The Romance of the Old Mill

"The Old Mill on the Humber"—what a storied past these words recall!

When the first white man came to Canada the Humber River was a well-known Indian pathway from Lake Huron to Lake Ontario, and it was by this route Etienne Brule came to the mouth of the Humber, and he, "the first white man," gazed upon Lake Ontario.

To-day, when we view the ruins of the Old Mill, built in the year 1798 and rebuilt in the year 1834, and inspect the many relics gathered together in the Old Mill Restaurant, we have visions of the other days and of the busy little community which in the early Nineteenth Century clustered about the Old Mill on the Humber, in the land which was called by the settlers, "The Garden of Eden."

The Old Mill Restaurant building was first opened to the public on the 4th day of August, 1914, the day of England's Declaration of War against Germany.

It has since been enlarged, but still retains that Old World atmosphere which has made it known and loved throughout the Dominion from Halifax to Vancouver.
