upon the common fort that cannot reach such heights of Argument: But they are both best convinced by the Proofs that come nearest the Sense, which indeed strike our Minds fullest, and leave the most lasting Impressions, whereas high Speculations being more thin and fubtile, easily flide off, even from understandings that are most capable to receive them. For this reason, among some others, I appear thus much concerned for for the justification of the belief of Witches, it suggesting palpable and current evidence of our Immortality, which I am exceedingly follicitous to have made good.

For really, my Lord, if we make our compute like Men, and do not suffer our selves to be abused by the flatteries of Sense, and the deceitful gayeties that steal us away from God, and from our felves, there is nothing can render the thoughts of this odd life tolerable but the expectation of another. And wife Men have faid that they would not live a moment if they thought they were not to live again. This perhaps some may take to be the discontented Paradox of a melancholick, vext, and of mean Condition, that is pinched by the straitness of Fortune, and envies the heights of others Felicity and Grandures; but by that time those that judge so, have spent the heats of frolick Youth, and have past over the several Stages of Vanity; when they come to sit down and make sober Reflections upon their Pleasures and Pursuits, and sum up the accompt of all that is with them, and before them, I doubt not but their confidering thoughts will make Solomon's Conclusion, and find that 'tis but a mifery to live, if we were to live for nothing elfe. So that if the content of the prefent Life were all I were to have for the hopes of Immortality, I should even upon that account be very unwilling to believe that Iwas Mortal: For certainly the Pleasures that refult from the thoughts of another World in those that not only see it painted in their Imaginations, but feel in begun in their Souls, are as far beyond all the titillations of Senfe as a real lafting happiness is is beyond the delusive Images of a Dream. And therefore they that think to secure the injoyment of their Pleasures by the infamy of our natures in the overthrow of our future hopes, endeavouring to dam up the Fountain of the fullest and cleanest delights; and seek for limpid Waters in the Sinks and Puddles of the Streets.

You (ee, my Lord, how my zeal for this mighty Interest transports me to a greater length in this address than perhaps may consist with strict decorum; and I indulge my Pen the rather in this Licence, because possibly your Grace's name may draw some Eyes hither that have need of fuch suggestions, and those that have not need a great deal more. It cannot be proper to add here those large accounts which would be reguisite in a design of full conviction: But for the present, if they shall please to look forward, they may likely meet some things not unsit for their ferious thoughts, and I intend to take a season to what I know is as much their interest as I doubt it is their want.

But, my Lord, I fear, I am importunate, and befeech your Grace to pardon the boldness of

My LORD,

Your Grace's Moft obedient Servant.

Jos. Glanvil.

PREFACE.

Here are a fort of narrow and confin'd Spirits, who account all Difcourfes needlefs, that are not for their particular purpofes; and judge all the World to be of the Size and Genius of those within the Circle of their Knowledge and Acquaintance; fo that with a pert and pragmatique Infolence, they cenfure all the braver Defigns and Notices that lie beyond their Ken as nice and impertinent Speculations : An ignorant and proud Injustice; as if this fort were the only Perfons whofe humour and needs should be confulted. And hence it comes to pass that the greatest and worthieft things that are written or faid, do always meet with the most general neglect and form, fince the leffer People, for whom they were not intended, are quick to floot their Bolt, and to condemn what they do not understand, and because they do not. Whereas on the other fide, those that are able to judge, and would incou-rage, are commonly referv'd and modest in their Sentences; or if they should feek to do right to things that are worthy, they are fure to be outvoiced by the rout of ignorant Contemners. Upon which accounts I have often thought that he that courts and values popular estimation, takes not the

the right way if he endeavour any thing that is really excellent : but he must study the little plausibilities, and accommodate the humour of the MANY, who are active Ministers of Fame, being zealous and loud in their Applaufes, as they are clamerous and impetuous in their oppositions. As for these, 'tis one of my chief cares to make my felf as much unconcern'd at their Cenfures as I am at the cackling of a Flock of Geefe, or at the eager difpleafure of those little fnarling Animals that are angry when I go along the Nor can any Man be either wife or Streets. happy till he hath arrived to that greatness of Mind, that no more confiders the tatling of the multitude than the whiftling of the Wind. Not that I think the common People are to be contemned for the weakness of their understandings; 'tis an infolent meannefs of Spirit that doth that; but when conceited Ignorance fits down in the Judgment Seat and gives peremptory Verdicts upon things beyond its Line, the wife Man fmiles and paffeth by. For fuch (if that may fignifie any thing to keep them from troubling themfelves about the following CONSIDER A-TIONS) I defire they would take notice from me, that I writ not those things for fuch as they ; and they will do well to throw up the Book upon this Advertisement, except they will ftay to hear, That though Philosophical Discourses to justifie the common belief about Witches, are nothing at all to them, or those of their measure; yet they are too leafonable and neceffary for our Age, in which Atheifm is begun in Sadducism: And

And those that dare not bluntly fay, There is NO GOD, content themfelves (for a fair ftep and Introduction) to deny there are SPIRITS or WITCHES. Which fort of Infidels, though they are not ordinary among the meer vulgar, yet are they numerous in a little higher rank of Understandings. And those that know any thing of the World, know that most of the loofer, Gentry, and the finall pretenders to Philofophy and Wit, are generally deriders of the belief of Witches and Apparitions. And were this a flight and meer Speculative miftake, I fhould not trouble my felf or them about it. But I fear this error hath a Core in it that is worfe than Herefie: And therefore how little foever I care what Men believe or teach in matters of Opinion, I think I have reason to be concern'd in an affair that toucheth fo near upon the greatest Interests of Religion. And really I am aftonish'd fometimes to think into what kind of an Age we are fallen, in which fome of the greatest Impieties are accounted but Bugs, and terrible Names, invisible Tittles, Peccadillo's or Chimera's. The fad and greateft inftances are SACRILEDGE, REBELLION, and WITCHCRAFT. For the two former, there are a fort of Men (that are far from being profeft Enemies to Religion) who I do not know whether they own any fuch Vices. We find no mention of them in their most particular Confessions, nor have I observ'd them in those Sermons that have contained the largest Catalogues of the Sins of our Age and Nation. 'Twere dangerous to speak of them as Sins, for fear who who should be found guilty. But my business at present is not with these but the other, WITCH-CRAFT, which I am fure was a Sin of elder times; and how comes it about that our Age, which so much out-does them in all other kinds of wickedness, should be wholly innocent in this? That there MAT be WITCHES and Apparitions in our Days, notwithstanding the Objections of the modern Sadduce, I believe I have made appear in the CONSIDERATION following; in which I did not primarily intend direct Proof, but DEFENCE, as the Title of the first Edition, which is restor'd in these later mention'd.

And if it should be objected, That I have for the most part used only Supposals and Conjectural things in the Vindication of the common belief. and fpeak with no point-blanck affurance in my particular Anfwers, as I do in the general Conclufion, I need only fay, That the Proposition I defend is matter of Fact, which the dif-believers impugne by alledging that it cannot be, or it is not likely: In return to which, if I fhew how those things may be, and probably, notwithstanding their Allegations, though I fay not down right that they are in the particular way I offer, yet 'tis enough for the defign of Defence, though not for that of Proof: For when one faith a thing cannot be, and I tell him how polfibly it may, though I hit not the just manner of it, I yet defeat the Objection against it, and make way for the evidence of the thing de Facto; which now I have added from the divine Oracles, and two modern Relations that are clear and unexceptionable. T

I have no humour nor delight in telling Stories, and do not publifh these for the gratification of those that have; but I record them as Arguments for the confirmation of a Truth which hath indeed been attested by multitudes of the like Evidences in all places and times. But things remote, or long past, are either not believed or forgotten: whereas these being fresh and near, and attended with all the circumstances of credibility, it may be expected they should have the more fuccels upon the obstinacy of Unbelievers.

But after all this, I must confess, there is one Argument against me which is not to be dealt with, viz. a mighty confidence grounded upon nothing, that [waggers and huffs, and fwears there are no Witches. For fuch Philosophers as thefe, let them enjoy the Opinion of their own Superlative Judgments, and enter me in the first rank of Fools for crediting my Senfes, and those of all the World, before their fworn Dictates. If they will believe in Scott, Hobbes, and Osborne, and think them more infallible than the facred Oracles, the History of all Ages, and the full experience of our own, who can help it? They must not be contradiffed, and they are refolved not to be per/waded. For this fort of Men I never go about to convince them of any thing. If I can avoid it, I throw nothing before them, left they fhould turn again and rend me. Their Opinions came into their Heads by chance, when their little Reasons had no notice of their entrance; and they must be let alone to go out again of themfelves the fame way they entred. Therefore not · to

to make much noife to disturb these infallible Huffers, (and they cannot hear a little for their. own) I foftly ftep by them, leaving only this whifper behind me; That though their worfbipful ignorance and fottishness can relish nothing of a Difcourfe that doth not minister to Senfuali. ty and Unbelief, yet my CONSIDERATIONS have had the good fortune of a better reception from the braver and more generous Spirits, than my fondeft hopes could have expected; and Perfons whole good thoughts I have reafon to value, have assured me that their kindness to my Book hath improved upon fecond and more careful perufals; which I mention for this purpofe, that those that need my Remarks, and cannot feel them in a running reading, may please to turn their Eyes back and deliberately think over what I have offered; from which courfe I dare promise them more (atisfaction than from their haste.

SOME CONSIDER ATIONS ABOUT Witchcraft, In a Letter to ROBERT HUNT, Efq;

SECT. I.

SIR,

HE frequent and late dealings you have had in the Examination of Witches, and the regards of one that hath a very particular honour for you, have brought you the trouble of fome CONS I-DERATIONS on the Subject. And tho what I have to fay be but the unaccurate product of a little leifure; yet I hope it may afford you fome, not unfeatenable, Accounts of the odd Phenomena of Witcheraft and Fascination, and contribute to the DEFENCE of the Truth, and certainty of Matters, which you know by Experiments that could not deceive, in fpite of the petty exceptions of those that are refolv'd to believe nothing in affairs of this Nature.

And if any thing were to be much admired in an Age of Wonders, not only of Nature, (which is a conftant Prodigy) but of Men and Manners; it would be to me matter of aftonifiment, ment, that Men otherwise Witty and Ingenious, are fallet into the Conceit, that there is no fuch thing as a Witch or Apparition, but that these are the Creatures of Melancholy and Superflition, foster'd by Ignorance and Defign; which comparing the Confidence of their dis-belief, with the Evidence of the things denied, and the weakness of their Grounds. would almost suggest that themselves are an Argument of what they deny; and that to confident an Opinion could not be held upon fuch inducements, but by fome kind of Witch: craft and Fascination in the Fancy. And perhaps that evil Spirit, whole Influences they will not allow in Actions afcribed to fuch Caufes, hath a greater hand and intereft in their Proposition than they are aware of. For that subtle Enemy of Mankind (fince Providence will not permit him to milchief us without our own concurrence) attempts that by Stratagem and Artifice, which he could never effect by open ways of acting; and the fuccess of all Wiles depending upon their Secrefie and Concealment, his Influence is never more dangerous than when his Agency is least fuspected. In order therefore to the carrying on the dark and hidden Defigns he manageth against our Happinels and our Souls, he cannot expect to advantage himself more, than by infinuaring a belief, That there is no fuch thing as himself, but that Fear and Fancy make Devils now, as they did Gods of old. Nor can he ever draw the Affent of Men to fo dangerous an Affertion, while the ftanding fenfible Evidences of his Exiftence in his Practices by and upon his Inftruments are not difcredited and removed.

'Tis doubtle's therefore the Interest of this Agent of darkness, to have the World believe, that the Notion they have of him, is but a Phantasme and Conceit; and in order thereunto, that the Stories of VVitches, Apparitions, and indeed every thing that brings Tidings of another World, are but melancholick Dreams, and pious Romances. And when Men are arrived thus far, to think there are no Diabolical Contracts. or Apparitions, their belief that there are fuch Spirits refts only upon their Faith and Reverence to the Divine Oracles, which we have little reafon to apprehend fo great in fuch Affertors, as to command much from their affent; especially in fuch things in which they have corrupt Interefts against their Evidence. So that he that thinks there is no Witch. believes a Devil gratis, or at leaft upon inducements, which he is like to find himfelf disposed to deny when he pleaseth. And when Men are arrived to this degree of Diffidence and Infidelity Infidelity, we are beholden to them if they believe either Angel or Spirit, Refurrection of the Body, or Immortality of Souls. These things hang together in a Chain of connexion, at least in these Mens Hypothesis; and 'tis but an happy Chance if he that hath loft one Link holds another. So that the Vitals of Religion being fo much intereffed in this fubject, it will not be an unnecessary Employment particularly to Discourse it.

And in order to the proof, that there have been, and are unlawful Confederacies with evil Spirits, by virtue of which the Hellish accomplices perform things above their natural I must premile, that this being matter of Fact, is Powers. only capable of the Evidence of Authority and Senfe; and by both these the being of Witches and Diabolical Contracts is most abundantly confirm'd. All Histories are full of the Exploits of those Instruments of Darkness, and the Testimony of all Ages, not only of the rude and barbarous, but of the most civilized and polished World, brings Tidings of their strange Performances. We have the attestation of Thousands of Eye and Ear-witnsfes, and those not of the eafily deceivable Vulgar only, but of wife and grave Difcerners; and that when no interest could oblige them to a=" gree together in a common Lie. I fay we have the Light of all these Circumstances to confirm us in the belief of things done by Perfons of defpicable Power and Knowledge, bevond the reach of Art and ordinary Nature. Standing publick Records have been kept of these well attested Relations, and Epocha's made of those unwonted Events. Laws in many Nations have been enacted against those vile Practices; those among the Jews and our own are notorious; fuch Cafes have been often determined near us, by Wife and Reverend Judges, upon clear and convictive Evidence ; and Thoufands in our own Nation have fuffer'd Death for their vile Compacts with Apostate-Spirits. All these. I might largely prove in their particular Inftances, but that 'tis not needful, since whose that deny the being of Witches, do it not our of Ignorance of these Heads of Argument, of which probably they have heard a thousand times; but from an Apprehension that such a belief is absurd, and the things impoffible. And upon these prefumptions they contemn all Demonstrations of this Nature, and are hardned against Con-And I think those that can believe all Histories viction. are Romances; that all the wifer World have agreed together to juggle Mankind into a common belief of ungroundèđ.

ed Fables; that the found Senfes of Multitudes together may deceive them, and Laws are built upon Chimaras; that the gravest and wifest Judges have been Murderers, and the Sagest Persons Fools, or defigning Impostors. I fay, those that can believe this heap of Absurdities, are either more credulous than those whose Credulity they reprehend ; or elfe have some extraordinary Evidence of their Persuasion, viz. That 'tis abfurd and impossible there should be a VVitch or Apparition. And I am confident, were those little Appearances remov'd, which Men have form'd in their Fancies against the Belief of fuch things, their own Evidence would make its way to Mens Affent, without any more Arguments than what they know already to enforce it. There is nothing then neceffary to be done, in order to the establishing the Belief I would reconcile to Mens Minds, but to endeavour the re-moval of those Prejudices they have received against it; the chief of which I shall particularly deal with. And I begin with that bold Affertion.

SECT. II.

Obj. I. THE Notion of a Spirit is impossible and contradictious, and consequently so is that of Witches, the belief of which is founded on that Doctrine.

TO which Objection, I Answer, First, If the Notion of a Spirit be ablurd, as is pretended, that of a God and a Soul diffinct from Matter, and immortal, are likewise abfurdities; and then, that the World was jumbled into this elegant and orderly Fabrick by Chance; and that our Souls are only parts of Matter that came together we know not whence nor how, and shall again shortly be diffolv'd into those loose Atoms that compound them; that all our Conceptions are but the thrusting of one part of Matter against another; and the Ideas of our Minds meer blind and casual Motions. These, and a Thousand more the grossfelt Impossibilities and Ablurdities (consequents of this Proposition, That the Notions of a Spirit is absurd) will be fad Certainties and Demonstrations. And with such Affertors I would cease to Difcourse course about Witches and Apparitions, and address my felf to obtain their affent to Truths infinitely more facred.

And yet, 2dly, Tho' it should be granted them, that a fubstance immaterial, is as much a contradiction as they can fancy; yet why should they not believe that the Air and all the Regions above us, may have their invisible intellectual Agents of Nature like unto our Souls, be that what it will, and fome of them at least as much degenerate as the vilest and most mischievous among Men? This Hypothefis will be enough to fecure the poffibility of Witches and Apparitions. And that all the upper Stories of the Universe are furnished with Inhabitants, 'tis infinitely reasonable to conclude from the analogy of Nature ; fince we fee there is nothing fo contemptible and vile in the World we refide in, but hath its living Creatures that dwell upon it; the Earth, the Water, the inferiour Air, the Bodies of Animals, the Flefh, the Skin, the Entrails, the Leaves, the Roots, the Stalks of Vegetables'; yea, and all kind of Minerals in the fubterraneous Regions. I fay, all these have their proper Inhabitants ; yea, L'uppose this Rule may hold in all diffinct kinds of Bodies in the World, That they have their peculiar Animals. The certainty of which, I believe the improvement of Microscopical Observations will discover. From whence I infer. That fince this little Spot is fo thickly Peopled in every Atome of it, 'tis weakness to think, that all the vaft Ipaces above, and hollows under Ground, are defert and uninhabited. And if both the fuperiour and lower Continents of the Universe have their Inhabitants also, 'tis exceedingly improbable, arguing from the fame Analogy, that they are all of the meer fenfible Nature, but that they are at least fome of the Rational and Intellectual Orders. Which fupposed, there is good Foundation for the belief of Witches and Apparitions, tho' the Notion of a Spirit should prove as abfurd, and unphilosophical, as I judge the denial of it. And fo this first Objection comes to nothing. I defcend then to the fecond Prejudice, which may be thus formed in behalf of the Objectors.

SECT. III.

Obj. II. There are Actions in most of those Relations ascribed to Witches, which are ridiculous and impossible in the Nature of things; fuch are (1) their flying out of Windows, after they have anointed themselves, to remote Places. (2) their Transformation into Cats, Hares, and other Creatures. (3) their feeling all the Hurts in their own Bedies which they have received in those (4) Their raising Tempests by muttering some nonsensical Words, or performing Ceremonies alike impertinent a ridiculous. And (5) their being suck d in a certain private place in their Bodies by a Familiar. These are presumed to be Actions inconfistent with the Nature of Spirits, and above the power of these poor and miserable Agents. And therefore the Objection sipposeth them performed only by the Fancy, and that the whole Mistery of Witcheraft is but an Illusion of crasie Imagination.

TO this aggregate Objection I return, (1) in the general, The more abfurd and unaccountable these Actions seem, the greater confirmations are they to me of the Truth of those Relations, and the Reality of what the Objectors would deftroy. For these Circumstances being exceeding unlikely, judging by the measures of common belief, 'tis the greater probability they are not Fictitious: For the contrivers of Fictions use to form them as near as they can conformably to the most unsuspected realities, endeavouring to make them look as like Truth as is poffible in the main supposals, tho' withal, they make them ftrange in the circumstance. None but a Fool or a Mad-man would relate, with a purpole of having it believed, that he faw in Ireland, Men with Hoofs on their Heads, and Eyes in their Breasts; or if any should be to ridiculously vain, as to be ferious in fuch an incredible Romance, it cannot be supposed that all Travel lers that come into those Parts after him should tell the same Story. There is a large Field in Fiction; and if all those Relations were arbitrary Compositions, doubtless the first Romancers would have framed them more agreeable to the common Doctrine of Spirits; at least after these supposed absurdities had been a thousand times laugh'd at, People by this time would have learned to correct those obnoxious Extravagancies; and tho' they have not yet more veracity than the Ages Ages of Ignorance and Superfition', yet one would expect they should have got more cunning. This suppos'd impossi-bility then of these Performances, seems to me a probable Argument, that they are not wilful and defigned Forgeries. And if they are Fancies, 'tis fomewhar ftrange, that Imagination which is the most various thing in all the World, should infinitely repeat the fame Conceit in all Times and Places.

But again (2) the strange Actions related of Witches, and presumed impossible, are not ascribed to their own Powers. but to the Agency of those wicked Confederates they imploy. And to affirm that those evil Spirits cannot do that which we conceit impossible, is boldly to ftint the Powers of Creatures, whole Natures and Faculties we know not; and to measure the World of Spirits by the narrow rules of our own impotent Beings. We see among our felves the performances of some out-go the conceits and possibilities of others; and we know many things may be done by the Mathematicks and Mechanick Ar*tifice*, which common Heads think impossible to be effected by the honeft ways of Art and Nature. And doubtlets, the fubtilties and powers of those milchievous Fiends are as much beyond the reach and activities of the most knowing Agents among us, as theirs are beyond the wit and ability of the most ruffick and illiterate. So that the utmost that any Mans reason in the World can amount to in this particular, is only this, That he cannot conceive how fuch things can be performed; which only argues the weaknefs and imperfection of our Knowledge and Apprehensions, not the impessibility of those performances: And we can no more from hence form an Argument against them, than against the most ordinary effects in Nature. We cannot conceive how the Fatus is form'd in the Womb, nor as much as how a Plant fprings from the Earth we tread on ; we know not how our Souls move the Body, nor how these diftant and extreme Natures are united; as I have abundantly shewn in my SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA. And if we are ignorant of the most obvious things about us, and the most considerable within our selves, tis then no wonder that we know not the conftitution and powers of the Creatures, to whom we are fuch strangers. Briefly then, matters of Fast well proved ought not to be denied, becaufe we cannot conceive how they can be perform'd. Nor is it a reasonable method of inference, first to prefume the thing impossible, and thence to conclude that the fact cannot be proved. On the contrary, we thould judge of the Action by the evidence, and not the evi-Ea dence dence by the measures of our Fancies about the Attion. This is proudly to exalt our own Opinions above the clearest Teftimonies and most sensible Demonstrations of Fast; and so to give the Lye to all Mankind, rather than distrust the conceits of our bold Imaginations. But yet farther,

(3) I think there is nothing in the inftances mention'd, but what may as well be accounted for by the Rules of Reason and Philosophy, as the ordinary affairs of Nature. For in resolving natural Phænomena, we can only affign the probable caufes, shewing how things may be, not prefuming how they are. And in the particulars under our Examen, we may give an account how 'tis poffible, and not unlikely, that fuch things (though fomewhat varying from the common road of Nature) may be acted. And if our narrow and contracted Minds can furnish us with apprehensions of the way and manner of fuch performances, though perhaps not the true ones, 'tis an argument that fuch things may be effected by Creatures whole powers and knowledge are fo vaftly exceeding ours. I fhall endeavour therefore briefly to fuggest some things that may render the possibility of these performances conceivable, in order to the removal of this Objection, that they are contradictions and impoffible.

For the FIRST then, That the confederate Spirit should transport the Witch through the Air, to the place of general Rendezvous, there is no difficulty in conceiving it; and if that be true which great Philosophers affirm, concerning the real Separability of the Soul from the Body without Death, there is yet lefs; for then 'tis eafie to apprehend, the Soul having left its gross and fluggish body behind it, and being cloth'd only with its immediate vehicle of Air, or more fubtile Matter, may be quickly conducted to any place it would be at by those officious Spirits that attend it. And though I adventure to affirm nothing concerning the truth and certainty of this Supposition, yet I must needs fay, it doth not feem to me unreason-And our experience of Apoplexies, Epilepsis, Ecstasies, able. and the strange things Men report to have feen during those Deliquiums, look favourably upon this Conjecture ; which feems to me to contradict no principle of Reason or Philosophy; fince Death confifts not fo much in the actual separation of Soul and Body, as in the indifposition and unfitness of the Body for vital union, as an excellent Philosopher hath made good. On which Hypothesis, the Witches anointing her self before she takes her flight, may perhaps ferve to keep the Body tenantable, and in fit disposition to receive the Spirit at its return. These things, I fay,

I fay, we may conceive, though I affirm nothing about them and there is not any thing in fuch conceptions but what hath been own'd by men of worth and name, and may feem fair and accountable enough to those who judge not altogether by the measures of the populace and customary opinion. And there's a laying of the great Apostle that feems to countenance this Platonick notion; what is the meaning elfe of that Expression, Whether in the Body or out of the Body, I cannot tell except the Soul may be separated from the Body without Death? Which if it be granted possible, 'tis fufficient for my purpose. And

(2) The Transformations of Witches into the shapes of other Animals, upon the fame supposal is very conceivable, fince then 'tis easie enough to imagine, that the Power of Imagination may form those passive and pliable vehicles into those shapes. with more ease than the fancy of the Mother can the stubborn Matter of the Fatus in the Womb, as we see it frequently doth in the inftances that occur of Signatures and monstrous Singularities; and perhaps fometimes the confederate Spirit put tricks upon the Senfes of the Spectators, and those shapes are only illusions.

But then (3) when they feel the hurts in their gross Bodies. that they receive in their airy vehicles, they must be supposed to have been really prefent, at leaft in these latter; and 'tis no more difficult to apprehend how the hurts of the fould be translated upon their other Bodies, than how Dileales should be inflicted by the Imagination, or how the fancy of the Mother should wound the Fætus, as feveral credible relations do atteft.

And (4) for their raising Storms and Tempests, They do it not, be fure, by their own, but by the Power of the Prince of the Air, their Friend and Allie; and the Ceremonies that are enjoyn'd them are doubtles nothing else but entertainments for their Imaginations, and are likely defign'd to perfuade them, that they do these strange things themselves.

And (lastly) for their being fuck'd by their Familiar, I say (1) we know to little of the nature of Demons and Spirits. that 'tis no wonder we cannot certainly divine the reason of so strange an action. And yet (2) we may conjecture at some things that may render it lefs improbable. For fome have thought that the Genii (whom both the Platonical and Christian Antiquity thought embodied) are recreated by the reeks and vapours of humane Blood, and the Spirits that proceed from them: Which fuppofal (if we grant them Bodies) is not unlikely, every thing being refreshid and nourished by its like. And that they are

are not perfectly abstracted from all Body and Matter, befides the reverence we owe to the wifest Antiquity, there are feveral confiderable Arguments I could alledge to render it probable. Which things supposed, the Devil's fucking the Sorceress is no great wonder, nor difficult to be accounted for. Or perhaps (3) this may be only a diabolical Sacrament and Ceremony to confirm the hellifb Covenant. To which I add, (4) That which to me feems most probable, viz. That the Familiar doth not only fuck the Witch, but in the action infuseth fome poylonous ferment into her, which gives her Imagination and Spirits a Magical Tincture, whereby they become mischievously influential; and the Word venefica, intimates some Now that the Imagination hath a mighty fuch Matter. power in Operation, is feen in the just now mention'd Signatures and Difeases that it causeth; and that the Fancy is modified by the Qualities of the Blood and Spirits, is too evident to need Proof. Which things supposed, 'tis plain to conceive that the evil Spirit having breathed fome vile vapour into the Body of the Witch, it may taint her Blood and Spirits with a noxious Quality, by which her infected Imagination, heightned by Melancholly and this worfe caufe, may do much hurt upon Bodies that are impreffible by fuch Influences. And tis very likely that this ferment disposeth the Imagination of the Sorcere/s to cause the mention'd agasperia or feparation of the Soul from the Body, and may perhaps keep the Body in fit temper for its re-entry, as also it may facilitate Transformation, which, it may be, could not be effected by ordinary and unaffifted Imagination.

Thus we fee, 'tis not fo desperate to form an Apprehension of the manner of these odd performances; and though they are not done the way I have describ'd, yet what I have faid may help us to a conceit of the possibility, which sufficients for my purpose. And though the Hypothesis I have gone upon will seem as unlikely to fome, as the things they attempt to explain are to others; yet I must desire their leave to suggest, that most things seem improbable (especially to the conceited and opinionative) at first propolal; and many great Truths are strange and odd, till custome and acquaintance have reconciled them to our Fancies. And I'll presume to add on this occasion, (tho' I love not to be confident in affirming) that there is none of the Platonical supposals I have used, but what I could make appear to be fair and reasonable, to the capable and unprejudic'd.

SECT.

SECT. IV.

Obj. III. BUT (III) I come to another prejudice against the being of Witches, which is, That 'tis very improbable that the Devil, who is a wile and mighty Spirit, should be at the beck of a poor Hag, and bave so little to do, as to attend the Errands and impotent Lufts of a filly Old Woman.

TO which I might answer, (1) That 'tis much more improbable that all the World flould be deceiv'd in matters of Fast, and circumstances of the clearest evidence and conviction, than that the Devil, who is wicked, should be also unwife; and that he that perfuades all his Subjects and Accomplices out of their Wits, should himself act like his own Temptations and Persuaficns. In belief, there is nothing more strange in this Objection, than that wickedness is baseness and fervility; and that the Devil is at leifure to ferve those, he is at leisure to tempt, and industrious to ruine. And again, (2) I fee no neceffity to believe that the Devil is always the VVitches Confederate; but perhaps it may be fitly confidered, whether the Familiar be not some departed humane Spirit, forsaken of God and goodnefs, and fwallowed up by the unfatiable defire of milchief and revenge, which poffibly by the Laws and capacity of its state, it cannot execute immediately. And why we should prefume that the Devil should have the liberty of wandring up and down the Earth and Air, when he is faid to be held in the Chains of Darknefs; and yet that the feparated Souls of the wicked, of whom no fuch thing is affirm'd in any faered Record, should be thought so imprison'd, that they cannot poffibly wag from the place of their Confinement, I know no shadow of Conjecture. This conceit I am confident hath prejudic'd many against the belief of VVitches and Apparitions; they not being able to conceive that the Devil found be fo ludicrous as appearing Spirits are fometimes reported to be in their Frolicks; and they prefume, that Souls departed never revisit the free and open Regions; which confidence, I know nothing to justifie: For fince good Men in their state of separation are said to be imagener, why the micked may not be supposed to be induisuoves in the worst sense of the Word, I know nothing to help me to imagine. And if it be supposed that the Imps of Witches are fometimes wicked Spirits of our own kind and nature.

ture, and poffibly the fame that have been Socerers and Witches in this Life: This fuppofal may give a fairer and more probable account of many of the actions of Sorcery and Witchcraft. than the other Hypothefis, that they are always Devils. And to this Conjecture I'll adventure to fubjoin another, which also hath its probability, viz. (3) That 'tis not impossible but the Familiars of Witches are a vile kind of Spirits, of a very inferiour Constitution and Nature, and none of those that were once of the highest Hierarchy, now degenerated into the Spirits we call Devils. And for my part I must confess, that I think the common division of Spirits much too general; conceiving it likely there may be as great a variety of Intellectual Creatures in the invisible World, as there is of Animals in the visible : and that all the superiour, yea, and inferiour Regions, have their feveral kinds of Spirits differing in their natural perfections, as well as in the kinds and degrees of their depravities; which being supposed, 'tis very probable that those of the baseft and meanest Orders are they, who submit to the mention'd Servilities. And thus the fages and grandure of the Prince of darkness need not be brought into question.

SECT. V.

Obj. IV. BUT (IV) the opinion of Witches feem to fome to accuse Providence, and to suggest that it bath exposed Innocents to the fury and malice of revengeful Fiends; yea, and suppose the those most obnoxious, for whom we might most reasonably expect a more special tutelary care and protection; most of the eruel Practices of those presum'd Instruments of Hell, being upon Children, who as they least deferve to be deferted by that Providence that superintends all things, so they most meed its guardian Influence.

TO this fo specious an Objection I have these things to answer. (1) Providence is an unfathomable Depth; and if we should not believe the Phenomena of our Senses, before we can reconcile them to our notions of Providence, we must be grosser Scepticks than ever yet were extent. The miseries of the prefent Life, the unequal distributions of good and evil, the ignorance and barbarity of the greatest part of Mankind, the fatal disadvantages we are all under, and the bazard we run of being eternally miscrable and undone; these, I say, are things that can hardly be made consistent with that Wisdom and Good-

Goodness that we are fure hath made and mingled it felf with all things. And yet we believe there is a beauty and harmony, and goodness in that Providence, tho' we cannot unriddle it in particular instances; nor by reason of our Ignorance and Imperfection. clear it from contradicting Appearances; and confequently, we ought not deny the being of Witches and Apparitions, because they will create us some difficulties in our notions of Providence. But to come more close, (2) Those that believe that Infants are Heirs of Hell, and Children of the Devil as foon as they are disclosed to the World, cannot certainly offer fuch an Objection; for what is a little triffing pain of a Moment, to those eternal Tortures, to which, if they die affoon as they are born, according to the Tenour of this Doctrine, they are everlastingly exposed? But however the cafe stands as to that, 'tis certain, (3) That Providence hath not fecured them from other violences they are obnoxious to, from Cruelty and Accident ; and yet we accuse It not when a whole Town full of Innocents fall a Victim to the rage and ferity of barbarous Executioners in Wars and Massacres. To which I add, (4) That 'tis likely the mischief is not fo often done by the evil Spirit immediately, but by the malignant influences of the Sorcerefs, whole power ot hurting confifts in the foremention'd ferment, which is infused into her by the Familiar. So that I am apt to think there may be a power of real Fascination in the Witches Eyes and Imagination, by which for the most part the acts upon tender Bodies. Nescio quis teneros occulos----. For the pestilential Spirits being darted by a spightful and vigorous Imagination from the Eye, and meeting with those that are weak and paffive in the Bodies which they enter, will not fail to infect them with a noxious quality that makes dangerous and strange Alterations in the Person invaded by this poifonous Influence; which way of acting by fubrile and invisible Instruments, is ordinary and familiar in all natural Efficiencies. And 'tis now past question, that Nature for the most part acts by fubtile Streams and Apporread's of minute Particles, which pais from one Body to another. Or however that be, this kind of Agency is as conceivable as any one of those qualities Ignorance hath call'd Sympathy and Antipathy, the reality of which we doubt not, tho' the manner of Action be unknown. Yea the thing I speak of is as easie to be apprehended, as how Infection should pass in certain tenuious streams thro' the Air from one House to another; or, as how the biting of a mad Dog should fill all the Blood and Spirits with a venemous and malignant ferment; the application of the verthe doing the fame in our cale, as that of contact doth in this this. Yea, some kinds of Fascination are perform'd in this groffer and more fenfible way, as by firiking, giving Apples. and the like, by which the contagious quality may be tranfmitted, as we see Difeases often are by the touch. Now in this way of conjecture, a good account may be given why Witches are most powerful upon Children and timorous Perfons, viz. because their Spirits and Imaginations being weak and passive, are not able to refift the fatal Invasion ; whereas Men of bold Minds, who have plenty of strong and vigorcus Spirits, are secure from the contagion; as in pestilential Airs clean Bodies are not fo liable to Infection as other Tem-Thus then we fee 'tis likely enough, that very often pers. the Sorcereß her felf doth the Mischief; and we know, de facto, that Providence doth not always fecure us from one anothers Injuries : And yet I must confess, that many times also the evil Spirit is the mischievious Agent; the' this Confession draw on me another Objection which I next propofe.

SECT. VI.

Obj. V. T. Hen it may be faid, that if wicked Spirits can burt us by the direction, and at the define of a Witch, one would think they should have the same power to do us Injury without Inftigation or Compact; and if this be granted, 'tis a wonder that we are not always annoy'd and infected by them.

TO which I return, (1) That the Laws, Liberties, and Restraints of the Inhabitants of the other World are to us utterly unknown; and this way we can only argue our felves into Confessions of our Ignorance, which every Man muft acknowledge, that is not as Immodest as Ignorant. It must be granted by all that own the Being, Power, and Malice of evil Spirits, that the fecurity we enjoy is wonderful whether they act by Witches or not; and by what Laws they are kept from making us a Prey, to speak like Philosophers, we cannot tell; yea, why they should be permitted to tempt and ruin us in our Souls, and reftrain'd from touching or hurting us in our Bodies, is a Mystery not eafily accountable. But yet (2) tho' we acknowlege their Power to vex aud torment us in our Bodies also; yet a Reason may be given, why they they are less frequent in this kind of Mischief, viz. because their main Defigns are levell'd against the Intercit and Happinels of our Souls; which they can best promote, when their Actions are most fly and fecret; whereas, did they ordinarily perfecute Men in their Bodies. their agency and wicked Influence would be discover'd, and make a mighty noise in the World, whereby Men would be awaken'd to a fuitable and vigorous opposition, by the use of such Means as would engage Providence to refcue them from their Rage and Cruelties, and at last defeat them in their great purpoles of undoing us eternally. Thus we may conceive that the fecurity we enjoy may well enough confift with the Power and Malice of those evil Spirits; and upon this account we may fuppose that Laws of their own may prohibit their unlicens'd Injuries, not from any Goodness there is in their Constitutions, but in order to the more fuccelsful carrying on the Projects of the dark Kingdom; as Generals forbid Plunder, not out of love to their Enemies, but in order to their own fuccels. And hence (3) we may suppose a Law of permiffion to hurt us at the inftance of the Sorceres, may well stand with the Policy of Hell, fince by gratifying the wicked Person, they encourage her in Malice and Revenge, and promote thereby the main ends of their black Confederacy, which are to propogate Wickedness, and to rain us in our eternal Interests. And yet (4) 'tis clear to those that believe the History of the Gospel, that wicked Spirits have vexed the Bodies of Men, without any Instigation that we read of; and at this Day 'tis very likely, that many of the ftrange Accidents and Difeases that befal us, may be the infliction of evil Spirits, prompted to hurt us only by the delight they take in Milchief. So that we cannot argue the Improbability of their hurting Children and others by Witches from our own fecurity and Freedom from the effects of their Malice, which perhaps we feel in more Inftances than we are aware of.

SECT. VIL

Obj. VI. BUT (VI) another Prejudice against the belief of Witches, is a prefumption upon the enormous Force of Melancholy and Imagination, which without doubt can do wonderful things, and beget strange perswassions; and to these Causes some ascribe the presum'd effects of Sorcery and Witchcraft.

To which I Reply briefly, and yet I hope fufficiently.

(I) THat to refolve all the clear Circumstances of Fact, which we find in well-attested and confirmed Ba lations of this kind, into the power of deceivable Imagination, is to make Fancy the greater Prodigie, and to suppose that it can do Aranger Feats than are believed of any other kind of Fascination. And to think that Pins and Nails, for instance, can by the power of Imagination be conveyed within the Skin: or that Imagination should deceive fo many as have been Witneffes in Objects of Senfe, in all the Circumstances of Discovery ; this I say is to be infinitely more credulous than the affertors of Sorcery and Demoniac-Contracts. And by the fame Reason it may be believed, that all the Battles and ftrange Events of the World, which our selves have not seen; are but Dreams and fond Imaginations, and likewife those that are fought in the Clouds, when the Brains of the deluded Spectators are the only Theatre of those fancied Transactions. And (2) to deny Evidence of Act, because their Imagination may deceive the Relators, when we have no reason to think fo, but a bare prefumption that there is no fuch thing as is related, is quite to deftroy the credit of all humane Testimony, and to make all Men liars, in a larger fense than the Prophet concluded in his hafte. For not only the Melancholic and the Fanciful, but the Grave and the Sober, whole Judgments we have no reason to suspect to be tainted by their Imaginations, have from their own Knowledge and Experience made reports of this Nature. But to this it will poffibly be rejoined, and the Reply will be another Prejudice against the belief for which I contend, viz.

SECT. VIII.

Obj. VII. That 'tis a fuspitious Circumstance, that Witchcraft is but a Fancy, fince the Persons that are accused, are commonly poor and milerable old Women, who are over grown with Discontent and Melancholy, which are very Imaginative: And the Persons said to be Bewitch'd, are for the most part Children, or people very weak, who are easily imposed upon, and are apt to receive strong Impressions from nothing; whereas were there any such thing really, 'tis not likely, but that the more cunning and subil Desperado's, who might the more successfully carry on the mischievous Designs of the dark Kingdom, should be oftner engaged in those black Confederacies, and also one would expect effects of the Hellish Combination npon others than the Innocent and Ignorant.

TO which Objection it might perhaps be enough to return (as hath been above fuggested) that nothing can be concluded by this and fuch like Arguings, but that the Policy and Manages of the Instruments of Darkneß are to us altogether unknown, and as much in the dark as their Natures : Mankind being no more acquainted with the Reasons and Methods of Action in the other World, than poor Cortagers and Mechanisks are with the Intrigues of Government and Reasons of State. Yea, peradventure (2) 'tis one of the great Defigns, as 'tis certainly the Interest of those wicked Agents and Machinators, industriously to hide from us their Influences and Ways of acting, and to work as near as is polfible, incognito; upon which supposal 'ris easie to conceive a reason, why they most commonly work by, and upon the Weak and the Ignorant, who can make no cunning Obfervations, or tell credible Tales to detect their Artifice. Besides, (3) 'tis likely a strong Imagination, that cannot be weaken'd or disturb'd by a busie and subtile ratiocination, is a necessary requisite to those wicked Performances ; and without doubt an bightned and obstinate Fancy hath a great influence upon impressible Spirits; yea, and as I have conjectur'd before, on the more paffive and susceptible Bodies, And I am very apt to believe, that there are as real Communications and Intercourses between our Spirits, as there are between material Agents; which fecret Influences, tho' they are unknown in their their Nature and ways of acting, yet they are fufficiently felf. in their Effects; for Experience attefts, that fome by the very Majesty and Greatness of their Spirits, discovered by nothing but a certain noble Air that accompanies them, will be ir down others les great and generous, and make them (neak before them; and fome, by I know not what stupifying Vertue, will tie up the Tongue, and confine the Spiries of those who are otherwife Brisk and Voluble. Which thing supposed. the Influences of a Spirit possefied of an active and enormous Imagination, may be malign and fatal where they cannot be refilted; especially when they are accompanied by those poylonous reaks that the evil Spirit breaths into the Sorcerefs. which likely are (hot out, and applied by a Fancy hightned and prepared by Melancholy and Discontent. And thus we may conceive why the Melancholick and Envious are used upon fuch occasions, and for the fame reason the Ignorant, fince Knowledge checks and controuls Imagination; and those that abound in the Imaginative Faculties, do not usually exceed in the rational. And perhaps (4) the Damon himself useth the Imagination of the Witch fo qualified for his purpole, even in thole Actions of Milchief which are more propperly his; for it is most probable, that Spirits Act not up. on Bodies immediately, and by their naked Effence, but by means proportionate, and fuitable Instruments that they use; upon which account likely is fo ftrictly required, that the Sorcerze/s should believe, that so her Imagination might be more at the Devotion of the mischievous Agent. And for the same Reason also Ceremonies are used in Inchantments, viz. for the begetting this Diabolical Faith, and heightning the Fancy to a degree of strength and vigour sufficient to make it a fit Instrument for the defign'd Performance. Those 1 think are Reasons of likelihood and probability, why the Hellish Confederates are mostly the Ignorant and Melancholic. To pass then to another Prejudice.

SECT. IX.

Obj. VIII. The frequent Impostures that are met with in this kind, beget in some a belief, that all such Rclations are Forgeries and Tales; and if we urge the Evidence of a Story for the belief of Witches or Apparitions, they will produce two as seemingly strong and plausible, which scall conclude in Mistake or Delign; inferring thence; that all others are of the same Quality and Credit.

But fuch Arguers may pleafe to confider.

(1) T Hat a fingle Relation for an Affirmative, fufficiently confirmed and attested, is worth a thousand Tales of Forgery and Imposture, from whence an universal Negative cannot be concluded. So, that the all the Objector's Stories be true, and an hundred times as many more such deceptions z yet one Relation, wherein no fallacy or fraud could be sufpected for our Affirmative, would spoil any Conclusion could be erected on them.

And, (2) it feems to me a belief fufficiently bold and precarious, that all these Relations of Forgery and Mistake should be certain, and not one among all those which attest the Affirmative reality, with circumstances as good as could be expected or wished, should be true; but all fabulous and vain. And they have no reason to object credulity to the assertors of Sorcery and Witchcraft, that can swallow so large a morfel. And I defire such Objectors to consider,

(3) Whether it be fair to infer, That becaule there are fome Cheats and Impostors, that therefore there are no Realities. Indeed frequency of deceit and fallacy will warrant a greater care and caution in examining; and ferupulosity and solves of affent to things wherein Fraud hath been practiled, or may in the least degree be suffected: But to conclude, because that an old Womans Fancy abused her, or some Knavish fellows put Tricks upon the Ignoront and timorous, that therefore whole Affices have been a thousand times deceived in Judgments upon matters of Fact, and numbers of sober Persons have been forsmorn in things wherein Perjury could not advantage them; I say, such Inferences are as void of Reason, as they are of Charity and good Manners.

SECT.

SECT. X.

Obj. IX. BUT (IX) it may be fuggested farther, That it eannot be imagin'd what design the Devil should have in making those solutions compacts, since Persons of such debauch'd and irreclaimable dispositions as those with whom he is supposed to confederate, are pretty securely bis, antecedently to the bargain, and cannot be more so by it, since they cannot put their Souls ont of possibility of the Divine Grace, but by the Sin that is unpardonable; or if they could so dispose and give away themselves, it will to some seem very unlikely, that a great and mighty Spirit should oblige himself to such observances, and keep such ado to secure the Soul of a silly Body, which 'twere odds but it would be His, though he put himself to no farther trouble than that of his ordinary Temptations.

TO which fuggestions 'twere enough to fay, that 'tis fuf-ficient if the thing be well area'd there is the start of the st not known. And to argue negatively à fide, is very unconclufive in fuch matters. The Laws and Affairs of the other World (as hath been intimated) are vaftly differing from those of our Regions, and therefore 'tis no wonder we cannot judge of their deligns, when we know nothing of their menages, and fo little of their Natures. The Ignorant looker on can't imagine what the Limner means by those seemingly rude Lines and fcrawls which he intends for the Rudiments of a Picture, And the Figures of Mathematick operation are nonfence, and dashes at a venture, to one uninstructed in Mechanicks. We are in the dark to one anothers Purposes and Intendments; and there are a thousand Intreagues in our little matters, which will not prefently confess their defign even to fagacious Inquisitors. And therefore 'tis Folly and Incogitancy to argue any thing one way or other from the defigns of a fort of Beings, with whom we fo little communicate, and poffibly we can take no more aim, or guels at their Projects and designments, than the gazing Beasts can do at ours, when they see the Traps and Gins that are laid for them, but understand nothing what they mean. Thus in general.

But I attempt something more particularly, in order to which I must premise, that the Devil'is a name for a Body Polistick, in which there are very different Orders and Degrees of Spirits. vits, and perhaps in as much variety of Place and State, as among our felves; fo that 'tis not one and the fame Perfon that makes all the compacts with those abused and seduced Souls, but they are divers, and those 'tis like of the meanest and baleft quality in the Kingdom of darknefs: Which being fuppoied, I offer this account of the probable defign of those wicked Agents, viz. That having none to rule and tyrannize over within the. circle of their own Nature and Government, they affect a proud Empire over us, (the defire of Dominion and Authority being largely spread through the whole circumference of degenerated Nature, especially among those whose Pride was their original Tranfgreffion) every one of these then defires to get him Vaffals to pay him Homage, and to be employ'd like Slaves in the Services of his Lufts and Appetites; to gratifie which defire, 'tis like enough to be provided and allow'd by the conftitution of their State and Government, that every wicked fpirit shall have those Souls as his property, and particular Servants and Attendants, whom he can catch in fuch compacts ; as those wild Beasts that we can take in Hunting, are by the allowance of the Law our own; and those Slaves that a Man hath purchas'd are his peculiar Goods, and the Vaffals of his Will. rather those deluding Fiends are like the feducing Fellows we call Spirits, who inveigle Children by their false and flattering Promises, and carry them away to the Plantations of America, to be fervilely employ'd there in the works of their profit and advantage. And as those base Agents will humour and flatter the fimple unwary Youth, till they are on Shipboard, and without the reach of those that might rescue them from their Hands: In like manner the more mischievous Temper studies to gratifie, pleafe and accommodate those he deals with in this kind, till Death hath launch'd them into the Deep, and they are past the danger of Prayers, Repentance, and Endeavours; and then he useth them as pleaseth him. This account I think is not unreasonable, and 'twill fully answer the Objection. For though the matter be not as I have conjectur'd, yet 'twill fuggest how it may be conceiv'd; which nulls the pretence, That the Design is unconceivable.

SECT. XI.

Obj. X. BUT then (X) we are fill liable to be questioned, how it comes about, that these proud and infolent Defigners practife in this kind upon so few, when one would expect, that they should be still Trading this way, and every where be driving on the Project, which the vileness of Men makes so feifable, and would so much serve the interest of their Lusts.

 $T_{I \text{ return.}}^{0}$ which, among other things that might be fuggefted,

(1) That we are never liable to be fo betray'd and abused, till by our vile dispositions and tendencies we have forfeited the tutelary care, and overfight of the better Spirits; who, tho generally they are our guard and defence against the malice and violence of evil Angels, yet it may well enough be thought, that fome time they may take their leave of fuch as are fwallowed up by Malice, Envy and defire of Revenge, qualities most contrary to their Life and Nature ; and leave them exposed to the Invasion and Solicitations of those wicked Spirits, to whom fuch hateful Attributes makes them very fuitable. And if there be particular Guardian Angels, as 'tis not absurd to fancy, it may then be well supposed, that no Man is obnoxious to those projects and attempts, but only fuch whole vile and mischievous Natures have driven from them their protecting Genius. And against this deriliction to the Power of evil Spirits, 'tis likely enough what some affirm, that the Royal Pfalmist directs that Prayer, Pfal. LXXI. ix. x. Cast me not off in the time of old Age; forsake me not when my strength faileth. For---- They that keep my Soul [ourdarovies This Juy his, as the LXX. and the vulgar Latin, Qui custodiunt animam mean they take counsel together faying, God hath forfaken him, perfecute him and take him; for there is none to deliver him. But I add (2) That 'tis very probable, that the ftate wherein they are, will not eafily permit palpable intercourses between the bad Genii and Mankind, fince 'tis like enough that their own Laws and Government do not allow their frequent excursions into this World. Or, it may with as great probability be fupposed, that 'tis a very hard and painful thing for them, to force their thin and tenuious Bodies into a visible consistence, and fuch shapes as are necessary for their defigns in their correspondencies with Witches. For

For in this action their Bodies must needs be exceedingly compressed, which cannot well be without a painful sense. And this is perhaps a reason why there are so few Apparitions, and why appearing Spirits are commonly in fuch hafte to be gone, viz. that they may be deliver'd from the unnatural preffure of their tender vehicles; which I confess holds more, in the Apparitions of good than evil Spirits; most relations of this kind, describing their descoveries of themselves, as very transient, (though for those the holy Scripture Records, there may be peculiar reasons, why they are not fo) whereas the wicked ones are not altogether fo quick and hafty in their Visits: The reason of which probably is, the great fubtility and tenuity of the Bodies of the former, which will require far greater degrees of compression, and confequently of Pain, to make them visible; whereas the latter are more faculent and grofs, and to nearer allied to palpable confiftencies, and more eafily reduceable to Appearance and Visibility.

At this turn, Sir, you may perceive that I have again made use of the Platonick Hypothesis, that Spirits are embodied, upon which indeed a great part of my Discourse is grounded: And therefore I hold my felf oblig'd to a fhort account of that supposal. It feems then to me very probable, from the nature of Senfe, and Analogy of Nature. For (1) we perceive in our felves, that all Senfe is cauled and excited by Motion made in Matter; and when those motions which convey fenfible Impressions to the Brain, the feat of Sense, are intercepted, Senfe is loft: So that if we suppose Spirits perfectly to be disjoyn'd from all Matter, 'tis not conceivable how they can have the fense of any thing; for how material Objects should any way be perceiv'd or felt, without vital union with Matter, 'tis not poffible to imagine. Nor doth it (2) feem fuitable to the Analogy of Nature, which useth not to make precipitous leaps from one thing to another, but usually proceeds by orderly steps and gradations: Whereas were there no order of Beings between Us, who are fo deeply plung'd into the groffeft Matter, and pure unbodied Spirits, 'twere a mighty jump in Nature. Since then the greatest part of the World confiits of the finer Portions of Matter, and our own Souls are immediately united unto these, 'tis infinitely probable to conjecture, that the nearer Orders of Spirits are vitally joyn'd to fuch Bodies; and fo Nature by degrees afcending still by the more refin'd and fubtle Matter, gets at last to the pure Noes or immaterial Minds, which the Platonists made the highest Order of created Beings. But of this I have discoursed elsewhere, and have faid thus much F₃ much of it at present, because it will enable me to add a nother Reason of the unfrequency of Apparitions and Compacts, viz.

(3) Because 'tis very likely, that these Regions are very unfuitable, and disproportioned to the frame and temper of their Senfes and Bodies; fo that perhaps, the courfer Spirits can no more bear the Air of our World, than Bats and Owls can the brightest Beams of Day. Nor can the pure and berter any more endure the noyfome steams, and poyfonous reeks of this Dunghil Earth, than the Delicate can bear a confinement in nasty Dungeons, and the foul squalid Caverns of uncomfortable Darkness. So that 'tis no more wonder, that the better Spirits no oftner appear, than that Men are not more frequently in the dark Hollows under ground. Nor is it any more ftrange, that evil Spirits fo rarely vifit us, than that Filbes do not ordinarily fly in the Air, as its faid one. fort of them doth; or that we fee not the Bat daily fluttering in the Beams of the Sun. And now by the help of what I have spoken under this Head, I am provided with fome things wherewith to difable another Objection, which I thus propose.

SECT. XII.

Obj. XI. IF there be fuch an intercourse between evil Spirits and the Wicked, How comes it about that there is no correspondence between good Angels and the Vertuous, fince without doubt these are as defirous to propagate the Spirit and Defigns of the upper and better World, as those are to promote the Interest of the Kingdom of Darkness.

WHich way of Arguing is ftill from our Ignorance of the State and Government of the other World, which must be confest, and may without prejudice to the Proposition I defend. But particularly I fay, (1) That we have ground enough to believe, that good Spirits do interpose in, yea, and govern our Affairs. For that there is a Providence reaching from Heaven to Earth, is generally acknowledged; but that this fupposeth all things to be ordered by the immediate Influence and interposal of the Supream Deity, fome think is not not very Philosophical to suppose; since, if we judge by the Analogy of the natural World, all things we see, are carried on by the Ministery of second Causes, and intermediate Agents. And it doth not feem to magnificent and becoming an apprehenfion of the Supream Numen, to fancy his immediate Hand in every trivial Management. But 'tis exceeding likely to conjecture, that much of the Government of us, and our Affairs, is committed to the better Spirits, with a due subornation and fubserviency to the Will of the chief Restor of the Universe. And 'tis not absurd to believe, that there is a Government runs from highest to lowest, the better and more perfect Orders of Being still ruling the inferiour and lefs perfect. So that fome one would fancy, that perhaps the Angels may manage us, as we do the Creatures that God and Nature have placed under our Empire and Dominion. But however that is, that God rules the lower World by the Ministry of Angels, is very confonant to the facred Oracles. Thus, Deut. XXXII. 8. 9. When the most high divided the Nations their Inheritance, when he separated the fons of Adam, he fet the bounds of the people, Kar derequor dy Exar Ges, according to the number of the Angels of God, as the Septuagint renders it ; the Authority of which Translation is abundantly credited and afferted, by its being quoted in the New Testament, without notice of the Hebrew Text; even there where it differs from it, as Learned Men have observed. We know also, that Angels were very familiar with the Patriarchs of old; and Faceb's Ladder is a Mystery, which imports their ministring in the Affairs of the lower World. Thus Origen and others understand that to be spoken by the presidential Angels, Jer. LI. 9. We would have healed Babylon, but the is not bealed : forfake her and let us go. Like the Voice heard in the Temple before the taking of Jerusalem by Titus, Merakairoule erreder. And before Nebuchadnezzar was fent to learn Wildom and Religion among the Beafts, he fees a Watcher according to the 70. an Angel, and an holy one come down from Heaven. Dan. IV. 13. who pronounceth the fad Decree against him, and calls it the Decree of the Watchers, who very probably were the Guardian Genii of himself and his Kingdom. And that there are particular Angels that have the special Rule and Government of particular Kingdoms, Provinces, Cities, yea and of Persons, I know nothing that can make The inftance is notorious in Daniel, of the Animprobable: gels of Perfia and Gracia, that hindred the other that was engaged for the concerns of Judea; yea our Saviour himfelf tells rells us, that Children have their Angels; and the Congregation of Dilciples supposed that St. Peter had his. Which things if they be granted, the good Spirits have not fo little to do with us, and our matters, as is generally believed. And perhaps it would not be ablurd, if we referr'd many of the strange Thiparts, and unexpected Events, the Disappointments and lucky co-incidences that befall us. the unaccountable Fortunes and Succeffes that attend fome lucky Men, and the unbippy Fates that dog others that feem born to be Miferable; the Fame and Favour that still waits on some without any conceiveable Motive to allure it, and the general neglect of others more deferving, whole worth is not acknowledg'd; I fay, thele and fuch like odd things, may with the greateft probability be refolved into the Conduct and Menages of those invisible Supervisors, that prefide over, and govern our Affairs.

But if they so far concern themselves in our matters, how is it that they appear not to maintain a visible and confest Correspondence with some of the better Mortals, who are most fitted for their Communications and their Influence? To which I have faid some things already, when I accounted for the unfrequency of Apparizions; and I now add what I intend for another return to the main Objection, viz.

(2) That the Apparition of good Spirits is not needful for the Defigns of the better World, whatever such may be for the interest of the other. For we have had the Appearance and Cohabitation of the Son of God; we have Mofes and the Prophets, and the continued Influence of the Spirit, the greatest Arguments to ftrengthen Faith, the most powerful Motives to excite our Love, and the noblest Encouragements to quicken and raife our Defires and Hopes, any of which are more than the Apparition of an Angel; which would indeed be a great gratification of the Animal Life, but it would render our Faith less Noble and less Generous, were it frequently fo affifted : Blessed are they that believe, and yet have not feen. Befides which, the good Angels have no fuch ends to prolecute, as the gaining any Vaffals to ferve them, they being ministring Spirits for our good, and no felf designers for a proud and infolent Dominion over us. And it may be perhaps, not impertinently added, that they are not always evil Spirits that appear, as is (I know not well upon what grounds) generally imagined; but that the extraordinary detections of Murders, latent Treasures, falified and unfulfilled Bequests, which are formetimes made by Apparitiins, may be the courteous Dilco-

Discoveries of the better and more benign Genii. Yea, 'tis not unlikely, that those warnings that the World sometimes hath of approaching Judgments and Calamities by Prodigies, and fundry odd Phenomena, are the kind Informations of fome of the Inhabitants of the upper World. Thus was Jerusalem forewarned before its Sacking by Antiochus, by those Airy Horsemen that were seen through all the City, for almost 40 Days together, 2 Mac. v. 2, 3. and the other Prodigious Portends that foreran its Destruction by Titus, which I mention because they are notorious Instances. And the' for mine own part, I fcorn the ordinary Tales of Prodigies, which proceed from superstitious Fears, and unacquaintance with Nature, and have been used to bad purposes by the Zealous and the Ignorant; yet I think that the Arguments that are brought by a late very Ingenious Author, to conclude against such Warnings and Predictions in the whole kind, are (hort and inconfequent, and built upon too narrow Hypothefis. For if it be supposed, that there is a fort of Spirits over us, and about us, who can give a probable guess at the more remarkable futurities, I know not why it may not be conjectur'd, that the kindness they have for us, and the appetite of foretelling strange things, and the putting the World upon expectation, which we find is very grateful to our own Na-tures, may not incline them also to give us some general notice of those uncommon Events which they fore-see. And I yet perceive no reason we have to fancy, that whatever is done in this kind, must needs be either immediately from Heaven, or from the Angels, by extraordinary Commission and Appointment. But it feems to me not unreasonable to believe, that those officious Spirits that oversee our Affrirs, perceiving fome mighty and fad Alterations at hand, in which their Charge is much concerned, cannot chuse by reason of their Affection to us, but give us some feasonable Hints of those approaching Calamities; to which also their Natural defire to foretel strange things to come, may contribute to incline them. and by this Hypothesis, the fairest probabilities, and strongest ratiocinations against Prodigies may be made unserviceable. But this only by the way.

SECT.

SECT. XIII.

T Defire it may be confidered farther,

(3) That God himself affords his intimacies and converses to the better Souls, that are prepared for it; which is a priviledge infinitely beyond Angelical Correspondence.

I confeis the proud and phantaftick pretences of many of the conceited Melancholifts in this Age, to Divine Communion, have prejudiced divers intelligent Perfons against the belief of any iuch happy vouchfafement; fo that they conclude the Doctrine of immediate Communion with the Deity in this Life to be but an high-flown notion of warm Imagination, and overluscious Selfflattery; and I acknowledge I have my felf had thoughts of this nature, supposing Communion with God to be nothing elfe but the exercise of vertue, and that Peace, and these Comforts which naturally result from it.

But I have sonfidered fince, that God's more near and immediate imparting himself to the Soul that is prepared for that happinels by divine Love, Humility and Refignation, in the way of a vital touch, and fense, is a thing possible in it felf, and will be a great part of our Heaven. That Glory is begun in Grace, and God is pleafed to give fome excellent Souls the happy Antepast. That holy Men in ancient times have fought and gloried in this Enjoyment, and never complained fo forely as when it was with-held, and interrupted. That the expressions of Scripture run infinitely this way, and the best of Modern good Men, do from their own experience attest it, That this fpiritualizeth Religion, and renders its enjoyments more comfortable and delicious. That it keeps the Soul under a vivid lense of God, and is a grand fecurity against Temptation. That it holds it steady amid the Flatteries of a prosperous State, and gives it the most grounded anchorage and support amid the Waves of an adverse Condition. That 'tis the noblest encouragement to Vertue, and the bigeft affurance of an happy Immortality. 1 fay, I confidered these weighty things, and wondred at the carelefnefs and prejudice of thoughts that occafion'd my fufpecting the reality of to glorious a Priviledge; I faw how little reason there is in denying matters of inward sense, because our felves do not feel them, or cannot form an apprehension of them in our Minds. I am convinc'd that things of guft and relish muft he be judg'd by the fentient and vital Faculties, and not by the noetical Exercises of speculative understandings: And upon the whole, I believe infinitely that the Divine Spirit affords its fenfible presence. and immediate beatifick Touch to some rare Souls. who are divested of carnal felf and mundane Pleasures, abstracted from the Body by Prayer and holy Meditation; spiritual in their Defires, and calm in their Affections ; devout Lovers of God and Vertue, and tenderly affectionate to all the World ; fincere in their aims, and circumspect in their Actions; inlarged in their Souls, clear in their Minds : These I think are the dispositions that are requisite to fit us for Divine Communion ; and God transacts not in this near way, but with prepared Spirits who are thus disposed for the manifestation of his presence and his influence : And fuch, I believe, he never fails to blefs with these bapty toretaltes of Glory.

But for those that are passionate and conceited, turbulent and notional, confident and immodest, imperious and malicious; that doat upon trifles, and run fiercely in the ways of a Sect, that are lifted up in the apprehension of the glorious prerogatives of themfelves and their Party, and fcorn all the World befides; For fuch, I fay, be their pretentions what they will, to divine Communion, Illapfes, and Difcoveries, I believe them not; their Fancies abuse them, or they would us. For what Communion hath Light with Darkness, or the Spirit of the HOLY ONE with these whole genius and ways are fo uulike him? But the other excellent Souls I described, will as certainly be visited by the Divine Presence, and Converse, as the Chrystalline Streams are with the beams of Light, or the fitly prepar'd Earth whole Seed is in it felf, will be actuated by the fpirit of Nature.

So that there is no reason to object here the want of Anger lical Communications, though there were none -vouchlafed usfince good Men enjoy the Divine, which are infinitely more fatisfactory and indearing.

And now I may have leave to proceed to the next Objection, which may be made to speak thus:

SECT.

SECT. XIV.

Obj. XII. THE belief of Witches, and the wonderful things they are faid to perform by the help of the Confederate Dæmon, weakens our Faith, and exposeth the World to Infidelity in the great matters of our Religion. For if they by Diabolical affiftance can inflict and cure Difeases, and do things so much beyond the comprehension of our Philosophy, and activity of common Nature ; what assurance can we have, that the Miracles that confirm our Gospel were not the effects of a Compact or like Nature, and that Devils were not cast out by Belzebub? If evil Spirits can assume Bodies, and render themselves visible in humane likenes; What fecurity can we have of the reality of the Refurrection of Chrift? And if, by their help, Witches can enter Chambers invisibly through Key-holes and little unperceived Crannies, and transform themselves at pleasure; What Arguments of Divinity are there in our Saviour's shewing himself in the midst of his Disciples, when the doors were shut, and his. Transfiguration in the Mount? Miracles are the great inducements of Belief; And how shall we distinguish a Miracle from a lying Wonder; a Teltimony from Heaven from a Trick of the Angels of Hell, if they can perform things that astonish and confound our Reasons, and are beyond all the Poffibilities of Human Nature? This Objection is spightful and mischievous; but I thus endeavour to dispatch it.

(1) THE Wonders done by Confederacy with wicked Spirits, cannot derive a fulpicion upon the undoubted Miracles that were wrought by the Author and Promulgers of our Religion, as if they were perform'd by Diabolical Compact, fince their Spirit, Endeavours and Defigns, were notorioufly contrary to all the Tendencies, Aims and Interests of the Kingdoms of Darkneß. For as to the Life and Temper of the bleffed and adorable JESUS, we know there was an incomparable sweetneß in his Nature, Humility in his Manners, Calmnes in his Temper, Compassion in his Miracles, Modelty in his Expressions, Holines in all his Actions, Hatred of Vice and Basens, and Love to all the World; all which are effentially contrary to the Nature and Conftitution of Apostate Spirits, who abound in Pride and Rancour, Infolence and Rudenes, Tyranny and Basenes, universal Malice and Hatred of Men. And their Defigns are are as opposite as their Spirit and Genius. And now, Can the Sun borrow its Light from the bottomles Abys? Can Heat and Warmth flow in upon World from the Regions of Snow and Ice ? Can Fire freeze and Water burn? Can Natures, fo infinitely contrary, communicate, and jump in Projects that are destructive to each others known Interests? Is there any Balfom in the Cockatrices Egg? or, Can the Spirit of Life flow from the Venome of the Ap? Will the Prince of Darkness ftrengthen the Arm that is stretcht out to pluck his Usurpt Scepter, and his Spoils from him? And will he lend his Legions to affift the Armies of his Enemy against him? No, these are impossible Supposals, no intelligent Being will industriously and knowingly contribute to the contradiction of its own Principles. the Defeature of its Purpofes, and the ruin of its own dearest Interests. There is no fear then that our Faith should receive prejudice from the Acknowledgment of the Being of Witches, and power of evil Spirits, fince 'tis not the doing wonderful things that is the only Evidence that the Holy FESUS was from God, and his Doctrine true : but the conjunction of other Circumstances, the bolines of his Life, the reasonableness of his Religion, and the excellency of his Designs added credit to his Works, and strengthend the great Conclusion, That he could be no other than the Son of God, and Saviour of the World. But befides, I fay,

(2) That fince infinite Wildom and Goodnefs rules the World, it cannot be conceiv'd, that they should give up the greatest part of Men to unavoidable deception. And if evil Angels by their Confederates are permitted to perform fuch aftonishing things, as feem to evidently to carry God's Seal and Power with them, for the confirmation of Fallboods, and gaining credit to Impostures, without any counter-Evidence to disabuse the World; Mankind is exposed to fad and fatal delusions. And to fay that Providence will fuffer us to be deceived in things of the greatest concernment, when we use the best of our care and endeavours to prevent it, is to speak hard things of God; and in effect to affirm, That he hath nothing to do in the Government of the World, or doth not concern himself in the Affairs of poor forlorn Men. And if the Providence and Goodness of God be not a fecurity unto us against such Deceptions, we cannot be affured, but that we are always abused by those mischievous Agents, in the Objetts of plain Senfe, and in all the matters of our daily converses. If ONE that pretends he is immediately sent from God, to overthrow the ancient Fabrick of Established Wor-Ship. Ibip, and to erect a new Religion in his Name, shall be born of a Virgin, and honour'd by a miraculous Star; proclaimed by a Song of feeming Angels of Light, and worshipped by the wife Sages of the World; Reverenc'd by those of the greatest Austerity, and admir'd by all for a miraculous Wildom, bevond his Education in his Years: If he shall feed multitudes with almost nothing, and fast himself beyond all the possibilities of Nature: if he shall be transformed into the appearance of extraordinary Glory, and converse with departed Prophets in their visible Forms: If he shall Cure all Diseases without Phyfick or Endeavour, and raise the Dead to Life after they have flunk in their Graves: If he shall be honoured by Voices from Heaven, and attract the universal wonder of Princes and People: If he shall allay Tempests with a beck, and cast out Devils with a Word : If he shall foretell his own Death particularly, with its Tragical Circumstances, and his Resurrection after it : If the Veil of the most famous Temple in the World shall be rent, and the Sun darkned at his Funeral: If he shall within the time foretold break the bonds of Death, and lift up his Head out of the Grave: If Multitudes of other departed Souls shall arife with him, to attend at the folemnity of his Refurrection : If he shall after Death, visibly converse, and eat and drink with divers Perfons, who could not be deceived in a matter of clear Senfe, and a/cend in Glory in the prefence of an aftonisht and admiring Multitude: I fay, if such a one as this flould prove a diabolical Impostor, and Providence should permit him to be fo credited and acknowledged ; What poffibility were there then for us to be affured that we are not always deceived ? yea, that our very Faculties were not given us only to delude and abufe us? and if fo, the next Conclufion is, That there is no God that judgeth on the Earth; and the best and most likely Hypothesis will be, That the World is given up to the Government of the Devil. But if there be a Providence that superviseth us, (as nothing is more certain) doubless it will never suffer poor helpless Creatures to be inevitably deceived by the craft and fubrility of their mischievous Enemy, to their undoing; but will without question take such care, that the works wrought by divine Power for the Confirmation of Divine Truth, shall have fuch visible Marks and Signatures, if not in their Nature, yet in their Circumstances, Ends and Designs, as shall discover whence they are, and sufficiently diftinguith them from all Impoftures and Delusions. And though wicked Spirits may perform fome ftrange things that may excite wonder for a while, yet he hath, and will fo provide that they they shall be baffled and discredited; as we know it was in the case of Moses and the Egyptian Magicians.

These things I count sufficient to be faid to this last and Shrewdest Objection ; though fome, I understand, except, that I have made it ftronger than the Answer I have applied. That I have urged the Argument of Unbelievers home, and reprefented it in its full frength, I suppose can be no matter of just Reproof: For to triumph over the weakness of a Cause, and to overlook its strength, is the trick of shallow and interessed Disputers, and the worst way to defend a good Cause, or confute a bad one. I have therefore all along urged the most cogent things I could think of for the Interest of the Objectors, because I would not impose upon my Reader or my felf; and the stronger I make their Premises, the more shall I weaken their Conclusion if I answer them; which whether I have done or not, I refer my felf to the Judgments of the ingenious and confiderate; from whom I should be very glad to be inform'd in what particular Points my discourse is defective. General Charges are no Proofs, nor are they eafily capable of an anfwer. Yer, to the mention'd exception I fay,

That the ftrength of the Objection is not my fault, for the reafons alledg'd; and for the supposed incompetency of my return, I propose, that if the circumstances of the Persons, Ends and Issues be the best Notes of Distinction between true Miracles and Forgeries, Divine and Diabolical ones, I have then faid enough to fecure the Miracles of our Saviour, and the holy Men of ancient times. But if these Objectors think they can give us any better, or more infallible Criteria, I defire them to weigh what I have offer'd about Miracles in some of the following Leaves, before they enter that thought among their Certainties. And if their other marks of difference will hold, notwithstanding those Allegations, I suppose the inquisitive believing World would be glad to know them, and I shall have particular obligations to the discoverer, for the strength with which he will thereby affist my Answer.

But till I fee that, I can fay nothing ftronger; or if I faw it, which I shall not in haste expect, I should not be convinced but that the circumstances of difference, which I have noted, are abundantly sufficient to disarm the Objection; and to shew, that though Apparitions, Witchcraft and Diabolical Wonders are admitted, yet none of these can fasten any flurr, or ground of dangerous doubt upon the miraculous performances of the H: JESUS and his Apostles. If the disfarissied can shew it, I shall yield my felf an humble Profelyte to their Reasons; but till I know them, the general suggestion will not convince me.

Now,

Now, befides what I have directly faid to the main Objection, I have this to add to the Objectors, that I could with they would take care of fuch Suggestions; which if they overthrow not the Opinion they oppole, will dangerously affront the Religion they would feem to acknowledge. For he that faith; That if there are WITCHES, there is no way to prove that Chrift Jefus was not a Magician and diabolical Impostor, puts a deadly Weapon into the hands of the Infidel, and is himself next door to the SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST: of which, in order to the perfuading greater tenderness and eaution in fuch Matters, I give this short account.

SECT. XV.

THE Sin against the Holy Ghost is faid to be Unpardonable : By which fad Attribute, and the Discourse of our Saviour, Mat. 12. from the 22 to the 33. verse, we may understand its Nature. In order to which we confider, that fince the Mercies of God, and the Merits of his Son are infinite, there is nothing can make a Sin unpardonable but what make it incurable ; and there is no Sin but what is curable by a ftrong Faith and vigorous Endeavour : For all things are possible to han that believeth. So that that which makes a Sin incurable, must be fomewhat that makes Faith impossible, and obstructs all means of Conviction. In order to the finding which, we must confider the ways and methods the Divine Goodne's hath taken for the begetting Faith, and cure of Infidelity, which it attempted first by the Prophets and holy Men of ancient times, who by the excellency of their Doctrine, the greatness of their Miracles, and the holinefs of their Lives, endeavoured the Conviction and Reformation of a stubborn and unbelieving World. But though few believed their Report, and Men would not be prevail'd on by what they did, or what they faid ; yet their Infidelity was not hitherto incurable, because further means were provided in the Ministry of John the Baptist, whole Life was more fevere, whole Doctrines were more plain, preffing and particular ; and therefore twas possible that he might have fucceeded. Yea, and where he fail'd, and could not open Mens Hearts and their Eyes, the effect was still in poffibility, and it might be expected from him that came after, to whom the Prophets Prophets and John were but the Twilight and the Dawn. And tho' his miraculous Birth, the Song of Angels, the Journey of the Wife men of the East, and the correspondence of Prophecies, with the Circumstances of the first Appearance of the wonderful Infant : I fay, tho' these had not been taken notice of, yet was there a farther provision made for the eure of Infidelity, in his aftonishing Wisdom, and most excellent Doctrines; for, He spake as never man did. And when these were despised and neglected, yet there were other means towards Conviction and cure of Unbelief, in those mighty Works that bore Testimony of him, and wore the evident Marks of Divine Power in their Foreheads. But when after all, these clear and unquestionable Miracles which were wrought by the Spirit of God, and had eminently his Superscription on them, shall be ascribed to the Agency of evil Spirits and Diabolical Compact, as they were by the malicious and spightful Pharifees in the periods above mentioned ; . when those great and last Testimonies against Infidelity, shall be faid to be but the Tricks of Sorcery, and Complotment with Hellish Confederates, this is Blashemy in the highest, against the Power and Spirit of God, and fuch as cuts off all means of Conviction, and puts the Unbelievers beyond all poffibilities of Cure. For Miracles are God's Seal, and the great and last Evidence of the Truth of any Doctrine. And tho, while these are only dis-believed as to the Fact, there remains a poffibility of perfusion; yet when the Fact shall be aeknowledg'd, but the Power blasphemed, and the Effects of the adorable Spirit malicioufly imputed to the Devils; fuch a Blassbemy, fuch an Infidelity is incurable, and confequently unpardonable. I fay in fome, one Sin against the Holy Ghost seems to be a malicious Imputation of the Miracles wrought by the Spirit of God in our Saviour, to Satanical Confederacy, and the Power of Apostate Spirits ; than which nothing is more Blasphemous, and nothing is more like to provoke the Holy Spirit that is so abused, to an eternal Dereliction of io vile and fo incurable an Unbeliever.

This account, as 'tis clear and reafonable in it felf, fo it is plainly lodg'd in the mention'd Difcourfe of our Saviour. And most of those that speak other things about it, feem to me to talk at random, and perfectly without Book. But to leave them to the fondness of their own Conceits, I think it now time to draw up to a Conclusion of the whole,

G

SECT. XVI.

Herefore briefly, Sir, I have endeavoured in these Papers, which my refpect and your concernment in the Subject have made yours, to remove the main Prejudices I could think of against the Existence of Witches and Apparitions. And I'm fure I have fuggested much more against what I defend, than ever I heard or faw in any that oppofed it; whole Discourses for the most part, have seemed to me infpired by a lofty fcorn of common belief, and some trivial Notions of vulgar Philosophy. And in despiling the common Faith about matters of Fact, and fondly adhering to it in things of Speculation, they very grofly and abfurdly miftake; for in things of Fact, the People are as much to be believed, as the most fubtle Philosophers and Speculators; fince here, Sense is the Judge, but in matters of Notions and Theory, they are not at all to be heeded, because Reason is to be Judge of thefe, and this they know not how to use. And yet thus it is with those wife Philosophers, that will deny the plain Evidence of the Senfes of Mankind, because they cannot reconcile Appearances with the fond Crochets of a Philosophy, which they lighted on in the High-way by chance, and will adhere to at a venture. So that I profels for mine own part, I never yet heard any of the confident Declaimers against Witchcraft and Apparitions, speak any thing that might move a Mind, in any degree inftructed in the generous kinds of Philosophy and Nature of things. And for the Objections I have recited, they are most of them fuch as role out of mine own Thoughts, which I was obliged to confider what was possible to be faid upon this occasion.

For tho' I have examined SCOT's DISCOVERY, fancying that there I should find the strong Reasons of Mens disbelief in this matter; yet I profess I met not with the least fuggestion in all that Farrago, but what had been ridiculous for me to have gone about to Answer, for the Author doth little but tell odd Tales, and filly Legends, which he confutes and laughs at, and pretends this to be a Confutation of the being of Witches and Apparitions, in all which, his Reasonings are triffing and childish; and when he ventures at Philosophy, he is little better than absurd; fo that it will be a wonabout Witchcraft.

wonder to me, if any but Boys and Buffoons imbibe any Prejudices against a Belief fo infinitely confirmed, from the loofe and impotent Suggestions of fo weak a Difcourfer.

But however, observing two things in that Discourse that would pretend to be more than ordinary Reasons, I shall do them the civility to examine them. It is said then.

(1) That the Gospel is filent as to the being of WITCHES; and 'tis not likely, if there were such, but that our Saviour or his Apostles had given intimations of their Existence.

The other is,

(2) Miracles are ceased, and therefore the prodigious things alcribed to Witchcraft, are supposed Dreams and Impostures.

For Answer to the First in order, I consider (1) That the' the Hiftory of the New Testament were granted to be filent in the businels of Witches and Compacts, yet the Records of the Old have a frequent mention of them. The Law, Exod. xxii. 18. against permitting them to live, (which Imention'd in the beginning) is famous. And we have another remarkable Prohibition of them, Dcut. xviii. 10, 11. There shall not be found among you any one that maketh his Son or his Daughter paß through the Fire, or that uleth Divination, or an observer of Times, or an Enchanter, or a Witch, or a Charmer, or a Confulter with familiar Spirits, or a Wizard, or a Necromancer. Now this accumulation of Names, (fome of which are of the fame fense and import) is a plain indication that the Hebrew Witch was one that practiled by compact with coil Spirits And many of the fame Expressions are put together in the. Charge against Manaffes, 2 Chron. xxxiii. viz. That he caufed his Children to pass through the Fire, observed Times, used Enchantments and Witcherast, and dealt with Familiar Spirits, and with Wizards. So that the Original Word which we render Witch and Witcheraft, should as our Sadducees urge, fignifie only a Cheat and a Poyfoner; yet those others mentioned, plainly enough fpeak the thing; and I have given an account in the former Confiderations, how a Witch in the common Notion is a Poyloner, but why meer Poyloning should have a diffinct Law against ir, and not be concluded under the general one against Murder; why meer Leger-demain and Cheating should be so severely animadverted on, as to be reckon'd with Enchantments, converse with Devils, and Idolatrous practices: I believe the denicr of Witches will find G 2 find it hard to give a reason; to which I may add some of ther Paffages of Scripture that yield fufficient evidence in the case. The Nations are forbid to hearken to the Diviners, Dreamers, Enchanters, and Sorcerers, Jer. xxvii. 9. The Caldeans are deeply threatned for their Sorceries and Enchantments, Isa. xlvii. 9. and we read that Nebuchadnezzar called the Migicians, Aftrologers, Sorcerers, and Chaldeans to tell his Dream. My mention of which last, minds me to fay, that for ought I have to the contrary, there may be a fort of Witches and Magicians that have no Familiars that they know, nor any expreß compact with apostate Spirits; who yet may perhaps act strange things by Diabolical aids, which they procure by the use of those Forms, and wicked Arts that the Devil did first impart to his Confederates; and we know not but the Laws of that dark Kingdom may enjoyn a particular attendance upon all those that practise their Mysteries, whether they know them to be theirs or not, for a great Interest of their Empire may be served by this Project, fince those that find fuch fuccels in the unknown Conjurations, may by that be toll'd on to more express Transactions with those Fiends, that have affifted them incognito; or if they proceed not lo far, yet they run upon a Rock by acting in the dark, and dealing in unknown and unwarranted Arts, in which the effect is much beyond the proper efficiency of the thing they use, and affords ground of more than fulpicion, that some evil Spirit is the Agent in those wondrous performances.

Upon this account I fay, it is not to me unlikely, but that the Devils may by their own Constitution be bound to attend upon all that use their Ceremonies and Forms, tho' ignorantly and without defign of evil; and fo Conjuration may have been performed by those who are none of the Covenant-Sorcerers and Witches. Among those perhaps we may justly reckon Balaam, and the Diviners. For Balaam, Monceus hath undertaken to clear him from the guilt of the greater Sor-And the Diviners are usually diftinctly mentioned from cery. those that had Familiar Spirits. The Astrologers also of Elder times, and those of ours, I take to have been of this fort of Magicians, and fome of them under the colour of that mystical Science, worse. And I question not, but that things are really done, and forecold by those pretended Artists, that are much beyond the regular poffibilities of their Art; which in this appears to be exceedingly uncertain and precarious, in that there are no lefs than fix ways of errecting a Scheme, in each of which the prediction of Events shall be different, and and yet every one of them be justifiable by the Rules of that Science. And the Principles they go, upon, are found to be very arbitrary and unphilosophical, not by the ordinary Declaimers against it, but by the most profound Inquirers into things, who perfectly understand the whole Mystery, and are the only competent Judges.

Now those Mystical Students may in their first addresses to this Science, have no other defign but the fatisfaction of their Curiofity to know 'remote and hidden things; yet that in the progress being not fatisfied within the bounds of their Art. doth many times tempt the curious Inquirer to use worse means of Information ; and no doubt those mischievous Spirits that are as vigilant as the Beafts of Prey, and watch all occasions to get us within their envious reach, are more conftant Attenders, and careful Spies upon the Actions and Inclinations of fuch, whole Genius and Designs prepare them for their Temptations. So that I look on Judicial Astrology, as a fair Introduction to Sorcery and Witchcraft, and who knows but that it was first fet on foot by the Infernal Hunters, as a Lure to draw the Curiofo's into those Snares that lie hid beyond it; and yet I believe alfo, it may be innocently enough studied by those, that aim only to understand what it is, and how far it will honestly go, and are not willing to condemn any thing which they do not comprehend, but that they must take care to keep themselves within the Bounds of fober Enquiry, and not indulge irregular Solicitudes about the knowledge of things which Providence hath thought fit to conceal from us; which whoever doth, lays himself open to the Defigns and Solicitations of evil Spirits; and I believe there are very few among thole who have been addicted to thole strange Arts of wonder, and prediction, but have found themselves attaqued by some unknown Sollicitors, and inticed by them to the more dangerous Actions and Correspondencies; for as there are a fort of base and fordid Spirits that attend the Envy and Malice of the ignorant and viler fort of Perfons, and betray them into Compacts by Promifes of Revenge, fo, no doubt there are a kind of more airy and speculative Fiends, of an higher Rank and Order than thole wretched Imps, who apply themfelves to the Curious, and many times prevail with them by Offers of the more recondite Knowledge, as we know it was in the first Temptation, yea, and sometimes they are fo cautious and wary in their Conversations with more refined Perfons, that they never offer to make any express Covenants with them, and to this purpose I have been informed by a very Learned and Reverend Doctor, that one Mr. Edwards

Edwards a Master of Arts of Trinity College in Cambrige, being reclaimed from Conjuration, declared in his Repentance, that the Demon always appeared to him like a Man of good Fashion, and never required any Compati-from him; and no doubt they fort themselves agreeably to the State, Port, and Genius of those with whom they converse; yea'tis like, as I conjectured, are assistant fometimes to those, to whom they dare not shew themselves in any oppenness of appearance, left they should fright them from those ways of Sin and Temptation. so that we see that Men may act by evil Spirits, withcut their own knowledge that they do so.

And poffibly Nebuchednezzar's Wisemen might be of this fort of Magicians; which supposal I mention the rather, because it may ferve me against some things that may be objected : For it may be faid, If they had been in Confederacy with Devils, it is not probable that Daniel would have been their Advocate, or in fuch inoffensive Terms have diftinguisht their skill from Divine Revelation ; nor should he, one would think, have accepted the Office of being Provost over them. Thefe Circumstances may be supposed to intimate a probability, that the Magi of Babylon were in no profest Diabolical Completm nt, and I grant it. But yet they might, and in all likelibood did, use the Arts and Methods of Action, which obtain Demmiack Co-operation and Affistance, though without their privity, and fo they were a lefs Criminal fort of Conjurers; for those Arts were convey'd down along to them from one Hand to another, and the Succeffors still took them up from those that Precede without a Philosophical Scrutiny or Examen. They faw strange things were done, and Events predicted by fuch forms, and fuch Words; How they could not tell, nor 'tis like did not enquire ; but contented themselves with' this general account, That twas by the power of their Arts, and were not follicitous for any other Reason. This I say, was probably the cafe of most of these Predictors, though it may be, others of them advanced further into the more defperate part of the Mystery. And that fome did immediately transact with appearing evil Spirits in those times, is apparent enough from express mention in the Scriptures I have alledg'd.

And the Story of the WITCH of ENDOR. I Sam. XXVIIIis a remarkable demonstration of the main Conclusion; which will appear when we have confidered and removed the Fancy, and gloss of our Author about it, in his DISCOVERY where to avoid this evidence he affirms, This WITCH to be but but a Cozener, and the whole transaction a Cheat and Imposture, manag'd by her felf and a Confederate. And in order to the perfuading this, he tells a fine Tale, viz. That she departed from Saul into her Closet, 'where doubtles, fays he, she had 'a Familiar, fome lewd crafty Priest, and made Saul stand at ' the Door like a Fool, to hear the cozening Answers. He faith, ' she there used the ordinary Words of Conjuration; and after ' them Samuel appears, whom he affirms to be no other than ' either the Witch her felf, or her Confederate. By this pretty knack and contrivance he thinks he hath difabled the Relation from fignifying to our purpose.

But the DISCOVERER might have confidered, that all this is an Invention, and without Book. For there is no mention of the Witches Closet, or her retiring into another Room, or her Confederate, or her form of Conjuration: I fay, nothing of all this, is as much as intimated in the Hiftory; and if we may take this large liberty in the Interpretation of Scripture, there is scarce a Story in the Bible but may be made a Fallacy, an Imposture, or any thing that we please. Nor is this fancy of his only Arbitrary, but indeed contrary to the Circumstances of the Text. For it lays, Saul perceived it was Samuel, and bowed himfelf, and this Samuel truly foretold his approaching Fate, viz. That Ifrael should be delivered with him into the Hands of the Philistians; and that on the Morrow He and his Sons should be in the state of the Dead, which doubrlefs is meant by the Expression, that [they should be with him] Which contingent particulars, how could the Cozener and her Confederate foretel, if there were nothing in it extraordinary and preternatural.

It hath indeed been a great difpute amongst Interpreters, whether the real Samuel was raifed or the Devil in his likenes? Most later Writers suppose it to have been an evil Spirit, upon the supposition that good and happy Souls can never return hither from their Cælestial abodes; and they are not certainly at the beck and call of an impious Hag. But then those of the other fide urge, that the Piety of the Words that were spoke, and the feasonable reproof given to despairing Saul, are indications sufficient that they come not from Hell; and especially they think the Prophesie of Circumstances very accidental to be an Argument that it was not utter'd by any of the infernal Predictors. And for the supposal that is the ground of that Interpretation, 'tis judged exceedingly precarious; for who faith that happy departed Souls were never employed in any ministeries here below? And those Diffenters are ready to ask a reafon,

Ion, why they may not be fent in Mellages to Earth, as well as those of the Angelical Order? They are nearer allied to our Natures, and upon that account more intimately concern'd in our affairs ; and the Example of returning Lazarus is evidence of the thing de facto. Befides which, that it was the real Samuelo they think made probable by the opinion of Jefus the Son of Syrac, Ecclef. XLVI. 19, 20. who faith of him, That after his death he prophefied and shewed the King his end: which also is likely from the circumstance of the Womans aftanishmene, and crying out when the faw him, intimating her furprize, in that the power of God had over-ruled her Enchantments, and fent another than the expected. And they conceive there is no more incongruity in fuppofing God should fend Samuel to rebuke Saul for this his last Folly, and to predict his instant ruin, than in his interpoling Elias to the Meffengers of Ahazias when he fent to Beelzebub. Now if it were the real Samuel, as the Letter expreffeth, (and the obvious fence is to be followed when there is no cogent reason to decline it) he was not raised by the power of the Witches Enchantments, but came on that occasion on a Divine Errand. But yet attempts and endeavours to raife her Familiar Spirit, (though at that time over-ruled) are arguments that it hath been her cuftom to do fo, Or if it were as the other fide concludes, the Devil in the shape of Samuel, her diabolical Confederacy is yet more palpable.

SECT. II.

I Have now done with SCOT and his Prefumptions; and am apt to fancy, that there is nothing more needful to be faid to discover the Discoverer. But there is an Author infinitely more valuable, that calls me to confider him, 'Tis the great Episcopius, who tho' he grants a fort of Witches and Magicians; yet denies Compacts. His Authority, I confess, is confiderable, but let us weigh his Reasons.

His First is, That there is no example of any of the prophene Nations that were in fuch Compatt; whence he would infer, that there are no express Covenants with evil Spirits in particular Instances. But I think that both Proposition and Confequence are very obnoxious and defective. For that there were Nations Nations that did actually worfhip the Devil is plain enough in the Records of ancient Times, and some so read that place in the Plalms, The Gods of the Heathen are Devils ; and Sathan we know is called the God of this World. Yea our Author himself confesset that the Nation of the 7ews were so strictly prohibited Witcheraft, and all transaction with evil Spirits; because of their proneness to worship them. But what need more? There are at this Day that pay Sacrifice, and all facred Homage to the micked Dne in a visible appearance; and 'tis well known to those of our own that Traffick and reside in those Parts, that the Caribbians worfhip the Devil under the name of Maboya, who frequently shews himself, and transacts with them; the like Travellers relate concerning divers other parts of the barbarous Indies : And 'tis confidently reported by fober intelligent Men that have visited those places, that most of the Laplanders, and fome other Northern People are Witches. That 'tis plain that there are National Confederacies with Devils; or if there were none, I fee not how it could be inferred thence, that there are no perfonal ones, no more, than that there were never any Damoniacks, because we know of no Nation univerfally poffeffed; nor any Lunaticks in the World, because there is no Country of Madmen. But our Author reasons again.

(2) To this purpole; That the profligate Perfons who are obnoxious to those gross Temptations, are fast enough before; and therefore fuch a Covenant were needless, and of no avail to the Tempters Projects.

This Objection I have answered already, in my Remarks upon the IX. Prejudice; and mind you again here, that if the defigns of those evil Spirits were only in general to scure wicked Men to the dark Kingdom, it might better be pretended that we cannot give a reason for their Temptations, and endeavours in this kind, but it being likely, as I have conjectur'd, that each of those infernal Tempters hath a particular property in those he hath feduced and secured by such Compatis, their respective Pride and tyrannical defire of Slaves, may reasonably be thought to engage them in such Attempts, in which their so peculiar interest is concern'd.

But I add what is more direct, viz. That fuch desperate Sinners are made more fafe to the infernal Kingdom at large, by fuch hellish Covenants and Combinations: fince thereby they confirm, and harden their Hearts against God, and put themfelves at a greater distance from his Grace, and his Spirit; give give the deepeft Wound to Conficience, and refolve to wink againft all its Light and Convictions; throw a Bar in the way of their own Repentance, and lay a Train for defpair of iMercy. These certainly are fure ways of being undone, and the Devil we see hath great Interest in a Project, the success cels of which is so attended. And we know he made the affault de facto upon our Saviour, when he tempted him to fall down and worship. So that this learned Author hath but little reason to Object,

(3) That to endeavour fuch an express Covenant is contrary to the Interests of Hell; which indeed are this way fo mightily promoted. And whereas he fuggefts, that a thing fo horrid is like to startle Confcience, and awaken the Soul to Confidera. tion and Repentance: I reply, That indeed confidering Man in the general, as a rational Creature, acted by Hopes and Fears, and sensible of the Joys and Miseries of another World, one would expect it should be fo: But then, if we cast our Eyes upon Man, as really he is, funk into flefh and prefent fense ; darkned in his Mind, and governed by his Imagination : blinded by his Paffions, and befotted by Sin and Folly; hardned by evil Cuftoms, and hurried away by the torrent of his Inclination and Defires: I fay, looking on man in this miferable state of Evil, 'tis not incredible that he should be prevail'd rpon by the Tempter, and his own Lusts to act at a monderful rate of madness, and continue unconcerned and stupid in it; intent upon his present satisfactions, without sense or confiderazion of the dreadfulnefs and danger of his Condition; and by this I am furnish'd also to meet a fourth Objection of our Autor's, viz.

(4) That tis not probable upon the Witches part, that they will be fo defperate to renounce God and eternal happines, and fo everlaitingly undo their Bodies and Souls, for a flort and trivial Interest; which way of arguing will only infer, that Mankind acts sometimes to prodigious degrees of Brutishmess; and actually we see it in the instances of every Day.

There is not a Lust fo bafe and fo contemptible, but there are those continually in our Eyes, that feed it with the facrifice of their Eternity, and their Souls; and daring Sinners rush upon the blackest villanies with so little remorfe or fense, as if it were their defign to prove that they have nothing left them of that whereby they are Men. So that naught can be inferred from this Argument, but that bumane Nature is incredibly degenerate; and the vileness and stupidity of Men is really so great, that things are customary and common, which which one could not think poffible, if he did not hourly fee them. And if Men of liberal Education and accute Reafon, that know their Dury and their danger, are driven by their Appetites, with their Eyes open, upon the most fatal Rocks, and make all the haste they can from their God and their Happinefs; if such can barter their Souls for trifles, and fell everlastingness for a Moment; sport upon the brink of a Precipice, and contemn all the terrors of the future dreadfull Day; Why should it then be incredible, that a brutish, vile Person, fotted with Ignorance. and drunk with Malice, mindless of God, and unconcern'd about a future Being, should be persuaded to accept of present, delightful Gratifications, without duly weighing the desperate Condition?

Thus, I suppose, I have answered also the Argument of this great Man, against the Covenants of Witches; and fince a Person of fuch fagacity and learning, hath no more to fay against what I defend, and another of the fame Character, the ingenious Mr. S. Parker, who directed me to him, reckons these the strongeft things that can be Objected in the Cafe, I begin to arrive to an bigher degree of confidence in this Belief; and am almost inclined to fancy that there is little more to be faid to purpofe, which may not by the improvement of my CONSIDERATIONS be eafily answered; and I am yet the more fortified in my conceit, because I have fince the former Edition of this Book. fent to feveral accute and ingenious Persons of my acquaintance, to beg their Objections, or those they have heard from others, against my Discourse or Relations, that I might confider them in this: But I can procure none fave only those few I have now discuss'd, most of my Friends telling me, that they have not met with any that need, or deferve my notice.

SECT.

SECT. XIX.

BY all this it is evident, that there were WITCHES in ancient times under the Diffenfation of the LAW; and that there were fuch in the times of the GOSPEL allo, will not be much more difficult to make good. I had a late occation to fay fomething about this, in a Letter to a perfon of the higheft honour, from which I shall now borrow fome things to my prefent purpose.

I SAY then (II) That there were Compacts with evil Spirits in those times also, is methinks intimated strongly in that faying of the Jews concerning our Saviour that he cast out Devils by Beelzebub; in his return to which, he denies not the fuppolition or possibility of the thing in general, but clears himfelf by an appeal to the actions of their own Children, whom they would not tax fo feverely: And I cannot very well understand why those times should be priviledged from Witchcraft, and Diabolical Compacts, more than they were from Poffeffions, which we know were then more frequent (for ought appears to the contrary) than ever they were before or fince. But befides this, there are intimations plain enough in the Apostles Writings of the beginning of Sorcery and Witcheraft. St. Paul reckons Witchcraft next Idolatry, in his Catalogue of the works of the flefb, Gal. v. 20. and the Sorcerers are again joyn'd. with Idolaters in that fad Denunciation, Rev. xxi. 8. and a little after, Rev. xxii. 15. they are reckoned again among Idolaters, Murderers, and those others that are without. And methinks the Story of Simon Magus, and his Diabolical Oppositions of the Gofpel in its beginnings; should afford clear Conviction, to all which, I add this more general Confideration. (3.) That though the New Testament had mention'd nothing of this matter, yet its silence in fuch cases is not argumentative. Our Saviour Spake as he had occasion, and the thousandth part of what he did, and faid, is not recorded, as one of his Hiftorians intimates. He faid nothing of those large unknown Trasts of America, nor gave he any intimations of as much as the Existence of that numerous people ; much less did he leave instructions about their conversion. He gives no account of the affairs and state of the other world, but only that general one of the happinefs of fome, and the mifery of others. He made no discovery of of the Magnalia of Art or Nature; no, not of those, whereby the propagation of the Gospel might have been much advanced, viz. the Mistery of Printing, and the Magnet ; and yet no one ufeth his filence in these instances, as an argument against the being of things, which are evident objects of fenfe. I confels, the omiffion of fome of these particulars is pretty strange, and unaccountable, and concludes our ignorance of the reasons, and menages of Providence; but I suppose, nothing elfe. I thought, I needed here to have faid no more, but I confider, in confequence of this Objection, it is pretended ; That as Christ Jesus drives the Devil from his Temples, and his Altars (as is clear in the Cellation of Oracles, which dwindled away, and at laft grew filent fhortly upon his appearance) fo in like manner, 'tis faid, that he banifbt Him from his leffer holds in Sorcerers, and Witches z which argument is peccant both in what it affirms, and in what it would infer. For

(1.) The coming of the Holy Jefus did not expel the Devil from all the greater places of his refidence and worfhip; for a confiderable part of barbarous Mankind do him publick, folemn homage, to this Day: So that the very foundation of the pretence fails, and the Confequence without any more ado comes to nothing. And yet befides,

(2.) If there be any credit to be given to Ecclefiaftical Hiftory, there were perfons poffeffed with Devils fome Ages after Chrift, whom the Difciples caft out by prayer, and the invocation of his Name: So that Sathan was not driven from his leffer habitations, as foon as he was forced from his more famous abodes. And I fee no reason

(3.) Why, Though Divine Providence would not allow him publickly to abufe the Nations, whom he had defigned a flort time after, for Subjects of his Son's Kingdom, and to ftand up in the face of Religion in an open affront to the Divinity that planted it, to the great hinderance of the progrefs of the Gofpel, and difcouragement of Christian hopes; I fay, Though Providence would not allow this height of infolent opposition; yet I fee not why we may not grant, that God however permitted the Devil to fneak into fome private skulking holes. and to trade with the particular more devoted vaffals of his wicked Empire: As we know that when our Saviour chafed him from the Man that was poffeffed, he permitted his retreat into the herd of Swine. And I might add,

(4.) That 'tis but a bad way of arguing, to fet up fancied congruities against plain experience, as is evidently done by those arguers, who, because they think that Christ chased the Devil from from all his high places of worfhip when he came; that 'tis therefore fit he fhould have forced him from all his other lefs notorious Haunts: and upon the imagination of a decency, which they frame, conclude a fact, contrary to the greatest evidence of which the thing is capable. And once more,

(5.) The confequence of this imagined Decorum, if it be purfued, would be this, that Satan, thould now be deprived of all the ways and tricks of Cozenage, whereby he abuleth us; and mankind fince the coming of Chrift, thould have been fecure from all his Temptations; for there is a greater congruity in believing, that, when he was forced from his baunts in Temples and publick places, he thould be put also from those nearer ones, about us and within us in his daily temptations of univerfal Mankind; than, that upon relinquishing those, he thould be made to leave all profest communication and correspondence with those profligate perions, whose vileness had fitted them for fuch company.

So that these Reasoners are very Fair for the denial of all internal diabolical Temptations. And because I durst not trust them, I'll crave your leave here to add some things concerning those.

In order to which, that I may obtain the favour of those wary perfons, who are to coy, and floy of their affent, I grant ; That men frequently out of a defire to excuse themselves, lay their own guilt upon the Devil, and charge him with things of which in earnest he is not guilty : For I doubt not but every wicked Man hath Devil enough in his own nature to prompt him to Evil, and needs not another Tempter to incite him. But yer, that Sathan endeavours to further our wickedness, and our ruin by his inticements, and goes up and down feeking whom he may devour, is too evident in the holy Oracles, to need my endeavours particularly to make it good; Only those diffident men cannot perhaps apprehend the manner of the operation, and from thence are tempted to believe, that there is really no fuch thing. Therefore I judge it requifite to explain this, and 'tis not unfuitable to my general subject.

In order to it I confider, That fenfe is primarily caufed by motion in the Organs, which by continuity is conveyed to the brain, where fenfation is immediately performed; and it is nothing elfe but a notice excited in the Soul by the impulse of an external object. Thus it is in fimple outward fense, But imagination, though caufed immediately by material motion also, yet it differs from the external fenses in this, That 'tis not from an impress directly from without, but the prime, and original motion is from within our felves: Thus the Soul it felf fometimes ftrikes upon those ftrings; ftrings, whole motion begets fuch, and fuch phantalms; otherwhile, the loofe Spirits wandring up and down in the brain, cafually hit upon fuch filaments and strings whole motion excites a conception, which we call a Fancy, or Imagination ; and if the evidence of the outward (enfes be that out by fleep or melancholy, in either cafe, we believe those representations to be real and external transactions, when they are only within our heads ; Thus it is in Enthusias, and Dreams, And besides the causes of the motions which ftir imagination, there is little doubt, but that Spirits good, or bad can fo move the instruments of Sense in the brain, as to awake fuch imaginations, as they have a mind to excite; and the imagination having a mighty influence upon the affections, and they upon the will and external actions, 'tis very eafie to conceive how good Angels may ftir us up to Religion and Vertue, and the Evil ones tempt us to Lewdness and Vice, viz. by representments that they make upon the stage of imagination, which invite our affections, and allure, though they cannot compel, our wills.

This I take to be an intelligible account of temptations, and also of Angelical encouragements; and perhaps this is the only way of immediate influence that the Spirits of the other world have upon us. And by it, 'tis easie to give an account of Dreams both Monitory, and Temperamental, Enthusias, Fanatick Extafies, and the like, as I suggested.

Thus, Sir, to the first. But the other pretence also must be examined.

SECT. XX.

(2.) Miracles are ceast, therefore the prefumed actions of Witchcraft are tales, and illufions.

To make a due return to this, we must confider a great and difficult Problem, which is, What is a real Miracle? And for answer to this weighty Question, I think,

(1.) THAT it is not the ftrangeness or unaccountableness of the thing done fimply, from whence we are to conclude a Miracle. For then, we are so to account of all the Magnulia of Nature and all the Mysteries of those bonest Arts, which we do not understand. Nor, Nor, (2) is this the Criterion of a Miracle, that it is an Action or Event beyond all natural Powers; for we are ignorant of the Extent and Bounds of Natures fphere, and polfibilities; and if this were the Character and effential Mark of a Miracle, we could not know what was fo; except we could determine the Extent of Natural caulalties, and fix their Bounds, and be able to fay to Nature, Hitherto canst thou go, and no farther. And he that makes this his Measure whereby to judge a Miracle, is himfelf the greatest Miracle of Knowledge or Immodest. Besides, tho' an effect may tranfcend really all the Powers of meer Nature; yet there is a World of Spirits that must be taken into our Account, and as to them also I fay.

(3) Every thing is not a Miracle that is done by Agents fupernatural. There is no doubt but that evil Spirits can make wonderful combinations of natural Caufes, and perhaps perform many things immediately which are prodigious, and beyond the longest Line of Nature; but yet these are not therefore to be called Miracles; for they are facred wonders, and suppose the Power to be Divine. But how shall the Power be known to be so, when we so little understand the Capacities and extent of the Abilities of lower Agents? The Aufwer to this guestion will discover the Criterion of Miracles, which must be supposed to have all the former particulars; (they are unaccountable beyond the Powers of meer Nature, and done by Agents supernatural) and to these must be supported ed.

(4) That they have peculiar Circumstances that speak them of a Divine Original. Their mediate Authors declare them to be lo, and they are always Persons of Simplicity, Truth, and Holines, void of Ambition, and all fecular Designs. They feldom use Ceremonies, or natural Applications, and yet surmount all the Activities of known Nature. They work those wonders, not to raise admiration, or out of the vanity to be talkt of; but to seal and confirm some Divine Doctrine, or Commission, in which the good and happiness of the World is concern'd. I say, by such Circumstances as these, wonderful Actions are known to be from a Divine cause; and that makes, and diftinguisseth a Miracle.

And thus I am prepared for an Anfwer to the Objection, to which I make this brief return. That tho' WITCHES by their Confederate Spirit do those odd and aftonishing things we believe of them; yet are they no Miracles, there being Evidence enough from the badness of their Lives, and the ritigueridiculous Ceremonies of their Performances, from their Malice and mifchievous Defigns, that the Power that works, and the end for which those things are done, is not Divine, but Diabolical. And by fingular Providence they are not ordinarily permitted, as much as to pretend to any new facred Difcoveries in matters of Religion, or to act any thing for confirmation of Doctrinal Impostures, fo that whether Miracles are ceased, or not; these are none, and that such Miracles as are only firange and unaccountable Performances, above the common Methods of Art or Nature, are not ceas'd, we have a late great Evidence in the famous G R E A T R A K; concerning whom, it will not be impertinent to add the following Account, which I had in a Letter from the Reverend Dr. R. Dean of C. a Perlon of great veracity and a Philosopher. This learned Gentleman then is pleased thus to Write,

THE great Difcourse now at the Coffee-houles, and eve-'ry where, is about Mr. G. the famous Irifh-Stroker, concerning whom, 'tis like you expect an Account from me. He undergoes various Cenfures here, fome take him to be a Conjurer, and some an Impostor, but others again adore him as an Apostle. I confeis, I think the Man is free from all Design, of a very agreeable Conversation, not addicted to any Vice, nor to any Sect or Party, but is, I believe, a fincere Protestant. I was three Weeks together with him ar my Lord Commayes, and faw him, (I think) lay his Hands ' upon a Thousand Persons; and really there is something 'in it more than ordinary; but I am convinced 'tis not mi-"raculous. I have feen Pains strangely fly before his Hand 'till he hath chased them out of the Body, Dimneß cleared, ' and Deafneß cured by his Touch; twenty Perfons at leveral. times, in Fits of the Falling-fickness, were in two or three 'Minutes brought to themselves, fo as to tell where their 'Pain was, and then he hath purfued it, till he hath driven 'it out at fome extreme part: Running Sores of the Kings ' Evil dried up, and Kernels brought to a Suppuration by his ' Hand ; grievous Sores of many Months date, in few Days 'healed? Obstructions and Stoppings removed, Cancerous Knots ' in the Breaft diffolved, &c.

But yet I have many Reafons to perfuade me, that nothing of all this is Miraculous: He pretends not to give Testimony to any Dostrine, the manner of his Operation speaks it to be Natural, the Cure seldom succeeds without reiterateing Touches, his Patients often relapse, he fails frequently.

Considerations

⁶ he can do nothing where there is any decay in Nature, and ⁶ many Diftempers are not at all obedient to his Touch. So ⁶ that, I confeis, I refer all his Vertue to his particular Tem-⁶ per and Complexion, and I take his Spirits to be a kind of ⁶ Elixir, and univerfal Ferment, and that he Cures as (Dr. ⁶ M. expression. Enthuliafm. Tri-⁶ umphat. Sect. 58.

This Sir, was the first Account of the Healer, I had from that Reverend Person, which with me fignifies more, than the Attessations of multitudes of ordinar Reporters; and no doubt but it will do likewise, with all that know that excellent Man's fingular Integrity and Judgment, But besides this, upon my enquiry into some other particulars about this matter, I received these farther Informations.

'As for Mr. G. what Opinion he hath of his own Gift, 'and how he came to know it? I answer, He hath a different Apprehension of it from yours and mine, and certain-'ly believeth it to be an immediate Gift from Heaven; and 'tis no wonder, for he is no Philosopher, and you will won-'der lefs, when you hear how he came to know it, as I have 'often received it from his own Mouth.

'About three or four Years ago, he had a ftrong impulse ' upon his Spirit, that continually purfued him whatever he 'was about, at his Business or Devotion, alone or in company, ' that spake to him by this inward fuggestion, (I have given "thee the Gift of Curing the Evil) This Suggestion was fo 'importunate, that he complained to his Wife, that he thought • he was haunted. She apprehended it as an extravagancy 'of Fancy, but he told her, he believed there was more in 'it, and was refolved to try. He did not long want oppor-'tunity. There was a Neighbour of his grievoully afflicted ' with the Kings Evil, he stroaked her, and the effect fuc-'ceeded, and for about a Twelve-month together, he pretends 'ed to Cure no other Diftemper. But then the Ague being 'very rife in the Neighbourhood, the fame Impulse, after ' the fame manner, fpoke within him, (I have given thee the 'Gift of Curing the Ague) and meeting with Persons in their 'Fits, and taking them by the Hand, or laying his Hand ' upon their Breafts, the Ague left them. About half a Year 'after, the accustomed Impulse became more general, and fug-'gested to him, (I have given thee the Gift of Healing) and ' then he attempted all Difeases indifferently, and tho' he faw Grange strange Effects, yet he doubted whether the Causes were a ny Vertue that came from him, or the Peoples Fancy; to convince him of his incredulity, as he lay one Night in Bed, one of his Hands was struck dead, and the usual Impulse fuggested to him, to make trial of his Vertue upon himfelf, which he did, ftroaking it with his other Hand, and then it immediately returned to its former livelines, This was repeated two or three Nights (or Mornings) together. 'This is his Relation, and I believe there is fo much fin-'cerity in the Person, that he tells no more' than what he believes to be true. To fay that this impulse too, was but a refult of his Temper, and that it is but like Dreams that are usually according to Mens Constitutions, doth not feem a probable Account of the Phanomenon. Perhaps fome may think it more likely, that fome Genius who understood the fanative Vertue of his Complexion, and the readineß of his Mind, and ability of his Body, to put it in execution, might eive him notice of that which otherwife might have been for ever unknown to him, and fo the Gift of God had been to no purpole.

This Sir, is my Learned and Reverend Friend's Relation, and I judge his Reflections as Ingenious as his Report is fineere. I shall fay no more about it but this, that many of those matters of Fact, have been fince critically inspected and examined by several fagacious and deep Searchers of the ROYAL-SOCIETY, whom we may suppose as unlikely to be deceived by a contrived i Imposture, as any Persons extant.

And now Sir, 'tis fit that I relieve your Patience; and I shall do so, when I have faid, that you can abundantly prove, what I have thus attempted to defend; and that among the many Obligations your Country hath to you, for the Wisdom and Diligence of your Endeavours in its fervice; your ingenions Industry for the Detecting of those wile Prastifiers, is not the least considerable. To which I will add no more, but the Confession who it is that hath given you all this trouble; which I know you are ready to Pardon, to the respect and good Intentions of

, SIR,

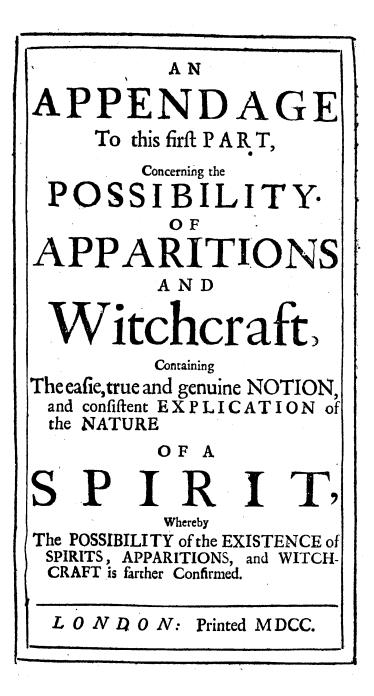

Your Affectionate and Obliged Honourer and Servant,

ADVERTISE MENT.

HItherto reacheth the Author's ingenious Confiderations 4bout Witcheraft. But understanding by his Letters and Papers, that he intended fomething farther to enlarge this first Part of his Saducifmus Triumphatus, which concerns the Poffibility of the Existence of Spirits, Apparitions and Witches, but that he has done nothing therein, being prevented by Death, I thought it might prove not an unufeful Supplement, to Translate most of the two last Chapters of Dr. H. M. his Enchiridon Metaphysicum into Englifh, and add it to this fift Part, as a suitable Appendage thereto. Which is as follows

THE Eafie, True, and Genuine NOTION, And confiftent EXPLICATION Of the NATURE of a SPIRTT.

SECT. I.

The Opinions of the NULLIBISTS and HOLEN-MERIANS proposed.

HAT we may explicate the Effence or Notion of Incorporeal Beings or Spirits, with the greater Satisfaction and Succels, we are first to remove two vast Mounds of Darkness, wherewith the Ignorance of some hath encumbred and obscured their Nature.

And the first is of those, who they readily acknowledge there are such things as Incorporeal Beings or Spirits, yet do very peremptorily contend, that they are no where in the whole World, which Opinion the at the very fight it appears very ridiculous, yet it is ftiffly held by the maintain-ers of it, and that not without some Fastuosity and Superciliousuels, or at least fome more fly and tacite Contempt of fuch Philosophers as hold the contrary, as of Men lefs intellectual, and too too much indulging to their Imagina-Thole other therefore because they to boldly affirm tion. that a Spirit is Nullibi, that is to fay, no where, have defervedly purchased to themselves the Name or Title of Nullibist. The other Mound of Darkness laid upon the Nature of a Spirit, is by those who willingly indeed acknowledge that Spirits are somewhere ; but add farther, That they are not only entirely or totally in their whole Ubi or Place, (in the most general sense of the Word) but are totally in every part or point thereof, and describe the peculiar Nature of a Spirit to be such, that it must be Totus in toto & totus in qualibet sui parte. Which therefore the Greeks would fitly and briefly call even despussed, an Essence that is all of it in each Part, and this propriety thereof (a downdrow tow the onsumeetar) the Holenmerism of Incorporeal Beings. Whence also these other Philosophers diametrically opposite to the former, may most fignificantly and compendiously be called Holenmerians.

SECT. II.

That Cartefius is the Prince of the Nullibifts, and wherein chiefly confifts the force of their Opinion.

THE Opinions of both which kind of Philosophers having sufficiently Explained, we will now propose and confute the Reasons of each of them; and first of the Nullibist, of whom the chief Author and Leader seems to have been that pleasant Wit Renatus des Cartes, who by his jocular Metaphysical Meditations, has so luxated and difforted the rational Faculties of some otherwise sober and quickwitted Persons, but in this point by 'reason of their overgreat admiration of Des Cartes not sufficiently cautious, that deceived partly by his counterfeit and pressions Subtilty, and partly by his Authority, have persuaded themselves that such things were most true and clear to them; which had they not been blinded with these Prejudices, they could never have thought to have been so much as possible, and so they having been so industriously taught, and diligently infurusted ftructed by him, how they might not be imposed upon, no not by the most powerful and most ill-minded fallacious Deity, have heedlefly, by not fufficiently standing upon their Guard, being deceived and deluded by a meer Man, but of a pleafant and abundantly cunning and abstruse Genius; as shall clearly appear after we have fearched and examined the reafons of this Opinion of the Nullibists to the very bottom.

The whole force whereof is comprised in these three Axioms, the first, That what foever thinks is immaterial, and fo on the contrary. The second, That whatever is extended is Material. The third, That what ever is unextended is no where. To which Third I shall add this Fourth, as a necessary and manifest confectary thereof, viz. That what soever is somewhere is extended. Which the Nullibists of themselves will easily grant me to be most true, otherwise they could not serioully contend for their Opinion, whereby they affirm Spirits to be no where, but would be found to do it only by way of an oblique and close derifion of their Existence, faying indeed they exist, but then again hiddenly and cunningly denying it, by affirming they are no where. Wherefore doubtless they affirm them to be nowhere, if they are in good earnest, for this reason only; for fear they granting them to be some where, it would be prefently extorted from them, even according to their own Principles, that they are extended, as whatever is extended is Material, according to their fecond Axiom. It is therefore manifest, that we both agree in this, that whatever real Being there is that is somewhere, is also extended.

SECT. III.

The Sophistical weakness of that reasoning of the Nullibists, who because we can conceive Cogitation without conceiving in the mean while Matter, conclude, That what sever thinks is Immaterial.

WITH which Truth notwithstanding we being furnished and supported, I doubt not but we shall with ease quite overthrow and utterly root out this Opinion of the Nullibist. But that their levity and credulity may more manifestly nifeftly appear, lets examine the Principles of this Opinion by part, and confider how well they make good each Member.

The first is, Whatever thinks is immaterial, and on the contrary. The conversion of this Axiom I will not examine, because it makes little to the present purpose, I will only. note by the by, that I doubt not but it may be falfe, altho' I eafily grant the Axiom it felf to be true, but it is this new Method of demonstrating it I call into question, which from hence, that we can conceive Cogitation, in the mean time not conceiving Matter, concludes that Whatever thinks is Immaterial. Now that we can conceive Cogitation without conceiving Matter, they fay is manifest from hence, that altho' one fhould fuppofe there were no Body in the Universe, and should not flinch from that Position, yet notwithstanding he would not ceafe to be certain, that there was Res cogitans, a thinking Being, in the World, he finding himfelf to be such, but I farther add, tho' he should suppose there was no Immaterial Being in Nature, (nor indeed Material) and should not flinch from that Position, yet he would not cease to be certain that there was a thinking Being, (no not if he should suppose himself not to be a thinking Being) because he can suppose nothing without Cogitation. Which I thought worth the while to note by the by, that the great levity of the Nullibifts might hence more clearly appear.

But yet I add farther, that such is the Nature of the Mind of Man, that is like the Eye, better fitted to Contemplate other things than it felf; and that therefore it is no wonder that thinking nothing of its own Effence, it doesfixedly enough and intently confider in the mean time and Contemplate all ather things, yea, those very things with which the has the nearest affinity, and yet without any reflection that her felf is of the like Nature. Whence it may eafily. come to pais, when the is fo wholly taken up in Contemplating other things without any reflection upon her felf, that either carelesly she may confider her self in general as a meet thinking Being, without any other attribute, or elfe by refdlvednels afterwards, and by a force on purpole offered to her own Faculties. But that this Reasoning is wonderfully weak and triffing as to the proving of the Mind of Man to be nothing elfe; that is to fay, to have no other attributes But meer Cogitation, there is none that does not difcern.

The true Method that ought to be taken for the proving that Matter cannot think.

L. Aftly, if Cartefius with his Nullibifts would have dealt bona fide, they ought to have omitted all those ambagious Windings and Meanders of feigned Abstraction, and with a direct stroke to have fallen upon the thing it felf, and so to have fisted Matter, and fearched the Nature of Cogitation, that they might thence have evidently demonstrated that there was some infeparable Attribute in Matter, that is repugnant to the Cogitative Faculty, or in Cogitation that is repugnant to Matter. But out of the meer diversity of Ideas or Notions of any Attributes, to collect their separability or real distinction, yea, their contrariety and repugnancy, is most foully to violate the indispensable Laws of Logick, and to confound Diversa with Opposita, and make them all one. Which Mistake to them that understand Logick, must needs appear very course and absurd.

But that the weakness and vacillancy of this Method may yet more clearly appear, let us suppose that which yet Philosophers of no mean Name, seriously stand for and affert, viz. That Cogitative substance is either Material or Immaterial; does it not apparently follow thence, that a thinking Substance may be precisely conceived without the conception of Matter, as Matter without the conception of Cogitation, when notwithstanding in one of the Members of this distribution they are joyned sufficiently close together?

How can therefore this new fangled Method of Cartefius convince us that this Supposition is falle, and that the diftribution is illegitimate? Can it from thence, that Matter may be conceived without Cogitation, and Cogitation without Matter? The first all grant, and the other the diftribution it felf supposes; and yet continues sufficiently firm and sure, therefore it is very evident, that there is a neceffity of our having recours to the known and ratified Laws of Logick, which many Ages before this new upftart Method of des Cartes appeared, were established and approved by the common suffrage of Mankind; which teach us that in every legitimate gitimate diffribution the parts ought confinite cum toto, & diffentire inter se, to agree with the whole, but difagree one with another. Now in this diffribution that they do sufficiently difagree, it is very manifest. It remains only to be proved, that one of the parts, namely that which supposes that a Cogitative Substance may be Material, is repugnant to the Nature of the whole. This is that clear, folid, and manifest way or Method according to the knownLaws of Logick; but that new way, a kind of Sophistry and pleasant Mode of triffing and prevaricating.

SECT. V.

That all things are in fome fort extended, demonstrated out of the Corollary of the third Principle of the Nullibists.

A S for the fecond Axiom or Principle, viz. That whatfoever is extended is Material; for the evincing the falfity thereof, there want no new Arguments, if one have but recourfe to the Sixth, Seventh, and Eigth Chapters of Enchiridium Metaphylicum, where, by unanfwerable reafonings it is demonstrated, That there is a certain Immaterial and Immoveable Extension diffinct from the Moveable Matter. But however, out of the Confectary of their third Principle, we shall prove at once, that all Spirits are Extended as being fomewhere, against the wild and ridiculous Opinion of the Nullibilis.

Whole third Principle, and out of which immediately and precifely they conclude Spirits to be no where, is, Whatfoever is unextended, is no where. Which I very willingly grant; but on this condition, that they on the other fide concede (and I doubt not but they will) That whatfoever is formewhere is alfo extended; from which Confectary I will evince with Mathematical certainty, That God and our Soul, and all other Immaterial Beings, are in fome fort extended: For the Nullibifts themfelves acknowledge and affert, that the Operations wherewith the Soul acts on the Body, are in the Body; and that Power or Divine Vertue wherewith God acts on the matter and moves it, is prefent in every part of the Matter. Whence it is eafily gathered, That That the operation of the Soul and the moving. Power of God is fomewhere, viz. in the Body, and in the Matter. But the Operation of the Soul wherewith it acts on the Body and the Soul it felf, and the Divine Power wherewith God moves the Matter and God himfelf, are together, nor can fo much as be imagined feparate one from the other; namely, the Operation from the Soul, and the Power from God, Wherefore if the Operation of the Soul is fomewhere, the Soul is fomewhere, viz. there where the Operation is. And if the Power of God be fomewhere, God is fomewhere, namely, there where the Divine Power is; He in every part of the Matter, the Soul in the humane Body. Whofoever can deny this, by the, fame reafon he may deny that common Notion in Mathematicks, Quantities that are fingly equal to one third, are equal to one another.

SECT. VI.

The apert confession of the Nullibists that the ESSENCE of a Spirit is where its O-PERATION is; and how they contradict themsfelves, and are forced to acknowledge a Spirit extended.

A N D verily that which we contend for, the Nullibists seem apertly to assert, even in their own express words, as it is evident in Lambertus Velthusius in his De Initiis Primæ Philosophiæ in the Chapter De Ubi. Who though he does manifestly affirm that God and the Mind of Man by their Operations are in every part or some one part of the Matter ; and that in that fence, namely, in respect of their Operations, the Soul may be truly faid to be somewhere, God every-where ; as if that were the only mode of their prefence : yet he does expresly grant that the Effence is no where seperate from that whereby God or a Created Spirit is faid to be, the one every-where, the other somewhere; that no Man may conceit the Effence of God to be where the reft of his Attributes are not. That the Effence of God is in Heaven, but that his Vertue diffuses it self beyond Heaven. No, by no means, faith he, Wherefoever God's Power or Operation is, there is the Nature of God ; foralmuch as God is a Substance devoid of all composition. Thus far Velthufius. Whence I affume, But the Power or Operation of God is. is in or prefent to the Matter; Therefore the Effence of God is in or prefent to the Matter, and is there where the Matter is, and therefore fomewhere. Can there be any deduction or illation more close and coherent with the Premifes?

And yet that other most devoted follower of the Cartefian Philosophy, Ludovicus De la Forge, cannot abstain from the offering us the same advantage of arguing, or rather from the inferring the same conclusion with us in his Treatife De mente Humana, Chap. 12. where occur these words: Lastily, when I say that God is present to all things by his Omnipotency, (and confequently to all the parts of the Matter) I do not deny but that also by his Effence or Substance he is present to them: For all those things in God are one and the same.

Doft thou hear, my Nullibifts, what one of the chiefeft of the Condifciples and most religious Symmysts of that stupendious fecret of Nullibism plainly professes, namely, that God, is prefent to all the parts of Matter by his Essence also, or Substance? And yet you in the mean while blufh not to affert, that neither God, nor any created Spirit is any where; than which nothing more contradictious can be spoke or thought, or more abhorring from all reason. Wherefore when as the Nullibist come so near to the truth, it feems impossible they should, fo all of a fudden, start from it, unless they were blinded with a superstitious admiration of Des Cartes his Metaphyficks. and were deluded, effascinated and befooled with his jocular Subtilty and prestigious Abstractions there : For who in his right wits can acknowledge that a Spirit by its Essence may be present to Matter, and yet be no where, unless the Matter were nowhere also? And that a Spirit may penetrate, poffefs, and actuate fome determinate Body and yet not be in that Body ? In which if it be, it is plainly neceffary it be fomewhere.

And yet the fame Ludovicus De la Forge does manifeftly affert, that the Body is thus poffeft and actuated by the Soul, in his Preface to his Treatife de Mente Humana, while he declares the Opinion of Marfilius Ficinus concerning the manner how the Soul actuates the Body in Marfilius his own words, and does of his own accord affent to his Opinion. What therefore do these Forms to the Body when they communicate to it theit Effe? They throughly penetrate it with their Effence, they bequeath the Vertue of their Effence to it. But now whereas the Effe is deduced from the Effence, and the Operation flows from the Vertue, by conjoyning the Effence they impart the Effe, by bequeathing the Vertue they communicate the Operations; to that out of the congress of Soul and Body, there is made one Animat mal Effe, one Operation. Thus he. The Soul with her Effence penetrates and pervades the whole Body, and yet is not where the Body is, but no where in the Universe!

With what manifest repugnancy therefore to their other Affertions the Nullibists hold this ridiculous Conclusion, we have fufficiently seen, and how weak their chiefest prop is, That what, ever is Extended is Material; which is not only confuted by irrefragable Arguments, Chap. 6, 7. and 8. Enchyrid. Mataphy, but we have here also, by so clearly proving that all Spirits are fomewhere, utterly subverted it, even from that very Concession or Opinion of the Nullibists themselves, who concede or aver that whatsfoever is fomewhere is extended. Which Spirits are and yet are not Material.

SECT. VII.

The more light reasonings of the Nullibilts whereby they would confirm their Opinion. The sirft of which is, That the Soul thinks of those things which are nowhere.

DUT we shall not pals by their more slight reasonings in so D great a matter, or rather fo monftrous. Of which the first is. That the Mind of Man thinks of fuch things as are no where, nor have any relation to place, no not fo much as to Logical place or Ubi. Of which fort are many truths as well Moral as Theological and Logical, which being of fuch a nature that they are no where, the Mind of Man which conceives them is necelfarily no where also. But how crazily and inconfequently they collect that the humane Soul is nowhere, for that it thinks of those things that are no where, may be apparent to any one from hence, and especially to the Nullibifts themselves; because from the fame reason it would follow that the Mind of Man is Somewhere, because sometimes, if not always in a manner, it thinks of those things which are somewhere, as all Material things are Which yet they dare not grant, because it would plainly follow from thence, according to their Doctrine, that the Mind or Soul of Man were extended, and fo would become corporeal and devoid of all Cogitation. But befides, These things which they fay fay are no where, namely, certain Moral, Logical, and Theological Truths, are really fomewhere, viz. in the Soul it felf which conceives them; but the Soul is in the Body, as we proved above. Whence it is manifeft that the Soul and thole Truths which the conceives are as well fomewhere as the Body it felf. I grant that fome Truths as they are Reprefentations, neither refpect Time nor Place in whatever fence. But as they are Operations, and therefore Modes of fome Subject or Substance, they cannot be otherwise conceived than in fome fubstance. And foralmuch as there is no substance which has not fome amplitude, they are in a substance which is in fome fort extended; and so by reason of their Subject they are necessarily conceived to be fomewhere, because a Mode is inseparable from a Subject.

Nor am I at all moved with that giddy and rash tergiversation which some betake themselves to here, who fay we do not well in diffinguishing betwixt Cogitation (fuch as are all conceived verities) and the Substance of the Soul cogitating: For cogitation it felf is the very Substance of the Soul, as Extension is of Matter; and that therefore the Soul is as well nowhere as any Cogitation, which respects neither time nor place, would be, if it were found in no Subject. But here the Nullibist, who would thus escape, do not observe that while they acknowledge the Substance of the Soul to be Cogitation, they therewithal acknowledge the Soul to have a Substance, whence it is neceffary it have fome amplitude. And befides, This Affertion whereby they affert Cogitation to be the very fubstance of the Soul, is manifeftly falfe. For many Operations of the Soul, are, as they Speak, Specifically different; Which therefore succeeding one after another, will be fo many Substances specifically different. And fo the Soul of Socrates will not always be the fame (pecifical Soul, and much lefs the fame numerical; Than which what can be imagined more delirant, and more remote from common' fenfe ?

To which you may add, That the Soul of Man is a permanent Being, but her Cogitations in a flux or fucceffion; How then can the very fubstance of the Soul be its fucceffive Operations? And when the Substance of the Soul does fo perpetually ceafe or perifh, what I beleech you will become of Memory? From whence it is manifestly evident, that there is a certain permanent Substance of the Soul, as much diffired to different from her, fucceeding Cogitations, as the Matter it felf is from its fucceffive figures and motions.

The second reason of the Nullibists, viz. That COGITATION is eafily conceived without EXTENSION.

T HE second Reason is some what co-incident with some of those we have already examined; but it is briefly proposed by them thus; There can be no conception, no not of a Logical Place, or Ubi, without Extension. But Cogitation is eafily conceived without conceiving any Extension : Wherefore the Mind cogitating, exempt from all Extension, is exempt alfo from all Locality whether Physical or Logical; and is fo loofened from it, that it has no relation nor applicability thereto; as if those things had no relation nor applicability to other certain things without which they might be conceived.

The weakness of this argumentation is eafily deprehended from hence, That the Inten/nefs of heat or motion is confidered without any respect to its extension, and yet it is referred to an extended Subject, viz. To a Bullet shot, or red hot Iron. And though in intent and defixed thoughts upon fome either difficult or pleasing Object, we do not at all observe how the time pasfeth, nor take the flightest notice of it, nothing hinders notwithftanding but those Cogitations may be applied to time, and it be rightly faid, that about fix a clock, fuppole, in the Morning they began, and continued till eleven; and in like manner the place may be defined where they were conceived, viz. within the Walls of fuch an ones Study; although perhaps all that time this fo fixt Contemplator did not take notice whether he was in his Study, or in the Fields.

And to speak out the matter at once, From the precision of our thoughts to infer the real precision or feperation of the things themfelves, is a very putid and puerile Sophilm; and ftill the more enormous and wild, to collect also thence, that they have no relation or applicability one to another. For we may have a clear and dictinct apprehension of a thing which may be connected with another by an effential Tye, that Tye being not taken notice of, (and much more when they are connected only with a circumstantial one) but not a full and adequate apprebension, and fuch as sees through and penetrates all the degrees of of its Effence with their properties; Which unless a man reach to, he cannot rightly judge of the real separability of any nature from other natures.

From whence it appears how foully Cartefius has imposed, if not upon himself, at least upon others, when from this mental percision of Cogitation from Extension, he defined a Spirit (fuch as the humane Soul) by Cogitation only, Matter by Extension, and divided all Substance into Cogitant and Extended, as into their first species or kinds. Which distribution notwithstanding is as absonous and absurd, as if he had distributed Animal into Sensitive and Rational. Whenas all Substance is extended as well as all Animals fensitive. But he fixed his Animadversion upon the specifick nature of the humane Soul; the Generical nature thereof, either on purpose or by inadvertency, being not confidered nor taken notice of by him, as hath been noted in Enchiridion Ethicum, lib. 3. cap. 4. sect. 3.

SECT. IX.

The third and last Reason of the Nullibists, viz. That the Mind is conscious to her self, that she is no where, unless she is disturbed or jogged by the Body.

T H E third and laft Reafon, which is the moft ingenious of them all, occurs in Lambertus Veltbulius, viz. That it is a truth which God has infufed into the Mind it felf, That the is no where, becaufe we know by experience that we cannot tell from our fpiritual Operations where the Mind is. And for that we know her to be in our Body, that we only perceive from the Operations of Senfe and Imagination which without the Body or the motion of the Body the Mind cannot perform. The fence whereof, if I guess right, is this; That the Mind by a certain internal fenfe is confcious to her felf that the is m where, unless the be now and then diffurbed by the motions or joggings of the Body; which is, as I faid, an ingenious prelage, but not true: For it is one thing to perceive her felf to be no where, another not to perceive her felf to be fome where: For

For the may not perceive herfelf to be fomewhere, though the be fomewhere, as the may not take notice of her own Individuality or numerical Diffinction, from all other minds, although the be one Numerical or Individual mind diffinct from the reft : For, as I intimated above, fuch is the nature of the mind of Man, that like the eye, it is better fitted for the contemplating all other things, than for contemplating it felf. And that indeed which is made for the clearly and fincerely leeing other things, ought to have nothing of it felf actually perceptible in it, which it might mingle with the perception of those other things. From whence the Mind of Man is not to have any stable and fixt sense of its own Essence; and such as it cannot eafily lay afide upon occasion: And therefore it is no wonder, when as the Mind of Man can put off the fenfe and confciousnels to it felf of it own Estence and Individuality, that it can put off also therewith the sense of its being somewhere, or not perceive it; when as it does not perceive its own Effence and Individuality, (of which Hic & Nunc are the known Characters:) And the chief Objects of the Mind are Univerfals.

But as the mind, although it perceives not its Individuality, yet can by reason prove to her self that the is some one Numerical or Individual Mind, so the can by the same means although the by inward sense perceives not where the is, evince notwithstanding that the is somewhere, from the general account of things, which have that of their own nature, that they are extended, fingular, and somewhere. And besides, Velthus himself does plainly grant, that from the Operations of Sense and Imagination, we know our Mind to be in our Body. How then can we be ignorant that the is somewhere, unless the Body it felf be no where ?

An Appeal to the internal sense of the Mind, if she be not environed with a certain infinite Entension; together with an excitation of the Nullibist out of his Dream, by the sound of Trumpeters surrounding him.

HE Reasons of the Nullibists whereby they endeavour to maintain their Opinion, are fufficiently enervated and subverted. Nor have we need of any Arguments to establish the contrary Doctrine I will only defire by the by, that he that' thinks his Mind is no where, would make trial of his faculty of Thinking: and when he has abstracted himself from all thought or fense of his Body, and fixed his Mind only on an Idea of an indefinite or infinite Extension, and also perceives himself to be fome particular cogitant Being, let him make trial, I fay, whe-ther he can any way avoid it, but he must at the fame time perceive that he is somewhere, namely, within this immense Extenfion, and that he is environ'd round about with it. Verily, I must ingenuously confess, I cannot conceive otherwise, and that I cannot but conceive an Idea of a certain Extension infinite and immoveable, and of necessary and actual Existence : Which I most clearly deprehend, not to have been drawn in by the outward fense, but to be innate and effentially inherent in the Mind it felf; and fo to be the genuine object not of Imagination, but of Intellect ; and that it is but perverily and without all judgment determined by the Nullibists, or Cartesians, that whatever is extended, is also quilasov or the Object of Imagination; When notwithstanding there is nothing imaginable, or the Object of Imagination, which is not fenfible: For all Phantaims are drawn from the Senses. But this infinite Extension has no more to do with things that are fensible and fall under Imagination, than that which is most Incorporeal. But of this haply it will be more opportune to speak elsewhere.

In the mean time I will fubjoin only one Argument, whereby I may manifeltly evince that the Mind of Man is fomewhere, and then I will betake my felf to the difcuffing of the Opinion of the Holenmerians. Briefly therefore let us fuppofe fome one environed with with a Ring of Trumpeters, and that they all at the fame time found their Trumpets. Let us now fee if the circumfonant clangor of those furrounding Trumpets founding from all fides will awake thele Nullibists out of their Lethargick Dream. And let us suppose, which they will willingly concede, that Conarion or Glandula Pinealis, A, is the leat of the common fense, to which at length all the motions from external Objects arrive. Nor is it any matter whether it be this Conarion, or some part of the Brain, or of what is contained in the Brain : But let the Conarion, at least for this bout, supply the place of that matter which is the common Senforium of the Soul.

And whenas is is supposed to be furrounded with Eight Trumpeters, let there be Eight Lines drawn from them namely, from B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I; I fay that the clangour or found of every Trumpet is carried from the Ring of the Trumpeters to the extream part of every one of those Lines, and all those founds are heard as coming from the Ring B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, and perceived in the Conarion A; and that the perception is in that part to which all the Lines of motion, as to a common Centre, do concur; and therefore the extream parts of them, and the perceptions of the Clangours or Sounds, are in the the middle of the Ring of Trumpeters, viz. where the Ca narion is : Wherefore the Precipient it felf, namely the Soul, is in the midft of this Ring, as well as the Conarion, and there-Affuredly he that denies that he conceives fore is some where. the force of this Demonstration, and acknowledges that the Perception indeed is at the extreme parts of the faid Lines, and in the middle of the Ring of Trumpeters, but contends in the mean time that the Mind her felf is not there, forasmuch as the is no where; this Man certainly is either Delirant and Crazed, or elfe Plays Tricks, and flimly and obliquely infinuates that the perception which is made in the Conarion, is to be attributed to the Conarion it felf; and that the Mind, fo far as it is conceived to be an incorporeal Substance, is to be exterminated out of the Universe, as an useles Figment and Chimæra.

SECT. XI.

The Explication of the Opinion of the Holenmerians, together with their two Reasons thereof proposed,

ND thus much of the Opinion of the Nullibifts. Let us now examine the Opinion of the Holenmerians, whole Explication is thus: Let there be what Body you please, suppole, C, D, E, which the Soul or a Spirit may poffels and penetrate. The Holenmerians affirm, that the whole Soul or Spirit docs occupy and poffels the whole Body C, D, E, by its Effence; and that it is alfo wholly or all of it in every part or point of the faid Body C, D, E, as in A, for Example, and in B, and the reft of the leaft parts or points of it.

This is a brief and clear Explication of their Opinion.

But the Reasons that induce them to embrace it, and so fifty to maintain it, are these two only, or at least chiefly, as

as much as respects the Holenmerism of Spirits. The first is, that whereas they grant that the whole Soul does pervade and possess the whole Body, they thought it would thence follow, that the Soul would be divisible, unless they should correct again this Affertion of theirs, by faying, that it was yet to in the whole Body, that it was totally in the mean time in every part thereof; for thus they thought themselves fure, that the Soul could not thence be argued in any fort divisible, or corporeal, but still remaining purely Spiritual.

The other Reason is, That from hence it might be cafily underftood, how the Soul being in the whole Body, C,D,E, whatever happens to it in C, or B, it prefently perceives it in A, becaufe the whole Soul being perfectly and entirely as well in C, or B, as in A, it is neceffary that after what fashion soever C or B is affected, A should be affected after the same manner; foralmuch as it is entirely and perfectly one and the fame thing, viz. the whole Soul, as well in C or B as in A. And from hence is that vulgar Saying in the Schools, That if the Eye were in the Foot, the Soul would see in the Foot.

SECT. XII.

The Examination of the Opinion of the Holenmerians.

BUT now, according to our cuftom, let us weigh and ex-amine all these things in a free and just Balance. In this therefore that they affert, that the whole Soul is in the whole Body, and is all of it penetrated of the Soul by her Effence, and therefore feem willing to acknowledge a certain effential amplitude of the Soul; in this I fay, they come near to us, who contend there is a certain Metaphyfical and effential extension in all Spirits, but fuch as is aueyestes is dussis devoid of bulk or parts, as Aristotle defines of his teparate substances. For there is no magnitude or bulk which may not be Phylically divided, nor any parts properly where there is no fuch division. Whence the Metaphysical extension of Spirits, is rightly understood not to be capable of either bulk bulk or parts, and in that fense it has no parts, it cannot juftly be faid to be a whole. In that therefore we plainly agree with the Holenmerians, that a Soul or Spirit may be faid by its Effence to penetrate and posses the whole Body C, D, E, but in this again we differ from them, that we dare not affirm that the whole Spirit or whole Soul does penetrate and posses the faid Body, because that which has not parts cannot properly be called a whole; tho' I will not over stiffy contend, but that we may use that Word for a more easie Explication of our Mind, according to that old trite Proverb, Aualisee's mus eine in the more intelligibly or plainly. But then we are to remember that we do not speak properly, tho' more accommodately to the vulgar apprehension, but improperly.

But now when the Holenmerians add farther, That the whole Soul is in every part or physical point of the Body D, C, E, in the point A and B, and See Fig. all the reft of the points of which the Body D, C, E, 2 Sec. 11 does confift, that feems an harsh Expression to me, and fuch as may justly be deemed next door to an open repugnancy and contradiction; for when they fay the whole Soul is in the whole Body D, C, E, if they understand the Effence of the Soul to be commenfurate. and as it were equal to the Body D, C, E, and yet at the fame time, the whole Soul to be contained within the point A or B, it is manifest that they make one and the famething many Thousand times greater or less than it felf at the same time; which is impossible. But if they will affirm, that the effential Amplitude of the Soul is no bigger than what is contained within the phyfical Point A or B, but that the effential Presence of the Soul is diffused through the whole Body D, C, E, the thing will fucceed not a jot the better, for while they plainly profess that the whole Soul is in the Point A, it is manifest that there remains nothing of the Soul which may be in the Point B, which is diftant from A, for it is as if one should fay, that there is nothing of the Soul which is not included within A; and yet in the same moment of time, that not only something of the Soul. (which perhaps might be a more gentle repugnancy) but that the whole Soul is in B, as if the whole Soul were totally and entirely out of it felf ; which furely is impoffible in any fingular or individual thing, and as for universals, they are not things, but Notions we use in contemplating them.

Again,

Again, if the effential Amplitude of the Soul is no greater than what may be contained within the limits of a phyfical Poinr, it cannot extend or exhibit its effential Prefence through the whole Body, unlefs we imagine in it a flupendious velocity, fuch as it may be carried within one moment into all the parts of the Body, and to be prefent to them: Which when it is fo hard to conceive in this fcant compages of an humane Body, and in the Soul occupying in one moment every part thereof, what an outragious thing is it, and utterly impossible to apprehend touching that Spirit which perpetually exhibits his effential Prefence to the whole World, and what ever is beyond the World?

To which, laftly, you may add that this Hypothefis of the Holenmerians, does neceffarily make all Spirits the most min nute things that can be conceived: For if the whole Spirit be in every physical Point, it is plain that the effential Amplitude it felf of the Spirit (which the two former Objections suppofed) is not bigger than that physical Point in which it is, (which you may call, if you will, a Physical Monad) than which nothing is or can be smaller in universal Nature; which if you refer to any created Spirit, it cannot but seem very ridiculous; but if to the Majest and Amplitude of the Divine Numen, intolerable, that I may not fay plainly Reproachful and Blasphemous.

SECT. XIII.

A Confutation of the First Reason of the Holenmerians.

BUT now for the Reasons for which the Holenmerians adbere to so absurd an Opinion; verily they are such as can no way compensate those huge Difficulties and Repugnances the Opinion it felf labours under. For, for the first, which so folicitously provides for the Indivisibility of Spirits, it seems to me to undertake a Charge either Superfluous or Ineffectual. Superfluous, if extension can be without divisibility, as it is clearly demostrated it can, in that infinite immovable Extension diftinct from the moveable Matter, Enchirid. Metaphys. cap. 6, 7, 8. 7, 8. But Ineffectual, if all Extension be divisible, and the effential Prefence of a Spirit which pervades and is extended through the whole Body C D E, may for that very Reason be divided; for fo the whole Effence which occupies the whole Body C D E, will be divided into Parts. No by no means will you fay, forasmuch as it is wholly in every part of the Body.

Therefore it will be divided, if I may fo fpeak, into fo many Totalities. But what Logical Ear can bear a faying fo abfurd and abhorrent from all Reason, that a whole should not be divided into parts, but into wholes? But you will fay at leaft, we shall have this granted us, that an effential Prefence may be distributed or divided according to fo many diftinctly fited Totalities which occupy at once the whole Body CDE; yes verily, this shall be granted you, after you have demonstrated that a Spirit not bigger than a Physical Monad can occupy in the fame inftant all the Parts of the Body CDE, but upon this condition, that you acknowledge not fundry Totalities, but one only total Effence, tho' the least that can be imagined, can occupy that whole space, and when there is need, occupy in an inftant, an infinite one; which the Holenmerians must of necessity hold touching the Divine Essence, because, according to their Opinion taken in the fecond Senfe, (which pinches the whole Effence of a Spirit into the fmalleft point) the Divine Effence it felf is not bigger than any Phylical Monad. From whence it is apparent the three Objections which we brought in the beginning do again recur here, and utterly overwhelm the first Reason of the Holenmerians: So that the Remedy is far nore intolerable than the Difeafe.

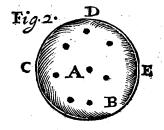

SECT.

SECT. XIV.

A Confutation of the second Reason of the Holenmerians.

A ND truly the other Reason which from this Holenmerifm of Spirits pretends a more easie way of conceiving how it comes to pais that the Soul, fuppole in A, can perceive what happens to it in C, or B, and altogether in the fame circumftances as if it felf were perfectly and entirely in C, or B, when yet it is in A; altho' at firft fhew this feems very plaufible, yet if we look throughly into it, we fhall find it far enough from performing what it fo fairly promifes. For befides that nothing is more difficult or rather impoffible to conceive, than that an Effence not bigger than a Phyfical point should occupy and poffers the whole Body of a Man at the fame instant, this Hypothefis is moreover plainly contrary and repugnant to the very Laws of the Souls perceptions: For Phyficians and Anatomists with one confent profers, that they have found by very folid Experiments, that the Soul perceives only within the Head, and that without the Head there is no perception: Which could by no means be, if the Soul her felf were wholy in the Point A, and the very felf fame Soul again wholly in the Point B, and C, nor any where as to effential Amplitude bigger than a Phyfical Monad: For hence it would follow, that one and the fame thing would both perceive and not perceive at once; that it would perceive this or that Object, and yet perceive nothing at all; which is a perfect contradiction.

And from hence the falfity of that common Saying is detected, That if the Eye was in the Foot, the Soul would fee in the Foot; when as it does not fo much as fee in those Eyes which it already hath, but fomewhere within the Brain, nor would the Soul by an Eye in the Foot fee, unless by fitting Nerves, not unlike the Optick ones, continued from the Foot to the Head and Brain, where the Soul fo far as perceptive, inhabiteth. In the other parts of the Body the Functions thereof are only vital.

Again fuch is the Nature of fome perceptions of the Soul, that they are fitted for the moving of the Body; fo that it is manifelt that the very felf fame thing which perceives, has the power of Moving and Guiding of it; which feems impossible to be done by this Soul, which according to the Opinion of the Holenmerians, exceeds not the Amplitude of a small Physical Point, as it may appear at the first fight to any whole Reason is not blinded with Prejudice.

And laftly, If it be lawful for the Mind of Man to give her conjectures touching the immortal Genii, (whether they be in Vehicles, or deftitute of Vehicles) and touching their Perceptions and effential Prefences whether invisible or those in which they are faid fometimes to appear to mortal Men, there is none furely that can admit that any of these things are compatible. to. fuch a Spirit as the Holenmerians describe. For how can a Metaphyfical Monad, that is to fay, a Spiritual fubstance not exceeding a Physical Monad in Amplitude, fill out an esfential Presence bigger than a Physical Monad, unless it be by a very fwift vibration of it felf towards all Parts; as Boys by a very fwift moving of a Fire-flick, make a fiery Circle in the Air by that quick Motion. But that Spirits deftitute of Vehicles, fould have no greater effential Presence than what is occupied of a naked and unmoved Metaphylical Monad, or exhibited thereby, feems to absonous and ridiculous a Spectacle to the Mind of Man, that unlefs he be deprived of all Sagacity and Senfibility of Spirit, he cannot but abhor fo idle an Opinion. And as for those effential Prefences, according to which

And as for those effential Prefences, according to which they fometimes appear to Men, at leaft equalizing humane Stature, how can a folitary Metaphysical Monad form fo great a part of Air or Æther into humane Shape, or govern it being fo formed ? Or how can it perceive any external Object in this fwift Motion of it felf, and quick vibration, whereby this Metaphysical Monad is understood of the Holenmerians, to be prefent in all the parts of its Vehicle at once ? For there can be no perception of the external Object, unless the Object that is to be perceived, act with fome ftay upon that which perceiveth. Nor if it could be perceived by this Metaphysical Monad thus fwiftly moved and vibrated towards all parts at once, would it be feen in one Place, but in many Places at once, and those, as it may happen very diftant.

SECT. XV.

The egregious fality of the Opinions of the Holenmerians and Nullibilts, as alfo their ufeless for any Philosophical ends.

BUT verily, I am ashamed to waste so much time in re-futing such meer Trifle's and Dotages which indeed are fuch, (that I mean of the Nullibist, as well as this other of the Holenmerians) that we may very well wonder how fuch diftorted and strained Conceits could ever enter into the Minds of Men, or by what artifice they have fo fpread themfelves in the World; but that the Prejudices and Enchantments of Superstition, and stupid Admiration of Mens Persons are so strong, that they may utterly blind the Minds of Men, and charm them into Dotage. But if any one, all Prejudice and Partstaking being laid afide, will attentively confider the thing as it is, he shall clearly perceive and acknowledge, unless all belief is to be denied to the humane Faculties, that the Opinions of the Nullibists and Holenmerians, touching Incorporeal Beings, are miferably falle; and not that only, but as to any Philosophical purpose altogether useles. Forasmuch as out of neither Hypothefis there does appear any greater facility of conceiving how the Mind of Man, or any other Spirit, performs those Functions of Perception and of Moving of Bodies, from their being supposed no where, than from their being supposed some where; or from supposing them wholly in every part of a Body, than from supposing them only to occupy the whole Body by an Effential or Metaphyfical extenfion; but on the contrary, that both the Hypotheles do entangle and involve the Doctrine of Incorporeal Beings with greater Difficulties and Repugnancies.

Wherefore there being neither Truth nor Ufefulnefs in the Opinions of the Holenmerians und Nullibists, I hope it will offend no Man if we fend them quite packing from our Philosophations touching an Incorporeal Being or Spirit, in our delivering the true Idea or Notion thereof.

SECT.

SECT. XVI.

That those that contend that the Notion of a Spirit is so difficult and imperscrutable, do not this because they are of a more sharp and piercing Judgment than others, but of a Genius more Rade and Plebeian.

NOW I have fo fuccelsfully removed and diffipated thole two vaft Mounds of Night and Miftingis, that lay upon the Nature of Incorporeal Beings, and obscured it with such grofs Darknefs; it remains that we open and illustrate the true and genuine Nature of them in general, and propole fuch a definition of a Spirit, as will exhibit no difficulty to a Mind rightly prepared and freed from Prejudice. For the Nature of a Spirit is very eafily understood, provided one rightly and skillfully shew the way to the Learner, and form to him true Notions of the thing, infomuch that I have often wondred at the fuperfitious confternation of Mind in those Men, (or the profanenels of their Tempers and innate averlation from the Contemplation of Divine things) who if by chance they hear any one profeffing that he can with fufficient clearnels and diffinctnels conceive the Nature of a Spirit, and communicate the Notion to others, they are prefently startled and amazed at the faying, and straitway accuse the Man of intolerable Levity or Arrogancy, as thinking him to affume for much to himself and to promise to others, as no humane Wit furnished with never so much Knowledge can ever perform. And this I understand even of fuch Men who yet readily acknowledge the Existence of Spirits.

But as for those that deny their Existence, whoever profefes this skill to them, verily he cannot but appear a Man above all measure vain and doating, no Man more unskilful and ignorant, than he that efteems the clear Notion of a Spirit so hopeles and desperate an attempt; and that I shall plainly detect, that this high and boastful Profession of their Ignorance in these things does not proceed from hence, that they have any more a sharp or discerning Judgment than other Mortals, but that they have more gross and weak parts, and a shala shallower Wit, and such as comes nearest to the superstition and stupidity of the rude Vulgar, who easilier fall into admiration and astonishment, than pierce into the Reasons and Notices of any difficult Matter.

SECT. XVII.

The Definition of Body in general, with so clear an Explication thereof, that even they that complain of the obscurity of a Spirit, cannot but confess they perfectly understand the Nature of Body.

BUT now for those who do thus despair of any true Knowledge of the Nature of a Spirit, I would entreat them to try the Abilities of their Wit in recognizing and throughly confidering the Nature of Body in general, and let them ingenuoufly tell me whether they cannot but acknowledge this to be a clear and perspicuous Definition thereof, viz. That Body is substance Material of it self, altogether destitute of all Perception, Life, and Motions. Or thus, Body is a substance Material, coalescent or accruing together into one, by virtue of some other thing, from whence that one by coalition, has or may bave Life also, Perception and Motion.

I doubt not but they will readily anfwer, that they underftand all this (as to the Terms) clearly and perfectly; nor would they doubt of the Truth thereof, but that we deprive Body of all Motion from it felf, as alfo of Union, Life and Perception. But that it is Subftance, that is, a Being fublishent by it felf, not a mode of fome Being, they cannot but very willingly admit, and that alfo it is a material Subftance compounded of physical Menads, or at leaft of most minute Particles of Matter, into which it is divisible; and because of their Impenetrability, impenetrable by any other Body, fo that the Effential and Pofitive difference of a Body is, that it be impenetrable, and phyfically divisible into Parts: But that it is extended, that immediately belongs to it as it is a Being. Nor is there any reason why they should doubt of the other part of the Differentia.

ferentia, when as it is folidly and fully proved in Philosophy, That Matter of its own nature, or in it felf, is endued with no Perception, Life, nor Motion. And befides, we are to remember that we here do not treat of the Existence of things, but of their intellible Notion and Esfence.

SECT. XVIII.

The perfect Definition of a Spirit, with a full Explication of its Nature through all Degrees.

A ND if the Notion or Effence is so easily understood in na-ture Corporeal or Body, I do not see but in the Species immediately opposite to Body, viz. Spirit, there may be found the fame facility of being underftood. Let us try therefore, and from the Law of Opposites let us define a Spirit, an Immaterial substance intrinsecally endued with Life and the faculty of Motion. This flender and brief Definition that thus eafily flows without any noife, does comprehend in general the whole nature of a Spirit; Which left by reason of its exility and brevity it may prove less perceptible to the Understanding, as a Spirit is to the fight, I will fubjoin a more full Explication, that it may appear to all, that this Definition of a Spirit is nothing inferiour to the Definition of a Body as to clearnels and perspicuity. And that by this method which we now fall upon, a ful and perfect knowledge and understanding of the nature of a Spirit may be attained to.

Go to therefore, let us take notice through all the degrees of the Definitum, or Thing, defined, what precife and immediate properties each of them contain, from whence at length a moft diffinct and perfect knowledge of the whole Definitum will difcover it felf. Let us begin then from the top of all, and first let us take notice that a Spirit is Ens, or a Being, and from this very fame that it is a Being; that it is allo One, that it is True, and that it is Good; which are the three acknowledged Properties of Ens in Metaphyficks, that it exifts fometime, and famewhere, and is in fome fort extended, as is fhewn Enchirid. Metaphyf. cap. 2. fect 10. which three latter terms are plain of themfelves. And as for the three former, that One fignifies undiftinguished or undivided divided in and from it felf, but divided or diftingulfhed from all other, and that True denotes the answerableness of the thing to its own proper Idea, and implies right Matter and Form duely conjoyned, and that laftly Good respects the fitnels for the end in a large fence, fo that it will take in that faying of Theologers, That God is his own End, are things vulgarly known to Logicians and Metaphylicians. That these Six are the immediate affections of Being as Being, is made apparent in the abovecited Enchiridion Metaphysicum; nor is it requisite to repeat the fame things here. Now every Being is either Substance or the Mode of Substance, which some call Accident : But that a Spirie is not an Accident or Mode of Substance, all in a manner profess and it is demonstrable from manifold Arguments, that there are Spirits which are no fuch Accidents or Moder; Which is made good in the faid Enchiridion and other Treatifes of Doctor ⁻H. M.

Wherefore the fecond Effential degree of a Spirit is, that it is Subfance. From whence it is underftood to subfift by it self, nor to want any other thing as a Subject (in which it may inhere, or of which it may be the Mode or Accident) for its subfifting or existing.

The third and last Essential degree is, that it is Immaterial, according to which it immediately belongs to it, that it be a Being not only One, but one by it felf, or of its own intimate nature; and not by another; that is, That, though as it is a Being it is in some fort extended, yet it is utterly Indivisible and Indiscerpible into real Physical parts. And moreover, That it can penetrate the Matter, and (which the Matter cannot do) penetrate things of its own kind; that is pass through Spiritual Substances. In which two Effential Attributes (as it ought to be in every perfect and legitimate Distribution of any Genius) it is fully and accurately contrary to its opposite Species, namely, to Body. As also in those immediate Properties whereby it is underftood to have Life intrinfically in it felf, and the faculty of moving ; which in fome fenfe is true in all Spirits whatfoever, forasmuch as Life is either Vegetative, Sensitive, or Intellectual. One whereof at least every Spiritual Substance hath: as also the faculty of moving; infomuch that every Spirit either moves it felf by it felf, or the Matter, or both, or at least the Matter either mediately or immediately ; or laftly, both ways. For fo all things moved are moved by God, he being the Founrain of all Life and Morion.

SECT. XIX.

That from hence that the Definition of a Body is perspicuous, the Definition of a Spirit is also necessarily perspicuous.

WHerefore I dare here appeal to the Judgment and Con-fcience of any one that is not altogether illiterate and of a dull and obtruse Wit, whether this Notion or Definition of a Spirit in general, is not as intelligible and perspicuous, is not as clear and every way diffinct as the Idea or Notion of a Body, or of any thing elfe whatloever which the mind of Man can contemplate in the whole compais of Nature. And whether he cannot as eafily or rather with the fame pains apprehend the nature of a Spirit as of Body, foralmuch as they both agree in the immediate Genus to them, to wit Substance. And the Differentiæ do illustrate one another by their mutual opposition: intomuch that it is impossible that one should understand what is Material Substance, but he must therewith prefently understand what Immaterial Substance is, or what it is not to have Life and Motion of it felf, but he must straitway perceive what it is to have both in it felf, or to be able to communicate them to others.

SECT. XX.

Four Objections which from the perfpicuity of the terms of the Definition of a SPIRIT infer the Repugnancy of them one to another.

N OR can I divine what may be here opposed, unless haply they may alledge such things as these. That although they cannot deny but that all the terms of the Definition and Explication of them, are sufficiently intelligible, if they be confidered fingle, yet if they be compared one with another they will mutually tually deftroy one another. For this Extension which is mingled with, or inferted into the nature of a Spirie, feems to take away the Penetrability and Indivisibility thereof, as also its faculty of thinking, as its Penetrability likewise takes away its power of moving any Bodies.

I. First, Extension takes way Penetrability; because if one Extension penetrate another, of necessity either one of them is destroyed, or two equal Amplitudes entirely penetrating one another, are no bigger than either one of them taken fingle, because they are closed within the same limits.

II. Secondly, It takes away Indivisibility; because whatloever is extended has partes extra partes, one part out of another, and therefore is Divisible: For neither would it have parts, unless it could be divided into them. To which you may further add, that forasimuch as the parts are fubstantial, nor depend one of another, it is clearly manifest that at least by the Divine Power they may be separate, and subsist separate one from atorher.

III. Thirdly, Extension deprives a Spirit of the faculty of thisking, as depressing it down into the same order that Bodies are. And that there is no reason why an extended Spirit should be more capable of Perception than Matter that is extended.

IV. Laftly, Penetrability renders a Spirit unable to more Matter; because, whenas by reason of this Penetrability it so easily flides thorough the Matter, it cannot conveniently be united with the Matter whereby it may move the same: For without some union or inherency (a Spirit being destitute of all Impenetrability) 'tis impossible it should protrude the Matter towards any place.

The fum of which Four difficulties tends to this, that we may understand, that though this Idea or Notion of a Spirit which we have exhibited be fufficiently plain and explicate, and may be eafily understood; yet from the very perspicuity of the thing it felf, it abundantly appears, that it is not the Idea of any pollible thing, and much less of a thing really existing; whenas the parts thereof are to manifestly repugnant one to another.

SECT.

SECT. XXI.

An Answer to the first of the Four Objections.

I. B UT againft as well the Nullibifts as the Hobbians, who both of them contend that Extension and Matter is one and the fame thing, we will prove that the Notion or Idea of a Spirit which we have produced, is a Notion of a thing possible. And as for the Nullibists, who think we for much indulge to corporeal Imagination in this our Opinion of the Extension of Spirits, I hope on the contrary, that I shall shew that it is only from hence, that the Hobbians and Nullibists have taken all Amplitude from Spirits, because their Imagination is not so for comporting, or rather that they have their Mind over much addicted and enflaved to Material things, and so difordered, that the knows not how to expedite her felf from großs Corporeal Phantas.

From which Fountain have fprung all those difficulties whereby they endeavour to overwhelm this our Notion of a Spirit; as we shall manifestly demonstrate by going through them all, and carefully perpending each of them. For it is to be imputed to their grols Imagination, That from hence that two equal Amplitudes penetrate one another throughout, they conclude that either one of them must therewith perish, or that they being both conjoyned together, are no bigger than either one of them taken fingle. For this comes from hence, that their mind is fo illaqueated or lime-twigged, as it were, with the Idea's and Properties of Corporeal things, that they cannot but infect thole. things also which have nothing corporeal in them with this material. Tincture and Contagion, and fo altogether confound this Metaphyfical Extension with that Extension which is Phyfical. I fay, from this difease it is that the fight of their mind is become fo dull and obtrule, that they are not able to divide that common Attribute of a being, I mean Entenfion Metaphylical from special Extension and Material, and affign to Spirits their proper Extension, and leave to Matter hers. Nor according to that known method, whether Logical or Metaphyfical, by intellectual Abstraction prescind the Generical nature of Extension from the abovefaid Species or kinds thereof. Nor laft-· ly, (which is another fign of their obtuseness and dulness) 16 is their Mind able to penetrate with that Spiritual Extension into the Extension Material; but like a stupid Beast stands lowing without, as if the Mind it self were become wholly corporeal; and if any thing enter they believe it perisses rather and is annihilated, than that two things can at the same time co-exist together in the same Obi. Which are Symptoms of a Mind desperately sick of this Corporeal Malady of Imagination, and not sufficiently accustomed or exercised in the free Operations of the Intellectual Powers.

And that also proceeds from the fame. Source, that fuppofing two Extensions penetrating one another, and adequately occupying the fame Ubi, they thus conjoyned are conceived not to be greater than either one of them taken by it felf. For the reason of this Mistake is, that the Mind incrasfated and fwayed down by the Imagination, cannot together with the Spiritual Extension penetrate into the Material, and follow it throughout, but only places it felf hard by, and stands without like a gross stupid thing, and altogether Corporeal, for if the could but with the Spiritual Extension, infinnate her felf into the Material, and fo conceive them both together as two really diftinct Extensions, it is impossible but that the thould therewith conceive them to conjoyned into one Ubi, to be notwithstanding not a jot less than when they are separated and occupy an Ubi as big again; for the Extenfion in neither of them is diminished, but their Situation only changed, as it also fometimes comes to pass in one and the fame Extension of some particular Spirits which can dilate and contract their Amplitude into a greater or leffer Whithout any Augmentation or Diminution of their Extenfion, but only by the expansion and contraction of it into another fite.

SECT.

SECT. XXII.

That befides those THREE Dimensions which belong to all extended things, a FOURTH also is to be admitted, which belongs properly to SPIRITS.

A ND that I may not diffemble or conceal any thing, altho' all Material things, confider'd in themlelves, have three Dimensions only; yet there must be admitted in Nature a Fourth, which fitly enough, I think, may be called Essential Spission of the second second second second those Spirits which can contract their Extension into a lefs Ubi, yet by a lefs Analogie it may be referred also to Spirits penetrating as well the Matter as mutually one another, so that wherever there are more Effences than one, or more of the fame Effence in the same Ubi than is adequate to the Amplitude thereof, there this Fourth Dimension is to be acknowledged, which we call Essential Spission.

Which affuredly involves no greater repugnancy than what may feem at first view, to him that confiders the thing lefs attentively, to be in the other three Dimensions, namely, unlefs one would conceive that a piece of Wax stretched out, suppose to the length of an Ell, and afterwards rolled together into the form of a Globe, loses something of its former Extension, by this its conglobation, he must confess that a Spirit, neither by the contraction of it felf into a less space has lost any thing of its Extension or Effence, but as in the above faid Wax, the dimunition of its Longitude is compensated with the augmentation of its Latitude and Profundity; so in a Spirit contracting it felf, that in like manner its Longitude, Latitude, and Profundity being leffened, are compensated by Effential Spifitude, which the Spirit acquires by this contraction of it felf. And in both cafes we are to remember that the Site is only changed, but that the Effence and Extension are not at all impaired.

Verily these things by me are so perfectly every way perceived, so certain and tried, that I dare appeal to the Mind of any one which is free from the moral Prejudices of Imagination, nation, and challenge him to try the ftrength of his Intellectuals, whether he does not clearly perceive the thing to be fo as I have defined, and that two equal Extensions, adequately occupying the very fame Ubi, be not inice as great as either of them alone, and that they are not closed with the fame Terms as the Imagination fallely fuggefts, but only with equal.

Nor is there any need to heap up more. Words for the folving this first Difficulty ; whenas what has been briefly faid already abundantly fufficeth for the penetrating their understanding who are pre-possent with no Prejudice; but for the piercing of theirs who are blinded with Prejudices, infinite will not fuffice,

SECT: XXIII.

An Answer to the second Objection, where the fundamental Error of the Nullibists, viz. That what sover is extended is the Object of Imagination is taken notice of.

L E T us now try if we can difpatch the fecond Difficul-ty with the like fuccefs, and fee if it be not wholly to be ascribed to Imagination, that an Indiscerpible extension feems to involve in it any contradiction, as if there could be no Extension which has not parts real and properly so called into which it may be actually divided, viz, for this reason, that only is extended which has partes extra partes, which being fubstantial, may be separated one from another, and thus separate subfift ; this is the summary Account of this difficulty, which nothing but corrupt Imagination supporteth.

Now the first Source or Fountain of this Errour of the Nullibifts is this, that they make every thing that is extended the Object of the Imagination, and every Object of the Imagination corporeal. The latter whereof undoubtedly is true, if it be taken in a right Senfe, namely, if they understand such a perception as is either fimply and adequately drawn from external Objects ; or by increasing, diminishing, transposing, or transforming of parts (as in Chimara's and Hippocentaur's) is compoled of the fame. I acknowledge all their Ideas, as they were lomefometime fome way Objects of Senfation, foto be the genuine Objects of Inagination, and the perception of these to be rightly termed the Operation of Fancy, and that all these things that are thus represented, necessfarily are to be looked upon as Corporeal, and consequently as actually divisible.

But that all perception of Extension is fuch Imagination, that I confidently deny, forafmuch as there is an Idea of infinite Extension drawn or taken in from no external Sense, but is natural and effential to the very Faculty of perceiving; which the Mind can by no means pluck out of her felf, nor caft it away from her; but if the will roufe her felf up, and by earneft and attentive thinking, fix her animadversion thereon, the will be constrained, whether the will or no, to acknowledge, that altho' the whole matter of the World were exterminated out of the Universe, there would notwithstanding remain a certain fubrile and immaterial extension which has no agreement with that other Material one, in any thing, faving that it is extended, as being fuch that it neither falls under sense, nor is impenetrable, nor can be moved, nor discerped into parts; and that this Idea is not only poffible, but neceffary, and fuch as we do not at our pleafure feign and invent, but do find it to be fo innate and ingrafted in our Mind, that we cannot by any force or Artifice remove it thence, which is a most certain demonstration that all Perception of Extension is not Imagination properly fo called.

Which in my Opinion ought to be effected one of the chief. eft and most fundamental Errors of the Nullibists, and to which especially this Difficulty is to be referred touching an Indifcerpible Extension. . For we see they confess their own Guilt, namely that their Mind is fo corrupted by their Imagination, and to immerfed into it. that they can use no other Faculty in the Contemplation of any extended thing, and therefore when they make use of their Imagination instead of their Intellect in Contemplating of it, they necessarily look upon it as an Object of Imagination; that is, as a corporeal thing, and dife cerpible into parts, for as I noted above, the fight of their Mind by reason of this Morbus uneedis, this materious Discase, if I may fo speak, is made so heavy and dull, that it cannot distinguish any Extension from that of Matter, as allowing it to appertain to another kind, nor by Logical or Metaphyfical Abstraction prescind it from either.

SECT. XXIV.

That Extension as such includes in it neither Divisibility nor Impenetrability, neither Indivisibility nor Penetrability, but is indifferent to either two of those Properties.

AND from hence it is that because a thing is extended, they presently imagine that it has partes extra partes, and is not Ens unum per se & non per aliud, a Being one by it felf, and not by vertue of another, but fo framed from the juxtapolition of parts, when as the Idea of Extension precisely confider'd in it felf, includes no fuch thing, but only a trinal Distance, or folid Amplitude, that is to say, not linear only and fuperficiary, (if we may here use those Terms which properly belong to magnitude Mathematical) but every way running out and reaching towards every part. This Amplitude furely, and nothing befide, does this bare and fimple Extension include, not Penetrability nor Impenetrability, nor Divisibility, nor yet Indivisibility, but to either Affections or Properties, or if you will effential Differences, namely, to Divisibility and Impenetrability, or to Penetrability and Indivisibility. if confidered in it felf, is it altogether indifferent, and may be determined to either two of them.

Wherefore, whereas we acknowledge that there is a certain Extension, namely, Material, which is endued with fo ftour and invincible an 'Armunia or Impenetrability, that it neceffarily and by an infuperable Renitency expels and excludes all other Matter that occurs and attempts to penetrate it, nor fuffers it at all to enter, altho' in the fimple Idea of Extension, this marvelous Vertue of it is not contained, but plainly omitted, as not at all belonging thereto immediately and of it felf; why may we not as eafily conceive that another Extension, namely, an Immaterial one, though Extension in it felf include no fuch thing, is of fuch a Nature, that it cannot by any other thing whether Material or Immaterial be differed into Parts; but by an indiffoluble neceffary and effential Tie be fo united and held together with it felf, that although it can penetrate all things and be penetrated by all things, things, yet nothing can fo infinuate it felf into it; as to disjoyn any thing of its Effence any where, or perforate it or make any Hole or Pore in it? That is, that I may fpeak briefly, What hinders but that there may be a Being that is immediately One of its own Nature, and held together into one by virtue of fome other, either Quality or Subfrance? Altho' every Being as a Being is Extended, because Extension in its precise Notion does not include any Physical Division, but the Mind infected with corporeal Imagination, does falsely and unskilfully feign it to be neceffarily there.

SECT. XXV.

That every thing that is extended has not Parts Physically differpible, though Logically or Intellectually divisible.

F OR it is nothing which the Nullibifts here allege, while they fay, That all Extension inferreth Parts, and all Parts Division. For besides that the first is falle, for asmuch as Ens unum per se, a Being, one of it self, or of its own immediate Nature, although extended, yet includes no Parts in its Idea, but is conceived according to its proper Effence, as a thing as fimple as may be, and therefore compounded of no Parts. We Answer moreover, That it is not at all prejudicial to our Caufe, though we should grant that this Metaphyfical Extenfion of Spirits is also divisible, but Logically only, not Physically; that is to fay, is not difcerpible. But that one should adjoyn a Phylical divisibility to such an Extension, surely that must must necessarily proceed from the impotency of his Imagination, which his Mind cannot curb nor feparate her felf from the dregs and corporeal Foulnels thereof; and hence it is that the tinctures and infects this Pure and Spiritual Extension with Corporeal Properties. But that an extended thing may be divided Logically or Intellectually, when in the mean time it can by no means be discerped, it sufficiently appears from hence, That a Phyfical Monad which has fome Amplitude, though the least that possibly can be, is conceived thus to be divided in a Line confifting of any uneven number ber of Monads, which notwithstanding the. Intellect divides into two equal Parts. And verily in a Metaphysical Monad, fuch as the Holenmerians conceit the Mind of Man to be, and to possed in the mean time and occupy the whole Body, there may be here again made a Logical Distribution, suppose, efubjectis, as they call it, so far forth as this Metaphyfical Monad, or Soul of the Holenmerians is conceived to posfels the Head, Trunk, or Limbs of the Body, and yet no Man is so delirant as to think that it follows from thence, that such a Soul may be difcerped into so many Parts, and that the Parts so difcerped may subsist by themselves.

SECT. XXVI.

An Answer to the latter part of the second Objection, which inferreth the separability of the Parts of a substantial Extension, from the said Parts being Substantial and Independent one of another.

FROM which a fufficiently fit and accommodate Anfwer may be fetched to the latter part of this Difficulty, namely, to that which because the parts of substance are Substantial and Independent one of another, and fubfisting by themfelves (as being Substances) would infer that they can be difcerped, at least by the Divine Power, and disjoyned, and being to disjoyned, fublift by themfelves. Which I confeis to be the chief Edge or Sring of the whole Difficulty, and yet fuch as I hope I shall with ease File off or Blunt. For first. I deny that in a thing that is absolutely One and Simple as a Spirit is, there are any Physical parts, or parts properly fo called, but that they are only fallely feigned and fancied in it, by the impure Imagination. But that the Mind it felf being fufficiently defecated and purged from the impure Dregs of Fancy, although from some extrinsical respect the may confider a Spirit as having Parts, yet at the very fame time does the in her felf, with close attention, observe and note, that fuch an Extension of it felf has none; and therefore whenas as it has no Parts, it is plain it has no fubstantial parts, nor independent one of another, nor subsistent of themselves.

And then as much as concerns those Parts which the flupid and Impotent Imagination fancieth in a Spirit, it does not follow from thence, because they are Substantial, that they may fublist feparate by themselves; for a thing to fublist by it felf, only signifies to to substit, that it wants not the Prop of some other Subject in which it may inhere as Accidents do, so that the parts of a Spirit may be said to substance still.

SECT. XXVII.

That the mutual Independency of the Parts of an extended Substance may be understood in a twofold Sense; with an Answer thereto, taken in the first Sense thereof.

B UT what they mean by that mutual Independency of Parts, I do not fully understand, but I sufficiently conceive that one of these two things must be hinted thereby, viz. Either that they are not mutual and effectual Causes to one another of their Existing, or that their Existence is understood to be connected by no necessfary condition at all.

And as for the former Senfe, I willingly confefs thole Parts which they fancy in a Spirit are not 'mutual Caufes of one anothers Exiftence; but fo, that in the mean time I do moft firmly deny, that it will thence follow that they may be difcerped, and thus difcerpt, be feparately conferved, no more than the intelligible Parts of a Phyfical Monad which is divided into two by our Reafon or Intellect; which furely are no mutual Caufes of one anothers Exiftence, or the Members of the Diftribution of a Metaphyfical Monad according to the Doctrine of the Holenmerians (viz. The Soul totally being in every part of the Body) which no Man in his Wits can ever hope that they may be difcerped, although the faid Members of the division are not the mutual Caufes of one anothers Exiftence, for they are but one and the fame Soul which is not the caufe of it felf, but was wholly and entirely caufed by God.

But you will fay that there is here manifeftly a reafon extant and apparent why these Members of the Distribution cannot be discerped, and discerpt seperately conversed, because one and the fame indivisible Monad occurs in every Member of the Diftribution, which therefore fince it is a fingle one, it is impoffible ir should be discerped from it self. To which I on the other fide answer, That it is as manifestly extant and apparent how frivoloufly therefore ineptly Arguments are drawn from Logical or Intellectual Divisions, for the concluding a real separability of parts. And I add further, That as that fictitious Metaphyfical Monad cannot be discerped or pluckt in pieces from it felf, no more can any real Spirit, because it is a thing most simple and most absolutely One, and which a pure Mind darken'd and posselfed with no prejudices of Imagination does acknowledge no real parts at all to be in. For fo it would ipfo fatto be a compound Thing.

SECT. XXVIII.

An Answer to the Independency of parts taken in the (econd (ence.

TROM whence an easie entrance is made to the answering It this difficulty underftood in the fecond fence of the mutual Independency of the parts of a Spirit, whereby their coexistence and union are understood to be connected by no necessary Law or Condition. For that this is falle, I do most constantly affirm without all demur : For the coexistences of the parts, as they call them, of a Spirit, are connected by a Law or Condition abfolutely necessary and plainly essential; Forasmuch as a Spirit is a most simple Being, or a Being unum per se & non per aliud; that is, one of it felf or of its own nature immediately fo, and not by another either Substance or Quality. For none of those parts, as the Nullibists call them, can exist but upon this condition, that all jointly and unitedly exift together; which Condition or Law is contained in the very Idea, or nature of every Spirit. Whence it cannot be created or any way produced unless upon this condition, that all its parts be infeperably and indifcerpibly one; as neither a Rectangle Triangle, unless upon this condition that that the powers of the Cathetus and Basis, be equal to the power of the Hypotenusa. Whence the Indiscerpibility of a Spirit cannot be removed from it, no not virtute Divina, as the Schoolmen speak, no more than the above-said Property disjoyned from a Rectangle Triangle. Out of all which I hope it is at length abundantly clear, that the Extension of a Spirit does not at all hinder the Indiscerpibility thereof.

SECT. XXIX.

An Answer to the third Objection touching the Imperceptivity of an extended Substance, viz. That whatever is, is extended, and that the NUILIBISTS and HOLENMERI-ANS themselves cannot give a Reason of the perceptive Faculty in Spirits, from their Hypothese.

III. N O R is it any let (which is the third thing) to the faculty of Perceiving and Thinking in Spirits: For we do not thruft down a Spirit by attributing Extension to it, into the rank of Corporeal Beings, forafmuch as there is nothing in all Nature which is not in fome fenfe extended. For whatever of Effence there is in any thing, it either is or may be actually prefent to fome part of the matter, and therefore it muft either be extended or be contracted to the narrownefs of a point, and be a meer nothing. For as for the Nullibifts and Holenmeriant, the opinions of them both are above utterly routed by me, and quite fubverted and overturned from the very root, that no man may feek fubterfuges and lurking holes there. Wherefore there is a neceffity that fome thing that is extended have Cogisation and Perception in it, or elfe there will be nothing left that has.

But for that which this Objection further urges, that there occurs no reason why an extended Spirit should be more capable of Perception than extended Matter, it is verily, in my judge ment, a very unlearned and unskilful argutation. For we do not take all this pains demonstrating the Extension of a Spirit, that that thence we might fetch out a reason or account of its faculty of perceiving; but that it may be conceived to be some real Being and true Substance, and not a vain Figment, such as is every thing that has no Amplitude and is in no fort extended.

But those that fo flickle and fweat for the proving their Opinion, that a Spirit is no where, or is totally in every part of that Ubi it occupies, they are plainly engaged of all right, clearly and dictinctly to render a reason out of their Hypothesis of the Perceptive faculty that is acknowledged in Spirits, Namely that they plainly and precisely deduce from hence, because a thing is nowhere or totally in every part of the Ubi it occupies, that it is necessfarily endued with a faculty of perceiving and thinking; fo that the reason of the conjunction of properties with the Subject, may be clearly thence understood.

Which not withftanding I am very confident, they can never perform; And that Perception and Cogitation are the immediate Attributes of fome Substance; and that therefore, as that Rule of Prudence, Enchirid. Etbic. lib. 3. cap. 4. fect. 3. declares, no Physical reason thereof ought to be required, nor can be given, why they are in the Subject wherein they are found.

SECT. XXX.

That from the Generical nature of any Species, no reason is to be fetcht of the conjunction of the Effential Difference with it, it being immediate.

B UT fo we are to conclude, that as Substance is immediately divided into Material and Immaterial, or into Body and Spirit, where no reason can be rendred from the Substance in Spirit, as it is Substance, why it should be Spirit rather than Body; nor from Substance in a Body, as it is Substance, why it should be Body rather than Spirit, But these Effential Differences are immediately in the Subject in which they are found: So the case stands in the subject in which they are meerly Plassical and Perceptive, supposing there are Spirit shat are meerly Plastical; and then of a Perceptive Spirit into meerly Sensitive and IntelIntellectual. For there can be no reason rendred touching a Spirit as a Spirit in a Spirit meerly Plastical, why it is a Spirit meerly Plastical rather than Perceptive: Nor in a Perceptive Spirit, why it is a Perceptive Spirit rather than meerly Plastical. And lastly, in a Perceptive Spirit Intellectual, why it is Intellectual rather than meerly Sensitive; and in the meerly Sensitive Spirit, why it is such rather than Intellectual. But these Effential Differences are immediately in the Subjects in which they are found, and any Physical and intrinsical reason ought not to be asked, nor can be given why they are in those Subjects, as I nored a little above out of the faid Enchiridion Ethicum.

SECT. XXXI.

That although the Holenmerians and Nullibifts can give no reason, why that which perceives should be TOTALLY in every part, or should be NO WHERE rather than be in any sort extended or somewhere, yet there are reasons obvious enough why an extended Spirit, rather should perceive than extended Matter.

BUT however, though we cannot render a reason why this or that Substance as Substance, be a Spirit rather than Body, or why this or that Spirit be Perceptive rather than meerly Plastical; yet as the reason is sufficiently plain, why Matter or Body is a Substance rather than Accident; so it is manifest enough why that which Perceives, or is Plastical, should be a Spirit rather than Matter or Body; which sure is much more than either the Holenmerians or Nullibists can vaunt of. For they can offer no reason why that which perceives should rather be nowhere than somewhere; or totally in each part of the Ubi it does occupy, than otherwise, as may be understood from what we have said above.

But now fince the Matter or Body which is difcerpible and Impenetrable is defitute of itfelf of all Life and Motion, certainly it is confonant to reason, that the Species opposite to Bedy, and which is conceived to be Penetrable and Indiscerpible, should be intrinsically endued with Life in general and Motion. And whenas Matter is nothing else than a certain flupid and loose ongeries congeries of Phylical Monads, that the first and most immediate opposite degree in this indiscerpible and penetrable Substance, which is called Spirit, should be the faculty of Union, Motion, and Life, in which all the Sympathies and Synenergies which are found in the world may be conceived to confift. From whence it ought not to feem strange, that that which is Plastical should be a Spirit.

And now as for Perception itfelf, undoubtedly all Mortals have either a certain confused prefage, or more precise and determinate Notion, that as that, whatever it is in which the abovefaid Symphathies and Synenergies immediately are, fo more especially that to which belongs the faculty of Perceiving and Thinking is athing of all things the most subtile and most One that may be.

Wherefore I appeal here to the Mind and Judgment of any one," whether he can truly conceive any thing more Subtile or more One than the Essence or Notion of a Spirit, as it is immediately diftinguished from Matter, opposed thereto. For can there be any thing more One than what has no parts, into which it may be discerped? or more Subtile than what does not only penetrate Matter, but itfelf, or at least other Substances of itt own kind ? For a Spirit can penetrate a Spirit, though Matter cannot penetrate Matter.

There is therefore in the very Estence of a Spirit, although it be Metaphyfically extended, no obfcure reason why all the Sympathies and Synenergies, why all Perceptions and all manner of Cogitations should be referred rather to it, by reason of the Unity and Subtilty of its nature, than to Matter, which is fo crafs, that it is impenetrable ; and is fo far from unity of Effence, that it confifts of juxtapolited parts. But I hope by this I have abun-Mantly fatisfied this third difficulty.

L

SECT. XXXII.

An Answer to the fourth Objection as much as respects the HOLENMERIANS and NULLIBISTS, and all those that acknowledge that the Matter is created of God.

IV. L E T us go on therefore to the Fourth and laft, which from the Penetrability of a Spirit concludes its unfitnels for moving of Matter. For it cannot move Matter, but by impelling it; nor can it impel it, because it does so easily, without all refistence, penetrate it. Here therefore again, Imagination plays her tricks, and measures the nature of a Spirit by the Laws of Matter, fancying a Spirit like fome Body passing through an over-large or wide hole, where it cannot stick by the reason of the laxnels of the passage.

But in the mean time, it is to be noted, that neither the Holenmerians nor Nullibists can of right object this difficulty to us, whenas it is much more incredible that either a Metaphyfical Monad, or any Effence that is no where, should be more fit for the moving Matter, than that which has fome Amplitude, and is prefent also to the Matter that is to be moved. Wherefore we have now only to do with fuch Philosophers as contend that the whole Universe confists of Bodies only: For as for those that acknowledge there is a God and that Matter was created by him it is not hard for them to conceive, that there may be a certain faculty in the Soul, which in fome manner, though very fhadowifhly, answers to that Power in God of creating Matter; Namely, that as God, though the most pure of all Spirits, yet creates Matter the most gross of all things ; fo created Spirits themfelves may emit a certain Material Vertue, either spontaneously or naturally, by which they may intimately inhere in the Subject Matter, and be fufficiently close united therewith. Which faculty of Spirits the Appendix to the Antidote against Atheism, is called unorabers, the Hylopathy of Spirits, or a Power of affecting or being affected by the Matter. But I confels that Answer is lets firly used when we have to do with those who deny the Creating of Matter, and much more when with those that deny there is a God.

An Answer to those that think there is nothing in the Universe but Matter or Body.

WHerefore, whenas we have to do with fuch infense Adverfaries, and fo much eftranged from all knowledge and acknowledgment of Incorporeal Things, verily we ought to behave our felves very cautioufly and circumfpectly, and fomething more precifely to confider the Title of the Queftion, which is not, Whether we can accurately differn and declare the mode or way that a Spirit moves Matter, but whether its Penetrability is repugnant with this faculty of moving Matter. But now it is manifest, if a Spirit could be united and as it were cohere with the Matter, that it might eafily move Matter; forafmuch as if there be at all any fuch thing as a Spirit, it is according to the common Opinion of all men to be acknowledged the true Principle and Fountain of all Life and Motion. Wherefore the hinge of the whole controversie turns upon this one Pin, Whether it be repugnant that any Spirit should be united and as it were cohere with Matter, or by whatever firmnels or faitening. (whether permanent or momentaneous) be joyned therewith.

Now that it is not repugnant, I hope I shall clearly demonstrate from hence, that the unition of Spirit with Matter, is as intelligible as the unition of one part of Matter with another. For that ought in reason to be held and Axiom firm and fure. That that is possible to be, in which there is found no greater (nor to fay lefs) difficulty of fo being, than in that which we really find to be: But we see one part of Matter really and actually mited with another, and that in fome Bodies with a firmnels almost invincible, as in some Stones and Metals, which are held to be the hardeft of all Bodies. But we will for the more fully understanding the business, suppose a Body absolutely and perfectly hard, confitured of no Particles, but the very Phylical Monads themselves, and without all Pores.

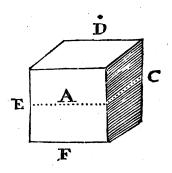

I ask therefore here, By what vertue, or by what manner of way do the parts of fo pericet a Solid cohere? Undeubtedly they can alledge nothing here befides immediate contract and teft: For if they fly to any other affections which are allied to Life

Life and Senfe, they are more rightly and more eafily underftood to be in a Spirit than in Matter; and we will prefently pronounce that a Spirit may adhere to Matter by the fame vertues.

But that the Parts of Matter cohere by bare, tho' immediate contract, feems as difficult, if not more difficult, than that a Spirit penetrating Matter fhould cleave together into one with it: For the contract of the parts of Matter is every where only fuperficial, but one and the fame indifcerpible Spirit penetrates and posses the whole Matter at once.

Nor need we fear at all, that it will not inhere because it can so easily slide in, and therefore as it may seem, slide thro' and pass away.

For in a Body perfectly folid, fuppole A, in which we will conceive fome particular Superficies, fuppole E, A, C; this Superficies E, A, C, is affuredly fo glib and finooth, that there can be nothing imagined more fmooth and glib, wherefore why does not the upper part of this folid Cube C.D. E, by any the flighteft impulse flide upon the inferiour part of the Cube E, F, C, especially if the inferiour part E, F, C, be held fast, while the superior is impelled or thrust forward, furely this eafinefs of the fliding of Bodies perfectly fmooth and glib, which touch immediately one another, their eafinefs I fay, of fliding one upon another, does feem at leaft as neceffary to our Imagination, as the proclivity of the paffing of a Spirit through the Bodies it penetrates. Wherefore if two parts of Matter, suppose E, D, C, and E, F, C, which our Imagination doth most urgently fuggest to us that they will always with the least impulse flide one upon another, do yet notwithstanding adhere to one another with a most firm and almost invincible Union, why may not then a Spirit, a Spirit, which our Imagination fulpects will fo eafily pals through any Body, be united to a Body with equal firmnels? whenas this is not more difficult than the other, yea rather much more easie if one would confider the thing as it is, laying afide all Prejudice. But now fince the Penetrability of a Spirit is not repugnant with its Union with Matter, it is manifest that its Faculty of moving Body is not at all repugnant with its Penetrability. Which is the thing that was to be demonstrated.

But it half repents me that I have with fo great Preparation and Pomp attacked fo fmall a Difficulty, and have ftriven to long with meer Elufions and preftigious Juggles of the Imagination, (which cafts fuch a Mift of fictitious Repugnancies on the true Idea of a Spirit) as with fo many Phantomes and Spectres of an unquiet Night. But in the mean time I have made it abundantly manifest, that there are no other - Contradictions or Repugnancies in this our Notion of a Spirit, than what the Minds of our Adversaries, polluted with the impure Dregs of Imagination, and unable to abstract Metaphysical Extension from Corporeal Affections, do foully and flovenly clart upon it, and that this Idea locke upon init felf does clearly appear to be a Notion at least of a thing possible; which is all that we drive at in this Place.

SECT. XXXIV.

How far the Notion of a Spirit here defended is countenanced and confirmed by the common suffrage of all Adversaries.

ND that it may appear more plaufible, we will not omit in The last place to take notice, how far it is countenanced and confirmed by the common suffrage of our Adversaries : For the Hobbians, and whatever other Philosophers else of the fame Stamp, do plainly affent to us in this, That what foever really. is, is of necessity extended. But that they hence infer that there is nothing in Nature but what is Corporeal, that truly they do very unskillfully and inconfequently collect, they by fome weakness or morbidness of Mind tumbling into so foul an Error.

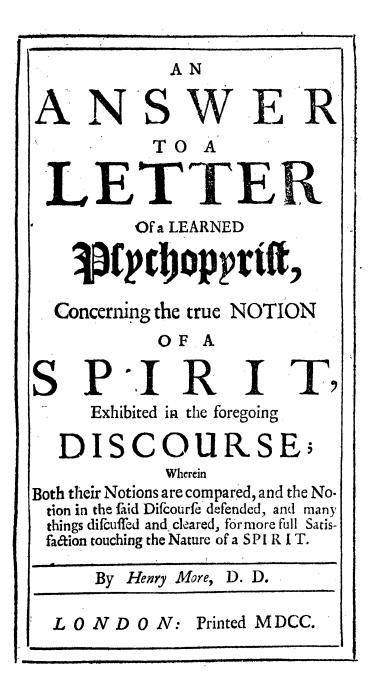

ror. For it is impossible that the Mind of Man, unless it were laden and polluted with the Dregs and Drois of corporeal Imagination, should fuffer it felf to fink into such a grois and dirty Opinion.

But that every thing that is, is extended, the Nullibists also themselves seem to me to be near the very point of acknowledging it for true and certain, for they do not dissemble it, but that if a Spirit be fome where, it necessary follows that it is also extended. And they moreover grant, that by its Operation it is present to or in the Matter, and that the Essence of a Spirit is not separated from its Operations.

But that a thing flould be, and yet not be any where in the whole Universe, is so wild and mad a Vote, and so absonut and abhorrent from all reason, that it cannot be faid by any Man in his Wits, unless by way of Sport, or some flim Jeft, as I have intimated above; whence their case is the more to be pittled, who captivated and blinded with admiration of the chief Author of so absurd an Opinion, do so solemnly and seriously embrace, and diligently endeavour to polish the same.

And laftly, as for the Holenmerians, those of them who are more cautious and confiderate, do so explain their Opinion, that it scarce seems to differ an hairs breadth from ours. For they affirm that the Soul is in every part, yet they fay they understand it not of the Quantity or Extersion of the Soul, whereby it occupies the whole Body, but of the perfection of its Effence and Vertue, which however true it may be of the Soul, it is most undoubtedly true of the Divine Numen, whose Life and Effence is most perfect and most full every where, as being such as every where contains infinite Goodness, Wisdom, and Power.

Thus we fee that this Idea or Notion of a Spirit which is here exhibited to the World, is not only poffible in it felf, but yery plaufible and unexceptionable, and juch as all Parties, if they be rightly underftood, will be found whether they will or no to contribute to the difcovery of the Truth and Solidity thereof, and therefore is fuch as will not unufefully nor feasonably conclude this first Part of Saducifmus Triumphatus, which treats of the Poffibility of Apparitions and Witcheraft, but make the way more easie to the acknowledgment of the force of the Arguments of the Second Part, viz. The many Relations that are produced to prove the Astual Existence of Spirits and Apparitions, TAving in the foregoing Discourse sufficiently declared, impartially discuffed, and as I hope, Tolidly Confuted the Opinions of the Holenmerians and Nullibifts, I thought it not amis to exhibit alfo to thy view, the Opinion of the Pfychopyrifts, (for lo I rather call them than Pneumatopyrists; because the Word is more compendious and less sonorous, and may bear the same Sense, Juzeuv as well as wiew, fignifying Spirare, whence the' Latin word Spiritus is, and our English, Spirit. Not to add that all Created Spirits, and they only are here meant, are Juzal in all probability, and actuate some Matter or other) I thought fit, I (ay, to acquaint thee with the Opinion of the/e Pfychopyrifts, Philosophers that make the Essence or Substance of all created Spirits to be Fire, for fo the Word Plychopyrift fignifies.

READER:

Reader.

It is an Opinion which I have had no occasion to meddle with fince my Juvenile Altercations with Eugenius Philalethes, which is now many Tears ago. ago. He being a Chymist, made the Soul Fire, as Aristoxenus the Musician and Philosopher, made it an Harmony; of whom Cicero wittily observes, Quod non recessfit ab arte sua, which is as appositely faid of Eugenius the Chymist. I was so consident in those Days that no Matter whatever was capable of Cogitation, that whenas that Author avouched the Soul to be Fire, and excused it by adding, he meant an Intelligent Fire: I, according to the sportfulness of my Pen at that Age, told him That he might as well have faid the Soul was a Post, and then excused it again by adding, he meant an Intelligent Post. Something to that purpose I remember I replyed, for I have not reviewed those Writings this many a Year.

But in this Answer, thou art not, Reader, to expect any such Horse Play; neither my Age nor the Quality of the Party who may seem to have espoused this Opinion will bear any such thing. And besides, that Opinion is not to be thought so ridiculous and contemptible which the greatest Wits, and gravest Authors may seem to have owned. Virgil the Prince of Poets, and a great Platonist so expressed himself, as if he held the Soul to be Fire, in these Verses; where seems of the Souls of Men he says.

Igneus est ollis vigor & Cælestis Origo Seminibus, quantum non noxia corpora tardant Terreniq; hebetant artus moribundaq; membra-

And in another place, speaking of the Purgation of Humane Souls after Death, he fays they are fo and so exercised, Donec longa dies perfecto temporis orbe Concretam exemit labem purumq; reliquir, Æthereum fenfum atq; aurai fimplicis ignem.

Add unto this that the Chaldee and Magick Oracles call the Soul Trogenerodo. Lucid Fire, and abstain not from pronouncing that all things proceed it inder Troog; from that one Fire, which is God, as if that Spirit of Spirits, or Father of all Spirits were Fire. Nay the Greek Fathers. as he alleges for himsfelf, are so confident of the Notion, that they devide Fire without any more to do into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative, so that it can be no blemish to any one's Reputation to be found amongst such choice Company.

Befides that, it is to be confidered, that he who is here styled Pfychopyrist, because he seems to be an Espouser of this Opinion, is not so to be understood as if he made this ordinary, crass, and visible Fire the Essence of a Spirit, but that his meaning is more subtile and refined. But what it is you will best understand by Reading the following Answer to his Letter. For this Argument is one remarkable part thereof; and if I be not mistaken, there are several others will occur not unworthy thy Consideration, which to par-

AN

LETTER;

Containing a Defence of the true Notion of a SPIRIT, delivered in the foregoing Difcourfe.

SECT. I.

That though the Learned Pfychopyrift and the Author be agreed in the Fundamentalis Conceptus of a Spirit, that it is a Substance, yet they difagree in the Conceptus Formalis thereof.

SIR,

Have abstained from writing to you till now, becaule I had a mind to get a Book into my hands to peruse some things in it before I writ, which I got but a day or two ago. But now I shall answer, to avoid all tediousness to you or my felf, with all brevity I can, in the noting where we agree and where we differ in the Notion of a Spirit in general, or in the adequate definition thereof. For out of the two inadequate inadequate Conceptus's, as you call them (and I intend to use your Phrases all along which are such as occur in the Writings of Mr. R. B. as the Notions also in your Letter are very like the Norions in Judge Hale's Writings and his) out of those two Conceptus's I fay, one adequate Conceptus does refult, which must reach all Spirits and none but Spirits, or elfe we mils our mark. Now for the first inadequate Conceptus, which you call Conceptus Fundamentalis, and acknowledge to be Substance, we are both a. greed that it is Substance, But the Conceptus Formalis, whereby it is diftinguished from all Substance that is not Spirit, that we do not feem to hit on alike. For unless all whatever is, is Spirit, we are to give fuch a Substance to Spirit as is specifical. ly opposite to all other Substance in the Universe, besides it felf. or elfe we do nothing. Now I demand, wether there be not Matter in the World as well as Spirit, and whether the immediate, known, and univerfally acknowledged Notion of Matter be not real Devisibility and Impenetrability of its parts one to This is body or matter according to the common Noanother. tion of Philosophers, to reign Sicosafor artitutor. And if this be the immediate character of matter, it naturally and logically follows, that the immediate character of its oppofite Species, Spirit must be Indivisibility and Penetrability. And therefore those effential characters must be a part of the Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit, whereby it is diffinguished from Body or matter. So that two Substances Matter and Spirit stand opposite one to another specifically distinct by their immediate, effential and infeparable Attributes, the one being really difcerpible and impenetrable, the other penetrable, and indifcerpible, fufficiently thus to be difcriminated, before we confider any Principle of Altivity in either. And thus much being conceded, that there are these two kinds of Substances in the World so described, I appeal to any mans faculties whether of the two, Spirit, be not the more likely to be the Fountain of all Life and Motion; and Matter a meerly passive Principle ; that is to fay, unactive of it felf, nor moved but as the other Principle moves it, and modifies it. And therefore that the true Notion of a Spirit in general is what I have fet down Sect. 18. viz. An Immaterial (which is, a penetrable and indifcerpible) fubstance, intrinsically endued with Life and Motion. Whatever is this, is Spirit, and whatever substance is not this, is no Spirit, but Matter. And that Life and Motion, and Simpathy and Synenergy should intrinsically relult from a substance that is so much one as to be indifcerpible, and so subtile, as to be in such fort penetrable, as is there delcribed, rather than from Matter that is the contrary, how how rational it is I have intimated in Sett. 31. which Section is worth one's ferious confideration and attention.

Thus thererefore it is, that though we both agree in the Conceptus Fundamentalis of a Spirit in general, that it is fubflance, yet we differ in the Conceptus Formalis, in that you mifs that part which is first aud most immediate in the specification of it, which includes its Penetrability and Indiscorpibility, that which makes it Ens unum per se S non per aliud, which every thing, that is not a Spirit, is, viz. Ens unum per aliud, a thing held together in one by vertue of something else, not immediately of its own Effence becoming one, and therefore is difcerpible, and one part separable from another.

SECT. II.

A threefold faultinefs in the Pfychopyrists Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit; one of which not only a Mistake, but a Mischief: And of the necessity of a Spirit's Penetrability as well as Indifcerpibility; and how natural it is to conceive that from such a substance do issue the operations of Life.

W Herefore your Conceptus Formalis of a Spirie in general, viz. Virtus vitaliter activa, perceptiva, & appetitiva, feems to me faulty upon a threefold account. Firft, in that it leaves out what is contained in the Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit in general; namely its Penetrability and Indifcerpibility. And, Secondly, in that it puts into this Conceptus Formalis of a Spirie more than we can rationally affure our lelves to be in every Spirit, viz Perception: For we have no affurance that a Plastick Spirit has Perception, but may well be affured that guatenus Plastick it has none, Otherwise the Soul would perceive the organization of her own Body. And, thirdly and lastly, I do not eafily affent to that conceit of a Trinity in this Conceptus Formalis, which you make to confist in Virtute una-trina, Vitali, Appetitiva, & Perceptiva: Which make three no more than Animal

Animal, Homo, and Brutum make three, or Cupiditas, Defideria um & Fuga.

But this is but an harmlels mistake, but the omiffion of Immaterial in your Conceptus Formalis or which is all one, of Penetrabilis ty and Indifcerpibility, is not only a mistake but a mifchief, it implying that the Virtus Appetativa and Perceptiva may be in a fubftance though Material, which betrays much of the fuccours that Philosophy affords to Religion in the points of the Existence of a God and Immortality of the Soul, if it were true: But that Materia qualitercumque modificata is uncapable of Perception; both the Cartefians all affirm, and I have I think abundantly demonstrated in my Writings.

In this thing therefore, you and I fundamentally differ, in that you omit, but I include Penetrability and Indifcerpibility in the Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit. So that nothing can be a Spirit that has them not in the fence that I declare. Spirit mult be Penetrative of Spirit and of Matter as well as Indifcerpible, elfe would it be more hard than any Flint; but its Penetrability makes it more pliant and fubtile than the fubtileft Matter imaginable. And to a fubftance of fuch an Onenefs and Subtilty is rationally attributed whatever Alivity, Sympathy, Synenergy, Appetite, and Perception is found in the World, as I noted above. Here therefore is the most notorious difference betwixt us, in which I am the more concerned, because it is not only a Miftake, but a Mischief, as I faid before. But I proceed.

SECT. III.

That he that does not admit a diffinction of substance into Material and Immaterial, antecedent to vital powers and operations, cannot pretend out of any vital Virtues or Powers to be better acquainted with Spirit than Matter.

YOU fay, you are your felf far better acquainted with the nature of a Spirit by that effential Virtus Formalis (namely, by that una-trina Virtus abovenamed) than from the Notion of Substantiality. But I demand here, you omitting that part the Conceptus Conceptus Formalis which I contend for how does it appear that you do not entertain matter for the fuftantiality of this Virtus Formalis, and fo embrace a Cloud inftead of Juno, fome modified body inftead of a pure spirit ? No one can pretend to be better acquainted with a Spirit by that una trina Virtus Formalis, but he that can prove that those Virtues are Incompetible to Matter, and so withal that there are two diffinet kinds of Substances in the Universe, Spirit, and Body or Matter, and that opposite Attributes are to be given to these opposite Species, and confequently that Matter or Body being discerpible, a Spirie ought to be indifcerpible, and Body being Impenetrable, according to the common Tenent of Philosophers, Spirit should be Penetrable. And laftly, Matter being dead, and paffive, Spirit should be the source of life and activity. If this be not an easie, natural, and found method of Philosophifing, I appeal to any one's Judgment.

SECT. IV.

What Confusion and Repugnancy it is to make Selfmotion or Intrinfick Vitality, part of the Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit, and yet to attribute it to fome Matter. And what a flippery business, to put Natures Active and Paffive, instead of Itomaterial and Material.

B UT fay you, And yet I dare not fay that a Self-moving Principle is proper to a Spirit, But Ariffotle did not flick to fay fo, who made the matter a meer paffive Principle. And furely if a Man will follow the common fentiments of humane Nature, if he acknowledge a Spiritual fubfitance diffinet from the material, he will give Alivity to the one, and Paffivity or Altuability to the other. It is a ftrange force and differiton to the faculties of the Mind to do otherwife. But you held on, Nor do I confent to Campanella, De fensiti rerum, and Dr, Gliffon that welld make all things alive by an effectiating form in the very Elements. Here I defire you to confider if any Matter have life and motion in itfelf, whether all has not, though varioufly mo-M dified. And whether it be fair Play thus, when there is no reafon for it, to make Fifh of one, and Flefh of another. All the matter of the natural World, the common Confent of moft Philofophers hath made of one Species, which it would not be if part were felf-moved, part not.

Befides, when you include Life, (of which Self-motion certainly is an effect) in the Conceptus formalis of a Spirit; is not this an horrible Confusion or Repugnancy to fay, it is not proper to a Spirit, and confequently may belong to Matter 3 That which is included in your Conceptus Formalis, which is the fpecifick Difference of the thing, is proper to that thing, and therefore cannot be communicated to another. Wherefore we are to deny Self-motion in the Matter it felf every where, as not belonging thereto, but to Spirit. But it follows,

I diftinguish Nature into Active and Paffive, and Paffivity ferveth me as well as Materiality. But I defire to know, why it should ferve your turn as well as Materiality, whenas it is of more laxeness and uncertainty, and therefore may ferve you a flippery Trick. But Materiality is a Notion more ftrict, diftinct, and steady, and belongs only to one kind of things, that is to fay, to things Material, but Paffivity to things Immaterial, as well as Material. But you hold on.

SECT. V.

That the Learned Pfychopyrift need not be in defpair of knowing whence the Descensus gravium is, whether from an innate Principle in the heavy Bodies themselves, or from some Spirit, sith the Author of the Discourse touching The true Notion of a Spirit, has so plainly demonstrated the latter in his Writings,

B^{UT} whence the Descensive gravium is, I despair of knowing. If you mean whether it be from an innate Principle of the heavy things themselves, or from some Immaterial Principle that moves the Matter of the World, I will adventure to tell you, the thing is not so desperate as you fancy, but be of good courage; rage; for it is demonstrable that the Descensive gravium is not from any Plinciple springing from their own Matter, but from an Immaterial Principal distinct therefrom, which Principle to be the Mover of the Matter of the Universe, I have over and over again demonstrated in my Enchiridion Metaphysicum; and particularly, which was a main Point betwixt that excellent Person Judge Hales and my self, in the rising of a wooden Rundle from the bottom of a Bucker of Water.

I will give you that Instance for many, which I defire you to canvas from the very first rife of it, Enghirid. Metaphys. Cap. 13. Sect. 4.7. 8. reading for furenels all the Scholia upon that Chapter, Volum. Philosoph. Tom. 1. p. 219. 220. 221. SECT. VI.

That if there be an innate Self-moving Principle in the matter of heavy Bodies, their resting when they are come to the Earth does not excuse them from participating of the Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit. And that there may be as much Vitality in Fixedness, as in Flitting. The vast difference still remaining betwixt the Psychopyrist and the Author of the True Notion of a Spirit, touching the Conceptus Formalis.

A ND if it be true, say you, of an innate Principle, I call it not therefore a Spirit, because it is but Passivorum motus aggregativus ad unionem in quiete, when Spirits Motion is Vital and so effential to them, that they tend not to union in Quiescence, but in everlafting Activity; Quiescence in Inactivity being as much against their Nature, as Motion against a Stone. To which I fay, (1) If the Descensus gravium be from an Innate Principle, that is to fay, that the Matter there moves it felf (and if you are for Effentia media, as the above mentioned Author is, I have abundantly confuted them in my Examination) you adjoyn the Property of a Spirit to Matter, as I noted above, which is a plain repugnancy that any part of the Formalis Conceptus of one Species, should be an Attribute in its opposite Species, this breaks in pieces all the Bands of Logick. (2) It is not here mere paffivorum motus, but heavy Bodies moving themselves, as is supposed; they are as much aftive as passive, and are no otherwise passive in this Point but as they act upon themselves, and Spitits, properly to called, are paffive in that Senfe. So that an heavy Body is made a Mungril kind of thing upon this account, a Chimera or Centaur. For look upon its Selfactivity, and it looks like a Spirit, look upon its Materiality (for it is meer Matter, actuating it felf according to this Hypothesis) and it is no other than a Body. (3) If they be Self-moved, it matters not to what they tend, Body in the mean time has the property of a Spirit, as I faid before. And Fourthly and laftly, That Stones and other Bodies reft upon the Earth.

Earth, is not by a torpid Inactivity in them, for their torpid Inactivity would not excule them from being flung off by the circular Motion of the Earth on its Poles, as I have plainly demonstrated in my Enchiridion Metaphylicum, but what brings them thither, detains them there, viz. the Hylostatick Spirit of the Universe, whole detaining them is as vital and positive as his bringing them thither. And there is as much Activity in Fixednels of Thoughts, as in difcurfive Flitting from one thing to another. Thus miftakenly is that vital Operation given to heavy Bodies, that belong to the Spirit of the World. And if you conceit this Motion or Fixation in the heavy Bodies themselves, in that they defend themselves from being cast off from the Earth by the Diurnal Motion thereof, it is as positive Vitality in them, as their descent to the Earth. As there is as much Life and Vigour required in stopping on the Frets of a Lute a-Love, as in striking below on the Strings. Thus things are, and yet you conclude in the next Lines.

So that I think we are agreed of the Formal notice of a Spirit in general, and of an Intellective, Senfitive, and Vegetative Specie. That there may be a vegetative Species without Senfe; and that there is a fenfitive Species without Intellect, and that eternal Intellect is without Vegetation, I eafily grant, and am agreed to with you. But there is a vaft difference yet betwixt us, in that in the Formalis Conceptus of a Spirit, you leave out Immateriality, or which is the fame, Penetrability, and Indifcerpibility; which flip, as I faid above, is not a meer Miftake, but a Mifchief. This is all that I have to note touching your Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit in general.

SECT.

SECT. VII.

That Materia and Substantia differ as Genus and Species, and what Substantia properly and adequately is. And that the bare and naked Substance of a thing is not knowable neither in this Life, nor haply in the Life to come. But only Effential Attributes, Habitudes, and Operations.

PAffing to the Conceptus Fundamentalis, you fay thus, Bus truly I am at a lefs about the Conceptus Fundamentalis wherein the true difference lieth between Substantia. and Materia. Methinks the difference liets very obvious to any observing Eye, namely, that Substantia and Materia differ as Genus and Species, fo as Animal and Brutum differ, and you may perfect the Diyifion thus, Substance is either Matter or Spirit, as Animal is cither Brutum or Homo. I content my felf with fuch easie Analysis. But you proceed.

Do we by Substantia mean a Conceptus Realis, or on/y Relativus? To fay it doth fubstare accidentibus speaks but a Relation directly, and leaves the Question unanswered. Quid eft quod substat accidentibus? To (ay it is not an Accident, tells us not what it is, but what it is not. To fay it does subsistere per se, either faith no more than that it is Ens reale, or elfe tells us not what it is that doth fubfist. (1) As for that relarive Signification, we do not here to much regard it. It looks more like that Logical Notion of Subjectum, which relates to Adjunctum. (2) And though to fay it is no Accident tells us not what it is, but what it is not ; yet it illustrates its Nature by oppolition, (as that Logical Maxim teaceth us, Contraria juxta fe posita magis elucescunt) The Nature of an Accident being fuch that it cannot exift but in another; that of a Substance fuch, that it needs no inhation, as an Accident does in another Subject, but fubEfts by it felf, and ftands as it were on its own Legs.

This is the proper Character of Subflance, quatenus Subflance. What can be more plain' than this? And a Man is to confider whether it be not a piece of 'Arrestevice, when fo complear a Definition is given to enquire farther, what is that which which does fubfift by its felf, as if one after he has heard another define Man to be a rational living Creature, should demand, I but, what is that which is a rational living Creature? What can be answered but, That it is a Man? And so when we define Substance to be a Being subsisting by it felf, if one demand, but what is that which fubfifts by it felf? What can be answered, but that it is Substance ? And I will farther add out of my Enchiridion Ethicum Lib. 3. Cap. 4. That it is one of the Rules of Prudence, to remember in our Contempla-Nullius rei intimam nudamve effentiam cognofci poffe, fed tions. Attributa tantum essentialia essentialesque Habitudines, which I fet down to Steer Men off from Splitting themselves on this Rock; as if by any Definition or any way elfe they were able to difcover the very bare Effence or Substance of any thing. Which I think is the Privilege of the Jehovah himfelf only, the only Wife God, and great Effentiator of all things. But to perceive the bare Effence of any thing beyond its Attributes. Operations, and Habitudes, is not given to any Creature, as I conceive, either in this World, or in that which is to come. But we'll proceed.

SECT. VIII.

That Words are not to be prescinded from their usual and known Signification; and that the meaning of Materia in use includes Impenetrability, Discerpibility, and Self-inactivity, according to Aristotle, and the best approved Philosophers; with a Note of the specifical distinct Substance of Spirit and Matter antecedently, to the Self-activity of the one, and the Self-inactivity of the other.

O ad Notationem Nominis, fay you, distinct from use, doth not Materia and Substantia signifie the same Fundamenial Conceptus? This Question is something obscure. I know no Notatio Nominis, but the Interpretation of it from M 4 fome Logical Topick, which must be in Words compound or derivative; but Materia is a Word fimple. And why should we not take Words according to their use, rather than prescind them from it? You would have those two Terms fignifie the one no more than the other, or neither more than to what some one diffinctive Conceptus Formalis might be joyned indifferently. But I fay again, they are not one, but differ as Genus and Species, and Materia is the Species of Substantia, and includes in it its own Conceptus Formalis, which is Impenetrability, Discerpibility, and Self-inactivity, according to Aristotle and the best approved Philosophers, an opposite Conceptus Formalis to that of Spirit. That is the form or notifying Difference of Matter, as Penetrability, Indiscerpibility, and Selfactivity, of Spirit. But you go on.

You difference, fay you, Substance and Matter antecedently to the formal Difference by Penetrability and Impenetrability, Indivisibility and Divisibility. Here, fay I, you confound Substance and Matter, as it they adequately fignified the fame, whenas according to use, in all approveable Philosophy, they differ as Genus and Species: Nor does Penetrability and Indivisibility, Impenetrability and Divisibility antecede the whole formal Difference of Matter and Spirit, whenas they themselves are part of the Conceptus Formalis, the one of Matter the other of Spirit; pr are the whole Conceptus Formalis of the specifically diffinct tubstance of each, antecedent to the Astivity of the one, and Inastivity of the other.

Of the Knowledge of the Indivisibility and Penetrability of Spirits in this Life, how far it may extend. And that holy Souls in the other World are no Affectors of useles Knowledge.

BUT first, lay you, I defnair of knowing in this Life how far Spiritual Substances are Penetrable and Indivisible. Igrant you such an extension as shall free them from being nothing Substantial, and from being infinite as God is. If a Man be not in a tight Method of conceiving or ordering his Thoughts, he may be be in the like puzzle in the other World that he finds himfelf in this. But if he confider that God has created a Spirit, Ens unum per fe & non per aliud, fo that immediately of its own Nature, if it be at all, it is Indifcerpible; as a plain Triangle, if it be at all, hath its Angles equal to two right ones, he may fafely conclude, even in this Life, that a Spirit is utterly Indifcerpible, fo long as it is, but God may annihilate it at his Pleafure.

And now for the Penetrability of Spirits, it is evident even in this Life, that they can wholy penetrate one another fo far as their Effence extends, for one may have a greater Amplitude than another. And that the Parts, as I may fo call them, of the fame Spirit may, in the contraction of it felf, penetrate one another, fo that there may be a Reduplication of Effence through the whole Spirit. But as you very well observe with Scaliger before you, a Spirit can neither extend it felf in infinitum, nor contract it felf in puncti informer, into the nullity of n Point. And though your Modefty make nothing of this, methinks this is fufficient for a rational Creature, whether here or hereafter, for I do not think that in the other World holy Souls affect ufelefs Knowledge. In this therefore, we both I conceive, do fully agree, that we are neither of us Nullibifts nor Holenmerians.

SECT. X.

That Infeparability continued Amplitude belongs to Spirits as well as different Quantity, with an Answer to the most plausible Objection against the fame. Whether Forms multiply themselves or no, and in what sense it is true, that Generation is the work of Spirits not Bodies, and by what means many Substances become one.

Secondly, fay you, we grant Spirits a Quantitas discreta, they are numerous, Individuate; and Formæ se multiplicant, Generation is the work of Spirits and not of Bodies, and how can I tell that that God that can make many out of one, cannot make many ny into one, and unite and divide them as well as Matter. This Paffage is worth our attentive Confideration; wherefore I fay, (1) If Quantitas diferent a be allowed to Spirits, why may not an Indifcerpible continuance of Amplitude be allowed to them You'l reply, it may not, because (and it is one of the alío. most ingenious Allegations that I have met with) that then a Spirit might be measured by a Ruler of Wood or Brass, and be declared to be fo many Inches or Foot long or wide, which would argue it not to be a Spirit, but Matter or Body. Why? because it is measured by Wood or Brass, What if we should number a certain numerous Multitude of Spirits, cafting up their Numbers by Brass-Counters, would it follow that these Spirits are Corporeal, becaule the Brafs-Counters are fo? The Reason is as firm in the one as the other, as I have more fully noted else-where. (2) And now for Forma fe multiplicant. I defire to know what is meant by Formæ, whether the Accidents or Modes of fome Substance or fome Substances actuating other Substances. If the former, it reaches not our Cafe, the Argument being of Spirits that are Substances. And I fay, no Substance can multiply it felf, for if Substance remaining still the fame entire Substance, should multiply into other Substances, it were an act of Creation, which is incompetible to a Creature. But if it shed, or part with Part of its own Substance, that in my Account is not Multiplication but Division. (3) That which follows is a found and golden Saying, if rightly understood, That Generation is the work of Spirits and not of Bodies, for Body or Matter of it felf is paffive, and can do nothing but as it is either mediately or immediately actuated by a Spirit, as Fire and Water and Air, and all other Bodies that are in motion are actuated either by the Holostatick Spirit of the Universe, or by their own proper Spirit, as brute Animals, Angels and Men. And thus are all inanimate Creatures, fo vulgarly Styled, Generated by the Spirit of Nature, and all particular Animals, Brutes and Men, are Generated, that is to fay, Formed by their proper Souls, the Spirit of Nature, fo far as it is fitting, preparing the Matter, but all in the mean time depending upon that universal Creator of all things, God, bleffed for ever.

But in the last place, how a man may tell that that God that can make many out of one, cannot make many into one, &c. If the meaning be of Substantial Spirits, it has been already noted, that God acting in Nature, does not make many Substances out of one Substance, the same Substance remaining still entire, for then Generation would be Creation. And so sober Man believes lieves that God affifts any Creature fo in Natural Courfe, as to enable it to Create. And then I fuppofe, that he that believes not this is not bound to puzzle himfelf, why God may not as well make many Subftances into one as many out of one, when as he holds he does not the latter, but that every Subftance that is Created, is Created immediately from God. And whatever two or more Subftances become one, it is either by Vital fubordinate Actuation of the Souls and Bodies of Men that makes one Man, and of the Souls and Bodies of Brutes that makes it fome Species of Brute Creatures; or elfe for Inanimate Creatures fo ulually called, as Plants and all other Inanimate Bodies that feem different Species of things, they in their particular confiftences are held together into one by the Spirit of the Univerfe. And I know no other ways according to the Courfe of Nature of many Subftances becoming one, but thefe.

SECT. XI.

Of Gods making many Spirits or Souls into one, and of the many difficulties that opinion is encumbred with, as particularly in that instance of the Souls of Men being supposed to be ex traduce.

B UT upon farther attention to your laft words, And divide them as well as Matter, you feem not to make fo ftrange an Onenel's, or mysterious division of these Spirits as I conceiv'd from your frame of Speech at first. But when you add, and unite and divide them as well as Matter, it implies I confess no contradiction to the power of God, that He may hold a company of contracted Spirits together or expanded, as well as the Spirit of Nature a Congeries of Particles, and then diffunder them again. But to fay any fuch thing is done, I fee neither truth nor usefulness in the Affertion. But this we will confider further in what follows, which is this.

But if he should, (viz. divide these Spirits) that would be no destruction of their Species as the Mixtorum diffolutio is, but as every drop of divided Water is Water, and one Candle lighting many, and many joyning in one are all the same Fire, so much more would would it be with Spirits were they united or divided, and their-In-. cality and Penetrability are past our conceit. This looks plausibly and speciously on't at the first fight, and it is true that the dividing of these united Spirits would be no destruction of their Species, as it is in the diffolution of mixt Bodies; but we look more closely into the bufinels, this Affertion is burdened with great difficulties, and many demands are to be fatisfied before it can be allowed. For this multitude of Spirits, or Souls fuppose, made into one, are yet so many individual Souls notwithstanding this union ; As suppose a Congeries of Physical Monads or smallest Particles of Matter of which some Body is compounded, are still fo many Individual or Numerical Particles or Phyfical Monads notwithstanding their Composition into one Wherefore concerning the Soul of Adam, (for this Body. contrivance feems chiefly to look toward their opinion that fay the Soul is ex traduce, which fome, otherwife prudent and intelligent Men, do hold.)

First, I demand, whether this multitude of Souls which makes up that one Soul of Adam, as fo many Drops make up one Bucket of Water, have all of them Perception and Understanding in them or no, which if they all have, their Nature being co-ordinate, they are fo many Perfonalities. And Adam's Name might have been Legion, at least; as well as the Posseffed Man's in the Gospel.

Secondly, If Adam was not fuch a Legion, or rather innumerable company of Spirits, which one of this company was Adam himfelf; and who were the reft of the Company? Were they all the Souls of Men that were to come into this World befide the Soul of Adam and the Soul of Eve, or was Eve's Body full fraught with Souls also? And if fo, Thirdly, I demand, what laws of fhedding of Souls there is betwixt Male and Female in Generation, and whether Soul from the Female is fhed when a Female Child was to be born, and a Soul from a Male when a Male-Child was to born? In which I know no abfurdity in Nature unlefs it fhould be one, and that fhould be implied thereby, that Souls are Male and Female; but Theology in the mean time would be at a lofs, to find a Male Soul in the Virgin of whom was born the Meffias. But to let this pafs, we enquire.

Fourthly, Whether that innumerable company of Souls in Adam and Eve were in an expanded condition or contracted. If in an expanded condition, they all immediately reaching the Body well fitted, and inactuating it, the vigour of the Body mult be increased according to the numerofity of these actuating Spirits rits in it; what a Lufty Young Man then muft this Adam have been, and Eve what a Frolick Young Virgin, or elfe how hugely and tearingly firong had they both been, like fome 'Every's usy O poffeffed with many Damons?

Fifthly, What an infinite change would there be in Adam and Eve when they had parted with 10 many of their laCtuating Spirits in Venereal Copulation: Adam to his Male Children, and Eve to the Female, which they were fo to diffribute to their immediate offspring Male and Female, as only to leave their own fingle Souls for the actuaring their Bodies while they lived, otherwife if there were any more left behind, what became of them at their Death? and therefore,

Sixthly, I further enquire, there being a number of Souls imparted in Generation, to whether Male or Female that are to be born, what becomes of those many Souls when a Man or Woman dies and never is Married ?

Seventhly, I would have you confider what a difference there must be betwixt the vigour of unmarried Men and Women of fome thousand years ago, and those of this prefent age, every one now being reduced to that paucity of Souls to actuate his Body in comparison of what they had some thousand years ago, and how uncompliable this difference is with History.

Eighthly, If these Souls be not all of them in this expanded condition, but only the proper Souls of Adam and Eve; and the numerous Remainder being in a contrasted condition, I demand, how all these become one Soul in fuch a fort as you (if I missake you not) fancy all the Lights of several Candles light up together become one Light or Fire? And whether they will not lie in the Body of Adam and Eve as the little Eggs that make up the Roe of a Fish; as also whether this Roe of Souls or Spirits pass through the whole Body, or in what peculiar Vessels are they lodged? And Ninthly, These contracted Spirits in reality having as much Effence or Substance in them as the expanded, (elfe when they inform a Body to actuate the whole Body, they must be inlargged by-eeking and patching more substance to them, which is contrary to the Nature of Spirits) I demand, what becomes of them also when a Man or Woman dies and transmits them to no other, by having to do with the Duties of Wedlock?

Tenthly, As for your illustrations of what you will have in this point, That these feveral Spirits or Souls may be united into one Soul, as the several lights of a Candle into one Light or Fire, or as several Drops of Water into one Bucket of Water, if that be brought to illustrate the union of these Spirits, as well well as their Identity of Species still upon their division; I defire you to confider the nature of Light thoroughly, and you shall find it nothing but a certain motion of a Medium. whole parts or Particles are fo or fo qualified, fome fuch way as Cartefianisme drives at. But here is not Substances uniting into one Substance which is your cafe, but motion communicated from feveral Movers, becoming one Motion in one Subject; as when two Men thrust one and the fame Body on, or whip one and the fame Top, though there be two Thrusters or Whippers, there is but one motion from them two in that one Body or Top they thruft or whip. So that this comes not home to the point. And for the Drops of Water, or feveral Flames of a Candle joyned into one, which viewing your words again, I fuspect may be as well your fense, though for furenels you should have faid one Flame rather than one Fire, although this illustrates well how fomethings united keep the fame specifick denomination also after they are divided; yet fuch an union as that of Water and likewife division makes the Soul of Man, or of any Animal elfe look not like Soul or Spirit; but Matter. And there is a Repugnancy in the very supposition, to be one Soul or to be one Spirit, and yet to be divisible into parts which are feperately Souls or Spirits, as if every Soul or Spirit were an Homogeneal Mals of Soul or Spirit, as Water is of Water, and Air of Air.

But to make an end of this Paragraph, when as in the laft place you add concerning these united Souls or Spirits, And their Locality and Penetrability are past our conceit. I defire you to confider whether is be not a lothness and unwillingness strictly and closely to examine, rather than their Inability to conceive the Penetrability and Locality of these Spirits (how they must be in the Body of Adam, or of any Brute Animal either in an expanded or contracted condition, as has been above noted) that makes you fo thie of medling with their Locality and Penetrability For haply, if you had confidered the thing fo closely as I have at this time, you might have found your felf to fensible of the encumbrances on the opinion, that you would have quite difcarded it, and espoused forme other that looks more handsomly on't, and is better accorded to the old Mosaick Cabbala, that makes the Active or Spiritual principle Indivisible, or Indiscerpible. The Symbol of which Principle is Light, but is faid to be created in the first day, a Monad fignifying the Indivisible Nature thereof. But to fay any thing is Spirit and yet can be actually divided into parts is a Repugnancy to the Nature of the thing, and

and a Contradiction to the Zopla Sconaed. MG, the Divinely infpired wildom of the old Cabbala.

SECT. XII.

Whether Souls in Generation be produced as when one Candle lights another : and how that conceis is falle, as also incompliable with the Pfychopyryst's Hypothess. With other difficulties touching the Penetrability and Locality of such a Soul as he imagines.

IF I have upon fecond thoughts hit your true meaning in those words, One Candle lighting many, and many joyning or joyned in one (I know not which) are all the fame Fire, that you mean only this, That they are supposed to be put so near one another, the Candles being fo cut on purpole, that the Wicks might touch, and so all the Flames joyn together, this then is no more than that of the refemblance of the union of the parts of Water. But the activity of Fire does still more increase those difficulties, how Mankind should still retain the like vivacity (and fo of Brute Creatures) that they did fome thousand years ago, their Active principle being fo much diminished, unlefs you recur to that common plausible Conceit, That as one Candle lights another Gandle without diminishing its own Flame, so Adam's Soul may give a Soul to Cain or Abel without diminishing his own But this is against your Hypothesis, which plainly implies, that many Souls are made into one, and then separated or divided upon Generation, Nor is there any Refuge in this similitude of lighting one Candle at another, for the admotion of the lighted Candle to the unlighted, does only put the fulpherous parts of the unlighted Candle into motion, and leaves the fpirit of Nature excited by this new occasion to purfue its work, till all the combustible matter be difperfed. But what's this to the production of a Soul or Spirit which is a Substance ? The lighted Candle produces no substance, but by its application excites the Spirit of the World to move, which causes the Particles of Tallow to be in such a manner moved as they they exhibite to our view that Phoenomenoa non of Flame. So that according to this, the production of a Soul ex Traduce would end in meer Materialifm, and fignifie only, that in Generation fome matter only is newly modified, as the Tallow is, or Wax when they passout of their state of Wax or Tallow into that of a bright Flame. Which way of Philosophizng as it is most falle, so it is most mischievous if men should be so fond as to believe it.

And now indeed touching this compounded Soul of yours made up of numerous Souls united into one, they being fo Crafs and Material, I can fay as well as you, their Penetrability and Locallity (lo as to make up one Soul, suppose of Adam) are peff our conceit : Not that it is past our conceit that Locality to belongs to the Soul that it must me somewhere, for your your felf allow it an extension, but where it should be placed in the Body : For itfelf being Matter, it cannot penetrate Body, and therefore if it actuate the whole Body, it must be difperfed in innumerable Pores as it were thereof, which confifts very ill with the union of these numerous Souls, and if they lie all together in fome one particular place, the refidue of the Body will be destitute of Soul, with the ill Confequences thereof. Which Confiderations may very well caufe puzzles touching its Locality, or rather the placing of it; and therefore I should think it more advisable to embrace such Hypothefes as are not past our conceit. But we are not to infift over long upon one Paragraph.

SECT. XIII.

That Penetrability and Indivisibility are not Accidents of a Spirit, but Essential Attributes thereof: And that it is a piece of 'Amuscuma, as was noted before, to hope to know the bare and naked substance of any thing.

T Hirdly, fay you, but were we sure of what you say therein, these two, Penetrability and Indivisibility speak but Accidents though proper, and therefore are no satisfying notice of the notion of Substance Spiritual, as diffinit from Matter. To this I say, that Penetrability and Indivisibility are not Accidents at all, no more than Rationale is an Accident in the definition of a Man, but but they are Immediate Effential Attributes, as much as any are in the World, and at least part of the full Conceptus Formalis of a Spirit as such, or of a Spirit in general.

You feem to require such a Difinition or Representation of a thing as fhould exhibit to your Perception the very fighed Substance of the thing, against which point of what Afistotle calls Amuseuna, nor know I well how to English it, is that Caution or Advertisement in the third Book of my Enchiridion Ethicum, That the bare and intimate Effence of a thing is not to be known, but only certain Effential Attributes or Habitudes, as I noted before. And this is a Rule, I think, worth the inculcating and When we fay, Homo eft Animal Rationale, which observing. is accounted as Effential a Definition as any we meet withal, and the most immediate; Yet Rationale, which is a specifick difference accounted, and therefore abundantly Effential, when we closely look unto it, it affords us no more than the notice that a Man is such an one that has the faculty and operation of Reasoning, but neither the faculty nor operation is the Essence. Let this intimation fuffice to mind us of the limits of our own knowledge, that we do not vainly either defire or attempt to go beyond the lifts that God and Nature hath fet us. Wherefore these Attributes which are Immediate, Adequate, and Infeperable from a Spirit, are as Effential to a Spirit as any Attributes are to any thing, and ought to be acknowledged a fatisfying notice of the notion of Substance Spiritual as distinct from Marter.

SECT. XIV.

A Synopfis of the Pfychopyrift's philosophizings touching a Spirit. The four first particulars thereof, where amongst other things the insufficiency of his Reasonings for laying aside the use of the words Immaterial and Material, and his bolding only to the distinction of Natures Active and Passive, is noted.

May perhaps have been over tedious already, but yet becanfe you have been pleafed ftill more particularly, though compendioufly, to impart to me your thoughts touching this prefent Subject, I shall beftow fome strictures or touches upon each of them in order as they lie. I am bitherto, fay you, constrained to contain my thoughts in the following compass.

First, I know Spirits best by their Virtus Vitalis Formalis Una-Trina. But here I demand how do you know that this Virtus Vitalis Formalis Una-Trina, does belong to Spirit and not to Matter, unless you have an Antecedent Notion of Spirit diffinct from Matter, and know the nature of Matter also is diffinctly, and the Operations of that Virtus Vitalis Formalis, that you can conclude them one Repugnant to another ? Otherwise, though you find that Virtus Vitalis Formalis in a Subject, you know] not whether the Principle be Material or Spiritual from whence it is, or in which it refides.

Secondly, 1 hold fay you, that of created Spirits Substantia, a notifying a Basis Realis, must be the Conceptus Fundamentalis. This is found and unexceptionable to far as I can differen. Whence it is evident that the Soul being a Spirit, and a Spirit Substance, they that hold the Soul to be ex Traduce, must hold that a Substance may be ex Traduce: Which that fimilitude of a Lamp lighted at a Lamp does not reach, as I noted above. And what difficulties there are in the Parents Soul shedding part of it felf, to the producing the Childs Soul, I intimated above.

Thirdly, This word Immaterial, fay you, fignifying nothing but a Negation, and Materia being by many Ancients used in the fame sense that we do Substantia, Iusually lay by the words. The reason reason of the first I conceive not so weighty. For a Negative Parricle in composition with a word that denotes imperfection, implies politivenels and perfection, as in Infinite, Immortai, and the like; these remove the imperfections in Finiteness and Mortality, and imply fomething politive of abetter Nature. And fo does Immaterial remove the Imperfections of Difcerpibility and Impenetrability, and implies the contrary. As for the reason of the fecond avoidance ; Materia indeed may be used in fuch a fence with the Ancients, as Subjectum has in Logick, or Substantia quatenus substat Accidentibus; but as it is precisely defined. Ens per se subsistens, that on or Materia is put in lieu of Subftantia, in that Adequate fence, I believe it is not easie to give an Example. But here I mainly inquire, fince the Definition of Substantia, and the Definition of Materia is so well known in the learned World, why you will use Substantia which is but the Genus of the other, in lieu of Materia, or of the other Species of Substantia, which is Immaterial or Spiritual, when this is more certain and diffinct, unless it be out of a thienels to pronounce to what subject, whether Material or Immaterial such properties or operations do belong, or whether there be any fuch diffinction really and properly, as Body and Spirit in the Creared Universe. But you know best this your felf.

Fourthly, I hold to the diffinition, fay you, between Natures for Substances, Active and Passive. But there being no created Substances whatever but what is both active and passive in fome fense or other, this is a distinction that thus far confounds all, distinguishes nothing. But Substance spiritual and material, are certain indelible Characters of two orders of things specifically different. Which distinct way of Philosophizing is to me more fatisfactory than thus to blend and confound the classes of things. This looks as if there were some Paradoxical Mystery under it, which is better let go than over curiously inquired into.

SECT. XV.

The Fifth Particular, touching the Purity of Spiritual Substances, and how prone they are, that understand not the substillest Material Substances to consist of Particles, to think what is really Material, to be Spiritual.

Flithly, I diftinguisch, fay you, Spiritual Substances as such, by the purity of their Substances besides the formal Differences. I suppose you mean by the purity, the substity, and tenuity of their Substances, as the Interpreter of Tresmegist's Permander, cap. 12, renders ro λεπδομερέσελου τ υλης. Portionem purissimam materia. Purissimaque materia portio Aer, Aeris Anima, Anima Mens, Mentes denique Deus. The Greek is, "Est our that use of the substances, suppose piszlor, and p. dig A, 4000, 4000 S vis, vis N Osis. And yet λεπδομέρεια, fignifies properly the substity, tenuity, or smallnels of Parts or Particles of which a thing confists, which yet the Translator calls purity, but I am very well assure that your purity of Spiritual Substances is not such as you conceive consists of Particles, because you do not admit that Hypothesis no more than Judge Hales.

Which is a threwd Invitation to one to deem what is really Material to be Spiritual, when it is not, meerly becaufe it is conceived to be one continued fubtil Subftance. But a Man would be loth to admit a congeries of Atoms, be they never fo fmall or fubtil, to be a Spirit, no more than he would admit the Powder of fome crafs Body to be a Spirit, which was fo palpably a Body before. For magis and minus non variant speciem, as that Scholastick Maxim has it.

SECT. XVI.

The Sixth Particular. That all created Spirits are in fome fort Paffive: That that Spiffitude which is given to Spirits by Pfychopyrift's Antagonist, argues a Spirit to be Immaterial rather than Material: That Body fometimes has a less groß signification than Matter: And in what Sense the Pfychopyrist feems to allow created Spirits to be Incorporeal: And what might be the chief ground of this Mistake.

Clxthly, Yet, fay you, I doubt not but all created Spirits are D somewhat passive, quia Influxum cause prime recipiunt, and you grant them Spissive and Extension, which signifies as much as many mean that call them Material. That is to say, if I rightly understand you, all created Spirits, be they never fo pure and refined, yet are not fo much Transpiritualized from the condition of Matter, but that they are paffive in respect of the first cause, and his Influence on them, which I shall eafily admit allo in the highest degree of created Spirits in my sense. which are most properly and really such. To which, viz. To all created Spirits, though I grant Spiffitude and Extension, yet the former is granted in fuch a Senfe, that it fignifies only more Substance within less compass, but no hardness or craffness accrewing from the Reduplication of the fame Substance into a narrower compais, fo that it is as much Spiritual as before, and does not herein fymbolize with Matter, but approves it felf contrary thereto, Matter implying Impenetrability of Parts, but this Penetrability, and as for Extension, that in it felf, has nothing of Materiality in it, there being Metaphyfical Extenfion as well as Metaphyfical Numerality, which belong to Entia quatenus Entia, there being no Ens or Being devoid of all Amplitude, or not capable to make a fecond, third, fourth, Sc. in Number. Wherefore if those Men mean no more by these Words of Spiffitude and Extension in Spirits than I do, and yet call Spirits Material, I must take the leave to fay, that in my Judgment they mifs call them.

But

But custom, fay you, having made Materia, but especially Corpus, to lignific only futh groffer Substance as the three passive Elements have, I yield fo to fay, that Spirits are not Corporeal or Material. That Corpus does not always fignific more Crafly than Materia, bur meer Trine-dimension Metaphysical or Mathematical, is apparent from that Expression of some of the Platonists who call that space in which the Mundane Bodies move. and which Democritus and Epicurus termed ro survey, they call it I fay, Sama auror an Intraterial Body, but to have called it Immaterial Matter, had been a contradiction. Whence is intimated that Matter fundamentally and specifically founds more craffy than Body. But we will not contend about Words; that which is most observable here is this, that you feem to concede or imply, that no created Spirits are in any other fenfe to to be effected Incorporeal or Immaterial, but in fuch as luppofes them of not fo crafs a confiftency as those Three paffive Elements are, Earth, Water, Air. As if Fire and Æther which are far thinner than Air, were Immaterial and Incorporeal Beings, nor any other created Beings to be faid to be Immaterial or Incorporeal in any other fenfe than they, namely, for the Te nuity or Subtility of their Substance.

Which Opinion, though I have known Pious and Intelligent Perfons to have been of, I look upon as a grand Miftake, arifing from another falle Supposition or Surmile, namely, that the Bodies of the World do not confift of small minute Parts of Matter, and that Water, and Air, and Æther, and Fire, are each of them a continued Substance, not a congeries of contignous Particles that make up such fluid Substances. This I fay feems the fundamental Error of such as Philosophize according to your Mode: Which first Error if they had not swallowed down, they could not so easily have imbibed this second, wiz. That there are no created Substances Incorporeal in any other fense than Æther or Fire may be faid to be Incorporeal, namely, as being freed from that craffinels or groffinels that the Three passive Elements feem to have.

SECT. XVII.

Reasons why the Atomick Phylosophy is to be preferred before that of the Psychopyrist. And whence he may have sufficient Instruction to asfure him of so concerning a Truth.

B UT here we two do very much difagree; for I conceive that all Bodies confift of Atoms, or little Particles of Matter; the more hard and confiftent Bodies, as Stones, Iron, and the like, of Particles fomeway, fomething more firmly continued one to another; but in fluid Bodies, fuch as Water, Air. Æther, and Fire, of Particles meerly contiguous, and in fome Motion one by another. And this way of Philosophy I think I have good Reason to embrace before any other. First, becaule in this industrious and fearching Age, it is most univerfally received by free and confidering Philosophers. And this is that faculum Philosophicum in which Knowledge should abound, according to the Prediction of Daniel.

Secondly, This Mode of Philosophy is the most useful for the beft ends, and ferves to support the main Parts of Natural Religion the best; namely, the Existence of God, of Genii or Angels, and the Immortality of the Soul. For it being fo ablurd at the first fight, that a congeries or heap of Particles or Atoms should be capabable of those most Noble Functions of Imagination, Memory, and Understanding, nay of Sense or Personality, were it not for this aukward Conceit of Air, and Æther, and Fire being continued fubstances, and no congeries of Particles, Men would immediately be led into a necessary belief of Spiritual substance properly so called, and then all the main Arricles of Natural Religion would go down glib and eafie. But to deny that fuch liquid. Bodies confift of Particles, deprives us of fome of the most confiderable Aids that Philosophy affords against Atheism and Epicurifm.

Thirdly, This Mode of Philosophy seems to be the most ancient (and antiquissimum quadque verissimum) nay to have been the old Moschical or Mosaical Philosophy, as may pppear out of what I have writ in the Appendix to the Defence of my Cabbala Philosophica Cap. 1. Sect. 8.

And

28

And Fourthly and laftly. And which is of most moment to Philolophic Spirits, this Doctrine of Bodies confifting of Particles, and that their modification and motion, or fixation, exhibits to our perception all the fenfible Phænomena of the Universe, is demonstrable to any unprejudiced Reason. Which would be too long here to make out, but I refer you to my first Epistle to V. C. Sest. 6. to my first Adnotamentum upon Judge Hales his Difficiles Nuge, to the twelfth Section of my Examinatio Philosophematum Eruditi Authoris Difficilium Nuga. rum, &c. which whole 'Treatife touching the Effentiæ Mediæ which that worthy Perfon would bring up, and the manner of Rarefaction and Condensation, as also his Nine Objections against the Spirit of Nature, with my Answers (all which are not paffing fevenPages in Folio) if you have Leifure and Patience attentively to read and confider, I fould hope that Difcourfe, with the other places of my Writings above-named, may have the good hap to undeceive you, and bring you into a fense of things more fatisfactory to your own Mind and Reafon than you have fallen into yet. And it is worth the while for a Man to be undeceived in that Point, and to be rationally affured that Earth, Water, and Air, and other Bodies of the Universe, do confift of Particles, for the Reasons I above intimated. But you proceed.

SECT.

SECT. XVIII.

The Seventh Particular, touching the Nature of Fire. The Pfychopyrifts wife that Fire were better Studied, with his Antagonifts Wife added thereto, That Water were better Studied. A clear Proof chiefly out of Des Cartes, That Water confifts of certain long flexible and tough Particles, which is a fair Inducement to believe, that other Bodies confift of Particles alfo.

S Eventhly, fay you, Tho' I run not into the excess of Ludov, le Grand, de Igne, nor of Telesius or Patricius, I would Ignis were better studied. As for Le Grand, Telessus, and Patricius, what they hold touching Fire, I have not had the occasion to observe, but it seems even according to your own Judgment they Philosophize something extravagantly therein, which makes me the less concerned to look after them, they being difallowed by one that seems to think so over-magnificently of Fire himfelf.

But now whereas you wish that Fire were better Studied than it is, I also with (and yet not out of any Humour or Spirit of contradiction to oppose you) that Water were better Studied than it is, and that that Hydrostatical Experiment of the Wooden-Rundle arifing from the bottom of a Bucket of Water, the Water in the mean time over it actually weighing it may be One or Two hundred Pounds weight, continually perceptible by the unintermitted firetch of the Rope or Weight upon the Hand one may put under the bottom of the Bucket; I fay, I with this Experiment of Water were well weighed and confidered; of what importance it is, and how firmly it demonstrates an Immaterial Being or Spirit that moves the matter of the World, I have intimated to you above, and how none have been yet able to evade the Evidence of the Demonstration, that there must be fomething Immaterial indued with Properties above any matter, distinct from the Water and the Rundle, dle, and penetrating them both, that causes that marvellous Phænomenon.

Moreover, I would not only have fuch Experiments as thefe confidered, but I would have the very Nature of Water well fifted and fludied; and to any one that has that impartial Curiofity in him, that he will ftudy the Nature of Water as well as of Fire, I would commend to him the reading of des Cartes's Meteors, where with incomparable Evidence he makes out, That Water confifts of long flexible Particles, which joyned together in a more moderate creeping Motion contiguoufly one by another, are the Phænomenon of Water, but being more fwiftly agitated as they are in an Æolipyla let over the Fire with fome Water in the bottom of it, these Aqueous Particles raifed out of the Water and put upon a whirling Motion, Playing as it were at Quarter-Staff one with another in that part of the Belly of the Eolipyla that has only Air, they contending thus for more space, burft out of the Orifice of the Æolipyla, and give the Phænomenon of a very fenfible, if not a violent Wind.

That they are exhaled thus, as from the Water in the Ad lipyla, by virtue of the Fire, fo from the Sea and Rivers, and other moift places, by virtue of the heat of the Sun. That according to certain measures of motion or reft, and near nefs and remoteness from the Earth, they caufe Mifts or Clouds. That certain numbers of them cluttering more close together in a warm Air, caufe drops of Rain, but in a more cold. Snow or Hail. And that Water by ftrong cold is frozen into Ice is apparent to all, which is therefore a confiderable firm confiftency of fuch kind of Aqueous Particles that otherwise remaining ftill Aqueous Particles take upon them the Form not only of Clouds, Snow, and Rain, but also of bluftering Winds, that whirling Motion being imparted unto them.

These methinks, are Indications sufficient that Water is a Body confisting of oblong flexible Particles, which may be differed by heat; and as the Ice, though a firm Body, is melted thereby into that fluid Body we call Water, fo this Water may have its parts so relaxated, as to be rarified into Vapours, and those Vapours so agitated that they get the form of Wind. And amongst other things that hit so handsomely, it is also observable that their easily being drawn out of a wet Cloth, exposed to the Air or Fire, when it is hard to get Oyl or Greaseout so, argues that they are long, smooth, flexible Parts, whenas those of Oyl are more ramole, and entangled with the Cloth, and among themselves,

A Man

A Man of any Nofe or natural Sagacity in Philosophy cannot but fmell out the meaning of this, namely, That Water must needs confift of fuch Particles as these, which des Cartes has described; and that it is not one equally continued Body, bur, tho' each long Particle bestrongly continued in it felf, yet they are but contiguous in a manner inWater, tho' pretty firmly continuous in Ice. But if they were alike continuous all over in Water, that is, no more in one part than another, they might pais the leaft Pores, and like the Sun-Beams, at leaft with some force added, strain themselves thro' Glass, which shews plainly, that Water is not one alike continued Body, but confifts of long Particles, each being tough, as I may fay, as well as flexible in it felf, but they are cafily separable each from the other; and we finding this so plainly discoverable in Water, if we be not over affectedly shie and timorous, how can we well abstain from concluding all other things, as well as Water, especially if they be reduceable to a fluidity, to confift of fome kind of Particles or other ? And this I think, is the genuine Refult of our diligently fludying the Nature of Water.

SECT. XIX.

The Advantage of Studying and well anderstanding of Water, for the better understanding of Fire; and that the Phanomenon of Fire is from the motion of certain Particles, as well as that of Water and Vapours out of a Cauldron.

N D having Dived fo deep into the Myftery of Water, let as now fee whether we havenot brought up a Key for the eafier opening the Nature of Fire, which I grant is to be fudied alio, and this we may very conveniently do by Candlelight, for the Fire and Elame in a lighted Candle, is much what of the fame Nature with all other Fire. Here therefore let us observe, that Ice before, which feems of a firm confiftence, was first refelved into Water, and that Water into Vapours, Ge. That here I fay, alfo the fixed Tallow, which answers to the frozen Ice, is refolved first into a kind of fluid Oyl or Fat, anfwering to the Water, and after into a fort of visible Reek, if if we may fo call that which is fo bright and fplendid; a seriar kind of Particles loosened from the Tallow or Wax, which confifts of them, being put into Motion, as it is in Vapours. It is manifest hence, that Flame is nothing but such a kind of Particles, put into such a kind of Motion different from that of Water, and in a different manner affecting or modifying the medisum, whence is that appearance to our Eye we call Flame, which is but a more close, but bright Vapour or Reek; and thus is the whole Candle by degrees diffolved into Particles, nor is it the fame individual Flame, any more than the Water that runs through such a Pipe continually till all the Water be run our, is the fame individual Water all the time.

So that we fee the fludying of Water will make us conceive the Nature of Fire the better, and give us to underftand that it is nothing but fuch a kind of Motion and Particles that fo modifies the Medium of our Sight, that fuch a Phænomenon appears to us as we call Fire or Flame. Flame when the accended Particles are volatile, but Fire, when they are more fixt, as in the Wick of a Candle when the Flame is gone, or in red hot Iron, where the parts of the Iron not at all volatile (as in Wax, Wood, and Tallow, and the like) yet are fmartly vibrated againft the Medium of our fight, and caufe the Phænomenon of Fire. I have fludied the Nature of Fire with diligence and ferioufnefs, and yet I profefs I can make no more of it than thus. But we go on.

SECT. XX.

A close compacted Account of the Nature of a Spirit from Fire, made by the Pfychopyrift, and deduced by bis Antagonist into seven Propositions.

B UT this room, fay you, will not ferve me to fay what I think of it, viz. of Fire: Light and Fire are roufing Objects to humane fenfe, which caufed the generality of the Pagan World to Worship the Sun for the Supremum Numen, and brought them into that groß Error in Religion, and we must have a care left Idolizing the Phænomenon of Fire too much, it brings us alfo into Errors in Philosophy. But you hold on: But in brief, he that that knoweth that Ignis is a Substance, whose Form is the Potentia activa movendi, illuminandi, calefaciendi, these as received in groß passive Bodies being but their Accidents, all but the Igneous Substance in act operating upon them, and conceives of Spirits but as Ignis eminenter, that is, of a purer Substance than Ignis is, which we best conceive of, next the formal vertue, by its fimilitudes, I think knows as much as I can reach of the Substance of created Spirits.

Though you thought you were ftraightened in room, yet methinks you have given a Specimen of a very dexterous faculty in contriving fo much into fo little a compais, whereby I think I am enabled to conceive your full meaning deduceable as I fuppole into these following Propositions.

First, That Fire is a Substance whose Form is an active Power of Motion Light and Heat.

Secondly, That the Motion, Light, and Heat, that appear in groß paffive Bodies, are but Accidents all of them of the faid Bodies, viz. fuch as in a Fire-flick, Candle, and the like.

Thirdly, that there is an Igneous substance in act operating upon the above-said gross passive Bodies distinct from the said Bodies.

Fourthly, That a Spirit is to be conceived of but as Ignis eminenter.

Fifthly, That this Ignis eminenter is a purer fubstance than Ignis.

Sixthly, That this purer fubftance than Ignis next to its formal vertue is best conceived of, by the fimilitude it bears with the aforefaid Ignis.

Seventhly and lastly, That he that conceive th thus of created Spirits, knows as much of their substance as you can reach.

SECT. XXI.

Certain Queries' upon the foregoing Propositions to find what the Psychopyrist would be at, and how much nearer we are to the true Knowledge of a Spirit by his Illustrations thereof from Fire.

Shall now crave leave to make fome Queries touching thefe I Propositions ; as whether in the first Proposition, you mean by an active Power, a Power always exerting it felf into act. fo that this Fire is always moving, enlightning, and hor, and in fuch fort that it is not only these effective but formaliter, elle why should it be called Ignis? And that this Query is to be answered in the Affirmative, seems manifest from the second and third Propositions, they implying an Igneous substance acting upon those fubstances or grois passive Bodies, that we call Fire, now if this Igneous substance be really substance, and not one of the Substantia Media, according to Judge Hales's way of Philosphizing, which I have sufficiently confuted in my Examination, I demand here what is this new Igneous substance, never heard of before, Is it Material or Immaterial? If it be Immaterial it is not Fire; if it be Material, a Material Fire diftinct from the Fire of the Flame of a Candle, or from that of a Fire-flick, or red hot Iron, there is no more ground or reafon for, than for a Material Water distinct from, but in the Water of a Well, a River or the Sea, but the very Matter it felf of the Water, even that which we call Water, is modified into this Phænomenon of Water, and in like reason the matter of Fire, even of that which we call Fire, is modified into the Phænomenon of Fire, without any other Material Igneous substance operating upon it. This to the unprejudic'd, I think will appear very plain and rational.

The next Query is upon the fourth Proposition, what is meant by Ignis eminenter. For if it be to exclude the conceit of a Spirits being Ignis formaliter, and that it is only effectively Ignis, God may thus be faid to be Ignis eminenter, as he may all things elle, according to the Orphick Theology; but the fifth and the fixth Prepositions feem to favour the other fense, That a Spia Spirit is Formaliter Ignis, but only a more pure Ignis, that is, of more tennious fubftance, as was above observed, than that very Igneous fubftance mentioned in the Third Proposition. But this, I profess to me is a Fire without Light, nor enables me to conceive a jot better of the Nature of a Spirit, than if I were without it.

For the grofs visible Fire is nothing but accensed Particles or fuch a fort of Particles put into fuch a kind of Motion; and how does it appear that there either is any other Fire but this, or if there were, that it is any other than more lubtil Particles fo and fo moved ? So that in all this Fire and Heat we want Light to discover the real Nature of a Spirit; and yet the fixth Proposition fays, That a Spirit next to the formal Verrue, is best known by the similitude it bears with Ignis in the fense of the third Proposition; so that if we knew that Ignis, it were only a Metaphorical Illustration therefrom, which is no good mode of defining the Nature of things, but as I inmated above, the Nature of this Ignis can be no other than a more fubril confiftency of Particles, if it be any thing at all, and therefore very inept to fet off the Nature of a Spirit, which is Ens unum per se & non per aliud, as all must grant, that grant there is any fuch thing as a Spirit properly to called; wherefore I much doubt of the Truth of the last Proposition, That he that thus conceives of created Spirits, knows as much of their substance as you can reach. For I conceive you undervalue your own cognitive Faculties in that Affertion, which I cannot believe but can pierce farther than fo, as haply I may discover anon; in the mean time we pass to what follows.

SECT. XXII.

Of the Greek Fathers dividing Fire into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative, and in what sense they are to be understood, and how the Mode of the ancient Philosophy was Ænigmatical and Hebraical.

A ND the Greek Fathers, fay you, that called Spirits Fire, and diftinguished Ignem per Formas, into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative or visible Fire, (as it is in Aere Ignito) allowing an incomprehensible purity of Substance in the higher above the lower, (as in Passives, Air bath above Water) I think did speak tolerably, and as informingly as the Notions of Penetrability and Indivisibility, though perbaps these also may be useful. If the Words and Places of these Fathers had been cited, I would more diffinctly and particularly made answer to them, but now my Answer mult be more undeterminate and general.

And first, I fay, Though there is a great deference to be given to the Fathers in things that lay within their sphere, yet that fome of them were none of the best Philosophers, is apparent from their making the Earth flat not fpherical, and their. denying Antipodes. But then in the fecond Place, fuppoling fome of them did Philosophize at the rate above described, dividing Fire into Intellective, Senfitive, and Vegetative, I would here demand in what fenfe they here spoke, whether they spoke not of the immediate Instrument of Operation in Intellective, Senfitive, and Vegetative Creatures, which I can eafily agree that it is at least, most what, Igneous or Æthereal, the Vehicles of Angels being acknowledged to be fuch : Or, whether they did not speak Symbolically ex Destinate, or at least, using out of Ignorance the Symbolical Expression of the ancient Philofophers for the proper, (who Symbolically called a Spirit Fire, yea, God himself, who is the most pure Spirit conceivable) whether it was not from thence that these Fathers incautiously divided Fire, as if it were a real Spirit, into Intellective, Senfitive, Sc. For that the ancient Philosophers spoke Anigmatically, Clemens Alexandrinus takes express notice, ore rebor and RUTOIS THIS OILOTOPIAS 'EBeauxos & AIVIY MOTOShs. In which faying

ing of his it is implyed, that not only their way of Philosophizing was Anigmatical or Symbolical, but that also the Hebraical Philosophy was such.

SECT. XXIII.

That the Symbolical or Ænigmatical Mode of the ancient Philosophy caused marvelous fond Mistakes in them that were not aware of it, as in Aristotle and others that took the Cortex for the Kerhel.

A ND the Ignorance of that Mode of the old Philosophers has cauled ridiculous Opinions. As from the ancient Mofaick Cabbala's fetting off the Nature of things by Numbers, those unskilled in the Mystery have aftrwards made Numbers the very constitutive Principle of things ; and Aristotle, whenas Parmenides Speaking Symbolically, and Mofaically declared that Fire and Earth were the Principles of all things, which undoubtedly was spoken in reference to the beginning of Genefis, where TIN are the two Principles of things, to wit, Spirit and Matter ; I fay, Aristotle is fo filly as to take Parmenides literally, when as yet himself acknowleeges that Parmenides reckoned his Earth in the rank of Non-entia, which was impossible for him to have done, unless he had spoke Symbolically. These two, Fire and Earth are the fame with the Pythagoreans, que i oxo OF, Light and Darkness, who also had partaken of the Mofaick Cabbala ; fee my Preface-general to the fecond Tome of my Philosophick Writings, Sect. 13. as also the Appendix to the Defence of thy Philosophic Cabbala, Cap. 7. Sect. 5. and I hope you will acknowledge I have reason on my fide. Where, fore the Fathers using with the ancient Philosophers the Name Ignis for Spiritus, is no warrant, fince it may fignifie Symbolis cally, for us to think that that Ignis belongs to the very Nature and Effence of a Spirit.

SECT. XXIV.

That the Chaldee and Magick Oracles call not only the Soul but God himsfelf Fire; but that it is not to be understood properly, but Symbolically proved by the Glosses of Michael Pfellus and Pletho.

THAT Ignis is put for Spirit by the ancients, is plain over and over again from the Magich and Calder Oreglar and over again from the Magick and Caldee Oracles; (to fay nothing here of Ezechiel's Vision, where God the Father is represented by Fire, which the Cabbalists also follow) these Oracles I fay, do not flick to call the highest Deity, from which all things are, Fire; which I conceive is very gross and abfurd to understand in a proper Sense of God; and therefore, both Pletho and Pfellus upon that Oracle, Ein mivra muejs ένυς εκγεραώτα. All things proceed out of one Fire : The one fays, Et evds mueds nons Et evds Oes. Out of one Fire that is from one God ; and the other, This, fays he, is our Doctrine and true. Πάτα γαις τὰ όντα από μόνε Θεώ του states , For all things received their Being from one God; where they render my by Ozos, Fire by God, they questionless understood God in their proper Philotophical Notion as a pure Immaterial and Intellectual Being, or else they would make his Nature inferiour to that of a Created Spirit : For when a Created Spirit is called Fire in those Oracles, as the Soul is expressly termed mie onewor, A fhining Fire : Pletho interprets, Tig quervor, ftripping it out of its Symbolical Cortex, beia n's sona is vosed, A certain Divine and Intellectual Substance, which is here called Fire Symbolically, as God himself is, to intimate its affinity with the Divinity it felf; and upon the fame Oracle, which at large İS,

> "On לטצא אדיך ציסע קמרויטי שעולערו אע אדים, אאליעמולה דר עלירו אין לטיאה שר שראיד לגוי.

The fense of which is, That the Soul being shining Fire, by the power of the Father, remains Immortal, and the Mistress of Life; that that is, an undifturbed Poffessor or Proprietor of Life in her felf. Upon this Oracle, I fay, Michael Pfellus Gloss thus, 'H Juya E UNOV Koz if downed or AUG TWV GWN in the Soul being an Immaterial and Incorporeal Fire (which indeed is to be no Fire, and therefore again affures us, that according to the fence of these Interpreters, God is called Fire only Symbolically) exempt from all composition, and having moting of Matter or Body in its Effence, is Immuotal. For, as he fays afterward, the having not out of which the is compounded, the has not into which the is composed of Particles and Disfoluble. I might inflance in more places, but the thing is fo plain, that it is needlefs.

Wherefore it is manifest, that though the Greek Fathers should run division upon that Symbolical term for a Spirit, viz. Fire, and distribute it into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative, that there is no proof hence that every created Spirit is Fire, and not properly a Spirit; that is, such a Substance as is Ens unum per fe & non per aliud, and consequently Indiscerpible.

SECT. XXV.

Of the Incomprehensible Purity of those Fires that are pretended to be Spirits, and whether the Greek Fathers spoke tolerably in dividing Fire into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative.

BUT now concerning the Incomprehensible Purity of fubfrance in these Fires (which must be so many Spirits) one above another any one of which, I cannot think that you conceive may be so incomprehensibly Pure, as to be the Divine Essence it solf; I would liquire here (fince Flame in the first fense; and obvious to our fight and fenses is so apparently, as I have above proved; nothing but such a certain kind of Particles in O a fuct fuch a kind of motion) what these several degrees of Purification can amount to more than this, That the Particles will be more subtil and subtil, but as arrand a Congeries of Particles of Matter as before. Which I must confess, to me seems to have no affinity at all with the true Nature of a Spirit. And yet you stick not to declare, that the Greek Fathers in dividing Fire into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative speak telerably and informingly. For I will leave out for the present the comparison with that other Notion which to me seems to be more precise and Natural.

Wherefore I must here crave pardon that I shall take the boldnels, who have otherwise no mind to differ from any one more than needs, exprelly to differ from you in Judgment in this cause. For I must pronounce, that as you seem to conceive the Fathers to fpeak, that is, not Symbolically; (or elfe it is nothing to your purpole) but properly, these Fathers speak neither tolerably nor informingly, but intolerably and mischievously, dilutely and misinformingly. For is it not an intolerable mischief, that those that should be our guides in our greatest concerns, fuch as the affurance of the immortality of our Souls, should broach such Doctrine about the nature of the Soul, as should induce Men to believe it Mortal ? For if the Soul be really Fire, or if you will, a Light, how eafily it is blown out when it is removed into the open Air out of this Lanthorn of the Body ? But if it be Fire not flaming, fuch as is in red-hot Iron, it cannot remove out of the Body, but is extinct in the cold Corps, as the Fire in the Iron when it is grown cold. So that the former is the more plaufible opinion that it is, if it be any kind of Fire, a kind of a subtil Flame, but how you secure its Subfiftence, and defend it from the injury of the bluftering Winds after its Exiit, you must answer to Lucretius, for his Objection it was of old, who thus speaks of the Soul de rerum Natura, lib. 3.

Hac igitur tantis ubi morbis corpore in ipfo Jactesur, miferifque modis diftracta labores, Cur eandem credis fine corpore in Aero aperto, Cum validis ventis ætatem degere poffe?

Which Objection is invincibly ftrong against fuch as hold the Humane Soul Fire, feign it as pure and subtil as you will, as subtil as the primum Elementum of Des-Cartes, which must still be a Congeries of Atomes. It will be prefently overflown with the Globuli, and go out like the last Flame of the Snuff of a Candle dle ; and though its matter be not loft, it will lofe its perfonality by mingling, as other liquid things do, with the reft of its own Element. And fo as the Song of the wicked is in the Wifdom of Solomon, Chap. 2. We (hall be hereafter as if we had never been : For our life is as smoak and a little spark in the moving of our beart, which being extinguished, our body shall be turned into ashes, and our (pirit shall vanish at the soft air. Air mingled with Air, and as well Fire with Fire, which is as utter a Mortality of the Soul as the Epicureans can believe, or the wicked hope for. And yet the making of the Soul Fire, induceth the belief of all this, if it be meant Literally, not Symbolically. And therefore this form of speech so understood is plainly mischievous and intolerable, which makes me believe, the Greek Fathers did not lo understand it, but spake Symbolically, or else spake they knew not well and diffinctly what.

Whether the Greek Fathers Spake informingly in the above faid division. That Metaphors are to be excluded Definitions, and why. I hat Ventus and Fumus might as well have been divided into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative, as Fire. And how utterly uncapable Fire is of the Plastick power, less haply than Frost and Cold.

A N D now that you fay they speak so informingly in calling a Spirit Fire, what a dilute and slender information is this, as to the fatisfaction of our Reason? Metaphors indeed and Figurative Speeches fill the Sails of our Imaginative faculty the most, and to refemble God to a Confuming Fire and a Glorious Light may ferve the well-intended ends of Religion, and Strike greater Terrour, Reverence and Devotion into the Minds of the Vulgar, but proper language is the most becoming found Philosophy and strict Reason. And when we enquire into the distinct Nature of things, we are to bid adieu to Allusions and MetaMetaphors: for to enquire into the proper Nature of a thing, is to fearch out the adequate Definition thereof, which is to be done in the most certain and elear terms that are, according to Ariftotle. And therefore Metaphors are excluded from ferving in a Definition, becaufe, wire donge's rong ustage of Asybusyon, becaufe, whatever is Metaphorically fpoken, as he has noted in his Topicks, is obfeure and uncertain. Wherefore, I fee not how informingly the Greek Fathers speak, in using the term, Fire, inflead of fome more proper words to have fet out the true Nature of a Spirit; and I must ingennously declare, that they might have as well divided Ventus or Fumus, or the Reek of a Cauldron, into Intellective, Senfitive, and Vegetative, as Onis, for any advantage that Ignis has to fet out the proper Nature of a Spirit.

The main thing is, that it looks as it there were an automptona, or Self-moving in Fire, it being in perpetual motion, but this is a plain fallacy, for the parts of the Flame are not felf-moved, but they are moved of another : As when you apply a lighted Candle to light another Candle, the parts of the Wick, and Wax, or Tallow are put into motion by the moved parts of the lighted Candle, and fo all the Particles of the Candle by degrees are put into motion by the Particles of the prefent Flame, the Air allo affifting, which yet pais away as a River, as I noted above. But if you alledge, that Fire and Flame as long as it is, is in motion, and to fitly fets out the Self-Activity of a Spirit, 101 fay, Fume and Reek as long as they are, are in motion, and to is Wind especially, and the more like a Spirit in this regard, it being to hard to find out what gives it its motion, io that it looks more like a Self-moving Being. So little information is there in calling a Spirit, Fire, more than if it were called Fume, or Reek, or Wind, and therefore the instruction, must needs be very flender and dilute. And as no body will lay Furne, or Reek or Wind is of three kinds. Intellective, Senfitive and Vegetative, but at first fight it would appear a meer Mifinformation, fo as certainly, to fay that Fire is diffinguilhed into these Species, Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegerative, would look like the diffribution of a Whole into parts difagreeing with the fame Whole, which were a foul Mifinformation indeed, and contrary to the known Rules of Logick. And this I may be the more bold to aver, becaufe I have up and down in my Wrie tings demonitrated the incapiatity of Moster, for fuch Functions as thefe.

Is Fire Intellective ? Certainly then the Sun as foon as any, and fome Materialifts would have it fo ; but I think I have proved fufficiently in my Preface to the Immortality of the Soul, the madnels and Repugnancy of that opinion. Is Fire Senfitive? I have proved in that Treatife that no Matter whatfoever, whether Fire. Water, or Air is capable of fuch Impreffions from fenfible Objects, as we are confcious to our felves of. And to pretend that Fire is Vegetative, that is to fay Plastical, is wonderfully Repugnant to the Nature of it, for whatever Nature is Plastical, it is the Ersenized (Endelechia) of that Body which it does form and organize, and therefore it must $\Delta \hat{s}_{eff}$ as well as exav, it must hold together and bind as well as move the Matter, when as the property of Fire is only to difperfe and confume, for it puts all into an hurry and motion, and that is all that we can rationally conceive that Fire can do, when as Froft and Cold forms pretty Devices and gay Flourishes in Snow and Ice, and on Windows and Doors of Cellars. But it may be you will fay, the Greek Fathers did not mean Fire in my fenfe, which bears along with it fuch abfurdities; I defire then to know in what sense they understood Fire, and if they had not been more informing if they had defined precifely what they meant by Fire, before they would divide it into Intellective, Sensitive and Vegetative; but if they will fay one thing and mean another, they must needs bring the Reader into Errour and Mifinformation. If they meant Spirit they should have faid Spirit, and if they meant Spirit properly to called, they thould have declared its Nature that it was Substance Immaterial, or to that fense, before they distributed it into its kinds.

SECT. XXVII.

That the Greek Fathers in dividing Fire instead of Spirit into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative, do not speak as informingly as are the Notions of Penetrability, and Indivisibility, and that a Specifick Difference in a Species, implies an opposite Difference thereto, in the opposite Species.

A ND thus I think I have clearly thewn that the Fathers in dividing Fire into Intellective, Senfitive, and Vegetative, do not fpeak tolerably and informingly; whence it will be a very easie task to thew that they do not speak as informingly as are the Notions of Penetrability and Indivisibility. For certainly unlefs the Greek Fathers thought all things that are to be Material, (which there is no likelihood in the Earth they fhould, the Greek Philosophy of Pythagoras, Plato, and Aristotle being at hand to instruct them better) if instead of Fire they had put Spirit, and intimated it to be a Substance Immaterial, they had fpoke more perspicuously and more informingly than they did. This I conceive is undeniably true.

And now I appeal to your felf, Divisibility and Impeneerability being the known and univerfally acknowledged Effential Property or Character of Matter or Body, how naturally, ot rather, how neceffarily the opposite Species to Body, viz. Spirit is found to be Indivisible and Penetrable. As in those two oppofite Species under Animal, viz. Homo and Brutum, if it be once acknowledged that Brutum is Animal Irrationale, and that Irrationale is the Specifick Difference, its opposite Species Homomust needs be Animal Rationale. This is to plain and convictive, that I cannot here but remind you of your undervaluing your cognitive Faculties, and of my prefage, that I should discover that you are able to understand more of the Nature of a Created Spirit, than you did profess in the last of those feven Propositions I above deduced from that Paragraph. For you have gone thus much further, namely, To the Penetrability and the Indivisibility belonging Effentially and Infeparably to the Nature of a Spirit IM in general, (which therefore will take in Created Spirits) which you cannot avoid the admitting of, from fo clear a Method of demonstration.

SECT XXVIII.

That God can create an Indivisible Being, though of a large Metaphysical Amplitude, or else he were not God.

A N D for the poffibility of these proper and effential Attri-butes of a Spirie, I think I have made it good in my shore Discourse of the true Notion of a Spirit, against all pretended Ob. jections And the greatest difficulty touching the Indifcerpibility of a Spirit, acknowledged to have Metaphyfical Amplitude or Extension, can be none to him that confiders how much more easie it is to conceive what is immediately and of its own Effence one to be Indifcerpible, than how that which is difcerpible into parts can at all hold together, and acknowledges the Immenfe Effence of the Deity, which yer is absolutely Indivisible or Indiscerpible, and the Omnipotence of the fame Deity, who therefore can eafily create Spirits according to the Image of himself, tho' with a finite Amplitude, but Indiscerpible; that is to fay, That he can create a Being, (which in that it is a Being neceffarily implies Amplitude in it) which is Ens unum per fe & non per aliud, and of fuch an Amplitude as is Indifcerpible, not upon the account of its smallness, because it can be no Smaller, but upon account of the immediate Union, or sather Oneness of its Essence, be it as large as you please.

Otherwife God were only able to create Metaphyfical Monads, ot Spirisual Points, answering to the Phyfical Points or Monads of Matter; than which to a fagacious and philosophical Mind, that is throughly persuaded of the Divine Omnipotency, nothing can be more absurd or ridiculous. And if you will fay, That if he should create such a Spirit with Metaphysical Amplitude, which, though so large, himself cannot divide and fever into parts, he would thereby puzzle his own Omnipotency; the same may be said of the Metaphysical Monads, and at this rate he shall be allowed to create nothing, no not so much as Matter,

Matter, nor himself indeed to be; for that cannot be God, from whom all other things are not produced and created.

SECT. XXIX.

How naturally the above mentioned distribution in the Greek Fathers of Fire into Intellective, Sensitive and Vegetative belongs to Spirit, according to the Definition in the preceding Discourse of the True Notion of a Spirit. And that the Effects of the kinds of Spirit compriz'd in that general Definition, are all the Phanomena in the World.

Wherefore these things being so plain, I conceive it will be no great immodesty in me to hope, that my Definition of a Spirit being this, (an Immaterial substance intrinsically indued with Life and the Faculty of Motion) and vertually containing in it, Penetrability and Indiscerpibility, (for Immaterial include those two as you have seen) will approve it felf more informing than the defining of a Spirit by Fire, which may heat the Fancy, and fill the Sails of Imagination, as I said before, but instructs us little or nothing of the true and proper Notion of a Spirit.

And then it being noted in that Definition, that Life and Motion intrinfically iffue from this Immaterial fubftance, Spirit, here you may fee how fitly the Greek Fathers division of it (not of Fire) is made into Intellective, Sensitive, and Vegetative. and what easie and natural fense it will be. Thus I love to Philosophize without Tumout, Pomp, or Metaphors. Fire indeed is more Phantasmatical, and the Object of fense and Fancy, but Immaterial Substance more rational, and the Object of our Intellective Faculties.

But if we love to have all our Faculties furnished and filled with Objects, we may remember that this Definition of a Spirit, viz. An Immaterial Substance intrinsically indued with Life, and a Faculty of Motion, though it make no noise in it felf, nor swells fwells the Fancy with fuch glaring Notions as Fire and Light, yet this Life and Faculty of Motion in this Immaterial inbftance diffributed into its kinds, reprefents all the Pageantry of the World, and the Pomp thereof, Fire and Light, and Clouds and Thunder, and all the Pbænomena of Nature, by its actings on the Matter of the Universe; besides the Intellectual Operations it performs in the rational orders of Being. And part of that Life and Motion comprehended in that general Definition, enables me to Write what I write for a more diffinct Information of you, than you have from those Greek Fathers, which seem to have miss-understood them, and fo misinformed your self.

SECT, XXX.

The great Usefulness of the Notion of the Indivisibility, or Indiscerpibility of Spirits.

A N D now I have thus cleared up things, I am perswaded, If you were again to Write your Judgment of my Defcription of a Spirit, you would not fay of Penetrability and Indivisibility, perhaps thefe alfo may be useful, but you would come off roundly, and with affurance declare, that they are not only useful but true; for in my Judgment, unless they be true, they are not useful; for I am no Piæ fraudes, but for plain Dealing, and for transacting all things Bona fide, as well in Spirituals as Temporals. But that they are true, I think I have fufficiently made good already, and hinted fomething before of their Usefules.

For unlefs this be the Nature of a Spirit to be Indifcerpible, Philosophy affords no fuccour to Natural Religion, nor contributes any thing to the affurance of our Personal substituence afper the diffolution of this Mortal Body. But the Soul being Fire, will mingle with the substil Element of des Cartes, as sure as if it were meerly Breath, it would vanish into the soft Air, as I noted above. But being acknowledged an Immaterial Being, such as I have described, and intrinsically indued with Life and Motion, it is able by its Constructive Faculty, or Statick eick Power, to maintain its Vehicle against the most blussering Winds, and to keep its self from being blown into pieces, and dispersed like Fume or Reek, and from being extinct like a Candle taken out of the Lantern, and committed to the uncertain Blasts of the moveable Air. This for the Usefulness of the In. discorphility of Spirits.

SECT. XXXI.

The neseffary Ulefulnels of the Notion of the Peanetrability of Spirits.

ND now for the Penetrability of Spirits, it is also plain. ly not only useful, but necessary, that they penetrate the Matter, elle how could they be the 'ErAtizetas Endelechie thereof, and inform it and actuate it? And if they could not penetrate their own Parts, how could they be contracted fo as to be commenfurate to the Body of a small Fatus in the Womb. which, as I have heard from fome skillful Midwives, have fometimes been found as little as a Bee, and yet in humane shape and form. But unless we will patch up a Soul by pieces to enable it to be commenfurate to the Body when it is come to Man's stature, that very Soul, nothing added to it that was contracted into fo fmall a compass before, after expands it felf by degrees to the Amplitude of the grown Body of a Man. Which therefore plainly implies the Penetrability of Spirits, as well as fers out the Ufefulness thereof. But it is sufficient to touch only upon these things,

SECT. XXXII.

That Logical Matter and Form are nothing but Indeterminata, Amplitudo, and Differentia, the two Incomplex Principles of Ens quaternus Ens, and therefore imply no Phylical Materiality.

W E are now come near the Conclusion of your Letter, but I will take in your thort Postfeript, before I confider that, You make a Spirit, fay you, to be Ens, ideoque unum, verum, &c. And that True denotes the answerableness of the thing to its own proper Idea, and implies a right Matter and Form due. ly conjoined. Upon this you raife this Question, Do not you here make Spirits Material ? But no doubt, fay you, whether to be called Material or Substantial, the form is not an adjoyned thing. but the form of a simple Essence is but an inadequate Conceptus, making no Composition. To this I answer, That I do not make Spirits Material in any fense derogatory to their Nature and Perfections. And whereas I speak of right Matter and Form, if you had observed that, that Matter and Form you speak of, is a Matter and Form that belongs to Ens quaternes Ens, you could not imagine that this would infer any Physical Materiality in Spirits, because it is Matter in a most general Notion prescinded from all particular kinds of Being whatfoever, and therefore belongs to Beings truly Immaterial as well as Material.

It is only Materia and Forma Logica, that is there meant, nor is the Form adjoyned in a Phyfical fenfe to the Matter, unlefs where the Form and Matter are fubftances really diffinct, as the Soul of Man and his Body. But they are called alfo Matter and Form, tho' they be only mentally diffinct in fome other Beings; and confequently can be only mentally faid to be adjoyned the one to the other, as if they had been once two, whenas they are really but one thing. As you fay well, the Form of any fimple Effence is but an Inadequate Conceptus of the Effence, and makes no Phyfical composition. See my Enchiridion Metaphyficum, Cap. 2. Sect. 7.8. and you will underftand there what I mean by Logical Matter and Form, which are the Incomplex Principles of Ens quatenus Ens, and are nothing elfe but Indeterminata Amplitudo and Differentia; fo that I need no longer here infift on this Matter,

SECT. XXXIII.

The occasion of the Pfychopyrift's Letter, and this Answer of the Author of the foregoing Discourse of The true Notion of a Spirit, and what hopes he conceived of undeceiving the Pfychopyrift by engaging him to peruse that Treatise.

TOW for the Conclusion it felf, wherein you crave Pardon N for these curt Expressions of Thoughts, which I defined con-cerning the Description of a Spirit, To this I fay, That your Expressions are not fo curt, but that you have sufficiently conveyed your Mind to me: If I be not much miftaken, and therefore Pardon is not fo properly due to you as Thanks; and because you had a mind I should peruse some Notions of yours which you had entertained, to know how near mine and they would meet, I defired you attentively and confiderately first to peruse that brief Discourse of mine touching the true and genuine Notion of a Spirit. Whereby I conceived you would eafily difcern what agreement or difference there were in our Conceptions touching this matter. And I having Writ fo clearly and diftinctly, fo digeftedly and coherently, as I thought, touching this Subject in that Treatife, I thought it also hopeful that you would fully difcern Truth to be on my fide, and that there were not, nor needed to be, any other Notion of a Spirit in general, than what I have fo evidently and orderly fet out, and fo carefully defended against all imaginable Allegations or Pretenfions.

SECT. XXXIV.

The Impediments to true Knowledge; and the full Agreement of the Author of the foregoing Difcourfe with the Learned Psychopyrist in the last Clause of his Letter, viz. If God make us truly Holy, we shall quickly know more to our fatisfaction.

BUT I leave every one to think as well as he can in Philofophical fpeculations, being affured that every one would get to the Truth if he could reach it: It being an Imperfection and Blemish to him to be found in Error; though I question whether all Men take the best Course to attain to Truth, but they would gladly have it, if they might part with nothing for it. Not with their beloved Lazines, nor with their pre-conceived Opinjons, which they have a fondnels for, because they have chanced fo long ago to espouse them, and therefore cannot abide to think of a Divorce; not with their sense or Worldly-mindedness, nor with their fensual Pleasures or Worldly-mindedness, nor with their like to be true, than the Opinion of any other Man, tho' they bring no plain demonstration for it.

For to come to the last Clause of all in your Letter, which is the beft: and in which I most firmly and heartily agree with you, which is this, If God make us truly Holy, we shall quickly know more to our fatisfaction. I think, that the purification of the Soul from all uncleannels of Flesh and Spirit, is absolutely requisite for him that would successfully Philosophize, especially in Metaphyfical or Theological Speculations. And I commend your Judgment in that you fay, If God makes us truly Holy. By vertue of which true Holinefs, I suppose we shall be freed, not only from the dulnels of Superstition, and blufter of Enthusiasm, from the Prejudices of both our Education and Complexion, and from the unbridleness and impetuosity of our own Self-will and Defires in things that look not to commendably on it; but also from any vain Defire of Knowledge it felf, which bears fuch a fair and commendable flew with it : We shall, I fay, condemn our felves as of a great Folly and Miscarriage. efoccially 52 especially in Contemplations Metaphysical, Theological; and Moral: If we find such a false Appetite in our selves in those things as that we would know meerly to know, or (which is worse) to be known.

Which is no found Conffitution of Mind, nor becoming an holy Man, who has no falle Apperite to Knowledge, but only fuch as an healthful and temperate Man has to his Meat, to eat fuch, and fo much as enables Nature rightly and fifmly to perform all the Functions of the natural Life: So all defire of Knowledge in those Contemplations I spoke of before, that exceeds the only due ends of such Knowledge, which is to coroborate our Faith in GOD, and in his Son JESUS CHRIST, and to confirm our Belief of a glorious Immortality after this Life, to promote true Devotion, Mortification, and Regeneration, or the Renovation of our lapsed Natures into the loss Image of God: All defires of Knowledge that tends not to this end, is but a Disease with a truly holy Man, nor relishes better with him, than to feed on Chaff, Feathers, or dry Straw, relisheth with a natural Man.

And we may be fure, he whofe Appetite is thus found and regular, and defires no Knowledge but fuch as is the real Food of the New-Birth in him, shall not fail to draw in all wholefome and uleful Knowledge, from the Fountain of all true Wildom, even from the Father of Lights, from whom is every good and perfect Gift. Whenas a falle Apperite to Knowledge, which only feeds our Pride, will expose us, befides all fortuitous Errors, to the ludicrous Impoftures of vagrant Spirits, that fport themselves with the vain curiofities of deluded Mankind. Not to add that a Man thus trifles away that pretious Time, which is much better spent in Examination of the Sincerity of our own Hearts, and in earnest Breathings towards God, that he would be pleafed to free us from that Bondage of Corruption we find our felves held in, and would perfect the New-Birth, and confummate the Image of his Son in us, than in teafing of unneceffary Notions into ufelefs and endlefs Diftinctnefs and Multiplicities, and fuch as nothing at all contribute to our great and everlafting Concern. I fay I am perfectly of your Mind in this, That he that is thus truly Holy, will foonel know more to his fatisfaction : For he that feeds the young Ravens that call upon him, will never fuffer his own Birth to starve for want of due Food in the Soul of Man; and he that thus Philosophizes, affecting no Knowledge out of Curio-Gry, but only to feed and strengthen the Divine Birth in him, will will haply know with eafe, more than himfelf had the Curiofity to know, and more than the Curiofity of those that are out of this way, are ever likely to be in a capacity to reach to of themselves, or to receive when offered to them from others.

This will not down with all Men, but as many as are perfuaded of it; it is their Duty to improve it to their prefent Satisfaction here, and everlafting Comfort hereafter. I did not think to be thus large when I began my Letter, but one thing has drawn on another, I know not how; but I hope nothing has paffed my Pen, but what may be ufeful to a ferious and intelligent Reader. Wherefore I leave all to your candid Conlideration.

PREFACE TOTHE READER.

Know it is Matter of very little Credit to be a Relator of Stories, and I of all Men living, have the least reason to be fond of the Employment; for I never had any Faculty in telling of a Story, and have always had a particular indisposition and backwardness to the Writing any such: But of all Relations of Fact, there are none like to give a Man such trouble and disreputation. as those that relate to Witchcraft and Apparitions. which so great a party of Men (in this Age especially) do forailly and laugh at, and without more ado, are refolved to explode and despise, as meer Winter-Tales and old Wives-Fables; such they will call and account them, be their Truth and Evidence what it will; for they have unalterably fixt and determinated the Point, That Witches and Apparitions P 3 paritions are things Ridiculous, Incredible, Foppilb, Impossible, and therefore all Relations that affert them are Lies, Cheats and Delusions, and those that afford any Credit to them, are credulous Gulls, and filly easie Believers.

Which things if they should not be so, it would spoil many a fest, and those who thought themselves great Wits, must have the discomfort of finding they are mistaken. They must fall back into common and vulgar Belief, and lose the pretence to extraordinary Sagacity, on which they valued themfelves so much, and be brought to be afraid of another World, and be fubjected to the common Terrors which they despised before, as the Juggles and Contrivances of Priests and Politicians, and so must see themselves under a necessfy of altering their Lives, or of being undone. These are very hard and grievous things, and therefore the Stories of Witches and Apparitions must be exploded and run down, or all is lost.

This is the cafe with multitudes of brisk confident Men in our Days, fo that to meddle on this Subject, is to affront them greatly, to provoke their Rage and Contempt, and to raife the Devil of their Wit and Buffoonry. All which confidered, it must be confest to be a very bold and adventurous thing to undertake the Province in which I have engaged. And befides the provocation which it must needs give to the Huffers and Witlings, there is another fort, whose good good Opinion I greatly value : some sober and ingenious Spirits, who upon other Grounds doubt of the Existence of Witches, who may be apt to judge me guilty of Credulity for the pains I take in this matter This also hath been some trouble and discouragement.

And upon the whole, I am affured before-hand, that no Evidence of Fact possible is sufficient to remove the obstinate prejudices of divers resolved Men, and therefore I know I must fall under their heavy censares, of which I have considered the worst, and am I hope pretty well prepared to bear the severest of them. But no Man would expose himself to all this for nothing, nor have I. There were reasons for this engagement, and they were briefly these that follow.

Having been at Mr. Mompession's house in the time of the disturbance, seen and heard somewhat my self, and received an account from Mr. Mompession, and other credible persons of the whole trouble; I was persuaded to publish, and to annex the full account of it to the second or third Edition of my Considerations concerning Witchcraft, to which the Story had near Relation. This I did, and they passed two or three Editions together, without much farther trouble to me. But of late, I have heard from all parts and am amazed at it, that so strongly attested Relation is run down in most places as a Delasion and Imposture, and that Mr. Mompession and my self, have confessed all to be a cheat and contrivance.

Concerning this, I have been asked a thousand times, till I have been weary of answering, and the Questionists would scarce believe I was in earnest when I denied it. I have received Letters about P 4 it it from known friends and strangers out of many parts of the Three Kingdoms, so that I have been haunted almost as bad as Mr. Mompession's house. Most of them have declared that it was most confidently reported, and believed in all the respective parts, that the business was a Cheat, that Mr. Mompession had confessed so much, and I the same : so that I was quite tired with denying and answering Letters about it. And to free my self from the trouble, I at last resolved to re-print the Story by itself with my Confutation of the Invention that concerned me, and a Letter I received from Mr. Mompession (now printed in this Book) which cleared the matter as to him.

This accordingly I committed to my Bookfeller's hands some years fince to be printed. But it being not done, I was continually importaned by new Soli-citations and Questions, and at length out comes Mr. Webster's confident Book, in which he (aith, That my Story of the Drummer, and the other of Witchcraft, are as odd and filly, as any can be told or read, and as fictitious, incredible, ludicrous and ridiculous as any can be, p. 11. And again, p, 278. Must not all Perfons that are of found understanding, judge and believe that all those strange tricks related by Mr. Glanvil of his Drummer and Mr. Mompeffon's Houfe, which he calls the Damon of Tedworth, were abominable Cheats and Impoltures, as I am informed by Perfons of good Quality, they were difcovered to be.

But neither did this Confidence, nor his Book (I confess) much move me; for I was very loath to be troubled troubled any more in this matter. But at last divers Eminent Men, and Learned friends of mine having taken notice of it, and being troubled to see so considerable an evidence against Saducism, as Mr. Mompession's Story is, so impudently run down by purposely contrived lies, they urg'd me very much to re-print the Relation, with my Considerations about Witchcraft; and so give some check to the Infultation and Confidence of Mr. Webster.

To this I flood long dif-inclined, but being preft by the confideration that fuch a Re-enforcement might be a very confiderable and feasonable service to Religion, against the stupid Saducism and Infidelity of the Age, I was perfuaded: And having signified my being now inclined to the design, I received great encouragement from some of the greatest Spirits of our Age and Nation, who earnestly animated me to it. Having resolved, I bethought me of making a small Collection of the most credible and best attested Stories of this kind that were near and modern, to accompany the Second I had Printed, and to confirm and prove the main Subject.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THIS is the whole of the Preface, that was found amongst Mr. Glanvil's Papers, faving five or fix words, which being superfluous to the fense of this last Clause, and and beginning fome thing elfe not perfected, I thought better left out, But as for Mr. Mompeffon's Letter to Mr. Glanvil, which is mentioned in this Preface, and defigned to be Printed in this intended Edition, it is out of the Original Copy as follows.

Mr. Mompesson's Letter to Mr. Glanvil Dated Nov. 8. An. 1672.

Worthy Sir,

Eeting with Dr. Pierce accidentally at Sir Robert Buttons, he acquainted me of fomething that passed between my Lord of R. and your felf about my troubles, &c. To which (having but little leifure) I do give you this account, that I have been very often of late asked the Question, whether I have not confested to His Majesty or any other, a cheat discovered about that affair. To which I gave, and shall to my Dying-day give the fame Anfwer, That I must belye my felf, and perjure my felf alfo, to acknowledge a Cheat in a thing where I am fure there was nor could be any, as I, the Minifter of the Place, and two other Honeft Gentlemen deposed at the Affizes, upon my Impleading the Drummer. If the World will not believe it, it, it shall be indifferent to me, praying God to keep me from the fame, or the like affliction. And although I am fure this most damnable lye does pass for current amongst one fort of people in the World, invented only, I think, to suppress the Belief of the being either of God or Devil; yet I question not but the Thing obtains credit enough amongst those, whom I principally defire should retain a more charitable Opinion of me, than to be any way a deviser of it, only to be talk't of in the World, to my own difadvantage and reproach; of which fort I reckon you one, and rest in hast.

Your obliged Servant.

The Preface

Mr. Mompeffon's Letter to Mr. Col. lins Dated Aug. 8. An. 1674.

SIR,

Received yours, and had given you an earlier anfwer, had I not been prevented by fome journeys, I now give you this; That as to any additional part of the Story, I fhall not trouble you with at prefent, not knowing what is either already published or omitted, in regard I have not any of Mr. Glanvil's Books by me. I never had but one, which was the last year borrowed of me for the use of the Lord Hollis, and is not yet returned. But as to the business of the Affizes (which is likely to work most on the Incredulous, because the Evidence was given on Oath) I shall here enlarge it to you.

When the Drummer was escaped from his Exile, which he was Sentenced to at Gloucester for a Felony, I took him up, and procured his Commitment to Salisbury Goal, where I Indicted him as a Felon, for this supposed Witchcraft about my House. When the fellow faw me in earness, he fent to me from the Prison, that he was forry for my affliction, and if I would procure him leave to come to my House in the nature of an Harvest-man, he did not question but he should do me good as to that affair. To which I fent answer, I knew he could do me no good in any honess way, and therefore rejected it. The Afflizes zes came on, where I Indicted him on the Statute Primo J4cobi cap. 12. where you may find, that to feed, imploy, or reward any evil ipirit is Felony. And the Indictment against him was, that he did quendam malum Spiritum negotiare, the Grand Jury found the Bill upon the Evidence, but the Petty Jury acquitted him, but not without fome difficulty.

The Evidence upon Oath were my felf, one Mr. William Maton, one Mr. Walter Dowfe, all yet living, and I think of as good Repute, as any this Country has in it, and one Mr. Jo. Cragg, then Minister of the Place, but fince dead. We all deposed feveral things that we conceived impossible to be done by any natural Agents, as the motion of Chairs, Stools and Bed-staves, no body being near them, the Beating of Drums in the Air over the House in clear nights, and nothing visible; the shaking of the Floor and strongest parts of the House in still and calm nights, with feveral other things of the like nature: And that by other Evidence it was applied to him.

For fome going out of these parts to Gloucester whilft he was there in Prison, and visiting him, he ask't them what News in Wilts. To which they replyed, they knew none. No, fays the Drummer, did you not hear of a Gentleman's House that was troubled with the Beating of Drums? They told him again, if that were News, they heard enough of that. Ay, fays the Drummer, it was because he took my Drum from me; if he had not taken away my Drum, that trouble had never befallen him, and he shall never have his his quiet again, till I have my Drum, or fatisfaction from him.

This was deposed by one Thomas Avis Servant to one Mr. Thomas Sadler of North-Wilts, and thefe words had like to have cost the Drummer his Life. For elfe, although the things were never fo true, it could not have been rightly applyed to him more than to another. I should only add, that the before mentioned Witnesser were Neighbours, and deposed, that they heard and faw these things almost every day or night for many Months together. As to the Sculpture you intend, you best understand the advantage, I think it needless. And those Words [you shall have Drumming enough] is more than I heard him speak: I rest

An Introduction to the Proof of the Existence of Apparitions, Spirits, and Witches.

SECT. I.

The great usefulness and seasonableness of the present Argument, touching Witches, and Apparitions in subserviency to Religion.

HE Queffion, whether there are Witches or not, is not matter of vain Speculation, or of indifferent Moment; but an Inquiry of on the refolution of it, depends the Authority and just Execution of fome of our Laws; and which is more, our Religion in its main Doctrines is nearly concerned. There is no one, that is not very much a ftranger to the World but knows how Athei/m and Infidelity have advanced in our days, and how openly they now dare to fhew themfelves in Afferting and Difputing their vila Caufe. Particularly the diff instion of the Soul from the Body, the being of Spirits, and a Future Life are Affertions extremely difpiled and opposed by the Men of this fort, and if we lose those Articles, all Religion comes to nothing. They are clearly and fully Afferted in the Sacred Oracles, but those Wits have laid aside these Divine vine Writings. They are proved by the beft Philofo. phy and higheft Reafon; but the Unbelievers, divers of them are too fhallow to be capable of fuch proofs, and the more fubtle are ready to Scepticize away those grounds.

But there is one Head of Arguments that troubles them much, and that is, the Topick of Witches and Apparitions. If fuch there are, it is a fenfible proof of Spirits and another Life, an Argument of more direct force than any Speculations, or Abstract reasonings, and fuch an one as meets with all the forts of Infidels. On which account they labour with all their might to perfuade themfelves and others, that Witches and Apparitions are but Melancholick Dreams, or crafty Impostrues; and here it is generally, that they begin with the youngmen, whose understanding they design to Debauch.

They expose and deride all Relations of Spirits and Witchcraft, and furnish them with fomelittle Arguments. or rather Colours against their Existence. And youth is very ready to entertain fuch Opinions as will help them to fansie, they are wifer than the generality of Men. And when they have once fwallowed this Opinion. and are fure there are no Witches nor Apparitions, they are prepared for the denial of Spirits, a Life to come. and all the other Principles of Religion. So that I think it will be a confiderable and very feafonable fervice to it, fully to debate and fettle this matter, which I shall endeavour in the following theets, and I hope fo, as not to impose upon my felf or others, by empty Rhetorications, fabulous Relations, or Sophiftical Reafonings, but treat on the Question with that freedom and plainnefs. that becomes one that is neither fond, fanciful nor credulous.

SECT. II.

The true stating of the Question by defining what a Witch and Witchcraft is.

I Know that a great part of the Labour in most Controversies, uleth to be bestowed on things impertinent to the main bulines, and by them the Minds of both fides are so confounded, that they wander widely from the point in difference, and at last lose it quite. It would quickly be thus in the Question of Witchcrass and usually is so, without previous care to avoid it. But I shall take the best I can, that my pains on this Subject be not so misses the formula of the purpose: And in order thereunto shall briefly define the terms of the Question, and then fet down what I grant. to mine Adversaries, and what I demand from them. And when these Preliminaries are well adjusted, we shall proceed with more diffinctness, and still see whereabout we are, and know how far what is affirmed or proved reaches the main matter in debate.

The Queftion is whether there are Witches or not: Mr. Webster accuseth the Writers on the Subject of defect, in not laying down a perfect Description of a Witch or Witcheraft, or explaining what they mean; p: 20. What his perfect Description is, I do not know; but I think I have described a Witch or Witcheraft in my Considerations, sufficiently to be understood, and the Conception which I, and, I think, most Men have is, That a Witch is one, who can do or seems to do strange things, beyond the known Power of Art and ordinary Nature; by vertue of a Confederacy with Evil Spirits. Strange Things; not Miracles; these are the extraordinary Effects of Ditime Power, known and diffinguisthed by their circumstances, as I shall shew in due place. The strange things are are really performed, and are not all Impostures and Delusions. The Witch occasions, but is not the Principal Ef. ficient, the feems to do it, but the Spirit performs the wonder, sometimes immediately, as in Transportations and Poffeffions, fometimes by applying other Natural Caufes, as in raifing Storms, and inflicting Difeafes, fometimes using the Witch as an Instrument, and either by the Eyes or Touch conveying Malign Influences: And thefe things are done by vertue of a Covenant, or Compact brewixt the VVitcb and an Evil Spirit. A Spirit, viz. an Intelligent Creature of the Invisible World, whether one of the Evil Angels called Devils, or an Inferiour Dæmon or Spirit, or a wicked Soul departed; but one that is able and ready for mifchief, and whether altogether Incorporeal or not, appertains not to this Question.

SECT. III.

That neither the Notation of the Name that fignifies indifferently, nor the falle Additions of others to the Notion of a Witch can any way diffettle the Authors definition.

T HIS I take to be a plain Description of what we mean by a VVitch and VVitcheraft: What Mr. VVebster and other Advocates for VVitches, talk concerning the words whereby these are express, that they are improper and Metaphorical, fignifying this, and fignifying that, is altogether idle and impertinent. The word VVitch fignifies orginally a Wise Man, or rather a Wise Woman. The same doth Saga in the Latin, and plainly so doth VVizzard in English fignifie a Wise Man, and they are vulgarly called cunning Men or Women. An Art, Knowledge, Cunning they have that that is extraordinary; but it is far from true Wildom and the word is degenerated into an ill fense, as Ma gia is.

So then they are called, and we need look no further; it is enough, that by the VVord, we mean the Thing and Perfon I have defcribed, which is the common meaning; and Mr. VVebster and the reft prevaricate when they make it fignifie an ordinary Cheat, a Couzener, a Poyloner, Seducer, and I know not what. Words fignifie as they are used, and in common use, VVitch and VVitchtraft, do indeed imply these, but they imply more, wiz. Deluding, Cheating and Hurting by the Power of an Evil Spirit in Covenant with a wicked Man or Woman: This is our Notion of a VVitch.

Mr. VVebster I know will not have it to be a perfect Description. He adds to the Notion of the VViteb he opposeth, carnal Copulation with the Devil, and real Transformation into an Hare, Cat, Dog, VVolf; the same doth Mr. VVagstaffe. Which is, as if a Man should define an Angel to be a Creature in the shape of a Boy with Wings, and then prove there is no such Being. Of all Men I would not have Mr. Webster to make my Definitions for me; we our felves are to have the leave to tell what it is that we affirm and defend. And I shave described the VViteb and VViteberaft, that sober Men believe and affert. Thubriefly for Defining.

SECT. IV.

What things the Author concedes in this Controversie about Witches and Witcheraft:

I Shall let the Patronsof Witches know what I allow and rant to them;

First, I grant, That there are fome Witty and Ingetious nious Men of the opposite Belief to me in the Queffion. Yea, it is accounted a piece of Wit to laugh at the Belief of VVitches as filly Credulity. And fome Men value themfelves upon it, and pride them in their fuppofed Sagacity of feeing the Cheat that impofeth on fo great a part of Believing Mankind. And the Stories of VVitches and Apparitions afford a great deal of Subject for Wit, which it is pity that a witty Man should lofe.

Secondly, I own that fome of those who deny VVitches have no defign against, nor a difinclination to Religion, but believe Spirits, and a Life to come, as other fober Christians do, and so are neither Atheists, Sadduces and Hobbists.

Thirdly, I allow that the great Body of Mankind is very credulous, and in this matter fo, that they do believe vain impoffible things in relation to it. That carnal Copulation with the Devil, and real Transmutation of Men and Women into other Creatures are fuch. That people are apt to impute the extraordinaries of Art, or Nature to VVitchcraft, and that their Credulity is often abufed by fubtle and defigned Knaves through these. That there are Ten thousand filly lying Stories of Witcheraft and Apparitions among the vulgar. That infinite fuch have been occasioned by Cheats and Popish Superfitions, and many invented and contrived by the Knavery of Popish Priefts:

Fourthly, I grant that Melancholy and Imagination have very great force, and can beget ftrange perfusions. And that many Stories of Witcheraft and Apparitions have been but Melancholy fancies.

Fifthiy, I know and yield, that there are many ftrange natural Difeafes that have odd Symptomes, and produce wonderful and aftonishing effects beyond the usual course of Nature, and that such are fometimes fally afcribed to Witchcraft.

Sixthly, I own, the Popifs Inquisitours, and other Witch-finders have done much wrong, that they have destroyed destroyed innocent perfons for Witches, and that watching and Torture have extorted extraordinary Confessions from some that were not guilty.

Seventhly and Laftly, I grant the Transactions of Spirits with Witches, which we affirm to be true and certain, are many of them very ftrange and uncouth, and that we can fcarce give any account of the Reafons of them, or well reconcile many of those paffages to the commonly received. Notion of Spirits, and the State of the next World.

If these Concessions will do mine Adversaries in this Queition any good, they have them freely. And by them I have already almost spoiled all Mr. Webster's and Mr. Wagstaff's, and the other Witch-Advocates Books, which prove little else than what I have here granted. And having, been so free in Concessions, I may expect that something should be granted me from the other party.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Hofe that are mentioned in the fecond Concession, though they are not Atheists, Sadducees nor Hobbists; yet if they deny Witches, it us plainly they are Antiscripturists, the Scripture (o plainly attesting the contrary.

SECT. V.

The Postulata which the Author demands of his Adversaries as his just right.

T HE demands that I make are; First, That whether Witches are or are not, is a question of Fact : For it is in effect, whether any Men or Women have been, or are in Covenant with Evil Spirits, and whether they by the Spirits help, or he on their account performs such or such things.

Secondly,

Secondly, That matter of Fact can only be proved by immediate Senfe, or the. Testimony of others Divine or Humane. To endeavour to demonstrate Fact by abstract reasoning and speculation, is, as if a Man should prove that Julius Cesar founded the Empire of Rome, by Algebra or Metaphysicks. So that what Mr. Webster faith, p. 43. That the true and proper medimus to prove the actions of Witches by, are Scripture and found Reason, and not the improper way of Testimony (which we infe in the opposition that Testimony stands to Scripture and found Reason) is very Nonsense.

Thirdly, That the History of the Scripture is not all Allegory, but generally hath a plain literal and obvious meaning.

Fourthly, That fome Humane Teftimonies are credible and certain, viz. They may be fo circumftantiated as to leave no reason of doubt. For our fenses fometimes report truth, and all Mankind are Liars, Cheats, and Knaves, at least they are not all Liars, when they have no Interest to be fo.

Fifthly, That which is fufficiently and undeniably proved, ought not to be denied, becaufe we know not how it can be, that is, becaufe there are difficulties in the conceiving of it. Otherwife Senfe and Knewledge is gone as well as Faith. For the Modus of most things is unknown, and the most obvious in Nature have inextricable difficulties in the Speculation of them, as I have shewn in my Sceptis Scientifica.

Sixthly and laftly, we are much in the dark, as to the Nature and Kinds of Spirits, and the particular condition of the other World. The Angels, Devils, and Souls happinels and milery we know, but what kinds are under these generals, and what actions, circumstances and ways of Life under those States we little understand. These are my Postulata or demands, which I suppose will be thought reasonable, and such as need no more proof.

Proof

Proof of

Apparitions, Spirits, and Witches,

From

HOLY-SCRIPTURE.

SECT. I.

The Authors purpose of proving Apparitions and Witchcraft, to such as believe Scripture, as first from the Apparition of Angels.

N D having thus prepared my way, I come to prove that there are Witches against both the forts that deny their Existence, viz. Those that believe the Scriptures, and the Wits or Witlingns that will not admit their Testimony. To the first I shall prove the being of Witches by plain Evidence taken from the Divine Oracles, and to the other, and indeed to both, I shall evince the same by as full and clear Testimonies, as matter of fact is capable of, and then answer the opposite Objections, and those particularly of the three late confident Exploders of Witchcraft; * Mr. Webster, Mr. Wagstaffe, and the Author of the Dostrine of Devils.

The Proof I intend shall be of these two things, viz. That Spirits have sensibly transacted with Men, and that some have been in such Leagues with them, as to be enabled thereby to do wonders.

These fensible Transactions of Spirits with Men, are evident from Apparitions and Posselling. The Apparition of Angels, their discourses and predictions sensible converses with Men and Women are frequently recorded in the Scripture. An Angel ap-

eared to Hagar, Gen. 16. Three Angels in the shape of Men ppeared to Abraham, Gen. 18. Two to Lot in the same likedels, Gen. 19. An Angel called to Hagar, Gen. 21, 17. and so id one to Abraham, Gen. 22. An Angel space of the same appeared with Jacob in a Dream, Gen. 31. One of the same appeared to Moses in the Bush, Exod. 3. An Angel went before the Camp of Israel, Exod. 14. An Angel met Balaam in the way, Numb. 22. An Angel spake to all the People of Israel, Judges 2. An Angel appeared to Gideon, Judges 6. and to the Wife of Manoah, Judg. 13. An Angel destroyed the People, 2 Sam. 24. An Angel appeared to Elijah, 1 Kings 19. An Angel smote in the Camp of the Association of Ornan, 1 Chron. 21. 15. An Angel talked with Zaschariah the Prophet, Zach. 1.

An Angel appeared to the two Mary's at our Lords Sepulchre, Matth. 28. An Angel foretold the Birth of John Baptist to Zachariab the Prieft, Luk. 1. Gabriel was fent to the Holy Virgin, Luk. 1. 26. An Angel appeared to the Shepherds, Luk. 2. An Angel opened the Prifon Door to Peter and the reft. Als 5. I might accumulate many more inftances, but thefe are enough. And many circumftances of fensible Converse belong to more of them, which may be read at large in the respective Chapters. And fince the Intercourses of Angels were so frequent in former days, why should we be averse to the belief that Spirits fometimes transact with Men now?

ADVERTISEMENT.

• I Find among ft Mr. Glanvil's Papers, the first Lineaments or Strokes of an Answer to Mr. Wagstaffe, and to the Author of the Doctrine of Devils, but more fully to Mr. Webster, at least Seventeen Sheets where he answers folidly and substantially where I can read his Hand, but it reaches but to the Sixth Chapter. And in truth he has laid about him so well in these Sheets that are published, that those may well feem the less necessary.

SECT. II.

The Evaluons his Adversaries use to escape the force of these Proofs of Scripture from the Apparition of Angels, with the Author's Answer.

THERE are feveral Evafions, by which fome endeavour to efcape thefe Texts; as First, the Sadducees of old and Pamilifts of later Days, who hold, to wit, these, That the Angels we read of, were but Divine Graces; the other, That they were Divine Phantasms created to ferve a present occasion, which ceased to be as soon as they disappeared. One would think, that none that ever had read the Scriptures, should entertain such a Conceit as this, that is so contrary to the account they every where give of those Ceelestial Creatures. But there is nothing so absurd, but some Men will embrace to support their Opinions.

Let us confider a little how differently from this vain Fancy the Scripture describes them. They are called Spirits, an Attribute given to God himself, the prime Subfiftence, who is by way of Eminence called the Father of Spirits, not of Phantasms. And Spirits imports as much Substance as Body, though withour grofs Bulk. We read of elect Angels, and the Angels that stand before the Throne of God continually, and that always behold the Face of God. Of the fallen Angels, that kept not their first Station, that are held in the Chains of Darkness; and of everlasting Fire prepared for the Devil and his Angels, against the Judgment of the great Day. Both had their Order of Superiority and Inferiority, Michael and his Angels, the Dragon and his Angels. We are made little lower than the Angels. In Heaven we shall be as the Angels of God. Of the Day of Judgment knoweth no Man, no not the Angels. Let all the Angels of God Worship him.

Which Descriptions of the Nature, Order, Condition, Attributes of Angels, and infinite more such, up and down the Scriptures, are not applicable to Phantafms, but demonstratively prove, that the Angels of whole Apparitions we hear so frequently there, were real permanent Subfiftencies, and not meer Rhantafms and Shadows,

SECT. III.

That the Angels that are said to have appeared in Scripture, were not Men-Meffengers, but Inhabitants of the invisible World : And whether they Eat and Drank or no.

B UT were not those Angels that so appeared, special Prophets, Divine Messers, sometimes in Scripture confessed. Iy called Angels? They did Eat and Drink with Abraham and with Lot, by which it should seem that they were real Men. But whoever shall look over the Instances alleged of the Appatition of Angels, and read them in all the Circumstances of the Text, will plainly see that they could not be Men.

Such could not be the Angel that spake to Abraham and Hagar out of Heaven, that Conversed with Jacob in a Dream, that appeared to Moses in the Burning-bush, that appeared to Manoah, and ascended in his and his Wises presence, in the Flame of the Sacrifice, that went before the Camp of Israel, that stood before Balaam in the way unseen by him, that smore the Army of the Association of the Association of the Association of the Association to the Maries at the Sepulchre. These must be a fort of Beings superiours to Mankind, Angels in the proper Sense, who are sometimes in Scripture called Men, because they appear in our likeness.

But whether these do receive refection or suffinence in their own World and State or not, I will not difpute. It is most probable, that it hath been the Doctrine both of Fathers and Philosophers, that they are vitally united to Ætherial and Heavenly Bodies, which poffibly may need Recruits fome fuch way, and fo Angels Food may be more than a Metaphor. But certainly they cannot Eat after our manner, nor Feed on our gross Diet, except in appearance only; they may make a shew of doing it, as the Angel Raphael told Tobit that he did, Tob. 12. 19. All these Days I did appear uuto you, but I did neither Eat nor Drink, but you did see a Vision) but really they do it not: So that when Abraham's and Lot's Angels are faid to Eat and Drink with them, the Scripture speaks as to them it seemed. And to the Jerusalem Targum reads, And they seemed as if they did Eat and Drink. And we may suppose that Mens Conceptions tions of Angels were not very refined in those Days, nor could they have born their sensible and free Converses, if they had lookt on them as Creatures of a Nature so distant from their own.

And therefore afterward, when they were better underftood, those to whom they appeared were ftruck with great dread and amazement, and thought they should presently Die. Nor do we, as I remember, read any more of the Angels Eating or Drinking, after, what seemed to Abraham and Lot. Indeed Manoah invited the Angel to Eat, Judg. 13. 15. but it was before he knew he was an Angel, and it is set down in excuse of the offer, v. 16. For Manoah knew not that he was an Angel of the Lord, implying, that the Invitation had been absurd if he had known it.

I have faid this in Answer to the Objection, though the main Cause is not concerned; for though I should grant that Abra-bam's and Lot's Angels were Men, yet the other Instances in which that could not be faid or supposed, are more than enough to carry my Point, That real Angels, Inhabitants of the invisible World, did fometimes sensibly appear.

SECT. IV.

That Angels are still ministring Spirits as well as of old.

B UT it will be faid, when they did appear, it was upon Divine Errands, and God fent them to ferve the ends of his Government and Providence; which I grant, and God Almighty hath the fame ends to ferve ftill, he Governs the World now, and his Providence is as watchful as ever, and the Angels are the chief Ministers of that Providence, and ministring Spirits for our good. The Gospel was ushered in by the Apparition of Angels, and many things done by them in the carrying of it on; and why we should think they may not be fent, and should not appear on occasion now, I do not fee; but this is more than I need fay yet, being for the first step only to show, that Spirits have transacted with Men.

SECT. V.

Proof from the Apparitions of evil Spirits, recorded in Scripture.

THole I have mentioned hitherto, have been good and be-nign Spirits, but evil Spirits have also appeared, and fennign Spirits, but evil Spirits have also appeared, and fenfibly had to do with Mankind. My first Instance of this, is one of the first Businesses that was in the World, the Temptation of Eve by the Devil in the Serpent; an Argument, which those that adhere to the Letter of those three first Chapters cannotavoid. Evil Angels were sent among the Egyptians, Pfal. 78. 49. and those passed through and imote the Land ; but the Defrovers viz. the evil Angels were not permitted to come into the Ifraelites Houses, Exod. 12. 23. When God asked Satan whence he came, Job. 1. 7. he answered, from going to and fro in the Earth. By Divine Permiffion he railed the great Wind that blew down the House upon Job's Children, v. 19. and fmore his Body all over with Boils, Job 2. 7. He tempted our Saviour in an external fensible way, carrying him from place to place, and urging the Son of God to Worship him, Mat. 4. But more of this will appear by confidering the fecond Head proposed, viz. Possession of evil Spirits.

SECT. VI.

Proofs from Posseffions of evil Spirits, and that they were not Diseases, as the Witch-Advocates would have them.

THAT fuch Posseficients have been, we find frequently and plainly delivered in the Hiftory of the Gospel, and so often, that I shall not need to recite Particulars. The Evasion that the Witch-Advocates have for this, is, That the Devils and anclean Spirits spoken of in those places, which our Saviour is faid to have cast out, were strange and uncommon Difeases, which the Jews thought to be Devils, and Christ who same came not to teach Men Philosophy, complyed with their deceived Apprehension, and the Evangelists speak according to their Conceit in this Matter. But if this Answer must pass, then in the first place, Farewel all Scripture, it may be made to fay what we pleafe; and if when the Scripture speaks in a plain History of unclean Spirits and Devils, we may understand Discares by it, then what we read of good Angels may be Graces and Vertues, and what we read of Chrift himself, may all be interpreted of the Christ within, and so all the Scripture, and all Religion shall fignifie what any Man thinks fit.

Secondly, the Cure of Difeates is mentioned in many of the Texts, diffinctly from the cafting out of the Devils, thus Mat. 10. 1. He gave the Disciples power against unclean Spirits to cast them out, and to heal all manner of Sickneffes, and all manner of Difeases. This was a different Power from the former, and all manner of Sickneffes and Difeafes, implies the uncommon and extraordinary, which our Sadducees would have the Devils to be, viz. Difeafes, as well as the ordinary and usual ones are. So Luke 6. 18. He healed them of their Difeases, and those that were vexed with unclean Spirits were brought to him, and be healed them likewi/e. And most plainly, Mat. 4. 24. And they brought unto him all fick People, that were taken with divers Difeases and Torments, and those that were possessed with Devils. and those that were Lunatick, and those that had the Palsie, and he healed them. The Mad-men, and those that had the Fallingfickness, the Distempers which the Witch-Advocates make Devils of, are here mentioned apart, and as diffinct from those Devils our Saivour cast out.

So Luke. 4.33. In the Synagogue there was a Man that had a Spirit of an unclean Devil, and cried out with a loud Voice, faying, faying, Let us alone, &c. Well, but might not this be the Man bimfelf that cried out fo? Therefore read a little on, v. 35: And Jefus rebuked him, viz. him that fpake, faying to the fame ftill, Hold thy peace, and come aut of him. Which must be another Perion diffinct from the Man himfelf, and who was that? It follows, And when the Devil had thrown him in the midft, he came out of him, the fame Devil that fpake; that our Saviour rebuked, and commanded to come out, which could be no other than a real evil Spirit.

And that those ejected Devils were not Difeases appears farther, Mat. 12. v. 22. There was brought unto bim, one possess farther, Devil, blind and Dumb, and he healed him, infomuch (to wit, the consequence of the ejecting the Devil was) that the blind and dumb both spake and saw. The Pharises v. 24. impute this cafting out Devils to a Confedercy with Beelzebub the Prince of the Devils; our Saviour there argues, that then Satan should be divided against himself; namely, Beelzebub the chief, against the inferiour Devils that he cast out, who are of his Kingdom; and doing the work of it; for there it follows, That bis Kingdom could not stand, v. 26. These things will be hardly applyed to Diseases, Fourthly and laftly, If the Evangelift fhould call Difeafes Devils, and unclean Spirits, and speaking of casting out Devils in an Hiftory with all the plainnefs and expressness of Words, Phrase, and Circumstance, that such an action could be defcribed by, and yet mean nothing of it, what would this fuggeft, but that they fally ascribed to Christ Wonders that he never did, and confequently, that they were Lyars and Deceivers, and vain Impostors? For clear it is, that whoever shall read those Passages in the Gospel, without a pre-posselt Opinion, will be led into this Belief by them, that our Saviour did really caft Devils out of Perfons posseft. And if there be really no fuch thing as Poffeffion by evil Spirits, but only Difeafes by the ignorant and credulous People taken for futh; then the Hiftory imposeth on us, and leads Men into a perfuafion of things done by the Power of Chrift that never were. And what Execution this will do upon the Truth and Credit of the whole Hiftory, is very easie to understand.

SECT. VII.

That the Witch-Advocates cannot elude Scripture Testimony of Possessing to evil Spirits, by faing it-speaks according to the received Opinions of Men.

I But the Scripture doth, we know, fpeak often according to the received Opinion of Men, though they are Errors, which it is not concerned to rectifie, when they concern no Morality or Religion.

But first, The Doctrine of Spirits and Devils was not the received Opinion of all the Jews. The Sadducees, a confiderable Sect, were of another Mind. So that the Stories of ejecting luch, must look to them as Impostors; and the Scriptures were not only for the Jews, and for that particular time alone, but for all Places, and all Ages. Most of which have no such use of calling Disease Devils, and among them, the History must either convey a false Opinion, or lose the Reputation of its Truth.

Secondly, Though the Scripture doth not vary from the common Forms of Speech, where they are grounded upon harmlefs and leffer Miftakes, yet when fuch are great and dangerous, prejudicial to the Glory of God, and Intereft of Religion, it is then much concerned to reform and rectify fuch Errors: And according to the Belief of the Witch-Advocates, the Doctrine of Poffeffions is highly fuch, for it leads to the Opinion of Witcheraft, which they make fuch a difinal and tragical Error, Blafphemy, an abominably Idolatrous, yea an Atheiftical Doctrine, the grand Apoftafie, the greateft that ever was or can be, that which cuts off Chrift's Head, and Un-Gods him, renounceth Chrift and God, and owns the Devil, and makes him equal to them, &c. As the Author of the Grand Apoftafie raves.

And Mr. Webster faith little less of this Opinion in his Preface, viz. That it tends to advance Superstition and Popery, is derogatory to the Wisdom, Justice, and Providence of the Almighty, tending to cry up the Power of the Kingdom of Darknels, to question the Verity of the principal Articles of the Christian Christian Faith, concerning the Refurrection of Christ, and generally tends to the obstructing of Godliness and Piety.

And Mr. Wagstaffe loads it with as dreadful Imputations in his Preface; as that it doth neceffarily infer plurality of Gods, by attributing Omnipotent effects to more than one, and that it suppose the many Omnipotents, and many Omnifcients. If any thing of this be so, certainly our Saviour's inspired Hittorians would not have connived at, much less would they have spoken in the Phrase; that suppose that encourage the common Error, that leads to such an horrid Opinion.

SECT. VIII.

An Answer to an Objection, from Christ's not mentioning his casting out Devils to John's Disciples; amongst other Miracles.

B UT faith the Author of the Grand Apostafie, p. 34. our Saviour himself in his Answer to the Disciples of John the Baptist, Luke 7. doth not pretend to the casting out Devils, but only the cure of Discafes, and raising the Dead. To which I fay, First, We may not argue Negatively from Scripture in such Matters, and certainly we ought not to argue from filence in one place, against plain Affirmations in many.

Secondly, our Saviour Answers in reference to the things he was then doing; when the Disciples of John came to him, v. 21. And in that fame hour, he cured many of their Infirmities and Plagues. Evil Spirits, it must be confessed, are also mentioned. Some of those Diseases, 'tis like, were occasioned by Evil Spirits, as Mat. 12. 22. the Blindness and Dumbness of the possession of the was. And then the Ejestion of the Evil Spirit is implyed, when the Disease is faid to be Cured.

Thirdly, The Business of John's Disciples, was to enquire whether he was the Meffiah, and it was fit our Saviour in his Answer, should give such Proofs of his being so, as were plain and palpable. Go your way, faith he, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard, Luke 7. 22. They had heard him Preach the Gospel it is like, and had seen him Cure Discases. These things were plain and sensible, and could admit of no Dispute Dispute or Doubt. But whether the Distempers Christ then healed, were inflicted by evil Spirits, and whether those were cast out in the Cure, did not plainly appear at that time. Our Saviour therefore did not bid them mention that Instance to their Master John, because they could not testifie it on their own Knowledge, as they could the things themselves faw and heard.

SECT. IX.

An Answer to two more Objections; the one, that St. John mentions no casting out Devils in his Gospel; the other, that to have a Devil, and to be Mad are Synonyma's.

B UT the Paffionate Witch-Advocate goes on. St. John the Evangelift. who especially sets himself upon the Proof of the Godhead of Christ, hints nothing of his Ejecting Devils. Which one would think should be no Proof, since the other Three do; and St. John chiefly supplyed what they omirted. And since this Evangelist for particularly sets himself upon the Proof of Christ's Divinity, he mentions no Miracles, which were the Pooof, but such as were sensible and indisputable. And our Author himself, after p. 41. faith, That the Cure of Diseases was more for Christ's Honour, and the Proofs of his Godhead, than the casting out Devils could have been : For possibly, faith he, in that there might have been some probable grounds of the Pharisses Blasshemy, that he cast out Devils by Beelzebub.

So that he Anfwers and Contradicts himself at once; for p. 34. he faith. It had been a great over-fight in St. John to neglect fuch an Argument, if fuch a thing had ever been, this would have proved him to have been God indeed, and his Power paramount above all Principalities and Powers, Sc. p. 35. And yet now, Curing Difeafes proves it better, and the calting out Devils will fearce do it all, fince it might, adds he, be in tome fort credible, that he did it by Favour, Connivance, Compliance, Complotment, which is upon the borders of the higheft Blaiphemy.

Again

Again it is alledged by this Writer, that to have a Devil, and to be mad, feem to be Synonyma's in Scripture p. 35. I answer, Possechington begot a certain wavis furor, and madnels; and therefore when any were extravagant, the Jews faid in common Speech, that they had a Devil, as we do, The Devil is in you, that is, you act unreasonably and madly. But as we do not mean by this Metaphorical Possection to exclude the belief of a real, fo neither did they. Yea, the very Phrase, hath a Devil, or the Devil is in him, applyed to those that act furiously and unadvisedly, doth imply that there is such a real thing as diabolical Possection, to which madnels and extreme folly are refembled.

See then how the Patrons of Witches argue, The Jews fometimes used the baving a Devil Metaphorically; therefore there are no other Posself forms, or therefore all those passages of Scripture, in which they are literally and plainly related, intend no other. Indeed if we argue from meer words and expressions of having Devils and casting out Devils, there would be somewhat of more colour in our Adversaries reasoning. But fince we infer chiefly from plain circumstances of History and Fact, there is no force at all in it.

SECT. X.

B UT what doth this Writer mean, when he tells us $\Delta \omega \mu \omega^{i}$ vior can fcarce fignifie any thing elfe properly, but an unusual affliction from God, fuch as madnefs; when all Men and Boys know that Substantively it is the fame with $\Delta \omega \mu \omega r Da$ mon, taken already in Scripture in an ill fenfe for an impure Spirit. Adjectively it fignifies fometimes Divinum quid, but fo it is not underftood in the places we difpute about, Luk. 4. 35. When the Devil had thrown him, the poffeffed Man, in the midft, he came out of him, the word is to $\Delta \omega \mu \omega r \omega$. The fame v. 33. is called $\pi v \omega \omega \omega d \omega \mu \omega r \omega d \omega$. i to be underftood Subftantively for a Person, viz, an Evil Spirit. So in the Story of the Devils entring into the Herd of Swine, Lukt 8. Luke 8. 33. the word we translate Devils is no das ubrie, called v. 29. Avenua and Jug Tov, and the fame, Matth. 8. 29. Daiwors. Befides the force of which words, I have the that the Story also determines them to a Substantive and Personal meaning.

But the Author faith, That Acquisitor can hardly with propriety fignifie any thing elfe but an extraordinary affliction. from God, because of its derivation from Mainur, p. 37. One would wonder at the confidence of these Men, especially in their pretended Criticisms, by which they would impose what fense upon words they pleafe. Auury it is notorioufly known fignifies Damon, taken often in the ill sense, and so particularly in the place newly mentioned, deriving from Acia fcio, which degenerates here, as in Saga, Witch, Wizard and the like, and what then should this Author by this mean?

SECT. XI.

Whether there were no feats performed by the Demoniacks in the Gospels, but Mad-men might perform.

T is further Objected by this Writer, that there are no Feats I Recorded of those supposed Demoniacks, but what Mad-men could perform and often do. In which he confidered not the Spirits in the Poffest, in the Country of the Gergasens, Matthe 8. 29. St. Mark and St. Luke write Gadarens, the Countries lye near together. Josephus reckons Gadara among the Grecian Cities which Pompey took from the Jews, and according to him the People were mostly Syrians.

In this Country where our Saviour had not been before nor after, that we read, two poffest with Devils who had lived among the Tombs, out of the Conversation of Mankind met him, and prefently cried out ; What have we to do with thee, Jefus, thou Son of God, art thou come to tarment us before the times Was there nothing now beyond the rate of ordinary Mad-men in this? How did they, who lived in fuch a difmal folitude among the Tombs, in a place where no Man paffed, come to know this was Jefus, who never had been thereabout before, as far as we can hear ? Or how came those Mad-men to know, and and utter fuch a great truth, which our Saviour did not prefently publish, that he was the Son of God? Did any come near to whisper this in their Ear? Or was this a raving fancy only? Sr. Mark writes (who speaks but of a single Demoniack) that when he saw Jesus afar off, he came and wors bipped him, He knew him prefently and understood his true condition before most of the Jews about him; and even some of his own Disciples did. Could a meer Mad-man have done so? But further they expected torment, and from him, in the time to come, though they looked not for it so foon. Art thou come to torment us before the time? How applicable is this to the condition of evil Spirits and their expectations?

We have a like acknowledgment of our Saviour from another unclean Spirit, Mark 1. 24, I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God. And our Saviour in what he faith, in answer plainly, implies it was the Evil Spirit, not the Mad-man that spake, or at least caused the confession. Hold thy peace and come out of him. v. 25. And that the Demoniacks did things beyond the force of meer Mad-men is further sufficiently declared in the History, Mark 5. No Man could bind him, no not with Chains; because he had been often bound with Fetters and Chains, and the Chains had been pluckt in funder by him. I would fain know, whether this be not beyond the force of meer natural madness?

ADVERTISEME NT.

HItherto the Paper was the fame, and the Hand the fame, and fo far of the Copy transcribed. Afterward the Hand alters, and is Mr. Glanvil's own Hand, but with an Hiatus of above half a Sheet of unwrit Paper between, but the Number of the Pages is continued. Something there was to intervene, to make a more full Connexion; but yet what follows, is of the fame fuit, and produced po prove out of Scripture the Negotiation of Evil Spirits with their Clients.

SECT. XII.

Farther proof of the Negotiation of Evil Spirits with their Clients from the History of the Magicians of Egypt; Mr. Wagstaffe, Mr. Webster, and the Author of The Doctrines of Devils, their Evalions propoled and answered.

IN the General, they all fay the fame thing ; viz. That the Magicians were Jugglers, who by their Tricks and Legerdemain, imposed upon Pharoab and the Agyptians. Mr. Wagstaffe is fo modelt, as not to describe the manner of the perfor-But Mr. Webster thus ; The Magicians holding a Rod in mance, their hands, and feeming to throw it down upon the ground, how foon might they throw down an Artificial Serpent in its flead and immediately and unperceivably make conveyance of the Rod, p. 154. This is his feat : and for the Changing Water into Blood, and the producing of Frogs he faith, they were fo eafie to be done after the fame manner, that they need not any particular explication, p. 155. This is the main answer, after a great deal of Impertinence, and Mr. Webster hath done his businefs.

But the Author of The Dostrine of Devils, hath devifed a more particular way for this Juggle. 'Tis probable, he faith that these Men having the Art or Knack of Making, Graving, or Carving the Pictures of Men, Beasts, Serpents, Reptiles, &c. had the Feat alfo of Colouring, Painting Fucuffing of them alfo, and fo might eafily, especially in the dark, or by the Juggling Feats at the Text intimates, make a Rod look like a Serpent, &c. p. 114. But befides these Knavish Painters, the Man hath found other Jugglers to help on the Deceit; Subtle and politick Oratours, who with fallacious Arguments, cunning pretences, and plausible Rhetorick could fo difguise Truth, and flourish upon Knavery and Falshood, that Falfhood frould feem Truth, and Truth Falfhood, p. 115.

Whatever the Magicians of Pharoah were, any one that confiders these Answers, would take the Framers of them for Colourers, Changers, Perverters of the Face of thing, as this Author fpeaks, cunning Oratours, Jugglers, Hocus-Pocus, Hiccius-, Doccius, whip ! the Serpents, Blood and Frogs are gone. But let us look a little nearer to the bufinels, and to these fubrle R 3 men, men, Witches of Oratours, and examine what they tell us in the light of the Text and impartial Reason.

The Text faith, Aaron caft down his Rod before Pharaoh, and before his Servants, and it became a Serpent, v. 10. and v. 11. 12. The Magicians of Egypt, they alfo did in like manner with their Enchantments For they caft down every man his Rod and they became Serpents, but Aaron's Rod fwallowed up their Rods. Now, fay the Witch-Advocates, the Magicians were Jugglers; they did not in like manner, they did not caft down their Rods, but made conveyance of them, they were not Serpents but Pictures. Which are plain contradictions to the Text, arbitrary Figments, that have no ground. And if Men may feign what they will, and put what borrowed fenfe they please upon plain Relations of FaCt, all History will be a Nose of Wax, and be eafily shaped as the Interpreter has a mind to have it.

Secondly, Is this were fo, and the Serpents were but Artificial Pictures; itis ftrange, that neither Pharaoh, nor his Servants fhould perceive the difference between the Carved and Painred Serpents and the real ones; except they fuppofe also that Pharaoh contrived the bufines in a dark Room on purpofe, as the Author of The Dostrine of Devils feems to intimate. And tis ftranger yet, that neither Mofes nor Maron that was concerned to detect the Imposture that was fo gross and thick, should not differentiat, of if they did, its as ftrange, that they should keep the Jugglers counsel, and fay nothing of it.

Thirdly, Aarons Serpents are faid to have fwallowed up those of the Magicians. What, did they fwallow the Wiars and Pictures? It feems they were very artificially done indeed, that the true Serpents mistook them for real ones, as the Birds once did the Painted Grapes. But it would be more wonderful yet, if all were but the Oratory of the Magiciant, for then the Serpents are their Words and Rhetorick.

Fourthly, Moles and Aaron turned the Rivers into Blood, v. 20. and the Magicians of Egypt did fo with their Enchantments, v. 22. They caufed Frogs to come up, and to cover the Land, Ch. 8. v. 6. and the Magicians did fo, and brought up Frogs on the Land of Egypt, v 7. Now how did the Jugglers do this, with Painting and Fucuffing; or how, by Legerdemain and Slight of Hand were the Waters made Blood, and the Frogs brought up out of the Rivers on the Land? To turn a little Water into the appearance of Blood, was not the thing that was like to what Moles and Aaron did, and to fhew an Artificial Frog, Two or Three was not bringing up of Frogs on the Land of Egypt, which implies, multitudes that covered the ground. So that the the Hocus-Poeus Tricks, and Juggling and Painting will not colour this part of the Story. And I should wonder at Mr. Webfler, if he did not afford so than y ocacsions of wondring at him, when he passed this so flightly over saying, p. 15.5-as to the chang ing Water into Blood, and the producing of Frogs, they were so easier to be done after the same manner, viz. by Wiars and Juggling, that they need not any particular explication, for by this the manner of their performance may most easily be understood. How shall one deal with these Men, and what will not their confidence affirm?

Fifthly, 'Tis very ftrange also how those Jugglers should know what figns Moses and Aaron would shew, and accordingly furnished themselves with counterfeit Serpents, Blood and Frogs against the time; or had they those always in their Pockets? If not, it was great luck for them that Moses and Aaron should shew those very Miracles first, that they were provided to imitate.

Sixthly and Laftly. If the Magicians did all this by Tricks and Juggling, may not one fear what Opinion these Men have of the same things done by Moss and Aaron? These indeed out-did the others in divers following Instances, but may not they fay, that that was by their having more Cunning and Dexterity in the Art of Juggling? If they or their Profelytes have a mind to fay thus, they may by their Principles, which will serve them to elude the History, in reference to Moss and Maron, as well as it doth in relation to the Magicians. They may with as much modestry turn all into Allegory and Metaphor.

I think by all this it appears, that this fhift of the Witch-Advocates is very vain, and that what the Magicians did, was not mere Juggling, much lefs only Politick Oratory and Rhetorick. As if those Magicians by their Eloquence could perfuade Pharoah and his Servants against their Senses, as these Patrons of Witches endeavour to do by us they being the greatest Witches in their own sense that are extant, and some of them are belyed, if they are not so in other senses.

SECT. XIII.

That what the Magicians of Egypt did perform, was at least by an Implicit Confederacy with Evil Spirits.

WELL! If there be any truth in the Hiftory the Magicians were not only Couzeners and Hocus-Pocus Men; therewas fomething done that was extraordinary beyond Mans Art and Contrivance, or the effects of ordinary Nature. And therefore must have either God or some Spirit or Damon, one or more for the Author. The former no one faith ; the Hand of God in this was only permiffive. Therefore it is plain the Magicians did this by Spirits, Creatures of the Invisible World. The Text laith, by their Enchantments, per arcana, the vulgar Latin reads Which because it is a general word, Mr. Wagstaffe takes hold of it of it, and determines it to fecret and fly Trick, those of Legerdemain and Couzenage, when as it is as applicable to any kind of fecret (and fo to the Diabolical Art and Confederacy) as to his fense. And that it is fo to be understood here, is plain from the matter of the History. By those arcana (others read, incantationes, veneficia) they did those strange, things, viz. by fecret Confederacy with Spirits, they obliged them to perform the wonders.

But what did the Spirits do, were the Serpents Blood and Frogs real or apparent only ? I am not obliged to fay, who is of one Opinion, and who of another in this, it matters not. The reality of the performance is most easily and most fuitable to the facred Story, and there is no difficulty in conceiving that Spirits might fuddenly convey Serpents, with which \mathcal{Agypt} abounded into the place of the Rods, which they might unperceivably fnatch away after they were thrown down; This they could do, though the Magicians of themselves could not. And they might be provided for the performances by knowing the Command God had given Moses and Aaron, concerning the things he would have them do; which the Magicians could not know, at least but by them.

And for the Blood and the Frogs, they might by Infufion, or a Thoufand ways that we cannot tell, make the Water to all appearance Bloody, or perhaps really transmute fome (we know know not the extent of their powers.) And to bring up the Frogs from the Lakes and the Rivers, was no hard thing for them to effect, though impossible for the Magicians to do by Tricks of Juggling. We fee the fence of the History is plain, and easie in our way, but forced, harsh, contradictious, and most absurd in the Interpretation of the Hag-Advocates.

To make the Inference from these Magicians to my point, yet more plain and demonstrative, I shall further take notice, that if we do not suppose a confederacy, and formal compact between them and the Spirits they act by, it must at least be granted that those Magicians had a way to obliege them to act, either by Words or Ceremonies, which they have bound themfelves to attend in order to further familiarity with the perfons that so employ them, and at last to explicit Compacts: And even this is sufficient for what I would infer.

I have thus difpatcht a great Argument briefly, and yet I hope fully; Mr. Webster is after his manner very volumnious about it. But all he hath said in Five or Six Leaves in Folio to the purpose, is in those few Lines I have recited. All the reft is sense in the set of the ves, and Passives, Macassa Hartunning, Talismans, wonderful Cures, and the vertues of Planes, telling Stories, and citing storage from this Man, and from that, all which serve only for Oftentation, and the Deception of the injudicious, but fignific nothing to any purpose of Reasoning.

SECT. XIV.

The other grand Instance of Confederacy with Evil Spirits, in the Witch of Endor, whom Saul confulted. A brief and plain Narration of the Story.

I Come to another grand Inftance, viz. that of the Witch of Endor. The Story of her is related, 1 Sam. 28. and is briefly thus Samuel was dead v. 3, and the Philiftines gathered themfelves against Saul, and pitcht in Gilboa, v. 4. Saul on this was much afraid, v. 5, and enquired of the Lord, but had no answer from him, v. 6. Upon this he bid his Servants find him out out a Woman that had a Familiar Spirit, that he might enquire of her. They told him of one at Endor, v. 7. He difguifed himfelf, and with two Men by night went to her, defired her to divine unto him by her Familiar Spirit, and to bring up him whom he fhould name, v. 8. The Woman first excufed her felf minding him how dangerous fuch a bufinels might be to her, fince Saul had cut off those that had Familiar Spirits, and the Wizzards out of the Land. So that the was afraid that this Proposition of his was a fnare for her Life, v.9. But Saul affured her by swearing, that no harm should come to her for this thing, v. 10.

She then askt him whom the thould bring up, and he faid bring me up Samuel, v. 11. Samuel accordingly begins to appear, and when the Woman faw him, the cried with a loud voice being much furprized, it feems, to fee Samuel in good earneft, whom the probably expected not, but fome Familiar in his likenefs. By this the knew Saul, v. 12. He heartens her again, and asks whom the faw. She answers, the faw Gods Ascending out of the Earth, an usual Hebrais, the Plural for the Singular Number, Gods to wit, a Spirit, v. 13, Saul asks what Form he was of, the answered, an Old Man cometh up and he is covered with a Mantle. Then Saul perceived it was Samuel, and he bowed himself to the ground, v. 14.

Samuel, ask't why he had disquieted him to bring him up ? He declares the distress he was in, and his defire to know what he was to do, v. 15. Samuel reproves him, and declares his Fate, viz. That the Lord had rent the Kingdom from him, and given it to David, v. 17. That the Israelites should be delivered into the hands of the Philistines, and that Saud and his Sons should to morrow be with him, viz. in the state of the Dead, as eventually it was, v. 19. This is the History, and one would think it speaks very plainly, but nothing is plain to prejudice. The Patrons of Witches labour hard to avoid this evidence, and I shall propose and confider their shifts and flights of answering.

SECT. XV.

The Evaluan of Mr. Reginald Scot, concerning the Witches Closet proposed and confuted.

MR. Reginald Scot, the Father of the modern Witch-Ad-vocates, orders the matter thus. When Saul, faith he, had told her that he would have Samuel brought up to him, the departed from his Prefence into her Clofer, where doubtless the had her Familiar, to wit, fome lewd crafty Prieft, and made Saul stand at the Door like a Fool, (as it were with his Finger in a hole) to hear the couzening Anfwers, but not to fee the couzening Handling thereof, and the counterfeiting of the matter. And fo goeth the to work, using ordinary Words of Conjuration, Sc. fo belike, after many fuch Words spoken, the faith to her felf; Lo! now the matter is brought to pais : I fee wonderful things: So as Saul hearing these Words longed to know all, and askt her what the faw; whereby you know that Saul faw nothing, but ftood without like a Mome, whil'ft fhe plaid her part in her Clofer, as may most evidently appear by the 21 Verse of this Chapter, where it is faid, Then the Woman came out to Saul, &c. Scot, p. 108.

Now this is not Interpreting a Story, but making one; for we read nothing of her Clofet, or her going from Saul into it, nothing of the crafty Priest the had there, or of Saul's ftanding at the Door like a Fool, like a drowned Puppy, as Mr. Webfter has it, (very refpectful Language for a Prince in diffrefs) nothing of the Words of Conjuration, or of the Womans talk to her felf, but all this is Whimfie and Fiction.

And according to this way of Interpreting, a Man may make what he will of all the Hiftories in the Bible, yea in the World. If one may fupply, and put in what he pleafeth, any thing may be made any thing.

But Mr. Scot faith, it evidently appears, that Saul faw nothing, but ftayed without like a Mome, whilft fhe played her Part in her Clofet. It evidently appears by the 21 Verfc of this Chapter, where 'tis faid, Then the Woman came out unto Saul. Is it not evident from bence, that fhe had a Clofet, how elfe fhould fhe come out ? But the milchief of it is, there is nothing of coming out in the Text, or any Version of it : Our Translation 20 is, And the Woman came unto Saul. The vulgar Latin, Ingreffa ef?, fhe came in, which implies that the went out of Doors, rather than into her Cloler. The Septuagint read eton Sev in jourd, being the fame fenfe with the vulgar Latin. The Chaldee Paraphrase fimply free came, so the Syriack and Arabick; but we find nothing of coming out any where but in the Difcoverer; so that here is a Text made two, as well as many a groundles Comment.

But whether the only came to Saul, or in or out to him, it matters not much, for it implies only, that the withdrew, while Saul communed with Samuel, out of refpect, and after the Communication the returned, and found the King in great Dilorder, and what is this to a Clofet?

SECT. XVI.

Two of Mr. Webster's Arguments for the Witches Closet proposed and answered.

B UT Mr. Webster perfues the Business in the behalf of the Discoverer; First, If they were in the same Room, and Samuel a visible Object, how comes it to pass, that Saul faw him not? Mr. Glanvil faith he, must pump to find it out ; p. 169. But doth not Mr. Webster know, that it is usual in Apparitions, (and he owns there are such) for the Spirit to appear to one, when it is not visible to another, though in the fame Room, and every ways capable of feeing? In the famous Story of Walker and Sharp, recited by him, p. 299, 300. which he confesseth to be of undoubted Verity, he faith, It was reported, that the Apparition did appear in Court to the Judge, or Fore man of the Jury, (and I have from others Hands very credible Attestation that it was fo) but the reft faw nothing, Many other well-attested Relations of this kind, speak of the like, and there are innumerable Stories of People that have their Second-fight, as they call it, to wit, a Faculty of feeing Spectres, when others cannot difcern them. In which there is nothing either impossible or unlikely : And why then should there be need of fo much pumping to Answer this Objection?

Samuel

Samuel it feems, appeared to the Woman a little before Saul faw him, fhewing himfelf fo, it may be, to prepare Saul for the terrible Sight by degrees, left the fuddennefs of it might have affrighted him into an incapacity of hearing whathe had to fay to him: Or it may be, the Body of the Woman, or fome other thing in the Room might interpole between Saul and the first appearance of Samuel, or he might be at an unfit diftance, or out of due light to fee prefently as fhe did; fo that there is no need of fuppofing them to be in two Rooms on this account.

Secondly, He argues farther for the Clofet or another Room: The Woman cried out with a loud Voice when the faw Samuel: What need of that, faith he, if they were in one Room, might not an ordinary Tone make him to have heard her? 'Tis like it might, but that was not the caufe of her crying out, but her furprize to fee Samuel, (if it were the real Samuel) when the expected only her Familiar, appearing in fome refemblance of him; and 'tislike there were circumstances in this Apparition, which the had never feen before, that might on the fudden affright and amaze her. And if it were Samuel indeed, which is very probable, the fight of him, affured her that the enquirer was Saul; for though the might not conclude it prefently from his requiring her to raife Samuel, yet when he really and unexpectedly appeared, it was plain that he was come upon fome great Errand, and with whom could he probably have fuch Bufinels as with Saul? So that the feeing him, the importance of his Appearance, and the Relation he had to Saul, brought the King prefently to her Mind, and with him her Fears, and that this was one caule of her crying out, is plainly intimated in the next Words; And the Woman spake to Saul, faying, Why haft thou deceived me, for thou art Saul, v. 12. And that the was affrighted at that Knowledge, is implied in Sauls affuring her again against her Fears, in his immediate Answer. And the King faid unto her, be not afraid, v. 13.

Befides this, there is another thing that may be collected from the Text, which might occasion her aftonishment and crying out; for as foon as Saul had faid, Bring me up Samuel, v. 11: it immediately follows, v. 12. And when the Woman faw Samuel, she cryed with a loud Voice. It feems, he appeared before the had performed her usual Conjurations (fo little ground is there for what Mr. Scot talks of her Words of Conjuration, and those the fpake to her felf) and upon that the was furprized and affrighted,

Proof of Apparitions, &c.

SECT. XVII.

Other Arguments of Mr. Webster, for a Room diftinct from that Saul was in, proposed and answered.

M.R. Webster's third Argument to prove a Closet, is that it had been incongruous for Saul to have askt, what fawest thou? if they had been in one Room : But what is the incongruity, or what the wonder, if one in his condition should speak incongruously?

His Fourth and Fifth Arguments are to prove, that Saul had yet feen nothing, when he askt the Woman upon her Our-cry, what the had feen. They prove that the faw the Apparition first; which is granted, but her being in another Room, cannot thence be inferred, as I have thewn, though that be the thing he thould make out, or all is impertinent.

The Sixth Argument is, That after all, Samuel was but coming up. An old Man cometh up, which proves nothing for Mr. Webster, but against him; for now, she shews him to Saul; the faw the first beginning of his appearing, which Saut did not, When he was rifen higher out of the Earth, the thews him to the King, who 'tis faid, perceived then it was Samuel, and bowed himself, v. 14. which is very easie and congruous, applied to one and the fame Room. And what then makes Mr. Webfter infult in the Conclusion of this Argument in these Words: Now let Mr. Glanvil confider, and answer whether it be not only intimated, but clearly holden forth in the Text, that either they were in two Rooms, or that nothing visible did appear before Saul, p. 171. His leeing nothing at first, I grant, but the two Rooms there is no ground for, and he doth not prove it. Whether he did not see Samuel after, I shall not now enquire. Hitherto I have nothing to do, but with the conceit of the Clofet, or the other Room which Mr. Scot made for the Woman, and Mr. Webster endeavours to uphold, with much good Will, but little Succefs.

SECT. XVIII.

Convincing Arguments brought, to prove that Saul faw Samuel, which frustrates the Figment of two Rooms.

A FTER all, if he really faw the Apparition, the Figment of the two Rooms is gone, or at least fignific nothing to their purpole; this the Text intimates plainly. She faid, An old Man cometh up, and he is covered with a Mantle; and it follows, And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, and he flooped with his Face to the ground, and bowed himself, v. 14.

He perceived is was Samuel, he perceived it, faith Mr. Webster, by the Description of the Woman. But she had only faid. An old Man cometh up, covered with a Mantle : This is but a yery general Description, why must that needs notifie Samuel Could the Devil represent no other old Man in a Mantle, or could none of the Dead appear to but Samuel only ? By thefe Words alone, Saul could not certainly perceive that it was her buthe perceived this fo, that he could not but know and acknowledge it, as the Hebrew Word feems to imply. I fay this Word [perceived] implies more than bare feeing. 'Tis that and somewhat else, viz. that he faw him so, as to be convinced that it was he indeed; the Judgment was added to the Senfe. So that Mr. Webster's Objection, that the Word [/am] it was Samuel, is of no weight, he [perceived] implies, that he fam it to as to be affured. If the faying of the Woman had been all, the affurance had been none at all, and Saul could not have perceived or understood any certainty of the thing from it.

But Secondly, It appears yet farther, that his perceiving did imply seeing; for, he stooped with his Face to the ground, and howed himself: Now what did Saul make this respectful Reverence to, if he faw nothing? Was it to Samuel in his Fancy? Mr. Webster faith, Surely in rational consequence it could be nothing elfe, p. 171. This is fomething an unufual Courtence to have Ideas and Imaginations. But Mr. Webster gives a Reason: All that the Woman had done and faid, being undeniable Lyes and Cheats, this also in just "right and reason must be judged to be so also. Which is assuming the thing to be proved,

SECT. XIX.

That it was a real Apparition, not a confederate Knave, as Mr. Webster fancies, that Saul faw and did Obeysance to.

B UT did she not turn out her confederate Knave to act the Part of Samuel? and was not this he to whom Saul bowed? This Mr. Webster offers as part of his Answer. The Woman, v. 14. describes Samuel in the Form of an old Man covered with a Mantle; such a shape she must have put the confederate Knave into. It may be it was an old Fellow, or she made him look like old; but let that pass; but where got she the Mantle? A Sacerdotal Habiliment it was, according to Jofephus. Had the Woman a Wardrobe of all Habits for all purposes? Or was it some short Cloak of her own that she threw on him? We will suppose either that will ferve Mr. Webster's turn best. But how did the Fellow himself, or the old Quean for him, change his Visage into the likenels of Samuel, or how alter his Voice, so as to make Saul, who well knew Samuel, to believe it was even he? These are hard Questions.

But if we should so far gratifie Mr. Scot, Mr. Webster, and the reft, as not to press with such untoward Queries; yet one cannot chuse but ask how the confederate Knave came to foretel truly fuch contingent things, as that the Ifraelites fhould be vanquifhed by the Philiftines, and Saul and his Sons flain on the Morrow, as v. 19. How could the Cheat, or the Woman in a-'nother Room tell this? Why ! faith Mr. Wagstaffe, he spake it at a venture, and he or the Witch gave a shrewd guess to the Sequel, faith Mr. Scot. but what ground was there for conjecture? and fince there was none, the Confederate might as well have chose to have told Saul, that he and his Sons should Live and be Victorious; and this, if he were fo cunning a Fellow, as these cunning Men make him, he would have done, for the Witches Bufinels and his, was to get by their Practice, and the likelicr way to a good Reward, had been to have Prophecied grateful and pleafant things to the troubled King; and if the Prophefier knew nothing of the Event, he might as well have chosen the good as the evil fide, which as it had been for his Interest, it had been also for the better faving of the credit. σf of his Predictions; for if he had foretold the King's good Succefs and Victory, the Woman and he, the Confederate, in confequence, had been fure of Reputation and Favour, and farther Rewards, if it happened fo; but no Evil could have befallen them from the contrary fucces: For if Saul was killed, the Falfhood of the Prediction would be buried with him, (for we read not that the two Servants were at this Communication, which in all likelihood was private) and no other Evil like to enfue.

So that if it were a confederate Knave, as the Witch-Advocates have contrived, that made the Answers, he was not fo cunning as Mr. Scot, Mr. Webster, and the reft pretend, but indeed a very filly Juggler. He speaks very severe and disobliging things, and such as were not like to redound to his advantage, and indeed such things they were, as do not at all look as if they proceeded from a confederate Couzener. They have that Gravity, Majesty, Religion, and Vertue in them, that became the true Samuel, and are very unlike the Words of a vicibus cheating Knave.

To which may be added, that this Woman, though otherwife an ill one, feems to have been of a kind and benign Nature, by the courteous Entertainmene fhe gave the afflicted Prince, and Jofephus extolls her much for her good Nature: So that it is very improbable, that fhe would by her felf or her Confederate, lay fuch an heavy load of Trouble and Defiperation upon the King, that was in fuch Diftrefs before. I think, all these things put together, are abundantly sufficient to difprove, and shame the ungrounded Fancy of the Witch-Advocates, that all was done by a Confederate. And confequently it was a real Apparition that Saul faw, and did civit Obeyfance to.

SECT. XX.

That it was not the Witch her felf that acted all, as Scot and Webster for another shift would suppose, putting her self into a Trance, and deluding Saul by Ventriloguy.

B UT was it not the Witch her felf that acted all? Mr. Scot faith, that if the Exposition of the Confederate like us not, he can easily frame himlelf to the Opinion, That this Pythomess being in a Ventrilogue, that is, speaking as it were from the bottom of her Belly, did cast her self into a Trance, and so abused Saul, answering to Saul in Samuel's Name, in her counterfort hollow Voice, p. 111. To the same purpose Mr. Webster also suppose that what she did or pretended to do, was only by Ventriloguy, or casting her self into a feigned Trance, lay groveling on the Earth, with her Face downwards, and so changing her Voice, did Mutter and Murmur, and Peep, and Chirp like a Bird coming forth of the shell, or that she fake in some hollow Cave or Vault, through some Pipe, or in a Bottle, and so amused and deceived poor timorous and despairing Saul, p.165, 166.

What ftuff is this, and how shall one deal with such Men, as fet their Wits upon the rack to invent Evasions, and are ready to affert any Nonsense or Absurdity, to pervert the Sense of a plain and simple History? What I have already spoke against the Dream of a Confederate, viz. Saul's perceiving it was Samuel, his bowing him/elf upon it; his taking the Voice for the Prophet's, the suitableness and gravity of the Words, and the contrivance of the Prediction, and the Truth of it, are as strong against this Whim, as against the other idle Fancy, and in some particular of more force, as will appear to any one that confiders the Matter duly.

For Ventriloquy, or fpeaking from the bottom of the Belly, tis a thing I think as ftrange and difficult to be conceived, as athing in Witchcraft, nor can it, I believe, be performed in any diftinctness of articulate founds, without fuch affiftance of the Spirits, that spoke out of the Damoniacks. I would fain have any of the Witch-Advocates shew how it is naturally possible: So that this that they suppose, will infer the thing they would avoid. It cannot certainly in any reason be thought, that that the Woman could by a natural Knack, speak such a Dife course as is related from Samuel, much less that the constraints her Belly imitate his Voice, fo as to deceive one that have been as Saul did.

As for Mr. Webster's Peeping, Chirping, and Muttering they are nothing to the purpole, and his hollow Cave, Pipe, and V are as arbitrary Figments as the Clofet, and fall under the fame Confutations that disprove the reft of the Chimæras.

SECT. XXI.

That it was Samuel himself that appeared, not the Devil, nor a confederate Knave,

B UT the Witch-Advocates have another Argument to prove an Imposture in this Business. For fay they, the Person denouncing the Fate of Saul, could not be the true Samuel, nor the Devil in his likenes; therefore it must be either the Woman or fome cheating Confederate. Which conclusion follows nor, for it is possible it might be a good Spirit personating Samuel: These the Scripture affures us, are often employed in Errands and Ministeries here below, and on those ocafions they cloath themfelves in humane Shape and Appearance. So that it is not absurd to think it might be thus here; but this I affirm not. Who actually it was hath been great matter of Debate among Interpreters, and confiderable Authors have been on either side. My cause doth not require that I should politively determine who the appearing Person was, it might be one of them, though I cannot tell which.

I confess it seems to me most probable, that it was the true Samuel, for the Scripture calls the Apparition fo Five times, that is, as often as he is mentioned. And when the Woman faw Samuel, v. 12. And Saul perceived that it was Samuel, v. 14. and Samuel faid to Saul, v. 15. Then faid Samuel, v. 16. Then Saul was fore afraid, because of the Words of Samuel, v. 20. Which Expressions are neither from Saul nor the Woman, but from that Spirit that Indited the Holy Scriptures. And if after all this, Samuel was a Knave, or the Witch, or the Devil, what affurance can we have in Interpreting of Scripture ? I know that that it speaks sometimes agreeably to the deceived Apprehensions of Men; but when it is fo, there is fomething in the Context or Nature of the thing that leads us to make this Judgment. And if we rashly suppose whenever we have a Mind to it, that the Scripture speaks according to deceived Opinion; we may by this Rule make it fay any thing. The plain Letter, and most obvious Senfe is always to be followed, where there is no cogent Reafon to the contrary, and I shall shew by and by, that there is none to decline it here.

According to the obvious plain Senfe, the Words are Inter. preted, Enclesiaffick. 46, And after his Death, (speaking of Samuel) he Prophessied, and shewed the King his end. And the eircumstances of the Story, which I have already confidered. feem to me very plainly to determine the Senfe this way. Thus doth the furprize of the Woman, who cried out with aftonifhment upon the fight of the Propher, whom the was affrighted to fee. Her knowing it was Saul by the Apparition, which the could not have done by the Devil's appearing in his likenefs. The Expression that Saul perceived that it was Samuel, he did not only fancy or think fo. The Divine and Majeftick words he spake, so becoming the true Samuel, and so unlike the Words of an evil Spirit. And the Prediction of Events fo contingent as the loss of the Battle, and the death of the King and his Sons.

SECT XXII.

The needlessness and impertinency of Mr. Webster's Confutation of Samuel's appearing with his Body out of the Grave.

JOW there are several Evasions, whereby some endeavour to shift off this Evidence. But if we will deal plainly and fincerely, we must, I think, acknowledge the force of the Arguments, which I have briefly and nakedly proposed.

But all this Mr. Webster pretends to confute thus. It was not, Samuel's Body with his Soul joined, nor his Soul that appeared in his wonted Shape and Habit, p. 172, 173.

The

The first he proves by these Reasons. First, His Body had lain too long in the Grave, fo that it must have been disfigured. Secondly, It must have stunk. Thirdly, There was no Taylor in the Grave to make him a Mantle. Fourthly, It must have been an Omnipotent Power to have done this. Fifthly, A Syllogifm is brought to prove this contrary to the Scripture, which faith, That those that die in the Lord, rest from their Labours.

Now the Four first Arguments he may take again, we have no concern with them. For tis fenfeles to think, that the gross Body came out of the Grave; and if he means the refting of the Terrestrial Body, by the Fifth, he may take that back too. And indeed, as applyed to the Body without the Soul, the diffurbing of it is Nonfense. Its corruption in the Grave is continual motion, and more diffurbance than the raifing it entirely would be, if it were any at all, but properly it is none, no more than is the taking of a Stone out of a Quarry. Therefore if there be any Argument in this, it falls under the next Query.

The Sixth Argument is a Queftion, viz. Who joyned the Soul and Body again? Not the Witch nor the Devil. The Opinion is Erroneous, Impious, and Blasphemous. And for me, let him call it what he pleaseth; his strength is in hard Words, which here like the Stones thrown fometimes by Witchcraft light like Wool, and here far alto from the Mark.

SECT. XXIII.

That it was the Soul of Samuel that appeared without his Terrestrial-Body, and that it is an indifferent Opinion, in which are divided as well Papists as Protestants.

B^{UT} there is a Second Opinion yet to be Confuted, viz. That it was Samuel's in his wonted Shape and Habit, p. 173. He must mean his Soul without the Body, or else'tis the fame again; and if he means without any Body, I am none of those that mean with him. It is most fully and plainly proved by those excellent Men, Dr. C- and Dr. M- that Souls departed are embodied in Ærial or Ætherial Vehicles; and they have have largely shewn that this was the Doctrine of the greatest Philosophers, and most Ancient and Learned Fathers. And agreeable it is to the Holy Scripture and highest Reason and Philoophy, as I may have another occasion to shew. Now Samue appeared here to Saul in this his more pure Aerial or Ætherial Body, which he could form into such an appearance and habit as he had in the Terrestrial.

Against the Opinion of Samuel's Soul appearing, Mr. Webster urgeth cogent Arguments, as still he calleth his; they are all manifest, cogent, irrefragable, unanswerable, even then when they are scace sense. He prefaceth to them, by an intimation, that the Doctrine is Popish maintained, he faith, it is by the Popish party. His hard words use to be his strongest Arguments. But this is only to raife odium and prejudice to the opinion. For there are Papifts and Protestants on both fides of this Question. As also Rabbins and Fathers have divided upon it. Some of the laft fort, and those perhaps of the greatest and most confiderable having been for it, as R. E. leazer, R. Saadias, The Writers of the Midrafh, Josephus also, Origen, Augustine, Bafil, Ambrofe, &c. as fome others have been against it. So that, I suppose, a Man may freely and without offence declare his Judgment, though it happen to be different from Mr. Webster's.

SECT. XXIV.

Three Arguments of Mr. Webster against the appearing of the Soul of Samuel proposed and answered.

W Herefore to his Arguments, Firft he could not, faith he, come whether God would or no. Right! Secondly, He would not run on as Errand without God's confent. No doubt. Thirdly that God did not command him, he faith, is most certain. Here I must stop. How doth that appear to be fo certain? Why! they never were imployed in Ministries here below, because never created for any such end or purpose, p. 173. They were never employed in Ministries here below! What thinks he of the Souls of Moses and Elias, at the transfiguration on the Mount? were not they then employed in a Ministry here below, or were they only Phantas or glorifyed Bodieswirkout out their Souls ? and how then did they talk and converfe wit! our Lord? But these he will fay were fent on an extraordinary occasion. Be it so, they are sometimes then imployed in such, and so Mr. Webster must eat his words. And if bleffed Souls are, or have been employed at any time, how is he so certain the real Samuel was not sent here;

Thus briefly to his bold Affertion. But he pretends a reason? They were never created for this purpose. If that were fo, what then? The Stars were never made to fight against Sifera, nor any one. Nor the Waters to drown the World. Nor the Ravens to feed Prophets or other Men. May not they therefore be used in those Services ? Again, No fensitive Being was made primarily for another, but to enjoy it felf, and to partake of the goodnels of its Maker. May it not therefore minister to others? and doth not every Creature fo ? All things ferve him. Thirdly The Angels are Ministring Spirits, he faith, ordained to be fuch. Doth he think they were made for that purpose only to ferve us ? Fourthly, Realonable humane Creatures are for one another. Non nobis folum, &c. Souls are most proper to ferve fuch not here only, but in the next World. They are inayyease like unto Angels, and they are as proper at least for the service, They have the same nature and affections. They feel of Men. our infirmities, and confider us more than abstract Spirits do. Which is the reafon given why our Saviour took not upon him the nature of Angels, but of Men. Fifthly, Souls departed have Life and Senfe and Motion, capacity of being employed, and no doubt inclination to it; and whither more properly may they be fent, than to those of their own nature, whom they affect, are allied to, and fo lately came from ? Sixthly, The Angels are not confined to their celestial habitation, but are fent often to this nether World, as M. Webster and the test confeis, and why then should we think that the Souls of the Just are so limited and reftrained ?

And Lastly it is supposed both by Jews and Christians, that the Soul of the Mession appeared to the Patriarchs, and was the Angel of the Covenant; and we know he was pleased to appear to St. Stephen at his Martyrdom, though then in Glory. And in the various Apparitions of Angels recorded in the Scripture, we have reason to think that some were humane Souls, called Angels from their Office.

So that on the whole, we fee we have no caufe to rely on Mr. Webster's certainty, that Samuel's Soul came not on a Divine Command.

SECT.

SECT. XXV.

Other Arguments of Mr. Webster against the appearing of the Soul of Samuel, proposed and answered.

B UT Mr. Webster goes on: Fourthly, saith he, Mr. Glanvil hath only affirmed, not proved it. Which is not so, I alledge the same reasons I have mentioned here in my Philosophial Confiderations about Witchcraft, Sect. 16. And the frequent affirmations of the Sacred Text, were sufficient ground for the Affertion, though no other reasons were added to them.

He argues, Fifthly, Miracles are wrought to confirm truth, but this would have confirmed Saul and the Witch in their wicked ways, $p \cdot 174$. I answer, Miracles are not always wrought to confirm truth, but sometimes to declare it. And these fort are often for that purpose. Such was this, to pronounce the final Sentence and Doom on Saul, as to the concerns of this World. And the Prophet's appearing so contrary to the Womans expectation, and before the had performed her Spells, struck her into dread and amazement, and so the could draw no encouragement thence, to countenance her trade of Witchcraft.

Sixthly, He faith it is not credible, but that Samuel would have reproved the Sorcerefs. But that was not his bufinefs, and it is like the being one of that vile and Diabolical profeftion was forfaken of God and good Spirits, and given up to those evil ones that were her Agents and Familiars. Such derelictions we fometimes read of. And certainly if any course of finning occasions and brings fuch a judgment (as fome no doubt do) this of Witchcraft and Confederacy with evil Spirits, is one that most justly may.

Seventhly, But God had refufed to answer Saul by any living Propher, and Eighthly would not vouchfafe him his Spirit in the ordinary way, and therefore it is not probable he would do it by fending a Prophet from the dead. Which arguings can only discover our ignorance in the Reasons of the Divine Counfels and Actions. But yet it may be faid, God had indeed withdrawn all comfortable and directive Communications from him, but this was of another fort, a farther instance of the Divine Displeasure, Difpleafure, and Declarative of the forfaken King's Doom, Which was no favour but indeed a judgment to which the Divine Justice was probably farther provoked by this his fin of dealing with the Sorcerefs.

But Ninthly, Abraham would not fend Lazarus upon the Rich Mans defire to his furviving Brethren. p. 175. Nor can any one think it follows that, because one came from the dead to an extraordinary person, and upon an occasion that was such; that therefore Prophets, or other Souls shall be sent from thence, ordinarily to warn those that have other sufficient means of conviction and amendment. The Tenth is to fill up tale. Where doth Mr. Glanvil, faith he, find it in Scripture, or Orthodoxal Divines, that ever any Blessed Soul was sent on a divine Errand to any here below? Which he objected, and I answered before.

SECT. XXVI.

I hat the Soul of Samuel might come of it self, as well as be sent by Divine Command, either Opinion defensible.

I Have briefly recited, and I hope cleared Mr. Webster's Objections, which he runs out into great length and numerous impertinencies. And indeed his Arguments are often such confident Nothings, that it is really a shame to go about to answer them. But I shall never pass by any thing of his strength.

But though I have defended the Opinion, that Samuel's Soul was fent on a Divine Errand to Saul, againft Mr. Webster's contrary pretences; yet is there another thing supposable, which is as probable, viz. That Samuel came without any direct command, being barely permitted, and that the earness and importunate defire of Saul to have some Communication with him in his diftress, invited and inclined him to it. Thus it might be, and there is no cause to think, but that blessed Souls have sometimes such liberty allowed them; which of these it was, I shall not presume to determine, both are defensible, and either sufficient for my purpose.

Proof of Apparitions, &c.

SECT. XXVII.

Several other Objections against the appearing of the Soul of Samuel answered.

B UT there are other Objections befides Mr. Webster's, against the Tenent that it was the Soul of Samuel; I shall not conceal any one that hath any force in it.

First it is urged, That Witches and Magicians have no power over the Spirits of the Just, and therefore this Pythonescould not raise Samuel. Nor do we fay the did. He appear'd (as 'tis probable from the Text) before the had made her Conjurations. Which might be one reason of her crying out. He came either fent from God, or of his own inclination. The Devil nor Witch had nothing to do in it.

But Secondly, would God fend Samuel at fuch a time, when he was feeking fatisfaction from Enchantment ? And why not as well that, as appoint the Prophet to meet the Meffengers of Abaziab when he fent to Beelzebub, 2 Kings 1 ? That King fent to the Idol of Ekron to inquire his Fate, and God acquainted him with it by his Prophet Elijab. Thus allo when Balak had required Balaam to curfe the Ifraelites, God put a Prophecy into his Mouth, and made him blefs them, Numb. 22. &c.

Thirdly the Woman laid, the faw Gods ariting, a company of evil Spirits (fo fome interpret) and what did Samuel among them? But I faw Gods is more probably rendred by others a God, a Divine Perfonage, the plural Number for the fingular to express 'honour. And that it is fo to be underftood is fignified plainly by the fingular Relative that follows; Of what form is he, v. 14. Or if more be meant, why might they not be good Genii that accompanied Samuel, a great and Divine Perfonage, eminent no doubt in the other World as he was in this?

Fourthly, some argue from the Question of the Apparition, v. 15. Why hast thou disquieted me? Samuel, say they, whether sent by God, or coming of his own accord, could not be disquieted by appearing. Nor was there any real disturbance in it, but the Spirit of the Prophet speaks our Language, who are apt to fancy the dead to rest in their Graves, and to be disturbed of their repose, repole, when upon any occasion they appear among the li-

Fifthly, But he faith, that Saul and his Sons fhould be with him, viz. in Thalamo justorum, which fome think, not unlikely, believing that Saul was reprobate only in Type. But more probably the meaning is, that he should be in the State of the dead in another World, as he the Prophet was.

Sixthly and Laftly, The Spectre faid, that to morrow he fhould be with him, which was not true, for feveral days intervened before the Battle. But the word to morrow need not to be taken in frictness, but in a Latitude of interpretation for a fhort time. He was to dye in or upon the Fight, and the enemies were now ready for it, and fo the event was to be within a very little while. The prediction of which, was a Prophecy of a thing very contingent, and shews that the Predictor was the real Samuel.

SECT. XXVIII.

An Answer to that Objection, That if it was Samuel's Soul that appeared, it makes nothing to Witchcraft.

B UT if it were the real Samuel, will they fay, this Story will then make nothing for the Opinion of Witchcraft. For Samuel was not raifed by Enchantment, but came either of his own accord, or on a Divine Errand. To which Objection, I fay.

First, Here is at least proof of an Apparition of a Man after Death.

Secondly, Saul's going to this Pythonefs upon fuch an Inquiry, and fhe undertaking to bring the perfon up, whom he fhould name (at leaft the appearance of him) intimated v. 11. are good proof that this had been her practice, though at this time over ruled, and that fhe acted by an evil Spirit. For certainly when Saul intreats her to Divine to him by her Familiar Spirit, he did not mean that fhe fhould deceive, and delude him by a Confederate Knave. The ienfleffnefs of which Figment I have already iufficiently difproved. That the Woman 46 man was used to such practices, will appear fully when I come to prove Witchcraft from * express Texts.

ADVER TISEMENT.

* THE express Texts that he means, I suppose are such as these, Exod. 22. 18. 2 Chron. 33. 6. Gal. 5. 20. Micah. 5. 12. Acts 13. 6, 8. and Chap. 8, 9. and more especially Deut. 18. 10. Where almost all the Names of Witches are enumerated, namely, of all those that are inveigled by Covenant with Evil Spirits, either explicitly, or by submitting to their Ceremonies, See Dr. H. M. his Postfcript.

SECT. XXIX.

They that hold it was an Evil Spirit that appeared to Saul, that their opinion may be true for ought Mr. Webster brings against it.

A S to the Opinion of divers Divines, that the appearing Samuel was indeed an Evil Spirit in his likenefs, though I judge it not fo probable as the other of the real Samuel, yet the interpretation is not abfurd nor impossible. And becaufe I do not abfolutely determine either way, I shall defend it against Mr. Webster's contrary Arguments, which whether it be so or not fo, prove nothing. He shith,

First, That this begs two falle suppositions, p. 175. as First, That the Devils are simply incorporeal Spirits. By which if he means Incorporeal in their Intrinsick Effential Constitution, such no doubt they are, as every Intellectual Being is. But if he mean by simply Incorporeal, difunited from all Matter and Body, so perhaps (and most likely) they are not. But neither the one, or the other of these, is supposed by the Opinion Mr. Webster impugnes. The second falls supposition is, That Devils can assume Bodies. That they can appear in divers Shapes Shapes and Figures, like humane and other Bodies, we affirm, and it is plain from the Scripture, as to Angels, and I shall make the same good, in reference to other Spirits in due place. So that we may suppose it still; till Mr. Webster hath evinced the contrary, as he promiseth. How he performs I shall confider in due place.

His Second Argument is, That he is not of their Opinion, that the Devils move, and rove up and down in this Elementary World at pleafure. Which no one I know faith. They go to and fro, and compass the Earth, but still within the bounds of the Divine permission, the Laws of the Angelical World, and those of their own Kingdom; which prevent the Troubles and Disturbances in the World from them, which he faith would infue.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THUS far runs the Proof of the Existence of Apparitions and Witchcraft, from Holy Scripture, entire. The three or four Lines that follow in the M.S. and are left out, break off abruptly. But what is faid, fufficiently fubverts the force of Mr. Webfler's Arguments against their Opinion, that fay it was the Devil that appeared to Saul. I will only here trike notice, that this pare which reaches hitherto, though it be not, fully finished, yet it abundantly affords Proof, for the Conclusion namely, for the Existence of Spirits, Apparitions, and Witches, from Testimony of Holy Scripture, to as many as yield tr, the Authority thereof. But the following Collection is a Confirmation of the fame things, as well to the Anti-Scripturists, as to them that believe Scripture.

And the leading Story of the Dæmon of Tedworth, I hope now will prove irrefrag chie, and unexceptionable, if the Reader retain in his mind., Mr. Glanvil's Preface to this fecond Part of his Saducifmus, Triumphatus, and Mr. Mompeffon's Letters, the one to Mr. Glanvil, the other to Mr. Collins, which cannot hut abund antly undeceive the World. So that it is needlefs to record how Mr. Glanvil wrote to Mr. William Claget of Bury, and profeffed, He had not the leaft ground to think he was impoded on in what he related, and that he had great caufe from what he faw himfelf, to fay, it was impoffible there fhould be any Impofture in that bufinefs. Proof of Apparitions, &c.

To the fame purpose he wrote to Mr. Gilbert Clark in Northamptonshire, as also to my felf, and undoubtedly to many more, as he has intimated in his Preface. Befides that, to the Parties above named, he fent a Copy of that Letter of Mr. Mompellon which was wrote to himself.

So that that groundlefs Rumour being thus fully filenced, we may now feafonably relate, and that with confidence, that affured and unexceptionably attested Story of the Dæmon of Tedworth. Which is as follows.

Modern RELATIONS.

RELATION'I.

Which is the enlarged Narrative of the Dæmon of Tedworth, or of the Disturbances at Mr. Mompeffon's House, caused by Witchcraft, and the villany of the Drummer.

R. John Mompeffon of Tedworth, in the County of Wilts, being about the middle of March, in the Year 1661. at a Neighbouring Town called Ludgarfhal, and hearing a Drum beat there, he inquired of the Bailiff of the Town, at whofe House he then was, what it meant. The Bailiff told him, that they had for fome days been troubled with an idle Drummer, who demanded Money of the Constable by vertue of a pretended Pass, which he thought was counterfeir, Upon this Mr. Mompeffon fent for the Fellow, and askt him by what Authority he went up and and down the Country in that manner with his Drum. The Drummer answered, he had good Authority, and produc'd his Pals, with a Warrant under the Hands of Sir William Camley, and Colonel Ayliff of Gretenham. Mr. Mompeffon knowing these Gentlemens Hands, difcovered that the Pafs and Warrant were counterfeir, and thereupon commanding the Vagrant to put off his Drum, and charged the Constable to carry him before the next Juffice of the Peace, to be farther Examined and Punisht. The Fellow then confessed the Cheat, and begg'd earnestly to have his Drum. Mr. Mompeffon told him, that if he understood from Colonel Ayliff, whole Drummer he faid he was, that he had been an honeft Man, he should have it again, but in the mean time he would fecure it, to he left the Drum with the Bailiff, and the Drummer in the Conftable's Hands, who it feems was prevailed on by the Fellows intreaties to let him g0.

About the midft of April following, when Mr. Mompeffon was preparing for a Journey to London, the Bailiff fent the Drum to his Houle; when he was returned from that Journey, his Wife told him, that they had been much affrighted in the Night by Thieves, and that the Houfe had like to have been broken up. And he had not been at home above three Nights, when the fame Noife was heard that had diffurbed his Family in his absence. It was a very great knocking at his Doors, and the outfides of his Houfe : Hereupon he got up, and went about the Houle with a Brace of Pistols in his Hands; he opened the Door where the great Knocking was, and then he heard the Noise at another Door, he opened that also, and went out round the Houfe, but could discover nothing, only he still heard a ftrange Noife and hollow Sound. When he was got back to Bed, the Noife was a Thumping and Drumming on the top of his House, which continued a good space, and then by degrees went off into the Air.

After this, the Noife of Thumping and Drumming was very frequent, uffally five Nights together, and then it would intermir three. It was on the outfides of the Houle, which is molt of it of Board. It conftantly came as they were going to fleep, whether early or late. After a Months Diffurbance without, it came into the Room where the Drum lay, four or five Nights in feven, within half an Hour after they were in Bed, continuing almost two. The fign of it just before it came, was; they still heard an hurling in the Air over the Houle, and at its going off, the beating of a Drum like that at the breaking up of a Guard. It continued in this Room for the space of www two Months, which time Mr. Mompeffon himfelf lay there to observe it. In the fore-part of the Night, it used to be be very troublesome, but after two Hours all would be quiet.

Mrs. Mompeffon being brought to Bed, there was but little Noile the Night she was in Travail, nor any for three Weeks after, till she had recovered strength. But after this civil Ceffation, it returned in a ruder manner than before, and followed and vext the youngest Children, beating their Bed-steads with that violence, that all prefent, expected when they would fall in pieces. In laying Hands on them, one should feel no Blows, but might perceive them to shake exceedingly : For an Hour together it would Bear, Round-heads and Cuckolds, the Tat-too, and several other Points of War, as well as any After this, they should hear a foratching under Drummer. the Childrens Beds, as if by fomething that had Iron-Tal-It would lift the Children up in their Beds, follow them lons. from one Room to another, and for a while, haunted none particularly but them.

There was a Cock-loft in the Houfe, which had not been obferved to be troubled, thither they removed the Children, putting them to Bed while it was fair Day, where they were no fooner laid, but their Troubler was with them as before.

On the Fifth of November 1661 It kept a mighty Noife, and a Servant observing two Boards in the Childrens Room feeming to move, he bid it give him one of them; upon which the Board came (nothing moving it that he faw) within a Yard of him; the Man added, Nay let me have it in my Hand; upon which it was show'd guite home to him again, and so up and down, to and fro, at leaft twenty times together, till Mr. Mompeffon forbid his Servant such Familiarities. This was in the Day-time, and feen by a whole Room-full of People. That Morning it left a fulphurous Smell behind it, which was very offenfive. At Night the Minister, one Mr. Cragg, and divers of the Neighbours came to the Houfe on a Vifit. The Minister went to Prayers with them, kneeling at the Childrens Bed-fide, where it was then very troublesome and loud. During Prayer-time it withdrew into the Cock-loft, but returned as foon as Prayers were done, and then in fight of the Company, the Chairs walkt about the Room of themfelves, the Childrens Shoes were hurled over their Heads, and every looie thing moved about the Chamber. At the fame time a Bed-staff was thrown at the Ministerr which hit him on the Leg, but so favourably; that a lock of Wool could not fall more fottly, and íŧ Ŧ it was observed, that it stopt just where it lighted, without rolling or moving from the place.

Mr. Mompelson perceiving, that it fo much perfecuted the little Children, he lodged them out at a Neighbours Houle, taking his eldeft Daughter, who was about Ten Years of Age, into his own Chamber, where it had not been a Month before. As foon as the was in Bed, the Difturbance began there again, continuing three Weeks Drumming, and making other Noifes, and it was obferved, that it would exactly answer in Drumming, any thing that was beaten or called for. After this, the Houle where the Children were Lodged our, happening to be full of Strangers, they were taken home, and no Difturbance having been known in the Parlour, they were lodged there, where allo their Perfecutor found them, but then only pluckt them by the Hair and Night-cloaths without any other Difturbance.

It was noted, that when the Noife was loudeft, and came with the most fudden and furprizing Violence, no Dog about the House would move, though the Knocking was oft so boisterous and rude, that it hath been heard at a considerable distance in the Fields, and awakened the Neighbours in the Village, none of which live very near this House. The Servants sometimes were lift up with their Beds, and let them gently down again without hurt, at other times it would lie like a great Weight upon their Feet.

About the latter end of Dec. 1661, the Drumming was lefs frequent, and then they heard a noise like the gingling of Money, occasioned, as it was thought by somewhat Mr. Mompeffon's Mother had spoken the Day before to a Neighbour, who talkt of Fairies leaving Money, viz. That she should like it well, if it would leave them some to make amends for their Trouble. The Night after the speaking of which, there was a great chinking of Money over all the House.

After this, it defifted from the ruder Noifes, and employed it felf in little Apifh and lefs troublefome Tricks. On Chriftmas-Eve a little before Day, one of the little Boys arifing out of his Bed, was hit on a fore place upon his Heel, with the Latch of the Door, the Pin that it was faftened with, was fo fmall, that it was a difficult matter to pick it out. The Night after Chriftmaß-Day. it threw the old Gentlewomans Cloaths about Room, and hid her Bible in the Afhes. In fuch filly Tricks it was frequent.

Atter this, it was very troublesome to a Servasit of Mr. Mompeffon's, who was a stout Fellow, and of sober Conversation; this this Man lay within during the greatest Disturbance, and for feveral Nights formething would endeavour to pluck his Cloaths off the Bed, fo that he was fain to tug hard to keep them on, and fometimes they would be pluckt from him by main force, and his Shoes thrown at his Head; and now and then he fould find himfelf forcibly held, as it were bound Hand and Foor, but he found that whenever he could make use of his Sword. and ftruck with it, the Spirit quitted its hold.

A little after these Contests, a Son of Mr. Thomas Bennet, whole Workman the Drummer had fometimes been, came to the House, and told Mr. Mompession some Words that he had spoken, which it feems was not well taken. For as foon as they were in Bed, the Drum was beat up very violently and loudly, the Gentleman arofe and called his Man to him, who lay with Mr. Mompeffon's Servant just now spoken of, whole Name was John. As foon as Mr. Bennet's Man was gone. John heard a rufling Noife in his Chamber, and fomething came to his Bedfide, as if it had been one in Silk; the Man prefently reached after his Sword, which he found held from him, and 'twas with difficulty and much tugging that he got it into his power, which as foon as he had done, the Spectre left him, and it was always observed, that it still avoided a Sword.

About the beginning of January, 1662 they were wont to hear a Singing in the Chimney before it came down. And one Night about this time, Lights were seen in the House. One of them came into Mr. Mompeffon's Chamber, which feemed blue and glimmering, and cauled great ftiffnels in the Eyes of those that faw it. After the Light, fomething was heard coming up the Stairs, as if it had been one without Shoes. The Light was feen also four or five times in the Childrens Cham? ber; and the Maids confidently affirm, that the Doors were at leaft ten times opened and thut in their fight, and when they were opened, they heard a noife as if half a dozen had entered together, after which fome were heard to walk about the Room, and one rufled as if it had been Silk ; the like Mr. Mompeffon himfelf once heard.

During the time of the Knocking, when many were prefent, a Gentleman of the Company faid, Satan if the Drummer fet thee to work, give three Knocks and no more; which it did very distinctly, and stopt: Then the Gentleman knockt to see if it would answer him as it was wont, but it did not : For farther trial, he bid it for confirmation, if it were the Drummer, to give five Knocks and no more, that Night, which it did, and left the House quiet all the Night after. This was done in the prefence 54 presence of Sir Thomas Chamberlain of Oxfordshire, and divers others.

On Saturday Morning, an Hour before Day, Jan. 10 a Drum was heard beat upon the outfides of Mr. Mompession's Chamber, from whence it went to the other end of the House, where some Gentlemen strangers lay, playing at their Door and without, four or five several Tunes, and so went off into the Air.

The next Night, a Smith in the Village lying with John the Man, they heard a noise in the Room, as one had been a Shoeing of an Horse, and somewhat came, as if it were with a Pair of Pincers, snipping at the Smiths Nose most part of the Night.

One Morning Mr. Mompession rifing early to go a Journey, heard a great noise below, where the Children lay, and running down with a Pistol in his Hand, he heard a Voice, crying, AWitch, a Witch, as they also had heard it once before. Upon his entrance all was quier.

Having one Night played fome little Tricks at Mr. Mompeffor's Beds-feet, it went into another Bed, where one of his Daughters lay; there it paffed from fide to fide, lifting her up as it paffed under. At that time there were three kinds of noifes in the Bed, they endeavoured to thruft at it with a Sword, but it ftill fhifted and carefully avoided the Thruft, ftill getting under the Child, when they off red at it. The Night after it came panting like a Dog out of Breath; upon which one took a Bed-ftaff to knock, which was caught out of her Hand, and thrown away, and Company coming up, the Room was prefently filled with a bloomy noitome Smell, and was very hot, though without Fire, in a very fharp and fevere Winter. It continued in the Bed panting and icratching an Hour and half, and then went into the next Chamber, where it knockt a little, and feemed to rattle a Chain; thus it did for two or three Nights together.

After this, the Gentlewomans Bible was found in the Afhes, the Paper-fides being downards. Mr. Mompeffon took it up, and observed that it lay open at the third Chapter of St. Mark, where there is mention of the unclean Spirits falling down before our Saviour, and of his giving power to the Twelve to caft out Devils, and of the Scribes Opinion, that he caft them out through Beelzebub.

The next Night they firewed Afhes over the Chamber, to fee what Imprefions it would leave; in the Morning they found in one place, the refemblance of a great Claw, in another of a leffer, fome Letters in another, which they could make nothing of, befides many Circles and Scratches in the Afhes.

About

About this time I went to the House, on purpose to enquire the Truth of those Passages, of which there was to loud a report. It had ceafed from its Drumming and ruder Noifes before I came thither, but most of the more remarkable Circumfances before related, were confirmed to me there, by feveral of the Neighbours together, who had been prelent at them. At this time it used to haunt the Children, and that as foon as they were laid. They went to Bed that Night I was there, about 8 of the Clock, when a Maid-fervant coming down from them, told us it was come. The Neighbours that were there, and two Ministers who had seen and heard divers times, went away, but Mr. Mompeffon and I, and a Gentleman that came with me went up. I heard a ftrange foratching as I went up the Stairs, and when we came into the Room, I perceived it was just behind the Bolster of the Childrens Bed, and seemed to be against the Tick. It was as loud a foratching, as one with long Nails could make upon a Bølfter. There were two little modeft Girls in the Bed, between 7 and 8 Years old, as I gueft. I faw their Hands out of the Cloaths, and they could not contribute to the Noife that was behind their Heads; they had been used to it, and had still some body or other in the Chamber with them, and therefore feemed not to be much afrighted. I standing at the Beds-head, thrust my Hand behind the Bolfter, directing it to the place whence the Noife feem'd to come, whereupon the Noife ceafed there, and was heard in another part of the Bed; but when I had taken out my Hand it returned, and was heard in the fame place as before. I had been told that it would imitate Noifes, and made trial by fcratching feveral times upon the Sheet, as 5 and 7 and 10, which it followed and ftill ftopt at my Number. I fearcht. under and behind the Bed, turned up the Cloaths to the Bedcords, grafpt the Bolfter, founded the Wall behind, and made all the fearch that poffibly I could to find if there were any Trick, Contrivance, or common Caufe of it; the like did my Friend, but we could difcover nothing. So that I was then verily perfuaded, and am fostill, that the Noise was made by fome Damon or Spirit. After it had scratcht about half an Hour or more, it went into the midft of the Bed under the Children, and there feemed to pant like a Dog out of Breath very loudly. I put my Hand upon the place, and felt the Bcd bearing up against it, as if fomething within had thrust it up. I grafpt the Feathers, to feel if any living thing were in it. I lookt under and every where about, to see if there were any Dog or Cat, or any fuch Creature in the Room, and fo we all did.

did, but found, nothing. The motion it caufed by this paneing was fo ftrong, that it flook the Room and Windows very fenfibly. It continued thus more than half an Hour, while my Friend and I stayed in the Room, and as long after, as we were told. During the panting, I chanced to fee as it had been fomething (which I thought was a Rat or Moule) moving in a Linnen-Bag, that hung up against another Bed that was in the Room, I ftep and caught it by the upper-end with one Hand. with which I held it, and drew it through the other, but found nothing at all in it. There was no body near to shake the Bag, or if there had, no one could have made fuch a Motion, which feemed to be from within, as if a living Creature had moved in it. This Paffage I mention'd not in the former Editions, becaufe it depended upon my fingle Teftimony, and might be fubject to more Evalions than the other I related ; but having told it to divers learned and inquisitive Men, who thought it not altogether inconfiderable, I have now added it here. It will I know be faid by fome, that my Friend and I were under fome afright, and fo fancied Noises and fights that were not. This is the eternal Evafion. But if it be poffible to know how a Man is affected, when in fear, and when unconcerned, I certainly know for mine own part, that during the whole time of my being in the Room, and in the House, I was under no more Afrightment, than I am while I Write this Relation. And if I know that I am now awake, and that I fee the Objects that are before me, I know that I heard and faw the particulars I have told. There is, I am fenfible, no great matter for Story in them, but there is fo much as convinceth me, that there was fomewhat extraordinary, and what we usually call preternatural in the bufine's. There were other Passages at my being at Tedworth, which I published not, because they are not such plain and unexceptionable Proofs. I shall now briefly mention them, Valeant quantum valere poffunt. My Friend and I lay in the Chamber, where the first and chief Disturbance had been. We flept well all Night, but early before Day in the Morning, I was awakened, (and I awakened my Bed-fellow) by a great Knocking just without our Chamber-door. I askt who was there feveral times, but the Knocking still continued without Answer. At last I faid, In the Name of God who is it, and what would you have ? To which a Voice answered, Nothing with you. We thinking it had been some Servant of the House, went to fleep again. But speaking of it to Mr. Mompeffon when we came down, he affured us, that no one of the Houle lay that way, or had business thereabout, and that his Servants were not np till he he called them, which was after it was Day. Which they confirmed, and protested that the Noife was not made by them Mr. Mompeffon had told us before, that it would be gone in the middle of the Night, and come again divers times early in the Morning, about Four a Clock, and this I suppose was about that time.

Another Paffage was this, my Man coming up to me in the Morning, told me, that one of my Horses (that on which I rode) was all in a fwear, and lookt as if he had been rid all Night. My Friend and I went down and found him fo. enquired how he had been used, and was assured that he had been well fed, and order'd as he used to be, and my Servant was one that was wont to be very careful about my Horfes. The Horfe I had had a good time, and never knew but that he was very found. But after I had rid him a Mile or two, very gently over a plain Down from Mr. Mompeffon's House, he fell Lame, and having made a hard shift to bring me home, died in 2 or 3 Days, no one being able to imagine what he ailed. This I confels might be accident, or some unusual Distemper, but all things being put together, it seems very probable that it was fomewhat elfe.

But I go on with Mr. Mompellon's own particulars. There came one Morning a Light into the Childrens Chamber, and a Voice crying A Witch, a Witch, for at least an Hundred times together.

Mr. Mompeffon at another time, (being in the Day) feeing fome Wood move that was in the Chimney of of a Room, where he was, as of it felf, discharged a Pistol into it, after which, they found several Drops of Blood on the Hearth, and in divers places of the Stairs.

For two or three Nights after the discharge of the Pistol, there was a calm in the House, but then it came again, applying it felf to a little Child newly taken from Nurle, which it fo perfecuted, that it would not let the poor Infant reft for two Nights together, nor fuffer a Candle in the Room, but carry'd them away lighted up the Chimney, or throw them under the Bed. It fo scared this Child by leaping upon it, that for fome Hours it could not be recover'd out of the Fright; fo that they were forced again to remove the Children out of the House. The next Night after which, fomething about Midnight came up the Stairs, and knockt at Mr. Mompeffon's Door, but he lying still, it went up another pair of Stairs, to his Man's Chamber, to whom it appeared, standing at his Beds-foor; the exact Shape and Proportion he could not dif cover cover, but he faith he faw a great Body, with two red and glaring Eyes, which for fome time were fixed fteadily upon him, and at length difappeared.

Another Night, Strangers being prefent, it pur'd in the Childrens Bed like a Cat, at which time alfo, the Cloaths and Children were lift up from the Bed, and fix Men could not keep them down; hereupon they removed the Children, intending to have ript up the Bed; but they were no fooner laid in another, but the fecond Bed was more troubled than the firft. It continued thus four Hours, and fo beat the Childrens Legs against the Beds-posts, that they were forced to arife, and fit up all Night. After this it would empty Chamber-pots into their Beds, and ftrew them with Afhes, though they were never to carefully watcht. It put a long pike Iron into Mr. Mompeffon's Bed, and into his Mothers, a naked Knife upright. It would fill Porrengers with Afhes, throw every thing about, and keep a noife all Day.

About the beginning of April, 1663 a Gentleman that lay in the Houle, had all his Money turned black in his Pockets; and Mr. Mompeffen coming one Morning into his Stable, found the Horfe he was wont to ride, on the ground, having one of his hinder Legs in his Mouth, and fo faftened there, that it was difficult for feveral Men to get it out with a Leaver. After this, there were fome other remarkable things, but my Account goes no farther; only Mr. Mompeffon Writ me word, that afterwards the Houle was feveral Nights befet with 7 or 8 in the fhape of Men, who, as foon as a Gun was difcharg'd, would fhuffle away together into an Arbour.

The Drummer was Tryed at the Affizes at Salisbury upon this occasion. He was committed first to Gloucester Goal for Stealing, and a Wilt hire Man coming to fee him, he askt what News in Wiltshire ; the Visitant faid, he knew of none : No,. faith the Drummer, Do not you hear of the Druming at a Gentleman's Houle at Tedworth ? That I do enough, faid the other : I, quoth the Drummer, I have plagued him, (or to that pufpose) and he shall never be quiet, till he hath made me satisfaction for taking away my Drum. Upon Information of this, the Fellow was I ried for a Witch at Sarum, and all the main Circumftances I have related, were Sworn at the Affizes, by the Minister of the Parish, and divers others of the most intelligent and substantial Inhabitants, who had been Eye and Earwitnesses of them, time after time, for divers Years together. The Fellow was Condemn'd to Transportation, and accordingly fent away; but I know not how ('tis faid by raifing Storms, and affrighting the Seamen) he made a shift to come back again. And 'tis observable, that during all the time of his restraint and absence, the House was quiet, but as soon as ever he came back at liberty, the disturbance returned.

He had been a Soldier under Cromwel, and used to talk much of Gallant Books he had of an old Fellow, who was counted a Wizzard. Upon this occasion I shall here add a Passage, which I had not from Mr. Mompession, but yet relates to the main purpose.

The Gentleman who was with me at the Houle, Mr. Hill, being in Company with one Compton of Summersetshire, who practifed Phylick, and pretends to ftrange Matters, related to him this Story of Mr. Mompellon's Difturbance. The Phylician told him, he was fure it was nothing but a Rendez-yous of Witches, and that for an Hundred Pounds he would undertake to rid the House of all Disturbance. In persuit of this Discourse, he talkt of many high things, and having drawn my Friend into another Room, apart from the reft of the Company, faid, he would make him fenfible he could do fomething more than ordinary, and askt him who he defired to fee, Mr. Hill had no great confidence in his Talk, but yet being earneftly preft to name fome one, he faid, he defired to fee no one fo much as his Wife, who was then many Miles diftant from them at her home. Upon this, Compton took up a Lookingglass that was in the Room, and setting it down again, bid my Friend look in it, which he did, and there, as he most folemnly and ferioufly profeffeth, he faw the exact Image of his Wife, in that Habit which the then wore, and working at her Needle in fuch a part of the Room (there represented alto) in which and about which time fhe really was, as he found up-The Gentleman himtelf aon enquiry when he came home. verred this to me, and he is a very fober, intelligent, and credible Person. Compton had no knowledge of him before, and was an utter stranger to the Person of his Wife. The fame Man we shall meet again, in the Story of the Witchcrafts of Elisabeth Style, whom he discovered to be a Witch, by foretelling her coming into an Houfe, and going out again without speaking, as is fet down in the third Relation. He was by all accounted a very odd Perfon

Thus I have written the fum of Mr. Mompeffon's Difturbance, which I had partly from his own Mouth related before divers, who had been witneffes of all, and confirmed his Relation, and partly from his own Letters, from which the order and feries of things is taken. The fame particulars he writ also to Dr. Greed, then Doctor of the Chair in Oxford,

Mr.

The Collection

Mr. Mompelion is a Gentleman, of whole truth in this ac. count; I have not the least ground of fulpicion, he being neither vain nor credulous, but a difcreer, fagacious and manly perfon. Now the credit of matters of Fact depends much upon the Relators, who, if they cannot be deceived themselves, nor supposed any ways intereffed to impose upon others, ought to be credited. For upon these circumstances, all humane Faith is ground. ed, and matter of Fact is not capable of any proof befides, but that of immediate fenfible evidence. Now this Gentlemen cannot be thought ignorant, whether that he relates be true or no. the Scene of all being his own house, himself a witness, and that not of a circumstance or two, but of an hundred, nor for once or twice only, but for the space of some years, during which he was a concerned, and inquifitive Observer. So that it cannot with any flew of reafon be supposed that any of his Servants abused him, fince in all that time he must needs have detected the deceit. And what interest could any of his Family have had (if it had been poffible to have managed without difcovery) to continue to long to troublefome, and to injurious an Imposture? Nor can it with any whit of more probability be imagined, that his own melancholy deluded him fince (befides that he is no crazy, nor imaginative perfon) that humour could not have been to lafting and pertinacious. Or if it were to in him, can we think he infected his whole Family, and those multitudes of Neighhours and others, who had to often been witneffes of thole paffages? Such fuppofals are wild, and not like to tempt any, but those whose Wills are their Reasons. So that upon the whole, the principal Relator Mr. Mompeffon himfelf knew, whether what he reports was true or not, whether those things acted in his House were contrived Cheats, or extraordinary Realities. And if fo, what interest could he serve in carrying on, or conniving at a jugling Defign and Impofture ?

He fuffered by it in his Name, in his Eftate, in all his Affairs, and in the general peace of his Family. The Unbelievers in the matter of Spirits and Witches took him for an Impoftor. Many others judged the permiffion of fuch an extraordinary Evil to be the judgment of God upon him, for fome notorious wickedness or impiety. Thus his Name was continually exposed to censure, and his Estate suffered, by the concourse of people from all parts to his House, by the diversion it gave him from his affairs, by the discouragement of Servants, by reason of which he could hardly get any to live with him. To which if I add the continual hurry that his Family was in, the affrights frights, vexations and toffings up and down of his Children. and the watchings and Difturbance of his whole house (in all which, himfelf must needs be the most concerned) I fay. if these things are confidered, there will be little reason to think he could have any interest to put a cheat upon the World, in which he would most have injured and abused himfelf. Or if he should of all have designed and managed fo incredible, fo unprofitable a Delusion, 'tis strange that he should have troubled himfelf to long in fuch a bufinefs, only to deceive. and to be talkt of. And it is yet more fo, that none of those many inquisitive perfons that came thither purposely to criticize and examine the truth of those matters, could make any discoveries of the Jugling, especially fince many came prejudiced against the belief of such things in general, and others rcfolved before-hand against the belief of this, and all were permitted the utmost freedom of fearch and enquiry. And after things were weighed and examined, fome that were before greatlyprejudiced, went away fully convinced. To all which I add, that

There are divers particulars in the ftory, in which no abufe or deceit could have been practiled, as the motion of Boards and Chairs of themfelves, the beating of a Drum in the midit of a Room, and in the Air, when nothing was to be feen: the great heat in a Chamber that had no Fire in exceffive cold weather, the fcratching and panting, the violent beating and fhaking of the Bedfteads, of which there was no perceivable caufe or occasion: In these and fuch like Instances, it is not to be conceived how tricks could have been put upon fo many, fo jealous, and fo inquisitive Perfons as were withes of them.

'Tis true, that when the Gentlemen the King fent were there, the Houfe was quiet, and nothing feen nor heard that night, which was confidently and with triumph urged by many. as a confutation of the ftory. But 'twas bad Logick to conclude im matters of Fast from a fingle Negative and fuch a one against numerous Affirmatives, and to affirm that a thing was never done, because not at such a particular time, and that no body ever faw what this Man or that did not. By the fame way of reasoning, I may infer that there were never any Robberies done on Salisbury Plain, Hounflow Heath, or the noted places, because I have often Travelled all those ways, and yet was never Robbed; and the Spaniard inferred well that faid, There was no Sun in England, becaufe he had been fix weeks here, and never faw it. This is the common argument of those that deny the Being of Apparitions, they have Travelled all hours of the night, and never faw any thing worfe than themfelves (which may may well be) and thence they conclude, that all pretended Apparitions are Fancies or Impostures. But why do not fuch arguers conclude, that there was never a Cut-purse in London, because they have lived there many years without being met with by any of those Practises? Certainly he that denies Apparitions upon the confidence of this Negative against the vast heap of Positive assures, is credulous in believing there was ever any Highway-man in the World, if he himself was never Robb'd. And the Trials of Affizes and Attestations of those that have (if he will be just) ought to move his Affent no more in this case, than in that of Witches and Apparitions, which have the very fame evidence.

But as to the quiet of Mr. Mompeffon's houle when the Courtiers were there, it may be remembred and confidered, that the diffurbance was not conftant, but intermitted fometimes feveral days, fometimes weeks. So that the intermiffion at that time might be accidental, or perhaps the Demon was not willing to give fo publick a Teftimony of thole Tranfactons, which poffibly might convince thole, who he had rather fhould continue in the unbelief of his exiftence. But however it were, this circumftance will afford but a very flender inference againft the credit of the ftory, except among thole who are willing to take any thing for an Argument againft things which they have an intereft not to acknowledge.

I have thus related the fum of the ftory, and noted fome circumftances that affure the truth of it. I confeis the paffages recited are not fo dreadful, tragical and amazing, as there are fome in ftory of this kind yet ; are they never the lefs probable or true, for being not fo prodigious and aftonishing, And they are ftrange enough to prove themfelves effects of fome invisible extraordinary Agents, and fo demonstrate that there are Spirits, who fometimes fenfibly intermeddle in our affairs. And I think they do it with clearness of evidence. For these things were not done long ago, or at far distance, in an ignorant age, or among a barbarous people, they were not feen by two or three only of the Melancholick and Superfitious, and reported by those that made them serve the advantage and interest of a party They were not the passages of a Day or Night, nor the vanishing glances of an Apparition; but these Transactions were near and late, publick, frequent, and of divers years continuance, witneffed by multitudes of competent and unbyaffed Atteftors, and acted in a fearching incredulous Age : Arguments enough one would think to convince any modeft and capable reafon.

THIS Narrative of the Dæmon of Tedworth is published in an Epistolar Form in the former Impressions. But the enlargement thereof, that is to say, the said Narative enlarged for this intended Edition, is not in that form, and therefore is thus published according to Mr. Glanvil's M.S. in this bare simple form it was found. We proceed now to the second Relation.

RELAT. II.

O N Sunday 15. of Novemb. 1657. about Three of the Clock in the Afternoon. Richard Jones then a fprightly youth about twelve years old, Son of Henry Jones of Shepton Mallet, in the County of Somerset, being in his Fathers house alone, and perceiving one looking in at the Windows, went to the Door, where one Jane Brooks of the fame Town (but then by name unknown to this Boy) came to him. She defired him to give her a piece of close Bread, and gave him an Apple. After which the also ftroked him down on the right fide, thook him by the hand, and fo bid him good night. The youth returned into the house, where he had been left well, when his Father and one Gibson went from him, but at their return, which was within an hour or thereabout, they found him ill, and complaining of his right fide, in which the pain continued in most part of that night. And on Munday following in the Evening, the Boy roafted the Apple he had of Jane Brooks, and having eat about half of it, was extreamly ill, and fometimes speechles, but being recovered, he told his Father that a Woman of the Town on Sunday before, had given him that Apple, and that the ftroked him on the fide. He faid he knew not her name, but should her perfon if he faw her. Upon this Jones was advifed to invite the Women of Shepton to come to his Houle, upon the occasion of of his Son's illnefs, and the Child told him, that in cafe the Woman fhould come in when he was in his Fit, if he were not able to speak, he would give him an intimation by a Jogg, and defired that his Father would lead him through the Room, for he faid he would put his hand upon her, if she were there! After this he continuing very ill, many Women came daily to see him, And Jane Brooks the Sunday after, came in with two of her Sisters, and several other Women of the Neighbourhood were there.

Upon her coming in, the Boy was taken to ill, that for fome time he could not see nor speak, but having recovered his sight. he gave his Father the Item, and he led him about the Room, The Boy drew towards Jane Brooks, who was behind her two Sifters among the other Women, and put his hand upon her, which his Father perceiving, immediately scratcheth her Face and drew Blood from her. The Youth then prefently crying out that he was well, and fo he continued feven or eight days. But then meeting with Alice Coward, Sifter to Jane Brooks, who paffing by faid to him, [How do you do my Honey] he prefently fell ill again. And after that, the faid Coward and Brooks often appeared to him. The Boy would describe the Clothes and Habit they were in at the time exactly, as the Constable and others have found upon repairing to them, though Brook's House was at a good diftance from Jones's. This they often tried, and always found the Boy right in his Descriptions.

On a certain Sunday about Noon, the Child being in a Room with his Father and one Gibson. and in his Fit, he on a fudden called out, that he faw Jane Brooks on the Wall, and pointed to the place, where immediately Gibson struck with a Knife. Upon which the Boy cryed out, [O Father, couz Gibfon hath cut 'Fane Brook's hand, and 'tis Bloody] The Father and Gibson immediately repaired to the Constable a different Perion, and acquainting him with what had passed, defired him to go with him to Jane Brook's House, which she did. They found her fitting in her Room on a Stool with one hand over the o ther. The Constable askt her how the did ? She answered, not. well. He ask r again why the fat with one hand over the other She replied, the was wont to do fo. He enquired if any thing were amils with her Hand ? Her answer was, it was well enough. The Conftable defired he might fee the hand that was under, which the being unwilling to thew him, he drew it out and found it bloody according to what the Boy had faid. Being askt how it came fo, the faid 'twas fcratched with a great Pin, On

On the Eighth of December, 1657. The Boy, Jane Brooks and Alice Coward, appeared at Cafile-Cary before the Juftices, Mr. Hunt and Mr. Cary. The Boy having began to give his Teaftimony, upon the coming in of the two Women and their looking on him was inftantly taken Speechlefs; and fo remained till the Women were removed out of the Room, and then in a fhort time upon Examination he gave a full relation of the mentioned particulars.

On the Eleventh of January following, the Boy was again Examined by the fame Justices at Shepton Mallet, and upon the fight of Jane Brooks was again taken Speechlefs, but was not fo afterwards when Alice Coward came into the Room to him.

On the next appearance at Shepton, which was on the Seventeenth of February, there were present many Gentlemen, Ministers and others. The Boy fell into his Fits upon the fight of Jane Brooks, and lay in a Man's Arms like a dead Perfon; the Woman was then willed to lay her Hand on him, which the did and he thereupon started and sprang out in a very strange and unufual manner. One of the Justices to prevent all possibilities of Legerdemain, cauled Gibson and the reft to stand off from the Boy, and then that Justice himself held him; the Youth being blind-folded, the Justice called as if Brooks should touch him, but winked to others to do it, which two or three fucceffively did, but the Boy appeared not concerned. The Justice then called on the Father to take him, but had privately before defired one Mr Geoffery Strode, to bring Jane Brooks to touch him at fuch a time as he should call for his Father, which was done, and the Boy immediately sprang out after a very odd and violent fashion. He was after touched by several Persons and moved not, but Jane Brooks being again caused to put her Hand upon him, he started and sprang out twice or thrice as before. All this while he remained in his Fit and fome time after ; and being then laid on a Bed in the fame Room, the People prefent could not for a long time bow either of his Arms or Legs.

Between the mentioned 15. of Nov. and the 11. of Jan. the two Women appeared often to the Boy, their Hands cold, their Eyes ftaring, and their Lips and Cheeks looking pale. In this manner on a Thurfday about Noon, the Boy being newly laid into his Bed, Jane Brooks and Alice Coward appeared to him, and told him that what they had begun they could not perform. But if he would fay no more of it, they would give him Money, and fo put a Two-pence into his Pocket. After which they took him out of his Bed, laid him on the ground and vanished, and the Boy was found by those that came next into the Room lying 66

'lying on the Floor as if he had been dead. The Two-pence was feen by many, and when it was put into the Fire and hot, the Boy would fall ill; but as foon as it was taken out and cold, he would be again as well as before. This was feen and obferved by a Minister, a difcreet Person, when the Boy was in one Room, and the Two-pence (without his knowledge) put into the Fire in another, and this was divers times tried, in the prefence of feveral Persons.

Between the 8 of Dec. and the 17 of Feb. in the Year mentioned, divers Perfons at fundry times, heard in the Boy, a noife like the croaking of a Toad, and a Voice within him faying, Jane Brooks, Alice Coward, twelve times in near a quarter of an Hour. At the fame time fome held a Candle before the Boy's Face, and earneftly looked on him, but could not perceive the leaft motion of his Tongue, Teeth, or Lips, while the Voice was heard.

On the 25 of Feb. between two and three in the After² noon, the Boy being at the House of Richard Isles in Shepton Mallet, went out of the Room into the Garden, Isles his Wife tollowed him, and was within two Yards when the faw him rife up from the ground before her, and so mounted higher and higher, till he passed in the Air over the Garden-Wall, and was carried to above ground more than 30 Yards, falling at last at one Jordan's Door at Shepton, where he was found as dead for a time; but coming to himtelf, told Jordan, that Jane Brooks had taken him up by the Arm out of Isles his Garden, and carried him in the Air, as is related.

The Boy at feveral other times, was gone on the fudden, and upon fearch after him, found in another Room as dead, and at fometimes ftrangely hanging above the ground; his Hands being flat againft a great Beam in the top of the Room; and all his Body 2 or 3 Foot from ground. There he hath hung a quarrer of an Hour together, and being afterwards come to himfelf, he told those that found him, that Jane Brooks had carried him to that place, and held him there. Nine People at a time faw the Boy so ftrangely hanging by the Beam.

From the 15 of Nov. to the 10 of March following, he was by reason of his Fits, much wasted in his Body, and unspirited; but after that time, being the Day the two Women were sent to Goal, he had no more of those Fits.

Jane Brooks was Condemned and Executed at Charde Affizes, March 26, 1658.

This

of Relations.

This is the fum of Mr. Hunt's Narrative, which concludes with both the Justices Attestation, thus:

The aforefaid Paffages, were fome of them feen by us; and the rest, and fome other remarkable ones, not here fet down, were upon the Examination of feveral credible Witneffes, taken upon Oath before us.

Subscribed,

Rob. Hunt, John Cary.

This I think is good Evidenc of the being of Witches; if the Sadducee be not fatisfied with it, I would fain know what kind of Proof he would expect. Here are Teltimonies of Senfe, the Oaths of feveral credible Attesters, the nice and deliberate Scrutiny of quick-fighted and judicious Examiners, and the Judgment of an Affize upon the whole. And now the fecurity of all our Lives and Fortunes depends upon no greater circumftances of Evidence than these. If fuch Proof may not be credited, no Fact can be proved, no Wickedness can be punished, no Right can be determined, Law is at an end, and blind Juftice cannot tell how to decide any thing.

A DVERTISEMENT.

THE most fit Advertifement here, is Mr. Glanvil's Transition to fresh Evidences, out of Mr. Hunt's Examinations, which which is this. Thus far, faith he, the Evidence of Fact went in the former Editions, but having resolved upon this Re-inforcement, I writ again to my Honoured Friend Mr. Hunt, knowing he had more Materials for my purpole; and such as would afford Proof fufficient to any modest Doubter. In Answer he was pleased to fend me his Book of Examinations of Witches, which he kept by him, fairly Written. It contains, the Discovery of fuch an Hellish Knot of them, and that Discovery so clear and plain, that perhaps there bath not yet any thing appeared to us with stronger Evidence to confirm the belief of Witches. And had not his Discoveries and Endeaveurs metwith great Opposition and Discouragements from fome then in Authority, the whole Clan of those Hellish Confedorates derates in these parts had been justify exposed and punished. Our of that Book I have collected some main Instances, the clearness of which I think will be enough to overcome and silence any indifferent Prejudice. But some are so settled and obdurate, that no Proof in the World is sufficient to remove them. I begin with the Witchcrafts of Elizabeth Style.

RELAT. III.

Which containeth the Witchcrafts of Elizabeth Style of Bayford, Widow.

THIS Elizabeth Style of Stoke Trifter, in the County of Somerfet. was accused by divers Persons of Credit, upon Oath, before Mr. Hunt, and particularly and largely Confessed her Guilt her self, which was found by the Jury at her Trial at Taunton; but the 'prevented Execution, by dying in Goal, a little before the expiring of the term her Confederate Demen had set for her enjoyment of Diabolical Pleasures in this Life. I have shortned the Examinations, and east them into such an order, as I think sittest for the rendring the Matter clear and intelligible.

1. Exam. Rich. Hill, of Stoke Trifter, in the County of Somerfet, Ycoman; being Examined upon Oath, Jan. 23, 1664, before Rob. Hunt, Etq; one of his Majefties Juftices for that County, concerning the Bewitching of his Daughter by Eliz-Style, declareth, That his Daughter Elizabeth Hill, about the the Age of 3 Years, hath been for about two Months laft paft, taken with very ftrange Fits, which have held 2 or 3 Hours and more; and that in thole Fits, the Child hath told her Father the Examinant and others, that one Eliz. Style, of the fame Parifh, appeared to her, and is the Perfon that Torments her. She alfo in her Fits, ufually tells what Cloaths Eliz. Style hath on at the time, which the Informant and others have feen and found true.

He faith farther, that about a Fortnight before Christmas laft, he told Style, that his Daughter spoke much of her in her Firs, and did believe that she was bewitched by her. Whereupon Francis White, and Walter, and Robert Thick being present, willed her her to complain to the Justice against him, for accusing of her. But the having used feveral Put offs, faid, the would do worfe than fetch a Warrant. After which, the Girl grew worfe than before, and at the end of a Fit, the tells the Examinant when the thall have another, which happens accordingly, and affirms, that Style tells her when the next Fit shall come. He informs farther, That Monday Night after Christmas-day, about 9 of the Clock. and 4 or 5 times fince, about the fame Hour of the Night, his Daughter had been more Tormented than formerly, and that though held in a Chair by four or five People, fometimes fix, by the Arms, Legs, and Shoulders, fhe would rife out of her Chair, and raife her Body about three or four Foor high. And that after, in her Fits, the would have Holes made in her Hand, Wrift, Face, Neck, and other parts of her Body, which the Informant, and others that faw them, conceived to be with Thorns; for they faw Thorns in her Flefh, and fome they hooked out. That upon the Child's pointing with her Finger from place to place, the Thorns and Holes immediately appeared to the Informant and others looking on. And as foon as the Child can speak after the Fit, she faith, that Widow Style did prick her with Thorns in those feveral places, which was horrible Torment, and the feemed to the Informant and others standing by, to be in extreme Pain and Torture. The Child hath been to tormented and pricked with Thorns four feveral Nights, at which time the Informant and many other People have feen the Fleih rife up in little Bunches, in which Holes did appear. The Pricking held about a Quarter of an Hour at a time, during each of the four Firs, and the Informant hath feen the Child take out fome of those Thorns.

The fame Rich. Hill, Examined Jan. 26. 1664 informs, that when he rode from the Justice's House, with a Warrant to bring Style before him, his Horse on a fudden st down on his Breech, and he could not after ride him, but as soon as he attempted to get up, his Horse would fit down and paw with his Fore-Feet. He saith farther, That since Style was Examined before the Justice, and made her Confession to him, she hath acknowledged to the Informant, that she had hurt his Daughter, and that one Ann Bisson, and Alice Duke, did join in Bewitching her.

Taken upon Oath, before me,

2. Exam. William Parsons, Rector of Stoke Trister, in the County of Somerset. Examined the 26 of Jan. 1664 before Rob. Hunt, Elq; concerning the Bewitching of Rich. Hill's Daughter, faith, That on Monday Night after Christmas-day, then last past, he came into the Room when Eliz. Hill was in her Fit, many of his Parishioners being present, and looking on. He there faw the Child held in a Chair by main force by the People, plunging far beyond the strength of Nature, Foaming and Catching at her own Arms and Cloaths with her Teeth. This Fit he conceives held about half an Hour. After some time. the pointed with her Finger to the Left-fide of her Head, next to her Left-Arm, and then to her .Left-Hand, Sc. and where she pointed, he perceived a Red-sporto arise, with a small black in the midft of it, like a small Thorn. She pointed also to her Toes one after another, and exprest great sense of Torment. This latter Fir, he gueffes, continued about a quarter of an Hour, during moft, or all of which time, her Stomach feem'd to fwell, and her Head where the feem'd to be prickt, did fo very much. She fate Foaming much of the time, and the next Day after her Fit, she shew'd the Examinant the places where the Thorns were fluck in, and he faw the Thorns in those places.

Taken upon Oath, before me,

Rob. Hunt.

William Parsons, Rector of Stoke Trifter.

3. Exam. Nicholas Lambert, of Bayford, in the County of Somerfet, Yeoman, Examined upon Oath, before Rob. Hunt, Eiq; Jan 30 1664, concerning the Bewitching of Rich. Hill's Daughter, by Elizabeth Style, testifieth, That Munday after Christmas-day last, being with others in the House of Rich. Hill, he faw his Daughter Elizabeth taken very ill, and in Fits that were fo strong, that six Men could not hold her down in a Chair in which she was sate, but that she would raise the Chair up in spight of their utmoss force. That in her Fits being not able to speak, she would wrest her Body as one in great Torment, and point with her Finger to her Neck, Head, Hands, Wrists, Arms, and Toes. And he, with the rest, looking on the places to which she pointed, faw on the sudden, little Redspots fpots arise with little black ones in the midst, as if Thorns were fluck in them, but the Child then only pointed without touching her Flesh with her Finger.

Taken upon Oath, before me,

Rob. Hunt.

4. Exam. Richard Vining, of Stoke Trifter, Butcher, Examined Jan. 26, 1664, before Rob. Hunt, Elq; concerning the Bewitching of his Wife by Eliz. Style, faith, That about 2 or 3 Days before St. James's Day, 3 Years fince, or thereabout, his late Wife Agnes fell out with Eliz. Style, and within 2 or 3 Days after, the was taken with a grievous pricking in her Thigh, which pain continued for a long time, till after fome Phylick taken from one Hallet, the was at some Ease for 3 or 4 Weeks. About the Christmas after the mentioned St. James's Day, Style came to the Examinant's House, and gave Agnes his Wife two Apples, one of them was a very Fair Red-apple, which Style defired her to Ear, which she did, and in a few Hours was taken ill, and worfe than ever the had been before. Upon this, the Examinant went to one Mr. Compton, who lived in the Parish of Ditch Eate, (the same Person that shewed my Friend his Wife in a Glass, as I have related in the Story of Mr. Mompeffon) for Phylick for his Wife. Compton told him he could do her no good, for that the was hurt by a near Neighbour, who would come into his House, and up into the Chamber where his Wife was, but would go out again without fpeaking. After Vining came home, being in the Chamber with his Wife, Style came up to them, but went out again without fpeaking a word. Agnes his Wife continued in great pain till Easter-Eve following, and then she dyed. Before her Death her Hip rotted, and one of her Eyes swell'd out : She declared to him then, and at feveral times before, that she believed Eliz. Style had Bewitched her, and that the was the caule of her Death.

Taken upon Oath, before me,

Rob. Hunt.

Whilft the Justice was Examining Style at Wincaunton, (which is not above a Mile and a half from Stoke Trifter) upon the former Evidence against her, he observed that Rich. Vining lookt very very earneftly upon him ; whereupon he askt Vining if he had any thing to fay unto him: He answered, That Style had Bewitched his Wife, and told the manner how, as is in his Depo. fition related. The Woman Style upon this, feemed appaled and concerned, and the Juffice faying to her, You have been an old Sinner, &c. You deferve little Mercy: She replied, I have askt God mercy for it. Mr. Hunt askt her, Why then the would continue in fuch ill Courfes? She faid, The Devil tempted her: and then began to make fome Confession of his actings with her: Upon this, the Justice fent her to the Constable's House at Bayford, which is in the Parish of Stoke Trister, (the Constable was one Mr. Gapper) and the next Morning went thither himself, accompanied with two Persons of Quality. Mr. Bull, and Mr. Court, now Justices of the Peace in this County.

Now before I proceed farther in the Story, I shall take notice, that here are Three credible Witneffes Swearing to the fame particulars, in that the Child Elizabeth Hill, was fometimes in strange Fits, in which her strength was encreased beyond the proportion of Nature, and the force of divers Men: That then the pointed to the Parts of her Body, where they faw Red-spots arising, and black specks in the midst of them. that the complained that the was prickt with Thorns, and two of them faw Thorns in the place of which the complained. Some of which Thorns, one Swears that he and others faw hooked out, and that the Girl her felf pulled out others : That in her Fits he declared Style appears to her (as Jane Brooks did to Richard Jones, in the former Relation] and tells her when the shall have another Fit, which happens accordingly: That the defcribes the Cloaths the Woman hath on, exactly as they find. But notwithstanding, all this shall be Melancholy and Fancy ; or Leger-de-main, or natural Diffemper, or any thing but Witchcraft; or the Fact shall be denied, and the 3 Witneffes perjur'd, though this confidence against the Oaths of lober Men, tend to the overthrow of all Teftimony and Hiftory, and the rendering all Law useles. I shall therefore proceed to farther Proof, and fuch as will abundantly ftrengthen this. It is the Confession of Style her self.

I left Mr. Hunt, and the other two Gentlemen at the Conftable's Houle, where Style was, upon bufinels of farther Examination, where the enlarged upon the Confession the had before begun to make, and declared the whole matter at that and two other times after, in the particulars that follow.

5. Exam.

5. Exam. Elizabeth Styles her Confession of her Witchcrafts, Jan. 26 and 30, and Feb. 7, 1664, before Rob. Hunt Elq; She then confessed. That the Devil about 10 Years fince, appeared to her in the shape of a handsome Man, and after of a Black-Dog; that he promised her Money, and that she should Live gallantly, and have the Pleasure of the World for 12 Years, if she would with her Blood sign his Paper, which was to give her Soul to him, and observe his Laws, and that he might suck her Blood. This after sour Solicitations, the Examinant promised to do; upon which, he prickt the fourth Finger of her Right-hand, between the middle and upper Joint, (where the fign at the Examination remained) and with a Drop or two of her Blood, the figned the Paper with an [0] Upon this, the Devil gave her Sixpence, and vanisht with the Paper.

That fince he hath appeared to her in the fhape of a Man, and did fo on Wednefday Seven-night paft, but more usually he appears in the likeness of a Dog, and Cat, and a Fly like a Millar, in which laft he usually sucks in the Pollabout four of the Clock in the Morning, and did fo $\mathcal{F}an$. 27, and that it usually is pain to her to be fo fuckt.

That when the hath a defire to do harm, the calls the Spirit by the Name of Robin, to whom when he appeareth, the ufeth these words, O Satan give me my purpose! She then tells him what the would have done. And that he thould to appear to her, was part of her Contract with him.

That about a Month ago he appearing, fhe defired him to Torment one Elizabeth Hill, and to thruft Thorns into her Flefh, which he promifed to do, and the next time he appeared, he told her he had done it.

That a little above a Month fince this Examinant, Alice Duke, Ann Bifhop, and Mary Penny, met about 9 of the Clock in the Night, in the Common near Trifter Gate, where they met a Man in Black-cloaths, with a little Band, to whom they did Courtefie and due Observance, and the Examinant verily believes that this was the Devil. At that time Alice Duke brought a Picture in Wax, which was for Elizabeth Hill. The Man in Black took it in his Arms, anointed its Fore-head, and faid, I Baptize thee with this Oyl, and used some other Words, He was God-Father, and the Examinant and Ann Bishop God-mo-They called it Elizabeth or Beß. Then the Man in Black, thers. this Examinant, Ann Bilbop, and Alice Duke fluck Thorns into feveral places of the Neck, Hand-Wrifts, Fingers, and other Parts of the faid Picture. After which they had Wine, Cakes, and Roaft-meat, (all brought by the Man in Black) which U4 they they did eat and drink. They danced and were merry, were bodily there and in their Clothes.

She farther faith, that the fame perfons met again, at or near the fame place about a Month fince, when Anne Bifkop brought a Picture in Wax, which was baptized John, in like manner as the other was, the Man in black was Godfather, and Alice Duke, and this Examinant God-mothers, As foon as it was baptized, Anne Bifkop fluck two Thorns into the Arms of the Picture, which was for one Robert Numan's Child of Wincaunton. After they had eaten, drank, danced, and made merry, they departed.

That the with Anne Bifhop, and Alice Duke met at another time in the Night, in a ground near Marnhul, where also met feveral other persons. The Devil then also there in the former shape, baptized a Picture by the name of Anne or Rachel Hatcher The Picture one Dunfords's Wife brought, and stuck Thorns in it. Then they also made merry with Wine and Cakes, and so departed.

She faith, before they are carried to their meetings, they anoint their Foreheads, and Hand-Wrifts with an Oyl the Spirit brings them which fmells raw) and then they are carried in a very fhort time, using these words as they pass, Thout, tout, a tout, tout, throughout and about. And when they go off from their Meetings, they fay Rentum Tormentum.

That at their first meeting, the Man in black bids them welcome, and they all make low obeyfance to him, and he delivers fome Wax Candles like little Torches, which they give back again at parting. When they anoint themfelves, they use a long form of words, and when they flick in Thorns into the Pictpre of any they would torment, they fay A Pox on thee, I le spite thee.

That at every meeting before the Spirit vanisheth away, he appoints the next meeting place and time, and at his departure there is a foul smell. At their meeting they have usually Wine or good Beer, Cakes, Meat, or the like. They eat and drink really when they meet in their bodies, dance also and have Musick. The Man in black fits at the higher end, and Anne Bisloop usually next him. He useth some words before meat, and none after; his voice is audible, but very low.

That they are carried fometimes in their Bodies and their Clothes, fometimes without, and as the Examinant thinks their Bodies are fometimes left behind. When only their Spirits are prefent, yet they know one another.

When they would bewitch Man, Woman or Child, they do it fometimes by a Pisture made in Wax, which the Devil formally Baptizeth. Sometimes they have an Apple, Diflo, Spoon, or other thing from their evil Spirit, which they give to the party to whom they would do harm. Upon which they have power to hurt the perfon that eats or receives it. Sometimes they have power to do mifchief by a touch or curfe by thefe they can mifchief Cattle and by curfing without touching; but neither without the Devils leave.

That the hath been at feveral general meetings in the night at High Common, and a Common near Matcomb, at a place near Marnhull, and at other places where have met John Combes, John Vining, Richard Dickes, Thomas Bofter or Bolfter, Thomas Dunning, James Buffe a lame Man, Rachel King, Richard Lannen, a Woman called Dunford, Alice Duke, Anne Bifhop, Marj Penny and Chriftopher Ellen, all which did obeyfance to the Man in black, who was at every one of their meetings. Ufually they have at them fome Picture Baptized.

The Man in black, fometimes plays on a Pipe or Cittern, and the Company dance. At laft the Devil vanisheth, and all are carried to their feveral homes in a short space. At their parting they fay [A Boy! merry meet, merry part.]

That the reason why she caused Elizabeth Hill to be the more cormented was, because her Father had faid, she was a Witch. That she has seen Alice Dukes Familiar suck her, in the shape of a Cat, and Anne Bishops suck her in the shape of a Rat.

That the never heard the name of God or Jefus Chrift mentioned at any of their meetings.

That Anne Bishop, about five years and a half fince, did bring a Picture in Wax to their meeting, which was baptized by the Man in black, and called Peter. It was for Robert Nemman's Child at Wincaunton.

That fome two years ago, fhe gave two Apples to Agnes Vining, late Wife of Richard Vining, and that fhe had one of the Apples from the Devil, who then appeared to her and told, That Apple would do Vining's Wives busines.

6. Exam. William Parfons Rector of Stoke Trifter, Examined Feb. 7. 1664. before Rob. Hune Efg; concerning Elizabeth Style's confession, faith, That he heard Style before the Justice of Peace, at the time of her Examination confess, as the hath done allo to the Examinant feveral times fince, that the was in Covenant with the Devil, that the had figned it with her Blood, that the had been with the Devil at feveral meetings in the night, that at one time of those meetings, there was brought a Picture in blackish Wax, which the Devil in the shape of a Man in blackish Clothes, did Baptize by the name of Eliz. Hill, that the did stick in one Thorn into the Hand-Wrifts of the Picture, that Alice Duke stuck Thorns into the fame. and that Anne Bisloop and Mary Penny were present at that meeting with the Devil.

This Confession of Styles was free and unforced, with out any torturing or watching drawn from her by a gentle Examination. meeting with the Convictions of a guilty Confeience. She confeffeth that she defired the Devil to torment Eliz. Hill, by thrusting Thorns into her Flesh, which he promised, and faid he had done it, That a Picture was Baptized for her the faid Elizabeth, and that she, the Familiar and Alice Duke stuck Thorns into feveral places of the Neck, Hand-Wrifts, Fingers and other parts thereof, which exactly agrees with the ftrange Effects related, concerning the torments the Child fuffer'd, and this mifchief fhe confesseth she did, because her Father faid she was a Witch. She confeffed the gave two Apples to Vinings Wife, one of which the had from the Devil, who faid it would do the business, which futes also with the Testimony of Vining concerning his Wife.

She confeffeth farther, That the Devil ufeth to fuck her in the Poll, about four a Clock in the Morning, in the Form of a Fly like a Millar, concerning which, let us hear Teftimony (the other particulars of her Confeffion we shall confider as occasion offers)

7. Exam.

7. Exam. Nicholas I ambert Examined again Jan. 26. 1664. before Rob. Hunt Elq, concerning what happened after Styles confession, testifyeth, That Eliz. Style having been Examined before the Justice, made her Confession, and committed to the Officer, the Justice required this Examinant, William Thick and William Read of Bayford to watch her, which they did : and this Informant fitting near Style by the Fire, and reading in the Practice of Piety, about Three of the Clock in the Morning there came from her Head a gliftering bright Fly, about an Inch in length, which pitched at first in the Chimney, and then vanished. In less than a quarter of an hour after, there appeared two Flies more of a lefs fize, and another colour which feemed to strike at the Examinants hand, in which he held his Book, but miffed it, the one going over, the other going under at the fame time. He looking ftedfaftly then on Style, perceived her countenance to change, und to become very black and gaftly. the Fire also at the fame time changing its colour; whereupon the Examinant, Thick and Read conceiving that her Familiar was then about her, looked to her Poll, and feeing her Hair shake very ftrangely took it up, and then a Fly like a great Millar flew out from the place, and pitched on the Table-board, and then vanifhed away. Upon this the Examinant, and the other two perfons looking again in Styles Poll, found it very red and like raw Beef. The Examinant askt her what it was that went out of her Poll, the faid it was a Butterfly, and and askt them why they had not caught it. Lambert faid, they could not. I think fo too, answered she. A little while after, the Informant and the others looking again into her Poll, found the place to be of its former colour. The Examinant demanded again what the Fly was, the confessed it was her Familiar, and that the felt it tickle in her Poll, and that was the usual time when her Familiar came to her.

8. Exam. Eliz. Torwood of Bayford, Examined Feb. 7. 1664. before Robert Hunt Elq; concerning the Mark found about Eliz. Style after her Confession, Deposeth, That she together with Catherine White, Mary Day, Mary Bolster, and Bridget Prankard, did a little after Christmas last, fearch Eliz. Style, and that in her Poll they found a little rising which felt hard like like a Kernel of Beef, whereupon they fulfpecting it to be an ill mark, thruft a Pin into it, and having drawn it out, thruft it in again the fecond time, leaving it flicking in the flefth for fome time, that the other Women might allo fee it. Notwithstanding which Style did neither at the first or fecond time make the least fhew that the felt any thing. But after, when the Constable told her he would thruft in a Pin to the place, and made a fhew as if he did, O Lord, faid fhe, do you prick me? whenas no one then touched her.

The Examinant farther faith, that Style hath fince confessed to her, that her Familiar did use to suck her in the place mentioned, in the shape of a great Millar or Buttersfly.

Catherine Wnite, Mary Day, Mary Bolfter, and Bridget Prankard do 1ay, that the above faid Examination of Eliz. Torwood is truth.

RELAT. IV.

Which is the Examination and Confession of Alice Duke, alias Manning (another Witch of Styles Knot) of Wincaunton, in the County of Somerlet Widow, taken Jan. 27. and Feb. 2. 7. 10. 21. An. 1664. before Robert Hunt Esg,

T H E Examinant faith, That when the lived with Anne Bifloop of Wincaunton, about Eleven or Twelve years ago Anne Bifloop perfuaded her to go with her into the Church-yard in the night-time, and being come thither, to go backward round the Church, which they did three times. In their first round, they met a Man in black Clothes, who went round a fecond time with them, and then they met a thing in the fhape of a great black Toad, which leapt up against the Examinants Apron. In their third round they met fomewhat in the fhape of of a Rat, which vanished away. After this the Examinant and Anne Bishop went home, but before Anne Bishop went off, the Man in black faid somewhat to her softly, which the Informant could not hear.

A few days after, Anne Bishop speaking about their going round the Church, told the Examinant, that now the might have her defire, and what the would with for. And thorrly after, the Devil appeared to her in the shape of a Man, promising that the thould want nothing, and that if the curfed any thing with A Pox take it, the thould have her purpole, in cafe the would give her Soul to him, fuffer him to fuck her Blood, keep his Secrets, and be his inftrument to do fuch milchief as he would fet her about. All which, upon his fecond appearing to her, the yielded to, and the Devil having prickt the fourth finger of her right hand between the middle and upper joynt (where the mark is yet to be feen) gave her a Pen, with which the made a crofs or mark with her Blood on Paper or Parchment, that the Devil offered her for the confirmation of the Agreement, which was done in the prefence of Anne Bifloop. And as foon as the Examinant had figned it, the Devil gave her Sixpence, and went away with the Paper or Parchment.

Further the confesseth, That the hath been at feveral meetings in Lie Common, and other places in the night, and that her Forehead being first anointed with a Feather dipt in Oyl, the hath been fuddenly carried to the place of their meeting. That about five or fix Weeks fince (or more) the met in the faid Common in the night, where were prefent Anne Bifhop, Mary Penny of Wincaunton, Elizabeth Style of Bayford, and a Man in black Clothes with a little Band, whom the supposeth to have been the Devil. At the meeting there was a Picture in Wax. which the Man in black took in his Arms, and having anointed its Forehead with a little greenish Oyl, and using a few words, Baptized it by the name of Elizabeth or Befs Hill, for the Daughter of Richard Hill. Then the Devil, this Examinant, Anne Bifloop, and Elizabeth Sile fluck Thorns in the Neck, Head, Hand-wrifts, Fingers and other parts of the Picture, faying, A Pox on thee, I'le spite thee. This done, all fat down, a white Cloth being fpread on the ground, aad did drink Wine, and eat Cakes and Meat. After all was ended, the Man in black vanished, leaving an ugly smell at parting. The reft were on a fudden conveyed to their homes,

On Monday Night after Christman Day laft, the met the fame Company again, near about the fame Place, and then Ann Bishop (who was there in a Green-apron, a French-Wastcoar, and a Red-Perticoat) brought in her Apron a Picture in blackish Wax, which the Devil Baptized as before, by the Name of John Newman, for the Son of Rob. Newman of Wincaunton, and then the Devil first, after Ann Bishop and this Examinant thrust Thorns into the Picture, Ann Bishop flicking in two Thorns into the Arms of it. The Picture Ann Bishop carried away with her. They were all there prefent in their Cloaths, and the Devil in the Shape of a Man in Black.

About 5 Years and a half fince, the fame Perfons were at the Baptizing of another Image, by the Name of Peter Newman, another Son of Robert Newman, both which are fince dead, and then Ann Bifloop defired the Examinant to joyn with her in Bewitching of Peter and John Newman.

At another time the was carried to a Meeting in the Night, to a green Place near Marnhull as the was then told, where were prefent Ann Bifloop, Elizabeth Style, Mary Penny, and fome unknown to her. Then also an Image in Wax was Baptized by the Devil, in the fore-related manner, by the Name of Ann or Rachel Hatcher, one of Marnhull, as the was then informed. After the Ceremony was ended, they had Wine, Cakes, Sc. She likewife confession, That the was at another fuch Meeting, where 12 Perfons were prefent, many of whom were unknown to her, but the took notice of one lame Man in blackift Hair among them, and of the Devil as before.

She faith, That after their Meetings, they all make very low Obeyfances to the Devil, who appears in Black-cloaths, and a little Band. He bids them Welcome at their coming, and brings Wine or Beer, Cakes, Meat, or thelike. He fits at the higher end, and ufually Ann Bifloop fits next him. They Eat, Drink, Dance, and have Mufick. At their parting they ufe to fay, Merry meet, merry part; and that before they are carried to their Meetings, their Foreheads are anointed with greenifh Oyl that they have from the Spirit, which finells raw. They for the most part are carried in the Air. As they fass they fay, Thout, tout a tout, tout, throughout and about. Passing back they fay, Rentum Tormentum, and another Word which she doth not remember.

She confession. That her Familiar doth commonly such her Right-breast about 7 at Night, in the Shape of a little Cat of a dunnish Colour, which is as smooth as a Want, and when she is suckt, she is in a kind of a Trance.

That

That she hurt Thomas Garres's Cows, bœause he refused to Write a Petition for her.

That she hurt Thomas Conway, by putting a Dish into his Hand, which Dish she had from the Devil, she gave it him to give his Daughter for good Hansel.

That the hurt Dorothy the Wife of George Vining, by giving an Iron-flate to put into her Steeling-box.

That being angry with Edith Watts, the Daughter of Edmond Watts, for treading on her Foot, the Curled Edith with a Pox on you, and after touched her, which hath done the faid Edith much harm, for which the is forry.

That being provoked by Swanton's first Wife, she did before her Death Curse her, with a Pox on you, believes she did thereby hurt her, but denies she did Bewirch Mr. Swanton's Cattle,

She faith, That when the Devil doth any thing for her, fhe calls for him by the Name of Robin, upon which he appears, and when in the Shape of a Man, fhe can hear him fpeck, but his Voice is very low. He promifed her, when fhe made her Contract with him, that fhe fhould want nothing, but ever fince fhe hath wanted all things.

1. Exam. Thomas Conway of Wincaunton in the County of Somerfet, Examined Feb. 12, 1664, before Robert Hunt Elquire, concerning Alice Duke, informeth, That about 12 Months fince Alice Duke, alias Manning, brought a little Pewter-difh to this Informant, and told him that it was good Handsel for his Daughter. The Examinant willed the faid Alice to carry it to her, she being within by the Fire, but she forc'd the Dish into his Hand, and went away; shortly after he was taken extremely ill in all his Limbs, of which Illness the Physicians whom he applied himfelf to, could give no account. When the went from him, the was very angry, and mutter'd much, because he would not fign a Petition on her behalf. She hath confeffed to him fince, that the had the Difh from the Devil, and gave it to him on purpose to hurr him. He hath been, and is fince, in great torment, and much weakened and wasted in his Body, which he imputes to the evil Practices of Alice Duke.

In this Difh fhe warmed a little Deer-fuet and Rofe-water, anointing her Daughters Nipples with it, which put her to extreme pain; upon which, tulpecting harm from the Difh, fhe put it into the Fire, which then prefently vanisht, and nothing of it could afterwards be found. After, when the anointed her Daughters Nipples with the fame Deer-fuet and Rofe-water; warmed in a Spoon, the complained not of any pain: She farther faith, That her Husband after he had received the Difh from the Hands of Alice Duke, was taken ill in all his Limbs; and held for a long time in a very ftrange manner.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Befides the plain Agreement betwixt the Witneffes, and the Witches own Confeffion, it may be worth the taking notice here, how well her Confeffion of having her Familiar fuck her in the shape of a Cat, agrees with Eliz. Style's Confeffion, that she had feeth feen Alice Duke's Familiar fuck her in that Shape. As alfo how the Bewitching of Edward Watt's Child by Alice Duke her faying, A Pox on her, agrees with the Promife of the Devil to her, which is expressly, That if the Curfed any thing with a Pox take it, the flould have her purpole. She alfo testifying of the Baptizing the Image of Eliz. Hill, and of those Forms of Words, Thout, tout a tout, and Rentum Tormentum at their going to their Meetings and departing, plainly shews these are not transacted in Dreams, but in reality. The Devil alfo as in other Stories leaving an ill Smell behind him, seems to imply the reality of the business, here a disting and the vanishing, and so offending the Nofirils by their floating and diffusing themselives in the open Air.

RELAT. V.

Which is the Examination and Confession of Chriftian Green, aged about I hirty three Years, Wife of Robert Green of Brewham, in the County of Somerlet, taken before Robert Hunt Esq; March 2, 1664.

THIS Examinant faith, That about a Year and a half fince, (fhe being in great Poverty) one Catherine Green of Brewham, told her, that if the would, the might be in a better Condition, and then perfuaded her to make a Covenant with the Devil. Being afterwards together in one Mr. Huffey's ground in Brewham Forest about Noon, Catherine called for the Devil, who appeared in the shape of a Man in blackish Cloaths, and faid somewhat to Catherine, which Christian could not hear. After which the Devil (as the conceiv'd him) told the Examinant, that the thould want neither Cloaths, Victuals, nor Money, if the would give her Body and Soul to him, keep his Secrets, and fuffer him to Suck her once in 24 Hours; which at last, upon his and Catherine Greens perswasion, she yielded to; then the Man in Black prickt the fourth Finger of her Right-hand, between the middle and upper Joints, where the figns yet remains, and took two Drops of her Blood on his Finger, х Finger, giving her Four-pence-half-penny, with which the bought Bread in Brewham. Then he spake again in private with Catherine and vanisht, leaving a smell of Brimstone behind.

Since that time the Devil (fhe faith) hath and doth usually Suck her Left-Breaft about five of the Clock in the Morning, in the likeness of an Hedge-bog, bending, and did so on Wed-nefday Morning laft: She faith it is painful to her, and that the is usually in a Trance when the is Suckt.

She faith alfo, That Catherine Green, and Margaret Agar of Brewham, have told her, that they are in Covenant with the Devil, and confeffeth, that the hath been at feveral Meetings in the Night at Brewham Common, and in a Ground of Mr. Huffey's; that the hath there met with Catherine Green, and Margaret Agar, and 3 or 4 times with Mary Warberton of Brewham: That in all those Meetings, the Devil hath been prefent, in the thape of a Man in Black-cloaths: At the first coming, he bids them Wclcome, but always fpeaks very low.

That at a Meeting about 3 Weeks or a Month fince, at or near the former Place, Margaret. Agar brought thither an Image in Wax, for Elizabeth the Wife of Andrew Cornish of Brewham, and the Devil, in the shape of a Man in Black-cloaths, did Baptize it, and after Attick a Thorn into its Head; that Agar stuck one into its Stomack, and Catherine Green one into its Side. She farther faith; That before this time, Agar faid to her this Examinant, that she would hurt Elizabeth Cornish, who fince the Baptizing of the Picture, hath heen taken and continues very ill.

She faith. That 3 or 4 Days before Jof. Talbot of Brewham died, Margaret Agar told her, That fhe woud rid him out of the World, becaule he being Overfeer of the Poor, he made her Children go to Service, and refufed to give them fuch good Cloaths as fhe defired. And fince the Death of Talbot, fhe confeffed to the Examinant, that fhe had Bewitcht him to Death. He died about a Year fince; was taken ill on Friday, and died about Wednefday after.

That her Mother in Law, Catherine Green, about 5 or 6 Years ago, was taken in a strange manner: One Day one Eye and Cheek did swell, another Day another, and so the continued in great Pain till she died: Upon her Death, she several times said, in the hearing of the Examinant, That her Sister in Law, Catherine Green, had Bewitched her, and the Examinant believes that she Bewitcht her. to Death.

That

of Relations.

That a little before Michaelmas last, the said Catherine curfed the Horses of Rob. Walter of Brewham, saying, A Murrain on them Horses to Death; upon which the Horses, being 3, all Died.

t. Exam. E Lizabeth Talbot of Brewham, Examined March That about 3 Weeks before her Father 30. Talbot died, Margaret Agar fell out with him, becaule he being Overleer for the Poor, did require Agars Daughter to go to Service, and faid to him, that he was proud of his Living, but Swore by the Blood of the Lord, that he should not long enjoy it. Within 3 Weeks of which he was studdenly taken in his Body, as if he had been stabb'd with Daggers, and so continued four or five Days in great pain, and then Died.

Rob. Hunt.

2 Exam. Jof. Smith of Brewham, Husbandman, Examined March 15, 1664. before Rob. Hunt Elq; faith, That fome few Days before Jof. Talbot died, he heard Margaret Agar rail very much at him, because he had caused her Daughter to go to Service, and faid, that he should not keep his Living, but be drawn out upon Four Mens Shoulders: That she should tread upon his Jaws, and see the Grass grow over his Head, which she Swore by the Blood of the Lord.

3. Exam. Mary the Wife of William Smith of Brewham, Examined March 8, 1664, before Rob. A fhort time after which, fhe had 3 Cows that died very ftrangely, and 2 of them at the Door of Margaret Agar. And ever fince the Examinant hath confumed and pined away, her Body and her Bowels rotting, and the verily believes that her Cattel and her felf were Bewitcht by Agar.

4. Exam. Catherine Green, alias Corniflo, of Brewham, Widow, Examin'd May 16, 1665, before Rob. Hunt Efq; faith, That on Friday in the Evening, in the beginning of March laft, Margaret Agar came to her, and was earneft fhe fhould go with her to a Ground called Huffeys-knap, which fhe did, and being come thither, they faw a little Man in. Black-cloaths, with a little Band. As, foon as they came to him, Margaret Agar took out of her Lap a little Picture in blackifth Wax, which fhe delivered to the Man in Black, who ftuck a Thorn into the Crown of the Picture, and then delivered it back to Agar; upon which fhe ftuck a Thorn towards the Heart of the Picture, Curfing, and faying, A Plague on you; which fhe told the Examinant, was done to hurt Eliz. Cornifh, who as fhe hath been told, has been very illever fince that time.

That a little above a Year fince Jof. Talbot, late of Brewham, being Overfeer for the Poor, did caufe two of Agars Children to go to Service; upon which fhe was very Angry, and faid in the Examinants hearing, a few Days before he fell fick and died, that fhe had trod upon the Jaws of 3 of her Enemies, and that fhe fhould fhortly fee Talbot rot, and tread on his Jaws. And when this Examinant defired her not to hurt Talbot, fhe Swore by the Blood of the Lord, the would confound him if the could The Day before he died, the faid to the Examinant, God's wounds I'll go and fee him, for I fhall never fee him more; and the next Day Talbot died.

That she heard Margaret Agar Curse Mary Smith, and fay, She should live to see her and her Cattle fall and rot before her Face.

5. Exam. Mary Green of Brewham, fingle Woman, Examined, June 3, 1665, before Rob. Hunt Elq; faith. That about a Month before Jof. Talbor, late of Brewham, died, Margaree Arar fell out with him about the putting out of her Child to Service. After that the faw a Picture in Clay or Wax, in the Hands of Agar, which the faid was for Talbot, the Picture the faw her deliver in Redmore, to the Fiend in the Shape of a Man in Black, about an Hour in the Night, who fluck a Thorn in or near the Heart of it; Agar fluck another in the Breast, and Catherine Green, Alice Green, Mary Warberton, Henry Walter, and Christian Green, all of Brewham, were then and there prefent, and did all flick Thorns into the Picture.

At that time Catherine Green fpake to Agar not to hurt Talbot, because she received somewhat from him often times, but Agar replied, By the Lord's Blood fhe would confound him, or Words to that purpofe.

That a little before Talbot was taken fick, Agar being in the House where the Examinant lived, Swore, That the should ere long tread upon his Jaws; and that if Talbot made her Daughter to go to Service for a Year, yet if the came home in a quarter, it would be time enough to fee him carried out upon four Mens Shoulders, and to tread upon his Jaws.

That on the Day Talbot died, the heard Agar Swear, That the had now plagued Talbot; and that being in company with her some time before, and seeing a dead Horse of Talbor's drawn along by another of his Horles, the Swore, That that Horle should be also drawn out to Morrow, and the next Day she faw the well Horse also drawn out dead.

That above a Month before Margaret Agar was lent to Goal, the law her, Henry Walter, Catherine Green, Joan Syms, Christian Green, Mary Warberton, and others, meet at a place called Huffeys-knap in the Foreft, in the Night-time, where met them the Fiend, in the Shape of a little Man in Black-cloaths, with a little Band, to him all made Obeyfances, and at that time a Picture in Wax or Clay, was delivered by Agar to the Man in Black, who fluck a Thorn into the Crown of it, Margaret Agar one towards the Breaft, Catherine Green in the fide ; after which Agar threw down the Picture, and faid, There is Cornifo's Picture with a Murrain to it, or Plague on it. And that at both the Meetings there was a noifome Smell of Brimftone.

That about two Years fince, in the Night, there met in the fame Place, Agar, Henry Walter, Catharine Green, Joan Syms, Alice Green, and Mary Warberton. Then also Margaret delivered delivered to the little Man in Black, a Picture in Wax, into which he and Agar ftuck Thorns', and Henry Walter thruft his Thumb into the Side of it; then they threw it down, and faid, There is Dick Green's Picture with a Pox in's; a flort time after which, Richard Green was taken ill and died.

Farther, fhe faith, That on Thurfday Night before Whitfunday laft, about the fame Place, met Catherine Green, Alice Green, Joan Syms, Mary Warberton, Dinah and Dorothy Warberton, and Henry Walter, and being met, they called out Rohin, upon which inftantly appeared a little Man in Black-cloaths, to whom all made Obeyfance, and the little Man put his Hand to his Hat, faying, How do ye? fpeaking low but big: Then all made low Obeyfances to him again. That fhe hath feen Margaret Clark twice at the Meetings, but fince Margaret Agar was fent to Prifon, fhe never faw her there.

Rob. Hunt.

ADVER TISEMENT.

Before we pass to other Relations, it will not be amils farther to remark upon these taken out of the Examinations of Mr. Hunt: From the poisoned Apples that Jane Brooks gave to Rich. Jones, and Eliz. Style to Agnes Vining, and the poisoned Pewterdisch that Alice Duke put into the Hands of Tho. Conway, (which Disch and Apples they had from the Devil) we may observe in what a peculiar Sense, Witches and Wizards are called easurand, Venefici, and Veneficz, Poisoners. Not that they mischieve People ordinarily by natural Poisons, as Arsenick and the like, but rather by some hellish Malignancy infused into things by the Art and Malice of the Devil, or by the steams of their own Body which the Devil success. For the Hand of Jane Brooks stroaking down Rich. Jones his Side impressed a pain thereon.

We may observe also what an eximious Example of Moles his Mecassephah, (the Word which he uses in that Law, Thou shalt not suffer a Witch to live) Margaret Agar is, and how unsitly some Interpreters render Mecassephim, Malefici, from the great Mischief Mischief they do and delight in, and what a great credit this Agar is to J. Webster and the rest of the Hag-Advocates, which would make them to be meer couzening Queans, or melancholy Fops that had nothing to do with the Devil. As if the Man in Black and a little Band were but such another as J. Webster, or any other Hag-Advocate that in waggery atted the part of the Devil in Hussey's knap, or any such like place of a Forest, and so after all, quickly and suddenly recoiling behind a Bush, and letting fly into the Wind, the deluded Hags took it for the vanishing of the very Fiend and his perfuming the Air with the smell of Brimstone. One that can refolve all the Feats of the Hartummim of Egypt into Tricks of Leger-de-main, cannot he easily delude the Company with such a Feat as this, the old Wives being thick of Hearing, and carrying their Spectacles not on their Noses, but in their Pockets.

And lastly from the Devils covenanting with the Witches for their Souls, it may be observed, that the old Hags dealing bona fide, and thinking they have Souls surviving their Bodies, are better Philosophers than the huffy Wits of our Age, that deny distinction of Soul and Body. But if they have not (as these Huffers would have it) and the Hags think (o themselves, it is a pretty Paradox, that these old Fops should be able to out-wit the very Devil; who does not in Bartering for their Bodies and Souls buy a Pig in a Poke; as the Proverb is, but a Poke without a Pig. But I rather believe, that these buffing Wits, as high as they are, may learn one true Point of Philosophy from these Hags and their Familiars; these evil Spirits certainly making their Bargains wisely enough in Covenanting for the Witches Soul. Which claufe, if it were not exprest, the Soul were free from the Familiars jurisdiction after Death. Wherefore it is no contemptible Argument, these evil Spirits Covenanting for the Soul of the Witch, that they know the Soul furvives the Body, and therefore make their Bargain fure for the possession of it, as their Peculium after Death, otherwise if the Soul were mortal they would sell the Witches fo, the more eafily to precipitate them into all wickedness, and make them more eager by their ministry to enjoy this pre-Sent Life. But this Doctrine is inconfistent with the Form of his Covenant, whereby they are affured to him after Death.

Touching Florence Newton, an Irish Witch of Youghal, taken out of her Tryal at the Assistant beld for the County of Cork, September 11. Anno 1661.

THIS Florence Newton was committed to Youghal Prifon, by the Maior of the Town, March 24. 1661, for Bewitching Mary Longdon, who gave Evidence against her at Cork Affizes, as follows.

Mary Longdon being Sworn and Examined what the could fay againft the faid Florence Newton for any Practice of Witchcraft upon her felf, and being bidden to look on the Prifoner, her Countenance chang'd pale, and the was very fearful to look towards her, but at laft the did. And being askt whether the knew her, the faid the did, and with the never had. Being askt how long the had known her, the faid for 3 or 4 Years; and that at Chriftmas laft, the faid Florence came to the Deponent, at the Houfe of John Pyne in Youghal, where the Deponent was a Servant; and askt the Deponent to give her a piece of Beef out of the Powdering-Tub; and the Deponent answering her, that the could not give away her Master's Beef, the faid Florence feemed to be very angry, and faid, Thou bad'st as good have given_it me, and fo went away grumbling.

That about a Week after, the Deponent being going to the Water with a Pail of Cloth on her Head, the met the faid Florence Newton, who came full in her Face, and threw the Pail off her Head, and violently kift her, and faid, Mary, I pray thee, let thee and I be Friends; for I bear thee no ill Will, and I pray thee do thou bear me none : And that the the Deponent went afterwards home, and that within a few Days after, the fawa Woman with a Vail over her Face, stand by her Bedfide, and one standing by herlike a little old Man in Silkcloaths, and that this Man which the took to be a Spirit, drew, the Vail from off the Womans Face, and then she knew it to be Goody Newton ; and that the Spirit make to the Deponent, and would have had her promise him to follow his Advice and the thould have all things after her own Heart, to which the fays, the Answered, That the would have nothing to fay to him, for her Truft was in the Lord.

That

That within a Month after the faid Florence had Kift her. the this Deponent fell very-ill of Fits or Trances, which would take her on the fudden, in that violence, that 3 or 4 Men could not hold her; and in her Firs she would often be taken with Vomitings, and would vomit up Needles, Pins, Horfe-nails, Stubbs, Wool, and Straw, and that very often. And being askt whether the perceived at these times what the Vomited? She faid the did; for then the was not in fo great Diffraction as in other parts of her Fits the was. And that a little before the first beginning of her Fits feveral (and very many) small Stones would fall upon her as she went up and down, and would follow her from place to place, and from one Room to another, and would hit her on the Head, Shoulders, and Arms, and fall to the ground and vanish away. And that she and feveral others would fee them both fall upon her, and on the ground, but could never take them, fave onely fome few, which the and her Mafter caught in their Hands: Amongst which one that had a hole in it the tied (as the was advited) with a leather Thong to her Purse, but it was vanisht immediately, though the Leather continued tied on a fast Knot.

That in her Fits the often faw this Florence Newton, and cryed out against her for Tormenting of her, for she fays, that she would feveral times flick Pins into her Arms, and fome of them fo fast, that a Man must pluck 3 or 4 times to get out the Pin, and they were fluck betwixt the Skin and the Fleih. That fometimes the thould be remov'd out of her Bed into another Room, fometimes the thould be carried to the top of the Houfe laid on a Board betwixt two Sollar beams, fometimes put into a Cheft, fometimes under a parcel of Wool, fometimes betwixt two Feather-beds on which the ufed to lie, and fometimes betwixt the Bed and the Mat in her Master's Chamber in the Davtime. And being askt how the knew the was thus carried about and disposed of, seeing in her Fits the was in a violent Distraction? She answered, the never knew where the was; till they of the Family and the Neighbours with them, would be taking her out of the places whither the was focarried and removed. And being askt the reason wherefore she cryed out to much against the said Florence Newton in her Fits? She answer'd, because the faw her, and felt her Torturing.

And being askt how the could think it was Fiorence Newton that did her this prejudice? She faid, first, because the threatened her, then because after the had Kift her, the fell into these Firs, and that the both faw and felt her tormenting. And lastly, that that when the People of the Family by advice of the Neighbours and confent of the Maior, had fent for Florence Newton to come to the Deponent, she was always worfe when she was brought unto her, and her Fits more violent than at another time. And that after the faid Florence was committed at Yougball, the Deponent was not troubled, but was very well till a little while after the faid Flormice was removed to Cork, and then the Deponent was as ill as ever before. And the Maior of Youghal, one Mr. Mayre, then fent to know whether the faid Florence were bolted (as the Deponent was told) and finding she was not, order was given to put her Bolts on her; which being done, the Deponent faith she was well again, and fo hath continued ever fince. And being asked whether she had fuch like Fits before the faid Florence gave her the kifs, she faith she never had any, but believes that with that kils the bewitcht her, and the rather because she hath heard from Nicholas Pyne, and others, that the faid Florence had confessed as much.

This Mary Longdon having closed up her Evidence, Florence Newton peep'd at her, as it were betwixt the heads of the by ftanders that interposed betwixt her and the faid Mary, and lifting up both her hands together as they were manacled caft them in an angry violent motion (as was feen and observed by W. Afton) towards the faid Mary, as if the intended to ftrike at her if the could have reacht her, and faid, Now the is down. Upon which the Maid fell suddenly down to the ground like a stone, and fell into a most violent fit, that all the People that could come to lay hands on her could fcarce hold her, the biting her own Arms and threeking out in a most hideous manner to the amazement of all the beholders. And continuing fo for about a quarter of an hour (the faid Fiorence Newton fitting by her felf all that while pinching her own Hands and Arms, as was fworn by some that observed her) the Maid was ordered to be carried out of Court and taken into a House. Whence several Persons after that, brought word that the Maid was in a Vomiting fit, and they brought in feveral crooked Pins, and Straws, and Wooll, in white foam like spittle in great proportions. Whereupon the Court having taken notice that the Maid had faid the had been very well when the faid Florence was in Bolts, and ill again when out of them, till they were again put on her, demanded of the Gaoler if the was in Bolts or no, to which he faid the was not, but only manacled. Upon which order was given to put on her Bolts, and upon putting them on, the cryed out, the was killed, the was undone, the was fpoiled, why do you torment me thus ? and fo continued complaining grievoully for half a quarter of an hour. And then came in a Melfenger from from the Maid, and informed the Court the Maid was well. At which Florence immediately and cholerickly uttered thefe words, She is not well yet. And being demanded how the knew the was not well yet? the denied the faid to, though many in Court heard her fay the words, and the faid, if the did, the knew not what the faid, being old and difquieted, and ditracted with her fufferings. But the Maid being reafonably well come to her felf, was before the Court knew any thing of it, fent out of Town to Toughal, and fo was no farther Examined by the Court.

The Fit of the Maid being urged by the Court with all the Circumstances of it upon Florence, to have been a continuance of her Devilish practice, the denied it, and likewile the motion of her hands, or the faying, Now floe is down, though the Court faw the tirst and the words were sworn by one Roger Moor. And Thomas Harrifon swore that he had observed the faid Florence peep at her, and use that motion with her hands, and faw the Maid fall immediately upon that motion, and heard the words, Now floe is down uttered.

Nicholas Stout was next produced by Mr. Attorney-General. who being fworn and Examined faid. That he had oft tried her, having heard fay that Witches could not fay the Lord's Prayer, whether the could fay that Prayer or no, and found the Whereupon she faid she could fay it, and had oft could not. And the Court being defired by her to hear her fay it: faid it. gave her leave, And four times together after these words give ns this day our daily bread] the continually faid as we forgive them, leaving always out the words and forgive us our trefpasses] upon which the Court appointed one near her to teach her these words she so left out. But she either could not or would not fay them, using only these or the like words when these were repeated, Ay, Ay, trespasses, that's the words. And being oft preffed to utter the words as they were repeated to her, fhe did not. And being asked the reason, she faid she was old and had a bad memory; and being asked how her memory ferved her fo well for other parts of the Prayer, and only fail her for that, the faid the knew not, neither could the help it.

John Pyne being likewife fworn and Examined, faid that about January laft the faid Mary Longdon being his Servant, was much troubled with little Stones that were thrown at her wherever the went, and that he hath feen them come as if they were thrown at her, others as if they dropped on her, and that he hath feen very great quantities of them, and that they would, after they had hit her, fall on the ground, and then vanish vanish, fo that none of them could be found. And farther that the Maid once caught one of them, and he himself another, and one of them with a hole in it, the type to her Purfe, but it vanifhed in a little time, but the knot of the Leather that tied it remained unaltered. That after these ftones had thus haunted her. the fell into most grievous fits, wherein the was to violently distracted, that four Men would have very much ado to hold her, and that in the highest extremity of her firs, she would cry out against Gammer Newton for hurting and tormenting of her. That fometimes the Maid would be reading in a Bible, and on a fudden he hath feen the Bible struck out of her Hand into the middle of the Room, and she immediately caft into a violent That in the fits he hath feen two Bibles laid on her Breat, fit: and in the twinkling of an eye they would be caft betwixt the two Beds the Maid lay upon, fometime thrown into the middle of the Room, and that Nicholas Pyne held the Bible in the Maids hand fo fast, that it being fuddenly fnatcht away, two of the Leaves were torn. That in many other fits the Maid was removed ftrangely, in the twinkling of an eye, out of the Bed, fometimes into the bottom of a Cheft with Linnen, under all the Linnen, and the Linnen not at all difordered fometimes betwixt the two.Beds she lay on, fometimes under a parcel of Wooll, fometimes betwixt his Bed and the Mat of it in another Room; and once she was laid on a fmall deal Board, which lay on the top of the Houfe betwixt two Sollar Beams, where he was forced to rear up Ladders to have her fetcht down. That in her fits she hath often Vomited up, Wool, Pins, Horfe-nails, Straw, Needles; and Mols, with a kind of white Foam or Spittle, and hath had feveral Pins fluck into her Arms and Hands, that fometimes a Man must pull three or four times before he could pull one of them out; and fome have been fluck between the flesh and the skin, where they might be perfectly seen, but not taken out, nor any place feen where they were put in. That when the Witch was brought into the Room, where the was, the would be in more violent and longer lafting fits than at other times. That all the time the Witch was at liberty, the Maid was ill, and as foon as the was committed and bolted, the recovered and was well, and when the Witch was removed to Cork the Maid fell ill. And thereupon the Maior of Youghal fent to see if she were bolted or no, and to acquaint them the Maid was ill, and defire them if the Witch were not bolted, they would bolt her. That she immediately mended and was as well as ever she was: and when the Meffenger came from Cork, and and told them when the Witch was bolted, it fell out to be the very time the Maid amended at Youghal.

Nicholas Pyne being fworn, faith, That the fecond night after that the Witch was in Prison, being the 24 of March last, he and Joleph Thompson, Roger Hawkins, and some others went to fpeak with her concerning the Maid, and told her that it was the general Opinion of the Town that fhe had bewitched her, and defired her to deal freely with them, whether she had bewitched her or no, She faid she had not bewitched her, but it may be she had over-looked her, and that there was a great difference betwixt bewitching and over-looking, and that she could not have done her any harm if she had not toucht her, and that therefore she had kift her. And she faid that what mischief she thought of at that time the kift her, that would fall upon her, and that she would not but confess she had wronged the Maid, and thereupon fell down upon her Knees, and prayed God to forgive her for wronging the poor Wench. They wisht that she might not be wholly deftroyed by her; to which she faid, it must be another that must help her, and not they that did the harm. And then she faid, there were others, as Goody Halfpenny, and Goody Dod in Town, that could do these things as well as she, and that it might be one of them that had done the Maid wrong.

That towards Evening the Door of the Prilon shook, and she arole up hastily and faid, What makeft thou here this time a night? and there was a very great noise, as if some body with Bolts and Chains had been running up and down the Room, and they asked her what it was she spoke to and what it was made the noise; and she faid she faw nothing, neither did she speak, and if she did it was she knew not what. But the next day she confest it was a Spirit, and her Familiar in the shape of a Grey-hound.

He faith farther, That he and Mr Edward Perry, and others for Trial of her took a Tyle of the Prifon, next to the place where the Witch lay, and carried it to the Houfe where the Maid lived, and put it into the fire till it was red-hot, and then dropped fome of the Maids Water upon it, and the Witch was then grievoufly tormented, and when the Water confumed fhe was well again.

And as to the ftones falling on and caft at the Maid, as to the Maids fits, her removal into the Cheft under the Wool, betwixt the Feather-beds, on the top of the deal Board betwixt two Sollar beams, concerning the Bibles and their remove, his holding one of them in the Maids hands till two Leaves were torn. torn, concerning the Maid Vomiting, and calling out against the Witch, he agreeth perfectly throughout with John Pyne as before.

Edward Perry being likewife fworn, depofeth, That he, Mr. Greatrix, and Mr. Blackwall, went to the Maid, and Mr. Greatrix and he had read of a way to difcover. a Witch, which he would put in practice. And fo they fent for the Witch, and fet her on a Stool, and a Shoemaker with a ftrong Awl endeavoured to flick it in the Stool, but could not till the third time. And then they bad her come off the Stool, but the faid the was very weary and could not ftir. Then two of them pulled her off, and the Men went to pull out his Awl, and it dropt into his hand with half an Inch broke off the blade of it, and they all looked to have found where it had been fluck, but could find no place where any entry had been made by it. Then they took another Awl, and put it into the Maids hand; and one of them took the Maids hand, and ran violently at the Witches hand with ir, but could not enter it, though the Awl was fo bent that none of them could put it streight again. Then Mr. Blackwall took a Launce and launc'd one of her hands an Inch and a half long, and a quarter of an Inch deep, but it bled not at all, Then he launc'd the other hand, and then they bled.

He further faith, That after the was in Prison, he went with Roger Hawkins and others to difcourfe with the Witch about the Maid, and they askt what it was she spake to the day before, and after some denial, she said it was a Grey-hound which was her Familiar, and went out at the Window; and then the faid, If I have done the Maid hurt, I am forry for it. And being then asked whether she had done her any hurt, she faid she never did bewitch her, but confessed she had overlooked her that time the kift her, but that the could not now help her, for none could help that did the mischief, but others. And further the Deponent faith, That after at the Affize at Cashal, he meeting with one William Lap, and discouring about these passages with him, the faid Lap told the Deponent, that if he would but take a Tyle off the House near the place where the Witch lay and hear it red hot in the Fire, and then take fome of the Maids Water and drop upon it, that fo long as this was doing, he thould find the Witch most grievously tormented : That afterwards he, Edward Perry, Nicholas Pyne and others put this in practice, and found that the Witch was extremely tormented and wexed, and the experiment was over, the came to her felf, and then they askt her how the came to hurt she Maid ? and the faid, that what evil the thought against the Maid that time the kift kift her, that would fall upon her, and that the could not have hurt her except the had toucht her, and then the fell on her knees and confetted the had wronged the Maid, and defired God to forgive her. And then they put her upon faying the Lord's Prayer, but the could not fay the words, and forgive is our trefpaffes.

Mr. Wood a Minister being likewise sworn, and Examined. deposeth, That having heard of the Stones dropt and thrown at the Maid, and of her Fits, and meeting with the Maids Brother, he went along with him to the Maid, and found her in her Fit crying out against Gammer Newton, that the prickt her and hurt her. And when the came to her felf, he asked her what had troubled her, and the faid Gammer Newton And the Deponent faid, why, the was not there. Yes, faid the, I faw her by my bed fide. The Deponent then askt her the original of all, which the related from the time of her begging the Beef, and after Kiffing, and fo to that time. That then they caufed the 'Maid to be got up and fent for Florence Newton, but the refuted to come, pretending the was fick, though indeed it appeared she was well. Then the Maior of Youghal came in and spoke with the Maid, and then sent again and caused Florence Newton to be brought in, and immediately the Maid fell into her Rit far more violent, and three times as long as at any other time, and all the time the Witch was in the Chamber, the Maid cried out continually of being hurt here and there, but never named the Witch; but as foon as she was removeed, then she cried out against her by the name of Gammer Newton, and this for feveral times. And still when the Witch was out of the Chamber, the Maid would defire to go to Prayers, and he found good affections in her in time of Prayer, but when the Witch was brought in again, though never fo privately, although she could not poffibly, as the Deponent conceives, fee her, she would be immediately fenfless and like to be ftrangled, and for would continue till the Witch was taken out, and then though never fo privately carried away, she would come again to her That afterwards Mr. Greatrix, Mr. Blackwall, and fenfes. fome others, who would need fatisfie themfelves in the influence of the Witches prefence, tried it and found it feveral times. Although he did it with all poffible privacy, and fo as none could think it poffible for the Maid to know either of the Witches coming in or going out.

Richard Mayre, Maior of Youghal, being likewife Sworn, faith, That about the 24th of March laft, he fent for Florence Newion, and Examined her about the Maid, and the at first denied it, and accused Goodwife Halfpenny and Goodwife Dod, but at length when he had cauled a Boat to be provided, and had thought to have tryed the Water-Experiment on them all 2, then Florence Newton confessed she had over-lookt the Maid, and done her wrong with a Kifs; for which the was heartily forry, and defir'd God to forgive her. That then he likewife Examined the other two Women, Halfpenny and Dod, but they utterly denied it, and were content to abide any Tryal: Whereupon he caufed both Florence, Halfpenny, and Dad, to be carried to the Maid : and he told her, these two Women, or one of them were faid by Gammer Newton to have done her hurt, but the answer'd; No, no, they are honeft Women, but it is Gammer Newton that hurts me, and I believe the is not far off. That then they afterwards brought in Newton privately, and thep the fell into a most violent Fit, ready to be strangled, till the Witch was removed, and then the was well again, and this for 3 feveral times. He farther Deposeth, That there were 3 Aldermen in Toughal, whole Children the had kift, as he had heard them affirm and all the Children died prefently after. And as to the fend. ing to Cork to have the Bolts put on, Swears as is formerly De. poled.

Joseph Thompson being likewise Sworn, faid, That he went in March last with Roger Hawkins, Nicholas Pyne, and others to the Prifon to confer with Florence Newton about the Maid ; but the would confess nothing that time. But towards Night there was a noife at the Prifon-door, as if fomething had thak't the Door, and Florence started up and faid, What aileth thee to be here at this time of the Night ? And there was much noife. And they askt her what the fpoke to, and what made the great Noife? But the denied that the fpake, or that the knew of any Noife, and faid, If I fpoke, I faid I knew not what. And they went their ways at that time, and went to her again the next Night, and askt her very ferioully about the last Nights Passage, and the Noise; and then the confest to them that it was a Greyhound that came to her; and that the had feen it formerly, and that it went out at the And then the confessed that the had done the Maid Window: wrong, for which the was forry, and defired God to forgive her.

Hitherto we have heard the most confiderable Evidence touching Florence Newtons Witchcraft upon Mary Longdon, for which the was committed to Youghal Prifon, March 24; 1661. But April following the Bewitcht one David Jones to Death, by kiffing his Hand through the Grate of the Prifon, for which the was was Indicted at Cork Affizes, and the Evidence is as follows.

Elenor Jones Relict of the faid David Jones, being Sworn and Examined in open Court, what she knew concerning any practice of Witchcraft by the faid Florence Newton, upon the faid Da: vid her Husband, gave in the Evidence, That in April last; the faid David her late Husband having been out all the Night, came home early in the Morning, and faid to the faid Elenor his Wife, Where dost thou think I have been all Night? To which she answered, She knew nor : Whereupon he replied, I and Frank Besely have been standing Centinel over the Witch all Night: To which she the faid Elenor faid, Why. what hurt is that ? Hurt, quoth he, marry I doubt it's never a job the better for me; for the bath kist my Hand, and I have had a great pain in that Arm, and I verily believe fee bath Bewitched me, if ever the Bewitched any Man. To which the answered. The Lord forbid. That all the Night, and continually from that time, he was reftless and ill, complaining exceedingly of a great pain in his Arm for 7 Days together, and at the 7 Days end he complained that the pain was come from his Arm to his Heart. and then kept his Bed Night and Day, grievoufly afflicted, and crying out against Florence Newton, and about 14 Days after he died.

Fancis Befely, being Sworn and Examined, faid, That abour the time afore-mentioned, meeting with the faid David Fones, and discouring with him of the feveral Reports then ftirring concerning the faid Florence Newton, (who was then in Prifon at Youghal, for Bewitching Mary Longdon) viz. That she had feveral Familiars reforting to her in fundry Shapes; the faid David Jones told him, the faid Francis Befely, that he had a great mind to Watch her, the faid Florence Newton, one Night: to see whether he could observe any Cars or other Creatures refort to her through the Grate, as 'twas fulpected' they did, and defired the faid Francis to go with him, which he did. And that when they came thither, David Jones came to Florence, and told her, that he had heard she could not fay the Lord's-Prayer : to which she answered, She could : He then defir'd her to fay it; but she excused her felf by the decay of Memory through old Age : Then David Jones began to teach her, but she could not; or would not fay it, though often taugle it.

Upon which the faid David Jones and Befely being withdrawn a little from her, and difcourfing of her, not being able to learn this Prayer, she called out to David Jones; and faid, X David

TheColloctien

David! David! come hither, I can fay the Lord's-Prayer now, Upon which David went towards her, and the faid Deponent would have pluckt him back, and perfuaded him not to have gune to her, but he would not be perfuaded, but went to the Grate to her, and the began to fay the Lord's-Prayer, but could not fay, [Forgive us our Trefpaffes] fo that David again taught her, which the feem'd to take very thankfully, and told him the had a great mind to have kift him, but that the Grate hindred, bur defired she might kifs his Hand; whereupon he gave her h s Hand through the Grate, and she kift it, and towards break of Day, they went away and parted, and foon after, the Deponent h ard that David Jones was ill.

Whereupon he went to visit him, and found him about 2 or 3 Days after, very ill of a pain in the Arm; which he exceedingly complained of, and told the Deponent, that ever fince he parted with him, he had been feized on with that pain, and that the old Hag had Bewitcht him when she kiss his Hand, and that she had him now by the Hand, and was pulling off his Arm. And he taid, Do you not fee the old Hag how fibe pulls me? Well; I lay my Death on her, fibe has/Bewitcht me. And feveral times efter, would complain that she had tormented him, and had Bewitched him, and that he laid his Death on her. And after 14 Days languishing, he, the faid David Jones died.

A D V ERTISEMENT.

THIS Relation is taken out of a Copy of an authentick Record as I conceive, every half Sheet having W. Afton writ in the Margin, 'and then again W. Afton at the end of all, who in all likelihood muft beforme Publick-Notary or Record-keeper. But this Witch of Youghal is fo famous, that I have heard Mr. Greatrix freak of her at my Lord Conways at Ragley, and remember very well be told the Story of the And to me there. There is in this Ke liston an eximious Example of the Magical Venom of Witches; (whence they are called Venefice) in that all the Mifchief this Witch did, was by Kiffing, or fome way touching the party the Bemitche, and the confest unlefs the toucht her, the could do her no burt. Philos may be called a Magical Venom or Contagion. But how Over-looking and Bewitching' are diftinguished with the toge of this Heliffe

ED0

Hellifh Fraternity, I know not. But that Mary Longdon was Bewitcht by her Over-looking her is manifest. Whether this Overlooking relates to do Sun µos BaonevO, and that the Magical Venom came out at her Eyes when the killed the Maid, and whether this og Januos Baonar G was the first kind of Witchery, distinct from that of Bewitching People by Images made of Wax, and afterward any bewitching by meer Looking or Touching, was called Over-looking, we will leave to the Criticks of that black School to decide. As alfo what is that, which in the Witches Shape, fo haunts and torments the Bewitched party. For that it is not the meer Fancy of the Bewitched seems reasonable to judge, because their meer Fancy could not create fuch kinds of extreme Torments to them. And therefore it is either the Witches Familiar in her Shape, or the Aestrial Spirit of the Witch, because the Witch is sometimes wounded by striking at her Appearance, as it happened in the Appearance of Jane Brooks, and alfo in that of Julian Cox, as you shall find in the Relation following,

RELAT. VIII.

The Narrative of Mr. Pool; a Servant and Officer in the Court to Judge Archer in his Circuit, concerning the Trial of Julian Cox for Witchcraft; who being himfelf then prefent, an Officer in the Court, noted as follows, viz.

Julian Cox, aged about 70 Years, was Indicted at Taunton in Somerfetshire, about Summer Affizes, 1663, before Judge Archer, then Judge of Affize there, for Witchcraft, which she practifed upon a young Maid, whereby her Body languished, and was impaired of Health, by reason of strange Fits upon account of the faid Witchcraft.

The Evidence against her was divided into two Branches ; First, to prove her a Witch in general : Secondly, to prove her Guilty of the Witchcrafts contained in the Indictment.

For the proof of the first Particular: The first Witness was a Huntiman, who Swore that he went out with a Pack of Hounds to Hunt a Hare; and not far from Julian Cox here

Hould

House, he at laft ftarted a Hare: The Dogs hunted her very close, and the third Ring hunted her in view, till at laft the Huntsman perceiving the Hare almost spent, and making toward a great Buth, he ran on the other fide of the Bush to take her up, and preferve her from the Dogs; but as soon as he laid Hands on her, it proved to be Julian Cox, who had her Head groveling on the ground, and her Globes (as he express it) upward: He knowing her, was so affrighted that his Hair on his Head stood an end; and yet spake to her, and askt her what brought her there; but she was so far out of Breath, that she could not make him any Answer: His Dogs also came up with full Cry to recover the Game, and smelt at her, and soleft off Hunting any farther. And the Huntsman with his Dogs went home presently, fadly affrighted.

Secondly, Another Witnefs Swore, That as he paffed by Cox her Door, fhe was taking a Pipe of Tobacco upon the Threfoold ot her Door, and invited him to come in and take a Pipe, which he did, and as he was Smoaking, Julian faid to him, Neighbour, look what a pretry thing there is: He lookt down and there was a monftrous great Toad betwixthis Legs, flaring him in the Face: He endeavour'd to kill it by fpurning it, but could not hit it: Whereupon Julian bade him forbear, and it would do him no hurt; but he threw down his Pipe and went home. (which was about two Miles off of Julian Cox her Houfe) and rold his Family what had happen'd, and that he believed it was one of Julian Cox her Devils.

After, he was taking a Pipe of Tobacco at home, and the fame Foad appear'd betwixt his Legs: He took the Toad out to kill it, and to his thinking, cut it in feveral pieces, but returning to his P pe, the Toad ftill appeared: He endeavour'd to barn it, but could not: At length he took a Switch and beat it; the Toad ran feveral times about the Room to avoid him, he Itill perfuing it with Correction: At length the Toad crycd, and vanisht, and he was never after troubled with it.

Thirdly, Another Swore, That Julian paft by his Yard while his Beaus were in Milking, and ftooping down, fcored upon the ground for fome fmall time; during which time, his Cattle ran Mad, and fome ran their Heads against the Trees, and most of them dien fpeeduly: Whereupon concluding they were Bewritcht, he was after advifed to this Experiment, to find out the Witch, viz to cut off the Ears of the Bewitcht Beafts, and burn them, and that the Witch should be in mifery, and could net reft till they were pluckt out; which he tried, and while they they were burning, Julian Cox came into the Houle, raging and foolding, that they had abused her without cause, but the went presently to the Fire; and took out the Ears that were burning, and then the was quiet.

Fourthly, Another Witness Swore, That she had seen Julian Cox fly into her own Chamber-window in her full proportion, and that she very well knew her, and was sure it was she.

Fifthly, Another Evidence, was the Confession of Julian Cox her felf, upon her Examination before a Justice of Peace. which was to this purpole : That she had been often tempted by the Devil to be a Witch, but never consented. That one Evening the walkt out about a Mile from her own Houfe, and there came riding towards her 3 Perfons upon 3 Broom-staves, born up about a Yard and a half from the ground ; 2 of them the formerly knew, which was a Witch and a Wizard that were Hang'd for Witchcraft several Years before. The third Perfon the knew not; he came in the Shape of a black Man, and tempted her to give him her Soul, or to that effect, and to exprefs it by pricking her Finger, and giving her Name in her Blood in token of it, and told her, that the had Revenge against feveral Perfons that had wronged her, but could not bring her purpose to pass without his help, and that upon the Terms aforefaid he would affift her to be revenged against them; but she faid. fhe did not confent to it. This was the fum of the general Evidence to prove her a Witch.

But now for the fecond Particular, to prove her guilty of the Witchcraft upon the Maid, whereof the was Indicted, this Evidence was offer'd.

It was proved that Julian Cox came for an Alms to the House where this Maid was a Servant, and that the Maid told her, she should have none, and gave her a cross Answer that displeafed Julian; whereupon Julian was angry, and told the Maid she should repent it before Night, and so she did; for before Night she was taken with a Convulsion Fit, and that after that left her, she saw Julian Cox following her, and cryed out to the People in the House to save her from Julian.

But none faw Julian but the Maid, and all did impute it to her Imagination only. And in the Night the cryed out of Julian Cox, and the black Man, that they came upon her Bed and tempted her to Drink fomething they offered her, but the, cryed out, She defied the Devils Drenches. This also they imputed to her Imagination, and bade her be quiet, because they in the fame Chamber, with her, did not fee or hear any thing, and they thought it had been her Conceit only.

The

The Maid the next Night expecting the fame Conflict the had the Night before, brought up with her a Knife, and laid it at her Beds-head. About the fame time of the Night as before, Julian and the black Man came again upon the Maids Bed, and tempted her to Drink that which they brought, but the refuled, crying in the audience of the reft of the Family, that she defied the Devils Drenches, and took the Knife and ftabb'd Julian, and as she faid; the wounded her in the Leg, and was importunate with the Witnels to ride to Julian Cox's Houle prefent's to fee if it were not fo. The Witnels went and took the Knife with him. JulianCox would not let him in, but they forc'd the the Door open, and found a frefth Wcund in Juliang Leg, as the Maid had faid, which did fuit with the Knife, and Julian had been juft Dreffing it when the Witnels came, There was Blood allo found upon the Maids Bed.

The next Morning the Maid continu'd her Out-cries, that . Julian Cox appeared to her in the House-wall, and offer'd her great Pins which the was forc'd to fwallow: And all the Day the Maid was observed to convey her Hand to the House-wall. and from the Wall to her Mouth, and the feem'd by the motion of her Mouth, as if the did Eat fomething; but none faw any thing but the Maid, and therefore thought ftill it might be her Fancy, and did not much mind it. But towards Night, this Maid began to be very ill, and complain'd, that the Pins that Julian forc'd her to Eat out of the Wall, did torment her in all parts of her Body that the could not endure it, and made lamentable Out-cries for pain: Whereupon feveral Persons being present, the Maid was undrest, and in several parts of the Maids Body feveral great fwellings appeared, and out of the heads of the fwellings, feveral great Pins points appear'd; which the Witness took out, and upon the Trial there were about 30 great Pins produc'd in Court, (which I my felf handled) all which were Sworn by feveral Witneffes, that they were taken out of the Maids Body, in manner as is a forefaid.

Judge Archer, who Tried the Prisoner, told the Jury, That he had heard that a Witch could not repeat that Petition in the Lords Prayer, viz. [And lead us not into Temptation] and haying this occasion, he would try the Experiment, and told the Jury, that whether she could or could not, they were not in the least measure to guide their Verdict according to it, because it was not Legal Evidence, but that they must be guided in their Verdict by the former Evidences given in upon Oath only.

The Prisoner was call'd for up to the next Bar to the Court, and demanded if she could say the Lord's Prayer? She faid the "the could, and went over the Prayer readily, till the came to that Petition; then she faid, [And lead us into Temptation] or [And lead us not into no Temptation] but could not fay [And Vead us not into Temptation] though she was directed to fay it after one that repeated it to her diffinctly; but she could not repeat it otherwife than is express already, though tried to do it near halt a fcore times in open Court. After all which the Jury found her Guilty, and Judgment having been given within 3 or 4 Days, the was Executed without any Confession of the Fact.

THIS is a Copy of a Narrative fent by Mr, Pool, Octob. 24 1672. to Mr. Archer of Emanuel College, Nephew to the Judge, upon the defire of Dr. Bright. But I remember here at Cambrige. I heard the main Paffages of this Narrative when they first were firead abroad after the Affizes, and particularly by G. Ruft, after Bishop of Dromore in Ireland. Nor do I doubt but it is a true Account of what was attested before Judge Archer at the Affizes. For it is a thing to me altogether incredible, that he that was an Officer or Servant of the Judge, and present in the Court at the Examination and Tryal, and there took Notes, should write Anarative, when there were so many Ear-witness besides himself of the fame things, that would be obnovious to the differoof of those that were present as well as himself. It may not be amils here to transcribe what Dr. M. did write to Mr. G. touching this Story in a Letttr Dated Dec. 26. 1678.

This Narrative, fays he, bath the most authentick Confirmation that humane Affairs are capable of, Sense and the face anefs of an Oath. But yet I confess. I heard that Judge Archer has been taxed by some of overmuch Credulity, for sentencing Julian Cox to Death upon those Evidences. But to deal freely, I super by such as out of their Ignorance misinter preted several Passages in the Evidence, or were of such a dull stupid Sadducean Temper, that they believe there are no Spirits nor Witches. And truy I must confess, that the Huntsman, though be deposed upon Oath, that when he came in to take up the Hare as the Bush, it proved to be Y a Julian Cox with her Face towards the ground, &c. His expressing fof himfelf touching her Globes, and the Dogs Smelling, &c. looks omething humourfomely and ludicroufly on it. But I must farther add, that I think it was only that his Fancy was tickled with the featness of the Phænomenon, not that he would be so wicked as to tell a Lie upon Oath, and that for nothing. Sic vita hominum eft fays Tully, ut ad maleficium nemo conetur fine fpe atque emolumento ac-But that those Half witted People thought he Swore falfe cedere. I suppose was, because they imagined that what he told, implied that Julian Cox was turned into an Hare, which she was not, nor did. his Report imply any fuch real Metamorphofis of her Body, but that these ludicrous Demons exhibited to the fight of this Huntsman and his Dogs, the shape of an Hare, one of them turning himelf into fuch a Form, and others hurrying on the Body of Julian near the fame place, and at the same swiftness, but interposing betwixt that Harelike Spectre and her Body, modifying the Air, fo that the Scene there to the Beholders fight, was as if nothing but Air were there, and a them of Earth perpetually fuited to that where the Hare paffed. As I have beard of some Painters that have drawn the Sky in an buge Landskip, fo lively, that the Birds have flown against it, thinking it free Air, and fo have fallen down. And if Painters and Juglers by the Tricks of Leger-de-main can do fuch strange Feats to the deceiving of the Sight, it is no wonder that these airy invisible Spi-~ rits as far surpass them in all such prastigious doings, as the Air surpaffes the Earth for subtilty.

And the like Præssigiæ may be in the Toad. It might be a real Toad (though assumed and guided by a Demon) which was cut in pieces, and that also which was whipt about, and at last fnatcht out of fight (as if it had wanisht) by these Aerial Hocus-Pocus's. And if some Juglers have Tricks to take bot Coals into their Mouth without hurt, certainly it is no strange thing that some small attempt did not suffice to burn that Toad. That such a Toad, sent by a Witch, and crawling up the Body of the Man of the House as be state by the Fire-fide, was over-mastered by him and his Wise together, and burnt in the Fire. I have heard sometime ago credibly reported by one of the Isle of Ely. Of these Dæmoniack Vermin, I bave heard other Stories also, as of a Rat that followed a Man some store of Miles, trudging through thick and thin along with bim. So little difficulty is there in that of the Toad.

And that of Julian Cox's being seen to fly in at her own Chamber Window, there it no difficulty in it, if it be understood of her Familiar, the black Man, that had transformed himself into her shape. For there is no such unusual thing for Witches to appear either in their Astral Spirits, or by their Familiars, as if it were their very bodily Jodily Perfons. But when the appeared to the Maid together with the black Man, and offered her to drink, it is likely it was her Altral Spirit, and Julians being wounded in her body by the wound on her Aftral Spirit is just fuch another cafe, as that of Jane Brooks, which you your felf note in your Book of Witchcraft.

The most incredible thing is her eating of Pins, she knowing them to be such. But they that are bewitched are not themsfelves, and being possesses, and being possesses are actuated in the parts of their body, and their mind driven by that ugly inmate in them, to what he will; which is notorious in the story of Mrs. Frogmorton's Children. And for the Pins thus swallowed, their coming out in the exteriour parts of her body, Examples of this fort are infinite; and far more strange than these are recorded by Baptista Van Helmont, de Injectis.

Thefe are the most incredible passages in this Narrative, and yes you see how credible they are, if rightly understood. But those that believe no Spirits, will believe nothing never so credible of this kind and others that have some natural aversion from these things will presently interpret them in the vulgar sense, and then sweetly sneer at their own ignorance. But I must confess, if this be a true Relation of what passed in the Court, I do not question but the things that were sworn did so appear to them that swore them. Or else there is nothing to be credited in humane affairs. But concerning the truth of the Relation, besides what I binted in my last to you, you would do well to write to some or other in Taunton, Gc. Thus far Dr. M.

And it one be so curious as to defire an account of Mr. G. his farther inquiry into this business. I can tell him that he wrote to Mrl Hunt, who was then busie in some Court, yet made shift to read the Narrative, and wrote two or three lines to him back to this effect. That one principal Evidence was omitted in the Narrative, but that is nothing against the truth of the reft. But he adds alfo, that fome things were falle. Which would stumble one, and make him think that the credit of this Narrative is quite blasted thereby. But this viddle is eafily unriddled by him that confiders, that Mr. Hunt may respect those things that are said to be confest by her in her examination before a Justice of Peace. For he also having some time Examined her, and the making no fuch confession to him (as Mr. G. himfelf fays in a Letter to Dr. M. that he perused that Examination in Mr. Hunt's Book, and there was not any thing confiderable therein) might (peak this in reference to the Examination which the hadtaken. fhe then not confessing so freely as to some other Justice, whole Examination therefore was made use of in the Court. But this cannot concern at all the reft of the Narrative, which was given upon Oath in the Court in the hearing of all. This I thought fit not to omit as being defirolls rous to deal with all faithfu'ness in concealing nothing, and not to impose upon the Reader, but that he may make his judgment upon the whole matter.

As for the Witches being burried along with that Have like Spectre, her being out of breath (as the Huntsman testified) makes it most probable : or at least that the was hurried from form other place on the earth, or in the air (to meet there at length with the Hare-like Spectre) but this invisibly by that une forme. or Preftigiatory art or faculty of these ludicrous Dæmons, whereby they can To modifie the Air immediately next to the party they would conceal, that it looks there like the free Skie, or what Landskip they pleafe, as when they shew in a Shew-stone or Glass, the very Ruoin in which the party is, the Demon by the power of his Imagination, fo modifying at least his own Vehicle. Which power some of these of the Atheistick Brotherhood cannot with any face deny, Supposing shere are Damons, they giving a greater power to the Imagination of a Man, as if it were able to transform the Air into real Birds or Mice, or fuch like Creatures livingly fuch for the prefent. But any thing must be believed, rather than the Existence of Witches and Demons.

It will not be amifs here to take notice what an eminent example this Julian Cox is of Moles his Megnonenah or Mecassephah taken in the same sense, that is, of such a Witch as is thought by a RAS farma, or prestigiatory power (though it is the Devil that does these feats, not she) to transform her self into strange shapes, and use other such like deceptions of the light. As also it is a notable instance of the Astral Spirits of Witches, how strongly, though at a distance of place, they are tied together in a fatal Sympathy with their Bodies, the Body of Julian being wounded by a stab at her Aftral Spirit, as it fared also in Jane Brooks, and an Old Woman in Cambrige-fhire, whole Altral Spirit coming into a Mans house, (as he was fitting alone at the Fire) in the shape of an huge Cat, and fetting her felf before the Fire, not far from him, be Stole a stroke at the back of it with a Fire-fork, and seemed to break the back of it, but it scambled from him, and vanisht he knew nor how. But fuch an Old Woman, a reputed Witch, was found dead in her Bed that very Night, with her Back broken, as I have heard some years ago credibly reported.

That also is a marvellous Magical Sympathy in this flory of Julian Cox, that the burning of the Ears of the Beast bewitched by her, should put her into such rage and torment. Like the heating of the Tile red hot in the story of Florence Newton, and pouring some of the bewitched Maids water upon it. Which puts me in mind of a very remarkable story of this kind, told by Mr. Brearely, once once Fellow of Christs Coledge in Cambrige, who boarded in an pouse in Suffolk, where his Landlady had been ill handled by Witchcraft.

For an old Man that Travelled up and down the Country, and had fome acquaintance at that house, calling in and asking the Man of the house how he did and his Wife : He told him that himself was well, but his Wife had been a long time in a languishing condition, and that the was baunted with a thing in the shape of a Bird. that would flurr near to her face, and that the could not enjoy her natural reft well. The Old Man bid him and his Wife be of good courage. It was but a dead Spright, he faid, and he would put him in a course torid his Wife of this languishment and trouble. He therefore advised him to take a Bottle, and put his Wives Urine into it. together with Pins and Needles and Nails, and Cork them up. and let the Bottle to the Fire well corkt, which when it had felt a while the heat of the Fire began to move and joggle a little, but he for sureness took the Fire shovel, and held it hard upon the Cork. And as he thought, he felt something one while on this side, another while on that, those the Fireshovel off, which he still quickly put on again, but at last at one shoving the Cork bounced out, and the Urine, Pins, Nails and Needles all flew up, and gave a report like a Pistol, and his Wife continued in the fame trouble and languishment still.

Not long after, the Old Man came to the house again, and inquired of the Man of the house how his Wife did. Who answered, as ill as ever, if not worfe. He askt him if he had followed his direction. Yes, fays he, and told him the event as is above faid. Ha. quoth he, it feems it was too nimble for you. But now I will put you in a way that will make the business fure. Take your Wive's Urine as before, and Cork it in a Bottle with Nails, Pins and Needles, and bury it in the Earth ; and that will do the feat. The Man did accordingly. And his Wife began to mend sensibly and in 4 competent time was finely well recovered: But there came a Woman from a Town some miles off to their house, with a lamentable Out-cry, that they had killed her Husband. They askt her what She meant and thought her distracted, telling her they knew neither ber nor her Husband. Yes, faith she, you have killed my Husband, be told me fo on his Death-bed. But at last they understood by ber, that her Husband was a Wizard, and had bewitched this Mans Wife, and that this Counter-practice prescribed by the Old Man, which faved the Mans Wife from languishment, was the death of that Wizard that had bewitched her. This ftory did Mr. Brearly hear from the Man and Womans own Mouth who were c.ncerned. cerned, at whose house he for a time Boarded, nor is there any doubt of the truth thereof.

But it will be more easie for any rational Man to believe stories of this kind, than to find out a fatisfactory account of the operation and effect, or to affure the lawfulnefs of fuch counter-practic against Witchcraft, unlefs they can be refolved into the Sympathy and Synenergy of the Spiritus Mundanus, (which Piotinus calls # ulyar jonra the grand Magician) fuch as the operation of the Weapon falve, and other Magnetick Cures are refolved into. And for afmuch as the power of a truly Divine Magick, fuch as Prophets and Hely Law-givers are endued with, is too great and August to be found in ordinary good Men, that are to bring in no new Law er Religion into the World, the benignity of Providence is to be 40knowledged in that the Villanies of Witchcraft lie obnoxious to such a natural or ratified way of Discoveries and Counter-practices as thefe. But how this obnoxiousness of Witches is complicated with their Familiars fucking their Bodies, is a point too nice and prolix to enter upon here. But it is most safe not to tamper at all with thefe things, and most happy to have no occasion for it.

Laftly, as for Julian Cox her not being able to fay one of the Petitions in the Lords Prayer, the cafe is like that of FlorenceNewton the Irith Witch, but unlike in this, that it was not the fame Petition Florence Newton stuck at. And I remember when I had the curiofity with a friend of mine, of examining certain Witches at Caftle-hill in Cambridge, the most notorious of them, who also was hanged for a Witch, offered to fay the Creed and Lord's Prayer, as an Argument she was no Witch, and so far as I remember, she faid the Lord's Prayer right, but was out at the Creed; nor do I think this any certain sign of their guilt or innocency, and therefore Judge Archer did well to lay no stresson it. But these things are of less moment, and therefore I pass to the next Relation, which looks not fo much like Witcheraft, as the Apparition of the Ghost of one descased.

of Relations.

RELAT. III.

Which is a Relation of Thomas Goddard of Marleborough, in the County of Wilts, Weaver, made the 23 Nov. 1674.

WHO faith, That on Munday the Ninth of this Instant. as he was going to Ogborn at a Style on the Highway near Mr Goddard's Ground, about Nine in the Morning, he met the Apparition of his Father-in-Law, one Edward Avon of this Town, Glover, who died in May last, having on, to his appearance, the fame Clothes, Hat, Stockings, and Shoes he did blually wear when he was living, fanding by, and leaning over that Style. Which when he came near, the Apparition fpake to him with an audible voice these words, Are you afraid? To which he answered, I am thinking on one who is dead and buried, whom you are like. To which the Apparition replyed with the like voice, I am he that you were thinking on, I am Edward Avon your Father in Law, come near to me, I will do you no harm. To which Goddard answered, I trust in him who hath bought my Soul with his precious Blood, you shall do me no harm. Then the Apparition faid, How stand cafes at home? Goddard askt what cafes ? Then it askt him how do William and Mary, meaning, as he conceived, his Son William Avon a Shoemaker here, and Mary his Daughter the faid Goddard's Wife. Then it faid, What! Taylor is dead, meaning, as he thought, one Taylor of London, who Married his Daughter Sarab, which Taylor dyed about Michaelmas last. Then the Apparition held out its hand, and in it, as Goddard conceived, twenty or thirty shillings in filver, and then spake with a loud voice: Take this Money and lend it to Sarah; for I shut up my Bowels of compassion toward her in the time of my life, and now bere is fomewhat for her. And then faid, Mary (meaning his the faid Goddard's Wife as he conceived) is troubled for me : but tell her God hath showed mercy to me contrary to my deferts. But the faid Goddard answered, In the Name of TESUS CHRIST Irefuse all fuch Money. Then the Apparition faid I perceive you are afraid, I will meet you some other time. And immediately it went up the Lane to his appearance So he went over the fame Style, but faw it no more that day.

He

He faith, The next night about feven of the Clock, it came and opened his Shop Window, and ftood in the like Clothes, looked him in the Face, but faid nothing to him. And the next night after, as Goddard went forth into his Backfide with a Candle light in his hand, it appeared to him again in the fame fhape, but he being in fear, ran into his houfe, and faw it no more then.

But he faith, That on Thursday the twelfth instant, as he came from Chilton, riding down the Hill between the Mannorhouse and Axford-Farm-Field, he faw fomething like a Hare croffed his way, at which his Horfe frighted threw him in the dirt. as foon as he could recover on his feet, the fame Apparition there met him again in the fame habit, and there ftanding a. bout eight foot directly before him in the way, fpake again to him with a loud voice, Source (a word he commonly used) when living) you have stayed long; and then faid to him, Thomas mas, bid William Avon take the Sword that he had of me, which: is now in his house, and carry it to the Wood as we go to Alton, to the upper end of the Wood by the ways fide; for with that Sword I did prong above Thirty years ago, and he never prospered since he had that. Sword. And bid William Avon give his Sifter Sarah twenty (hillings of the Money which he had of me. And do you talk with Edward Lawrence, for I borrowed twenty shillings of him several years are and did fay I had paid him, hut I did not pay it him; and I would defire you to pay him twenty (hillings out of the Money which you had from lames Elliot at two payments. Which Money the faid Goddard now faith was five pounds, which Jam Elliot a Baker here owed the faid Avon on Bond, and which he the faid Goddard had received from the faid Elliot fince Michaelmas at two payments, viz. 35. s. at one, and 3 l, 5 s. at another payment. And it farther faid to him, Tell Margaret (meaning his own Wife as he conceived) that I would defire her to deliver. up the little which I gave to little Sarah Taylor, to the Child, or to any one she will trust for it. But if she will not, speak to Edward Lawrence to perfuade her. But if the will not then; tell her that I will fee her very juddenly. And fee that this be done within a Twelve-month and a day after my decease, and peace be with you. And fo it went away over the Rails into the Wood there in the like manner as any Man would go over a Style to his apprehension, and so he faw it no more at that time. And he faith, that he paid the twenty Shillings to Edward Lawrence of this Town, who being prefent now doth remember he lent. the faid Avon twenty Shillings about twenty years ago, which none none knew but himself and Wife and Avon and his Wife, and was never paid it again before now by this Goddard.

And this faid Goddard farther faith, That this very day by Mr. Maiors order, he with his Brother-in-Law William Aven went with the Sword, and about Nine a Clock this Morning, they laid down the Sword in the Copfe near the place the Apparition had appointed Goddard to carry it, and then coming a. way thence Goddard looking back, faw the fame Apparition again in the like habit as before. Whereupon he called to his Brother-in-Law, and faid, Here is the Apparition of our Father ; Who faid, I Jee nothing. Then Goddard fell on his Kneese and faid, Lord open his Eyes that he may fee it. But he replyed. Lord grant I may not fee it, if it be thy bleffed Will. And then the Apparition to Goddard's appearance, beckened with his hand to him to come to it. And then Goddard faid, In the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, what would you have me do ? Then the Apparition faid to him, Thomas, take up the Sword and To which he faid, Should both of us come, or but one follow me. of us? To which it answered, Thomas, do you take up the Sword. And fo he took up the Sword and followed the Apparition about ten Lugs (that is Poles) farther into the Copfe, and then turning back, he flood fill about a Lug and a half from it, his Brother in Law staying behind at the place where they first laid Then Goddard laying down the Sword upon down the Sword. the ground, faw fomething ftand by the Apparition like a Mafiff Dog of a brown colour. Then the Apparition coming towards Goddard, he stept back about two steps, And the Apparition faid to him. I have a permission to you, and commission not to touch you ; and then it took up the Sword, and went back to the place at which before it ftood, with a Maftiff Dog by it as before, and pointed the top of the Sword in the ground, and laid, In this place lies buried the Body of him whith I murdered in the year 1635. which is now rotten and turned to duft. Whereupon Goddard faid, I do adjure you in the Name of the Father, Son. and Holy Ghoft, wherefore did you do this Murder ? And it faid. I took Money from the Man, and be contended with me, and fo I mur-Then Goddard askt him, who was confederate with dered bim. him in the faid Murder ? and it faid, None but my felf. Then Goddard faid. What would you have me do in this thing? And the Apparition faid, This is that the World may know that I murdered * Man, and buried him in this place in the year 1635.

Then the Apparition laid down the Sword on the bare ground there whereon grew nothing, but feemed to Goddard to be as a Grave funk in. And then the Apparition rushing further into the the Cople vanished, he faw it no more. Whereupon Goddard and his Brother-in-Law Avon leaving the Sword there, and coming away together, Avon told Goddard he heard his voice, and understood what he faid, and heard other words distinct from his, but could not understand a word of it, nor faw any Apparition at all. Which he now also present affirmeth, and all which the faid Goddard then attested under his hand, and affirmed he will depose the fame when he shall be thereto required.

THat Tho. Goddard faw this Apparition, feems to be a think undubitable ; but whether it was his Father in laws Ghoft, that is more questionable. The former is confirmed from an Hand at least impartial, if not disfavourable to the Story. The party in his Letter to Mr. G-Writes briefly to this effect. 1. That he does verily think that this Tho. Goddard does believe the Story most strongly himself. 2. That he cannot imagine what interest be should have in raifing fuch a Story, he bringing Infamy on his Wives Father, and obliging himself to pay 205. Debt, which his Poverts 3. That his Father in law Edward Avon, could very ill spare. was a refolute sturdy Fellow in his young lears, and many lears a Bailif to Arrest People. 4. That Tho. Goddard had the repute of an honeft Man, knew as much in Religion as most of his Rank and Breeding, and was a constant frequenter of the Church, till about a Year before this happened to him, he fell off wholly to the Non-Conformifts.

All this bitherto, fave this last of all, tends to the Confirmation of the Story. Therefore this last fhall be the first Allegation against the credibility thereof. 2 It is farther alleged, That possibly the defign of the Story may be to make him to be accounted an extraordinary Some-body among the Diffenting Party. 3 That he is sometimes times troubled with Epileptical Fits. A That the Maior fent the next Morning to Dig the place where the Spectre faid the Murder d Man was buried, and there was neither Bones found, nor any difference of the Earth in that place from the reft,

But we answer briefly to the first : That his falling off to the Non-Conformists, though it may argue a vacillancy of his Judgment, yet it does not any defect of his external Senfes, as if he were lefs able to difcern when he faw or heard any thing than before : Te. the second, That it is a perfect contradiction to his strong belief of the Truth of his own Story, which plainly implies that he did not feign it to make himfelf an extraordinary Some body : To the third : That an Epileptical Person, when he is out of his Fits, hath his external Senfes, as true and entire, as a drunken Man has when his drunken Fit is over, or a Man awake after a Night of Sleep and Dreams. So that this Argument has not the least shew of force with it. unless you will take away the authority of all Mens Senfes, because at fometimes they have not a competent use of them, namely, in Sleep, Drunkennefs, or the like. But now laftly, for the fourth, which is most confiderable, It is yet of no greater force than to make it questionable, whether this Spectre was the Ghoft of his Father, or fome ludicrous Goblin, that would put a Trick upon Thomas Goddard, by perfonating his Father in law, and by a falle pointing at the pretended Grave of the Murdered make him ridiculous. For what Porphyrius has noted, I doubt not but is true, That. Dæmons Jometimes perfonate the Souls of the Deceased. But if an uncoffined Body being laid in a Ground exposed to wet and dry the Earth may in Thirty or Forty Years space confume the very Bones and affimilate all to the reft of the Mold, when Some Earths will do it in lefs than the fifteenth or twentieth part of that pace: Or if the Ghoft of Edward Avon might have forgot the certain place (it being no grateful Object of his Memory.) where he buried the murdered Man, and only gueffed that to be it; because it was fomething sunk, as if the Earth yielded upon the wasting of the buried Body, the rest of the Story will still naturals b import, that it was the very Ghoft of Edward Avon. Befides. bimfelf expressy declares, as that the Body was buried there, fo that by this time it was all turn'd into Duft.

But whether it was a ludicrous Dæmon, or Edward Avon's Ghoft Encerns not our Scope. It is sufficient that it is a certain Instance of a real Apparition, and I thought fit as in the former Story, so here to be so faithful as to conceal nothing that any might pretend to less the credibility shereof. Stories of the appearing of Souls departed are not for the Tooth of the Non-Conformists, who, as it is faid, if they generally believe this, it must be from the undeniable Evidence Evidence thereof, nor could Thomas Goddard gratifie them by inwenting of it; and that it was not a Fancy the Knowledge of the 20 s. Debt imparted to Thomas Goddard, ignorant thereof before, and his Brother Avon's hearing a Voice diffinft from his, in his Difcourfe with the Apparition, does plainly enough imply. Nor was it Goddard's own Fancy, but that real Spectre that opened his Shopwindow: Nor his Imagination, but fomething in the fhape of an Hare that made his Horfe ftart and cast him into the Dirt: The Apparition of Avon being then accompanied with that Hare, as after with a Maftiff Dog. And laftly, the whole frame of the Story, provided the Relator does werily think it true himfelf, (as Mr. S. seftifies for him in his Letter to Mr. Glanvil, and himfelf profeft be was ready at any time to Swear to it) is fuch, that is being not a voluntary Invention, cannot be an impofing Fancy.

RELAT. X.

The Apparition of the Ghost of Major George Sydenham, to Captain William Dyke, taken out of a Letter of Mr. James Douch of Mongton, to Mr. Jof. Glanvil.

Oncerning the Apparition of the Ghost of Major George Sydenham, (late of Dulverton in the County of Somerfet) to Captain William Dyke, late of Skilgate in this County also, and now likewife deceafed : Be pleas'd to take the Relation of it as I have it from the Worthy and Learned Dr. Tho. Dyke, a near Kinfman of the Captains, thus : Shortly after the Majors Death, the Doctor was defired to come to the House, to take care of a Child that was there fick, and in his way thither he called on the Captain, who was very willing to wait on him to the place, because he must, as he said, have gone thither that Night, though he had not met with fo encouraging an opportu-After their arrival there at the House, and the Civility nity. of the People shewn them in that Entertainment, they were feafonably conducted to their Lodging, which they defired might be together in the fame Bed : Where after they had lain a while, the Captain knockt, and bids the Servant bring him two of the largeft largest and biggest Candles lighted that he could get. Whereupon the Doctor enquires what he meant by this? The Captain answers, You know Cousin what disputes my Major and I have had touching the Being of a God, and the Immortality of the Soul; in which points we could never yet be refolved, tho' we fo much fought for and defired it; and therefore it was at length fully agreed between us. That he of us that dyed first. should the third Night after his Funeral, between the Hours of 12 and 1, come to the little House that is here in the Garden. and there give a full account to the Surviver touching thefe Matters, who should be fure to be prefent there at the fet time. and fo receive a full fatisfaction and this fays the Captain, is the very Night, and I am come on purpole to fulfil my Promile. The Doctor diffuaded him, minding him of the danger of following those strange Counsels, for which we could have no Warrant, and that the Devil might by fome cunning Device make fuch an advantage of this rath attempt, as might work his utter Ruine. The Captain replies, That he had folemnly engag'd; and that nothing flould discourage him; and adds, That if the Doctor would wake a while with him, he would thank him. if not, he might compole himfelf to his reft; but for his own part, he was relolv'd to watch, that he might be fure to be prefent at the Hour appointed : To that purpose he fers his Watch by him, and as foon as he perceived by it that it was half an Hour paft 11, he rifes, and taking a Candle in each Hand, goes out by a Back-door, of which he had before gotten the Key, and walks to the Garden-house, where he continued two Hours and an half, and at his return declared, that he had neither faw , nor heard any thing more than what was usual. But I know, faid he, that my Major would furely have come, had he been able.

About 6 Weeks after, the Captain rides to Eaton to place his Son a Scholar there, when the Doctor went thither with him. They lodged there at an Inn, the Sign was the Christopher, and tarried 2 or 3 Nights, not lying together now as before at Dulverton, but in two feveral Chambers. The Morning before they went thence, the Captain staid in his Chamber longer than he was wont to do before he called upon the Doctor. At length he comes into the Doctor's Chamber, but in a Vifage and Form much differing from himielf, with his Hair and Eyes staring, and his whole Body thaking and trembling : Whereat the Doctor wondring, prefently demanded ; What is the matter Coufin Captain ? The Captain replies, I have teen my Major : Ar which the Doctor feeming to fmile, the Captain immediately continue confirms it, faying, If ever I faw him in my Life, I faw him but now: And then he related to the Doctor what had paffed, thus: This Morning after it was light, some one comes to my Beds-fide, and fuddenly drawing back the Curtains, calls Cap. Cap. (which was the term of Familiarity that the Major used to call the Captain by) To whom I replied, What my Maior? To which he returns, I could not come at the time appointed, but Iam now come to tell you, That there is a God, and a very just and terrible one, and if you do not turn over a new Leaf, (the very Expressions as is by the Doctor punctually remembred) you will find it fo. The Captain proceeded : On the Table by, there lay a Sword, which the Major had formerly given me. now after the Apparition had walked a turn or two about the Chamber, he took up the Sword, drew it out, and finding it not fo clean and bright as it ought, Cap, Cap, fays he, this Sword did not use to be kept after this manner when it was mine. After which Words he fuddenly difappeared.

The Captain was not only throughly perfuaded of what he had thus feen and heard, but was from that time observed to be very much affected with it: And the Humour that before in him was brisk and jovial, was then ftrangely alter'd; infomuch, as very little Meat would pais down with him at Dinner, though at the taking leave of their Friends there was a very handfome Treat provided: Yea it was observed, that what the Captain had thus seen and heard, had a more lasting Influence upon him, and 'tis judged by those who were well acquainted with his Conversation, that the remembrance of this Passage fluck close to him, and that those Words of his dead Friend were frequently founding fresh in his Ears, during the remainder of his Life, which was about two Years.

ADVERTISEMENT.

FOR a farther Affurance of the Truth of the Story, it will not be amifs to take notice what Mr. Douch writes in his fecond Letter to Mr. Glanvil, touching the Character of the Major and the Captain. They were both, faith he, of my good Acquaintance, Men well bred, and of a brisk Humour, and jelly Conversation. of wery very quick and keen parts, having also been both of them University and Inns of Court Gentlemen. The Major I conceive, was about 45 Years old when he died, and I believe the Cuptain might then be 50, or somewhat more. I cannot understand that the Doctor and the Captain had any Discourse concerning the former Engagement to meet, after the disappointment at that Time and Place; or whether the Captain had after that any expectation of the performance of the Promise which the Major had made him. Thus far Mr. Douch : And truly one would naturally think, that he failing the folemn appointed time, the Captain would confequently let go all Hopes and Expettation of his appearing afterward, or if he did, that it would be at fuch a time of the Night as was first determined of, and not at the Morning-light : Which feason yet is less obnoxious to the Impostures of Fancy and Melancholy, and therefore adds Some weight to the Assurance of the Truth of the Apparition, I will only add one Claufe more out of that fecond Letter that makes to the This Story, faith he, has and doth still obtain credit from all point. that knew the Captain, who it feems was not at all thie or fcrupulow to relate it to any one that askt him concerning it, though it was observed he never mentioned it, but with great Terror and Trepidation.

RELAT. XI.

Being a Postfcript of the first Letter of Mr. Douch, concerning the appearing of the Ghost of Sir. George Villiers, Father to the first Duke of Buckingham.

SIR,

CInce the Writing of the premiffes, a Paffage concerning an Apparition of Sir George Villiers, giving warning of his Son's (the Duke of Buckingham's) Murder, is come into my Mind, which hath been affured by a Servant of the Dukes to be a great Truth, thus: Some few Days before the Duke's going to Portfmouth, (where he was stabb'd by Felton) the Ghost of his Fathor.

ther, Sir George Villiers appeared to one Parker, (formerly his own Servant, but then Servant to the Duke) in his Morning. Chamber-Gown ; charged Parker to tell his Son, that he fhould decline that Employment and Defign he was going upon, or elfe he would certainly be murdered : Parker promifed the Apparition to do it, but neglected it, The Duke making preparations for his Expedition, the Apparition came again to Parker. taxing him very feverely for his breach of Promile, and required him not to delay the acquainting his Son of the Danger he was in : Then Parker the next Day tells the Duke, that his Father's Ghoft had twice appeared to him, and had commanded him to give him that Warning : The Duke flighted it, and told him he was an old Doating Fool. That Night the Apparition came to Parker a third time, faying, 'Parker thou haft done 'well in warning my Son of his Danger, but though he will not yet believe thee, go to him once more however, and tell him from me by fuch a Token, (naming a private Token) which no body knows, but only he and I, that if he will not decline this Voyage, such a Knife as this is (pulling a long Knife our from under his Gown) will be his Death. This Meffage Parker alfo-delivered the next Day to the Duke, who when he heard the private Token, believed that he had it from his Father's Ghoft ; yet faid, that his Honour was now at Stake, and he could not go back fram what he had undertaken, come Life. come Death. This Paffage, Parker, after the Duke's Murder. communicated to his Fellow-fervant, Henry Ceeley, who told it to a Reverend Divine, a Neighbour of mine, from whole Mouth I have it. This Henry Ceeley, has not been dead above 20 Years, and his Habitation for feveral Years before his death. was at North-Currey, but 3 Miles from this place. My Friend, the Divine aforefaid, was an intimate Acquaintance of this Henry Ceeley's, and affures me he was a Person of known Truth and Integrity.

ADVER TISEMENT.

THis Story I heard, (but another Name put for Parker) with great Assurance, and with larger Circumstances, from a Perfon of Honour; but I (hall content my felf to note only what I find in a Letter of Mr. Timothy Locket, of Mongton, to Mr. Glanvil. That this Apparition to Mr. Parker, was all 3 times towards Midnight, when he was reading in some Book, and he mentions, that the Duke's Expedition was for the relief of Rochel. The reft is much. what as Mr. Douch has declared. But I will not omit the close of Mr. Locket's Letter. I was confirmed in the Truth of the premiffes. faith he, by Mr. Henry Ceeley, who was then a Servant with this Mr. Parker, to the Duke, and who told me that he knew Mr. Parker to be a Religious and Sober Person, and that every particular related, was to his Knowledge true.

RELAT. XII.

Of the appearing of Mr. Watkinson's Ghost to his Daughter Toppam, contained in a Letter of Mrs. Taylor of the Ford by St. Neots, to Dr. Ezekias Burton.

· SIR,

A Y Service to you and your Lady. Now according to your M defire I shall Write what my Coufin told me: Her Name was Mary Watkinfon, Her Father did live in Smithfield, but fhe was Married to one Francis Toppam, and the did live in York with her Husband, being an ill one, who did steal her away against her Parents confert, fo that they could not abide him : But the came often to them, and when the was laft with him, upon their parting he express, that she feared she should never see him more. He aniwer'd her, If he should die, if ever God did permit the Dead to to fee the Living, he would fee her again. Now after he had been Buried about half a Year. on a Night when the was in Bed, but could not fleep, the heard Mufick, and the Chamber grew lighter and lighter, and the being Broad-awake, faw her Father Itand at her Bed-fide; who faid, Mall, did Inot tell, thee that I would fee thee once again? She called him Father, and talked of many things; and he bade her be Patient, and Dutiful to her Mother. And when the told him the had a Child fince he did Die: He faid that would not trouble her long. He bade her fpeak what the would now to him, for he muft go, and that he thould never fee her more till they met in the Kingdom of Heaven. So the Chamber grew darker and darker, and he was gone with Mufick. And the faid the did never Dream of him, nor did ever fee any Apparition of him after.

He was a very Honeft Godly Man, as far as I can tell.

THis Story G. Ruft, who was after Bishop of Dromore, told me, I remember, with great Assurance some 20 Years ago, who was not at all credulous in these things. And it was so as Mrs. Taylor relates to Dr. Burton.

The next Relation shall be of a Daughter appearing to her Fasher.

The appearing of the Ghost of the Daughter of Dr. Farrar to him after her Death, according to a brief Narrative fent from Mr. Edward Fowler to Dr. H. More, Anno 1678, May 11.

T HIS Week Mr. Pearfon, who is a worthy good Minister of this City of London, told me, That his Wife's Grandfather, a Man of great Piety, and Physician to this present King, his Name Farrar, nearly related (Ithink Brother) to the famous Mr. Farrar of Little-Giddon, I fay this Gentleman and his Daughter, (Mrs. Pearfons Mother, a very pious Soul) made a Compact at his intreaty, That the first of them that Died, if happy, should after Death appear to the Surviver, if it were possible; The Daughter with some deficulty consenting thereto:

Some time after, 'the Daughter who lived at Gillingham-lodge, two Miles from Salisbury, fell in Labour, and by a Mistake being given a noxious Potion instead of another prepared for her, suddenly died.

Her Father lived in London, and that very Night fhe died fhe opened his Curtains, and looked upon him. He had before heard nothing of her Illnefs, but upon this Apparition confidently told his Maid, that his Daughter was Dead, and 2 Days after received the News. Her Grand-mother told Mrs. Pearfon this, as alfo an Uncle of hers, and the above-faid Maid, and this Mrs, Pearfon I know, and the is a very prudent and good Woman.

RELAT. XIV.

The appearing of the Ghost of one M. Bower of Guilford, to an Highway-man in Prison, as it is fet down in a Letter of Dr. Exekias Burton, to Dr.H. More.

A Bout 10 Years ago, one Mr. Bower, an ancient Man, living at Guilfordin Surrey, was upon the High-way, not far from that place, found newly Murdered very barbaroufly, ha-, ving one great Cut crofs his Throat, and another down his Breaft. Two Men were feiz'd upon fulpicion, and put into Goal at Guilford, to another who had before been committed for Robbing as I fuppofe. That Night this third Man was awakened about one of the Clock, and greatly terrified with an old Man, who had a great Gafh crofs his Throat almost from Ear to Ear, and a Wound down his Breaft. He alfo came in ftooping, and holding his Hand on his Back. Thus he appeared, but faid nothing. The Thief calls to his two new Companions, they grumbled at him, but made no Anfwer.

In the Morning he had retained fo lively an Impression of what he had seen, that he spoke to them to the same purpose again, and they told him it was nothing but his Fancy: But he was so fully persuaded of the reality of the Apparition, that he told others of it, and it came to the Ears of my Friend Mr. Reading, Justice of Peace in Surrey, and Cousin to the Gentleman that was Murdered.

He immediately fent for the Prifoner, and askt him in the first place, Whether he was born or had lived about Guilford? To which he answered, No. Secondly, He enquired if he knew any of the Inhabitants of that Town, or of the Neighbourhood? He replied, That he was a stranger to all thereabout. Then he enquired, If he had ever heard of one Mr. Bower? He faid, No. After this, he Examined him for what cause those two other Men were imprifoned? To which he answered, he knew not, but supposed for some Robbery.

After these preliminary Interrogatories, he defired him to tell him what he had feen in the Night, which he immediately did, exactly according to the Relation he had heard, and L gave before: And withal, deferibed the old Gentleman fo by his picked Beard, and that he was (as he called it) rough on his Cheeks, and that the Hairs of his Face were black and white. Mr. Reading faith, That he himself could not have given a more exact exact Description of Mr. Bower than this was. He told the Highway-man, that he must give him his Oath, (though that would fignifie little from fuch a Rogue) to which the Man readily confented, and took Oath before the Justice of all this.

Mr. Reading being a very Difcreet Man, concealed this Story from the Jury at the Affizes, as knowing that this would be no Evidence according to our Law. However, the Friends of the Murdered Gentleman had been very inquifitive, and difcovered feveral fufpicious Circumstances; one of which was, that those two Men had washed their Cloaths, and that fome stains of Blood remained. Another, that one of them had denied he ever heard that Mr. Bower was Dead, whenas he had in another place confess it 2 Hours before. Upon these and such like Evidences, those two were Condemn'd and Executed, but Denied it to the lass: But one of them faid, The other could clear him if he would, which the By-standers understood not,

After fome time a Tinker was Hang'd, (where, the Gentleman has forgot) who at his Death faid, That the Murder of Mr. Bower of Guilford, was his greateft Trouble; for he, had a Hand in it: He confeft he ftruck him a Blow on the Back, which fetcht him from his Horfe, and when he was down, those other Men that was Arraign'd and Executed for it, cut his Throat and rifled him. This is the first Story, which I had from Mr. Reading himself, who is a very Honest Prudent Person, and not credulous.

I know you defire to have the Names of all the Perfons referr'd to in this Relation, and the exact time and place, but Mr. Reading cannot recollect them now, though he tells me, he fent an exact and full Narrative of all to one Mr. Onflow, a Justice of the Peace in that Neighbourhood, with whom I have fome Acquaintance, and I will endeavour to retrieve it.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Names of all the Perfons, and exact Time and Place of all the Actions, I find not amongst Mr. Glanvil's Papers, but the Story is perfect as it is, and fo credible, that I thought it worthy of a Place amongst the rest. And this appearing of Mr. Bower is just fuch another thing as the appearing of Ann Walker.

We proceed to the fecond Story, which Mr. Reading imparted to the Doctor.

Another appearing of a Ghost of a Man of Guilford, for the recovery of a Field for his Child, unjustly detained by his Brother, out of the above-faid Letter of Dr. Ezekias Burton, to Dr. H. More.

A N Inhabitant of the before-nam'd Town of Guilford, who was poffeft of fome Copy-hold-Land, which was to defcend to his Children, or in default of fuch Iffue, to his Brother: He dies having no Child born : And his Wife apprehending her felf nor to be with Child, which her Husband's Brother askt her immediately after his Brother's Death : She told him, the believ'd the was not, but afterwards proved to be, which when the knew, the went, by the Inftigation of Neighbours, to her Brother, and told him how it was with her : He rated her, called her Whore, and told her, the had procured fome body to get her with Child. knowing that fuch a Field must be Inherited by the Posterity of her Husband, but her Whoring should not fool him out of that Eftate. The poor Wooman went home troubled, that not only her Child should lose the Land, but which was worse, that she should be thought a Whore: However she quieted her felf and refolved to fit down with the Lofs.

When her time came, the was delivered of a Son, and he grew, up, and one Summers-Night, as the was undreffing him in her Yard, her Husband appeared, and bid her go to his Brother, and demand the Field ; which the did, but was treated very ill by him. He told her, that neither she nor her Devil, (for she had told him, her Husband had appeared, and bid her speak to him) should make him forego his Land. Whereupon she went home again. But fome time after, as her Brother was going out of this Field home-wards, the Dead Man appears to him at the Style, and bids him give up the Land to the Child, for it was his right. The Brother being greatly Frighted at this, runs avvay, and not long after, comes to her, and tells her, the had fent the Devil to him, and bids her take the Land, and fo gave it up, and her Son is now possest of it: His Name is Mat, he lived in the Service of Mr. Reading's Brother for fome Years, but he has forget his Sir-name, though he knows him very well.

Though the Sir-name of the Party be wanting, yet be is determinated fo by other Circumstances, and the Story fo fresh, and told by so credible a Person, that the Narrative is sufficiently confiderable as it is. But of recovery of Land to the right Owners, the Story of Mrs. Brettons Ghost appearing, is an eximicus Example, which is as follows.

RELAT. XVI.

The appearing of the Ghost of Mrs. Bretton, for the recovery of some Lands into the Hands of the Poor, taken from them by some mistake in Law or Right, as it is in a Narrative sent to Dr. H--- More, from Mr. Edward Fowler, Prebendary of Gloucester.

D^{R.} Bretton, late Rector of Ludgate and Deptford, lived formerly in Hereford/bire, and Married the Daughter of formerly in Hereford/bire, and Married the Daughter of Dr. S----- This Gentlewoman was a Person of extraordinary Piety, which the exprest as in her Life, fo at her Death. She had a Maid that the had a great Kindnels for, who was Married to a near Neighbour, whole Name, as I remember, was Alice. Nor long after her Death, as Alice was Rocking her Infant in the Night, the was called from the Cradle by a Knocking at her Door, which opening, the was furpriz'd at the fight of a Gentlewoman not to be diffinguished from her late Mistrels, neither in Person, nor Habit. She was in a Morning-Gown, the fame in appearance, with that she had often seen her Mistres wear. At first fight the exprest very great amazement, and faid, Were not iny Mistress dead, I should not question but that you are she. She reply'd, I am the fame that was your Mistress, and took er by the Hand; which Alice affirmed was as cold as a Clod. She

She added, That the had bufine's of great importance to imploy her in, and that the must immediately go a little way with Alice trembled, and befeecht her to excuse her, and inher. treated her very importunately to go to her Master, who must needs be more fit to he employed. She answered, that he who was her Husband, was not at all concerned, but yet the had a defire rather to make use of him, and in order thereunto had feveral times been in his Chamber, but he was still asleep, nor had the power to do more than once uncover his feet towards the awakening of him. And the Doctor faid, that he had heard walking in his Chamber in the night, which till now he could give no account of. Alice next objected that her Husband was gone Journey, and the had no one to look to her Child, that it was very apt to cry vehemently, and the feared if it awaked before her return, it would cry it felf to death, or do it felf milcheif. The Spectre replied, The Child shall fleep till you return.

Alice feeing there was no avoiding it, forely againft her will, followed her over a ftyle into a large Field, who then faid to her, observe how much of this Field I measure with my feer. And when she had taken a good large and leissurely compass, she faid all this belongs to the Poor, it being gotten from them by wrongful means, and charged her to go and tell her Brother, whole it was at that time, that he should give it up to the Poor again forthwith as he loved her and his deceased Mother. This Brother was not the Person who did this unjust act, but his "Father. She added, that she was more concerned, because her name was made use of in some writing that related to this Land.

Alice askt her how the fhould latisfie her Brother that this was no Cheat, or delution of her Fancy, She replied, tell him this fecret, which he knows that only himfelf and I are privy to and he will believe you. Alice having promifed her to go on this Errand, the proceeded to give her good advice, and entertained her all the reft of the Night with most heavenly and divine Difcourfe. When the Twilight appeared they heard the whistling of Carters, and the noife of Horfe-Bells. Whereupon the Spectre faid, Alice I must be feen by none but your felf, and to she difappeared.

Immediately Alia makes all hafte home, being thoughtful for her Child, but found it as the Spectre had faid, afleep as the left it. When the had dreffed it, and committed it to the care of a Neighbour, away the went to her Mafter the Doctor, who amazed at the account the gave him, fent her to his Brother-in-

Law,

Law. He at first hearing Alice's story and message, laughed at it heartily. But the had no fooner told him the fecret, but he changed his countenance, told her he would give the Poor. their own, and accordingly he did it, and they now enjoy it.

This with more circumstances hath feveral times been relared by Dr. Brotton himfelf, who was well known to be a perfon of great goodness and fincerity. He gave a large Narrarive of this Apparition of his Wife to two of my Friends. First. to one Mrs. Needham, and afterwards a little before his Death to Dr. Whichcon

Some years after I received the foregoing Narrative (viz. near four years fince) I light into the company of three fober perfons of good Rank, who all lived in the City of Hereford. and I travelled in a Stage Coach three days with them. To them I happened to tell this ftory, but told it was done at Deptford, for to I prefumed it was, because I knew that there Dr. Bretton lived. They told me as foon as I had concluded it, that the flory was very true in the main, only I was out as to the place. For 'twas not Depeford, but as I remember they told me Pembridge near Hereford, where the Doctor was Minister before the Return of the King, And they affured me upon their own knowledge, that to that day the Poor enjoyed the piece of Ground. They added, That Mrs. Bretton's Father could never endure to hear any thing mentioned of his Daughters appearing after her death, but would still reply in great anger. that it was not his Daughter but it was the Devil. So that he acknowledged that fomething appeared in the likeness of his Daughter.

RELAT. XVII.

Of a Dutch Man that could see Ghosts, and of the Ghost he faw in the Town of Woodbridge in Suffolk,

MR. Broom the Minister of Woodbridge in Suffolk, meeting one day, in a Barber's-shop in that Town, a Dutch Lieutenant (who was blown up with Opdam, and taken alive out of the Water, and carried to that Town, where he was a Prifoner at large) upon the occasion of some discourse was told by him, that he could see Ghosts, and that he had seen divers. Mr. Broom rebuking him for talking so idly he persisted in it very stifly. Some days after lighting upon him again, he askt him whether he had seen any Ghost since his coming to that Town. To which he replyed, No.

But not long after this, as they were walking together up the Town, he faid to Mr. Broom, Yonder comes a Ghoft. He feeing nothing, askt him where about it was ?-The other faid, it is over againft fuch a houfe, and it walks looking upwards towards fuch a fide, flinging one Arm with a Glove in its hand. He faid moreover, that when it came near them, they muft give way to it. That he ever did fo, and fome that have not done fo, have fuffered for it. Anon he faid, 'tis juft upon us, let's out of the way. Mr. Broom believing all to be a fiction, as foon as he faid thole words, took hold of his Arm, and kept him by force in the way. But as he held him, there came fuch a force againft them, that he was flung into the middle of the fireet, and one of the Palms of his hands, and one knee bruifed and broken by the fall, which put him for a while to exceffive pain.

But fpying the Lieutenant lye like a dead Man, he got up as foon as he could, and applied himfelf to his relief. With the help of others he got him into the next thop, where they poured ftrong water down his Throat, but for fome time could difcern no Life in him. At length, what with the ftrong-water, and what with well chafing him he began to ftir, and when he was come to himfelf, his first words were, I will thew you no more Shofts. Then he defired a Pipe' of Tobacco, but Mr. Broom told him, he should take it at his house; for he feared; should he take it fo foon there, it would make him fick.

Thereupon they went together to Mr. Broom's Houfe where they were no fooner entring in, but the Bell rang out. Mr. Broom prefently fent his Maid to learn who was dead. She brought word that it was fuch an one, a Taylor, who dyed fuddenly, though he had been in a Confumption a long time. And inquiring after the time of his death, they found it was as punctually as it could be gueffed at the very time when the Ghoft appeared. The Ghoft had exactly this Taylor's known Gate who ordinarily went also with one Arm fwinging, and a Glove in that hand, and looking on one fide upwards.

THIS Relation was fent to Dr. H. More from Mr. Edward Fowler; at the end whereof he writes, that Dr. Burton as well as himfelf, heard it from Mr. Broom's own mouth. And I can add, that I alfo afterwards heard it from his own mouth at London.

An Irish story of one that had like to have been carried away by Spirits, and of the Ghost of a Man who had been seven years dead that brought a Medicine to the abovesaid-parties Bed-side.

A Gentleman in Ireland near to rie Earl of Orrev's, fending his Butler one afternoen to buy Cards; as he paffed a Field, he, to his wonder, efpyed a company of people fitting round a Table, with a deal of good chear before them in the midft of the Field. And he going up rowards there, they all A a arous arole and faluted him, and defired him to fit down with them. But one of them whilpering thefe words in his Ear; Do nothing this company invites you to. He therefore refuled to fit down at the Table, and immediately the Table and all that belonged to it were gone; and the company are now dancing and playing upon Mulical Inftruments, and the Butler being defired to join himfelf to them; but he refufing this alfo, they fall all to work, and he not being to be prevailed with to accompany them in working any more than in feafting or dancing, they all difappeared, and the Butler is now alone. But inftead of going forwards, home he returns as faft as he could drive, in a great confternation of mind. And was no fooner entred his Mafters door, but down he falls, and lay fome time fenflels, but coming to himfelt again, he related to his Mafter what had happened to him.

The night following, there comes one of this company to his Bed fide, and tells him, that if he offered to ftir out of doors the next day, he would be carried away. Hereupon he kept within, but towards the Evening, having need to make water, he adventured to put one foot over the threshold, several standing by. Which he had no fooner done, but they efpyed a Rope cast about his middle, and the poor Man was hurried away with great fwiftnefs, they following after him as faft as they could, but could not overtake him. At length they espyed a Horfeman coming towards them, and made figns to him to ftop the Man, whom he faw coming near him, and both the ends of the Rope, but no body drawing. When they met, he laid hold on one end of the Rope, and immediately had a imart blow given him over his Arm with the other end. But by this means the Man was ftopt, and the Horfe-man brought him back with him.

The Earl of Orrery hearing of these ftrange paffages, sent to the Mafter to define him to send this Man to his House, which he accordingly did. And the morning following, or quickly after, he told the Earl that his Spectre had been with him again, and affured him that that day he should most certainly be carried away, and that no endeavours should avail to the faving of him. Upon this he was kept in a large room, with a confiderable number of perfons to guard him, among whom was the famous Stroker, Mr. Greatrix, who was a Neighbour. There were befides other perfons of Quality, two Bishops in the House at the lame time, who were confulted touching the making use of a Medicine the Spectre or Ghost prescribed, of which, mention will will be made anon, but they determined on the Negative. But shis by the By.

Till part of the Afternoon was spent all was quiet, but at length he was perceived to rife from the ground, whereupon Mr. Greatrix and another lufty Man clapt their Arms over his Shoulders, one of them before him, and the other behind, and weighed him down with all their ftrength, But he was forcibly taken up from them, and they were too weak to keep their hold, for a confiderable time he was carried in the Air to and fro over their heads, several of the Company ftill running under him to prevent his receiving hurt if he should fall. At length he fell, and was caught before he came to ground, and had by that means no hurt.

All being quiet till bed-time, My Lord ordered two of his Servants to lie with him, and the next Morning he told his Lordship, that his Spectre was again with him, and brought a Wooden Difh with grey liquor in it, and bad him drink it off. At the first fight of the Spectre, he faid, he endeavoured to awake his bedfellows, but he told him that that endeavour thould be in vain, and that he had no caule to fear him, he being his Friend, and he that at first gave him the good advice in the Field, which had he not followed, he had been before now. perfectly in the power of the Company he faw there. He added, that he concluded it was impossible, but that he should have been carried away the day before, there being fo ftrong a Combination against him. But now he could affure him that there would be no more attempts of that nature, but he being troubled with two forts of fad Fits, he had brought that liquor to cure him of them, and bad him drink it. He peremptorily refusing, the Spectre was angry, upbraided him with great difingenuity, but told him, that however he had a kindnels for him, and that if he would take Plantain juice he fould be well of one fort of Fits, but he should carry the other to his Grave. The poor Man having by this time fomewhat recovered himfelf. ask't the Spectre, whether by the juice of Plantain he meant that of the Leaves or Roots ? It replied, the Roots.

Then it askt him, whether he did not know him? He anfwered, No. He replied, I am fuch a one? The Man anfwered: He harh been long dead. I have been dead faid the Spectre or Ghoft feven years, and you know that I lived a loofe life. And ever fince have I been hurried up and down in a reftlefs Condition with the Company you faw, and fhall be to the day of Judgment. Then he proceeded to tell him, that had he acknowledged God in his ways, he had not fuffered fuch fevere things by their means. And farther faid, you never prayed to T HIS flory was fent alfo from Mr. E. Fowler to Dr. H. More concerning which he farther adds by way of Postfeript, that, Mr. Greatrix told this story to Mrs. Foxcraft at Ragley, and at her requeft he told it a fecond time in her hearing at the Table. My Lady Roydon being then prefent, inquired afterwards concerning it of my Lord Orrery, who confirmed the truth of it, acknowledging all the circumftances of this Narrative to my Lady Roydon to be true, except that passage, that the Spettre told the Man that he was that day going about an unlawful business. And Mr. Fowler farther adds, that fince an eminent Dottor in this City told me, that my Lord told him, that he faw at his own house a Mantaken up into the Air.

Lastly, I find Dr. H. More in a Letter to Mr. Glanvil, affirming that he also heard Mr. Greatrix tell the story at my Lord Conway's at Ragley, and that he particularly inquired of Mr. Greatrix about the man's being carried up into the Air above men's heads in the Room, and that he did expressly affirm that he was an Eyewitness theraof.

The miraculous Cure of Jesch Claes a Dutch Woman of Amsterdam, accompanied with an Apparition,

T HE Narrative taken by a Dutch Merchant from her own Mouth begins thus. A miraculous Cure upon Felch Claes, a Woman about fifty years of Age: For this many years well known to my felf and the Neighbours. This Woman for fourteen years had been lame of both Legs, one of them being dead dead and without feeling, fo that the could not go but creep upon the ground, or was carried in Peoples Arms as a Child, but now through the power of God Almighty the hath walked again. Which came to pais after this manner, as I have taken it from her own Mouth.

In the year 1676. about the 13th or 14th of this Month Offer. ber, in the Night, between one and two of the Clock, this Felch Claes being in bed with her Husband who was a Boatman, the was three times pulled by her Arm, with which the awaked and cryed out, O Lord! What may this be? Hereupon the heard an answer in plain words: Be not afraid, I come in the Name of the Father Son and Holy Ghoft. Your malady which hath for many years been upon you shall cease, and it shall be given you from God Almighty to walk again. But keep this to your felf till farther answer. Whereupon she cried aloud, O Lord! That I had a light, that I might know what this is. Then had the this answer, There needs no light, the light thall be given you from God. Then came light all over the Room, and the faw a beautiful Youth about ten years of Age, with Curled Yellow Hair, Clothed in White to the Feet, who went from the Beds head to the Chimney with a light, which a little after vanished. Hereupon did there shoot fomething or gush from her Hip or diffuse it felf through her Leg as a Water into her great Toe, where the did find life rifing up, felt it with her hand, crying out, Lord give me now again my feeling which I have not had in fo many years. And farther the continued crying and praying to the Lord according to her weak meafure.

Yet the continued that day Wednefday, and the next day Thurfday, as before till Evening at fix a Clock. At which time the fate at the Fire dreffing the Food. Then came as like rufhing noife in both her Ears, with which it was faid to her Stand. Your going is given you again. Then did the immediately ftand up that had fo many years crept, and went to the door. Her Husband meeting her, being exceedingly afraid, drew back. In the mean time while the cryed out, My dear Husband I can go again, The Man thinking it was a Spirit, drew back, faying, you are not my Wife. His Wife taking hold of him, faid, My dear Husband I am the felf fame that hath been Married these Thirty years to you. The Almighty God hath given my going again. But her Husband being amazed, drew back to the fide of the Rooni, till at last she claspt her Hand about his Neck, and yet he doubted, and faid to his Daughter, is this your Mother? She answered, yes Father, this we plainly fee. I had An bouse haunted fome Thirty years ago or more at or near Bow, not far from London, and strangely disturbed by Dæmons and Witches.

A Certain Gentleman about Thirty years ago or more, being to Travel from London into Effex, and to pais through Bow, at the request of a Friend he called at a house there, which began then to be a little disquieted. But not any thing much remarkable yet, unless of a young Girl who was pluckt by the Thigh by a cold Hand in her. Bed, who died within a few days after.

、Some

Some weeks after this, his occasions calling him back, he paffed by the fame house again, but had no defign to give them a new vifit, he having done that not long before. But it happening that the Woman of the house flood at the door, he thought himself engaged to ride to her and ask how she did ? To whom theanswered with a forrowful Countenance : That though the was in tolerable health, yet things went very ill with them. their house being extremely haunred, especially above stairs, io that they were forced to keep in the low Rooms, there was fuch flinging of things up and down, of Stones and Bricks through the Windows, and putting all in diforder. But he could fcarce forbear laughing at her, giving fo little credit to fuch ftories himfelf, and thought it was the tricks only of fome unhappy Wags to make fport to themfelves, and trouble to their Neighbours.

Well fays the, if you will but ftay a while you may chance to fee fomething with your own Eyes. And indeed he had not flayed any confiderable time with her in the Street, but a Window of an upper Room opened of it felf (for they of the Family took it for granted no body was above stairs) and out comes a piece of an old Wheel through it. Whereupon it prefently · clapt to again. A little while after it fuddenly flew open again. and our came a Brick-bar, which inflamed the Gentleman with a more eager defire to fee what the matter was, and to difcover the Knavery. And therefore he boldly refolved if any one would go up with him, he would go into the Chamber. But none preient durft accompany him. Yet the keen defire of discovering the Cheat, made him adventure by himfelf alone into that Room. Into which when he was come, he faw the Bedding, Chairs and Stools, and Candlefticks, and Bedftaves, and all the Furniture rudely scattered on the Floor, but upon search found no mortal in the Room.

Well ! he ftays there a while to try conclusions, anon a Bedfaff begins to move, and turn it felf round a good while together upon its Toe, and at last fairly to lay it felf down again. The curious Spectator, when he had observed it to lie still a while, fteps out to it, views it, whether any fmall String or Hair were tied to it, or whether there were any hole or button to fasten any such String to, or any hole or String in the Ceiling above; but after fearch, he found not the leaft fulfpicion of any fuch thing.

He retires to the Window again, and observes a little longer what may fall out. Anon, another Bedstaff rifes off from the ground of its own accord higher into the air, and feems to make, towards towards him. He now begins to think there was fomething more than ordinary in the bufinefs, and prefently makes to the door with all speed, and for better caution shuts it after him. Which was prefently opened again, and fuch a clatter of Chairs, and Stools, and Candlefticks, and Bedstaves, sent after him down Stairs, as if they intended to have maimed him, but their motion was fo moderated, that he received no harm ; but by this time he was abundantly affured, that it was not meer Womanish fear or superstition that so affrighted the Mistrels of the house. And while in a lovy Room he yyas talking with the Family about these things, he save a Tobacce-pipe rife from a fide Table, no body being nigh, and fly to the other fide of the Room, and break it felf against the yvall, for his farther confirmation, that it yvas neither the tricks of Waggs. nor the fancy of a Woman, but the mads frolicks of Witches and Dæmons. Which they of the house being fully perfuaded of, roafted a Beditaff, upon vyhich an Old Woman, a suspected Witch, came to the House, and vvas apprehended, but escaped the Lavv. But the House after vvas so ill haunted in all the Rooms. upper and loyver, that the house flood empty for a long time after.

A DVERTISEMENT.

THIS Story is found amongst Mr. Glanvil's Papers, written to him from Dr. H. More, who fays, fome three months before, be had received it from the parties own mouth, that was at the haunted house in Bow and saw the motion of the Bedstaves and Tobaccopipe, &c. And I very well remember, that about Thirty or Forty years ago, there was a great fame of an house haunted at Bow, and Juch like feats as this Spectator faw, was rumoured of it, and the time agrees with that of this Spectator or Eye-witnefs of the above recited Feats. And a Book was then faid to be Printed, though I never faw any but one of late with any date of the year, the things then being in fieri, when it was Printed. And they feem to refer to the fame baunted place, though the Pamphlet names. Plaifto for But the haunting of which the fame went fo many years Bow. ago, I very well'remember was Bow. But whether Bow was talked et of instead of Plaisto, it being a place near, and of more note, I know not. And Paul Fox a Weaver, was the Man, whose House was haunted in Plaisto, according to that Pamphlet

If the Gentleman that so well remembers the strange things he faw, had not forgot the Man's Name whole House was Haunted, (and the strangeness of those things would fix themselves in his Memory, even whether he would or no, when the Name of the Master of the House might easily in 30 or 40 Years time slide out of it) we might be fure whether it were Plaisto or Bow. But I am sure the Fame went of Bow, though the Pamphlet name Plaisto, and that might make the above-said Party, who told Dr. More the Story, fix the Scene, without all scrupter in Bow.

But methinks I hear the Reader complain, that it was a great Qmiffion in Mr. Glanvil, that he did not enguire of Dr. More, who this Party was, that told him the Story, it feeming an Headlefs piece without that part. Wherefore I find in a Paper, (whofe Title is Doctor More's Particulars about the Stories) thefe Words in Anfwer to Mr. Glanvil. That it is Dr. Gibbs, a Prebendary of Westminster, and a fober intelligent Perfon. And fome dozen Lines after, Dr. More fays, Dr. Gibbs told the Story to my felf, and to Dr. Outram, who brought me to him. And I have told you already, that he is a Perfon of Understanding and Integrity. He has also fome Sermons in Print as I take it.

But forafmuch, as it was about 3 Months after Dr. More had recieved this Account of the Story from Dr. Gibbs, that he Wrote to Mr. Glanvil, it is not to be expected that he related it in the very fame Words, and in every punctilio as he heard it. But I dare undertake for him, that for the Main, and that which makes to the voincing of Witchcraft, and the ludicrous Feats of Dæmons, that he hath committed no Error therein, nor fet down any thing whofe Subftance was not related to him by the Reverend Dr. Gibbs,

Mr. Jermin's Story of an House haunted, and what Disturbance himself was a Witness of there at a visit of his Wise's Sister.

ONE Mr. Jermin, Minister of Bigner in Suffex, going to fee a Sister of his Wife's, found her very Melancholy, and asking her the Reason, the reply'd, You shall know to Morrow morning. When he went to Bed, there were two Maids accompanied him in his Chamber, and the next Day, he understood that they durft not go into any Room in the House alone.

In the Night, while he was in his Bed, he heard the trampling of many Feet upon the Leads over his Head, and after that the going off of a Gun, upon which followed a great filence. Then they came fwiftly down Stairs into his Chamber, where they fell a Wreftling, and tumbling each other down, and fo continued a great while. After they were quiet, they fell a Whifpering, and made a great Buz, of which he could underftand nothing. Then one called at the Door, and faid, Day is broke, come away, upon which, they ran up Stairs as faft as they could drive, and fo heard no more of them.

In the Morning his Brother and Sifter came in to him, and the faid, Now Brother you know why I am fo Melancholy: After the had askt him how he had flept, and he answered, I never refted worfe in all my Life, having been difturbed a great part of the Night with Tumblings and Noifes. She complained that her Husband would force her to live there, notwithstanding their being continually scared. Whereto the Husband answered, Their Difturbers never did them any other Mischief.

At Dinner they had a Phyfician with them, who was an Acquaintance, Mr. Jermin difcourfing about this Diffurbance; the Phyfician alfo anfwered, That never any hurt was done, of which he gave this Inftance: That Dining there one Day, there came a Man on Horfeback into the Yard, in Mourning. His Servant went to know what was his Bufinefs, and found him fitting very Melancholy, nor could he get any Anfwer from him. The Mafter of the Houfe and the Phyfician went to fee who itiwas; upon which, the Man clapt Spurs to his Horfe, and rode into the Houfe, up Stairs into a long Gallery, whither

RELAT. XXII.

Contained in a Letter of Mr. G. Clark, to Mr. M. T. touching a House haunted in Welton near Daventry.

SIR,

I Send you here a Relation of a very memorable Piece of Witchcraft, as I fuppole, which would fit Mr. More gallantly. I first heard the Story related to Sir Justinian Islam, by a Reverend Minister, of his own experience. Sir Justinian would have had me have gone to the Place, which I could not then do. But a little after, going to visit a Friend, and not thinking of this, my Friend told me the Story, the Place being near him, and the principal Man concerned in the Story being a Relation of his, and one that I my felf had fome acquaintance with. He had occasion to go to this Man's House for fome Deeds of Land, and I went with him for fatisfaction touching this Story, which I had to the full, and in which I could not but acquiesce, though otherwise I am very chary, and hard enough to believe Passages of this Nature.

The

The Story is this, At Welton, within a Mile of Daventry, in Northamptonfhire; where live together Widow Camley, the Grandmother, Widow Stiff, the Mother, and her two Daughters. Ar the next House but one, live anothers Widow Cowley, Sifter to the former Widow Cowley; Mofes Cowley my Acquaintance her Son, and Moles his Wife, having a good Effate in Land of their own, and very civil and orderly People. These 3 told me, That the younger of the two Daughters, 10 Years of age. Vomited in less than 3 Days, 3 Gallons of Water, to their great Admiration. After this, the elder Wench comes running, and rells them, that now her Sifter begins to Vomit Stones and Coals. They went and were Eye-witneffes, told them till they came to Five hundred; some weighed a quarter of a Pound, and were to big, as they had enough to do to get them out of her Mouth, and he profest to me, that he could scarce get the like into his Mourh, and I do not know how any should, if they were fo big, as he shewed the like to me. I have sent you one, but not a quarter lo big as some of them were. It was one of the biggeft of them that were left, and kept in a Bag. This Vomiting lasted about a Formight, and hath Witnesses good store.

In the mean time they threw Hards of Flax upon the Fire, which would not blaze though blown but dwindled away. The Bed-cloaths would be thrown off the Bed. Moles Cowleytold me. that he laid them on again feveral times, they all coming out of the Room, and go but into the Parlour and they were off again. And a strike of Wheat standing at the Beds-feer, fet it how they would, it would be thrown down again. Once the Coffers and things were to transposed as they could scarce ftir about the Room. Once he laid the Bible upon the Bed, but the Cloaths were thrown off again, and the Bible hid in another Bed. And when they were all gone into the Parlour, as they used to go together, then things would be transposed in the Hall, their Wheel taken in pieces, and part of it thrown under the Table. In their Buttery, their Milk would be taken off the Table, and fet on the Ground, and once one Panchion was broken, and the Milk spilt. A 7 Pound Weight with a Ring was hung upon the Spigor, and the Beer mingled with Sand and all spoiled, their Salt mingled most perfectly with Bran.

Mofes's Mother faid, That their Flax was thrown out of a Box, the put it in again, it was thrown out again; the put it in again and lockt the Box, trying by the Halp or Lid, (as they ufe to do) whether it was fait, it was fo. But as foon as her Back was turned, the Box was unlockt, and the Flax was thrown out again. Mofes faid, That when he was coming out of of the Parlour, he faw a Loaf of Bread tumbling off the Form, and that was the first thing he faw. After a Womans Pattern role up in the House, and was thrown at them. He heard the Comb break in the Window, and presently it flew at them in two pieces. A Knife role up in the Window, and flew at a Man, hitting him with the Haft. An Ink-glass was thrown out of the Window into the Floor, and by and by the Stopple came after it. Then every Day abundance of Stones were thrown about the House, which broke the Windows, and hit the People, but they were the less troubled, because all this while no hurt was done to their Persons, and a great many People being in the Room, the Wheat was thrown about amongst them.

I was in the Houfe, where I faw the Windows which were fill broken, and the People themfelves flewed me where the feveral particulars were done. The Grandmother told me that the thought that fle had loft half a ftrike of Wheat, and the like happen'd to fome Vetches in the Barn. One Mr. Robert Clark, a Gentleman being hit with the Stones, bade the Baker at the Door look to his Bread well, and by and by a Handful of Crums were thrown into his Lap. They could fee the things as they came, but no more.

At laft fome that had been long fulpected for Witches were Examined, and one fent to the Jail, where it is faid the plays her Pranks, but that is of doubtful credit. I askt the old Woman whether they were free novv; the faid, that one Night fince, they heard great Knöckings and cruel Noife, vwhich feared them vvorie than all the reft, and once or twice that Week her Cheefe vvas crumbled into pieces and fpoiled. I vvas there about May-day, 1658. This is all that I remember at prefent. I have heard feveral other Stories, and 2 or 3 notable ones lately from Mens own Experience, which in reafon I was to believe as I did. But in my Judgment, this our-goes all that I knovv of, it having fo much of Senfe, and of the Day-time, fo many and fo credible Witneffes, beyond all Cavil and Exception. I will trouble you no farther, but commending you to the Protection of God Almighty, I take my Leave,

And reft

Yours,

G. Clark.

RELAT, XXIII.

The Relation of James Sherring, taken concernthe matter at old Gast's House of Little-Burton, June 23, 1677, as follows. 372^{-12} Burton

THE first Night that I was there with Hugh Mellmore, and Edward Smith, they heard as it were the Washing in Water over their Heads. Then taking a Candle and going up the Stairs, there was a wet Cloth thrown at them, but it fell on the Stairs. They going up farther, there was another thrown as before. And when they were come up into the Chamber, there flood a Bowl of Water, some of it sprinkled over, and the Water looked white, as if there had been Soap uled in it. The Bowl just before was in the Kitchin, and could not be carried up but through the Room where they were. The next thing that they heard the fame Night was a terrible noife as if it had been a clap of Thurder, and thorly after they heard great fcratching about the Bed-stead, and after that great Knocking with a Hammer against the Beds-head, so that the two Maids that were in the Bed cryed out for Help. Then they ran up the Stairs, and there lay the Hammer on the Bed, and on the Beds-head there were near a Thousand Prints of the Hammer, which the violent Strokes had made. The Maids faid, that they were feratcht and pincht with a Hand that was put into the Bed, which had exceeding long Nails. They faid the Hammer was lockt up fast in the Cupboard when they went to Bed. This was that which was done the first Night, with many other things of the like Nature.

The fecond Night that James Sherring, and Tho. Hillary were there, James Sherring fat down in the Chimney to fill a Pipe of Tobacco; he made use of the Fire-tongs to take up a Coal to light his Pipe, and by and by the Tongs vvere dravvn up the Stairs, and after they vvere up in the Chamber, they vvere play'd vvithal, (as many times Men do) and then throvvn down upon the Bed. Although the Tongs were so near him, he never perceived the going of them away. The same Night one of the Maids left her Shoes by the Fire, and they were carried up into the Chamber, and the old Main's brought down and set in their places. The same Night there was a Knife carried carried up into the Chamber, and it did fcratch and fcrape the Beds head all the Night, but when they went up into the Chamber, the Knife was thrown into the Loft. As they were going up the Stairs, there were things thrown at them, which were just before in the low Room, and when they went down the Stairs, the Old Mans Breeches were thrown down after them. These were the most remarkable things done that Night, only there was continual knocking and pinching the Maids, which was usually done every Night.

The third Night, when James Sherring and Thomas Hillary were there, as foon as the People were gone to bed, their Clothes were taken and thrown at the Candle and put out, and immediately after they cried with a very hideous cry and faid, they fould be all choaked if they were not prefently helped. Then they run up the Stairs and there were abundance of Feathers placked out of the Bolfter that lay under their heads, and fome thrust into their Mouths that they were almost choaked. The Feathers were thrown all about the Bed and Room. Thev were plucked out at a hole no bigger than the top of ones little Finger. Some time after they were vexed with a very hideous knocking at their heads as they lay on the Bed. Then James Sherring and Thomas Hillary took the Candle and went up Stairs and stood at the Beds-feer, and the knocking con-Then they faw a Hand with an Arm-wrift hold the tinued. Hammer which kept on knocking against the Bedsted. Then James Sherring going rowards the Beds-head, the Hand and Hammer fell down behind the Bolfter and could not be found. For they turned up the Bed-cloths to fearch for the Hammer. But as foon as they went down the Stairs the Hammer was thrown out into the middle of the Chamber. These were the most remarkable things that were done that Night.

The fourth and fifth Nights, there was but little done more than knocking and fcratching as was ufually.

The fixth and feventh Nights, there was nothing at all but as quiet as at other houses. These were all the Nights that they were there.

The things that do follow are what James Sherring heard the People of the house report.

There was a Saddle in the house of their Uncle Warren's of Leigh, (which it should feem they detained wrongfully from the right owner) that as it did hang upon a Pin in the Entry would come off and come into the house, as they termed it, hop about the house from one place to another, and upon the Table, and fo to another, which stood on the other side of the house house. Jane Gaft and her Kinswoman took this Saddle and carried it to Leigh, and as they were going along in the broad Common, there would be Sticks and Stones thrown at them, which made them very much afraid, and going near together, their Whittles which were on their Shoulders were knit together. They carried the Saddle to the house which was Old Warren's, and there left and it returned home very quiet. But being gone to Bed at Night the Saddle was brought back from Leigh, (which is a Mile and a half at least from Old Gast's House) and thrown upon the Bed where the Maids lay. After that, the Saddle was very troubles of them, until they broke it in small pieces and threw it out into the Highway.

There was a Coat of the fame Parties, who wasowner of the Saddle, which did hang on the Door in the Hall, and it came off from the place and flew into the fire and lay fome confiderable time, before they could get it out. For it was as much as three of them could do to pluck it out of the fire, becaufe of the ponderous weight that lay on it, as they thought. Neverthelefs there was no imprefion on it of the fire.

Old Ga/t fat at Dinner with a Hat of this old Warren's on his Head, and there was fomething came and ftruck it off into the Difh where his Meat was.

There was a Pole which ftood in the backfide about 14 or 15 Foot in length, which was brought into the Houfe, and carried up into the Chamber, and thrown on the bed; but all the Wit they had could not get it out of the Chamber, becaufe of its length, until they took down a light of the Window. They report that the things in the Houfe were thrown about and broken to their great damage.

One night there were two of this old Gast his Grand-daughters in Bed together, they were aged, one of them about twelve or thirteen years, and the other about fixteen or feventeen. They faid, that they felt a hand in Bed with them, which they bound up in the Sheet, and took Bed-ftaves and beat it until it were as foft as Wool, then they took a ftone which lay in the Chamber, about a quarter of an hundred weight, and put on it, and were quiet all the Night. In the morning, they found it as they left it the night before. Then the eldeft of the Maids fwore that the would burn the Devil, and goes and fetches a Fuz Faggot to burn it, but when the came again, the Stone was thrown away, and the Cloth was found wer.

There were many other things which are too long and tedious to write, it would take up a great deal of time.

This which follows is the Relation of Jone Winfor of long. Burton, the being there three Nights, taken the Third day of July 1677.

She heard or faw nothing as long as the Candle did burn, but as foon as it was out, there was fomething which did feem to fall down by the Bed fide, and by and by it began to lay on the Bed's-head with a Staff, and did ftrike Jone Winfor on the Head. She put forth her Hand and caught it, but was not able to hold it faft. She got out of the Bed to light a. Candle, and there was a great Stone thrown after her, but it milled her. #When the Candle was lighted, they arole and went down to the Fire. One of them went up to fetch the Bed- clothes to make a Bed by the Fire, and there lay a heap of Stones on the Bed whereon they lay just before. As foon as the Bed was made, and they laid down to take their reft, there was a fcratching on the Form that flood by them in an extreme manner. Then it came, and did heave up the Bolfter whereon they laid their Heads, and did endeavour to throw them out. At last it got hold on one end of the Pillow, and fet it quite on end, and there it flood for fome confiderable time; at last falling down in its place, they fell fast asleep, and so continued all that Night.

The Staff that was spoken of before was Jone Winfor's, and the fays, the left it below in the Kitchin. She fays, that which. troubled, did endeavour to kill the people, if it had power. She put them to it, to know the reason why they were so troubled and they faid they knew nothing; unless it was about the bufinefs of Old Warren. She was there three Nights, and the trouble was much after the fame manner, nothing that was more remarkable.

This is the much of what I heard them fpeak from their own Mouths and they will arreft it if called thereunto:

ADVER TISEMENT.

A Very confiderable Story this is, and fufficiently circumstantiated for time and place, faving that the County is not named. The reason whereof I conceive to be; that it was in the very County in which Mr. Glanvil lived; to whom the Information was fent; nameĺž

Iv in Somersethire. And there are Burtons more than one there, and alfoleighs, but this Burton is determined by the fpace of something more than a Mile and an halfs distance from Leigh. So that the Topograpical account is sufficiently exact. And the manner of the Narrative is so simple, plein, and rural, that it prevents all sufficient of Fraud or Imposture in the Relator.

The transporting of things out of one Room into another, and firiking and the like by invisible Agents, minds me of Mr. Lloyd's ftory, as tis called in Mr. Glarvil's Papers, whom in a Letter be tells he may rely upon it for truth, as being fent from a Person of Quality and Integrity in those parts. It is of a House haunted of one Walter Meyrick of the Pari/h of Blethvanght, in the County of Rad. nor, some Two and twenty years ago. Where, besides strange kind of Tunable Whiftlings in the Rooms, where none was feen to Whi-Itle, there were stones flung down out of a lost of great weight, the doors bolted or barred against them on the inside, when returned from the Church, no body being within. And at Prayer at home when fome of the Women out of fear held one another by the Arms, fome invisible Power would pluck afunder their Arms, whether they would or no. By fuch an Invisible force, one as he was fitting at Supper, was ftruck flat to the ground, and a Trencher Gruck out of the Maid's Hand that waited, and a smart Boxon the Ear given to another. no Visible thing being near that did it. A Purse lost with two Gold Rings, and Six and Four-pence in it, the party complaining thereof. the Purfe dropt down from the top of the Room, which had no Room over it, and Four pence only in it. That Men were struck down with Stones, and yet had no great hurt fhews plainly they were not flung but carried. But there was one beaten with Two Staves black and blue, but none to be feen that thus be-laboured him, though in the Day.

We pass by the Frying-Pan, beaten with a little piece of Iron, and tinkling over a Mun's Head in the Night, to his being struck down with a Stick by Day, while he tended the Goose roasting, which that Invisible Striker seemed to have a Plot upon, as also by his knocking a Pickax against the Lid of a Coffer, to have a Design upon a Bag of Mony. These and the like Feats, that Narrativerelates, which Mr. Glanvil calls Mr. Lloyd's story, who affures him he may rely on the Truth thereof, he procuring it from a Justice of Peace, who took the parties Testimonies that dwelt in the House, or upon occasions were present there, and were Eye-witness of the strange Pranks that were plaid in the place. And there being that Congeneracy, betwixt James Sherring's story and this, they mutually corroborate one another.

RELAT

RELAT. XIV.

Mr. Andrew Pafchall, once Fellow of Queens Col. ledge in Cambridge, his Narrative of three Nights disturbance at his Father's House inLondon in Soper-Lane, in August 1661.

THE first Nights difturbance; There was in Family my Father and Mother, my eldest Brother, and one of my Sifters with a young Maiden Gentlewoman her Bedfellow (who feemed to be principally concerned) belides a Maid that lay in the fame Chamber.

The Gentlewoman beforementioned, being in bed with my Sifter in a Chamber within that where my Father and Mother lay, (the Maid lying in another bed alone by) there feemed to her then lying awake, to be one walking in the Chamber, by a noise made as of a long Gown or some Trailing Garment brushing and fweeping up and down the Room.

By and by, there was a noile of clattering their Shoes under the Bed, with a fcratching and tugging of the Mat under the bed likewife. This continued for fome time, my Sifter being awakened heard it, fo did the Maid. After this my Mother being called out of the next Chamber where the was up (to prepare a Chymical water which required their being up all Night) came in, they being in a great fright. My Brother went up alfo, who not gone to bed fate below. A Candle was brought, and the noile ceased while they were in the Chamber. Prefently after they were gone out again, and the light removed, the Chamber door (which fluts with difficulty) flew to with a great bounce, it being wide open before, it flook the Room where my Mother was bufied about the aforefaid preparation.' After this one of the floes that was by the bed-fide, was flung over the bed with a mighty force against a Press that food on the other fide. This put them to fuch a fright again, that the Gentlewoman arole. My Brother went into the Room again, and fate up with them all Night.

This I received from my Brother, who came to bed to me, (who by reason of some illness had gone to bed first in the Family) early the next Morning. I was confirmed in it afterward Bbź by my Mother, upon whole bare affertion I dare confidently believe any thing that shall be related.

The fecond Nights diffurbance; the next Evening, as we fat at Supper, we all heard a great noife above in the Chamber, at the end of the house, as it were flinging of Chairs and Stools about the Room, or removing of great Trunks. And going up to fee, all was still till we came down again: However the Gentlewoman refolved to go to bed again that night in the fame Chamber. My Sifter went to bed with her, and the reft to their Lodgings, only my Brother and I refolved to fir up fome time and expect the event. Within a while after we heard them knock earneftly above, we went both up, they told us there had been the same disturbance as the night before and fomething more. For befides the tugging of the Mat under the Bed, the Bed-clothes upon them were often tugged and pulled, infomuch as they were fain to hold them hard with their hands to keep them from being pulled off. All was quiet for a little time while we were in the Chamber with a light, but we were no fooner out of the Chamber with the Candle, but the noife under the Bed tugging of the Mat, pulling off the Bed-clothes began again. Moreover fomething came into the bed, which the Gentlewoman faid ran upon her by degrees, and feemed little and foft like a Mole. Upon this the skreekt out, and we came in again with the Candle, then all was ftill again.

We retired often with the Candle, and prefently the fame difturbance returned, together with a low whilpering noife in many places about the Bed, but chiefly towards the Bed's head, which we all heard ftaying in the Chamber, and removing the Candle into the next Room. My Father and Mother arole, and there were none of us but heard all or most part of this, but nothing appeared to us. The thing was continually moving and ftirring in lome part or other of the bed, and most commonly at the feet, where it usually came up first. At last it came to that boldness that it would make the same disturbance while the Candle was in the Chamber, if but a little shaded behind the door, fo that we could fometimes fee the Clothes pull'd and tugg'd, and we frequently faw it heave and lift up the Clothes upon the bed towards the feet, in a little hill or rifing, which both my Brother and I often clapt our hands upon, perceiving it to move, and withal to make a little clacking noife, which cannot, any more than the former whispering, be exprest in Writing. We could not perceive any thing more than the Clothes, as often as we faw them fo moved and heaved up. The floes were laid laid up upon the Bed's-tefter, the fecond Night, to prevent the clattering which was made with them the night before, and whilft we were ftanding talking in the Chamber, as I was fome distance from the bed, one of the shoes flew off and hit me lightly on the head, my Hat being on. And another came prefently tumbling, down after it, none ftirring the bed. Afterwards the aforefaid little thing came upon the Gentlewoman to frequently, that if we were but the least removed, she could not lie quiet in her Bed. Then the fate up in her bed with a Mantle about her, which when we were retired was pulled at as if it would have been plucked from her. Whereupon the cryed out again, and I came into the Chamber again, and was defired to hold fast upon the Mantle about her, which notwithstanding upon removal of the Candle was tugged hard again, which I very fenfibly perceived. Whereupon we perceiving no Ceffation, my Brother and I continued in the Chamber all that night, rill break of day, with a Candle in the Room. The tugging of the Mat under the bed, the heaving of the Clothes about the feet, and the other whispering noise continuing by fits till light appeared. There was scarcely any of us, especially the her felf, that did not Conjure that Whifperer, by the most Sacred Names, to fpeak out and tellus its intent, but nothing was to 'be feen, nor any answer made.

The third Nights diffurbance; the Gentlewoman refolved now to change her Chamber, to try if the diffurbance would follow, the did to, my Sifter still accompanying of her. My Brother fate up as before below, expecting again what would follow. The fame noife was heard this third night as the night before above in the Chamber. We had not fate long below before we were Summoned up with loud knockings again, they were in the same case as before, if not woke. A while after they were in bed in this other Chamber, there was a clattering heard at the door; presently after the same noise under the bed, the fame heaving of the Clothes, and the fame whilpering as But towards midnight that thing which came into the before. Bed before, came now fo often with fuch ungrateful skippings up and down upon her, that the often skreekt and cryed out. It feemed cold and very fmooth as the related, and would commonly come in at her feet, and run all upon her by her fide to. her shoulder. Once she defired me to clap my hand upon her back near her shoulder blade, as feeling it just then come up thither. I did fo on a sudden, and there seemed a cold blast or puff of Wind to blow upon my hand just as I clapt it on her. And one thing more remarkable was this, when the whilpering w as heard at her Bed's-head, after we had many times in vain conjured it to fpeak and tell us the intent of its whilperings and difturbance, I lpake to it very earneftly to fpeak out or whilper Iouder. Hereupon it hiffed out much louder than before, but nothing intelligible to be heard. At laft this difturbance with the thing in the bed being no longer tolerable to the Gentlewoman, my Mother arole (lying in the next Chamber, and hearing their perplexity) came into her Camber, and prayed fometime at her bed-fide juft by her. Whereupon it pleafed God, within a very fhort time after, to remove all those noises, and that which difturbed her. After that night I cannot tell certainly that there hath been any thing of that nature heard in the house.

THIS Narrative, though it was not among Mr. Glanvil's Papers, but I found it by chance in mine own Study, yet it being made by an Eye-witnefs, whom I knew to be one, of Judgment and Integrity, I thought fit to infert it. And the rather, because of that paffage, that when he clapt his hand upon the Shoulder of the Gentlewoman where the Ghoft was, a cool blaft or puff of Air feem, ed to bear or blow against his Hand. Which is like Mr. Glanvil's Experiment of preffing the Linnen Bag in which fome Spirit was moving as a living Animal. Which are notable instances of their casie percribration through porous Bodies. This troublesome Spirit I fulpect to have been the Ghoft of Some party deceased who would have uttered something, but had not the knack of speaking fo articulately as to be understood. And when they can speak intelligibly, it is ordinarily in a hoarse and low Voice, as is observable in many stories, and particularly in a very fresh story of the Ghost of one deceased that spoke to Jacob Brent, some two years ago, an Apprentice then to one Mr. Lawrence in the Little Minories; of which to give some brief account, I think fitting for the very Same reasons that I have inserted this of Mr. Paschal, namely, that it is from an Eye-witnefs, and a difcreet and well-difposed young Man, as they that know him do testific: and I will set down no more, nor se much as he himself declared or acknowledged, not only to Dr. Cudworth, Mr. Fowler, and Mr. Glanvil, but very lately to my felf alfo. viz.

That

That he had Conference with the Ghost of fome deceased Party for about a quarter of an Hour: That he had a glimpfe of the fhape thereof, being called into the Room where it was, by a Voice, faying, Here, here; but that he prefently cried out, Good God ! let me fee nothing : He being fo affrighted with the fight. But however. he entertained Difcourfe with it, for about the time above mentioned; received feveral things in charge from it to be done, and was commanded Secrefie in some special Matters; but it gave such Instructions, and made such Discoveries as right might be done to fome that had been wronged by the Party deceafed. Upon which performance of Jacob Brent, the Difturbance of the Houfe ceafed: But for about 6 Weeks before, Mr. Lawrence his Houfe was miferably disturbed, they being most Nights affrighted with Thunpings and loud Knockings at the Chamber-doors, sometimes with a strange whirling Noife up and down the Rooms, and Clapping upon the And that Night Jacob Brent (at up in the Kitchen, ex-Stairs: petting fome conference with the Spirit for the quiet of the Houfe, be heard the Door of the Room above him, that was fast lockt, fly open, while he was Reading in Eusebius, and immediately a (wife running down the Stairs, and a great Knocking at the Kitchen-door. which stood a-jar, and a chinking of Money on the Stairs, as he paffed from the Kitchen towards the Dining-Room over against it, whofe Door was lockt when they went to Bed, but now opened as the Door of the other Room above the Kitchen.

Into this Dining-Room he was invited, as is above-faid, by a Voice faying, Here, here; and there hereceived, and after executed, fuch Directions as gave quiet afterwards to the Houfe; and he received Thanks from the Ghost, after he had made his Journey abroad to fulfil its defire, at his exturning home, with a Promife it would never trouble the House more. And of the Troubles of the House before, the whole Family were Witneffes, as also of the Conference of I. B, and the Spirit, that they heard two speak in the Dining-Room, the' they were not fo near to understand what they faid, only, they heard J. B. pray to God that he might fee nothing.

That the Houfe was really Haunted, besides what has been faid already, is farther confirmed by Mr. Bamfield, who was defied to lie in the Houfe fome Days before this Conference of I. B. with the Spirit : who though he heard no Noises, yet felt his Cloaths tucke about him, and his Hand kindly (troaked, he being awak: all Night. And that this could be no Trick of J. B. is farther evident, from that great emotion of Mind be was in after this, for Some 2 Hours, even almost to distraction, and was fain afterwards to be let Blood. But for his constant Temper, he is observed to be, and and I take him to be fuch, of a fober, honeft, and fenfible Genius; nor is he any Sectarian, but an orderly Son of the Church of England.

And if the Injunctions of the Ghost he conversed with, and comnon Rules of Prudence, did not forbid the declaring of some particulars, this is an Experiment that might convince the most Incredulous touching such things, But Mr. Glanvil complains, in a Letter of his to Dr. H. More, that this sciences, and tender respect of Persons, has bindred him of many a considerable Story; as I have also taken notice long since, how mutilate the Story of the Shoemaker of Breslaw is made, by reason of Martinus Weinrichius bis concealing the Shoemaker's Name. But the mentioning of lockt Doors slying open of their own accord, reminds me of Mr. Alcock's Story of a Chest with 3 Locks, unlocking it felf, and slying wide open, and then Locking it felf again: Which is as follows.

RELAT. XXV.

The Story of Mr. John Bourne, of Durley in Ireland, about a Mile from Bridgewater, Counsellor at Law.

R. John Bourne, for his Skill, Care, and Honefty, was I made by his Neighbour John Mallet Elq; of Enmore, the chief of his Truftees, for his Son John Maller, (Father to Elizabeth, now Counters Dowager of Rochefter) and the reft of his Children in Minority. He had the Reputation of a worthy good Man, and was commonly taken notice of for an habitual Saying, by way of Interjection almost to any thing, viz. You fay true, you fay true, you are in the right. This Mr. Bourne fell Sick at his House at Durley, in the Year 1654, and Dr. Raymond of Oak was fent for to him, who after fome time, gave the faid Mr. Bourn over. And he had not now spoken in 24 Hours, when the faid Dr. Raymond, and Mrs. Carlifle, (Mr. Bourne's Nephew's Wife, whole Husband he had made one of his Heirs) fitting by his Bed-fide, the Doctor opened the Curtains at the Bed's-feet, to give him air; when on a fudden, to the Horror and Amazement of Dr. Raymond, and Mrs. Carlifle, the the great Iron Cheft by the Window, at his Bed's-feet, with 3 Locks to it, (in which were all the Writings and Evidences of the faid Mr. Maller's Eftate) began to open, first one Lock, then another, then the third; afterwards the Lid of the faid Iron Cheft, lifted up it felf, and stood wide open. Then the Patient, Mr. Bourne, who had not spoke in 24 Hours, listed himfelf up also, and looking upon the Cheft, cry'd: You fay true, you fay true, you are in the right, I'll be with you by and by. So the Patient lay down, and spake no more. Then the Cheft fell again of it felf, and Lockt it felf, one Lock after another, as the 3 Locks opened; and they tried to knock it open, and could not, and Mr. Bourne died within an Hour after.

THIS Narrative was fent in a Letter to J. C. for Dr. H. More from Mr. Thomas Alcock, of Shear-Hampton; of which in a Letter to the faid Doctor, he gives this Account. Iam, faith he, very confident of the Truth of the Story; for I had it from a very good Lady, the eldeft Daughter of the faid John Maller, (whofe Truftee Mr. Bourne was) and only Aunt to the Countefs of Rochefter, who knew all the Parties; and I have heard Dr. Raymond, and Mr. Carlifle, relate it often with amazement, being both Perfons of Credit.

The curious may be inquisitive what the meaning of the opening of the Cheft may be, and of Mr. Bourne his faying. You say true, Sc. I'll be with you by and by. As for the former, it is noted by Paracellus effectally, and by others, that there are Signs often given of the Departure of fick Men lying on their Death-beds, of which this opening of the Iron Coffer or Cheft, and closing again, is more than ordinary fignificant, effectially if we confider the nearness of Sound and Sense, betwixt Coffer and Coffin, and re-call to mind that of Virgil:

> Olli dura quies oculos & ferreus urget Somnus

Though

Though this quaintnefs is more than is requifite in thefe Prodigies prefaging the fick Man's Death. As for the latter, it feems to be mothing elfe but the faying Amen to the Prefage, uttered in his accuftomary Form of Speech; as if he fhould fay, You of the invifible Kingdom of Spirits, have given the Token of my fudden Departure, and you fay true, I shall be with you by and by. Which he was enabled fo affuredly to affent to, upon the advantage of the relaxation of his Soul now departing from the Body: Which Diodorus Siculus, lib. 18, notes to be the Opinion of Pythagoras and his Followers, that it is the privilege of the Soul near her departure, to exercife a fatidical Faculty, and to pronounce truly touching things future, $\Pi_{eogywworker}$ with $\overline{\psi}_{x}$ and $\overline{\psi}_{x}$ with $\overline{\psi}_{x}$. That humane Souls prognostick things to come, at what time they are separating from their Body.

RELAT. XXVI.

The Apparition of James Haddock, to Francis Taverner, near Drum-bridge in Ireland, comprized in a Letter of Thomas Alcock, to Dr. H. More.

A T Michaelmas, 1662, Francis Taverner, abut 25 Years old, a lufty proper ftour Fellow, then Servant at large, (afterwards Porter) to the Lord Chichefter Earl of Donegal, at Belfast, in the North of Ireland, County of Antrim, and Diocels of Connor, tiding late in the Night from Hilbrough homeward, near Drum bridge, his Horfe, though of good Metal, fuddenly made a stand; and he supposing him to be taken with the Staggers, alighted to blood him in the Mouth, and prefently mounted again. As he was fetting forward, there feemed to'pass by him two Horsemen, though he could not hear the treading of their Feet, which amazed him. Prefently there appeared a third in a white Coat, just at his Blbow, in the likenels of James Haddock, formerly an Inhabitant in Malone, where he died near five Years before. Whereupon Taverner askt him in the Name of God who he was ? He replied, 1 am ames Haddock.

Haddock, and you may call me to mind by this Token ; That about five Years ago, I and two other Friends were at your Father's Houfe. and you, by your Father's appointment, brought us fome Nuts, and therefore be not afraid, fays the Apparition. Whereupon Taverner remembring the circumstances, thought it might be Haddock; and those two who passed by before him, he thought to Le his two Friends with him, when he gave them Nuts, and couragioufly askt him why he appeared to him rather than any other. He answered, Because he was a Man of more resolution than others; and if he would ride his way with him, he would acquaint him with a Bufine's he had to deliver him. Which Taverner efufed to do, and would go his own way, (for they were now at a Quadrival) and fo rode on homewards. But immediately on their departure, there arole a great Wind. and withal he heard very hideous Screeches and Noifes, to his great amazement; but riding forward as fast as he could, he at last heard the Cocks crow, to his Confort; he alighted off from his Horfe, and falling to Prayer, defir'd God's Affiftance. and fo got fafe home.

The Night after, there appeared again to him the likeness of Fames Haddock, and bid him go to Elenor Welfb, (now the Wife of Davis, living at Malone, but formerly the Wife of the faid James Haddock, by whom the had an only Son, to whom the faid James Haddock had by his Will given a Leafe which he held of the Lord Chichefter, of which the Son was deprived by Davis, who had Married his Mother) and to ask her if her Maiden-name was not Elenor Welfs; and if it were, to tell . her, that it was the Will of her former Husband, James Haddock, that their Son should be righted in the Lease. But Taverner, partly loath to gain the ill Will of his Neighbours, and partly thinking he should not be credited, but lookt on as deluded, long neglected to do his Meffage, till having been every Night for about a Months space haunted with this Apparition in feveral Forms, every Night more and more terrible, (which was usually preceded by an unufual trembling over his whole' Body, and great change of Countenance manifest to his Wife, in whole prefence frequently the Apparition was, though not visible to her) at length he went to Malone, to Davis's Wife, and askt whether her Maiden name was not Elenor Welfh; if it was, he had fomething to fay to her. She replied, there was another Elenor Welsh besides her. Hereupon Taverner returned without delivering his Meffage. The fame Night, being fast asleep in his Bed, (for the former Apparitions were as he fate by the Fire with his Wife) by fomething preffing upon him he was.

was awakened, and faw again the Apparition of James Haddock in a white Coat as at other times, who asked him if he had delivered his Meffage? He answered, he had been there with Elenor Welfh. Upon which the Apparition looking more pleafantly upon him, bid him not be afraid, and so vanished in a flash of brightness.

But some nights after (he having not delivered his Message) he came again, and appearing in many formidable shapes. threatned to tear him in pieces if he did not do it. This made him leave his house where he dwelt in the Mountains, and betake himfelf to the Town of Belfast, where he fate up all night at one Pierce's house a Shoemaker, accompanied with the faid Pierce, and a Servant or two of the Lord Chichester's, who were defirous to fee or hear the Spirit. About midnight as they were all by the Fire-fide they beheld Taverner's countenance to change. and a trembling to fall on him, who prefently espyed the Apparition in a Room opposite to him where he fate, and took up the Candle and went to it, and resolutely askt him in the Name of God wherefore it haunted him? It replied, because he had not delivered the Meffage. and withal threatned to tear him in pieces if he did not do it speedily; and so, changing it self into many prodigious shapes, it vanisht in white like a Ghost. Whereupon Francis Taverner became much dejected and troubled, and next day went to the Lord Chichefter's house, and with tears in his Eyes, related to fome of the Family the fadness of his condition. They told it to my Lord's Chaplain Mr. James South, who came prefently to Taverner, and being acquainted of his whole Story, advised him to go this prefent time to Malone to deliver punctually his Meffage, and promifed to go along with him. But first they went to Dr. Lewis Downs, then Minister of Belfast, who upon hearing the Relation of the whole matter, doubted at first of the truth of it, attributing it rather to Melancholy than any thing of reality. But being afterwards fully fatisfied of it, the only fcruple remaining was, Whether it might be lawful to go on fuch a bufinefs, not knowing whole errand it was; Since, though it was a real Apparition of some Spirit, yet it was questionable whether of a good or a bad Spirit. Yet the justice of the Cause, (it being the common report the Youth was wronged) and other confiderations prevailing, he went with them. So they three went to Davis's house, where the Woman being defired to come to them. Taverner did effectually do his Meffage, by telling her, that he could not be at quiet for the Ghost of her former Husband James Haddock, who threatned to tear him in pieces if he did not tell her fhe the must right John Haddock her Son by him, in a Leafe wherein the and Davis her now Husband had wronged him. This done, he prefently found great quietnels in his mind, and thanking the Gentleman for their Company, Advice, and Aftiftance, he departed thence to his Brother's Houfe at Drumbridge: Where, about two nights after, the aforefaid Apparition came to him again, and more pleafantly than formerly, askt if he had delivered his Meffage? He answered, he had done it fully. It replied, that he must do the Meffage to the Executors allo, that the bulinels might be perfected. At this meeting Taverner asked the Spirit if Davis would do him any hurt; to which it answered at first fomewhat doubtfully; but at length threatned Davis if he attempted any thing to the injury of Taverner, and fo vanisht away in white.

The day following, Dr. Jeremie Taylor Bishop of Down, Connor, and Dromore, was to go to keep Court at Dromore. and commanded me, who was then Secretary to him, to write for Taverner to meet him there, which he did. And there in the prefence of many he examined Taverner firstly in this ftrange Scene of Providence, as my Lord ftil'd it; and by the account given him both by Taverner, and others who knew Taverner, and much of the former particulars, his Lordship was satisfied that the Apparition was true and real; but faid no more there to him, because at Hilbrough, three miles from thence on his way home, my Lord was informed that my Lady Conway and other Persons of Quality were come purposely to hear his Lordthis examine the Matter. So Taverner went with us to Hilbrough, and there to fatisfie the curiofity of the fresh company, after asking many things anew, and fome over again, my Lord advised him the next time the Spirit appeared to ask him these Oueffions. Whence are you? Are you a good or a bad Spirit? Where is your abode ? What station do you hold ? How are you regimented in the other World? And what is the reason that you appear for the relief of your Son in fo small a matter, when fo many Widows and Orphans are oppressed in the World, being defrauded of greater matters, and none from thence of their Relations appear, as you do, to right them?

That night Taverner was fent for to Lisburne, to my Lord Commay's three miles from Hilbrough, on his way home to Belay faft, where he was again ftrictly examined in the prefence of many good men and women of the aforefaid matter, who was ordered to lie at my Lord Commay's all night; and about nine or ten a clock at night, ftanding by the Fire-fide with his Brother and many others, his Countenance changed, and he fell into a trembling, the usual prognostick of the Apparition; and, being loath to make any diffurbance in his Lordfhip's houle, he and his Brother went out into the Court, where he faw the Spirit coming over the Wall) which approaching nearer askt him if he had done his Meffage to the Executor alfo? He replied, he had, and wondered it fhould ftill haunt him. It replied, he need not fear, for it would do him no hurt, nor trouble him any more, but the Executor, if he did not fee the Boy righted. Here his Brother put him in mind to ask the Spirit what the Bishop bid him, which he did prefently. But it gave him no answer, but crawled on its Hands and Feet over the Wall again, and fo vanisht in white, with a most melodious Harmony.

Note, (1.) That Pierce, at whole houle, and in whole prefence the Apparition was, being askt whether he faw the Spirit, faid, he did not, but thought at that time he had a Mift all over his eyes. (2.) What was then fpoke to Taverner was in fo low and hollow a voice, that they could not underftand what it faid. (3.) At Pierce's house it flood just in the entry of a Door; and as a Maid passed by to go in at the Door, Taverner faw it go aside and give way to the Maid, though the faw if not. (4.) That the Lease was hereupon disposed on to the Boy's use. (5.) The Spirit at the last appearing at my Lord Compay's house, revealed formewhat to Taverner, which he would not discover to any of us that askt him.

This Taverner, with all the Perfons and Places mentioned in the Story, I knew very well, and all wife and good men did believe it, especially the Bishop; and Dean of Connor Dr. Ruft * Witnefs.

Your humble Servant;

IT will not be amils to set down here what Mr. Alcock adds by way of Postfeript in his Letter, There is an odd story, faith he, depending on this, which I cannot chuse but tellyou. The Boy's Friends put the Trustees and Executor on this Apparition's account into into our Courts, where it was pleafant to hear my Lordtalk to them on the whole matter. The Uncle and Truffee, one John Coffler, forfwore the thing, railed on Taverner, and made strange imprecations, and wifter Judgments might fall on him if he knew of any fuch Leafe; but the fear of the Apparition's menaces by Taverner fcar'd him into a promile of Justice at least. About four or five years after, when my Lord died, and the noise of the Apparition was over, Cofflet began again to threaten the Boy with Law, &cc. But being drunk at Hill-hall by Lisburne, coming home he fell from his Horfe, and neverspake more. This is a fad truth to my knowledge.

RELAT. XXVII.

The Story of David Hunter Neat-berd to the Bifhop of Down and Connor, at Portmore in Ireland, 1663. from the fame hand.

D Avid Hunter Near herd at the Bishops house at Portmore, there appeared to him one night, carrying a Log of Wood into the Dairy, an old Woman, which amazed him, for he knew her not : but the fright made him throw away his Log of Wood, and run into the house. The next night she appeared again to him, and he could not chuse but follow her all night . and fo almost every night for near three quarters of a Year. Whenever the came, he must go with her through the Woods at a good round rate: and the poor fellow lookt as if he was bewitcht and travelled off his legs. And when in bed with his Wife, if the appeared, he must rife and go. And becaufe his Wife could not hold him in his bed, fhe would go too, and walk after him till day though the faw nothing: But his little Dog was fo well acquainted with the Apparition, that he would follow her as well as his Master. If a Tree stood in her walk, he observed her always to go through it. In all this while she fpake not.

But one day the faid David going over a Hedge into the Highway, fhe came just against him, and he cryed out, Lord blefs me, would I was dead; fhall I never be delivered from this miferg? ry? At which, And the Lord blefs me too, fays fhe, It was very happy you fpake first, for till then I had no power to speak, though I have followed you so long. My Name, fays she, is Margarez-1 lived here before the War, and had one Son by my Huband, when he died, I Married a Soldier, by whom I had several Children, which that former Son maintained, else we must all have starved. He lives beyond the Ban-water; pray go to him, and hid him dig under such a Hearth, and there he shall find 28 s. Let him pay what I owe in such a place, and the rest to the charge unpayed at my Funeral; and go to my Son that lives here, which I had by my latter Huband, and tell him, that he lives a wicked and a diffolute Life, and is very unnatural and ungrateful to his Brother that maintained him, and if he does not mend his Life, God Almighty will destroy him.

David Hunter told her he never knew her : Na, fays the, I died 7 Years before you came into the Country, but for all that, if he would do her Message, she should never hurt him. But he deferred doing as the Apparition bid him, and the appeared the Night after, as he lay in Bed, and ftruck him on the Shoulder very hard; at which he cried out, and askt her if the did not promise the would not hurt him? She faid that was if he did her Meffage; if not, the would kill him. He told her, he could not go now, by reason the Waters were out. She faid, the was content he should stay till they were abated ; but charged him afterwards not to fail her. So he did her Errand, and afterwards the appeared, and gave him Thanks. For now, faid the. I shall be at rest, therefore pray you lift me up from the Ground, and I will trouble you no more. So David Hunter lifted her up from the Ground, and, as he faid, the felt just like a Bag of Feathers in his Arms ; fo the vanisht, and he heard most delicate Musick as the went off, over his Head; and he never was more troubled.

This Account the poor Fellow gave us every Day, as the Apparition fpake to him, and my Lady Conway came to Portmore, where the askt the Fellow the fame questions, and many more. This I know to be true, being all the while with my Lord of Down, and the Fellow but a poor Neat herd there.

IT is no fmall confirmation to my felf of the Truth of thefe two laft Stories, in both which my Lady Conway is mentioned, in that I received two Letters from that incomparable Lady out of Ireland, touching them both; the former is Dated, Lisburn, March 3, 1662, wherein she Writes thus : I have spoken lately with two fimple Country-people who have been much perplexed with two feveral Persons who have died lately: The Stories are too long to relate; but the Circumstances are fuch, as I know not how to mis-believe the Stories. The Perfons cannot be fulpected to have any defign, and were altogether unacquainted in the Families of them that appeared, and wholly ignorant of those things in them that they now relate, and have charge to folicite the amendment of fome Milcarriages by fome Perlons intrufted, which they could never hear of, as is supposed, by any other means. There are many other probabilities, but all evaded by feveral Perfons here. And to give you a tafte of their goodly Evafions, I will transcribe a Passage out of the other Letter of the said excellent Lady, Dated Lisburn, April 29, 1563. wherein she Writes thus: The Relation I fent you of two in this Country, is certainly liable to as little Exception (there was montion of the Drummer of Tedworth before) as any one shall meet with; as may appear, by the diligent fearch fome have made for a Flaw and Objection against the Parties, who after all they confess, must needs appear perfectly unintereffed, and impossible to have had from any concerned what they have delivered. But they believe, that either Drunkennefs, or desperate Melancholy, did by chance enable them to light upon greater Truths than themfelves thought of. Thus far that excellent Person. And it was enough for this Noble Lady, only to recite the folution of the Phanomenon into Melancholy and Drunkennels, it being fo triffing and filly, that it wanted no farther refutation, than the meer recital ...

That Drink may discover the Secrets of him that is Drunk, as the Poet observes, is reasonable enough ; but that a Man being Drunk; is better capacitated to understand the Secrets of another Man, or of his Family, is fo wild a Paradox, that no fober Man can admit it. And what is Melancholy, but a natural Drunkenness when it ferments? And moreover it being but by chance that Melancholy or Drunkennefs enables them to light upon fuch things, why man may not Sanguine and Sobriety chance as well to do the fame, and not rather better, if there be any betternefs in things by chance a But if there be any advantage in fermenting Melancholy, or firong Drink, it is becaufe the Soul is more excited, and made more ready to difcover its own more inward Furnitnre, as Men in Drink reveal their own Secrets. But the Soul has no innate Ideas of particular things, and therefore the greatest effervescency of Drink or Melancholy will not a jot better dispose her to the Knowledge of particulars, but indispose her for the reception of them from without. So blindly do these Witlings Philosophize touching things of this Nature.

And yet I dare fay, this was the very beft of their Evafions: Which being no better against these two Stories so fifted and examined (to fay nothing of others) by a Person of so quick a Wit, impartial Judgment and Sagacity, as I know that excellent Lady to have been, I must confess, that to me it is a Confirmation as strong as I can define for the main strokes of the Stories, of which I retain some in my Memory, having heard a more particular Account of them from her Ladyship, presently upon her return from Ireland, some 16 Years ago. Nor no doubt but Mr. Alcock has approved himself a faithful Reciter of them, as to the main; nor can there any one rightly be deemed more fit and able, he being present at the Examination of Taverner, and dwelling at Portmore, with the Bishop of Down, whose Servant Hunter was.

RELAT. XXVIII.

T HE Tenour of the Confessions, taken before Justices: As first of Annabil Stuart, of the Age of 14 Years, or thereby; who declared that she was brought in the Prefence of the Justices for the crime of Witchcraft; and declared, That on Harvest last, the Devil in the shape of a black Man, came to her Mothers House, and required the Declarant to give her felf felf up to him; and that the Devil promifed her the thould nor want any thing that was good. Declares, That she being entic'd by her Mother Jannet Mathie, and Beffie Weir, who was Officer to their feveral Meetings, the put her Hand to the crown of her Head, and the other to the fole of her Foot, and did give her felf up to the Devil. Declares, That her Mother promifed her a new Coat for doing it. Declares, That her Spirits Name was Enippa, and that the Devil took her by the Hand and nipt her Arm, which continued to be fore for half an Hour. Declares, That the Devilin the shape of a black Man; lay with her in the Bed under the Cloaths, and that the found him cold. Declares, That thereafter he placed her nearest him. felf, And declares, She was prefent in her Mothers House; when the Effigies of Wax was made ; and that it was made to represent Sir George Maxwel. Declares, That the black Man, 7anet Mathie, the Declarants Mother, (whofe Spirits Name was Landlady; Beffie Weir, whole Spirits Name is Sopha; Margaret Craige, whole Spirits Name is Rigerum; and Margaret Jackson, whole Spirits Name is Locas) were all prefent at the making of the faid Effigies; and that they bound it on a Spir, and turned it before the Fire; and that it was turned by Beffie Weir, faying as they turned it, Sir George Maxwel, Sir George Maxwel; and that this was expressed by all of them, and by the Declarant. Declares, That this Picture was made in Offe-And farther declares. That upon the third Day of ber laft. January instant, Beffie Weir came to her Mothers House, and advertised her to come to her Brother John Stuart's upon the Night following. And that accordingly the came to the place, where the found Beffie Weir, Margery Craige, Margaret Jackfon, and her Brother John Stuart, and a Man with black Cloaths, a blue Band, and white Hand-cuffs with Hogers. and that his Feet were cloven. And the Declarant fate down by the Fire-fide with them, when they made a Picture of Clay, in which they placed Pins in the Breaft and Sides: And declares, That they placed one in every Side, and one in the Breast. Declared. That the black Man did put the Pins in the Picture of Wax; but is not fure who put in the Pins in the Picture of Clay. Declares, That the Effigies produced, are the Effigies the faw made. Declares, That the black Man's Name is Ejoal. This Declaration was emitted before James Dunlop, of Hufil, William Gremlaye, &c. Jan. 27, 1677, Ita est Robertus Park, Notarius Publicus, &c.

The fecond Confession, is of John Stuart, who being interrogate anent this Crime of Witchcraft, declared, That upon Wednesday the third Day of January instant, Beffie Weir in Polloston came to the Declarant late at Night, who being with-out Doors near to his own House, the faid Beffie Weir did intimate to him, that there was a Meeting to be at his House the next Day: And that the Devil under the shape of a black Man, Margaret Jackson, Margery Craige, and the faid Beffie Weir, were'to be present. And that Bessie Weir, required the Declarant to be there, which he promised. And that the next Night, after the Declarant had gone to Bed, the black Man came in, and called the Declarant quietly by his Name, upon which, he arole from his Bed, and put on his Cloaths, and lighted a Can-Declares, That Margaret Jackson, Beffie Weir, and Mardle. gery Craige, did enter in at a Window in the Cavil of the Declarant's House. And that the first thing that the black Man required, was, that the Declarant should renounce his Baptism, and deliver himfelf wholly to him; which the Declarant did, by putting one Hand on the crown of his Head, and the other on the fole of his Foor. And that he was tempted to it, by the Devil's promifing that he flould not want any Pleafure, and that he should get his Heart filled on all that shall do him wrong. Declares, That he gave him the Name of Jonat for his Spirits Name. Declares, That thereafter the Devil required every one of their Confents for the making of the Effigies of Clay, for the taking away the Life of Sir George Maxmel, of Pollock, to revenge the taking the Declarants Mother Fannet Mathie. Declares, That every one of the Perfons above-nam'd, gave their Confent to the making of the faid Effigies, and that they wrought the Clay, and that the black Man did make the Figure of the Head and Face, and two Arms to the faid Effigies. Declares, That the Devil fet 3 Pins in the fame, one in each Side, and one in the Breaft: And that the Declarant did hold the Candle to them, all the time the Picture was making. And that he observed one of the black Man's Feet to be cloven ; and that his Apparel was black; and that he had a blueish Band and Hand-cuffs; and that he had Hogers on his Legs without Shoes; and that the black Man's Voice was Hough and Gouftie. And farther declares, That after they had begun the forming of the Effigies, his Sifter Annabil Stuart, a Child of 13 or 14 Years of Age, came Knocking at the Door, and being let in by the Declarant, she staid with them a confiderable time, but that the went away before the reft, he having opened the Door to her, Declares, That the reft went out ar at the Window at which they enter'd. Declares, That the Effigies was placed by Beffie Weir in his Bed-straw. He farther declares, He himself did envy against Sir George Maxwel for Apprehending Jannet Mathie his Mother : And that Beffie Weir had great Malice against this Sir George Maxwel; and that her Quarrel was, as the Declarant conceived, because the faid, Sir George had not entred her Husband to his Harveft-fervice ; and also declares, That the faid Effigies was made upon the fourth Day of January instant, and that the Devil's Name was Declares, That his Spirits Name was Jonas, and Beffie Ejoal. Weirs Spirits Name, who was Officer, was Sopha; and that Margaret Jackson's Spirits Name was Locas; and that Annabil Stuart, the Declarant's Sifters was Enippa; but does not remember what Margery Craiges Spirits Name was. Declares, That he cannot Write. This Confession was emitted in the prefence of the Witn effs to the other Confession, and on the same Day. Ita eft. Robertus Park, Notarius Publicus, &c.

The Confession of Margaret Jackson, Relict of Tho. Stuart in Shaws, who being Examined by the Juffices anent her being guilty of Witchcraft, declares, That she was present at the making of the first Effigies and Picture that was made in Jannet Mathies House in October, and that the Devil in the shape of a black Man, Jannet Mathie, Beffie Weir, Margery Craige, and Annabil Stuart, was prefent at the making of the faid Effigies, and that it was made to represent Sir George Maxwel of Pollock, for the taking away his Life. Declares, That 40 Years ago, or thereabout, the was at Pollock (haw-croft, with fome few flicks on her Back, and that the black Man came to her, and that the did give up her felf unto the black Man, from the top of her Head to the fole of her Foot; and that this was after the Declarants renouncing of her Baptifm; and that the Spirits Name which he defigned her, was Locas. And that about the third or fourth of January instant, or thereby, in the Night-time, when the awaked, the found a Man to be in Bed with her, whom she supposed to be her Husband; though her Husband had been dead 20 Years, or thereby, and that the Man immediately ditappeared : And declares, That this Man who difappeared was the Devil. Declares, That upon Thur/day, the 4th of January instant, she was present in the House of John Stuart, at Nighr, when the Effigies of Clay was made, and that the faw the black Man there, fometimes fitting, fometimes ftanding with John Stuart ; and that the black Man's Cloaths were black, and that he had white Hand-cuffs. And that Beffie Weir in Pollockton, and Annabil Stuart in Shaws, and Margery Craige, were at the aforeaforefaid time and place of making the faid Effigies of Clay; and declares, that the gave her confent to the making of the fame; and declares that the Devil's name who competed in the black Man's thape was Ejoll. Sic Subferibitur, Ita eff. Robertus Park, Notarius Publicus, &c,

Andr. Martin, Servitour to the Lord of Pollock, of the age of Thirty years, or thereby, Depones That he was prefent in the house of Jannet Mathie Pannel when the Picture of Wax produced was found in a little hole in the Wall at the back of the Fire. Depones, That Sir George his Sickness did fall upon him about the eighteenth of October, or thereby. Depones, that the Pi-Cture of Wax was found on the - of December, and that Sir George his Sickness did abate and relent above the time the Pi-Aure of Wax was found and discovered in Jannet Mathie's house. Depones, that the Pins were placed in the right and left fides; and that Sir George Maxwell of Pollock his pains, as he understood by Sir George's complaining of these pains, lay most in his right and left fides. And depones, that Sir George's pains did abate and relent after the finding of the faid Picture of Wax, and taking out of the Pins as is faid. And depones, that the Pannel Jannet Mathie has been by fame and bruite reputed a Witch these several years by past. And this is the truth as he shall answer to God. Sie Subscrib. Andr. Martin.

Lawrence Pollock Secretary to the Lord of Pollock, fworn and purged of Partial Couniel, depones that on the — day of December he was in the Pannel Jannet Mathie's houle when the Picture was found; and that he did not fee it before it was brought to the Pannal's door. Depones, that Sir George Maxwel of Pollock's ficknefs did feize upon him about the fourteenth of October or thereby, and he did continue in his Sicknefs or Diftemper for fix Weeks or thereby. Depones, that Sir George's Sicknefs did abate and relent after the finding of the faid Picture of Wax and taking out of the Pins that were in the Effigies. Depones, that by open bruit and common fame, Jannet Mathie, and Beffie Weir, and Margery Craige, are brandit to be Witches. Depones, That the truth is this as he fhall anfwer it to God. Sie Subferib. Lawrence Pollock.

Lodoaic Stuart of Auchunhead being fworn and purged of partial Counfel, depones, That Sir George's Sickness fell upon him the the fourteenth or fifteenth of October or thereby. Depones. that he was not prefent at the finding of the Picture of Wax: but that he had feen Sir George Maxwel of Pollock after it was found; and having feen him in his Sickness often times before, he did perceive that Sir George had fenfibly recovered after the time that the faid Picture was faid to be found, which was upon the 11th or 12th of December. Depones, that Jannet Mathie and Margery Craige two of the Pannals are by report of the Country faid to be Witches. Depones, that he having come to Pollock he did fee Sir George Maxwel, whole pains did recur, and that his pains and torments were greatly encreased in respect of what they were before the finding of the Picture of Wax. Depones, that upon the 8 of January when they left the faid Sir George Maxwel of Pollock, the Deponent James Dunlop of Houfil, Allan Douglace, and feveral others, did go to the house of John Stuart Warlock on Polleck-fhaw, and there he found a Picture of Clay in the faid John Stuart's Bed-straw. Depones, that there was three Pins in the faid Picture of Clay, and that there was one in each fide, and one in the Breaft : and depones, that being returned to Sir George's house, Sir George told the Deponent that he found great eafe of his pains, and that it was before the Deponent Hounfil and the reft did reveal to him that they had found the faid Picture of Clay, and further depones, that this is truth as he shall answer it to God. Sic Subscrib. Lodowick Stuart.

There follow more Depositions in the Copy, but these are the most for our purpose, and enough to discover that the Confession of those Witches are no Fables nor Dreams.

ADVERTISEMENT.

These Confessions and Depositions are transcribed out of the Copy in the same Scottish Dialect that I found them; and several words there are which I profess I understand not, as those for example concerning the black Man's Voice, that it was hough and goussie: But if the voice of this black man be like that of his who appeared to the Witches whom Mr. Hunt examined, they may fignifie a big and low voice.

There

There is another Scottish Tryal of Witches amongst Mr. Glanvil's Papers, with the same general subscription that this has, viz, Robert Martin Clerk to the Justice Court. But that is of too old a date, it being in the year, 1590. to comply with the title of our Stories. But it being a true Copy of Record fo Authentick, though not so fresh, it may haply not be amis briefly to name some Effects, Kinds, or Circumstances of Witchcraft therein mentioned; such especially as have not occurred in the foregoing Stories; as the giving and taking away power from fundry Mens Genital-members, for which Jannet Clark was accused.

That which is observable in John Fiene is, that the Devil appeared to him not in black, but in white raiment ;. but proposed as hellish a Covenant to him as those Fiends that appear in black. As also lying dead two or three hours, and his Spirit tane, (as the Phrase in the Record is) his being carried or transported to many Mountains, and, as he thought, through the World, according to his own Depositions. His hearing the Devil preach in a Kirk in the Pulpit in the night by Candle-light, the Candle burning blew. That in a Conventicle of Witches, whole names are specified in the Record, he with the reft at parting kiffed the Devil's Breech; the Record speaks more broadly. His skimming on the Sea in a Boat with those of his Gang, and his foretelling the Leak in the Queens Ship by the help of the Devil. His raifing Winds with the reft at the King's paffage into Denmark, by cafting a Cat into the Sea, which the Devil delivered to them, and taught them to cry Hola when they first cast it in. His raising a Mist at the King's return from Denmark, by getting Satan to caft a thing like a Foot-ball (it appearing to John like a Wifp) into the Sca, which made a vapour or reek to arife, whereby the Kings Majefty might be cast upon the Coast of England. His hearing the Devil again preach in a Pulpit in black, who after pointed them to Graves, to open and difinember the Corps therein; which done, incontinently they were transported without words. His opening Locks by Sorcery, as one by mere blowing into a Womans hand while he fate by the Fire. His rafiing four Candles on the Luggs of an Horle, and another on the top of the Staff of his Rider in the night, that he made it as light as day; and how the man fell down dead at the entring within his return home. His embarquing in a Boat with other Witches, and failing over Sea, and entring within a Ship, and drinktrinking good Wine and Ale there, and finking the Ship when they had done, with the perfons in it. His kiffing Satan's Breech after another Conventicle. His being fwiftly carried above in the chafing of a Cat to catch her to caft into the Sea, thereby to raife Winds, according to the prefcription of Satan. His pretending to tell any man how long he should live if he told but the day of his birth.

There are also feveral things in Agnes Sympson's Witchcraft, fuch as there fcarce occur the like in the foregoing stories. As her skill in Diseases. That the sickness of Willian Black was an Elf-fhot. Her heating also of them by Sorcery, and foretelling the party whether he should live or die, and others how long they should live. Her taking the fick parties pains and fickneffes upon herfelf for a time, and then translating it to a third perfon. Her ule of long scriptural Prayers and Rhymes, containing the main points of Christianity, fo that she may feem to have been not fo much a white Wuch as an holy Woman. And yet it is upon Record that the made a Covenant with the Devil in the shape of a Man, and in such like hellish man. ner as other Witches do. But when the fought for anfwers from the Devil upon any occasion, he appeared to her in the shape of a Dog, but the formula of her difmiffing of him, was, The charging him to depart on the Law he lives on. as the did when the difinist him after her confulting him about the old Lady Edmondston's fickness; but her invocation was, Elva, come and speak to me, who came in the likeness of a Dog. Her failing with her fellow-Witches in a Boat to a Ship, where the Devil caufed her to drink good Wine, the neither feeing the Mariners, nor the Mariners her. But after all, the Devil raifed a Wind whereby the Ship perifhed. Her baptizing, and using other Ceremonies upon a Cat; with other Witches, to hinder the Queens coming into Scotland. Her raifing of a Spirit to conjure a a Picture of Wax for the destroying of Mr. John Mojcrope.

Hitherto I have brought but small shreds out of this ancient Record, but I will conclude with a full Paragraph, it containing the Confession of Agnes Sympson to King James then of the Score : Which is this.

Item, Fyled and convict for fameckle as the confeft before his Majefty, that the Devil in Man's likenefs met her going out in the Fields from her own house at Keith betwixt five and fix at Even, being alone, and commandit her to be at Northbervick-Kirk the next night. And the past then on Horfeback, conveyed by her good-fon called John Cooper, and lighted at the Kirk-yard, or a little before the came to it. about eleven hours at Even. They danced along the Kirkvard, Geilie Duncan plaid to them on a Trump, John Fien muffiled led all the reft; the faid Agnes and her Daughter followed next. Befides, there were Kate Grey, George Moilis's Wife, Robert Greirson, Katherine Duncan Buchanan, Thomas Barnhil and his Wife, Gilbert Macgil, Joh. Macgil, Katharine Macgil, with the reft of their Complices above an hundred perfons, whereof there were fix Men, and all the reft Women. The Women made first their homage, and then the Men. The Men were turned nine times widdershins about, and the Women fix times. John Fien blew up the Doors and blew in the Lights, which were like mickle black Candlessticking round about the Pulpit. The Devil startit up himfelf in the Pulpit like a mickle black Man, and every one answered here. Mr. Robert Griersen being named, they all ran hirdie girdie, and were angry: for it was promifed he should be called Robert the Comptroller, alias Rob the Rowar, for expriming of his name, The first thing he demandit was as they kept all promife, and been good Servants, and what they had done fince the last time they had convened. At his command they opened up three Graves, two within, and ane without the Kirk, and took off the Joints of their Fingers, Toes, and Neile, and parted them amongst them : and the faid Agnes Sympson got for her part a Winding Sheet and two lovnts. The Devil commandit them to keep the joynts upon them while they were dry, and then to make a powder of them to do evil withal. Then he commandit them to keep his Commandments, which were to do all the evil they could. Before they departed they kis'd his Breech; the Record speaks more broad, as I noted before. He had on him ane Gown and ane Har, which were both black: and they that were affembled, part stood and part fate : John Fien was ever nearest the Devil at his left Elbock; Graymaical keeped the door.

I have retained the Scotch Dialect here also, for the more Authentickness of the matter, and have adjoined this large Paragraph, the Confession therein contained being in all probability a more special occasion of King James's changing his opinion touching the Existence of Witches, which he was, as is reported, inclinable to think to be but a mere conceit conceit before. For he was then but young, not paffing Five or fix and twenty years of age when this Examination was had before him. And part of the Third Chapter of his Second Book of his Damonologie feems to be a Tranfcript of this very Confeffion. Wherefore this being fo confiderable an occurrence touching a bufine's of fuch moment, the bringing in here fo old a Story amongst those of fresher memory, will, I hope, bring along with it its own excuse.

Thus have we contrived all the Relations, in Mr. Glanvil's, Papers which were thought confiderable, into this fecond Part of his Saducifmus Triumphatus. He once intended to fubjoyn thereto an Anfwer to Webster, Wagstaff, and the Author of the Dottrine of Devils, as you may observe from the first Section of his Proof of Apparitions, &c. from holy Scripture: but partly by bringing in already the chief things in that rude draught begun, into what is here published, aad partly by stating the Question truly and with right judgment, he has prevented himself, and made that labour needles. As indeed in a manner it ever was, their Objections against Mr. Glanvil's Opinion on these points, being wondrous weak, forry, and fophistical, and fuch as it were pity that any Man of Parts, who can bestow his time better, should squander it away in confuting fuch triffes.

There is nothing that makes any leaft shew of strength, but that touching the palpability of the confiftency of the bodies of the Familiars of Witches, as if it weakned our Saviour's Argument to his Disciples for his Resurrection, where he bids them handle him and fee, for a Spirit has not Flesh and Bones as they fee him have. And he bids Thomas thrust his Hand into his Side, that they might be fure he was no Spectre or Spirit, but the very Chrift with his Fleih, Blood, and Bones as he had before his Crucifixion; and they were as well afcertained of this, as fense, nay the fureft fense, that of a Touch, or Feeling, could make them, that he had really Flesh and Bones, and such a temperament as humane Bodies have. Nor can any cavil avail against this from the Familiars of Witches, that will not as well weaken the affurance that we converse with fuch or fuch a Friend, but with fome Spectre like him; So that the Allegation is as weak as peevifh and malicious. And if he should doubt whether it was his real Friend, or some Spectre, if his Friend should offer himself, as our Saviour did, to be touched, fearched and felt, would not any body think think it were fufficient assurance ? But for a perverse Caviler or crazy Sceptick, what is it that will fatisfie them ?

But it may be well faid, that there be concomitant confiderations that will affure the party it is his Friend and not a Spectre. And are there concomitant confiderations here also? The ancient Prophecies, and Chrift's own Prediction that he should rife from dead out of the Grave. And that God is a God of truth, and not of unfaithfulnels and imposture : Which affurance is of a more high and divine Tenour than that of feeling his Body. And therefore our Saviour faith to Thomas; THOMAS, because thou hast feen me thon hast believed, Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed : For it is a fign that a more noble and heavenly principle is awakened in them, that dispels that thick Mist of Sceptical stupor and dulness. Ir is a fign they are of a more holy, pure, and refined tem-per, And befides all this, What Spectre ever challenged any one to make fuch a Trial as this, to feel whether he was not very Flefh and Bone as real Men are, when he would impose upon any? Or how is it proved, though Spirits can bring their Vehicle to a palpable confiftency, that they can turn it into fuch as shall feel of the fame articulate palpableneis of Fleih, and Bone, and Temperament that are in living Men? Till this appear by confect experience to be in the palpable confiftency of Familiars or Spirits. that transact with Witches, the Allegation is infinitely weak upon that account allo, as weak as fpightful and perverle. But the Hag-Advocates will alledge any foolifh thing rather than feem to be able to fay nothing.

In the mean time I think it here feafonable to declare, that though this intended Edition of Saducifmus Triumphatus had not the happinels to be perfected by the ingenious Author's own hand before his death, yet fuch Materials he left behind him, and the work in fuch a forwardnels, that things being put together in that order and diffinctnels which they are, the Difcourfe may prove as ufeful for the reclaiming Men from Saducifm, though perhaps not altogether for delightful, as if his own hand had the polifhing of it. And the publifhing of it will allo do him that right in the eyes of the world, that (whereas he was fulpected haply for fome complaifance towards fome perfors that were over inclinable to Hobbianifm, to have furunk from the fenfe of fuch noble Theories, with which his mind wasenlightned in the morning of his days) it from hence may appear that thefe things fluck close to him him; and that he entertained them with a fincere warmth all along, as is evident from these Papers then private within his own Study-Walls. As the profession of them broke out from him most expression when he lay on his Death-bed, as his intimate friend Mr. Thomas Alcock largely fets down in a Letter written to Dr. H. More. And I think that is the time, if ever that Men will speak their thoughts freely, as the Poet hath observed in the like case.

RELAT. I.

A Transcription of a Narrative, out of the Natural History of Oxfordshire, of the strange Passages that happened at Woodstock, Anno 1649. when the Commissioners for surveying the Mannor-house, Park, Deer, Woods, and other Demeasses belonging to that Mannor, sate and lodged there.

H E Commissioners October 13. 1646. with their Servants being come to the Mannor-house, they took up their Lodging in the King's own Rooms, the Bed-Chamber, and Withdrawing-Room: the former whereof they also made their Kitchin, the Council-Hall their Brew-house, the Chamber of Presence their place of fitting to dispatch Business, and a Wood-house of the Dining-Room, where they laid the Wood of that ancient Standard in the High-Park known of all by the name of the King's Oak, which (that nothing might remain that had the name of King affixed to it) they digged up by the Roots. October the 14th and 15th, they had little Diffurbance; but on the 16th, there came, as they thought, fomewhat into the Bedchamber, where two of the Commissioners and their Servarits lay, in the shape of a Dog, which going under their Beds, did as it were gnaw their Bed-cords, but on the morrow, finding them whole, and a quarter of Beef, which lay on the ground untouched, they began to entertain other Thoughts.

October 17. Something to their thinking, removed all the Wood of the King's Oak out of the Dining room, into the Prefence-chamber, and hurled the Chairs and Stools up and down that Room. From whence it oame into the two Chambers where the Commissioners and their Servants lay, and hoisted up their Beds-feet, fo much higher than the Heads, that they, thought they should have been turned over and over; and then let them fall down with fuch a force, that their Bodies rebounded from the Bed a good diftance, and then shook the Bed-stead fo violently, that themfelves confest, their Bodies were fore with it. October 18. Something came into the Bed-chamber, and walkt up and down, and fetching the Warming-pan out of the Withdrawing Room, made fo much noife, that they thought 5 Bells could not have made more. And October 19, Trenchers were thrown up and down the Dining-room, and at them that lodged there, whereof one of them being shaken by the Shoulder. and awakened, put forth his Head to fee what was the matter, but had Trenchers thrown at it.

October 20. The Curtains of the Bed in the with-drawing Room, were drawn to and fro, and the Bedftead much shaken, and 8 great Pewter-dishes, and 3 Dozen of Trenchers thrown about the Bed-chamber again. This Night they also thought whole Arm-fuls of the Wood of the King's Oak thrown down in their Chambers, but of that in the Morning they found nothing had been moved.

October 21. The Keeper of their Ordinary and his Bitch, Jay in one of the Rooms with them, which Night they were not diffurbed at all. But October 22, though the Bitch kennel'd there again, to whom they afcribed their former Nights reft, both they and the Bitch were in a pitiful taking, the Bitch opening butonce, and that with a whining fearful Yelp. October 23. They had all their Cloaths pluckt off them in the Withdrawing Room, and the Bricks fell out of the Chimney into the Room; and the 24th, they thought in the Dining-Room, that all the Wood of the King's Oak had been brought thither, and thrown down close by their Bed-fide; which noife being heard by those of the With-drawing Room, one of them role the fee what was done, fearing indeed that his fellow Committioners had been killed, but found no fuch matter; whereupon returning to his Bed again, he found a Dozen of Trenchers thrown into it, and handlomely covered with the Bed-cloaths.

October, 25. The Curtains of the Bed in the With-drawing Room were drawn to and fro, and the Bed-stead shaken as before, and in the Bed-chamber, Glass flew about to thick, (and ver not a Pane of the Chamber-windows broken) that they thought it had rained Money. Whereupon they lighted Candles: but to their grief they found nothing but Glals. October 29. Something walked in the With drawing Room about an Hour. and going to the Window, opened and fut it; then going into the Bed-chamber, it threw great Stones for about half an Hours time, fome whereof lighted on the High-bed, others on the Truckle-bed, to the number in all, of above Fourfcore. This Nightthere was also a very great Noise, as if .40 Pieces of Ordnance had been that off together. At 2 feveral Knocks it aftonished all the neighbouring Dwellers, which is thought. might have been heard a great way off. During these Noiles. which were heard in both Rooms together, both Coinmiffio. hers and Servants were fruck with fo great Horrour, that they cryed out one to another for help; whereof one of them recovering himfelf out of a ftrange Agony he had been in, fnatcht up a Sword, and had like to have killed one of his Brethren coming out of his Bed in his Shirt, whom he took for the Spirit that did the Mischief. However, at length they got all together, yet the Noile continued fo great and fo terrible, and shook the Walls fo much, that they thought the whole Mannor would have fallen on their Heads. At its departure it took all the Glass away with it.

November 1. Something, as they thought, walkt up and down the With-drawing Room, and then made a Noife in the Dining-Room. The Stones that were left before, and laid up in the With-drawing Room, were all fetcht away this Night, and a great deal of Glass (not like the formet) thrown about again. November-2. Came fomething into the With-drawing Room, treading as they conceived, much like a Bear, which at first only vvalked about a quarter of an Hour; at length it made a Noife about the Table, and threve the Warming pan fo violently, that it quite spoil'd it. It threvy also Glais and great Stones at them again, and the Bones of Horfes, and all fo violently, that the Bed-ftead and Walls were bruifed by them. This Night they fet Candles all about the Rooms, and made Fires up to the Mantle-trees of the Chimneys, but all were put Dd z OUE out no body knew how, the Fire and Billets that made it, being thrown up and down the Rooms, the Curtains torn with the Rods from their Beds, and the Beds-pofts pulled away, that the Tefter fell down upon them, and the Feet of the Bed-ftead cloven in two. And upon the Servants in the Truckle-bed that lay all this time fweating for Fear, there was first a little, which made thembegin to ftir, but before they could get out, there came a whole Bowl as it were of ftinking Ditch-water down upon them, fo green that it made their Shirts and Sheets of that calour too.

The fame Night the Windows were all broke by throwing of Stones, and there were most terrible Noises in the three several places together, to the extraordinary wonder of all that lodged near them; nay the very Coney-stealers that were abroad that Night, were fo affrighted with the difmal Thundering, that for hafte they left their Ferret in the Coney-burroughs behind them, beyond Rosamonds. Well. Notwithstanding all this, one of them had the boldness to ask, in the Name of God what it was? What it would have ? and, What they had done, that they should be diffurbed in this manner? To which no Answer was given, but the noife ceafed for a while. At length it came again, and as all of them faid, brought feven Devils worfe than it felf. Whereupon one of them lighted a Candle again, and fet it between the two Chambers in the Door-way, on which another of them fixing his Eyes, faw the fimilitude of a Hoof, ftriking the Candle and Candleftick into the middle of the Bedchamber, and afterwards making 3 Scrapes on the Snuff to put it out. Upon this, the fame Person was so bold as to draw his Sword, but he had fcarce got it out, but there was another invisible Hand had hold of it too, and tugg'd with him for it, and prevailing, ftruck him fo violently with the Pummel, that he was ftunn'd with the Blow.

Then began grievous Noifes again, infomuch, that they calling to one another, got together, and went into the Prefencechamber, where they faid Prayers, and fung Pfalms, notwithftanding all which, the thundering Noife ftill continued in other Rooms. After this, Novem. 3. they removed their Lodgings over the Gate, and next Day, being Sunday, went to Ewelin, where how they escaped, the Authors of the Relations knew not; but returning on Munday, the Devil (for that was the Name they gave their Nightly-Gueft) left them not unvisited, nor on the Tuefday following, which was the laft Day they ftayed.

THAT the matter of Fast is true, we have all Assurance de. firable, from what the Writer of the Natural Hiftory of Oxfordshire, declares, before he comes to the Narrative it felf, viz. That he had several Relations put into his Hands, and one of them written by a learned and faithful Person, then living upon the place. Which was confirmed to him by several Eye-witness of many of the particulars, and all of them by one of the Commissioners themfelves, who ingenuoufly confect to him, that he could not deny but that what was Written by that Person above-mentioned, was all true. So that for matter of Fact there can be no doubt ; only the Historian makes a scruble, which is much according to the Mode of this Age, Whether all these Pranks might not be plaid by Combi-It being a gentile thing, and much in the Fashion, not nation. to leem over credulous, that any fuch things are done by any Dxinons or Spirits. Yet the Nature of some of these Exploits here mentioned, extorts a Confession from him, even whether he will or no, that they are not reconcilable to Juggling.

Such, fays he, are, (1st.) The extraordinary Noifes beyond the power of Man to make without fuch Instruments as were not there. (2.) The tearing down and fplitting the Bed-posts, and putting out fo many Candles, and fo great Fires, no body knows how. (3.)A visible shape seen of an Horses Hoof treading out a Candle. And (4.) A tugging with one of them for his Sword, by an invisible Hand, by which I suppose is meant, an unperceptible Hand; for the Hand must needs be invisible, the Candle being put out in that scafon of the Year; but it was fuch an Hand, as if the Candle had been light, could not have been seen ; for asmuch, as though he felt in the dark that tugging for his Sword, he could not feel nor lay hold on the Hand or Arm, or any part of any palpable Person that tugged with him. This may be faid, if this tugging for the Sword was far in the Night, about or past Midnight; but if it was earlier in the Night, the Party might have feen the Hand that tugged for the Sword, if it had not been a Hand of its own nature invisible : For the Moon was at least 7 or 8 Days old, if I compute right, out of the fecond Ptolematick Tables in N. Mulerius.

These indeed are the most material Arguments to prove that all bere was not Jugling or Combination. And indeed how could it be Combination, when as the Story runs upon one Person all along, calling it the Thing or Something? So that it feems all to be performed by one Perfon or Power. Befides, thefe Artifts in Waggery, how could they train up a Dog to knaw Bed-cords, and forbear eating of Beef, when it lay so fairly for him on the Floor? And an operofe Business, and how little worth the while for any fingle Perfon to remove all the Wood of the King's Oak out of one Room into another? And more unlikely that he could make fuch a noife, as if he did it, when he did it not. And the flinging of Trenchers and Stones in such numbers near Men, and hurting none by them, seems to me not probable to be within the skill of an ordinary Man to perform; as also to make such a Noife as if whole Arm-fulls of the King's Oak were flung down by their. Beds fides, on the Floor of their Chamber, whereas not one flick was found to be cast there. The Whining also, and fearful Telp of the Bitch, was a forewd fign of the approach, not of an ordinary Man, but of fome evil Thing. as the vulgar call it. And what a skilful Wag must be be, that could imitate so the Gate of a Bear, as if such a Beast was come into the Room; or have fuch strength as to cleave the Feet of a Bed stead into two, without Ax or Sam? And did these Wags fo combine, as some to set Ladders to climb to the top of the Chimney. to fling down Bricks, while others play'd other Tricks in the Chamber (The whole Texture in a manner of the Story is fuch, that it argues the things not done by Combination and Waggery, but by the frolick Activity of fome Spirits or Dæmons. And to conclude : How exceeding improbable is it, that the Parties in the House, after they had been twice or thrice molested, would not make their Doors fo fast, that no Man could come at them, and that they were not so well Weaponed, that no Man single would venture his Perfon only to play many odd Tricks and Frolicks to terrifie and scare them, who, though he escaped being killed upon the shot, might be Apprehended, and severely Punisht, they having got the Power on their fide, though not the Right, whatever Mr. Hobbs may judge in these Cases.

Wherefore it is manifest, that these Pranks were playd by Dzemons, as that learned Physician, Dr. Willis, a good many Years ago did readily acknowledge to me, and avouched fuch things as are here related in the Story, to be undoubtedly true, when I had the opportunity of conversing with him at my Lord Conway's at Ragley in Warwickshire.

RELAT. II.

Another Transcription out of the fore-mentioned History of a strange Relation touching the Family of one Captain Wood, late of Bampton, now Brize-novton, Captain in the late Wars for the King; what strange Knockings used to be heard a little before the Death of those of that Family.

T HE first Knocking that was heard, or at least observed, was about the Year after the Restauration of the King, in the Afternoon, a little before Night, as it was apprehended by Mrs. Elenor Wood, Mother to Captain Bafil Wood, who only heard it, none being then by, or about the House but her self; at which she was very much disturbed, thinking it boded fome ill to her or hers, and within fourteen Nights after, she had News of the Death of her Son in law, Mr. George Smith, who died in London.

About 3 Years after that, there were 3 great Knocks given very audibly to all that were then in the Honfe, viz, to the forefaid Mrs. Elenor Wood, Mr. Bafil Wood and his Wife Mrs. Hefter, and fome Servants. Which Knocks were fo remarkable, that one of the Maids came from the Well, which was about' 20 Yards from the place, to fee what was the matter. And Mrs. Elenor Wood, and another Maid that was within the House, faw great Pans of Lard shake and totter so upon a Shelf in the Milk-house, that they were like to fall down. Upon this violent Knocking, Mr. Bafil Wood and his Wife, being then in the Hall, came prefently into the Milk-house to their Mother; where finding her fomewhat diffurbed, and enquiring the reafon, the replied : God Almighty only knew the matter, fhe could tell nothing ; but she heard the Knocking ; which being within Doors, Mr. Bafil Wood concluded must be for some in the Family at home, that upon the Door being for a Friend abroad. which accordingly fellout, 3 of the Family, according to the number of the Knocks, dying within little more than half a Year after, viz. Mrs. Hefter Wood, Wife to Mr. Bafil Wood, a Child D d 4

Child of Mr. Wood's Sifter, and Mrs. Elenor Wood his Mother. About August, 1674, Mr, Bafil Wood Junior, Son of Bafil afore-faid, living at Exeter in Devensbire, heard the fame kind of Knocking; at which being diffurbed, he Wrote word of it to his Father here at Bampton in Oxford shire, viz. That on Sunday, he and his Wife, and her Sifter, and his Brother, did diftintly hear upon a Table in their Chamber, as they ftood by it, two leveral Knocks, ftruck as it were with a Cudgil, one of them before, and the other after Morning-Prayer, a little before Dinner, which Letter was shewn by Mr. Wood Senior, (as the other Knockings before the Deaths of any that died were before-hand told) to feveral neighbouring Gentlemen. After which, within about 14 Days, Mrs. Hefter Wood, the fecond Wife of Mr. Balil Wood Senior, and about a quarter of a Year after, her Father, Mr. Richard Liffet, died both at Bampton, fince which time they have heard nothing as yet.

THese prognostick Signs before the Death of some Men, is a thing noted by Historians, and Philosophers ; which are made sometimes by some Apparition of some deceased Person of the same Family, or by some other Spectre, sometimes by an audible Voice call. ing the Party by Name; which I heard to have happened to some Seamen upon the Sea : Sometime by Mulick, as I heard credibly reported, of a whole Family that died one after another in a little time; and ever some while before any of the Hause fell sick; there was Mulick heard to go from the House (the' nothing feen) playing all along, which several People out of curiofity would follow, who observed it to pass through the Field till it came to a Wood, and there they left it or loft it. This happen'd in Suffolk, and was told for a certain Truth, to a Friend of mine, by Mr. Samson, net long fince Fellow of King's College here in Cambrige. Sometimes the appearance of Lights prefages the Death of some of a Family, and the number according to the number of Lights. Which hapned a very few Years ago to a Family of great Quality in Ireland, three Lights dancing upon a place they call Fairy-Mount. I spoke with one that was a Spectator thereof for half an Hour together, and observed the Lights, the moved swiftly, how their flames were not cast east Horizontally, but went straight up to the Zenith, who noted also, that two of the Family, fince that Sign, were lately dead already, and suffected a third would follow, which accordingly fell out the fame Year, a little while after. The Story I have fet down more completly in my Scholia upon Chap. 8. Book 3. of my Immortality of the Soul. So that this hint is enough here.

Paracellus that fanciful Phylician, imputes all to the officious for of the Stars, that give these Signs, but what Beam of a Star could give such a Rap upon the Table, as is recorded to have hap ned in Captain Wood's Family? Certainly these things cannot be done but by the activity of Dæmons or Spirits. And this present Example is as instructive, or more, than any of that strange Statick or Systaltick Power, that Spirits have to give such a momentary firmness or hardness to their Vehicles, as to make such a single to Philosophize here about these things, but only to tell the Stories. And there is a Passage in the following Story I shall set down, which is an eminent Example of this Systaltick Power of Spirits, viz. an Arm seen from the Hand to the Elbow, striking such a stroke upon the Floor, that it made the very VValls of the House to shake with it.

RELAT. III.

A remarkable Story touching the stirs made by a Dæmon in the Family of one Gilbert Campbel, by Profession a Weaver, in the old Parish of Glenluce, in Galloway in Scotland.

I T happened in October, 1654, that after one Alexander Agnew, a bold and fturdy Beggar, who afterwards was hang'd at Dumfreis, for Blafphemy, had threatned hurt to Gilbert Campbel's Family, becaufe he had not gotten fuch an Alms as he required; the faid Gilbert was often times hindred in the exercise of his Calling, all his working Inftruments being, fome of them broken, fome of them cut, and yet could not know by what means this hurt was done. Which piece of trouble did continue till about the middle of November; at which time the Devil came came with new and extraordinary Affaults, by throwing of Stones in at Doors and Windows, and down through the Chimney-head, which were of great quantity, and thrown with great force, yet by God's good Providence there was not one Perfon in the Family hurt or fuffer'd damage thereby. This piece of new and fore Trouble, did neceffitate Mr. Campbel to reveal that to the Minister of the Parish, and to some other Neighbours and Friends, which hitherto he had endured fecretly. Yet notwithstanding this, his Trouble was enlarged ; for not long after, he found oftentimes his Warp and Threads cut as with a pair of Sizzars, and the Reed broken ; and not only this, but their Apparel cut after the fame manner, even while they were wearing them, their Coars, Bonnets, Hofe, Shoes, but could not difcern how, or by what means. Only it pleafed God to preferve their Perfons, that the leaft harm was not done. Yer in the Night-time they wanted liberty to Sleep, fomething coming and pulling their Bed-cloaths and Linnens off them, and leaving their Bodies naked.

Next, their Chefts and Trunks were opened, and all things in them strewed here and there: Likewise the parts of the working Inftruments that had escaped, were carried away, and hid in holes and bores of the House, where hardly they could be found again : Nay, whatever piece of Cloth or Houfhold-stuff was in any part of the House, it was carried away, and fo cut and abused, that the Good-man was necessitated with all hafte and fpeed to remove, and to transport the reft to a Neighbour's House, and he himself compell'd to quit the Exercise of his Calling, whereby only he maintained his Family. Yer he re olv'd to remain in the Houle for a feason. During which time fome Perfons thereabour, not very judicious, counfell'd him to fend his Children out of the Family, here and there (to try whom the Trouble did most follow, affuring him that this Trouble was not against all the Family, but against fome one Perfon or other in it) whom he too willingly obey'd. Yet for the space of 4 or 5 Days after, there were no remarkable Affaults as before.

The Minister hearing thereof, shewed him the evil of such a Course, and affured him, that if he repented not, and called back his Children, he might not expect that his Trouble would end in a right way. The Children that were nigh by, being called home, no Trouble followed, till one of his Sons, called Thomas, that was fartheft off, came home. Then did the Devil begin afresh; for upon the Lord's Day following, in the Afternoon, the House was set on Fire, but by his Providence, and the help help of some People going home from Sermon, the Fire was extinguisht, and the House saved, not much loss being done. And the Munday after being spent in private Prayer and Fasting, the House was again set on Fire upon the Tuesday, about 9 of the Clock in the Morning; yet by Providence, and the help of Neighbours, it was layed before any harm was done.

Mr. Campbel being thus wearied and vext, both in the Day and in the Night, went to the Minister, defiring him to let his Son Thomas abide with him for a time, who condescended, but withal affured him, that he would find himfelf deceived, and for it came to pairs; for notwithstanding that the Child was without the Family, yet were they that remained in it fore troubled, both in the Day-time, and in the Night-leafon, fo that they were forc'd to wake till Midnight, and fometimes all the Night over. During which time, the Perfons within the Family suffered many Loss, as the cutting of their Cloaths, the throwing of Peits, the pulling down of Turf and Feal from the Roof and Walls of the House, and the stealing of their Apparel, and the pricking of their Flesh and Skin with Pins. The Presbytery having convened at the place for a folemn Humilation, perfuaded Gilbert Campbel to call back his Son Thomas, notwithftanding whatfoever hazard might follow. The Boy returning home, affirmed, that he heard a Voice speak to him, forbidding him to enter within the House, or into any other place where his Father's Calling was exercised. Yet he entered, but was foreabused, till he was forced to return to the Minister's House again.

Upon Munday the 12th of February, the reft of the Family began to hear a Voice speak to them, but could not well know from whence it came. Yet from Evening till Midnight, much vain Discourse was kept up with the Devil, and many idle and impertinent Questions proposed without that due Fear of God that should have been upon their Spirits under so rare and extra-The Minister hearing of this, went to the ordinary a Trial. House upon the Tuesday, being accompanied with some Gentlemen, who after Prayer was ended, heard a Voice speaking out of the Ground, from under a Bcd, in the proper Country Dialect. faying, Would you know the Witches of Glenluce, 1 will tell you them, and so related four or five Persons Names, that went under an evil report. The faid Gilbert informed the Company, that one of them was dead long ago. The Devil answered, It is true, she is dead long ago, yet her Spirit is living with us in the World. The Minister reply'd, faying : The Lord rebuke thee Satan, and put thee to filence, we are not to receive any Information from from thee, what foewer Fame any Perfons go under; thou are but feeks ing to feduce this Family, for Satans Kingdom is not divided against it felf.

After which, all went to Prayer again; which being ended, (for during the time of Prayer, no trouble was made) the Dévil with many Threatnings, boafted, and terrified the Lad Thomas, who had come back that Day with the Minister, that if he did not depart out of the House, he would set all on Fire. The Minister answered, and faid, The Lord will preferve the House and the Boy too, feeing he is one of the Family, and bath God's Warrant to tarry in it. The Devil answered: He shall not get liberty to stay, he was once put out already, and shall not abide here, the I should persue him to the end of the World. The Minister reply'd, The Lord will stop thy Malice against him.

And then they all Prayed again, which being ended, the Devil faid, Give me a Spade and a Shovel, and depart from the Houle for 7 Days, and I shall make a Grave and lie down in it, and shall trouble you no more. The Good-man answered. Not so much as a Straw (hall be given thee, through God's Affistance, even the' that would do it. The Minister also added, God shall remove thee in due time. The Devil answered, I will not remove for you. I have any Commission from Christ, to tarry and vex this Family. The Minister answered, A Permission thou hast indeed, but God will ftop it in due time. The Devil reply'd, I have (Mes John) a Commission that perhaps will last longer than your own. After which the Minister and the Gentlemen arole, and went to the place where the Voice feemed to come from, to try if they could find any thing. And after diligent fearch, nothing being found, the Gentlemen began to fay, We think this Voice fpeaks out of the Children, for 10me of them were in their Beds. The Devil answered, Youlic, God shall judge you for your Lying, and I and my Father will come and fetch you to Hell with Warlock Thieves. And fo the Devil difcharg'd the Gentlemen to fpeak any more; ' faying, Let him speak that hath a Commission, meaning the Minister) for he is the Servant of God.

• The Gentlemen returning back with the Minister, they fat down near to the place whence the Voice seemed to come from, and then he spake to them after this manner, The Lord will rebuke this Spirit in his own time, and cast it out. The Devil answering, faid, It is written in the 9th of Mark, The Disciples could not cast him out. The Minister reply'd, What the Disciples could not do, yet the Lord having beightned the Parents Faith for his own Glory, did cast him out, and so shall be thee. The Devil reply'd, It is written in the 4th of Luke, And he departed, and left him for for a season. The Minister faid, The Lord in the Days of his Humiliation, not only got the Victory over Satan in the Alfault in the Wilderness, but when be came again his success was not better. For it is written, John 14. Behold the Prince of this World cometh. and hath nothing in me. And being now in Glory, will fulfil his Promise, and God shall bruise Satan under your Feet shortly. Rom. 16. The Devil answered, It is written, Mat. 25. There were ten Virgins, five Wife and five Foolifh, and the Bridegroom came, the foolifh Virgins had no Oyl in their Lamps, and they went unto the Wife to feek Oyl, and the Wife faid, Go and buy for your felves, and while they went, the Bridgroom came, and entered in, and the Door was shut ; and the foolish Virgins were sent to Hell-fire. The Minister answer'd, The Lord knows the fincerity of his Servants, and the' there be Sin and Folly in us here, yet there is a Fountain opened to the House of David, for Sin and for Uncleannes; and when he hath washed us there, and pardoned all our Sins for his Names fake, he will caft the unclean Spirit out of the Land. The Devil answered, and faid, That place of Scripture is written in the 13th of Zechariah. In that day I will caule the Prophets and the unclean Spirit to passout of the Land; but afterwards it is written, I will finite the Shepherd, and the Sheep fhall be scattered. The Minister answer'd, Well are we that our biesfed Shepherd was (mitten, and thereby hath bruifed thy Head; and albeit in the Hour of his Sufferings, his Disciples for sook him, Mat. 26. yet now having ascended on high, he fits in Glory, and is preferving, gathering in, and turning his Hand upon his little ones, and will fave his poor ones in this Family, from thy Malice.

The Minister returning back a little, and standing upon the Floor, the Devil faid, I knew not these Scriptures till my Father taught me them. I am an evil Spirit, and Satan is my Father. and I am come to vex this Houfe : And prefently there appeared a naked Hand and an Arm from the Elbow down, beating upon the Floor, till the House did shake again, and also the Devil utter'd a most fearful and loud Cry, faying, Come up Father, come up, I will fend my Father among you. See there he is behind your Backs. The Minister said, I faw indeed an Hand an Arm when the Stroak was given and heard. The Devil faid to him, Saw you that, it was not my Hand, it was my Father's, my Hand is more black in the Loof. Would you fee me, put out the Candle then, and I shall come in the House among you like Fire-balls. After which, all went to Prayer, during which time it did no harm, neither at any other time when God was Worshiped. When Prayer was ended, the Devil faid, (Mes John) If the Good-mans Son's Prayers, at the College of Glascow, did not prevail more with God than yours, my my Father and I had wrought a Mischief here ere now. To which one of the Gentlemen reply'd, though a Check had been given him before. Well, well, I fee you confess there is a God, and that Prayer prevails with him, and therefore we must pray to God, and will commit the Event to him. To which the Devil reply'd, You, Sir, you speak of Prayer with your Broad-lipt Hat, (for the Gentleman had lately gotten a new Hat in the Fashion, with broad Lips) I will bring a Pair of Sheers from my Father that shall clip the Lips of it a little.

The Night now being far spent, it was thought fit everyone should withdraw to his own home. Then did the Devil cry out fearfully, Let not the Minister go home, I shall burn the House if he go., And many other ways did he threaten. And after the Minister was gone forth, the Good-man being instant with him to tarry; whereupon he returned, all the reft of the Company going home. Then faid the Devil to the Minister, You have done my bidding. Not thine answer'd he, but in obedience to God have I returned, to bear this Man company, whom thou dost afflist. Then did the Minister call upon the Name of God; and when Prayer was ended, he discharged Mr. Campbel, and all the Perfons of the Family from opening their Mouths in one Word to the evil Spirit; and when it fpake, that they should only kneel down and speak to God. The Devil then roared mightily, and cryed out, What will ye not speak to me, I shall burn the Houfe, I shall strike the Bairns, and do all manner of Mischief. But after that time no answer was made to it, and fo for a long time no speech was heard. After this, the faid Gilbert fuffer'd much loss, and had many fad Nights, not two Nights in one Week free, and thus it continued till April; from April to July he had some respite and ease. But after he was molested with new Affaults, and even their Victuals were fo abused, that the Family was in hazard of starving, and that which they did eat, gave them not the ordinary fatisfactiom they were wont to find.

In this fore and fad Affliction, Mr. Campbel refolv'd to make his addrefs to the Synod of Presbyters, for Advice and Counfel what to do, which was appointed to convene in October, 1655, namely, whether to forfake the Houfe and Place, or not. The Synod by their Committee, appointed to meet at Glenluce in Feb. 1656, thought fit that a folemn Humiliation thould be kept through all the bounds of the Synod, and amongft other caufes; to requeft God in behalf of that poor afflicted Family; which being carefully done, the Event was, through the Prayersof his People, that his Trouble grew lefs till April, and from April to Angust

August he was altogether free. About which time the Devil began with new Affaults, and taking the ready Mear that was in the House, did sometimes hide it in holes by the Door-posts, and at other times did hide it under the Beds, and fometimes among the Bed-cloaths, and under the Linnens, and at laft, did carry it quite away, till nothing was left there, fave Bread and Water to live by. After this he exercised his Malice and Cruel. ty against all the Perlons in the Family, in wearying them in the Night-time, with ftirring and moving through the Houfe, fo that they had no reft for noife, which continued all the Month of August, after this manner. After which time the Devil grew ver worse, and began with terrible Roarings and terrifying Voices, fo that no Perfon could fleep in the Houfe in the Night-time, and fometimes did vex them with caffing of Stones, striking them with Staves on their Beds, in the Night-time; and upon the 18th of September, about Midnight, he cryed out with a loud Voice, I hall burn the Houle, and about 3 or 4 Nights after, he. fet one of the Beds on Fire, which was foon extinguished without any prejudice, except the Bed it felf, and fo he continued to vex them.

THIS Narrative I have in a manner verbatim, Transcribed out of the Milcallaneous Observations of Mr. G. Sinclare, which are added to his Treatile of Hydroftaticks; which nothing but the certainty of the Truth thereof, and usefulness for the refuting of Saducism, could have tempted him to insert, it being an Obfervation fo Heterogeneous to all the reft. And therefore I thought it worth the while to reduce it into its more proper place, himself acknowledging it to be fomething an unfuitable piece to the Contexsure of the rest of his Book, but that he put it in, only to convince the incredulous World of the Existence of Spirits, whose being he conceives it does more than probably evince, that is to fay, demonftratively, supposing it true. Which that it is, the Narrative it felf seems sufficiently to make good, the stirs there made being so long. and fo publick, and fo repeatedly, and the things writ by Mr. Campbel 4 own Son, who knew them exactly, and I have heard the Truth of of the Story averr'd with all affurance my felf by fome of that Country. And the Narration is fo fimple and plain, and without defign, (it being rather a Colluctation of Mes John and the Presbitery on one fide, and the foul Fiend with his black Loofs affifted by Satan his Father on the other fide, than any clear Victory) that that ought to gain belief thereto. Not to add; that the very abruptnefs of its ending fhews it to be fresh writ, while the thing was doing; and that meer matter of Fact was the measure of the Writer's Pen.

I will conclude all, with the Information of Dr. G. Burner, that able and impartial Writer of the History of the Reformation in England, who upon my enquiry told me this, That he living in Glasgow some Years, found all People there and in the Country about, fully perfuaded of the Truth of matter of Fact, and that he never heard any thing objected to Mr. Sinclare's Relation, but that it was too short, whenas all the Passages of that Apparition would make a Volume, and that there was a full Relation-thereof, Attested under the Hands of Eye-witneffes : And to be fhort, I have greater affurance of the Truth of this Story, than I think fit to declare. The most remarkable Passage in the whole Narrative, is the naked Arm from the Elbow downwards, appearing by it felf, without any other parts of any visible Person, as the shape of an Horfes Hoof in the first Story, without any other parts of an Horfe. Which puts me in mind of the Apparition Elkerken, which Wierus makes mention of in his De Præstigiis Dæmonum, that used to haunt the Highway in an Heathy place not far from Embrica, in the Dutchy of Cleve, in the lower Germany, nothing was seen but a meer Hand, which would beat Travellers as they paffed that way, pull them off of their Horfes, and overthrow Carriages.

As for the cutting and fnipping of things, that is but what has bapned more frequently to thole that have been infefted by Witchcraft. A notable Example whereof a Reverend and Learned Friend of mine, told me in a Mans Daughter of North-Cadbury in Somerstethire, that for fome Months together, she could put on no clean. Linnen, nor Holiday-cloaths, but they would be fnipt and flasht full of holes, as her Father for certain related of her to him. And of this fnipping, besides the Narrative of Gilbert Campbel, there is a fresh Example of it in Story within these three or four Years, touching Witchcraft practised on the Family of William Medcalfe, of Leffingham, (Sect. 12, 13, 18) which is as follows.

RELAT. IV.

Atrue Account, how Alice, the Daughter of William Medcalfe Teoman, in the Parish of Lef-fingham in Lincolnshire, was disturbed by an Apparition, with other Feats of Witchcraft practised upon that Family, sent from Mr. William Wyche, dwelling in the fame Parish, to Mr. J. Richardson, Fellow of Emanuel-College in Cambrige.

1. TN the Year 1678, on the Sunday after Twelfth day, William Medcalfe and his Wife went to Church, leaving their only Daughter Alice at home, and whilft they were there, the faid Alice heard a Noife in the Yard, and looking out at the Window, file faw a Man of a middle Stature, with light flaxen. Hair, ftanding at the Stable Door, upon which, the called out at the Window, and demanded of him what he did there? He returned, That he came for a Horse which he borrowed of her Father. She made him answer again, That the knew nothing ofit, and that he should have none till her Father came home. He received the Answer, and went away for that Day.

2. The next Day, her Father and Mother being gone to Sleeford Market, the faw him again at the Stable Door, and demanded of him as before. He told her, She might go look. Then he askt her where the Horfes were. She answer'd him again as fhort, told him, He might go look. Upon this, he began to footh and flatter her, and gave her many foftening Words, going towards the Door as he spake, as if he intended to go in to her; which the observing, the hafted and bolted the Door fast. Upon which he threatned her, (what his Threats were, the cannot recall) but tome body Knocking at the Door on the other fide of the House, and the understanding it was a Neighbour, opened the Door, and told her Neighbour all that had paft; and upon it, they both ran together into the Yard, to fee if he were there, but they could not find him, neither knew they which way he went.

3. After this, fie was quiet for some time, only about two Weeks before Shrove-tide; one Follet a Cobler; and fuspected to bè be the occasion of all that hapned, came to the House, and they did set him to Work, moved thereto, I suppose, by fear, for he had threatned the Daughter, but for what I cannot learn. Whilft he was Working, he began to discourse to the Mother to this effect. That her Daughter should die that Year, that, he had examined some Books which he had, and that he understood so much by them. And when he had done his Work, he bid them Farewel, telling them, He was fure they would think of Follet when they did not se him. Soon after this, Alice fell fick, and her Mother was somewhat doubtful of her Recovery, but as it pleased God, she was reftored again to her former Health, and continued undiffurbed till May, the Week before Whitfuntide.

4. And then as the was drawing Water at the Well in the Yard, the faw the fame Perion again, which I first described, at the Houfe Door, with a great Club, endeavouring as the thought, to break the Door open. Upon this, the called to him, and askt him what he did there. Upon the speaking, he flung down the Club among a great many Earthen Milk-pans. or Panchins, as they call them, and with fo great violence, that the could not conceive but that he had broken many of them, but afterwards upon examination, the found them all whole. As foon as he had done this he went away, and the leaving her Pail at the Well. followed him, faw him go down the Street, but at the turning of the Lane, loft the fight of him, and could not recover it. This was on Munday, and the faw him every Day that Week, but nothing paffed between them, and feveral times the called her Father out that he might fee him, but he never could.

5. On Saturday he appeared to her in a more dreadful manner at the Hall Window. When the faw him, the askt him what his Bufinefs was there ? 'He told her he would speak with her. She askt him what he had to fay, and defired him to speak it, but he faid, He would not yet tell her. Then he shewed her a Knife, and told her it was for her. She askt him then, whether he had a mind to be Hang'd; and this was all that paft between them then. On the Sunday fhe faw him again run by the Window with a Knife in his Hand as before, and the told her Father and Mother of it, and they both ran out, but could not fee him. On the Munday, whilft fhe was Milking, the faw him with his Knife as before; and thus he often afterwards appeared to her, especially at the Parlour-Window, having opened it. (which had not, they think, been opened for many Years before) and holding a Knife, only fometimes it was a thorter.

forter, and fometimes longer, but always bloody, and fo was the hand that held it.

"8. In the week also before Withfuntide, one Richard Cofins" a Youth about 18 or 19 years old, and then living with Good man Medcalfe, and now most commonly working for Sir William Tork, having heard Alice describe this Man which the fo often faw, as he was walking towards Rock fome, a little place belonging to Leffingham Parifh, he met a Man which he thought to be very like the Man which the defcribed. He went home and told his Master, upon which he and his Daughter walke out that way, to fee if they could meet him. They were not. gone far, but the Daughter faw him, and told her Father, and pointed which way he went, that he might fee him, but still as he went one way to see him, the Daughter presently faw him go the contrary way, fo that he never could obtain the fight of 'him.

7. Once coming from Milking the had a good Club in her hand, and he mer her, and asked her what the did with that, Club. She being more than ordinary couragious, told him, the had a good mind to lay it about his Pate. He made her no and fwer but went away.

8. Another time in July, as near as they can remember, Alice made her a Mels of Frumenty for her Break-fast; it was made, as the tells me, of New Milk, which I take notice of because of what follows. As foon as the had begun to eat it, the forementioned Foller came to the door, and ask'd whether they had any Shoos to mend ; the told him the thought they had (though indeed the knew of none, but spake it out of fear) but that her Father and Mother being gone out; the knew not where they were. So he went away, and the returned, defigning to fall again to her Breakfast, but found it turned to a hard Curd, At which file was much furprized; and refolved to fet it by to thew her Father and Mother; but the had no tooner turned her back, but the difh danced about on the Table, till it fell on the ground, and spilt all in the Floor, which a Neighbours Dog as they thought, coming in, lickt up. The lame day, as the was raking Hay, the was taken lame, and continued to a quarter of a year.

9. After this the was quiet again for a while, and the next time the faw him was, when going behind the Barn upon fome occasion. the efpyed him standing at fome distance from her, and a fudden blaft of Wind took her Hat from off her head, and carried it to his feet ‡ but she was not much daunted at it, but ran to him and took it yp, and then he disappeared.

10. One Sunday in the middle of all her troubles, as fhe was Theoping to take up a Pin; he appeared to her and told her, that Follet was the caufe of all her troubles, and fo left her.

t1. Hitherto I have given you as exacban Account as I could get from them as to the time. That which follows, I fer down without observing the circumstance of time or order of action, because I can learn no certainty of it from them, but the matter of Fact is truth.

12. Often when they were gone to Bed, the inner doors were flung open, as alfo the doors of a Cupboard which flood in the Hall, and this with a great deal of violence and noife. And one night the Chairs, which when they went to Bed, flood all in the Chimney corner, were removed and placed in the middle of the Room in very good order, and a Meal-fieve hung upon one, cut full of holes, and a Key of an inner Door upon another. And in the day time, as they fate in the houle, fpinning, they could fee the Barn-doors often flung open, but not by whom. Once, as Alice fate ipinning, the Rock or Diftaff leapt feveral times out of the Wheel into the middle of the Room. Upon which the faid fhe thought Follet was in it. She had no fooner faid the words, but the faw Follet ride by to Sir William Tork's houfe, about fome bufinefs with him relating to him as a Juffice.

13. Another time Alice had her Petticoat taken away, and a good while after brought again, and feveral times other of her Clothes were taken away, and after fome time brought again, and laid in fome place where they fhould be fure to fee them. As two Pinners which had been loft fome time were brought and put in a Panchin, which Goodwife Medcalf had but newly poured the Milk out of. An Apron was taken away, cutin pieces and brought again, as alfo a Spigot which they fearched carefully for was brought at laft and placed npon five Eggs which Goodwife Medcalfe had laid in the Milk-house but the night before; and the next night this Spigot was changed, put into the Barrel, and that which was in the Barrel laid where the other was.

14. About the latter end of the Summer in the night, the Daughter had her Clothes pull'd off, and her Hair fnarled and matted together in that manner, that the next day her Mother could very hardly get a pair of Sizzers into it to cut it off; and the does believe the was near two hours about it.

15. Another time the felt and faw fomething like a Cat fitting upon her, and till it removed the was in pain, and could not ftir to help her felf.

16. Another time going into the Parlour the faw again, as the thought, a Cat which did fly at her, and ftruck her down feveral times with great violence of which her face, which was much swelled and black was no small indication.

17, Once the found a Note wrapped up in an Handkerchief with these words written in it. I wou'd have you go from -After the had read it, the lockt it up in her Trunk, defigning to thew it to her Father and Mother when they came home (for they were gone to Church) but when the went to look for it again, it was gone out of her Trunk, and the never faw it anymore.

18. The last thing that happened was this, one Saturday night Alice going to Bed, laid a clean shift into her Bed, intending to put it on the next morning; but in the morning looking for it, the could not a 1 it. The next night the borrowed one of her Mother, and > 1 that also in her Bed as before. an gift ent reput it on, it did nor please In the Morning, her, whereupen he gave it is er Maher, defiring her to change it, the Mother took it to change, and opening it, found it cut and flashed in many places, and they are both very certain that it was whole before. And the fame morning when they came into the Hall, they found the other, which was first i. -en away, laid upon the Table.

19. Some odd Freaks were plaid also with the Fature as well as with his Daughter. For Good-man Medcalfe hav received Eight pounds at Sleeford for Beafts, and where he came home put it in a Purse by it self, and lockt it in his Cheft; and a day or two after, taking fome Money a of another, Purfe to buy more Beafts; when he returned this ing fome Money left, he went to his Cheft to put it into the Purfe he took it out of, and afterwards began to tell that Money which he received at Sleeford, and had put in a Purle by it felf, and found that there was feventeen Shillings wanting; and fome days after he found Sixteen Shillings and Sixpence of it in his Pocket. So that there was only Sixpence loft.

20. And another fuch like feat was it touching his Knife. One Friday having occasion to use his Knife, he felt in his Pockets for it, but could not find it, and fearched carefully every where for it. On Sunday night he dreamed his Knife was in his Pocket, and in the morning told his Wife of it, and they both immediately fearched his Pockets, but found none. Antwards he being to go to Sleeford that day, he was feeling 1Ù in his Pocket to fee what Money he had, or upon some other account, and then he found his Knife in his Pocket.

THIS Story, though it contain nothing in it that makes any extraordinary shew or noise, yet it is considerable in that it is fo notable an Instance, and so freshly happened, touching the little filly sportings and triflings of some kind of Dæmons, and will serve to confute that vulgar mistake, that whofoever is called Spirit or Devil, is so Great and August a Being, that no small matters can be the Object of his Activity, whenas I must confels comparing Story with the System of the Invisible World, such as a sagacious and deliberate Reason would conclude it, I have this long time boshthought it, and not a few times spoke it, That there are as arrant Fools out of the Body, as in the Body : and I will there were not as arrant Devils in the Body as out of it. And therefore I hold this Narrative though it be concerning meaner perfons and things not at all despicable, especially Mr. Wyche, who took an account of it from the parties upon the very (pot, avouching in his Letters to Mr. Richardson, that there is nothing contained therein but what is certainly true. And therefore I think it not amils to bestow some few foort Notes on several of the Paragraphs in order as they lye.

Scct. 1. This Man in the light flaxen hair feems to have been taken for a real Man by Alice, to whom he appeared, for a good while But in process of the Story, it will be plain that it was no Man, but an Apparition. This appearing to her in an alluring human shape (as Lendale's Wise, who was hanged for a Witch here at Cambridge on Jesus Green, caused a Spirit or Dæmon to appear to her Maid in the shape of a proper Yeoman-like Man, and follicited her to marry him, driving on the business a long time, as the Maid confessed to a learned friend of mine, and my self) this appearing, I say, in this shape, seems to be a trick to familiarise his converse to her, that he might get her into a farther snare. Whether such as Lendale's Wise intended, I leave to others to conjecture.

compared with this present Section. But in the mean time it may not be unfeasonable here to note, what danger there may be in listening to Astrologers or Fortune-tellers (for so this Follet is called by an able Phylician in Lincolnshire, in his Letter to me.) For a Man may eafily suffer burt if they predict ill, by the Activity of evil Spirits with whom they are some how in confederacy, and with whom it is a thousand times more easis to do mischief than good, and therefore they will not stick to do it, to gain credit to their Client, vizthe Aftrologer or Fortune-teller.

Sect. 4. The flaxen hair'd Man flinging down his Club with that violence among ft the Panchins, and yet breaking none of them, nor it making any noife when it feemed to hit amongst them (as it was answered to my Query made touching this passage) is an indication, that this was to the fight what that monstrous thumping against the door in the following Story, Sect 9. was to the hearing. That the Senfes in both were in a great measure imposed upon by the operation of thele Dæmons. And that therefore here is the first hint of this flaxen hair'd Man's being an Apparition. And another is alfo contained in this same Section. In that her Father being several times called out by her to fee this Man, he never could fee him, though he appeared fo conveniently placed as that her Father might as well see himas her self, as the answered to Mr. Wyche upon my that paßage.

Sect. 5. His fo frequently appearing to the Maid, as is manifest out of this Section and the former, and with fuch an horrid intention fignified by his bloody Knife and Hand, though the Maid by her answer here seems not yet to be aware of it that it was an Apparition ; yet 'tis no contemptible argument that it was. For what Man in his Wits would venture himself so oft in view to all this part. And it is hugely incredible but that he would have been feen by Several others as well as her, if it had been a Man, when he was seen of none befides her, faving one Richard Cofins, who belonged to William Medealf's Family, as is fet down, Sect. 6. Which feems done on purpose to put a trick upon both the Daughter and Father whom he dog'd when he came out from home to see him, as that Section declares.

Sect. 7. This paffage alfo intimates that the Daughter took this Apparition to be be a real Man Still. But that there was Witchcraft in the bufine/s, the Story in Sect. 8. does manifelly discover: For I making a Query upon that passage [that the had no fooner turned her back but the Difh danced about on the Table] how the could see it her back being turned, she did answer, the turned about (hearing, fuppofe, the noise of its motion on the Table) and there faw it turn about and fall. The turning her Frumenty alfo into an bard Curd, is another indication of Witchery in the business, on I that this Spettre of a flaxen hair'd Man was fent to her by that Art. But

But (Section the 9th) fhe feems to be well convinced it was an. Apparition, her felf declaring, it disappear'd (though commonly, she faid, in answer to a Query of mine, he went behind some House, Barn, Wall, or Hedge) and he seems (Sect. 10.) to have appeared on a sudden when she stopped for a Pin. And if Follet was the cause of all her trouble, this Damon did as other Damons often have done, that is, betrayed their Clients. But the Law can proceed upon no such evidence, nor is it fit it should, for fear injury be done to the innocent.

But that William Medcalfe's house was haunted or infested by Witchcraft, the Pranks set down in the following Sections of the Narrative do plainly enough evince. And that of the Daughters Lockard hair is such an argument as no one can possibly evade it. But to entangle things thus is an usual feat of these ludicrous Spirits. And this reminds me of a Story told me by W. M. many years ago, of an house baunted somewhere in Lincolnshire, where it was usual with these Goblins in a Room unfurnisht, unless with the Lumber of broken Chairs and Stools, and old Bed steads (in which Room they hung up their Hanks of Yarn against the Wall) to wind all this Yarn on those old pieces of Lumber, so perplexedly and entangledly that they could not, without spoiling it, endeavour to disfentangle it, but letting it be as they found it, the next night these Goblins of themselves would take it off clear without hurt, and make it up in Hanks and bang it up orderly as before.

This Magical matting of the Daughters bair into a Witch-lock, and the leaping of her Diftaff, Sect. 11. out of her Wheel feveral times into the Floor, in the fight of her Mother alfo, befides what happened to her Father, Sect. 19.20. Shew plainly that it was no deluded fancy of the Daughter, but the real effects of Witchery. Which will be abundantly more confirmed out of the following Story of the ftirs in Sir William York's house, especially if that be true which is bruited in the Country, that they came from the fame hand, that the troubles in William Medcalfe's Family did. But be that how it will, the enfuing Narrative is fo palpable an evidence of shings done by Demons or Spirits, that having got into my hands an authentick Copy of some of the most remarkable passages of those disturbances, by my worthy friend Mr. Richardson, though I have beard from more hands than one how unwilling Sir William was to have the thing made publick; yet I will prefume fo much upon his goodness, and love of truth, and useful instruction of the World, a to adventure to displease his natural humour whilst haply I may, upon bis better confideration, gratifie some more noble principle in him For I know nothing in the thing that can turn to his dishonour. For the best of Men have been affaulted by the Devil in extraordinary ways, ways, and it has been their glory that by their Faith and courage, and humble Confidence in the Arm of God they have overcome him. Wherefore without any farther fcruple I shall take the boldnefs to fet down the above faid Narrative as follows.

RELAT. V.

A true and faithful Narrative of the disturbance which was in the House of Sir William York in the Parish of Lessingham in Lincolnshire, sent by the former hand to the same party.

1. IN May 1679. Sir William York being from home, there was a great noise made by the lifting up of the Larch of the outmost Door, which continued with great quickness and posses for the space of two or three hours, till betwixt ten and eleven of Clock in the night. His Lady then being at home with few Servants, apprehended it to be Thieves, and thereupon they went to the door, and spake to them, and afterwards winded a Horn, and raised the Town, and upon the coming in of the Town, the noise ceased, and they heard no more of it till May following.

2. And then Sir William being at London, the fame noife was made at the door as before, for two or three nights together, and then they began to believe it to be occafioned by fome extraordinary means. This was heard alike by 20 feveral perfous then in the Family, who looking out at the Windows over the door heard the noife, but faw nothing. About a month after, when Sir William had returned from London, he being in Bed, and his Lady ready to go in, he heard the fame noife again; which held about half a quarter of an hour and ceafed, and began again feveral times that night, the fame perfons being then in the houfe allo, and taking the fame care to difcover it : at the end of this knocking there was as if it were a thrufting with a Knee, only more violent.

3. About the middle of July Sir William and his Lady being both from home, and the Servants fitting up expteding their return that night, they heard a noife in the Hall, being the next Room Room to them like the clapping of the Door at the feet of the Stairs, and going in, they found the Chairs all fet in the middle of the Hall, which they did fet in their ufual places again, and returned into the Kitchin, and in a little time hearing the like noife again, they went into the Hall, and found the faid Chairs removed into a paffage between the faid Kitchen and Hall.

4. In August, about nine or ten of the Clock, most of the Family being in Bed, and Sir William near upon it, he heard a knocking at the door under the stairs, as if it were with the end of a good thick stick; at which being a little superized, and going down, the staid noise began again, but afterwards he heard no more of it that night.

5. About a fortnight after that, and about ten of the Clock, Sir William being in his Clofer in the Hall over against the faid door, heard a very violent knocking at the faid door, and being furprized, could not find the Key very quickly, but after he had, he went into the faid room or hole under the Stairs, which the noise left, and nothing being there, he fate down in the Hall with half a fcore of the Family with him about half an hour, and all continued quiet. And then he went into his Chamber, but took the Key of the faid Room under the Stairs in his Pocket, being very hard to believe any fuch extraordinary thing. And immediately the fame noile began again in the fame place, and he immediately going down, and into the fame Room again, found all things as before. And the like noife was heard four or five times the fame Night in the fame place, Sir William still using the fame diligence to discover it as before. Note here, that as any one came near to that, or any other door where the knocking was, it always ceased, except the first time when it knocked at the outmost door.

6. About three or four nights after this, about eight of the Clock, at which time the noife ufually began, and at the fame place and door likewife where it ufually began, there was a knocking heard as if it were with a flick with the broken end. Sit William ufed his former diligence to difcover it. This noife was repeated about three or four times, and left off about eleven of the Clock. After this Sir William and his Family being after this manner fo much diffurbed, he refolved to do what he could to find it out. This noife therefore which was heard fometimes every other night, fometimes every night, as foon as it began Sir William took all the Family into one Room, that he might might be fecured that there was no Cheat in it. Which the Servants gladly yielded to, being all mightily affrighted.

7. About September, the Noife began to be greater, and to be in a Room unfurnished, defigned for a great Parlour, and was like to a Man walking up and down, and sometimes running, sometimes like a Man walking on Stilts, and sometimes knocking at the Ceiling, or top of the Room, but not above half a fcore stroaks at a time, yet sometimes fewer, and sometimes more, still as he went towards it.

8. Afterwards the faid Noife began to be more dreadful and greater yet, and in more places, which mightily difordered Sir William's ancient Father; and his Lady and Children very much. Upon which they were thinking upon leaving the House. Sir William was willing they should, but unwilling to leave it himself, and thereupon they all continued. At this time Sir William had a Plummer putting up Lead about the Houfe, to convey the Rain that fell into a Ciftern, and this Knocking . was often against the Lead, and often against the Iron that bore it, in imitation of the Plummers knocking in the Day-time. He had likewife Carpenters at the fame time, and fometimes this Noife was like their Chopping at the Wood in the Yard. infomuch, that the head Carpenter faid, That if he had not known his Servants to be in the Houfe, he fould have thought they had been Chopping. Sometimes it was like the Servants Chopping of Coals in the Coal-yard; fometimes Knocking at the Doors of Out-houses, at the Wash-house, Brew-house, and Stable doors; and as they followed it from place to place, it ftill immediately, and in one inftant removed. These were the ufual Noifes that were every Night when it came, which was 3 or 4 times a Week.

9. But fometimes it was a great deal more terrible, particularly when Mr. Brown, a Relation of Sir VVilliam's Brother Brown, was here. The Noife began about the utual time of the Night, and at the utual place. Which faid Noife in one place or another held all Night, fometimes at the Door under the Stairs, fometimes running up and down in the Parlour, fometimes knocking violently at the wood of the Windows, fometimes dgainft the Spouts, and fometimes againft the forementioned Ciftern, and fometimes againft the outmost Doors, as if it had been fome great piece of Timber thrown againft them, infomuch that the Carpenters which were in the House, faid it was impossible for all the Art and Strength of Man to make fuch a noise without battering the Doors in pieces; and yet examining, they found the Door firm and whole, not the lead batterst battered or ftrained: Sometimes this noise was like the tumbling of Tiles from the fide of an House.

10. This noise growing worse and worse, Sir William followed it, demanding in the Name of God what was the occafion of it, but received no answer; but it still removed to another place: Particularly one Night it being very extraordinary in the great Parlour, Sir William kept the Family in another Room, and with a Candle in his Hand, walked in the fame Parlour, but heard nothing. Afterwards confidering the fame God could protect him in the Dark as well as in the light, he put out the Candle, and shut the Door, and walked there a quarter of an Hour, hoping some discovery might be made to a fingle Perfon, which was not made to more. After he had walked a quarter of an Hour in the dark, the Noife began at the wood of the Window in the fame Room, only on the out-fide. At which he demanded as formerly, In the Name of God what was the meaning of it? Upon which it immediately ceafed in that place, and removed to a Dial that flood about 10 or 20 Yards from the House, and knockt violently there, and took the rounds as formerly again. This Night Sir William likewife opened a Bible, and laid it in the Room under the Stairs where it began; but nevertheless. the Noise was there afterwards, and the Bible not altered. After which, he went into the Chamber with the Family, and having been a little time there, there began a very great Drumming at a pair of Wainscoat-doors, between the Hall and the great Parlour, imitating Drummers in their feveral ways of Beating, and varying it as they ufually do, but it was, as if it was done with Hands against the Wainfcoat.

11. About 3 or 4 Nights after this, this noife of Knocking began as at former times, and Sir William lighted a Candle, and fet it in a high Candleftick, in themiddle of the Hall, and went up into his Chamber with all his Family; and whilft they were above, this Drumming noife began at the Door again, in a very dreadful manner. They were at their Devotions, which when they had finished, Sir William went out first himfelf, and went down Stairs, and found the Chairs removed, and the Candle put out, the Snuff hanging bent down, and the Candleftick removed into the Passage, between the Kitchen and the Hall.

12. This was about the beginning of OHober, and the fitting of the Parliament drawing nigh, which required Sir William's attendance, and he being much concerned upon the leaving his Family in fuch Diffurbances, and intending to fet forward on Munday Munday before the fitting of the Parliament, which was Offolier 16. His Brother Brown and his Wife, Sir William's only Sifter, and feveral other Friends coming to take their leave of him; the noife was heard at the Door under the Stairs that Night, but very fittle to what ufually. And accordingly Sir William went to London, intending that if the Noife continued, his Lady and his Children fhould follow him, and that his Father fhould go to Mr. Brown's at Horblin; but by God's Bleffing, from that time to this it was never heard any more.

THIS is a very true and affured Diary of the chief Paffages in shofe ftirs made in Sir William York's House, but withal a very brief one. Which made me get Mr. Richardton to fend certain Queries touching several Paffages which were answered from a very fine and authentick Hand; and in virtue of which Answers, I shall be able to give a stop to all the tergiversations of the Incredulous, and their evalorious Pretences, as if things might be refolved into waggish Combination. As first on,

Sect 1. I was certified (fo that no Man can pretend that the Party that made that Noife with the Latch, did upon the blowing of the Horn, flink away before the Town could come in) that the noife continued till the People of the Town came to the Gate; and that it was impossible but that if any Perfon had been within the Yard, they must have discovered him, because there is a Wall about 10 Foot high round the Yard, so that be could no way escape. And besides, that it hapned in that time of the Year, when it is in a manner all Night long Twilight, sufficient to discover any Person, if any were there to be discovered; it is not probable, if there had been need, but that fome of the Company would come with Lanterns or other Lights.

Sect. 2. Those Persons that lookt out of the Window to the place where the noise was made, could not but see if there were any Man there to make that noise, it being done by Moon-shine, (as is answered to my Query on this Passage) sufficient to discover if any Person had been there, if not who it were. And this diligence being repeated for some Nights together, and nothing discerned, it is manifest, that the noise was made by some Damon or Spirit, not by any Man. Sect. 5. None, That the noife at the Door of the Room under the Stairs, it could not be differenced, whether it was on the infide of the Door, or on the outfide, as was answered to one of my Queries. And therefore Sir William feeing no body at the outfide to caufe that noife, which he might edily have done by the light of his Candle, if there had been any body, he went into the Room to fee if he could diffeouer any one there. But finding no body, lock the Door, and and yet the noife began again in the fame Room, but upon a fecond fearch, no body found therein. And this noife, and this diligence in fearching the fame place feveral times repeated in one Night, by one naturally incredulous of any fuch extraordinary things, and receiving full fatisfaction therefrom, methinks floudd floake the most obdurate Saducee, and make him afhamed of his fond Incredulity.

But now for the ceafing of the knocking when any one came near to any Door where the knocking was; this was no Impediment to the certain Experience of that under the Stairs, because they by the light of a Candle plainly, though at some distance, seeing there was no body at the outfide of the Door, and finding no body within the Room or Hole, which was lockt ; notwithstanding the ceasing of the knocking, they might be fure that the knocking was not made by the Hand of any Mortal. Nay I will farther add from certain Information, that there were scarce any of the House but have seen the Door at the same time the noise was made there, and no body at it ; and that Sir William him/elf particularly has feen the Door from the top of the Stairs with a light in his Hand several times, while the noise was there, which sometimes continued till he came down several steps, and once till be came over against the Door, within a yard of it, or thereabout, but faw no body ; fo certain an Experiment is this of Demoniacal operations.

Sect. 6. This taking the whole Family into one Room, was of very good confequence; for thereby it was plain that none of the Family plaid these Freaks, nor augmented them by any humoursome Imitation. And it is incredible any stranger should venture, as I understand by the Answer to my fifth Query. Which assures me, that on the first Night the House was scarched every where, and the Doors were always lockt, and Sir William had the Keys given to him. What stranger therefore in his Wits, would adventure upon such freakish Exploits, wherein he did himself so little good, when he was in such apparent danger to be taken in such a numerous Family.

Sect. 7. My fixth Query was upon this feventh Section, which was this: Was Sir William in the Room where fomething teemed to walk, to run, to go on Stilts, &c. and whether it was not fo dark, but that he might fee if there had been a Man Man there. 'To which is answered. He fometimes went in with a Candle, and fometimes without, yet could discover nothing; and if any Person had been there, it was impossible for him to escape out of the Room undiscovered, the Door being lockt. And I may add farther, the outward Doors being lockt, that would have sufficiently made him liable to be taken, if it had been a Man.

Sect. 8. This Apifh imitation of the noife of Workmen, flows it to be fome trifling Dæmon, as alfo that fudden removal from one place to another, and its being heard in fo many places at once, plainly argues it could be no Man, unlefs there were more than one, which would make them ftill the more obnexious to be taken.

Sect. 9. The continuance of the ftirs alfo all Night, argues it not to be probable it was any Man. For who would disquict himself a whole Night, meerly to amuse others for nothing. But that battering noise at the Door, demonstrates it was not the Feat of any Mortal. And belides this noife, as Mr. Edward Brown the elder, who was there thit very Night, Writes to Mr. Richardson: the iron Latch of the great Door of the Room, which was just under that in which he lay, feemed to him to move with such wonderful swiftnes up and down, and with such very great noise, as he could not think any humane Art or Dexterity could effect. But he describes also the battering noife he heard at that Door. There feemed, faith he, fometimes to be fuch extraordinary Thumping and Knocking against the (aid Door with fuch wonderful loud noile, as if some had managed an extraordinary great piece of Timber with the greatest Art, to give it the greatest advantage to force the Door open, or break it in pieces; and in deliberate Thoughts, I could not conceive how the strongest Doors or Walls could stand before such force as was threatned by fuch a very great and loud Noife. Thele two kinds of noises, says be, continued in my bearing till about break of Day, with frequent little intermissions ; and yet in the Morning both the iron Latch and Door were found unalter'd in the very fame state they were left when we went to Bed. And very intelligent Perfons, fays he, in the Family faid, That when they went to the Door, or went out in the time of fuch disturbances, they could see no body. ner perceive any motion in any thing on which the invisible Agent did feem to operate. Which is the very fame which I heard from the above-mentioned Doctor of Physick, in his Letter to me. Mr. Brown in his Discourse to Mr. Richardion in the Country, touching this thumping Noise at the Door, told him he could not compare it to any thing better, as to the force thereof, than to the Roman Ram, which the Romans battered down Walls with. But it being experienced of all Hands, that the Noise Seemed to come from a force against the Door, that would if it had been real, break the Dgor, door all in pieces, and yet the door suffering nothing from it, it is a plain demonstration that it was no Feat of any Man, but a preftigious Frolick of some Demon. And lastly, what one Man or many could make such a noise on the top of the house, as if most of the Tiles were falling, and how could be get down so suddenly as not to be discovered?

Sect. 10. My feventh Query was upon this Section, viz. Wheher when Sir William went into the great Parlour with a Candle in his hand to walk there, did the noife cease at his approach or before. To which is answered, It ceased upon his going in, and as soon as he was gone out, it would often begin again. Whence it is plain, if the noife had been caused by any visible person, that person would have been discovered by the light. But that which caused it did not so much as remove out of the Room in all likelihood, it beginning again as soon as Sir William's back was turned.

Sect. 11. My eighth Query belongs to this Section, and to fome part of the former, namely, Whether when the Drumming was, and the Candle put out, and the Chairs removed, the out-doors of the house were lockt, so that none might escape out. Tø which it is answered, They were lockt, and Sir William kept the Keys. Which indeed was every night done, as was noted in the fixth Section. And therefore it is incredible that any man would , adventure to make such a thundering noise on the Wainscoat doors. imitating the various beating of Drums, or do any other discoverable Feats in so numerous a Family where there were so many to find bim and apprehend him, and the doors shut upon him, and that he could make no elsape. To which you may add, that the Dogs were never observed to bark at any of these disturbances as most of the Family affirm, all of them that never above once (which is a thing observed also in the Story of the Devil of Maschon) and yet the noife was external, all the Family, and other Watchers hearing it alike.

These were my main Queries upon this Narrative, and I must profess that I am abundantly satisfied in the Answers to them. Nor will I omit what will reach farther than to these Queries. For I am affured from the same hand, that Sir William being a person naturally incredulous of such things, and impatient of being imposed upon, used all possible care and diligence to detect the Impossive, if there had been any, and this will reach to more particulars than I could propose by way of Query. Which hitherto has been only touching matter of Fast. But I was also so curious as to ask what Witness there were besides those of Sir William's Family, which amount to about Twenty, and I was informed that most of his Tenants by turns watching there, could witness to the fame matters. And And there were at least forty Persons that were Eye-witness, or rather Ear-witness, the distinbance being by Noiles, not Apparitions properly so called, and most of the Servants are still in Sir William's Family, that were there in the time of the disturbunce. So that if any one have the curiosity to enquire of the truth of the business, he may easily get full satisfaction in the Parish of Leffingham.

My last Query was, Whether any one was suspected to be the cause of these disturbances, and upon what occasion. But the answer was prudent and Christian, That there might be some perfon suspected, but the proof being not full, he was unwilling to lay so heavy a charge on any one. Nor is that much to my purpose, unless the party suspected should prove the Cobler, that Alice Medcalfe's flaxen hair'd Visitant affirmed to her to be the Author of her troubles. For then the certainty of these disturbances in Sir William's house, of which there is so full and ample Testimony, would be a farther confirmation of those things that are said to have happened at William Medcalfe's, they both being as well from one hand as in one Parish.

But in the mean time these disturbances at Sir William York's having fuch clear and unexceptionable Evidence, that they were not the Feats of any Man, but the Freaks of some invisible Dæmon. my communicating this Narrative to the World, as it cannot but deferve thanks of the Reader, fo I hope it will obtain pardon of Sir William, that I have not concealed his Name, no more than fupprest the Story it felf, which would have been main without it. but have exhibited it in its due fulness for the conviction of this incredulous Age, and confounding of Saducism and Infidelity, without the least blemish to so worthy a Person. Who was so much under the protestion of the Almighty that this Demoniacal Power was notably limited and curbed, for a fmuch as it was observed that, unless it was in the Hall (and there was only a few Chairs) the difturbance was never in any Room that was furnified. And it was allo confined as to time; for unless it began at Eight, Nine or Ten of the Clock, it came not all that Night, and usually left off about Eleven or Twelve, there is only that Night excepted, when Mr. Brown was there. And lastly, when Sir William was in the greatest straits of all, Sect. 12. and intended to have his Wife and Children come up to London to him, and to difpose of his Father at Mr. Brown's at Horblin, to prevent that trouble, the disturbance quite ceased. But Sir William's Christian Faith and Courage in the midst of these disturbances, while they continued, was very eminent and conspicuous, and I know no injury done to him or any elfe in my transmitting the memory thereof to future Ages.

A Continuation

RELAT. VI.

A story of the marvelous condition of one Robert Churchman of Balsham, some six or seven Miles off from Cambridge, when he was inveigled in Quakerism, how strangely he was posselled by a Spirit that spoke within him, and used his Organs in despight of him, while he was in his Fits. And how he was recovered from his Error, and regained to the Church by the devotions and diligence of Dr. J. Templar, still Minister of that place, as it is set down in his Letter to a friend, which is as follows.

SIR,

Y O U R defire to be acquainted with fome paffages concerning the Quakers in this Town, oblight me to give you the following Account. At my first fettlement here, I found them very busie in enticing my people to a compliance with their perfuasions in Religion. This defign they did attempt to accomplifi by dispersing their Papers among them. Two of my Parishioners I had a particular eye upon, namely Robert Churchman and his Wife. They being Perfons of a very good life, and of a plentiful Eftate, I was under a fear that their departure from the Church might be a means to induce others to the fame practice. The first, in many discourfes I had with him, did manifest a very strong inclination to the Principles of the Quakers. The fecond was so far engaged, that the Quakers did commonly report, that a principle was wrought in her.

As I was one day in conference with the faid Robert Churchman, I defired him that when any of their Books came to his hand, he would do 'me the kindne's to bring them to me, that we might read them over together, affuring him of no unwillingnels in me to harken to whatloever thould appear reafonable. What I defired he performed not long after. When I had received the Paper into my hand, before I began to read, I fuggefted to him, that it would be convenient that the perion who had been the cause of his feducement thould be fent for, and hear what what was replied to the Contents, which he willingly confent-When the Quaker was come, one branch of our difed to. course was, Whether the Scripture is to be owned as a Rule, which the Quaker denyed, afferting, that the Rule was within them. After the expence of two or three hours in discourse about this and other matters, I defined Robert Churchman to take notice, that the Quakers did not own the Scriptures for their Rule. Which before this conference I had intimated to him, but found him unwilling to believe, It pleafed God fo far to blefs what was spoken, that the next time he met his Brother Thomas Churchman, he told him of what had paffed at my house, and that now he was affured that the Quakers did not acknowledge the Scripture for their Rule, and for his part, he would not be of that Religion which doth difown the Scripture in that particular.

Not long after, the Wife of the forementioned Quaker coming to his house to visit his Wife, he met her at the door, and told her the thould not come in, intimating that her vifit would make division betwixt them. After some Patley the guaker's Wife fpake unto him in these words, Thou wilt not believe except thou fee a Sign, and thou mayeft fee fome fuch. Within a few nights after Robert Churchman had a violent from upon the Room where he lay, when it was very calm in all other parts of the Town, and a Voice within him, as he was in bed, fpake to him, and bid him, Sing praifes, fing praifes, telling him, that he should fee the glory of the New Jerusalem, about which time a glimmering light appeared all about the Rocm. Toward the morning the Voice commanded him to go out of his Bed naked with his Wife and Children. They all standing upon the Floor the Spirit making use of his Tongue, bid them to lye down and put their Mouths in the duft, which they did accordingly, It likewife commanded him to go and call his Brother and Sifter, that they might see the New Fernsalem, to whom he went naked about half a Mile.

When he had delivered his Meffage, that which spake with-In him, charged him to denounce wrath against them, and dethare that Fire and Brimstone would fall upon them, as it did upon Sodom and Gomorrah, if they did not obey, and to he returned to his own house. Where, upon the Floor of a low Room, he stood naked about three or four hours. All that while he was acting in a very unufual manner; fometimes the Spirit within forced him to fing, fometimes to bark like a Dog. When his Brother and Sifter who followed him were very importunate with him to refift it, it bid him to kill them making use of these words. These my Exemies which would not that I hould fhould reign over them, bring them and flay them before my face: It made him to utter with great readinels many places of Scripture, which he had no knowledge of before. The drift of what was fpoken was to perfuade him to comply with the Quakers, and it named fome which live in the neighbouring Towns. About three or four hours being thus fpent, he came to himfelf and was able to give a perfect account of what had befallen him.

Several nights after, the fame trouble returned upon him. His Wife was tortured with extraordinary pains; the Children which lay in the Room complained that their Mouths were ftopped with Wool as they were in Bed. The diffurbance was fo great, that he had thoughts of leaving his house for a time, and made it his defire to be with meat mine. I prevailed with him not to be fo fudden in his removal, but to make fome farther trial. It pleased God upon a continuance with him in Prayer every day in the house, that he was at laft perfectly free from all moleftation. The Quakers hearing of his condition gave it out, that the Power of God would come upon him again, and that the Wound was but skinned over by the Prieft. Which made me the more importunate with him to keep close to the publick Service of God, and to have nothing to do with them or their Writings.

Which direction he followed till November 1661. and then perusing one of their Books, a little after upon the tenth day of that Month, his troubles returned. A voice within him began to speak to him after the former manner. The first Sentence which it uttered was, Ceafe thou from Man, whofe Breath is in his Noftrils. for wherein he is to be accounted. The defign which he difcerned that it did aim at was, to take him off from coming to the Church (where he had been that day) and from hearing the Word of God. It fuggested several other Scriptures in order to the perfuading of him to a compliance with the Quakers, and told him, that it would ftrive with him as the Angel did with Jacob until the breaking of the day, at which time it left him. The two next nights it gave him the fame moleftation, faying, It must be with him as it was with David, who gave no fleep to his eyes, nor flumber unto his eyc-lids, until he found a place for the Lord, an babitation for the mighty God of Jacob. Upon Wednesday at night he was very peremptory in his refifting of it. When it began to follicite him, he replyed, That he faw it was a Spirit of delufion, which he would not obey. Upon which the Spirit denounced a Curfe against him in these words, Go ye curfed into everlasting Fire, and fo left him with a very great heat in his body.

After

After this, he was in his own apprehension in a very comfortable condition, and while he was confidering what had happened, a Voice within him spake to him saying, That the Spirit which was before upon him was a Spirit of delution, but now the true Spirit of God was come into him. It acquainted him that the Doctrine of the Trinity was true, and that God had an Elect People, and that those whom the Father Elected. the Son hath redeemed, and whom Chrift Redeemeth, the Holy Ghoft Sanctifyeth, and told him that the Minister of the Town would farther instruct him about the truth of these things. Upon Thursday morning about break of day, it set him upon his Knees, as he was in Bed, and bid him farewel. The fame day it came upon him in the Field as he was going to, and coming from the Marker, and preffed upon him to believe that it was the good Spirit which he was acted with, which he ftill doubted of. One night that week amongst many Arguments which it ufed to that purpofe, it told him if he would not believe without a Sign, he might have what Sign he would. Upon that Robert Churchman defired, if it was a good Spirit, that a Wier-Candleftick which stood upon the Cup-board might be turned into Brass. Which the Spirit faid he would do. Presently there was a very unfavoury imell in the Room, like that of the Snuff of a Candle newly put out; but nothing elle was done towards the fulfilling of the Promife.

Upon the Lord's day following, he being at Church, it came upon him. When the Chapters were named, he turned to them in his Bible, but was not able to read. When the Pfalm was fung, he could not pronounce a fyllable. Upon Monday morning his Speech was wholly taken from him. When I came to him, and asked him how it was with him, he moved his head towards me, but was not able to speak; I waited an hour or two in the Room, hoping that his Speech might have returned unto him, and that I might have gained from him fome account of his condition. But finding no alteration, I defired those who were present to joyn with me in Prayer. As we were Praying. his Body with much violence was thrown out of Bed, and then with great vehemency he called to me to hold my Tongue. When Prayer was done, his Tongue was bound as before, till at last he broke out into these words, Thine is the Kingdom, Thine is the Kingdom; which he repeated, I believe above an hundred Sometimes he was forced into extreme laughter, iometimes. times into finging ; his hands were ufually imployed in beating his Breaft. All of us, who ftood by, could difcern unufual heavings in his body. This diftemper did continue towards the the Morning of the next Day, and then the Voice within him fignified to him, that it would leave him, bidding him to get upon his Knees in order to that end, which he did, and then prefently he had a perfect command of himself.

When I came to him, he gave me a fober Account of all the Paffages of the Day before, having a diffinct remembrance of what the Spirit forced him to do, and what was fpoken to him by those who stood by. In particular he told me, he was compelled to give me that diffurbance in Prayer, which I before mentioned, the Spirit using his Limbs and Tongue as it pleafed, contrary to the Inclination of his own Mind.

Upon the Thurfday following, the Spirit began to rage after its former manner, as I was at Prayer with him, it was very difcernable how it wrought upon his Body, forced him to grate his Teeth, and draw his Mouth awry. He told me after I had done, that it bid him to denounce Woe against me. It pleased God upon continuance in Prayer with him, at last to release him of all his Trouble, and so far to make it advantageous to him and his Wife, and some others, which were too much byassed with the Principles of the Quakers, that now they have a perfect dislike of that way, and do diligently attend upon the publick Service of God in the Parochial Church. Sir, You may be confident of the Truth of what is here related, by

Your affured Friend,

Balfham, Jan. 1. 1682.

THIS Story I thought fit to add to the former additional Stories, for these 3 Reasons. First, because I have all defirable Affurance of the Truth thereof, being personally acquainted this long time with the Party that wrote this Letter, whom I know to be a Learned, Pious, and Serious Person, and such as I am confident, would not for all the VVorld close his Letter so as he has, but that he delivers nothing but what he knew to be true, by such means as is intimated in the Letter it solf; that is, either by his own Experience, perience, or the Information of Robert Churchman, whom he knew to be a fingular honest Man, and utterly devoid of all Fraud and Guile. Moreover, the VVriter of this Letter is fo Modest, that he was always very backward from publishing it by it self, tho' it makes not a little to his Repute in the faithful and successful discharge of the Ministry. But this new occasion being offer'd, my Importunity obtained of him, that it might be published in this Collection of Stories of this nature, which now accordingly is done.

My second Reason is, because it is such a notable Example of that danger they put themselves in, who leave the true Church of Christ. (which has the Seal and Testimony of Christ, that it is for the main commensurate to his VV ord as the Church Universal was before the Apostafie, and the Reformed Churches are upon the rising of the Witneffes) to follow the feducing of any private Spirit, especially fuch as the Quakers were at the first, being drunk and intoxicated with Poyfon of Familism, which out of a Spirit of Saducism and Infidelity, believing no subsistence of the Soul of Christ after Death. antiquates all things belonging to his particular Person, as the Sacraments, Festivals, his Intercession, and Personal coming again to Judgment, &c. and makes nothing of any Christ but what is within Which is a perfect diffolution, or nulling of the True, Apous. Stolick, Christian Religion, which yet is to be Everlasting, according to the Prediction of Daniel.

And my third and last Reafon is, Becaufe this Story with others of Toldervey, Gilpin, James Naylor, and the like, will the better justifie that Sayrical Passage of Jos. Glanvil's Letter to me, wherein he calls Quakerism, The Sink of Folly and Madnels; which I conceive he doth, with an Eye to the former times of the Quakers. But that there is now a more tolerable estimate to be made of them, (the' forme fordid Badges of Familism still to flick to them; and indeed, all that remains ugly in them is such, the' they do not confider it) I shall note in my Advertisement on that Letter, which is as follows.

SECT. I.

His Answer to certain Questions and Queries touching the Stirs made by the Drummer of Tedworth.

Honoured Sir,

H E fcrupplous care you take in examining the Story of the Difturbance at Tedworth, is no more than becomes a Philosopher, and one that is not willing to be deceived, And without such a cautious and particular Inquiry, you could not answer the Murmurs and petty Evafions of wilful Unbelievers. * Those Objections you pickt up at Cambrige, have the ill Fortune to miscarry in almost every Circumstance, and are in no likelihood of being believed but at a great distance. Some of them I could have answered upon mine own Knowledge; and concerning the rest I have made a strict inquiry of Mr. Mompession himself and others, when I was last in those Parts, and upon certain Information I give you this Account.

To the (1.) that faith, The Houfe is Rented, and that this is a device to beat down the value of it. I answer from his own Mouth, That the House is his own, and so the Foundation of this shift is overturned. The second, of those that say, It is a Trick to get Money from those that come to jee the Predigy, hath as as little Truth, but much more Maliee in the first Contrivers than the former, For this Gentleman being a Person of Estate. I am confident, fcorns to bale and to beggerly a Policy, and is fo far from making any advantage, that it hath done him very material prejudice in his Fortunes and Affairs. And those strangers that came to fee the Prodigy, ufe to leave nothing behind them, except Thanks for the Civility of their Entertainments. 'Tis true, (3.) as others fay, That the House is boarded without, at least a great part of it. But there are no Cellars, as the Objection adds, fave only under the Parlour, and the Difturbance was most in other Rooms. And whereas (4.) 'tis objected, That a Knight that offered to go down could not be permitted. 'Tis answered me. That the Gentleman might have gone down had he pleafed, and his Servant did, who made a careful fearch, but could find nothing that might be a caufe of the Noife, which he affirmed to be above, and that it proceeded not from the Cellar. And to difable what other Objectors fay, viz, (5,) That there was no Drumming in the midst of any Room, but only a striking on the Boards as it were with a Hammer in a corner of the outfides of the House. I fay, to null this pretence, Mr. Mompeffon and others affured me, that the Noife was oft in the midst of the Room, and oft over Head; and, he faith, That there is fcarce a Man or Child in the Village, but hath heard and can witnefs it. And after the first Month it was almost always within. Thus, Sir, to the Objections of others, which you have gathered, and to your own Queries I make this return.

Whereas you inquire, (1.) What part of the Childrens Bed did the Dæmon beat, and what noise did it make ? 'Tis answer'd, That it beat against the Head and Posts of the Bed, and that when Hands were laid on each fide of them, at those times they would shake as if they would fall in pieces, but nothing elfe could be perceived or felt. The noise was like to that of ftriking with a Hammer. And then, (2.) To that whether the Drummer's Drum was ever looked on while it beat, or was it only in the dark. I am affured that it was feen while the noife was made upon it, both by the light of Fire and Candle. (3.) To the Query. What were the Boards that moved, by what Light was their motion feen, and by whom? Mr. Mompession answers, They were feen move forwards and backwards in the light of clear Day, before the Sun was fet, and by a whole House full of People. And whereas (4.) you ask, In what clearness of Light were the Chairs Seen walk about, and by what Witneffes? 'Tis anfwer'd, That they were feen to do fo by Candle-light, and by divers Persons.

As to what I was a Witness of my felf, I add these circumstances for the fatisfaction of your Queries: The Children were in Bed when the Scratching and Panting was, but I am sure did not contribute to those noises. I faw their Hands above the Cloaths during the Scraping, and fearched the place whence the noise came. To which I might add, That they were little harmless modest Girls, that could not well have been fufpected guilty of the confidence of fuch a juggle, had it been polfible they could have acted in it. For the Panting I am certain there was no Dog in the Bed, for I grafpt it with my Hand, and felt it in all parts, especially there where the original motion was. The Bed alfo was fearcht under, but no Dog, nor any Creature else could be found there. The Floor I said shook with the Panting fenfibly, and yet it was as ftrong and fubftantial an one, as ordinarily is feen. But the Children indeed did not feem to be much concerned, having been uled to those and ruder noifes, and there was Company in the Room to affure them.

SECT II.

The affected humour of Drollery, one cause of the misbelief of Witchcraft, Apparitions, and Spirits. And what shallow Souls the Drolling Humourists are in points that require a more searching Wit, and solid Judgment.

THUS Sir, I have briefly answered others Objections, and your Queries. And because I have an humour to say little more, I'll consider (what you know as well as any Man alive) the Reasons Men are so apt to cavil at this kindlof Relations, and are rather willing to believe any thing, than the Truth of such a Narrative. They are cheifly, I think, an affected humour of Drollery and Scoffing, and a worse cause, Atheisim,

For the first, The subject of Witches and Apparitions is an apt and ample occasion. And the Cheats of Impostures, the Conceils of Melancholy, the Credulity of Ignorance, the Tricks of Waggery, the 4 the more folemn Vanities of Superfitition, and the Tales of old Women, these are excellent Topicks for a frolick and wanton Fancy. And the defire the Humourist hath to be fome body, and to have a Name above those of common Apprehension, will be fure to actuate the fcoffing Vein; in the exercise of which, if he have quibled luckily, and made Folks laugh, he is encouraged to take all such occasions to prove himself a Wit, and to shew he had a pretty way to play the Fool. And when he hath wanton'd a while, and frolickly toyed in his affected Merriments, his Reason becomes an obedient Servant to his Fancy. He makes himself believe, (by those Arguments that at first were intended only to make him laugh) and in the end concludes in earnest, that there is neither Winch nor Apparition; and 'tis well if he ftop there.

Now thefe, Sir, are the Wits, (if we will believe them) and their Admirers take every Jeft for an Argument, and a loud Laugh upon an idle Tale of a Devil or a Witch, for a Demonfitration of the Non-existence of fuch Beings. And thus the Humour propagates, and Saducism is the Fashion. Nor is this all but by the same method, every thing that is sacred or ferious hrth been exposed; and both Government and Religion made the Objects of idle and fantastick Buffoonry.

* And must we call this Wit, Sir, I confels, there are few things that urge me more to Indignation, than to hear that Name, which deferves to fignifie better, to be fo injurioufly apply'd. Certainly Wit is not an odd Metaphor, or a lucky Simile. a VVild fetch, or unexpetted Inference, a mimick Action, or a pretty Knack in telling of a Tale, but it is a Faculty to dive into the depth of things, to find out their Caufes and Relatives. Confonancies and Difagreements, and to make fit, uleful, and unobvious Applications of their respective Relations and Dependencies. For which great and noble Exercises of the Mind. the Droll is the most unfit and incompetent Person in the World : and those that on this account affume the Prerogative of being the only Wits, are of all Men the most uncapable of being io. for that trivial and pedling way of Fancy and Humour, to which they are addicted, emafculates their Minds, and makes them Superficial, Flashy, and Fantastical, by imploying them upon Effeminacies, and little apifh Fooleries. And by these darking , Entertainments, of a too Fondly-indulg'd Fancy, the Mind is made incapable of serious and deep Reflections, which give it the nobleft and most valuable Improvements. So that I have obferved, that the Drolling Humourists, are for the most part remarkably defective in close Ratiocinations, and the worst in the World

World at Inference. Which is no wonder, fince Fancy is a defultory and roving Faculty, and when 'tis not under the Conduct of a fevere judgment, not able to keep it felf to a fteady and refolved Attention, much lefs to make coherent Chains of rational deduction. So that 'tis next to impossible for fuch Wiss as thefe, to arrive to more than a Knack of Scoffing at what they unnderstand not. And they are under almost an invincible Temptation of doing fo, by every thing that is too great for their Comprehension. For the Humour that acts them, is Proud and Affuming, and would not have any thing to be valued, of which it ielf is incapable, and therefore it depretiates all the Nobler and more Generous matters, which it hath very great reason to despair of, and endeavours by ridiculous and infolent Scorn to lift it felf above them.

And yet this prefumed Wit, which raifeth them to fuch an elevation in their own conceit, is but a young and boyilh Humour, and the very first Essays of juvenile Invention, are in these Exercises of Fancy, which the maturer Spirits out grow. For you know, Sir, our Senfes are the first Powers we exercise and indulge in our greeneft Years. From them by degrees our Imaginations grow up, and their actions and gratifications are the Pleasures and Entertainments of Youth, which is easie to observe in the little Flirts, Quibbles, and Tricks of Fancy, with which the younger Students in the Universities are fo much tickled and transported. But when Age and Experience ripens the Judgment, (which is the Faculty of floweft growth) we then flight this wantonness and toying of our Fancies, and apply our felves to purfuits that are more manly and concerning. And when the Judgment is come to its full exercise and pitch, and hath overcome and filenced the futilities and prejudices of Imagination, we are then, and not till then, grown into Manhood. And those that never arrive to this confistence, but spend their Age in fooling with their Fancies, they are yet Children, tho' they have grey Hairs, and are still Boys, though past their great Climacterical.

I confefs, Sir, I am not fo Cynical and fevere, but that I allow even to the more improved Genius's their relaxations and pleafant Intervals. And Sage Socrates himfelf fometimes rid the Boys Hobby-horfe. Fancy may be permitted its plaifance and in-offensive Raileries, fo long as they are governed by the Rules of Vertue, and a prudent Judgment. And no doubt God himfelf allows all our Powers and Faculties their innocent Gratifications. Yea, and I acknowledge a delightful prettinefs in the refukt of a managed and judicious Fancy, while it is employed in in exposing Vice, and conceited Follies, to deferved Scorn and Laughter.

But when Imagination is rampant, loofe, and ungoverned, when it knows no Bounds, and observes no Decorums, but shorts at random, and insolently flies at all things that are August and Venerable, its fallies are then vitious and detestable Excess; and those that are of this Humour, are but a fort of fleering Buffoons, that is, a better kind of Apes in the Judgment of the Wife, though Wits in their own.

SECT. III.

His just Reprehension of the quibling Debauches for their Irreverence toward Government and Religion. And what an abhorrence and antipathy they have against all Noble Theories of Philosophy, which are above the pitch of their weak Intellectuals.

B UT, Sir, I intimated a greater Charge against these quibling Debauches, viz. That they are the Enemies of Government and Religion, and shall prove it with this addition, that they are so of all the better forts of Knowledge.

* For Government, you know Sir, its Influence depends upon the Reverence its Rulers have from the People, and while they are Men, there will be milcarriages in publick Affairs and Managements of State And if all the Miftakes and Faults of the fupreme Minifters of Rule be tatled and aggravated among the Herd, the Government will thereby be expoled to the fcorns of the Rabble, and lofe a great part of its force with its Reverence. And in this it fuffers infinitely from the drolling Phantafticks, who blow in the Sores till they have rankled them with their malitious and poyfonous Breath, and fhoot Libels at the Government, till they have made deep Wounds in its Reputation and Reverence, and turned every Tongue into a Weapon of War againft it. Thus do thele Chams difcover their Fathers Nakednefs, and rejoice to publish the Shame of those. whose Failures and Infirmities, Loyalty, Prudence and Regard to the publick Quiet fhould oblige them to conceal.

Nor,

Nor, (2.) 'is Religion more beholden to them. For a Mind that uleth to whiffle up and down in the levities of Fancy, will find a very great Indisposition to the setious and solemn Exercises of Piety. And that will grow into an Aversation which will be fure to prompt the Humourist to take all occafions to expole it, fo that he quickly jefts at Scripture, and makes a mock of Sin, plays with eternal Flames, and fcoffs at those that fear them. As if the facred Oracles were but a Legend of idle Tales; and Sin but a Name, coined by Fancy and vain Fears; as if Hell were but a painted Fire, and the Religious a fort of timerous Fools that are afraid of Buggs. and the Imagery of Dreams: And if these are not yet the real Articles of their Creed, their extravagant Fancies, and vile Affections are like in a fort time to incline these impure Spirits to make them fo. And this fort of Wits are either Atheifts, or as great Prodigies of Folly, if they are not; fince to believe a God that made, fees, and will judge them, and to judge them, and to Scoff at that tremendous Majefty, before whom their Brother Wits below tremble, to think the Scriptures are the Inspirations of the God of Heaven, the Laws of Sculs, and grand Instruments of immortal Happiness, and yet to to Droll upon them, and to jeft with the Records of Eternity, to believe endless Torments, and everlasting Joys in the State immediately fucceeding these our short and uncertain Beings, and yet to fport with the Wrath of God, and to make Tricks at eternal Terrors, totalk trivially of beatifical Enjoyments, and to make as bold with Heaven, as they do with an imaginary Elyfium. Thefe, I fay, are Follies, thefe are degrees of Impudence; beyond all Aggravation, or poffibility of Expression, and did not fad Experience flew them, one would learce believe there were fuch prodigious Monsters in Nature. And to these things I add.

(3.) These idle Drollists have an utter Antipathy to all the braver and more generous kinds of Knowledge. For that they are perfectly indiposed for Philosophy, and all deep Refearches, I have faid fome things that may fuffice for Proof already. And I add this Observation to confirm it, That among the numerous Youths I have feen bred in a great School; and in the Univerfiry, I have noted, that those of them who were most remarkable for Waggishnels and Jefting, feldom arrived to any great Maturities or Capacity for things of confequence and weight. And indeed, frolickhels of Fancy, and folidity of Judgment, require dispositions of Brain that are very different, and such as feldom meet in great degrees, but in some very few extraordinary Tempers:

Gg

Tempers: But generally, I believe the Droll is very unfit for matters of fublimity and fubltance, and therefore, as I intimated, endeavours by his Scoffs and injuries to make them appear as much below his ferious notice, as they are indeed above his reach, and in this Defign he hath many great advantages for his abules. For the Pedantry of Difputers that make a loud claim to Knowledge, the Vanity of the extravagant fort of Chymifts, the fond Boafts of fome bold Pretenders to Philosophy and Experiment, the ftrangeness of things that foberer Inquifitors declare practicable, but have not yet fucceeded, the meanness and feeming contemptibleness of many subjects, the Experimenter is often obliged to deal in, these afford plausible Arguments for Drolling Harangues, and those advantages are taken to make the most useful Theories and Endeavours appear ridiculous and vain.

And for the Encouragement of the Phantastick in his infolent Humour of injuffice and abuse, there is a certain Envy in Mankind against those that attempt any thing extraordinary, which makes Men willing to embrace and applaud that which exposeth what themselves cannot act nor comprehend, by reafon of which ill Nature in the generality, yea even of those that pretend to fomething, this kind of Wit becomes the most pestilent Enemy to Knowledge, and its improvements, especially to Philofophick Wildom. For Philofophy can fhame and difable all the Reasons that can be urged against it, but Jefts and loud Laughter are not to be confuted, and yet these are of more force to degrade a thing in the efteem of fome fort of Spirits. than the most porent Demonstrations. And the mischief of it is, that these Quiblers and Buffoons that have some little scraps of Learning matcht with a great proportion of Confidence, have commonly the luck to be celebrated among the Vulgar, for Men of great Parts and Knowledge, and that Opinion of them gains credit to their Infolencies and Abufes.

But, Sir, I perceive my Zeal against those Pedlers of Wir, hath transported me to your Trouble. I therefore make an abrupt return to my other Reason mentioned of Mens disbelief of the Being of Witches and Apparitions, and that is:

SECT. IV.

Atheilm, another Caufe of disbelief of Apparitions and Spirits. With an Account of his Difcourfe with a profest Atheilt. And a touch on one special Caufe of the increase of Atheilm, viz. The placing Religion in Opinions.

(11.) A THEISM, the Folly of which accurfed Madnels, you Sir, have fo fully difcovered to the World in your incomparable Works, and fo throughly understand the Mysteries of that black Confpiracy against Heaven, that it would be fond for me to think to suggest any Notion on the Subject which you could not teach. But Sir, I have a Relation about this matter to make you, which I believe, you will not be unwilling to hear; and you shall have it, when I have taken notice, that there is a latent Atheism at the root of the Saducean Principle. For too many deny Witches, because they believe there are no Spirits, and they are fo persuaded, because they own no being in the World but Matter, and the results of Motion, and confequently can acknowledge nothing of a God.

It hath indeed been a Queftion, whether 'tis possible there should be such a Prodigy as a Speculative Atheist in Nature, and I could with it were to still. But alas! our Age and Experience hath ended the Difpute, and we need not learch the dark and barbarous corners of America, nor feck the Monster among the wild Men of the Defert, we have found him in times of Light, in a witty and civiliz'd Region, and in an Age of the greateft Knowledge and Improvements : He skulks not among the thickeft of the Woods, nor feeks Caverns for concealment, but braves the Sun, and appears in the clearest Day. And the Fool is not fo modeft as he was in the Days of the Royal Propher, to fay only in his Heart, There is no God. We know a bolder fort of Infidels, and I can fay, Sir, from a particular Experience, that there are those who deny the Existence of a Deity. I met with one fuch some Years fince in London, who confidently and without mincing, denied that there was any fuch Being, and bid me prove it. I wondred at the Boldnets, as well as the Impiety of his faying, and because I had a great Compassion for one in so deplorable a State, I resolv'd not to exalperate Ggz exalperate him by Paffion, hard Words, or damning Sentences but calmly and without feeming Emotion, Difcourfed the Bufinels with him. I granted him all I fafely or reasonably could, and all that might ferve my defign for his Conviction, before we began the close Engagement; that fo he might have less prejudice againft what was faid by one whom he might fee not to be of al narrow confined Judgment, and that I might not have the difadvantage of being put upon the impugning of Principles, which are plaufible by the great Names or Reasons of any eminent Philosophers, and that were not absolutely neceffary for the Defence of the Proposition for which I undertook.

* Such were the Platonick Anima Mundi, the Eternity and Immenfity of the World, which, Sir, though I should not affirm, yet I would not at that time deny, but quietly granted them as Hypotheses, being willing to permit his belief of these in order to the convincing and disabusing him in his main and deadly Conclusion. And by those Concessions I gain'd the advantages I expected. For hereby he was difappointed of all those Plaufibilities which I perceived he was wont to urge for those Doctrines. And I faw that when he was preft with the neceffity of a Caule of all things, and a First, his Refuge was that old Epicurean one, of an eternal infinite Matter, which when his unwary Oppofites would attempt to difprove by endeavouring to demonstrate the Beginning and Finiteness of the World, they gave him the opportunity of a colourable Defence, and diverted him from the main Thefis, which might be evinced though the Immenfity and Eternity of the Universe were granted; and to they let him go from an Affertion that is most impious and abfurd, to another which is tolerably accountable and specious. And the Conclusion would be at last, that fince the Undertaker could not prove the World was not Infinite and Eternal, he could not make it appear that there was a God. By which procedure the Arguer falls from a Proposition which is the most demonstrable one in Nature, to another which cannot be cleared but by fuppofing the main thing in Queftion.

But befides this thift, which my Conceffion made infignificant: when my Atheift was urged with the Order, Harmony, Contrivance, and Wildom that is vifible in the Creatures, he would betake him to his Anima Mundi, the Exiftence of which, when those other Antagonists he had dealt with would endeavour to overthrow, then they took a thing of harder probation than the main Conclusion.

I fay therefore. Sir, I permitted him to affume these Principles, and then proved, That though the World were Immense and and Eternal, yet, That 'tis not possible meer blind unguided Matter should shuffle it felf into such regular. and accurate Productions as we fee are the Refults of every Day, without Manuduction of some Knowing Agent and Contriver, as you have fully made good in your excellent Antidote. And when he at this turn took fanctuary in an Anima Mundi, as the Cause of all the art and exactness in Nature, I granted him the Being; but askt him, whether he took it for a Substance that was Intelligent or devoided of Reason and Perception, When he feemed to incline to this latter, I fhew'd him that fuch a Principle as had no fense or knowledge fignified no more to this purpole, than if he had fluck in the Hypothefis of meer Matter and Motion. But when he allowed his great Soul to be an Intellectual Being, as he at last did, and that it was Immense and Eternal, (as he was forced to do by his Affertion; that this Soul was diffused through the whole Mais of his Infinite and Eternal Matter) I shewed him, that in effect he was brought by his own Principles to the acknowledgment of a God, though he gave him another Name.

Thus, Sir, I purfued my Infidel into all his Starting-holes and Retreats, and drive him from one Aflertion to another, its contradictory; and then back again upon the Thefis. and fo up and down till at length he began to be ashamed of his shuffling, and confest, that I had faid to him more than he had heard, and fome things that he would confider. He defired that I would give him the Substance of my Discourse in Writing, which I prepared for him, and thall perhaps ere long give an account of these and other dependant Matters to the Publick.

After the heat of the Engagement was over, I was willing to learn by what means he came into that desperate Infidelity, and underftood from him, * That he had run through the feveral Stages of Modern Sects, not stopping till he came down that Sink of Folly and Madnels Quakerifm, and thence made a ftep into Athei/m, which is no great leap; for East and Weft at long run meet and are the fame. And certainly he that places his Religion in Opinions, and judgeth it now to lie in this form of Belief, and then in another, when he comes to confider the vaft variety of Sects, the confidence of each in his own Reasonings, the pretences of all to the Scripture Reasoning and Antiquity, the Antipathy they have one against another, and the doubtfulnels, if not fallhood, of things that each of them hold facred and certain; I fay, he that takes Religion to be an adherence to Selts and Opinions, upon the accounts accounts mention'd, when he reflects, is in mighty danger of being an Atheist. And except he fix at last upon the few plain acknowledged Effentials of Belief and good Life, (if he be of an Anxious Inquifitive Mind, and not obstinately refolved in the way of his particular Sect) tis a Miracle if he ends not there at last. For he having establisht this, That Religion confifts in the way or form of fome Party or other, and then having fucceffively deferted those Sects that had most of his Fayour and Affection, and fo paft from one to another through all the steps of Descent, when at length he is faln out with the laft, he hath nothing elfe to flie to but contempt of all Religion as a meer Juggle and Imposture. This I took to be this Gentleman's Cafe, and I believe much of the general Atheilm of our Days is to be afcribed 'to this Caule.

Thus, Sir, I have followed the humour of Writing, as it led me, and expect your pardon of this Ramble upon the account of that liberty which uses to be allowed in Intercourles of this Nature, and more from that Friendship with which you are pleafed to honour,

SIR,

Your Affectionate Humble Servant.

HIS Letter was left out in the former Edition, the Publister confining it to fewer Sheets, that there might be the more room left for Stories. But the forepart fo particularly fatisfying Objections and Queries touching the ftirs in Mr. Mompeffon's House, and the reft being to well levelled against Sadducifm and Atheifm (the routing of which is the fcope and defign defign of the whole Book) and it being written with that imartnels of Wit and foundnels of Judgment for the main, I thought fit to take it in again in this new Edition of Saducifmus Triumphatus, as a piece sufficiently congenerous thereto. And it is published unalteredly in every respect, unless in one Word that was rather French than English, and fo not fo cafie to pais with the vulgar. And now it is republished I think it not amifs to beftow fome few Advertisements on it, as has been done on feveral other pieces of this Book.

Sect. 1. Those Objections you pickt up, &c. Though the more perfect Narrative, in the last Edition, of the stirs of Tedworth, made this part of this Letter less necessary, yet if any one confider the particular fatisfaction here given to every Objection and Query, and compare it with the aforefaid Narrative, I believe he will confess it was worth the while to take it again, in this fecond Edition, this Letter omitted in the former.

Sect. 2. And must we call this Wit, Sir, &c. Certainly not Wildom, nor Wit in the utter Sense and meaning of the Word, as it fignifies a found and able Faculty of the Mind, whether natural or improved, to difcern and judge of things. But the Wit that is fo called now a days, is rather the Paralytick motions, or Antick Dances of that Faculty that is properly to be called Wit, then the genuine operations thereof, the demitting of that to meaner Offices, which God has given us for better And as J. G. phrases it, to turn Drolls and Fidlers purpofes. to the Atheist, to make his Worftip merry. Which is a very mean imployment for fo noble a Being as the Rational Soul of Man.

Sect. 3. For Government you know, Sir, &c. What the Writer of this Letter delivers in this Section, is worth the most ferious confideration of all Men, that are not fo well affected to Government as they ought to be. Whole Authority is certainly most Sacred, and their Rule, if it be tolerable, exceeding commendable, those in high Places having such strong Temprations from the flatteries and circumventions of cunning Parafites and forcible attempts of Things, whereby they are attacked daily, and too often drawn into miftakes before they be aware. Upon which, for others to infult, is a most falvage and inhumane thing, and quite contrary to the Law of Charity, which is the indifpentable Rule of a Chriftian, who cannot but think fuch demeanors as course and barbarous, as the sporting at a Man's breaking a Limb by a fall from an Horfe, or his being cast into some desperate fickness, Belide, that that to port at fuch things is to give themfelves the Lye; and when they would pretend them great and heinous mildemeanors, to acknowledge them more flight, elfe how could they be the due Object of Wit and Drollery. I repeat it again, and indeed I have often and often thought of it, that Princes and grand Ministers of State, that may feem to acquit themfelves tolerably well, do really acquit themfelves exceeding well, confidering the high Temptations they have, and are worthy of all Loyal Affection and Honour. How highly then are those Princes to be honoured, and fincerely loved, who rule well, and have a real tender regard to the peace and welfare of all their Subjects. The other two parts of this Section are penned down fo full and home, and with that brisknels and Judgment, that nothing can be added that may not feem fuperfluous.

Sect. 4. Such were the Platonick Anima Mundi, the Eternity and Immensity of the World, which, Sir, though I should not affirm, yet I would not at that time deny, &c. This passage is fet down with caution and difcretion, in that he professes these Conceffions were only ad hominem, and made to good ule of, that he caught his Adversary in his own Net, who being forced by dint of Argument to acknowledge that the Phœnomena of the World could not but be from a knowing Principle, but cafting it upon his Anima Mundi, to avoid the Profession of a Deity, by his granting, (because of the Eternity and Immensity of the Matter) this Anima to be immense and eternal, as well as knowing, he was forced to acknowledge, in a confiderable fort, a Deity whether he would or no. Better thus far than to be down right dull Atheist. But I must confels I do not hold any one an Orthodox Deift, that does not hold the Matter created of God, as well as contrived by his Wildom into fuch Phanomena as appear in the World.

Befides he might have puzzled and confounded the Atheiff in demonstrating that the World (being an orderly continuance of things in fucceflive motion and duration) could not be ab aterno. First, because it is plain and undeniable, that in fucceflive duration every Moment that is pass was some time present, and therefore, fince they all must be one after another, that all, at least but one, were sometime to come. Which plainly evinces the World could not be ab aterno. Again this is most certainly true, that be the World supposed as much ab aterno as you will, yet according to the order of Nature and Time, there was Life before there was any Death, and a Standing of Spirits before any Fall. He might here therefore demand of the Atheist how long it was ere any Death Death was, or Laple of any order of Beings to a worle State. Was it an infinity of time before that. And thirdly, and lastly, If there has been an eternal and infinite Succession of time till now, how come we to find our felves in Being. For if from us, suppose in the time B, backwards, the Succession is infinite, it is likewise infinite ab aterno, or from A to B. And, as he can never come in Succession to A, backward from B, Becaule it is infinite, fo Succeffion from A to B being alike infinite, it could never come to our turn to be in Being. Nothing but stable and unsuccessive duration can be infinite where there is nothing past, nor to come. From this eternal NUNC STANS, wherein there is nothing to come, and which it is impossible to be fueceffive (and therefore nothing by fuppofing it fucceffive can be really argued from it) doth fucceffive duration commence, which it is alike impoffible to be eternal or infinite.

Indeed if the Infinity was not in Succession, but once as infinite Space, I grant that we might be in a fet point of it, which would look like the term of suppose, its Eastern Infinity butting upon us, from Term you might conceive an infinite Line thence Eastward, and fuch as we nor any other moveable thing could get to the end of it, it being Infinite. And as certain it is, that no moveable thing which took its motion abfolutely from the Eastern Infinity, could ever come to us, or to the Point where we are, the length being as infinite forwards from the Eastern Infinity, as it is back again thitherward from us, there being the fame diftance, as Aristotle. somewhere speaks, from Thebes to Athens, and from Athens Which farther may illustrate the impoffibility of to Thebes, finding our felves here in Being, if the fucceffive duration of the World has been ab aterno. For it being as infinite from A to B. as from B to A. it is manifest it could never fall to our share to exist the time we do, it being an infinite distance from A and never to 'be run through. This point of the impoffibility of successive Durations being eternal or infinite, it is fufficient that I but touch on it here, I having to fully handled it in my Enchiridion Metaphyficum, and cleared it from all. Objections and Evafions whatfoever. See cap. 10. and the Scholia thereon. Where also you may fee how little Reason there is to hold the Matter of the World infinite, and that it is part of the Effential Sanctity and fingular Transcendency of the exalted nature of God, that He alone be Eternal as to Duration, and Immense in Amplitude,

And the fuffering God to be an Anima Mundi, though it ferved 7. G. his turn at that bour, yet this also is hugely against the Essential Sanctity of the Divine Majesty, whole excellency it is infinitely below, to grow as it were into one Suppositum with the visible World. Which error might be a main foundation or prop of much of the Idolatry of the There is no Anima Mundi, but what is ancient Pagans. purely a Creature, and that is the Spirit of Nature, fo far from being a God, that it fcarce has any Perception but only an Omniform Plastic power, or Vital Laws of ordering the Matter of the World, imparted to it effentially from the Wildom of God. To call this an Anima Mundi, may be fenle good enough. But the Platonick Osia Juxi, or Anima Divina, which answers to the Holy Spirit in our Christian Trinity, they are the third Hypoftases of the pure Deity in both, of an eternal, necessary, and immutable effence and existence, and therefore in no wife are creatural, but purely Divine, and were before ever the World was or could be.

And now the World is, there is no need of any Hypoftatical Union betwixt the Platonick Divine Soul, and it, to be confcious of what things happen here, or to moderate the Matter of the World. For the latter is done by the Spirit of Nature, and the former requires no fuch Union, fince we our felves have the perception of what is no part of our own Suppofitum. But as we fee things reflected from a Looking-glafs, our Eye having no Hypoftatical Union therewith, fo are all the Energies of this exterior Creation reflected into the perception of the Deity, without any fuch derogatory Union of the God head therewith. According as is expressed in Pfjchozoia, Cant. 1. Stanz. 50,

In this clear shining Mirrour Pfyche sees All that falls under sense, what ere is done Upon the Earth, the Deferts, shaken Trees, The mournful Winds, the solitary wonne Of dreaded Beasts, the Libyan Lions moan, When their hot Entrails scorch with hunger keen, And they to God for Meat do deeply groan, He hears their cry, he sees of them unseen, His Eyes encompass all that in the wide World been.

Drollery and Atheism.

He fees the weary Traveller fit down In the waft Field oftimes with careful cheer. His chafed Feet and the long way to Town His burning thirft, faintneß and Panick fear Becaufe he fees not Him that stands fo near, Fetch from his Soul deep fighs with count nance fad, But He looks on to whom naught doth diffear. O happy Man that full perfwafion had Of this, if right at home nought of him were ydrad.

And then again, Stanz. 54. is there more expresly mention of this Mirrour, even for the representing of Sounds to set out the perfectness of these exteriour perceptions in the Divine Nature, that they are rather active than passive, as Scaliger fays the Sight is, though other Senses be not. Whence $\delta C \delta v$ fignifying transitively, governs an Accusative Case, when other Verbs of sense govern a Genitive, as he is pleased to Criticize. But the abovesaid Stanza is this.

Do not I fee? I flumber not nor fleep, Do not I hear, each noife by fhady Night My Mirrour reprefents, when Mortals fteep Their languid Limbs in Morpheus dull delight, I hear fuch founds as Adam's brood would fright. The doleful Eccho's from the hollow Hill

Mock howling Wolves, the Woods with black benight

Answer rough Pan his Pipe, and eke his skill

And all the Satyr-routs rude whoops and shoutings shrill.

According to that in the Bock of Wildom, chap. 1. v. 7. For the Spirit of the Lord fills the whole World, and he that containeth all things, hath knowledge of the Voice.

For as it is the height of the Excellency of the Divine Effence and Energy, not only to be infinite in it felf, but also to be able to create another Effence with its Energy, diffinit from it felf, fuch as this orderly Universe is, so is it likewise the Perfection of the Divine Knowledge, besides that Intellectual Omnifciency, which contains all the Natures and Ideas of things, and the whole comprehension of Providence, with the Series thereof from everlasting to everlasting all at once, unalterably and immoveably; which Intellectual Life, or Energy in God, is the Aidy of the Platonists, and the true Notion of Eternity; I fay, it is likewise the Perfection of the Divine Knowledge to have have the Perception of all the Energies of the Creation as well when they are in fieri, and that they are now in fieri, when they were not before, as in that Intellectual comprehension which is at once from everlasting to everlasting. For in an infinite Life as God is, there can be no distraction, his animadversion necessiarily being infinite. And if we do not give this exterior Perception to him, we cannot be assure that he knows when we pray unto him. Which methinks would be a foul defect, and a great damp to our Devotion. Whenas the other opinion does not only encourage Devotion, but naturally strikes also a due awe and reverence towards him in our Addreffes.

I know there are fome dry Contemplators that would have God to have no new Perceptions, pro re nata, leaft he might feem in a Physical sense alterable or mutable. But these are the very Cobwebs and Quisquilize of the Schools, who thinned and fpread every Attribute of God as to infinite excefs as they could, forgetting that one neceffary Measure of all his Attributes, That they be no further applied to him then they imply perfection. Which is a thing worth our most ferious confideration. And certainly it would be an Imperfection in God if he knew not things paft that they are past, things present that they are present, and things to come that they are yet to come. But he could not know them to be past when they were to come to or to be prefent when they are to come or past, or that they are yet to come when they are present. And therefore you must either make God ignorant of things here below, or make his exterior Perceptions change as the Scene of things change ad extra, or elle his Perceptions will prove falfe, which is intolerable to admit either in Philosophy or Theology. Thus I have run out before I was aware, but I hope it is not an ulelefs excursion. For nothing can move a man more to do all things with all Faithfulness and Decorum both in private and before Men than to remember that the All-prefent God is really a Hearer of his Words, and Seer of his Actions.

That he had run through the feweral Stages of modern Sells, not stopping till be came down to that fink of folly and madnels Quakerifm, and thence made a ftep into Atheifm, &c. This is a remarkable passage of his Letter, and worth our confidering. I must confess that his expression here of the condition of Quakerism is very sharp and Satyrical, to call it that fink of Madnels and Folly, Which therefore I conceive he spake with an eye to their first appearance, which was very uncouth and frantick, and not at all like the appearance of the Apostles of Jesus Christ, but as it were of so many Demoniacks. Which Scene, though stope, being so unpleasant, I will not repeat here, having spoke enough enough of it in my Mystery of Godlines, lib. 4. cap. 6 and lib. 10. cap. 13. And the precedent Story of him at Belfham that was inveigled in Quakerism is of the same suit. But to deal impartially rouching them, if we take our measures from Robert Barklays Apology, which reprefents them as they were when he wrote, which is not paffing five or fix years ago, they are very much changed from what they were first, for the better. and a most just and impartial estimate I have made of them, and of their way, in my Scholia upon my Divine Dialogues Dialog. 5. Sect. 15. Which he that is curious, may perule in, the fecond Tome of my Volumen Philosophicum. But that Apology of R. Barkelays was many years after this Letter of Foleph Glanvil to my felf, which may the better excuse him for the leverity of this paffage. And how natural and an eafie a ftep there is out of Enthufiasm into Atheism, I have noted in my Enthusias Triumphatus.

But of what danger it is to forlake the Communion of the Truly Catholick Church, fuch as is purged from the gross dregs of Antichriftian Superfitition and Idolatry, the example of him at Balfham and this Atheist, whom 7. G. conversed with, are egregious Inftances. To forfake the fentiments of the ancient Apostolick Church (for such are the Reformed Chutches freed from the filth of the predicted Apoltafie, and fuch in a special manner is the Church of England) to follow any private Spirit is fuch a piece of folly and giddinels, that the extravagance thereof is above expression, and the danger so obvious, that they must be very blind and stupid that differn it not at first fight. All are not born to be Philosophers or Theologers, and to have a faculty to decide Controverfies by the edge of their own Wit and Reason. Wherefore it is both duty and fafety to adhere to the fense of the Church Catholick before the Apoltafie, such as ir was for about Four hundred years after Chrift. Within which time the Divinity of Christ, and the Triunity of the Godhead was professed as publick Articles of the Church, and the diffinition of Bifhops and Presbyters owned. Whence it is demonstrable how innocent the one is, and how Orthodox the other. For if the Articles of the Divinity of Christ and Triunity of the Godbead were falfe, they had also been Idolatrous, and the Apostafie had begun much fooner than it is predicted to begin in that admirable Book of Prophesies the Apocalyple. Nor were the late Reformation, which yet certainly it is (and I have undeniably demonstrated it in the Second Part of my Appendage to my Exposition of Daniel's Visions) the Rising of the Witness. For they had been strange Witnesses that should still profess the Divinity of of Chrift. and Triunity of the Godhead, if those Articles were falle, fince it neceffarily follows that they were ipfo facto, grofly Idolatrous; or retained Epifcopacy if it had been Antichristian, These things are so exceeding plain, that no man can deny them that has parts and leisure, and without prejudice confiders them. And if the Sectaries that pretend so much to the Spirie above others, had the Spirit of interpreting and understanding Prophecies aright, it would convince them of their Error and Schist. But if this slowly goes down with them, they are to examine themselves, if it be not an humour in them to deny any such Symmetral times of the Church, for about Four hundred years, that they may still find matter for eternal Cavils and Schisms.

But now the main Articles of our Faith being thus redoubledly affured to us, both by the Symmetricalnefs of the Primitive Times for about Four hundred years, and the Teftimonies of the Rifen Witneffes, of which Political Refurrection neither Quaker, Familift, nor Socinian partook of, as appears by the Harmony of Confeffions of the Reformed Churches, no Reformed Church owning their opinions, how juft, how 10ber and Chriftian a thing is it for every private Man to adhere to this common Faith touching thele main Articles, and not to commit himfelf to these Ignes Fatui of private Spirits, which may lead him fo about as at laft to plunge him into the dregs of Atheism as it happened to this Gentleman?

That Spirit which leads from the Communion of the Ancient Apostolick Church (which is as a light fet upon an Hill and fo certainly to be known by those two Characters abovementioned) and carries Men into the dark holes of Schifmatical Conventicles, is most affuredly, let them pretend to what they will, the Spirit of Errour, and a delufion of the Devil, and a certain Symptome that fuch Men are Carnal, as highly as they think of themselves, having not the Spirit, most affuredly having not the Spirit in that measure whereby they become fuch living Members of the true Catholick Church, which is the Body of Christian that they plainly feel what hurts it, at leaft what palpably ftops its growth, what wounds it, what hazards the very life and being of it. Can they pretend to the Spirit of Chrift in any due measure that are devoid of this necessary Sympathy and Sense of the common good of his Body, and the Interest of his Kingdom which is Christendom. The enemies whereof what do they defire? what do they endeavour more than to divide and fubdivide us? to hurry us into opinions and practiles as unlike the arcient Apostolick Church as may be; to make us appear as whimwhimfical and ungovernable as they can, thereby to expose us to contempt and loathing, and to harden the hearts of the Princes and Prelates of Christendem against a just Reformation, and those that have Reformed, to make them half fick and weary of the Reformation, by reason of the unsetledness and distraction of the peoples. Does the Spirit of Christ them lean to the destroying and laying waste his own Church and Kingdom? Certainly that Spirit that hinders the growth, and hazards the Being of the Kingdom of Christ, must be not the Spirit of God, but the Spirit of Giddiness, of Error and Delusion.

Wherefore the ancient Authority of the Church, while it was Symmetral, is to be acknowledged, and those main points touching Faith and Worship to be adher'd to, and professed; the Holy Ghost having set his Seal thereto in those Divine Prophecies of the Apocalypse, and this detestable Pride and loathiom Ingratitude (whenas things are so well settled by Lawful Authority in the late Rising of the Witnesses) thus to break from so Authentick a Constitution, and set up Schismatical Congregations, is heartily to be repented of, nor are we any longer to be deluded by that falle Spirit that under pretence of bringing in a more pure and Spiritual Dispensation, undermines and hazzards the very Being of the true Kingdom of Christ, by this odious' Spectacle of Multifarious Schism,

It is not the breath of any meer Man that can convey the Spirit of God to us and it is a falle pretence of these high-flown Spiritualists, that think that in their Shismatical Worthip they have nearer communion with God, than those that adhere to the way of the Ancient Apostolick Faith and Practice. For they in their Meeting are but taught by Men, and those speaking the fense of a Private Spirit, they being Straglers from the Fold of Chrift, as having bid adieu to the Ancient Catholick and Apoltolick Church, Of which yet the Church of England, which they have forfaken, is a genuine part, and therefore its Ministry more fafe and authoritative, they fpeaking the fense of the ancient Apoftolick Church, not any blind conceits or fancies of their own. And faving operations of the Spirit, nothing is more inculcated than that in our Puplick Service. Nor is the Ministry of Man io much the conveyer of it, as the Sincerity of the Party, who defires to partake of it. It is the gift of Chrift to the Sincere, who has told us from his own Mouth here upon Earth; That bleffed are they that hunger and thirst after Righteoufness, for they [hall be (atisfied; - lent or Vocal, of a company of fullen Melancholift or Histrionical Mock-Prophets, but a firm and unshaken Faith in the Power of the promifed Spirit of Christ, for the fubduing our Corruptions, a fixt and continued refolution of not offending the God of Heaven in any thing small or great, a close guard upon our Words and Actions, as having a fense of the Presence of the Divine Majefty all the day long, a perpetual exercise of mortifying the Impetuofities of our own Will, and of extinguishing all the fweet Relishes of Self-interest and Vain-glory, and a conftant endeavour of wholly refigning our felves to God and his fervice, who has wholly made us Body and Soul, and fricktly and confcientioufly walking according to His Will revealed in his written Word, that is the method of attaining to a more near Communion with God, and the only way of more fully participating of his Spirit. And this certainly may as well be done, holding still communion with the Church of England, as in any new-fangled way that either the cunning of Man or fubtility of Satan can invent. And therefore it is rather a wanton kind of Hypocrifie in Men, or Infincarity to true Religion indeed, that makes them break from the Establish Religon of the Church of England reformed according to the old Symmetral and Apostolical Patern, than any colour of neceffity driving them thereto.

It is not the hearing of a gracious Man once or twice a Week, or being prefers iometime in the Meetings, whether Silene

And thus much briefly to those high flown Spiritualist. But what I now shall utter is still more weighty, forasmuch as it concerns a greater number of Men, that have an honeft inclination to Religion, but their Education, Parts, and Calling does not capacitate them to make fo firick inquiry into the Doctrines thereof, as others may make, but feek fome External Authority to support their Faith, and thereby lie obnoxious to the folicitations of the Emissaries of Rome who boast fo much in the lafe Anchorage of their Church. То these Men therefore I appeal, what can be more safe for them to adhere to the Authority and Profession of the Ancient Apostolick and truly Catholick Church, fuch as it was found before the Apostacy, and is born withels to in the Oraeles of the Holy Scripture, as I have above declared ; To adhear, I lay, and keep close to this fleady Rock, and ftop their Ears against the vain pretences of any idle Fanatical New-lights, or bold Enthusiasts. Now he that adheres to the Church of England, does adhere to this ancient Apoftolick Church, the Church of England being reformed to that Patern, as to the Frame of Government and Articles of Faith, and for the Precepts of an holy Life, befides what occurs in our Liturgy, Litany tany, and Catechi/m, they are fo plain in the Scripture, and fo fully and effectually declared by those of our own Church in Printed Sermons, and feveral other Writings, to fay nothing of the good Preaching up and down, and no well-minded Christian can want any due Instruction.

/ This is a Confideration the best accommodate that I know to keep us all in one, which is to acknowledge the Authority and Undeceivedness in matters of any moment, though not Undeceivableneß or Infallibility of the ancient Catholick Church, before the Apoftacy came in. Which true and just ground will give us all the advantages and more, than that falle Boaft of the Roman Church, as if the forfooth were Infalliable, and herefore Irrefragable. Whenas that one Tenent of Tranfub-Antiation alone, sufficiently demonstrates it to be a shameles Pretence, that Doctrine being plainly a Fardel of Impeffibilities and Contradictions, to fay nothing of their infinite Superstitions, Impostures, and gross Idolatries, and barbarous and bloody Perfecutions, and Murders for not submitting to them, So that the is a Church all over befmear'd with Sordidly-gainful Superfitions, Idolatries, and Blood, And therefore the being deprehended to grofly and enormously Erroneous or Imposturous and Deceitful, and supporting all her impious Opinions upon that lingle pretence of her Infallibility, the has manifeltly forfeited her Credit before all the World, and most justly lost her Authority, that no Man can, unless he bewitcht, lean upon this broken Reed of Egyyt, which is a Fictitious and certainly fafe pretence to Infallibility by an apostatized Church, shamelesly obtruding upon those they can deceive, all the abominations that are declared against in Daniel and the Apocalyp/e, where the Visions represent the state of those times into which this grand Apoltaly fell. What blindness therefore or madness is it in any Man to repose himself on the Authority of such a Church. God open the Eyes of all Men that mean fincerely in Religion, that they never fall into fuch a foul Ditch as this. But the Church of England keeping to the ancient Symmetral Church, to whom the Divine Oracles bear witnets, is in truth infallible in the main points above mentioned, and in all things elfe material to Salvation, and therefore all forts of People learned and unlearned may fafely embolom themfelves in her fo long as the continues fuch, which I with may be for ever.

In the mean time we fee what a mighty advantage it would be if that, as our own Church in particular, so all the Reformid Churches would jointly exhibit the fame unexceptionable Patern

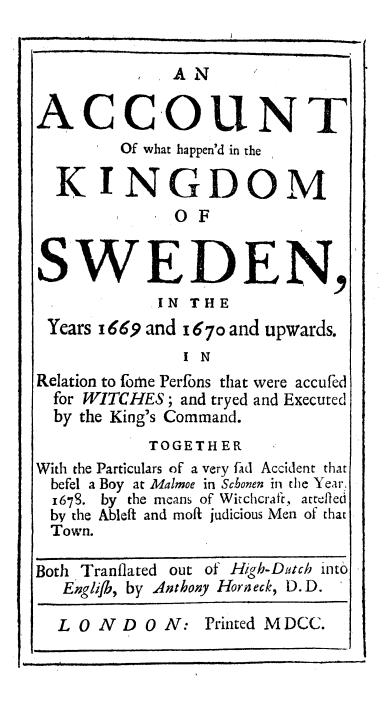

Patern of Antiquity to be followed that bears a just Authority with it, which the generality of Men may fafely rely on, and that Independency and the Guidance of private Spirits feducing, Men from the National Churches fram'd to that ancient Platform. were quite out of fashion in all Reformed Christendom, and that all Men with alacrity of Mind and fincerely loyal Affections would fhew themselves morigerous to their Supreme Governours. For this is the only effectual and warrantable way that I can conceive for the enlarging the Kingdom of our Lord Fefus, and the over-throwing the Dominion of Antichrift. The other Scene of things, as I noted above, hardens the Hearts of the Princes and Prelates of Christendom, who cannot but think it a forry Exchange to except of Presbytery, which would prove but a Democratical Papacy, for the Order of Episcopacy, or a difmal Spectacle, to iee the Body of Chrift mouldered into an infinity of Sects and Schilms, as a dead Carcals diffolved into a multitude of crawling Worms, and the decent Grandeur and Splendour of the Church to dwindle into difperfed companies of obscure Conventicles, and the just and honourable Revenues of it, to thrink into the poor Arbitrarious Pittancies of either the appointment of the State, or uncertain Benevolence of the Fickle People. That Scene of things, I fay, cannot but harden their Hearts against listening to never so just a Reformation for the further enlargement of Chrift's Kingdom, and hazzard the very Being of the Reformed Churches. Whenas this way, which I wish may obtain, would filence Atheism and Equaticism at once, and be the readiest means of bringing on those happy times of the Church which God has promifed and predicted by the Mouth of his holy Prophets.

But this is the groß Iniquity and Madness of the Sectaries, that they think fo goodly and choicely every one of their own Party, that they think it worth the while to hazard the fafety of Reformed Christendom to support any how, and keep up for the prefent, the small freaks and conceits of their own self-chofen Way and Sect. Than which nothing can be conceived more enormous and outragious amongst the dealings of the Sons of Men, to bring into imminent danger fo folemn and facrofanct a Constitution as the Reformation, for the dreams and opinions of private Spirits, which no fober Christian would hazard for small indifferent dispensable things, though they had the ftamp of publick allowance upon them, which it is, and ought to be, in the hand of the Sovereign Power to alter for the common good. And verily this Fanatical diffemper is fo heinous and abominable, that they that are on the right fide, ought tO to take heed how in the leaft flew they imitate it. For a Man may be fattioufly affected even in a right caufe, and bear an over-proportionated zeal for things of fmaller concern, out of an over-heightned Animofity against the prefent Sects, to the hazarding of the quiet fettlement of the Whole. And, if any one be fo affected, I appeal to the fober, if he may not juftly be reputed to play the Sectarian himfelf, though it be against the Sectaries. No fuch Cure for our Breaches and Wounds as the most profound Humility in all Parties, and unfeigned mutual Love and Charity. Of which Virtues or Graces whofoever is found defitute, let him call himfelf (of whatever denomination) Christian, as loud as he pleafe, he has really in him not one spark of (aving Christianity.

Thus have I run out out again farther than I was aware of, one thing drawing on another. But I hope I have hit on fome things, which if ferioufly confidered and duly improved by those that are most concerned, may contribute their share, to the peace and settlement of the Church of Christ, which should be the aim and desire of us all.

The Translator's PREFACE TOTHE

SHEWING

What Credit may be given to the Matter of Fa& related in the enfuing Narrative.

Hat we are to believe nothing, but what we have feen, is a Rule so false, that we dare not call our selves rational Creatures, and avouch it; yet as irrational as the Maxim is, 'tis become modifh with some Men, and those no very mean Wits neither, to make use of it; and though they will hardly own it in its full Latitude, yet when it comes to Particulars, let the Reason to the contrary be never so pregnant or convincing, they'll hugg it as their facred Anchor, and laugh at all those credulous VV retches, that without seing, are so easily chous'd into an imprudent Confidence. And this pittiful Stratagem we find practifed in no affair so much as that of Spirits and Witches, and Apparitions, which must all be Fancies, and Hypocondriack Dreams, and the effects of diftempered Brains, because their own are so dull as not to be able to pierce into those Mysteries. I do not deny but the Imagination may be, and is fometime deluded; and melancholy People may Fancy they hear Voices, and see very strange things Hh4 things, which have no other foundation but their own weakneß, and like Bubbles break into Air, and nothing, by their own vanity.

Yet as no Man doth therefore take unpolisht Diamonds to be Pebbles, becaufe they do look like them, so neither must all passages of this Nature, we hear or read of, be traduced as felf conceited, or derided as Old Wive's Fables, because some smell strong of Imposture and Sophistication. VVe believe Men of Reason and Experience, and free from Fumes, when a person of ordinary Intellectuals finils no great credit with us; and if we think our felves wife for fo doing, why should any Man fo much forget himself, as to be an infidel in ; point of such Phanomena's, when even the most judicious Men have bad experience of such Passages ? It seems to me no less than madness to contradict what both wife and unwife Men do unanimoully agree in; and how Jews, Heathens, Mahometans and Christians, both learned and unlearned, should come to conspire into this Cheat, as yet seems to me unaccountable. If some few melancholy Monks or old Women had seen such Ghosts and Apparitions, we might then suffect, that what they pretended to have seen might be nothing, but the effect of a difordered Imagination; but when the whole VV orld, as it were, and Men of all Religions, Men of all Ages too, have been forced by strong Evidences, to acknowledge the truth of fuch occurences, I know not what strength there can be in the Argument, drawn from the confent of Nations in things of a sublimer Nature, if here it be of no efficacy. Men that have attempted to evade the places of Scripture, which speak of Ghosts and Witches, we (ee, how they are forced to turn and wind the Texts, and make in a manner Noses of VVax of them, and rather Squeeze than gather the Senfe, as if the holy VV riters had fooke like Sophisters, and not like Men, who made it their busines to condescend to the capacity of the common People. Let a Man put no force at all on those Passages of Holy VVrit, and then try what Sense they are like to yield. It's strange to see, how some Men have endeavoured to elude the Story of the Witch of Endor; and as far as I can judge, play more Hocus Hocus pocus tricks in the explication of that palluge, than the VViteb of berfelf, did in raising the deceased Samuel. To those Straits is Falshood driven, while Truth loves Plain, and undifguised Expressions; and Errour will seek out Holes and Labyrinths to hide it self, while Truth plays above-board, and fcorns the subterfuges of the Sceptick Interpreter. Men and Brethren, why should it seem a thing incredible with you, that God should permit Spirits to appear, and the Devil to exert his Power among Men on Earth? Hath God ever engaged his VV ord to the contrary? Or is it against the nature of Spirits to form themselves new Vehicles and visible shapes, to animate gross of the sections?

I am so much a Prophet, as to forelee what will be the fate of the ensuing story, nor can I suppose that upon the reading of it, Mens Verdicts will be much changed from what they were, if they have set up this Resolution, to believe nothing that looks like the skadow of an Apparition, though the things mentioned here, cannot be unknown to any that have been conversant with Forreign Affairs of late Years. And though there cannot be a greater evidence, than the testimony of a whole Kingdom, yet your nicer Man will think it a disparagement to them to believe it; nor will it ever extort Asset from any, that build the reputation of their Wit upon contradicting what hath been received by the Vulgar.

The passages bere related wrought so great a Consternation, not only on the Natives, but Strangers tod, that the Heer Christian Rumpf, then Resident for the States General at Stockholm, thought him/elf obliged to send away his little Son for Holland, less be should be endangeted by those willanous Practices, which seemed to threaten all the inhabitants of the Kingdom. And he that doubts of it, may be satisfied at Dr. Harrel's in St. James's Park, to whom the Letter was written. And a Friend of mine in Town, being then in Holliein, remembers very well that the Duke of Holliein sent an Express to the King of Sweden to know the truth of this famous Witchcraft: To

The PREFACE.

To whom the King modestly reply'd, That his Judges and Commissioners had caused divers Men, Women, and Children to be Burnt and Executed upon such pregnant Evidences, as were brought before them; but whether the Actions they confessed, and which were proved against them, were real, or only effects of strong Imagination, he was not as yet able to determine.

Add to all this, that the Circumstances mentioned in the en uing Narrative, as I am informed, are at this Day to be feen in the Royal Chancery at Stockholm, and a Person of my Acquaintance offered me to procare. Copy of them under the Hands of publick Registers, if I defired it : Not to mention that in the Year 72. Baron Sparr, who was fent Embassador from the Crown of Sweden to the Court of England, did up. on his Word aver the matter of Fast recorded here, to be undoubtedly true, to leveral Persons of Note and Eminency, with other particulars, stranger than those (et down in these Papers. And to this purpole divers Letters were lent from Sweden and Hamburgh to feveral Persons bere in London; infomuck, that (hould a Man Born in, or acquainted with those Parts, bear any Person dispute the Truth of it, he would wonder where People have lived, or what fullen Humour doth posles them, to disbelieve that, which fo many I housands in that Kingdom bave felt the (ad effects of.

Since the first Edition, it bath been my Fortune to be acguainted with the Lord Leyonbergh, Envey extraordinary from the King of Sweden, living in York Buildings,' with whom discourfing about these Affairs, I found that the Account be gave, agreed for the most part with what is mentioned in the Narrative; and because his Testimony, being a publick Person, may be of some moment in a thing relating to that Kingdom, I have here set it down in his own Words.

Having

Having read this Narrative, I could do no lefs, than upon the Request of the Translator and Publisher of this Story, acknowledge, That to my best remembrance, and according to the best Reports that have been made to me, the matter of Fact mentioned in it, is true, and that the Witches confessed such things, and were accordingly Executed.

Witness my Hand,

London, March 8. 1682.

LEYONBERGH.

I do not take upon me to justifie the Truth of what the Witches said, for dealing with the Father of Lies, it's probable, Veracity is not Versue, that they greatly study, yet that the Devil sheaks Truth sometimes, is a thing so far from being impossible, that if we give credit to the sacred History, we musk grant that all be saith is not false or erroneous. All 1 design at this time, is only to suggest, that it is not altogether irrational to conceive, that he or his Emissare capable of such Altions and Pranks, as are related in these Papers.

That a Spirit can lift up Men and Women, and groffer Subftances, and convey them through the Air, I question no more than I doubt that the Wind can overthrow 'Houses, or drive Stones, and other heavy Bodies, upward from their Centre. And were I to make a Person of a dull Understanding, apprebend the Nature of a Spirit, I would represent it to him under the Notion of an intelligent Wind, or a strong Wind, informed by a highly rational Soul; as a Man may be called an intelligent piece of Earth. And this Notion David seemed to favour, when speaking of these Creatures, Plal. 104. 4. he tells us, that God makes his Angels Wind, for in the Original it's mid and most certainly, if they be so, they must be reasonable windy Substances; nor doth the Expression, which immediately follows in that Verse, cross this Exposition, viz. That That be makes his Ministers a flaming Fire; for it's no new Opinion, that some of those invisible Substances are of a Fiery, and others of an Airy Nature; and as we see, God gives rational Creatures here on Earth, Bodies composed of grosser matter, why should it seem incongruous for him to give ration Creatures above us, Bodies of a subtiler and thinner Matter, or such Matter, as those higher Regions do afford? And if Wind breaking forth from the Caverns of Hills, and Mountains have such force, as makes us very often stand amazed at the effects, what Energy might we suppose to be in Wind, were it inform'd by Reason, or a reasonable Being?

And though I cannot comprehend the Philosophy of the Deuils committing Venereal Acts, and bawing Children, and these Children upon their Copulation bringing forth Toads and Serpents, yet I can very rationally conceive, that having more than ordinary power over Matter, he can either animate dead Bodies, and by the help of them commit those Villanies, which Modesty bids us to conceal; or some other way compound, and thicken Atomes into what shape he pleases, especially if he meet with no hindrance from a higher power. And he that was permitted, as we see in the Gospel, to posses and actuate living Men, and do with them almost what he pleased, why may not be commit wickedne(s by fuch Instruments, and cast Mists before the Witches Eyes, that they may not know who they are? And he that could in Egypt produce Frogs, either real or counterfeit ones, why may not he be supposed to be able to produce fuch Toads and Serpents out of any milhapen Creatures, and lumps of Matter of his own compounding, at least represent the (hapes of them to the deluded Witches, that they shall imagine them to be really such things as they seem to be. Nor is this to be admired in the Devil more than Tricks are in Juglers, who hy flight of Art can reprefent things to the ignorant Spectator, which he shall be ready to swear to be real, though they are nothing lefs, and I suppose we may allow the Devil a greater degree of cunning, than an ordinary Jugler.

However, Spirits that know the Nature of material things better than the deepest Philosophers, and understand better how things are joyned and compounded, and what the Ingreduents dients of Terrestrial productions are, and see things (proffer things at least) in their first principles, and have power over the Air, and other Elements, and have a thousand ways of shaping things, and representing them to the external Senses of vicious Men, what may not they be supposed to be able to do, (if they have but God's permission to evert their power) and that God doth sometimes permit such things, we have reason to believe, who read what signs and with the power of darkness, and how not a few Men sin to that degree, that God suffers them to be led Captive by the Devil, and dooms them to that slavery we read of in Revelation, He that is filthy, let him be filthy fiill.

Spirits by being Devils do not lose their Nature; and let any Man in sober sadness consider, what Spirits are said to be able to do in Scripture, and what they have done, and compare these Passages with what is said in the following Relation, and he will not think those things the Witches confessed, also gether impossible.

Yet ftill, as I faid before, I do not pretend to be their Advocate, but shall leave it to the Reader to judge of the truth, or untruth of their Confessions, as he sees occasion, only beg of him not to condemn every thing as a Falshood, before due consideration of what Spirits are capable of doing.

That in so great a multitude as were Accused, Condemn'd, and Executed for Witches, there might be some who suffered anjustly, and owed their death more to the Malice of their Neighbours, than to their skill in the black Art, I will readily grant; nor will I deny, that when the News of these Transactions, and how the Children Bewitched fell into Fits, and strange unusual Postures, spread abroad in the Kingdom, some fearful and credulous People, if they saw their Children any way disordered, might think they were Bewitched, or ready to be carried away by Imps: This happens in all Consternations, and our Fears make us see that which unbyassed Eyes cannot perceive; and of this a Gentleman who was an Earwitness, gave me this instance, of a Minister's Child of his acquaintance, not far from Stockholm, who being told.

and affured by his Wife, that the Child was carried to Blockula every Night, and sonvey'd bask into his Bed again, refolved to fit up with the Boy, and fee whether any Devil dunft be fo bold as to fnatch him out of his Arms. The Child went to Bed, and between II and I of the Clock at Nights began to groan in his sleep, and seemed to shiver a little, at the fight whereof the Mother began to weep and Mourn, thinking that the Child was just going to be fnatcht away, but ber Husband (miling at the Conceit, and pleading with her, that the Child's laying his Arms out of Bed, might be the caule of these Symptoms, took the Child in his Arms, and there kept him till towards 2 or 3 of the Clock, but no Spirit same or medled with him, yet was his Wife fo poffelt with the conceit, or fcar of Transportation, that his strongest Arguments could (carce make her believe the contrary; and the fame Per fon, (a near Relation of the aforefaid Envoy) added, how much malice and ill nature was able to effect, whereof he gave this Example, which himfelf faw, and could testifis the Truth of, viz. How in the Year, 1676, at Stockholm, a young Woman Accused her own Mother of being a Witch, and Swore possitively, That the had carried her away at Night; wherespon both the Judges and Ministers of the Town, exhorted her to Confession and Repentance; but she stifly denied the Allegations, pleaded Innocence, and though they burnt another Witch before her Face, and lighted the Fire (he her felf was to burn in before her, yet she still justified her self, and continued to do so till the last, and continuing so, was Burnt. She had indeed been a very bad Woman, but it feems, this Crime (he was free from. for within a fortnight, or 3 Weeks after, her Daughter which bad Accused her, came to the Judges in open Court, (weeping and howling) and confelled that the had wronged her Mother, and unjustly out of a fileen she had against ber, for not gratifying her in athing the defired, had sharged ber with. that Crime, which he was as innocent of as the Child unborn whereupon the Judges gave order for her Execution too.

There is no publick Calamity, but fome ill People will ferve themfelves of the fad Providence, and make use of it for their own ends, as Thieves, when a House or Town is on fire, will feal fteal and fileb what they can; yet there is no Fable, but bath fome Foundation in Hiftory; fo when wicked People make ufe of fuch Arguments against the Perfons they hate, it's a fign there was fuch a thing, that gave them occasion to fix the Calumny; and had not fuch things been done before, they could not have any colour for their Villany.

I could add a known Passage, that hapned in the Year 1659, at Croffen in Silefia, of an Apothecaries Servant. The chief Magistrate of that Town, at that time, was the Princess Elizabeth Charlotta, a Person famous in her Generation. In the Spring of the Year, one Christopher Monigk, a Mative of Serbell, a Town belonging to the Princefs of Anhalt, Servant to an Apothecary, Died, and was Buried with the usual Ceremonies of the Lutheran Church. few Days after his Decease, a shape exactly like him in Face, Cloaths, Stuture, Meen, &C. appeared in the Apothecary's Shop, where be would let himfelf down, and walk fometimes, and take the Boxes, Pots, Glasses, off of the Shelves, and set them again in their places, and sometimes try and examine the goodnefs of the Medicines, weigh them in a pair of Scales, pound the Drugs with a mighty noise in the Mortar, nay, ferve the People that came with their Bills to the Shop, take their Money and lay it up safe in the Counter; in a word, do all things that a fourney-man in such cases uses to do. He looked very ghastly upon those that had been his fellow Serwants, who were afraid to (ay any thing to him; and his Master being sick at that time of the Gout, he was often very trouble (ome to him, would take the Bills that were brought him, out of his Hand, fnateh away the Candle sometimes, and put it behind the Stove: At last, he took a Cloak that hung. in the Shop, put it on, and walked abroad, but minding no body in the Streets, went along, entred into fome of the Citizen's Houfes, and thrust himself into Company, especially of (uch as he had formerly known, yet (atuted no body, nor spoke to any one but a Maid fervant, whom he met hard by the. Church-yard, and defired to go home to his Master's House, and dig in a ground Chamber, where the would find an ineltimable Treasure; but the Maid amazed at the sight of him, Swooned ; (wooned; whereupon he lifted her up, but left fuch a Mark upon her Fleshwith lifting her, that it was to be seen for sometime after. The Maid having recovered her felf, went home, but fell desperately sick upon it, and in her Sickness discovered what Monigk had faid to her; and accordingly they digged in the place (he had named, but found nothing but an old decayed Pot, with a Hamatites or Blood-ftone in it. The Princels hereupon, cauled the young Man's body to be digged up, which they found putrefied with purulent Matter flowing from it; and the Master being advised to remove the young Man's Goods, Linnens, Cloaths, and things be left behind him when be died, out of the House, and was beard of no more. And this (ome People now living will take their Oath upon, who very well remember they (aw him after bis Derease, and the thing being fo notorious, there was instituted a publick Dif-

lefia, about 15 Years ago (I had it from a very credible Witneffes) who after his Death, appeared to divers of his Acquaintance; and cryed out, That in his life time he had Pojfoned feveral Men with his Drugs. Whereupen, the Magiftrates of the Town, after confultation, took up his Body, and burnt it; which being done, the Spirit difappeared, and was feen no more. But if the Stories related in the preceding Book are not fufficient to convince Men, I am fure an Example from beyond Sea will gain no credit. It's enough that I have shewn Reafons which may induce my Reader to believe that he is not imposed upon by the following Narrative; and that it is not in the nature of those Pamphlets they cry about the Streets containing very dreadful News from the Country, of Armies fighting in the Air.

Strange Witchcraft

Difcovered in the Village Mohra in Swedeland,

Taken out of the publick Register of the Lords Commissioner's appointed by his Majesty the King of Sweden to examine the whole business, in the Tears of our Lord 1669. and 1670.

HE News of this Witchcraft coming to the King's Ear, his Majefty was pleafed to appoint Commífioners, some of the Clergy, and some of the Laity, to make a Journey to the Town aforefaid, and to examine the whole bufines; and accordingly the Examination was ordered to be on the 13th of August; and the Commissioners met on the 12th, instant, in the faid Village, at the Parlon's Houle, to whom both the Minister and feveral people of fashion complained with tears in their Eyes, of the milerable condition they were in, and therefore begg'd of them to think of some way, whereby they might be delivered from that Calamity. They gave the Commissioners very strange Instances of the Devil's Tyranny among them; how by the help ъf of Witches, he had drawn fome Hundreds of Children to him, and made them fubject to his power; how he hath been feen to go in a vifible fhape through the Country, and appeared daily to the people; how he had wrought upon the poorer fort, by prefenting them with Meat and Drink, and this way allured them to himfelf, with other circumftances to be mentioned hereafter. The Inhabitants of the Village added, with very great lamentations, that though their Children had told all, and themfelves fought God very earneftly by Prayer, yet they were carried away by him; and therefore begg'd of the Lords Commiflioners to root out this hellift Crew, that they might regain the former reft and quietnefs; and the rather, becaufe the Children which ufed to be carried away in the Country or Diftrict of Elfdale, fince fome Witches had been burnt there, remained unmolefted.

That day, i. e. the 13th of August, being the laft Humiliation-day Inftituted by Authority for removing of this Judgment, the Commissioners went to Church, where there appeared a confiderable Affembly both of young and old: the Children could read most of them, and sing Pfalms, and so could the Women, though not with any great zeal or fervour. There were preached two Sermons that day, in which the miserable case of those people, that fuffered themselves to be deluded by the Devil, was laid open; and these Sermons were at last concluded with very fervent prayer.

The Publick Worship being over, all the people of the Town were called together to the Parson's House, near Three thousand of them. Silence being commanded, the King's Commission was read publickly in the hearing of them all, and they were charged under very great Penalties to conceal nothing of what they knew, and to say nothing but the truth; those especially, who were guilty, that the Children might be delivered from the Clutches of the Devil. They all promised obedience; the guilty feignedly, but the guiltless weeping and crying bitterly.

On the 14th of August the Commissioners met again, consulting how they might withstand this dangerous flood; after long deliberation, an Order also coming from his Majesty, they did resolve to execute such as the matter of fact could be proved upon; Examination being made, there were discovered no less than Threescore and ten in the Village aforesaid, Three and twenty of which freely confessing their Crimes, were condemned to dye; the rest, one pretending the was with Child, and the other denying and pleading not guilty, were sent to Faluna, where most of them were afterwards Executed,

Fifteen

Fifteen Children which likewise confessed that they were engaged in this Witchery died as the reft; Six and thirty of them between nine and fixteen years of age, who had been lefs guilty, were forced to fun the gantlet; Twenty more, who had no great inclination, yet had been feduced to those hellish Enterprizes, because they were very young, were condemned to be lash'd with Rods upon their hands, for three Sundays together at the Church door ; and the aforefaid Six and thirty were alfo doom'd to be lashed this way, once a week, for a whole year together. The number of the Seduced Children was about three hundred.

On the twenty fifth of August, Execution was done upon the normioufly guilty, the day being bright and glorious, and the Sun shining, and some thousands of people being present at the The Order and Method observed in the Examina-Spectacle. tion was thus .

First, the Commissioners and the Neighbouring Justices went to prayer; this done, the Witches, who had most of them Children with them, which they either had Seduced, or attempted to Saduce, from four years of age to fixteen, were let before them. Some of the Children complained lamentably of the milery and milchief they were forced fometime to fuffer of the Witches.

The Children being asked whether they were fure, that they were at any time carried away by the Devil ; they all declared they were, begging of the Commissioners that they might be freed from that intolerable flavery.

Hereupon the Witches themfelves were asked, whether the Confessions of these Children were true, and were admonished to confess the truth, that they might turn away from the Devil unto the living God. At first, most of them did very stifly, and without shedding the least tear deny it, though much against their will and inclination.

After this, the Children were Examined, every one by themfelves, to see whether their Confessions did agree or no ; and the Commissioners found that all of them, except some very little ones, who could not tell all the Circumstances, did punctually agree in the confession of particulars.

In the mean while the Commissioners that were of the Clergy examined the Witches, could not bring them to any Confeffion, all continuing stedfast in their denials, till at last some of them burft out into tears, and their Confession agreed with what the Children had faid. And these expressed their abhorrency of the fact, and begg'd pardon ; adding, that the Devil, whom they call'd call'd Loeyta, had ftopt the Mouths of fome of them, and ftopt the Ears of others; and being now gone from them, they could ino longer conceal it, for they now perceived his Treachery.

The Confession which the Witches made in Elfdale, to the Judges there, agreed with the Confession they made at Mohra and the chief things they confession confisted in these three points,

T. Whither they used to go.

2. What kind of place it was, they went to, called by them Blockula, where the Witches and the Devil used to meet.

3. What evil or michief they had either done, or defigned there.

1: Of their Journey to Blockula. The Contents of their Confession.

We of the Provence of Elfdale, do confels that we used to go to a Gravel pit which lay hard by a cross-way, and there we put on a Veft over our heads, and then danced round, and after this ran to the cross way, and called the Devil thrice, first with a still voice, the second time somewhat londer, and the third time very loud, with these words, Anteceffer eome and carry us to Blockula. Whereupon, immediately he used to appear, but in different Habits; but for the most part we saw him in a gray Coar, and red and blew Stocking: he had a red Beard, a highcrown'd Hat, with Linnen of divers colours wrapt about it, and long Garters upon his Stockings.

Then he asked us, whether we would ferve him with Soul and Body. If we were content to do fo, he fet us on a Beaft which he had there ready, and carried us over Churches and high Walls; and after all, we came to a green Meadow, where Blockula lies. We must procure fome forapings of Altars, and filings of Church-Clocks; and then he gives us a horn with a Salve in it, wherewith we do anoint our felves; and a Saddle, with a Hammer and a wooden Nail, thereby to fix the Saddle; whereupon we call upon the Devil, and away we go.

Those that were of the Town of Mohra, made in a manner the fame Declaration . Being asked whether they were fure of a real perfonal Transportation, and whether they were awake When it was done; they all answered in the Affirmative. and that the Devil fometimes laid fomething down in the place that was very like them, But one of them confessed that he did only take away her ftrength, and her body lay ftill upon the ground; yet fometimes he took even her body with him.

Being

Being asked, how they could go with their Bodies through Chimneys and broken Panes of Glass, they said, that the Devil did first remove all that might hinder them in their slight, and so they had room enough to go.

Others were asked, how they were able to carry fo many Children with them; and they answered, that when the Children were afleep they came into the Chamber, laid hold of the Children; which ftraightway did awake, and asked them whether they would go to a Feaft with them? To which fome anfwered, Yes, others, No; yet they were all forced to go. They only gave the Children a Shirt, a Coat and a Doublet, which was either Red or Blew, and fo they did fet them upon a Beaft of the Devils providing, and then they rid away.

Some of the Children concealed it from their Parents, but others difcover'd it to them prefently.

The Witchas declared moreover, that till of late they never had that power to carry away Children, but only this year and the laft, and the Devil did at this time force them to it; that heretofore it was fufficient to carry but one of their Children, or a ftrangers Child with them, which yer happened feldom, but now he did plague them and whip them if they did not procure him Children, infomuch that they had no peace nor quifet for him; and whereas formerly one journey a week would ferve turn, from their own Town to the place aforefaid, now they were forced to run to other Towns and Places for Children, and that they brought with them, fome fifteen, fome fixteen Children every night,

For their Journey, they faid they made use of all forts of Inftruments, of Beasts, of Men, of Spits and Posts, according as they had opportunity: if they do ride upon Goats, and have many Children with them, that all may have room, they stick a spit into the back-fide of the Goat, and then are anointed with the aforesaid Ointment. What the manner of their Journey is, God alone knows: Thus much was made out, That if the Children did at any time name the Names of those that had carried them away, they were again carried by force either to Blockula, or to the Cross-way, and there miserably beaten, infomuch that some of them died of it : and this some of the Witches confetted; and added, That now they were exceeding troubled and tortured in their minds for it.

The Children thus used, lookt mighty bleak, wan and beaten. The marks of the Lashes, the Judges could not perceive in them, except in one Boy, who had fome Wounds and holes in his Back, that were given him with Thorns; but the Witches said, they would quickly vanish.

After this ulage the Children are exceeding weak; and if any be carried over Night, they cannot recover themfelves the next day; and they often fall into fits, the coming of which they know by an extraordinary palenels that feizes on the Children; and if a Fit comes upon them, they lean on their Mother's Arms, who fit up with them fometimes all Night; and when they observe the Palenels coming, thake the Children, but to no purpole.

They observe farther, That their Childrens Breafts grow cold at fuch times; and they take sometimes a burning Candle and flick it in their Hair, which yet is not burnt by it. They Swoon upon this palenes, which Swoon lasteth sometime half an Hour, sometimes an Hour, sometimes two Hours, and when the Children come to themselves again, they mourn and lament; and groan most milerably, and beg exceedingly to be eased : This two old Men declared upon Oath before the Judges, and called all the Inhabitants of the Town to witnes, as Persons, that had most of them experience of this strange Symptome of their Children.

A little Girl of Elfdale confessed, That naming the name of JESUS as the was carried away, the fell fuddenly upon the Ground, and got a great hole in her Side, which the Devil prefendy healed up again, and away he carried her; and to this Day the Girl confessed, the had exceeding great pain in her Side.

Another Boy confeffed too, That one Day he was carried away by his Miftrels, and to perform the Journey he trock his own Father's Horfe out of the Meadow where it was, and upon his return, the let the Horfe go in her own Gro und. The next Morning the Boys Father fought for his Frorte, and not finding it, gave it over for loft; but the Box tol a him the whole Story, and to his Father fetcht the Horfe back ? gain; and this one of the Witches confessed.

2. Of the place where they used to assemble, called Blo. thula, and what they did there.

They unanimoufly confessed, that Blockula is fit gated in a delicate large Meadow, whereof you can see no end. The place place or House they met at, had before it a Gate painted with divers colours; through this Gate they went into a little Meadow diftinct from the other, where the Beafts went, that they used to ride on : But the Men whom they made use of in their Journey, stood in the House by the Gate in a slumbering Pofture, fleeping against the Wall.

In a huge large Room of this House, they faid, there stood a very long Table, at which the Witches did fit down : And that hard by this Room was another Chamber, where there were very lovely and delicate Beds.

The first thing, they faid, they must do at Blockula was, That they must deny all, and devote themselves Body and Soul to the Devil, and promife to ferve him faithfully, and confirm all this with an Oath. Hereupon they cut their Fingers; and with their Blood writ their Name in his Book. They added, that he cauled them to be Baptized too, by fuch Priefts as he had there, and made them confirm their Baptilm with dreadful Oaths and Imprecations.

Hereupon the Devil gave them a Purfe, wherein there were filings of Clocks with a Stone tied to it, which they threw into the Water, and then were forced to speak these Words; as these filings of the Clock do never return to the Clock from which they are taken, fo may my Soul never return to Heaven. To which they added Blasphemy and other Oaths and Curles.

The mark of their cut Fingers is not found in all of them: But a Girl who had been flashed over her Finger, declared, that because she would not stretch out her Finger, the Deyil in Anger had fo cruelly wounded it.

After this they fat down to Table; and those that the Devil efteemed moft, were placed nearest to him; but the Children must stand at the Door, where he himself gives them Meat and Drink.

The Diet they did use to have there, was, they faid, Broth with Colworts and Bacon in it, Oatmeal, Bread fpread with Butter, Milk, and Cheefe. And they added, that fometimes it tafted very well, and fometimes very ill. After Meals they went to Dancing, and in the mean while Swore and Curled most dreadfully, and afterward went to fighting one with another.

Those of Elfdale confessed, That the Devil used to play upon an Harp before them, and afterwards to go with them that he liked best, into a Chamber, where he committed Venerous Acts with them ; and this indeed all confessed, That he he had carnal knowledge of them, and that the Devil had Sonsi and Daughters by them, which he did Marry togerher, and they did couple together, and brought forth Toads and Serpents.

One Day the Devil feemed to be dead, whereupon there were great lamentations at Blockula; but he foon awaked again. If he hath a mind to be merry with them, he lets them all ride upon Spits before him; takes afterwards the Spits and beats them black and blew, and then laughs at them. And he bids them believe, that the day of Judgment will come ipeedily, and therefore fets them on work to build a great House of Stone, promifing, that in that House he will preferve them from God's fury, and cause them to enjoy the greateft delights and pleasures: But while they work exceeding hard at it, there falls a great part of the Wall down again, whereby fome of the Witches are commonly hurt, which makes him laugh, but prefently he cures them again.

They faid, they had feen fometimes a very great Devil like a Dragon, with Fire round about him, and bound with an Iron Chain; and the Devil that converfes with them tells them, that if they confess any thing, he will let that great Devil loose upon them, whereby all Swedeland thall come into great danger.

They added, That the Devil had a Church there, fuch another as in the Town of Mobra. When the Commissioners were coming He told the Witches, they should not fear them; for he would certainly kill them all. And they confessed, that some of them had attempted to Murther the Commissioners, but had not been able to effect it.

Some of the Children talked much of a white Angel which used to forbid them what the Devil had bid them do, and told them that those doings should not last long: What had been done, had been permitted because of the wickedness of the People, and the carrying away of the Children should be made manifest. And they added, that this white Angel would place himself fometimes at the Door betwixt the Witches and the Children; and when they came to Blockula, he pulled the Children back, but the Witches they went in.

3. Of the Mischief or Evil which the Witches promised to do to Men and Beasts.

They confessed, That they were to promise the Devil, that they would do all that's Ill; and that the Devil taught them to Milk, which was in this wife: They used to the Knife in the Wall, and hang a kind of a Label on it, which they drew and ftroaked, and as long as this lasted, the Persons that they had power over, were miserably plagued, and the Beasts were milked that way, till sometimes they died of it.

A. Woman confeffed, That the Devil gave her a wooden Knife, wherewith, going into Houles, the had power to kill any thing the touched with it; yet there were very few that would confets that they had hurt any Man or Woman.

Being asked whether they had murdered any Children; they confeffed, That they had indeed tormented many, but did not know whether any/of them died of those Plagues. And added, That the Devil had shewed them several places where he had power to do mischief.

The Minister of Elfdale declared, That one Night, these Witches were to his thinking, upon the crown of his Head, and that from thence he had a long continued pain of the Head.

One of the Witches confeffed too, That the Devil had fent her to rorment that Minister; and that she was ordered to use a Nail, and strike it into his Head, but it would not enter very deep, and hence came that Head-ach.

The aforefaid Minister faid also, That one Night he felt a pain, as if he were torn with an Instrument that they cleanse Flax with, or a Flax-comb; and when he waked, he heard fomebody scratching and scraping at the Window, but could see no body. And one of the Witches confessed, that she was the Person that did it, being sent by the Devil.

The Minister of Mohra declared also, that one Night, one of these Witches came into his House, and did so violently take him by the Throat, that he thought he should have been choaked; and waking, he saw the Person that did it, but could not know her; and that for some Weeks he was not able to speak, or perform Divine Service.

An old Woman of Elfdale confeffed, That the Devil had helpt her to make a Nail, which the ftruck into a Boy's Knee, of which ftroak the Boy remained lame a long time. And the added, That before the was burnt, or Executed by the Hand of Juitise, the Boy would recover.

They

They confessed also. That the Devil gives them a Beaft about the bigness and shape of a young Cat, which they call a Carrier; and that he gives them a Bird too, as big as a Raven, but white; and these two Creatures they can fend any where, and wherever they come, they take away all forts of Victuals they can get, Butter, Cheele, Milk, Bacon, and all forts of Seeds, whatever they find, and carry it to the Witch. What the Bird brings they may keep for themselves, but what the Carrier brings, they must referve for the Devil, and that's brought to Blockula, where he doth give them of it fo much as he thinks fit.

They added likewife, that these Carriers fill themselves fo full fometimes, that they are forced to fpue by the way, which fpuing is found in feveral Gardens, where Colworts grow, and not far! from the Houses of those Witches. It is of a yellow Colour like Gold, and is called Butter of Witches.

The Lords Commiffioners were indeed very earneft, and took great pains to perfuade them to fhew fome of their Tricks, but to no purpofe; for they did all unanimoufly confels, that fince they had confeffed all, they found that all their Witchcraft was gone, and that the Devil at this time appeared to them very terrible, with Claws on his Hands and Feet, and with Horns on his Head, and a long tail behind, and fhewed to them a Pit burning, with a Hand put out; but the Devil did thruft the Perfon down again with an Iron-fork; and fuggefted to the Witches, that if they continued in their Confession, he would deal with them in the fame manner.

The above-faid Relation is taken out of the publick Register, where all this is related with more circumstances. And at this time, through all the Country, there are Prayers Weekly in all Churches, to the end, that Almighty God would pull down the Devil's power, and deliver these poor Creatures, which have hitherto groaned under it.

An

An Account of what hap'ned to a Boy at Malmoe in Schonen, in the Year 1678, supposed to be done by Witchcraft, and attested by the ablest, and most judicious Men of that Town.

HAving in the Preface of the foregoing Narrative, taken no-tice of the Swedish Envoy extraordinary, it may not be unfuitable to the subject these Papers treat of, to give the World an Account of a very strange Passage, which the faid Envoy has taken very great pains to fatisfie himfelf in; and of which he hath the publick Teftimony of the Town where it was done by him, no longer ago than in the Year 1678. An Alderman, or Senator's Son of Malmoe in Schonen, a City belonging to the King of Sweden, the Boy being about 13 Years of age, his Name, Abraham Mechelburg, going to School one Morning, as the the cuftom is in that place, about 6 of the Clock, flayed there till 8, and then went home for his Breakfast, which when he had eaten, he was going back to School again, when just before the Door, close by the lowermost Step, there lay a little Bundle of Linnen rags, which the Lad out of curiofity took up and open'd, but found nothing in it, but partly Pins, fome crooked, some laid a cross, some without points ; partly broken Horsenails, and Nails without Heads, partly Horfe-hair, and fuch Trash, which when it answered not his expectation, he rent afunder and threw away.

Some few Days after, the Boy fell ill, and continued fo for fome time, no Phyfician being able to guels what ailed him. At laft he began to void little Stones, at the Orifice of the Penis, which by degrees came forth bigger and bigger, fome were perfect Pebles, of all forts of Colours, and in process of time, there came forth great uneven Stones like pieces of Rocks, as if they were broken off of a greater Stone, whereof the Envoy hath two by him, one given him by the Father of the Boy, and the other by the King's Chyrurgeon, both which I have thought fit to give the Reader the Dimensions of.

Before the Stones came forth, there was a strange motion in his Belly, as if something were alive in it, the Stones seemed to crack within, and something they heard, as if a great Stone were violently broken, and at this time he felt the greatest pain. When the Stones were ready to come forth, the Penis was was drawn in fo deep, that the Standers by could not perceive any thing of it, and after that, it dropt those prodigious, Stones, which seemed rather to be fercht from Quarries, than produc'd by any Saline or Nitrous Matter in the Body. The Stone I have given the Figure of, is of a reddiff Colour, with some grains of white in it, heavy, and such as lie in common Roads and High-ways. When the Stones came forth, the Boy felt no pain, the pain being most upon him, when the Stones within feem'd to crack, and a little before; and the Fit was then fo violent, that 4 or 5 Men were forc'd to hold him. The Boy in the mean while flept well at Night, Eat and Drank as heartily as ever, discomposed at notime, but when the Fit of voiding these Stones was coming upon him. This lasted two Years. The Parents had the Boy Pray'd for at Church, and instantly befought God at home, whenever any of those Firs came upon him, to turn the Stream, and to ftop the Devil's power, The Boy is now as well as ever; rides abroad, and doth all things as he used to do before this Accident befell him. The Envoy spoke both with the Father and the Boy, and tells me, they are no indigent People, but well to pais, and Perlons of very good Reputation in the Town of Malmoe. While this Misfortune lasted, the King of Sweden being then but a little way off, sent fome of his Chyrurgeons to the place, to know the Truth thereof, who were by when the Lad voided very strange Stones at the Orifice of the Penis, and gave the King an Account of it : One of them, to be throughly fatisfied, held his Hand under the Penis after it was drawn in, and there dropt a very odd Stone, broad and angular into his Hand. The Envoy being upon the place last Year, inquired of all People, whom he thought might not be very credulous, who unanimoufly bore Witnels of the thing; and upon his request, gave him the following Account, which I have Translated out 'of the Original,

BE it known, that during the Years, 1678 and 1679. a very wonderful thing happened in this City of Malmoe, to one of the Aldermen of the Town, his name John Mechelburg, and his Wife's Abla Kruthmeyer; for God having bleffed them with three Sons, one of them Abraham by name, a Boy at this time aged about fixteen Years, hath been very strangely afflicted with a preternatural voiding of Stones, infomuch that during the space of thole two Years, he hath through the Virga of the Penis voided feveral bundreds of Stones great and small, which being weighed together, weighed no les than One and twenty Pound, Aver-du-poile. Some weighing 6, Some 7, Some 8, Some 9 Ounces, full of Angles, and much like pieces of a Rock that's broken by force, or instruments fit for that purpose, These broken Stones simtimes came forth at the Boy's Mouth, somtimes he voided them by siege, and the Parents of the Child have confidently affured us, that before this misfortune, the Boy had been fick feveral weeks together, and kept his Bed; during which fickness fomthing was feen moving in his Body, as if it had been some live thing. After this Sickness there appeared the Stones afore faid ; the first that came forth, exceeded not the bigness of half a Pea, but in a short time after, they encreased to a greater bulk; when they were ready to come away, the Boy complained much of the Spine of his Back, where, as be faid, he found incredible Pain. While this lasted, he neither made Water, nor went to Stool fometimes in two Months. fometimes not in a quarter of a Year; sometimes the Stones, when they were past through the Virga appeared bloody, and upon one of them there appeared a kind of Talch. Notwithstanding all this misery, the Boy coutinued to eat his Meat very heartily, nor was be troubled with this Pain at all in the Night, but flept quietly, as he used to do. About the latter end of this unexampled Pasfion and Mifery, a matter of 64 Stones, for the most part small, came forth very fast one upon the neck of another, and fince the 20th of September 1679. this misfortune hath totally left him, and he is as well as ever; nor is there after all those Torments any defect to be found, or perceived either in his Body, or the aforefaid Member of the Boy, but he continues fafe and found unto this Day.

And whereas in all probability, abundance of Men because they bave not been Eye-witnesses, will deride these passages, as fabulous, we whose names are under written, upon the request and desire of the Lord John Leyonberg, Envoy Extraordinary of Sweden, have once more spoken and conferred with the Parents of the Boy, who have shewed ns the above faid Stones, and given us one of the biggest as a Prefent.

fant, and do hereby testifie that the Passages related in the premises are undoubtedly true, which Testimony we have also signed with our own Hands, that in case the aforesaid Envoy coming into Foreign parts, shall have occasion to speak of these things, Men may give credit to this Relation.

Given at Malmoe this sorb of September, 1680.
